THE NEW GROVE

Dictionary of Music and Musicians

SECOND EDITION

Edited by Stanley Sadie

Executive editor
John Tyrrell

新格罗夫

音乐与音乐家辞典

第二版

主　　编：斯坦利·萨迪
执行主编：约翰·泰瑞尔

Sources of instrumental ensemble music TO Tait

GROVE
CTS | 湖南文艺出版社

THE NEW GROVE

Dictionary of Music and Musicians

SECOND EDITION

Edited by

Stanley Sadie

Executive editor

John Tyrrell

VOLUME 24

Sources of instrumental ensemble music to Tait

GROVE

An imprint of Oxford University Press

图书在版编目（CIP）数据

新格罗夫音乐与音乐家辞典 = The New Grove Dictionary of Music and Musicians : 2001. 第 2 版 : 全 29 卷 : 英文 / (英) 萨迪 (Sadie,S.) 主编 .
—长沙 : 湖南文艺出版社 , 2012.8
ISBN 978-7-5404-5623-8
Ⅰ . ①新… Ⅱ . ①萨… Ⅲ . ①音乐 - 词典 - 英文 ②音乐家 - 世界 - 词典 - 英文 Ⅳ . ① J6-61 ② K815.76-61

中国版本图书馆 CIP 数据核字 (2012) 第 120200 号

新格罗夫音乐与音乐家辞典

（2001，第 2 版）

主　　编：斯坦利・萨迪
执行主编：约翰・泰瑞尔

出 品 人：刘清华
策　　划：孙　佳
责任编辑：孙佳、王雨、张玥、唐敏、刘建辉、熊宇亮
版权经理：唐　敏
美术编辑：李　杰
发 行 人：胥艳阳
印务总监：邓华强

湖南文艺出版社出版、发行
（长沙市雨花区东二环一段 508 号 邮编：410014）网址：www.hnwy.net

湖南省新华书店总经销 湖南新华精品印务有限公司印刷
2012 年 10 月第 1 版第 1 次印刷　开本：787mm × 1092mm 1/16　印张：1742.50　字数：25，000，000
ISBN 978-7-5404-5623-8　定价：6980.00 元（全 29 卷）
音乐发行部邮购电话：0731-85983102　音乐发行部传真：0731-85983016
打击盗版举报专线：0731-85983084、85983019、85983102
若有质量问题，请直接与本社出版科联系调换（电话：0731-85983028）

ISBN 978-7-5404-5623-8

THE NEW GROVE
DICTIONARY OF MUSIC AND MUSICIANS

Volume Twenty-four

CNS PUBLISHING & MEDIA | 湖南文艺出版社

牛津大学出版社
牛津 纽约
奥克兰 曼谷 布宜诺斯艾利斯 开普敦 金奈
达累斯萨拉姆 德里 香港 伊斯坦布尔 卡拉奇 加尔各答
吉隆坡 马德里 墨尔本 墨西哥城 孟买 内罗毕
圣保罗 上海 台北 东京 多伦多

《音乐与音乐家辞典》的第一版由乔治·格罗夫爵士策划和主编，四卷，附录由 J.A. 富勒·迈特兰主编，目录由埃德蒙·沃德豪斯夫人主编，1878 年、1880 年、1883 年、1889 年出版
再次印刷：1890 年、1900 年

第二版：J.A. 富勒·迈特兰主编，五卷，1904 年至 1910 年出版

第三版：H.C. 科利斯主编，五卷，1927 年出版

第四版：H.C. 科利斯主编，五卷，外加增补卷，1940 年出版

第五版：埃里克·布卢姆主编，九卷，1954 年出版；增补卷，1961 年出版
再次印刷：1961 年、1973 年、1975 年

美国增补卷，沃尔多·塞尔登·普拉特主编，一卷，1920 年出版
再次印刷：1928 年，此次重印增加了新内容，后又多次重印

《新格罗夫音乐与音乐家辞典》第一版，斯坦利·萨迪主编，二十卷，1980 年出版
再次印刷：1981 年、1984 年、1985 年、1986 年、1987 年、1988 年、1989 年、1990 年、1991 年、1992 年、1993 年、1994 年、1995 年
平装版加印：1995 年、1996 年、1997 年、1998 年

《新格罗夫音乐与音乐家辞典》第二版，斯坦利·萨迪主编 / 约翰·泰瑞尔执行主编，二十九卷，麦克米兰出版有限公司 2001 年出版

文字输入：英国牛津埃尔顿书籍排版公司
数据库管理：英国布莱顿塞曼蒂科公司
页码编排：英国苏福克郡克罗厄斯集团

General Abbreviations

A	alto, contralto [voice]
a	alto [instrument]
AA	Associate of the Arts
AB	Alberta; Bachelor of Arts
ABC	American Broadcasting Company; Australian Broadcasting Commission
Abt.	Abteilung [section]
ACA	American Composers Alliance
acc.	accompaniment, accompanied by accdn	accordion
addl	additional
addn(s)	addition(s)
ad lib	ad libitum
aft(s)	afterpiece(s)
Ag	Agnus Dei
AGMA	American Guild of Musical Artists
AIDS	Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome
AK	Alaska
AL	Alabama
all(s)	alleluia(s)
AM	Master of Arts
a.m.	ante meridiem [before noon]
AMC	American Music Center
Amer.	American
amp	amplified
AMS	American Musicological Society
Anh.	Anhang [appendix]
anon.	anonymous(ly)
ant(s)	antiphon(s)
appx(s)	appendix(es)
AR	Arkansas
arr(s).	arrangement(s), arranged by/for a-s	all-sung
ASCAP	American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers
ASOL	American Symphony Orchestra League
attrib(s).	attribution(s), attributed to; ascription(s), ascribed to
Aug	August
aut.	autumn
AZ	Arizona
aztl	azione teatrale
B	bass [voice], bassus
B	Brainard catalogue [Tartini], Benton catalogue [Pleyel]
b	bass [instrument]
b	born
BA	Bachelor of Arts
bal(s)	ballad opera(s)
bap.	baptized
Bar	baritone [voice]
bar	baritone [instrument]
B-Bar	bass-baritone
BBC	British Broadcasting Corporation
BC	British Columbia
BCE	before Common Era [BC]
bc	basso continuo
Bd.	Band [volume]
BEd	Bachelor of Education
Beds.	Bedfordshire
Berks.	Berkshire
Berwicks.	Berwickshire
BFA	Bachelor of Fine Arts
BFE	British Forum for Ethnomusicology
bk(s)	book(s)
BLitt	Bachelor of Letters/Literature
blq(s)	burlesque(s)
blt(s)	burletta(s)
BM	Bachelor of Music
BME, BMEd	Bachelor of Music Education
BMI	Broadcast Music Inc.
BMus	Bachelor of Music
bn	bassoon
BRD	Federal Republic of Germany (Bundesrepublik Deutschland [West Germany])
Bros.	Brothers
BRTN	Belgische Radio en Televisie Nederlands
BS, BSc	Bachelor of Science
Bs	Benedictus
BSM	Bachelor of Sacred Music
Bte	Benedicite
Bucks.	Buckinghamshire
Bulg.	Bulgarian
bur.	buried
BVM	Blessed Virgin Mary
BWV	Bach-Werke-Verzeichnis [Schmieder, catalogue of J.S. Bach's works]
C	contralto
c	circa [about]
¢	cent
CA	California
Cambs.	Cambridgeshire
Can.	Canadian
CanD	Cantate Domino
cant(s).	cantata(s)
cap.	capacity
carn.	Carnival
cb	contrabass [instrument]
CBC	Canadian Broadcasting Corporation
CBE	Commander of the Order of the British Empire
CBS	Columbia Broadcasting System
CBSO	City of Birmingham Symphony Orchestra
CD(s)	compact disc(s)
CE	Common Era [AD]
CeBeDeM	Centre Belge de Documentation Musicale
cel	celesta
CEMA	Council for the Encouragement of Music and the Arts
cf	confer [compare]
c.f.	cantus firmus
CFE	Composers Facsimile Edition
CG	Covent Garden, London
CH	Companion of Honour
chap(s).	chapter(s)
chbr	chamber
Chin.	Chinese
chit	chitarrone
choreog(s).	choreography, choreographer(s), choreographed by
Cie	Compagnie
cimb	cimbalom
cl	clarinet
clvd	clavichord
cm	centimetre(s); comédie en musique
cmda	comédie mêlée d'ariettes

CNRS	Centre National de la Recherche Scientifique
CO	Colorado
Co.	Company; County
Cod.	Codex
col(s).	column(s)
coll.	collected by collab.	in collaboration with
com	componimento
comm(s)	communion(s)
comp(s).	composer(s), composed (by) conc(s).	concerto(s)
cond(s).	conductor(s), conducted by cont	continuo
contrib(s).	contribution(s)
Corp.	Corporation
c.p.s.	cycles per second
cptr(s)	computer(s)
Cr	Credo, Creed
CRI	Composers Recordings, Inc.
CSc	Candidate of Historical Sciences
CT	Connecticut
Ct	Contratenor, countertenor
CUNY	City University of New York
CVO	Commander of the Royal Victorian Order
Cz.	Czech
D	Deutsch catalogue [Schubert]; Dounias catalogue [Tartini]
d.	denarius, denarii [penny, pence]
d	died
DA	Doctor of Arts
Dan.	Danish
db	double bass
DBE	Dame Commander of the Order of the British Empire
dbn	double bassoon
DC	District of Columbia
Dc	Discantus
DD	Doctor of Divinity
DDR	German Democratic Republic (Deutsche Demokratische Republik [East Germany])
DE	Delaware
Dec	December
ded(s).	dedication(s), dedicated to
DeM	Deus misereatur
Dept(s)	Department(s)
Derbys.	Derbyshire
DFA	Doctor of Fine Arts
dg	dramma giocoso
dir(s).	director(s), directed by diss.	dissertation
dl	drame lyrique
DLitt	Doctor of Letters/Literature
DM	Doctor of Music
dm	dramma per musica
DMA	Doctor of Musical Arts
DME, DMEd	Doctor of Musical Education
DMus	Doctor of Music
DMusEd	Doctor of Music Education
DPhil	Doctor of Philosophy
Dr	Doctor
DSc	Doctor of Science/Historical Sciences
DSM	Doctor of Sacred Music
Dut.	Dutch
E.	East, Eastern
EBU	European Broadcasting Union
ed(s).	editor(s), edited (by)
EdD	Doctor of Education
edn(s)	edition(s)
EdS	Education Specialist
EEC	European Economic Community
e.g.	exempli gratia [for example]
el-ac	electro-acoustic
elec	electric, electronic
EMI	Electrical and Musical Industries
Eng.	English
eng hn	english horn
ENO	English National Opera
ens	ensemble
ENSA	Entertainments National Service Association
EP	extended-play (record)
esp.	especially
etc.	et cetera
EU	European Union
ex., exx.	example, examples
f, ff	following page, following pages
f., ff.	folio, folios
f	forte
fa(s)	farsa(s)
facs.	facsimile(s)
fasc(s).	fascicle(s)
Feb	February
ff	fortissimo
fff	fortississimo
fig(s).	figure(s) [illustration(s)]
FL	Florida
fl	flute
fl	floruit [he/she flourished]
Flem.	Flemish
fp	fortepiano [dynamic marking]
Fr.	French
frag(s).	fragment(s)
FRAM	Fellow of the Royal Academy of Music, London
FRCM	Fellow of the Royal College of Music, London
FRCO	Fellow of the Royal College of Organists, London
FRS	Fellow of the Royal Society, London
fs	full score
GA	Georgia
Gael.	Gaelic
GEDOK	Gemeinschaft Deutscher Organisationen von Künstlerinnen und Kunstfreundinnen
GEMA	Gesellschaft für Musikalische Aufführungs- und Mechanische Vervielfaltingungsrechte
Ger.	German
Gk.	Greek
Gl	Gloria
Glam.	Glamorgan
glock	glockenspiel
Glos.	Gloucestershire
GmbH	Gesellschaft mit Beschränkter Haftung [limited-liability company]
grad(s)	gradual(s)
GSM	Guildhall School of Music, London (to 1934)
GSMD	Guildhall School of Music and Drama, London (1935–)
gui	guitar
H	Hoboken catalogue [Haydn]; Helm catalogue [C.P.E. Bach]
Hants.	Hampshire
Heb.	Hebrew
Herts.	Hertfordshire
HI	Hawaii
hmn	harmonium
HMS	His/Her Majesty's Ship
HMV	His Master's Voice
hn	horn
Hon.	Honorary; Honourable
hp	harp
hpd	harpsichord
HRH	His/Her Royal Highness
Hung.	Hungarian
Hunts.	Huntingdonshire
Hz	Hertz [c.p.s.]
IA	Iowa
IAML	International Association of Music Libraries
IAWM	International Alliance for Women in Music
ibid.	ibidem [in the same place]
ICTM	International Council for Traditional Music
ID	Idaho
i.e.	id est [that is]
IFMC	International Folk Music Council
IL	Illinois
ILWC	International League of Women Composers

IMC	International Music Council
IMS	International Musicological Society
IN	Indiana
Inc.	Incorporated
inc.	incomplete
incid	incidental
incl.	includes, including inst(s)	instrument(s), instrumental
int(s)	intermezzo(s), introit(s)
IPEM	Instituut voor Psychoakoestiek en Elektronische Muziek, Ghent
IRCAM	Institut de Recherche et Coordination Acoustique/Musique
ISAM	Institute for Studies in American Music
ISCM	International Society for Contemporary Music
ISDN	Integrated Services Digital Network
ISM	Incorporated Society of Musicians
ISME	International Society for Music Education
It.	Italian
Jan	January
Jap.	Japanese
Jb	Jahrbuch [yearbook]
JD	Doctor of Jurisprudence
Jg.	Jahrgang [year of publication/volume]
jr	junior
Jub	Jubilate
K	Kirkpatrick catalogue [D. Scarlatti]; Köchel catalogue [Mozart: no. after '/' is from 6th edn; also Fux]
kbd	keyboard
KBE	Knight Commander of the Order of the British Empire
KCVO	Knight Commander of the Royal Victorian Order
kg	kilogram(s)
Kgl	Königlich(e, er, es) [Royal]
kHz	kilohertz [1000 c.p.s.]
km	kilometre(s)
KS	Kansas
KY	Kentucky
Ky	Kyrie
£	libra(e) [pound(s) sterling]
L.	no. of song in R.W. Linker: A Bibliography of Old French Lyrics (University, MS, 1979)
L	Longo catalogue [A. Scarlatti]
LA	Louisiana
Lanarks.	Lanarkshire
Lancs.	Lancashire
Lat.	Latin
Leics.	Leicestershire
LH	left hand
lib(s)	libretto(s)
Lincs.	Lincolnshire
lit(s)	litany (litanies)
Lith.	Lithuanian
LittD	Doctor of Letters/Literature
LLB	Bachelor of Laws
LLD	Doctor of Laws
loc. cit.	loco citato [in the place cited]
LP	long-playing record
LPO	London Philharmonic Orchestra
LSO	London Symphony Orchestra
Ltd	Limited
Ltée	Limitée
M, MM.	Monsieur, Messieurs
m	metre(s)
MA	Massachusetts; Master of Arts
Mag	Magnificat
MALS	Master of Arts in Library Sciences
mand	mandolin
mar	marimba
MAT	Master of Arts and Teaching
MB	Bachelor of Music; Manitoba
MBE	Member of the Order of the British Empire
MD	Maryland
ME	Maine
MEd	Master of Education
mel	melodramma, mélodrame
mels	melodramma serio
melss	melodramma semiserio
Met	Metropolitan Opera House, New York
Mez	mezzo-soprano
mf	mezzo-forte
MFA	Master of Fine Arts
MGM	Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer
MHz	megahertz [megacycles]
MI	Michigan
mic	microphone
Middx	Middlesex
MIDI	Musical Instrument Digital Interface
MIT	Massachusetts Institute of Technology
MLitt	Master of Letters/Literature
Mlle, Mlles	Mademoiselle, Mesdemoiselles
MM	Master of Music
M.M.	Metronome Maelzel
mm	millimetre(s)
MMA	Master of Musical Arts
MME, MMEd	Master of Music Education
Mme, Mmes	Madame, Mesdames
MMT	Master of Music in Teaching
MMus	Master of Music
MN	Minnesota
MO	Missouri
mod	modulator
Mon.	Monmouthshire
movt(s)	movement(s)
MP(s)	Member(s) of Parliament
mp	mezzo-piano
MPhil	Master of Philosophy
Mr	Mister
Mrs	Mistress; Messieurs
MS	Master of Science(s); Mississippi
MS(S)	manuscript(s)
MSc	Master of Science(s)
MSLS	Master of Science in Library and Information Science
MSM	Master of Sacred Music
MT	Montana
Mt	Mount
mt(s)	music-theatre piece(s)
MTNA	Music Teachers National Association
MusB, MusBac	Bachelor of Music
muscm(s)	musical comedy (comedies)
MusD, MusDoc	Doctor of Music
musl(s)	musical(s)
MusM	Master of Music
N.	North, Northern
n(n).	footnote(s)
nar(s)	narrator(s)
NB	New Brunswick
NBC	National Broadcasting Company
NC	North Carolina
ND	North Dakota
n.d.	no date of publication
NDR	Norddeutscher Rundfunk
NE	Nebraska
NEA	National Endowment for the Arts
NEH	National Endowment for the Humanities
NET	National Educational Television
NF	Newfoundland and Labrador
NH	New Hampshire
NHK	Nippon Hōsō Kyōkai [Japanese broadcasting system]
NJ	New Jersey
NM	New Mexico
no(s).	number(s)
Nor.	Norwegian
Northants.	Northamptonshire
Notts.	Nottinghamshire
Nov	November
n.p.	no place of publication
nr	near
NRK	Norsk Rikskringkasting [Norwegian broadcasting system]

NS	Nova Scotia
NSW	New South Wales
NT	North West Territories
Nunc	Nunc dimittis
NV	Nevada
NY	New York [State]
NZ	New Zealand
ob	opera buffa; oboe
obbl	obbligato
OBE	Officer of the Order of the British Empire
obl	opéra-ballet
OC	Opéra-Comique, Paris [the company]
oc	opéra comique [genre]
Oct	October
off(s)	offertory (offertories)
OH	Ohio
OK	Oklahoma
OM	Order of Merit
ON	Ontario
op(s)	opera(s)
op., opp.	opus, opera [plural of opus]
op. cit.	opere citato [in the work cited]
opt.	optional
OR	Oregon
orat(s)	oratorio(s)
orch	orchestra(tion), orchestral orchd	orchestrated (by)
org	organ
orig.	original(ly)
ORTF	Office de Radiodiffusion-Télévision Française
os	opera seria
oss	opera semiseria
OUP	Oxford University Press
ov(s).	overture(s)
Oxon.	Oxfordshire
P	Pincherle catalogue [Vivaldi]
p.	pars
p., pp.	page, pages
p	piano [dynamic marking]
PA	Pennsylvania
p.a.	per annum [annually]
pan(s)	pantomime(s)
PBS	Public Broadcasting System
PC	no. of chanson in A. Pillet and H. Carstens: Bibliographie der Troubadours (Halle, 1933)
PE	Prince Edward Island
perc	percussion
perf(s).	performance(s), performed (by) pf	piano [instrument]
pfmr(s)	performer(s)
PhB	Bachelor of Philosophy
PhD	Doctor of Philosophy
PhDEd	Doctor of Philosophy in Education
pic	piccolo
pl(s).	plate(s); plural
p.m.	post meridiem [after noon]
PO	Philharmonic Orchestra
Pol.	Polish
pop.	population
Port.	Portuguese
posth.	posthumous(ly)
POW(s)	prisoner(s) of war
pp	pianissimo
ppp	pianississimo
PQ	Province of Quebec
PR	Puerto Rico
pr.	printed
prep pf	prepared piano
PRO	Public Record Office, London
prol(s)	prologue(s)
PRS	Performing Right Society
Ps(s)	Psalm(s)
ps(s)	psalm(s)
pseud(s).	pseudonym(s)
pt(s)	part(s)
ptbk(s)	partbook(s)
pubd	published

pubn(s)	publication(s)
PWM	Polskie Wydawnictwo Muzyczne
QC	Queen's Counsel
qnt(s)	quintet(s)
qt(s)	quartet(s)
R	[in signature] editorial revision
R	photographic reprint [edn of score or early printed source]
R.	no. of chanson in G. Raynaud, Bibliographie des chansonniers français des XIIIe et XIVe siècles (Paris, 1884)
R	Ryom catalogue [Vivaldi]
r	recto
R	response
RAF	Royal Air Force
RAI	Radio Audizioni Italiane
RAM	Royal Academy of Music, London
RCA	Radio Corporation of America
RCM	Royal College of Music, London
re(s)	response(s) [type of piece]
rec	recorder
rec.	recorded [in discographic context]
recit(s)	recitative(s)
red(s).	reduction(s), reduced for reorchd	reorchestrated (by) repr.	reprinted
resp(s)	respond(s)
Rev.	Reverend
rev(s).	revision(s); revised (by/for)
RH	right hand
RI	Rhode Island
RIAS	Radio im Amerikanischen Sektor
RIdIM	Répertoire International d'Iconographie Musicale
RILM	Répertoire International de Littérature Musicale
RIPM	Répertoire International de la Presse Musicale
RISM	Répertoire International des Sources Musicales
RKO	Radio-Keith-Orpheum
RMCM	Royal Manchester College of Music
rms	root mean square
RNCM	Royal Northern College of Music, Manchester
RO	Radio Orchestra
Rom.	Romanian
r.p.m.	revolutions per minute
RPO	Royal Philharmonic Orchestra
RSFSR	Russian Soviet Federated Socialist Republic
RSO	Radio Symphony Orchestra
RTÉ	Radio Telefís Éireann
RTF	Radiodiffusion-Télévision Française
Rt Hon.	Right Honourable
RTVB	Radio-Télévision Belge de la Communauté Française
Russ.	Russian
RV	Ryom catalogue [Vivaldi]
S	San, Santa, Santo, São [Saint]; soprano [voice]
S	sound recording
S.	South, Southern
$	dollars
s	soprano [instrument]
s.	solidus, solidi [shilling, shillings]
SACEM	Société d'Auteurs, Compositeurs et Editeurs de Musique
San	Sanctus
sax	saxophone
SC	South Carolina
SD	South Dakota
sd	scherzo drammatico
SDR	Süddeutscher Rundfunk
Sept	September
seq(s)	sequence(s)
ser(s)	serenata(s)
ser.	series
Serb.	Serbian
sf, sfz	sforzando, sforzato
sing.	singular
SJ	Societas Jesu [Society of Jesus]
SK	Saskatchewan
SO	Symphony Orchestra

SOCAN	Society of Composers, Authors and Music Publishers of Canada
Sp.	Spanish
spkr(s)	speaker(s)
Spl	Singspiel
SPNM	Society for the Promotion of New Music
spr.	spring
sq	square
sr	senior
SS	Saints (It., Sp.); Santissima, Santissimo [Most Holy]
SS	steamship
SSR	Soviet Socialist Republic
St(s)	Saint(s)/Holy, Sankt, Sint, Szent
Staffs.	Staffordshire
STB	Bachelor of Sacred Theology
Ste	Sainte
str	string(s)
sum.	summer
SUNY	State University of New York
Sup	superius
suppl(s).	supplement(s), supplementary
Swed.	Swedish
SWF	Südwestfunk
sym(s).	symphony (symphonies), symphonic
synth	synthesizer, synthesized
T	tenor [voice]
t	tenor [instrument]
tc	tragicommedia
td(s)	tonadilla(s)
TeD	Te Deum
ThM	Master of Theology
timp	timpani
tm	tragédie en musique
TN	Tennessee
tpt	trumpet
Tr	treble [voice]
tr(s)	tract(s); treble [instrument]
trad.	traditional trans.	translation, translated by transcr(s).	transcription(s), transcribed by/for trbn	trombone
TV	television
TWV	Menke catalogue [Telemann]
TX	Texas
U.	University
UCLA	University of California at Los Angeles
UHF	ultra-high frequency
UK	United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland
Ukr.	Ukrainian
unacc.	unaccompanied
unattrib.	unattributed
UNESCO	United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization
UNICEF	United Nations International Children's Emergency Fund
unorchd	unorchestrated
unperf.	unperformed
unpubd	unpublished
UP	University Press
US	United States [adjective]
USA	United States of America
USSR	Union of Soviet Socialist Republics
UT	Utah
v, vv	voice, voices
v., vv.	verse, verses
v	verso
v.	versus
V	versicle
VA	Virginia
va	viola
vc	cello
vcle(s)	versicle(s)
VEB	Volkseigener Betrieb [people's own industry]
Ven	Venite
VHF	very high frequency
VI	Virgin Islands
vib	vibraphone
viz	videlicet [namely]
vle	violone
vn	violin
vol(s).	volume(s)
vs	vocal score, piano-vocal score
VT	Vermont
W.	West, Western
WA	Washington [State]
Warwicks.	Warwickshire
WDR	Westdeutscher Rundfunk
WI	Wisconsin
Wilts.	Wiltshire
wint.	winter
WNO	Welsh National Opera
WOO	Werke ohne Opuszahl
Worcs.	Worcestershire
WPA	Works Progress Administration
WQ	Wotquenne catalogue [C.P.E. Bach]
WV	West Virginia
ww	woodwind
WY	Wyoming
xyl	xylophone
YMCA	Young Men's Christian Association
Yorks.	Yorkshire
YT	Yukon Territory
YWCA	Young Women's Christian Association
YYS	(Zhongguo yishu yanjiuyuan) Yinyue yanjiusuo and variants (Music Research Institute (of the Chinese Academy of Arts))
Z	Zimmermann catalogue [Purcell]
zar(s)	zarzuela(s)
zargc	zarzuela género chico

Bibliographical Abbreviations

All bibliographical abbreviations used in this dictionary are listed below, following the typography used in the text of the dictionary. Broadly, italic type is used for periodicals and for reference works; roman type is used for anthologies, series etc. (titles of individual volumes are italicized).

Full bibliographical information is not normally supplied in the list below if it is available elsewhere in the dictionary. Its availability is indicated as follows: D – in the list of 'Dictionaries and encyclopedias of music'; E – in the list of 'Editions, historical'; and P – in the list of 'Periodicals'; these lists are located in vol.28. For other items, in particular national (non-musical) biographical dictionaries, basic bibliographical information is given here; and in some cases extra information is supplied to clarify the abbreviation used.

Festschriften and congress reports are not generally covered in this list. Although Festschrift titles are sometimes shortened in the dictionary, sufficient information is always given for unambiguous identification (dedicatee; occasion, if the same person is dedicatee of more than one Festschrift; place and date of publication; and name(s) of editor(s) if known). For fuller information on musical Festschriften up to 1967 see W. Gerboth: An Index to Musical Festschriften and Similar Publications (New York, 1969). The published titles of congress reports are generally reduced to their essentials, but sufficient information is always given for purposes of identification (society or topic; place and date of occurrence; journal issue if published in a periodical; editor(s) and publication details in unfamiliar cases). A comprehensive list of musical and music-related 'Congress reports' appears in vol.28. Further information can be found in J. Tyrrell and R. Wise: A Guide to International Congress Reports in Music, 1900–1975 (London, 1979).

19CM	19th Century Music P
ACAB	American Composers Alliance Bulletin P
AcM	Acta musicologica P
ADB	Allgemeine deutsche Biographie (Leipzig, 1875–1912)
AdlerHM	G. Adler, ed.: Handbuch der Musikgeschichte (Frankfurt, 1924, 2/1930/R)
AfM	African Music P
AH	Analecta hymnica medii aevi E
AllacciD	L. Allacci: Drammaturgia D
AM	Antiphonale monasticum pro diurnis horis (Tournai, 1934)
AmbrosGM	A.W. Ambros: Geschichte der Musik (Leipzig, 1862–82/R)
AMe, AMeS	Algemene muziekencyclopedie and suppl. D
AMf	Archiv für Musikforschung P
AMI	L'arte musicale in Italia E
AMMM	Archivium musices metropolitanum mediolanense E
AMP	Antiquitates musicae in Polonia E
AMw	Archiv für Musikwissenschaft P
AMZ	Allgemeine musikalische Zeitung (1798–1848, 1863–5, 1866–82) P
AMz	Allgemeine (deutsche) Musik-Zeitung/Musikzeitung (1874–1943) P
Anderson2	E.R. Anderson: Contemporary American Composers: a Biographical Dictionary D
AnM	Anuario musical P
AnMc, AnMc	Analecta musicologica P
AnnM	Annales musicologiques P
AnthonyFB	J.R. Anthony: French Baroque Music from Beaujoyeulx to Rameau (London, 1973, 3/1997)
AntMI	Antiquae musicae italicae E
AÖAW	Anzeiger der Österreichischen Akademie der Wissenschaften, philosophisch-historische Klasse (1948–)
ApelG	W. Apel: Geschichte der Orgel- und Klaviermusik bis 1700 (Kassel, 1967; Eng. trans., rev., 1972)
AR	Antiphonale sacrosanctae romanae ecclesiae pro diurnis horis (Paris, Tournai and Rome, 1949)
AS	W.H. Frere, ed.: Antiphonale sarisburiense (London, 1901–25/R)
AshbeeR	A. Ashbee: Records of English Court Music (Snodland/Aldershot, 1986–95)
AsM	Asian Music P
AudaM	A. Auda: La musique et les musiciens de l'ancien pays de Liège D
AusDB	Australian Dictionary of Biography (Melbourne, 1966–96)
Baker5[–8]	Baker's Biographical Dictionary of Musicians D
BAMS	Bulletin of the American Musicological Society P
BDA	A Biographical Dictionary of Actors, Actresses, Musicians, Dancers, Managers & Other Stage Personnel in London, 1660–1800 (Carbondale, IL, 1973–93)
BDECM	A. Ashbee and D. Lasocki, eds.: A Biographical Dictionary of English Court Musicians, 1485–1714 (Aldershot, 1998)
BDRSC	A. Ho and D. Feofanov, eds.: Biographical Dictionary of Russian/Soviet Composers D
BeckEP	J.H. Beck: Encyclopedia of Percussion D
BeJb	Beethoven-Jahrbuch P
BenoitMC	M. Benoit: Musiques de cour: chapelle, chambre, écurie, 1661–1733 (Paris, 1971)
BenzingB	J. Benzing: Die Buchdrucker des 16. und 17. Jahrhunderts (Wiesbaden, 1963, 2/1982)
BerliozM	H. Berlioz: Mémoires (Paris, 1870; ed. and trans. D. Cairns, 1969, 2/1970); ed. P. Citron (Paris, 1969, 2/1991)
BertolottiM	A. Bertolotti: Musici alla corte dei Gonzaga in Mantova dal secolo XV al XVIII (Milan, 1890/R)

BicknellH S. Bicknell: The History of the English Organ (Cambridge, 1996)
BJb Bach-Jahrbuch P
BladesPI J. Blades: Percussion Instruments and their History (London, 1970, 2/1974)
BlumeEK F. Blume: Die evangelische Kirchenmusik (Potsdam, 1931–4/R, enlarged 2/1965 as Geschichte der evangelischen Kirchenmusik; Eng. trans., enlarged, 1974, as Protestant Church Music: a History)
BMB Bibliotheca musica bononiensis (Bologna, 1967–)
BMw Beiträge zur Musikwissenschaft P
BNB Biographie nationale [belge] (Brussels, 1866–1986)
BoalchM D.H. Boalch: Makers of the Harpsichord and Clavichord 1440 to 1840 D
BoetticherOL W. Boetticher: Orlando di Lasso und seine Zeit (Kassel, 1958)
Bouwsteenen: JVNM Bouwsteenen: jaarboek der Vereeniging voor Nederlandsche muziekgeschiedenis P
BoydenH D.D. Boyden: A History of Violin Playing from its Origins to 1761 (London, 1965)
BPM Black Perspective in Music P
BrenetC M. Brenet: Les concerts en France sous l'ancien régime (Paris, 1900/R)
BrenetM M. Brenet: Les musiciens de la Sainte-Chapelle du Palais (Paris, 1910/R)
BrookB B.S. Brook, ed.: The Breitkopf Thematic Catalogue, 1762–1787 (New York, 1966)
BrookSF B.S. Brook: La symphonie française dans la seconde moitié du XVIIIe siècle (Paris, 1962)
BrownI H.M. Brown: Instrumental Music Printed Before 1600: a Bibliography (Cambridge, MA, 1965)
Brown-Stratton BMB J.D. Brown and S.S. Stratton: British Musical Biography D
BSIM Bulletin français de la S.I.M. [also Mercure musical and other titles] P
BUCEM E.B. Schnapper, ed.: British Union-Catalogue of Early Music (London, 1957)
BurneyFI C. Burney: The Present State of Music in France and Italy (London, 1771, 2/1773)
BurneyGN C. Burney: The Present State of Music in Germany, the Netherlands, and the United Provinces (London, 1773, 2/1775)
BurneyH C. Burney: A General History of Music from the Earliest Ages to the Present Period (London, 1776–89); ed. F. Mercer (London, 1935/R) [p. nos. refer to this edn]
BWQ Brass and Woodwind Quarterly P

CaffiS F. Caffi: Storia della musica sacra nella già cappella ducale di San Marco in Venezia dal 1318 al 1797 (Venice, 1854–5/R); ed. E. Surian (Florence, 1987)
CaM Catalogus musicus (Kassel, 1963–)
CampbellGC M. Campbell: The Great Cellists D
CampbellGV M. Campbell: The Great Violinists D
CAO Corpus antiphonalium officii (Rome, 1963–79)
CBY Current Biography Yearbook (1955–)
CC B. Morton and P. Collins, eds.: Contemporary Composers D
CeBeDeM directory CeBeDeM et ses compositeurs affiliés, ed. D. von Volborth-Danys (Brussels, 1977–80)
CEKM Corpus of Early Keyboard Music E
CEMF Corpus of Early Music (in Facsimile) (Brussels, 1970–72)
CHM Collectanea historiae musicae (1953–66)
Choron-FayolleD A.-E. Choron and F.J.M. Fayolle: Dictionnaire historique des musiciens D
ClinkscaleMP M.N. Clinkscale: Makers of the Piano D
CM Le choeur des muses E
CMc Current Musicology P
CMI I classici musicali italiani (Milan, 1941–56)
CMM Corpus mensurabilis musicae E
ČMm Časopis Moravského musea [muzea, 1977–] P
CMR Contemporary Music Review P
CMz Cercetări de muzicologie P
CohenE A.I. Cohen: International Encyclopedia of Women Composers D
CohenWE Y.W. Cohen: Werden und Entwicklung der Musik in Israel (Kassel, 1976)
COJ Cambridge Opera Journal P
CooverMA J.B. Coover: Music at Auction: Puttick and Simpson (Warren, MI, 1988)
CoussemakerS C.-E.-H. de Coussemaker: Scriptorum de musica medii aevi nova series (Paris, 1864–76/R, 2/1908, ed. U. Moser)
CroceN B. Croce: I teatri di Napoli (Naples, 1891/R, 5/1966)
ČSHS Československy hudební slovník D
CSM Corpus scriptorum de musica (Rome, later Stuttgart, 1950–)
CSPD Calendar of State Papers (Domestic) (London, 1856–1972)
Cw Das Chorwerk E

DAB Dictionary of American Biography (New York, 1928–37, suppls., 1944–)
DAM Dansk aarbog for musikforskning P
Day-Murrie ESB C.L. Day and E.B. Murrie: English Song-Books (London, 1940)
DBF Dictionnaire de biographie française (Paris, 1933–)
DBI Dizionario biografico degli italiani (Rome, 1960–)
DBL, DBL2, DBL3 Dansk biografisk leksikon (Copenhagen, 1887–1905, 2/1933–45, 3/1979–84)
DBNM, DBNM Darmstädter Beiträge zur neuen Musik P
DBP E. Vieira, ed.: Diccionário biográphico de musicos portuguezes (Lisbon, 1900)
DČHP Dějiny české hudby v příkladech (Prague, 1958)
DDT Denkmäler deutscher Tonkunst E
DEMF A. Devriès and F. Lesure: Dictionnaire des éditeurs de musique français D
DEUMM Dizionario enciclopedico universale della musica e dei musicisti D
DeutschMPN O.E. Deutsch: Music Publishers' Numbers (London, 1946)
DHM Documenta historica musicae E
Dichter-ShapiroSM H. Dichter and E. Shapiro: Early American Sheet Music D
DJbM Deutsches Jahrbuch der Musikwissenschaft P
DlabacžKL G.J. Dlabacž: Allgemeines historisches Künstler-Lexikon D
DM Documenta musicologica (Kassel, 1951–)
DMt Dansk musiktidsskrift P
DMV Drammaturgia musicale veneta (Milan, 1983–)
DNB Dictionary of National Biography (Oxford, 1885–1901, suppls., 1901–96)
DoddI G. Dodd, ed.: Thematic Index of Music for Viols (London, 1980–)
DTB Denkmäler der Tonkunst in Bayern E
DTÖ Denkmäler der Tonkunst in Österreich E
DugganIMI M.K. Duggan: Italian Music Incunabula: Printers and Type (Berkeley, 1991)
DVLG Deutsche Vierteljahrsschrift für Literaturwissenschaft und Geistesgeschichte (1923–)

ECCS The Eighteenth-Century Continuo Sonata E
ECFC The Eighteenth-Century French Cantata E
EDM Das Erbe deutscher Musik E
EECM Early English Church Music E
EG Etudes grégoriennes P
EI The Encyclopaedia of Islam (Leiden, 1928–38, 2/1960–)
EinsteinIM A. Einstein: The Italian Madrigal (Princeton, NJ, 1949/R)
EIT Yezhegodnik imperatorskikh teatrov P
EitnerQ R. Eitner: Biographisch-bibliographisches Quellen-Lexikon D
EitnerS R. Eitner: Bibliographie der Musik-Sammelwerke des XVI. und XVII. Jahrhunderts (Berlin, 1877/R)
EKM Early Keyboard Music E
EL The English School of Lutenist Songwriters, rev. as The English Lute-Songs E EM The English Madrigal School, rev. as The English Madrigalists E
EMc Early Music P
EMC1, 2 Encyclopedia of Music in Canada (Toronto, 1981, 2/1992) D

EMDC	A. Lavignac and L. de La Laurencie, eds.: Encyclopédie de la musique et dictionnaire du Conservatoire D
EMH	Early Music History P
EMN	Exempla musica neerlandica E
EMS	see EM
EMuz	Encyklopedia muzyczne D
ERO	Early Romantic Opera E
ES	English Song 1600–1675 (New York, 1986–9)
ES	Enciclopedia dello spettacolo D
ESLS	see EL
EthM	Ethnomusicology P
EthM Newsletter	Ethno[-]musicology Newsletter P
EwenD	D. Ewen: American Composers: a Biographical Dictionary D
FAM	Fontes artis musicae P
FasquelleE	Encyclopédie de la musique D
FCVR	Florilège du concert vocal de la Renaissance E
FellererG	K.G. Fellerer: Geschichte der katholischen Kirchenmusik (Düsseldorf, 1939, enlarged 2/1949; Eng. trans., 1961/R)
FellererP	K.G. Fellerer: Der Palestrinastil und seine Bedeutung in der vokalen Kirchenmusik des 18. Jahrhunderts (Augsburg, 1929/R)
FenlonMM	I. Fenlon: Music and Patronage in Sixteenth-Century Mantua (Cambridge, 1980–82)
FétisB, FétisBS	F.-J. Fétis: Biographie universelle des musiciens and suppl. D
FisherMP	W.A. Fisher: One Hundred and Fifty Years of Music Publishing in the United States (Boston, 1933)
FiskeETM	R. Fiske: English Theatre Music in the Eighteenth Century (London, 1973, 2/1986)
FlorimoN	F. Florimo: La scuola musicale di Napoli e i suoi conservatorii (Naples, 1880–83/R)
FO	French Opera in the 17th and 18th Centuries (New York, 1983–)
FortuneISS	N. Fortune: Italian Secular Song from 1600 to 1635: the Origins and Development of Accompanied Monody (diss., U. of Cambridge, 1954)
Friedlaender DL	M. Friedlaender: Das deutsche Lied im 18. Jahrhundert (Stuttgart and Berlin, 1902/R)
FrotscherG	G. Frotscher: Geschichte des Orgelspiels und der Orgelkomposition (Berlin, 1935–6/R, music suppl. 1966)
FuldWFM	J.J. Fuld: The Book of World-Famous Music D
FullerPG	S. Fuller: The Pandora Guide to Women Composers: Britain and the United States (1629 – Present) D
FürstenauG	M. Fürstenau: Zur Geschichte der Musik und des Theaters am Hofe zu Dresden (Dresden, 1861–2/R)
GänzlBMT	K. Gänzl: The British Musical Theatre (London, 1986)
GänzlEMT	K. Gänzl and A. Lamb: Encyclopedia of Musical Theatre D
GaspariC	G. Gaspari: Catalogo della Biblioteca del Liceo musicale di Bologna, i–iv (Bologna, 1890–1905/R); v, ed. U. Sesini (Bologna, 1943/R)
GerberL	E.L. Gerber: Historisch-biographisches Lexikon der Tonkünstler D
GerberNL	E.L. Gerber: Neues historisch-biographisches Lexikon der Tonkünstler D
GerbertS	M. Gerbert: Scriptores ecclesiastici de musica sacra potissimum (St Blasien, 1784/R, 3/1931)
GEWM	The Garland Encyclopedia of World Music D
GfMKB	Gesellschaft für Musikforschung: Kongress-Bericht [1950–]
GiacomoC	S. di Giacomo: I quattro antichi conservatorii musicali di Napoli (Milan, 1924–8)
GLMT	Greek and Latin Music Theory (Lincoln, NE, 1984–)
GMB	Geschichte der Musik in Beispielen E
GMM	Gazzetta musicale di Milano P
GOB	German Opera 1770–1800, ed. T. Bauman (New York, 1985–6)
GöhlerV	A. Göhler: Verzeichnis der in den Frankfurter und Leipziger Messkatalogen der Jahre 1564 bis 1759 angezeigten Musikalien (Leipzig, 1902/R)
GoovaertsH	A. Goovaerts: Histoire et bibliographie de la typographie musicale dans les Pays-Bas (Antwerp, 1880/R)
GR	Graduale sacrosanctae romanae ecclesiae (Tournai, 1938)
Grove1[–5]	G. Grove, ed.: A Dictionary of Music and Musicians D
Grove6	The New Grove Dictionary of Music and Musicians D
GroveA	The New Grove Dictionary of American Music D
GroveI	The New Grove Dictionary of Musical Instruments D
GroveJ	The New Grove Dictionary of Jazz D
GroveJapan	The New Grove Dictionary of Music and Musicians, Jap. trans. D
GroveO	The New Grove Dictionary of Opera D
GroveW	The New Grove Dictionary of Women Composers D
GS	W.H. Frere, ed.: Graduale sarisburiense (London, 1894/R)
GSJ	Galpin Society Journal P
GSL	K.J. Kutsch and L. Riemann: Grosses Sängerlexikon D
GV	R. Celletti: Le grandi voci: dizionario critico-biografico dei cantanti D
HAM	Historical Anthology of Music E
Harrison MMB	F.Ll. Harrison: Music in Medieval Britain (London, 1958, 4/1980)
HawkinsH	J. Hawkins: A General History of the Science and Practice of Music (London, 1776)
HBSJ	Historical Brass Society Journal P
HDM	W. Apel: Harvard Dictionary of Music D
HJb	Händel-Jahrbuch P
HJbMw	Hamburger Jahrbuch für Musikwissenschaft P
HM	Hortus musicus E
HMC	Historical Manuscripts Commission [Publications]
HMT	Handwörterbuch der musikalischen Terminologie D
HMw	Handbuch der Musikwissenschaft (Potsdam, 1927–34)
HMYB	Hinrichsen's Musical Year Book P
HoneggerD	M. Honegger: Dictionnaire de la musique D
HopkinsonD	C. Hopkinson: A Dictionary of Parisian Music Publishers 1700–1950 D
Hopkins-RimbaultO	E.J. Hopkins and E.F. Rimbault: The Organ: its History and Construction (London, 1855, 3/1887/R)
HPM	Harvard Publications in Music E
HR	Hudební revue P
HRo	Hudební rozhledy P
Humphries-SmithMP	C. Humphries and W.C. Smith: Music Publishing in the British Isles D
HV	Hudební věda P
ICSC	The Italian Cantata in the Seventeenth Century (New York, 1985–6)
IIM	Italian Instrumental Music of the Sixteenth and Early Seventeenth Centuries E
IIM	Izvestiya na Instituta za muzika P
IMa	Instituta et monumenta E
IMi	Istituzioni e monumenti dell'arte musicale italiana (Milan, 1931–9, new ser., 1956–64)
IMSCR	International Musicological Society: Congress Report [1930–]
IMusSCR	International Musical Society: Congress Report [II–IV, 1906–11]
IO	The Italian Oratorio 1650–1800 E
IOB	Italian Opera 1640–1770, ed. H.M. Brown E
IOG	Italian Opera 1810–1840, ed. P. Gossett E
IRASM	International Review of the Aesthetics and Sociology of Music P
IRMAS	International Review of Music Aesthetics and Sociology P
IRMO	S.L. Ginzburg: Istoriya russkoy muzïki v notnïkh obraztsakh (Leningrad, 1940–52, 2/1968–70)
ISS	Italian Secular Song 1606–1636 (New York, 1986)
IZ	Instrumentenbau-Zeitschrift P
JAMIS	Journal of the American Musical Instrument Society P
JAMS	Journal of the American Musicological Society P
JASA	Journal of the Acoustical Society of America P
JazzM	Jazz Monthly P
JBIOS	Journal of the British Institute of Organ Studies P

JbLH Jahrbuch für Liturgik und Hymnologie P
JbMP Jahrbuch der Musikbibliothek Peters P
JbO Jahrbuch für Opernforschung P
JbSIM Jahrbuch des Staatlichen Instituts für Musikforschung Preussischer Kulturbesitz P
JEFDSS Journal of the English Folk Dance and Song Society P
JFSS Journal of the Folk-Song Society P
JIFMC Journal of the International Folk Music Council P
JJ Jazz Journal P
JJI Jazz Journal International P
JJS Journal of Jazz Studies P
JLSA Journal of the Lute Society of America P
JM Journal of Musicology P
JMR Journal of Musicological Research P
JMT Journal of Music Theory P
JoãoIL [João IV:] Primeira parte do index da livraria de musica do muyto alto, e poderoso Rey Dom João o IV. nosso senhor (Lisbon, 1649); ed. J. de Vasconcellos (Oporto, 1874–6)
Johansson FMP C. Johansson: French Music Publishers' Catalogues (Stockholm, 1955)
JohanssonH C. Johansson: J.J. & B. Hummel: Music Publishing and Thematic Catalogues (Stockholm, 1972)
JR Jazz Review P
JRBM Journal of Renaissance and Baroque Music P
JRMA Journal of the Royal Musical Association P
JRME Journal of Research in Music Education P
JT Jazz Times P
JVdGSA Journal of the Viola da Gamba Society of America P
JVNM see Bouwsteenen: JVNM

KdG Komponisten der Gegenwart, ed. H.-W. Heister and W.-W. Sparrer D
KermanEM J. Kerman: The Elizabethan Madrigal: a Comparative Study (New York, 1962)
KidsonBMP F. Kidson: British Music Publishers, Printers and Engravers D
KingMP A.H. King: Four Hundred Years of Music Printing (London, 1964)
KJb Kirchenmusikalisches Jahrbuch P
KM Kwartalnik muzyczny P
KöchelKHM L. von Köchel: Die kaiserliche Hof-Musikkapelle in Wien von 1543 bis 1867 (Vienna, 1869/R)
KretzschmarG H. Kretzschmar: Geschichte des neuen deutschen Liedes (Leipzig, 1911/R)
KrummelEMP D.W. Krummel: English Music Printing (London, 1975)

LaborD Diccionario de la música Labor D
La BordeE J.-B. de La Borde: Essai sur la musique ancienne et moderne D
LabordeMP L.E.S.J. de Laborde: Musiciens de Paris, 1535–1792 D
LafontaineKM H.C. de Lafontaine: The King's Musick (London, 1909/R)
La Laurencie EF L. de La Laurencie: L'école française de violon de Lully à Viotti (Paris, 1922–4/R)
LAMR Latin American Music Review P
LaMusicaD La musica: dizionario D
LaMusicaE La musica: enciclopedia storica D
LangwillI7 see Waterhouse-LangwillI
LedeburTLB C. von Ledebur: Tonkünstler-Lexicon Berlin's (Berlin, 1861/R)
Le HurayMR P. Le Huray: Music and the Reformation in England, 1549–1660 (London, 1967, 2/1978)
LipowskyBL F.J. Lipowsky: Baierisches Musik-Lexikon D
LM Lucrări de muzicologie P
Lockwood MRF L. Lockwood: Music in Renaissance Ferrara (Oxford, 1984)
LoewenbergA A. Loewenberg: Annals of Opera, 1597–1940 D
LPS The London Pianoforte School 1766–1860 E
LS The London Stage, 1660–1800 (Carbondale, IL, 1960–68)
LSJ Lute Society Journal P
LU Liber usualis missae et officii pro dominicis et festis duplicibus cum cantu gregoriano (Solesmes, 1896, and later edns incl. Tournai, 1963)
Lütgendorff GL W.L. von Lütgendorff: Die Geigen- und Lautenmacher vom Mittelalter bis zur Gegenwart D
LZMÖ Lexikon zeitgenössischer Musik aus Österreich (Vienna, 1997)

MA Musical Antiquary P
MAB Musica antiqua bohemica E
MAk Muzïkal'naya akademiya P
MAM Musik alter Meister E
MAMS Monumenta artis musicae Sloveniae E
MAn Music Analysis P
MAP Musica antiqua polonica E
MAS Musical Antiquarian Society [Publications] E
Mattheson GEP J. Mattheson: Grundlage einer Ehren-Pforte (Hamburg, 1740); ed. Max Schneider (Berlin, 1910/R)
MB Musica britannica E
MC Musica da camera E
McCarthyJR A. McCarthy: Jazz on Record (London, 1968)
MCL H. Mendel and A. Reissmann, eds.: Musikalisches Conversations-Lexikon (Berlin, 1870–80, 3/1890–91/R)
MD Musica disciplina P
ME Muzïkal'naya entsiklopediya D
MEM Mestres de l'Escolanía de Montserrat E
MersenneHU M. Mersenne: Harmonie universelle D
MeyerECM E.H. Meyer: English Chamber Music (London, 1946/R, rev. 3/1982 with D. Poulton as Early English Chamber Music)
MeyerMS E.H. Meyer: Die mehrstimmige Spielmusik des 17. Jahrhunderts (Kassel, 1934)
MF Music in Facsimile (New York, 1983–91)
Mf Die Musikforschung P
MG Musik und Gesellschaft P
MGG1, 2 Die Musik in Geschichte und Gegenwart D
MGH Monumenta Germaniae historica
MH Música hispana E
MischiatiI O. Mischiati: Indici, cataloghi e avvisi degli editori e librai musicali italiani (Florence, 1984)
MISM Mitteilungen der Internationalen Stiftung Mozarteum P
MJb Mozart-Jahrbuch [Salzburg, 1950–] P
ML Music & Letters P
MLE Music for London Entertainment 1660–1800 E
MLMI Monumenta lyrica medii aevi italica E
MM Modern Music P
MMA Miscellanea musicologica [Australia] P
MMB Monumenta musicae byzantinae E
MMBel Monumenta musicae belgicae E
MMC Miscellanea musicologica [Czechoslovakia] P
MME Monumentos de la música española E
MMFTR Monuments de la musique française au temps de la Renaissance E
MMg Monatshefte für Musikgeschichte P
MMI Monumenti di musica italiana E
MMMA Monumenta monodica medii aevi E
MMN Monumenta musica neerlandica E
MMP Monumenta musicae in Polonia E
MMR Monthly Musical Record P
MMRF Les maîtres musiciens de la Renaissance française E
MMS Monumenta musicae svecicae E
MNAN Music of the New American Nation E
MO Musical Opinion P
MooserA R.-A. Mooser: Annales de la musique et des musiciens en Russie au XVIIIme siècle D
MoserGV A. Moser: Geschichte des Violinspiels (Berlin, 1923, rev. 2/1966–7 by H.J. Nösselt)
MQ Musical Quarterly P
MR Music Review P
MRM Monuments of Renaissance Music E
MRS Musiche rinascimentali siciliane E
MS Muzïkal'nïy sovremennik P
MSD Musicological Studies and Documents E
MT Musical Times P
MusAm Musical America P
MVH Musica viva historica E
MVSSP Musiche vocali e strumentali sacre e profane E
Mw Das Musikwerk E
MZ Muzikološki zbornik P

NA Note d'archivio per la storia musicale P
NBeJb Neues Beethoven-Jahrbuch P
NBL Norsk biografisk leksikon (Oslo, 1923–83)
NDB Neue deutsche Biographie (Berlin, 1953–)

Neighbour-TysonPN — O.W. Neighbour and A. Tyson: English Music Publishers' Plate Numbers (London, 1965)
NericiS — L. Nerici: Storia della musica in Lucca (Lucca, 1879/R)
NewcombMF — A. Newcomb: The Madrigal at Ferrara, 1579–1597 (Princeton, NJ, 1980)
NewmanSBE — W.S. Newman: The Sonata in the Baroque Era (Chapel Hill, NC, 1959, 4/1983)
NewmanSCE — W.S. Newman: The Sonata in the Classic Era (Chapel Hill, NC, 1963, 3/1983)
NewmanSSB — W.S. Newman: The Sonata since Beethoven (Chapel Hill, NC, 1969, 3/1983)
NicollH — A. Nicoll: The History of English Drama, 1660–1900 (Cambridge, 1952–9)
NM — Nagels Musik-Archiv E
NMÅ — Norsk musikkgranskning årbok P
NNBW — Nieuw Nederlandsch biografisch woordenboek (Leiden, 1911–37)
NÖB — Neue österreichische Biographie (Vienna, 1923–35)
NOHM, NOHM — The New Oxford History of Music (Oxford, 1954–90)
NRMI — Nuova rivista musicale italiana P
NZM — Neue Zeitschrift für Musik P

OHM, OHM — The Oxford History of Music (Oxford, 1901–5, 2/1929–38)
OM — Opus musicum P
ÖMz — Österreichische Musikzeitschrift P
ON — Opera News P
OQ — Opera Quarterly P
OW — Opernwelt P

PalMus — Paléographie musicale E
PAMS — Papers of the American Musicological Society P
PÄMw — Publikation älterer praktischer und theoretischer Musikwerke E
PazdírekH — B. Pazdírek: Universal-Handbuch der Musikliteratur aller Zeiten und Völker (Vienna, 1904–10/R)
PBC — Publicaciones del departamento de música E
PEM — C. Dahlhaus and S. Döhring, eds.: Pipers Enzyklopädie des Musiktheaters (Munich and Zürich, 1986–97)
PG — Patrologiae cursus completus, ii: Series graeca, ed. J.-P. Migne (Paris, 1857–1912)
PGfM — see PÄMw
PierreH — C. Pierre: Histoire du Concert spirituel 1725–1790 (Paris, 1975)
PIISM — Pubblicazioni dell'Istituto italiano per la storia della musica E
PirroHM — A. Pirro: Histoire de la musique de la fin du XIVe siècle à la fin du XVIe (Paris, 1940)
PirrottaDO — N. Pirrotta and E. Povoledo: Li due Orfei: da Poliziano a Monteverdi (Turin, 1969, enlarged 2/1975; Eng. trans., 1982, as Music and Theatre from Poliziano to Monteverdi)
PitoniN — G.O. Pitoni: Notitia de contrapuntisti e de compositori di musica (MS, *c*1725, I-Rvat C.G.I/1–2); ed. C. Ruini (Florence, 1988)
PL — Patrologiae cursus completus, i: Series latina, ed. J.-P. Migne (Paris, 1844–64)
PM — Portugaliae musica E
PMA — Proceedings of the Musical Association P
PMFC — Polyphonic Music of the Fourteenth Century E
PMM — Plainsong and Medieval Music P
PNM — Perspectives of New Music P
PraetoriusSM — M. Praetorius: Syntagma musicum, i (Wittenberg and Wolfenbüttel, 1614–15, 2/1615/R); ii (Wolfenbüttel, 1618, 2/1619/R; Eng. trans., 1986, 2/1991); iii (Wolfenbüttel, 1618, 2/1619/R)
PraetoriusTI — M. Praetorius: Theatrum instrumentorum [pt ii/2 of PraetoriusSM]
PRM — Polski rocznik muzykologiczny P
PRMA — Proceedings of the Royal Musical Association P
Przywecka-SameckaDM — M. Przywecka-Samecka: Drukarstwo muzyczne w Polsce do końca XVIII wieku (Kraków, 1969)
PSB — Polskich słownik biograficzny (Kraków, 1935)
PSFM — Publications [Société française de musicologie] E

Quaderni della RaM — Quaderni della Rassegna musicale P

Rad JAZU — Rad Jugoslavenske akademije znanosti i umjetnosti P
RaM — Rassegna musicale P
RBM — Revue belge de musicologie P
RdM — Revue de musicologie P
RdMc — Revista de musicología P
ReeseMMA — G. Reese: Music in the Middle Ages (New York, 1940)
ReeseMR — G. Reese: Music in the Renaissance (New York, 1954, 2/1959)
RefardtHBM — E. Refardt: Historisch-biographisches Musikerlexikon der Schweiz D
ReM — Revue musicale P
RFS — Romantic French Song 1830–1870 E
RGMP — Revue et gazette musicale de Paris P
RHCM — Revue d'histoire et de critique musicales P
RicciTB — C. Ricci: I teatri di Bologna nei secoli XVII e XVIII: storia aneddotica (Bologna, 1888/R)
RicordiE — C. Sartori and R. Allorto: Enciclopedia della musica D
RiemannG — H. Riemann: Geschichte der Musiktheorie im IX.–XIX. Jahrhundert (Berlin, 2/1921/R; Eng. trans. of pts i–ii, 1962/R, and pt iii, 1977)
RiemannL11, 12 — Hugo Riemanns Musiklexikon (11/1929, 12/1959–75) D
RIM — Rivista italiana di musicologia P
RIMS — Rivista internazionale di musica sacra P
RM — Ruch muzyczny P
RMARC — R.M.A. [Royal Musical Association] Research Chronicle P
RMC — Revista musical chilena P
RMF — Renaissance Music in Facsimile (New York, 1986–8)
RMFC — Recherches sur la musique française classique P
RMG — Russkaya muzïkal'naya gazeta P
RMI — Rivista musicale italiana P
RMS — Renaissance Manuscript Studies (Stuttgart, 1975–)
RN — Renaissance News P
RosaM — C. de Rosa, Marchese di Villarosa: Memorie dei compositori di musica del regno di Napoli (Naples, 1840)
RRAM — Recent Researches in American Music E
RRMBE — Recent Researches in the Music of the Baroque Era E
RRMCE — Recent Researches in the Music of the Classical Era E
RRMMA — Recent Researches in the Music of the Middle Ages and Early Renaissance E
RRMNETC — Recent Researches in the Music of the Nineteenth and Early Twentieth Centuries E
RRMR — Recent Researches in the Music of the Renaissance E

SachsH — C. Sachs: The History of Musical Instruments (New York, 1940)
SainsburyD — J.H. Sainsbury: A Dictionary of Musicians D
SartoriB — C. Sartori: Bibliografia della musica strumentale italiana stampata in Italia fino al 1700 (Florence, 1952–68)
SartoriD — C. Sartori: Dizionario degli editori musicali italiani D
SartoriL — C. Sartori: I libretti italiani a stampa dalle origini al 1800 (Cuneo, 1990–94)
SBL — Svenskt biografiskt lexikon (Stockholm, 1918–)
SCC — The Sixteenth-Century Chanson E
ScheringGIK — A. Schering: Geschichte des Instrumental-Konzerts (Leipzig, 1905, 2/1927/R)
ScheringGO — A. Schering: Geschichte des Oratoriums (Leipzig, 1911/R)
SchillingE — G. Schilling: Encyclopädie der gesammten musikalischen Wissenschaften, oder Universal-Lexicon der Tonkunst D
SČHK — Slovník české hudební kultury (Prague, 1997)
SchmidlD, SchmidlDS — C. Schmidl: Dizionario universale dei musicisti and suppl. D
SchmitzG — E. Schmitz: Geschichte der weltlichen Solokantate (Leipzig, 1914, 2/1955)
SchullerEJ — G. Schuller: Early Jazz (New York, 1968/R)
SchullerSE — G. Schuller: The Swing Era (New York, 1989)
SchwarzGM — B. Schwarz: Great Masters of the Violin D
SCISM — Seventeenth-Century Italian Sacred Music E
SCKM — Seventeenth-Century Keyboard Music (New York, 1987–8)
SCMA — Smith College Music Archives E
SCMad — Sixteenth-Century Madrigal E

SCMot — Sixteenth-Century Motet E
SeegerL — H. Seeger: Musiklexikon D
SEM — Series of Early Music [University of California] E
SennMT — W. Senn: Musik und Theater am Hof zu Innsbruck (Innsbruck, 1954)
SH — Slovenská hudba P
SIMG — Sammelbände der Internationalen Musik-Gesellschaft P
SKM — Sovetskiye kompozitorï i muzïkovedï (Moscow, 1978–89)
SM — see SMH
SMA — Studies in Music [Australia] P
SMC — Studies in Music from the University of Western Ontario [Canada] P
SMd — Schweizerische Musikdenkmäler E
SMH — Studia musicologica Academiae scientiarum hungaricae P
SmitherHO — H. Smither: A History of the Oratorio (Chapel Hill, NC, 1977–)
SML — Schweizer Musikerlexikon D
SMM — Summa musicae medii aevi E
SMN — Studia musicologica norvegica P
SMP — Słownik muzyków polskich D
SMSC — Solo Motets from the Seventeenth Century (New York, 1987–8)
SMw — Studien zur Musikwissenschaft P
SMz — Schweizerische Musikzeitung/Revue musicale suisse P
SOB — Süddeutsche Orgelmeister des Barock E
SOI — L. Bianconi and G. Pestelli, eds.: Storia dell'opera italiana (Turin, 1987–; Eng. trans., 1998–)
SolertiMBD — A. Solerti: Musica, ballo e drammatica alla corte medicea dal 1600 al 1637 (Florence, 1905/R)
SouthernB — E. Southern: Biographical Dictionary of Afro-American and African Musicians D
SovM — Sovetskaya muzïka P
SpataroC — B.J. Blackburn, E.E. Lowinsky and C.A. Miller: A Correspondence of Renaissance Musicians (Oxford, 1991)
SPFFBU — Sborník prací filosofické [filozofické] fakulty brněnské university [univerzity] P
SpinkES — I. Spink: English Song: Dowland to Purcell (London, 1974, repr. 1986 with corrections)
StevensonRB — R. Stevenson: Renaissance and Baroque Musical Sources in the Americas (Washington DC, 1970)
Stevenson SCM — R. Stevenson: Spanish Cathedral Music in the Golden Age (Berkeley, 1961/R)
StevensonSM — R. Stevenson: Spanish Music in the Age of Columbus (The Hague, 1960/R)
StiegerO — F. Stieger: Opernlexikon D
STMf — Svensk tidskrift för musikforskning P
StrohmM — R. Strohm: Music in Late Medieval Bruges (Oxford, 1985)
StrohmR — R. Strohm: The Rise of European Music (Cambridge, 1993)
StrunkSR1, 2 — O. Strunk: Source Readings in Music History (New York, 1950/R, rev. 2/1998 by L. Treitler)
SubiráHME — J. Subirá: Historia de la música española e hispanoamericana (Barcelona, 1953)

TCM — Tudor Church Music E
TCMS — Three Centuries of Music in Score (New York, 1988–90)
Thompson1 [–11] — O. Thompson: The International Cyclopedia of Music and Musicians, 1st–11th edns D
TM — Thesauri musici E
TSM — Tesoro sacro musical P
TVNM — Tijdschrift van de Vereniging voor Nederlandse muziekgeschiedenis [and earlier variants] P

UVNM — Uitgave van oudere Noord-Nederlandsche Meesterwerken E

Vander Straeten MPB — E. Vander Straeten: La musique aux Pays-Bas avant le XIXe siècle D
VannesD — R. Vannes, with A. Souris: Dictionnaire des musiciens (compositeurs) D
VannesE — R. Vannes: Essai d'un dictionnaire universel des luthiers D
VintonD — J. Vinton: Dictionary of Contemporary Music D
VirdungMG — S. Virdung: Musica getutscht (Basle, 1511/R)
VMw — Vierteljahrsschrift für Musikwissenschaft P
VogelB — E. Vogel: Bibliothek der gedruckten weltlichen Vocalmusik Italiens, aus den Jahren 1500 bis 1700 (Berlin, 1892/R)

WalterG — F. Walter: Geschichte des Theaters und der Musik am kurpfalzischen Hofe (Leipzig, 1898/R)
WaltherML — J.G. Walther: Musicalisches Lexicon, oder Musicalische Bibliothec D
Waterhouse-LangwillI — W. Waterhouse: The New Langwill Index: a Dictionary of Musical Wind-Instrument Makers and Inventors D
WDMP — Wydawnictwo dawnej muzyki polskiej E
WE — The Wellesley Edition E
WECIS — Wellesley Edition Cantata Index Series (Wellesley, MA, 1964–72)
Weinmann WM — A. Weinmann: Wiener Musikverleger und Musikalienhändler von Mozarts Zeit bis gegen 1860 (Vienna, 1956)
WilliamsNH — P. Williams: A New History of the Organ: from the Greeks to the Present Day (London, 1980)
WinterfeldEK — C. von Winterfeld: Der evangelische Kirchengesang und sein Verhältniss zur Kunst des Tonsatzes (Leipzig, 1843–7/R)
WolfeMEP — R.J. Wolfe: Early American Music Engraving and Printing (Urbana, IL, 1980)
WolfH — J. Wolf: Handbuch der Notationskunde (Leipzig, 1913–19/R)
WurzbachL — C. von Wurzbach: Biographisches Lexikon des Kaiserthums Oesterreich (Vienna, 1856–91)

YIAMR — Yearbook, Inter-American Institute for Musical Research, later Yearbook for Inter-American Musical Research P
YIFMC — Yearbook of the International Folk Music Council P
YoungHI — P.T. Young: 4900 Historical Woodwind Instruments (London, 1993) [enlarged 2nd edn of Twenty Five Hundred Historical Woodwind Instruments (New York, 1982)]
YTM — Yearbook for Traditional Music P

ZahnM — J. Zahn: Die Melodien der deutschen evangelischen Kirchenlieder (Gütersloh, 1889–93/R)
ZDADL — Zeitschrift für deutsches Altertum und deutsche Literatur (1876–)
ZfM — Zeitschrift für Musik P
ŹHMP — Źródła do historii muzyki polskiej E
ZI — Zeitschrift für Instrumentenbau P
ZIMG — Zeitschrift der Internationalen Musik-Gesellschaft P
ZL — Zenei lexikon D
ZMw — Zeitschrift für Musikwissenschaft P
ZT — Zenetudományi tanulmányok P

Discographical Abbreviations

20C	20th Century
20CF	20th Century-Fox
AAFS	Archive of American Folksong (Library of Congress)
A&M Hor.	A&M Horizon
ABC-Para.	ABC-Paramount
AH	Artists House
AIMP	Archives Internationales de Musique Populaire (Musée d'Ethnographie, Geneva), pubd by VDE-Gallo
Ala.	Aladdin
AM	American Music
Amer.	America
AN	Arista Novus
Ant.	Antilles
Ari.	Arista
Asy.	Asylum
Atl.	Atlantic
Aut.	Autograph
Bak.	Bakton
Ban.	Banner
Bay.	Baystate
BB	Black and Blue
Bb	Bluebird
Beth.	Bethlehem
BH	Bee Hive
BL	Black Lion
BN	Blue Note
Bruns.	Brunswick
BS	Black Saint
BStar	Blue Star
Cad.	Cadence
Can.	Canyon
Cand.	Candid
Cap.	Capitol
Car.	Caroline
Cas.	Casablanca
Cat.	Catalyst
Cen.	Century
Chi.	Chiaroscuro
Cir.	Circle
CJ	Classic Jazz
Cob.	Cobblestone
Col.	Columbia
Com.	Commodore
Conc.	Concord
Cont.	Contemporary
Contl	Continental
Cot.	Cotillion
CP	Charlie Parker
CW	Creative World
Del.	Delmark
DG	Deutsche Grammophon
Dis.	Discovery
Dra.	Dragon
EB	Electric Bird
Elec.	Electrola
Elek.	Elektra
Elek. Mus.	Elektra Musician
EmA	EmArcy
ES	Elite Special
Eso.	Esoteric
Ev.	Everest
EW	East Wind
Ewd	Eastworld
FaD	Famous Door
Fan.	Fantasy
FD	Flying Dutchman
FDisk	Flying Disk
Fel.	Felsted
Fon.	Fontana
Fre.	Freedom
FW	Folkways
Gal.	Galaxy
Gen.	Gennett
GM	Groove Merchant
Gram.	Gramavision
GTJ	Good Time Jazz
HA	Hat Art
Hal.	Halcyon
Har.	Harmony
Harl.	Harlequin
HH	Hat Hut
Hick.	Hickory
HM	Harmonia Mundi
Hor.	Horizon
Hyp.	Hyperion
IC	Inner City
IH	Indian House
ImA	Improvising Artists
Imp.	Impulse!
Imper.	Imperial
IndN	India Navigation
Isl.	Island
JAM	Jazz America Marketing
Jlgy	Jazzology
Jlnd	Jazzland
Jub.	Jubilee
Jwl	Jewell
Jzt.	Jazztone
Key.	Keynote
Kt.	Keytone
Lib.	Liberty
Lml.	Limelight
Lon.	London
Mdsv.	Moodsville
Mer.	Mercury
Met.	Metronome
Metro.	Metrojazz
MJR	Master Jazz Recordings
Mlst.	Milestone
Mlt.	Melotone
Moers	Moers Music
MonE	Monmouth-Evergreen
Mstr.	Mainstream
Musi.	Musicraft

Nat.	National
NewJ	New Jazz
Norg.	Norgran
NW	New World
OK	Okeh
OL	Oiseau-Lyre
Omni.	Omnisound
PAct	Pathé Actuelle
PAlt	Palo Alto
Para.	Paramount
Parl.	Parlophone
Per.	Perfect
Phi.	Philips
Phon.	Phontastic
PJ	Pacific Jazz
PL	Pablo Live
Pol.	Polydor
Prog.	Progressive
Prst.	Prestige
PT	Pablo Today
PW	Paddle Wheel
Qual.	Qualiton
Reg.	Regent
Rep.	Reprise
Rev.	Revelation
Riv.	Riverside
Roul.	Roulette
RR	Red Records
RT	Real Time
Sack.	Sackville
Sat.	Saturn
SE	Strata-East
Sig.	Signature
Slnd	Southland
SN	Soul Note
SolS	Solid State
Son.	Sonora
Spot.	Spotlite
Ste.	Steeplechase
Sto.	Storyville
Sup.	Supraphon
Tak.	Takoma
Tan.	Tangent
TE	Toshiba Express
Tei.	Teichiku
Tel.	Telefunken
The.	Theresa
Tim.	Timeless
TL	Time-Life
Tran.	Transition
UA	United Artists
Upt.	Uptown
Van.	Vanguard
Var.	Variety
Vars.	Varsity
Vic.	Victor
VJ	Vee-Jay
Voc.	Vocalion
WB	Warner Bros.
WP	World Pacific
Xan.	Xanadu

Library Sigla

The system of library sigla in this dictionary follows that used by Répertoire International des Sources Musicales, Kassel, as listed in its publication RISM-Bibliothekssigel (Kassel, 1999). Below are listed the sigla to be found; a few of them are additional to those published in the RISM list, but have been established in consultation with the RISM organization. Some original RISM sigla that have now been changed are retained here.

More information on individual libraries is available in the libraries list in volume 28.

In the dictionary, sigla are always printed in italic. In any listing of sources a national sigillum applies without repetition until it is contradicted.

Within each national list, entries are alphabetized by sigillum, first by capital letters (showing the city or town) and then by lower-case ones (showing the institution or collection).

A: AUSTRIA

A	Admont, Benediktinerstift, Archiv und Bibliothek
DO	Dorfbeuren, Pfarramt
Ed	Eisenstadt, Domarchiv, Musikarchiv
Ee	——, Esterházy-Archiv
Eh	——, Haydn-Museum
Ek	——, Stadtpfarrkirche
El	——, Burgenländisches Landesmuseum
ETgoëss	Ebenthal (nr Klagenfurt), Goëss private collection
F	Fiecht, St Georgenberg, Benediktinerstift, Bibliothek
FB	Fischbach (Oststeiermark), Pfarrkirche
FK	Feldkirch, Domarchiv
Gd	Graz, Diözesanarchiv
Gk	——, Universität für Musik und Darstellende Kunst
Gl	——, Steiermärkische Landesbibliothek am Joanneum
Gmi	——, Institut für Musikwissenschaft
Gu	——, Universitätsbibliothek
GÖ	Göttweig, Benediktinerstift, Musikarchiv
GÜ	Güssing, Franziskaner Kloster
H	Herzogenburg, Augustiner-Chorherrenstift, Musikarchiv
HE	Heiligenkreuz, Zisterzienserkloster
Ik	Innsbruck, Tiroler Landeskonservatorium
Imf	——, Tiroler Landesmuseum Ferdinandeum
Imi	——, Musikwissenschaftliches Institut der Universität
Iu	——, Universitätsbibliothek
Kk	Klagenfurt, Kärntner Landeskonservatorium, Stiftsbibliothek
Kla	——, Landesarchiv
Kse	——, Schlossbibliothek Ebental
KN	Klosterneuburg, Augustiner-Chorherrenstift, Stiftsbibliothek
KR	Kremsmünster, Benediktinerstift, Musikarchiv
L	Lilienfeld, Zisterzienser-Stift, Musikarchiv und Bibliothek
LA	Lambach, Benediktinerstift
LIm	Linz, Oberösterreichisches Landesmuseum
LIs	——, Bundesstaatliche Studienbibliothek
M	Melk, Benediktiner-Superiorat Mariazell
MB	Michaelbeuern, Benediktinerabtei
MS	Mattsee, Stiftsarchiv
MT	Maria Taferl (Niederösterreich), Pfarre
MZ	Mariazell, Benediktiner-Priorat, Bibliothek und Archiv
N	Neuburg, Pfarrarchiv
R	Rein, Zisterzienserstift
RB	Reichersberg, Stift
Sca	Salzburg, Carolino Augusteum: Salzburger Museum für Kunst und Kulturgeschichte, Bibliothek
Sd	——, Dom, Konsistorialarchiv, Dommusikarchiv
Sk	——, Kapitelbibliothek
Sl	——, Landesarchiv
Sm	——, Internationale Stiftung Mozarteum, Bibliotheca Mozartiana
Smi	——, Universität Salzburg, Institut für Musikwissenschaft, Bibliothek
Sn	——, Nonnberg (Benediktiner-Frauenstift), Bibliothek
Sp	——, Bibliothek des Priesterseminars
Ssp	——, Erzabtei St Peter, Musikarchiv
Sst	——, Bundesstaatliche Studienbibliothek [in Su]
Su	——, Universitätsbibliothek
SB	Schlierbach, Stift
SCH	Schlägl, Prämonstratenser-Stift, Bibliothek
SE	Seckau, Benediktinerabtei
SEI	Seitenstetten, Benediktinerstift, Musikarchiv
SF	St Florian, Augustiner-Chorherrenstift, Stiftsbibliothek, Musikarchiv
SL	St Lambrecht, Benediktiner-Abtei, Bibliothek
SPL	St Paul, Benediktinerstift St Paul im Lavanttal
ST	Stams, Zisterzienserstift, Musikarchiv
STEp	Steyr, Stadtpfarre
TU	Tulln, Pfarrkirche St Stephan
VOR	Vorau, Stift
Wa	Vienna, St Augustin, Musikarchiv
Waf	——, Pfarrarchiv Altlerchenfeld
Wdo	——, Zentralarchiv des Deutschen Orden
Wdtö	——, Gesellschaft zur Herausgabe von Denkmälern der Tonkunst in Österreich
Wgm	——, Gesellschaft der Musikfreunde
Wh	——, Pfarrarchiv Hernals
Whh	——, Haus-, Hof- und Staatsarchiv
Whk	——, Hofburgkapelle [in Wn]
Wk	——, St Karl Borromäus
Wkm	——, Kunsthistorisches Museum
Wlic	——, Pfarrkirche Wien-Lichtental
Wm	——, Minoritenkonvent
Wmi	——, Institut für Musikwissenschaft der Universität
Wn	——, Österreichische Nationalbibliothek, Musiksammlung
Wp	——, Musikarchiv, Piaristenkirche Maria Treu
Ws	——, Schottenabtei, Musikarchiv
Wsa	——, Stadtarchiv
Wsfl	——, Schottenfeld, Pfarrarchiv St Laurenz

Wsp	——, St Peter, Musikarchiv
Wst	——, Stadt- und Landesbibliothek, Musiksammlung
Wu	——, Universitätsbibliothek
Wwessely	——, Othmar Wessely, private collection
WAIp	Waidhofen (Ybbs), Stadtpfarre
WIL	Wilhering, Zisterzienserstift, Bibliothek und Musikarchiv
Z	Zwettl, Zisterzienserstift, Stiftsbibliothek

AUS: AUSTRALIA

CAnl	Canberra, National Library of Australia
Msl	Melbourne, State Library of Victoria
Pml	Perth, Central Music Library
PVgm	Parkville, Grainger Museum, University of Melbourne
Sb	Sydney, Symphony Australia National Music Library
Scm	——, New South Wales State Conservatorium of Music
Sfl	——, University of Sydney, Fisher Library
Smc	——, Australia Music Centre Ltd, Library
Sml	——, Music Branch Library, University of Sydney
Sp	——, Public Library
Ssl	——, State Library of New South Wales, Mitchell Library

B: BELGIUM

Aa	Antwerp, Stadsarchief
Aac	——, Archief en Museum voor het Vlaamse Culturleven
Ac	——, Koninklijk Vlaams Muziekconservatorium
Ak	——, Onze-Lieve-Vrouw-Kathedraal, Archief
Amp	——, Museum Plantin-Moretus
As	——, Stadsbibliotheek
Asj	——, Collegiale en Parochiale Kerk St-Jacob, Bibliotheek en Archief
Ba	Brussels, Archives de la Ville
Bc	——, Conservatoire Royal, Bibliothèque, Koninklijk Conservatorium, Bibliotheek
Bcdm	——, Centre Belge de Documentation Musicale [CeBeDeM]
Bg	——, Cathédrale St-Michel et Ste-Gudule [in Bc and Br]
Bmichotte	——, Michotte private collection [in Bc]
Br	——, Bibliothèque Royale Albert 1er/Koninlijke Bibliotheek Albert I, Section de la Musique
Brtb	——, Radiodiffusion-Télévision Belge
Bsp	——, Société Philharmonique
BRc	Bruges, Stedelijk Muziekconservatorium, Bibliotheek
BRs	——, Stadsbibliotheek
D	Diest, St Sulpitiuskerk
Gc	Ghent, Koninklijk Muziekconservatorium, Bibliotheek
Gcd	——, Culturele Dienst Province Oost-Vlaanderen
Geb	——, St Baafsarchief
Gu	——, Universiteit, Centrale Bibliotheek, Handskriftenzaal
La	Liège, Archives de l'État, Fonds de la Cathédrale St Lambert
Lc	——, Conservatoire Royal de Musique, Bibliothèque
Lg	——, Musée Grétry
Lu	——, Université de Liège, Bibliothèque
LVu	Leuven, Katholieke Universiteit van Leuven
MA	Morlanwelz-Mariemont, Musée de Mariemont, Bibliothèque
MEa	Mechelen, Archief en Stadsbibliotheek
Tc	Tournai, Chapitre de la Cathédrale, Archives
Tv	——, Bibliothèque de la Ville

BR: BRAZIL

Rem	Rio de Janeiro, Universidade Federal do Rio de Janeiro, Escola de Música, Biblioteca Alberto Nepomuceno
Rn	——, Fundação Biblioteca Nacional, Divisão de Música e Arquivo Sonoro

BY: BELARUS

MI	Minsk, Biblioteka Belorusskoj Gosudarstvennoj Konservatorii

C: CUBA

HABn	Havana, Biblioteca Nacional José Martí

CDN: CANADA

Cu	Calgary, University of Calgary, Library
E	Edmonton (AB), University of Alberta
HNu	Hamilton (ON), McMaster University, Mills Memorial Library, Music Section
Lu	London (ON), University of Western Ontario, Music Library
Mc	Montreal, Conservatoire de Musique, Centre de Documentation
Mcm	——, Centre de Musique Canadienne
Mm	——, McGill University, Faculty and Conservatorium of Music Library
Mn	——, Bibliothèque Nationale
On	Ottawa, National Library of Canada, Music Division
Qmu	Quebec, Monastère des Ursulines, Archives
Qsl	——, Musée de l'Amérique Française
Qul	——, Université Laval, Bibliothèque des Sciences Humaines et Sociales
Tcm	Toronto, Canadian Music Centre
Tu	——, University of Toronto, Faculty of Music Library
Vcm	Vancouver, Canadian Music Centre
VIu	Victoria, University of Victoria

CH: SWITZERLAND

A	Aarau, Aargauische Kantonsbibliothek
Bab	Basle, Archiv der Evangelischen Brüdersozietät
Bps	——, Paul Sacher Stiftung, Bibliothek
Bu	——, Universität Basel, Öffentliche Bibliothek, Musikabteilung
BEb	Berne, Burgerbibliothek/Bibliothèque de la Bourgeoisie
BEl	——, Schweizerische Landesbibliothek/Bibliothèque Nationale Suisse/Biblioteca Nationale Svizzera/Biblioteca Naziunala Svizra
BEsu	——, Stadt- und Universitätsbibliothek
BM	Beromünster, Musikbibliothek des Stifts
BU	Burgdorf, Stadtbibliothek
CObodmer	Cologny-Geneva, Fondation Martin Bodmer, Bibliotheca Bodmeriana
D	Disentis, Stift, Musikbibliothek
E	Einsiedeln, Benedikterkloster, Musikbibliothek
EN	Engelberg, Kloster, Musikbibliothek
Fcu	Fribourg, Bibliothèque Cantonale et Universitaire
FF	Frauenfeld, Thurgauische Kantonsbibliothek
Gc	Geneva, Conservatoire de Musique, Bibliothèque
Gpu	——, Bibliothèque Publique et Universitaire
Lmg	Lucerne, Allgemeine Musikalische Gesellschaft
Lz	——, Zentralbibliothek
LAac	Lausanne, Archives Cantonales Vaudoises
LAcu	——, Bibliothèque Cantonale et Universitaire
LU	Lugano, Biblioteca Cantonale
MSbk	Mariastein, Benediktinerkloster
MÜ	Müstair, Frauenkloster St Johann
N	Neuchâtel, Bibliothèque Publique et Universitaire
OB	Oberbüren, Kloster Glattburg
P	Porrentruy, Bibliothèque Cantonale Jurasienne (incl. Bibliothèque du Lycée Cantonal)
R	Rheinfelden, Christkatholisches Pfarramt
S	Sion, Bibliothèque Cantonale du Valais
SAf	Sarnen, Benediktinerinnen-Abtei St Andreas
SAM	Samedan, Biblioteca Fundaziun Planta
SGd	St Gallen, Domchorarchiv
SGs	——, Stiftsbibliothek, Handschriftenabteilung
SGv	——, Kantonsbibliothek (Vadiana)
SH	Schaffhausen, Stadtbibliothek
SO	Solothurn, Zentralbibliothek, Musiksammlung
SObo	——, Bischöfliches Ordinariat der Diözese Basel, Diözesanarchiv des Bistums Basel
W	Winterthur, Stadtbibliothek
Zi	Zürich, Israelitische Kultusgemeinde
Zma	——, Schweizerisches Musik-Archiv [in Nf]
Zz	——, Zentralbibliothek
ZGm	Zug, Pfarrarchiv St Michael

CO: COLOMBIA

B Bogotá, Archivo de la Catedral

CZ: CZECH REPUBLIC

Bam Brno, Archiv města Brna
Bb ——, Klášter Milosrdnych Bratří [in Bm]
Bm ——, Moravské Zemské Muzeum, Oddělení Dějin Hudby
Bsa ——, Státní Oblastní Archiv
Bu ——, Moravská Zemeská Knihovna, Hudební Oddělení
BER Beroun, Statní Okresní Archiv
BROb Broumov, Knihovna Benediktinů [in HK]
CH Cheb, Okresní Archiv
CHRm Chrudim, Okresní Muzeum
D Dačice, Knihovna Františkánů [in Bu]
H Hronov, Muzeum
HK Hradec Králové, Státní Vědecká Knihovna
HKm ——, Muzeum Východních Čech
HR Hradiště u Znojma, Knihovna Křižovníků[in Bu]
JIa Jindřichův Hradec, Státní Oblastní Archív Třeboni
K Český Krumlov, Státní Oblastní Archiv v Třeboni, Hudební Sbírka
KA Kadaň, Děkansky Kostel
KL Klatovy, Státní Oblastní Archiv v Plzni, Pobočka Klatovy
KR Kroměříž, Knihovna Arcibiskupského Zámku
KRa ——, Státní y Zámek a Zahrady, Historicko-Umělecké Fondy, Hudební Archív
KRA Králíky, Kostel Sv. Michala [in UO]
KU Kutná Hora, Okresní Muzeum [in Pnm]
LIa Česká Lípa, Okresní Archív
LIT Litoměřice, Státní Oblastní Archiv
LO Loukov, Farní Kostel
LUa Louny, Okresní Archív
ME Mělník, Okresní Muzeum [on loan to Pnm]
MH Mnichovo Hradiště, Vlastivědné Muzeum
MHa ——, Státní Oblatní Archiv v Praze – Pobočka v Mnichovoě Hradiští
MT Moravská Třebová, Knihovna Františkánů [in Bu]
NR Nová Říše, Klášter Premonstrátů, Knihovna a Hudební Sbírka
OLa Olomouc, Zemeský Archiv Opava, Pracoviště Olomouc
OP Opava, Slezské Muzeum
OS Ostrava, Česky Rozhlas, Hudební Archiv
OSE Osek, Knihovna Cisterciáků [in Pnm]
Pa Prague, Státní Ústřední Archiv
Pak ——, Pražská Metropolitní Kapitula
Pdobrovského ——, Národní Muzeum, Dobrovského (Nostická) Knihovna
Pk ——, Konservatoř, Archiv a Knihovna
Pn ——, Knihovna Národního Muzea
Pnd ——, Národní Divadlo, Hudební Archiv
Pnm ——, Národní Muzeum
Pr ——, Česky Rozhlas, Archívní a Programové Fondy, Fond Hudebnin
Ps ——, Památník Národního Písemnictví, Knihovna
Psj ——, Kostel Sv. Jakuba, Farní Rad
Pst ——, Knihovna Kláštera Premonstrátů (Strahovská Knihovna) [in Pnm]
Pu ——, Národní Knihovna, Hudenbí Oddělení
Puk ——, Karlova Univerzita, Filozofická Fakulta, Ústav Hudební Vědy, Knihovna
PLa Plzeň, Městský Archiv
PLm ——, Západočeské Muzeum, Uměleckoprůmyslové Oddělení
POa Poděbrady, Okresní Archiv Nymburk, Pobočka Poděbrady
POm ——, Muzeum
R Rajhrad, Knihovna Benediktinského Kláštera [in Bm]
RO Rokycany, Okresní Muzeum
ROk ——, Děkansky Úřad, Kostel
SE Semily, Okresní Archiv v Semilech se Sídlem v Bystré nad Jizerou
SO Sokolov, Okresní Archiv se Sídlem Jindřchovice, Zámek
TC Třebíč, Městsky Archiv
TU Turnov, Muzeum, Hudební Sbírka [in SE]
VB Vyšší Brod, Knihovna Cisterciáckého Kláštera
Z Žatec, Muzeum
ZI Žitenice, Státní Oblastní Archiv v Litoměřicích
ZL Zlonice, Památník Antonína Dvořáka

D: GERMANY

Aa Augsburg, Kantoreiarchiv St Annen
Aab ——, Archiv des Bistums Augsburg
Af ——, Fuggersche Domänenkanzlei, Bibliothek
Ahk ——, Heilig-Kreuz-Kirche, Dominikanerkloster, Biliothek [in Asa]
As ——, Staats- und Stadtbibliothek
Asa ——, Stadtarchiv
Au ——, Universität Augsburg, Universitätsbibliothek
AAm Aachen, Domarchiv (Stiftsarchiv)
AASt ——, Öffentliche Bibliothek, Musikbibliothek
AB Amorbach, Fürstlich Leiningische Bibliothek
ABG Annaberg-Buchholz, Kirchenbibliothek St Annen
ABGa ——, Kantoreiarchiv St Annen
AG Augustusburg, Evangelisch-Lutherisches Pfarramt der Stadtkirche St Petri, Musiksammlung
AIC Aichach, Stadtpfarrkirche [on loan to FS]
ALa Altenburg, Thüringisches Hauptstaadtsarchiv Weimar, Aussenstelle Altenburg AM Amberg, Staatliche Bibliothek
AN Ansbach, Staatliche Bibliothek
ANsv ——, Sing- und Orchesterverein (Ansbacher Kantorei), Archiv [in AN] AÖhk Altötting, Kapuziner-Kloster St Konrad, Bibliothek
ARk Arnstadt, Evangelisch-Lutherisches Pfarramt, Bibliothek
ARsk ——, Stadt- und Kreisbibliothek
ASh Aschaffenburg, Schloss Johannisburg, Hofbibliothek
ASsb ——, Schloss Johannisburg, Stiftsbibliothek
Ba Berlin, Amerika-Gedenkbibliothek, Musikabteilung [in Bz]
Bda ——, Akademie der Künste, Stiftung Archiv
Bdhm ——, Hochschule für Musik Hanns Eisler
Bga ——, Geheimes Staatsarchiv, Stiftung Preussischer Kulturbesitz
Bgk ——, Bibliothek zum Grauen Kloster [in Bs]
Bhbk ——, Staatliche Hochschule für Bildende Kunst, Bibliothek
Bhm ——, Hochschule der Künste, Hochschulbibliothek, Abteilung Musik und Darstellende Kunst
Bim ——, Staatliches Institut für Musikforschung, Bibliothek
Bk ——, Staatliche Museen Preussischer Kulturbesitz, Kunstbibliothek
Bkk ——, Staatliche Museen Preussischer Kulturbesitz, Kupferstichkabinett
Br ——, Deutsches, Rundfunkarchiv Frankfurt am Main – Berlin, Historische Archive, Bibliothek
Bs ——, Stadtbibliothek, Musikbibliothek [in Bz]
Bsb ——, Staatsbibliothek zu Berlin Preussischer Kulturbesitz
Bsommer ——, Sommer private collection
Bsp ——, Evangelische Kirche Berlin-Brandenburg, Sprachenkonvikt, Bibliothek
Bst ——, Stadtbücherei Wilmersdorf, Hauptstelle
BAa Bamberg, Staatsarchiv BAs ——, Staatsbibliothek
BAL Ballenstedt, Stadtbibliothek
BAR Bartenstein, Fürst zu Hohenlohe-Bartensteinsches Archiv [on loan to NEhz]
BAUd Bautzen, Domstift und Bischöfliches Ordinariat, Bibliothek und Archiv
BAUk Bautzen, Stadtbibliothek
BAUm ——, Stadtmuseum
BB Benediktbeuern, Pfarrkirche, Bibliothek
BDk Brandenburg, Dom St Peter und Paul, Domstiftsarchiv und -bibliothek
BDH Bad Homburg vor der Höhe, Stadtbibliothek
BDS Bad Schwalbach, Evangelisches Pfarrarchiv
BE Bad Berleburg, Fürstlich Sayn-Wittgenstein-Berleburgsche Bibliothek

BEU Beuron, Bibliothek der Benediktiner-Erzabtei
BFb Burgsteinfurt, Fürst zu Bentheimsche Musikaliensammlung [on loan to MÜu]
BG Beuerberg, Stiftskirche
BGD Berchtesgaden, Stiftkirche, Bibliothek [on loan to FS]
BH Bayreuth, Stadtbücherei
BIB Bibra, Pfarrarchiv
BIT Bitterfeld, Kreis-Museum
BKÖs Bad Köstritz, Forschungs- und Gedenkstätte Heinrich-Schütz-Haus
BMs Bremen, Staats- und Universitätsbibliothek
BNba Bonn, Beethoven-Haus, Beethoven-Archiv
BNms ——, Musikwissenschaftliches Seminar der Rheinischen Friedrich-Wilhelm-Universität BNsa ——, Stadtarchiv und Wissenschaftliche Stadtbibliothek
BNu ——, Universitäts- und Landesbibliothek
BO Bollstedt, Evangelische Kirchengemeinde, Pfarrarchiv
BOCHmi Bochum, Ruhr-Universität, Fakultät für Geschichtswissenschaft, Musikwissenschaftliches Institut
BS Brunswick, Stadtarchiv und Stadtbibliothek
BUCH Buchen (Odenwald), Bezirksmuseum, Kraus-Sammlung
Cl Coburg, Landesbibliothek, Musiksammlung
Cs ——, Staatsarchiv
Cv ——, Kunstsammlung der Veste Coburg, Bibliothek
CEbm Celle, Bomann-Museum, Museum für Volkskunde Landes- und Stadtgeschichte
CR Crimmitschau, Stadtkirche St Laurentius, Notenarchiv
CZ Clausthal-Zellerfeld, Kirchenbibliothek [in CZu]
CZu ——, Technische Universität, Universitätsbibliothek
Dhm Dresden, Hochschule für Musik Carl Maria von Weber, Bibliothek [in Dl]
Dl ——, Sächsische Landesbibliothek – Staats- und Universitäts-Bibliothek, Musikabteilung
Dla ——, Sächsisches Hauptstaatsarchiv
Dmb ——, Städtische Bibliotheken, Haupt- und Musikbibliothek [in Dl]
Ds ——, Sächsische Staatsoper, Notenbibliothek [in Dl]
DB Dettelbach, Franziskanerkloster, Bibliothek
DEl Dessau, Anhaltische Landesbücherei
DEsa ——, Stadtarchiv
DGs Duisburg, Stadtbibliothek, Musikbibliothek
DI Dillingen an der Donau, Kreis- und Studienbibliothek
DL Delitzsch, Museum, Bibliothek
DM Dortmund, Stadt- und Landesbibliothek, Musikabteilung
DO Donaueschingen, Fürstlich Fürstenbergische Hofbibliothek
DS Darmstadt, Hessische Landes- und Hochschulbibliothek, Musikabteilung
DSim ——, Internationales Musikinstitut, Informationszentrum für Zeitgenössische Musik, Bibliothek
DSsa Darmstadt, Hessisches Staatsarchiv
DT Detmold, Lippische Landesbibliothek, Musikabteilung
DTF Dietfurt, Franziskanerkloster [in Ma]
DÜha ——, Nordrhein-Westfälisches Hauptstaatsarchiv
DÜk Düsseldorf, Goethe-Museum, Bibliothek
DÜl ——, Universitätss- und Landesbibliothek, Heinrich Heine Universität
DWc Donauwörth, Cassianeum
Ed Eichstätt, Dom [in Eu]
Es ——, Staats- und Seminarbibliothek [in Eu]
Eu ——, Katholische Universität, Universitätsbibliothek
Ew ——, Benediktinerinnen-Abtei St Walburg, Bibliothek
EB Ebrach, Katholisches Pfarramt, Bibliothek
EC Eckartsberga, Pfarrarchiv
EF Erfurt, Statd- und Regionalbibliothek, Abteilung Wissenschaftliche Sondersammlungen EIa Eisenach, Stadtarchiv, Bibliothek
EIb ——, Bachmuseum
EN Engelberg, Franziskanerkloster, Bibliothek
ERu Erlangen, Universitätsbibliothek
ERP Landesberg am Lech-Erpfting, Katholische Pfarrkirche [on loan to Aab]
EW Ellwangen (Jagst), Stiftskirche
F Frankfurt, Stadt- und Universitätsbibliothek
Ff ——, Freies Deutsches Hochstift, Frankfurter Goethe-Museum, Bibliothek
Frl ——, Musikverlag Robert Lienau
Fsa ——, Stadtarchiv
FBa Freiberg (Lower Saxony), Stadtarchiv
FBo ——, Geschwister-Scholl-Gymnasium, Andreas-Möller-Bibliothek
FLa Flensburg, Stadtarchiv
FLs Flensburg, Landeszentralbibliothek Schleswig-Holstein
FRu Freiburg, Albert-Ludwigs-Universität, Universitätsbibliothek, Abteilung Handschriften, Alte Drucke und Rara
FRva ——, Deutsches Volksliedarchiv
FRIts Friedberg, Bibliothek des Theologischen Seminars der Evangelischen Kirche in Hessen und Nassau
FS Freising, Erzbistum München und Freising, Dombibliothek
FUl Fulda, Hessische Landesbibliothek
FÜS Füssen, Katholisches Stadtpfarramt St Mang
FW Frauenchiemsee, Benediktinerinnenabtei Frauenwörth, Archiv
Ga Göttingen, Staatliches Archivlager
Gb ——, Johann-Sebastian-Bach-Institut
Gms ——, Musikwissenschaftliches Seminar der Georg-August-Universität
Gs ——, Niedersächsische Staats- und Universitätsbibliothek
GBR Grossbreitenbach (nr Arnstadt), Pfarramt, Archiv
GD Goch-Gaesdonck, Collegium Augustinianum
GI Giessen, Justus-Liebig-Universität, Bibliothek
GLAU Glauchau, St Georgen, Musikarchiv
GM Grimma, Göschenhaus-Seume-Gedenkstätte
GMl ——, Landesschule [in Dl]
GOa Gotha, Augustinerkirche, Notenbibliothek
GOl ——, Forschungs- und Landesbibliothek, Musiksammlung
GÖs Görlitz, Oberlausitzische Bibliothek der Wissenschaften bei den Städtischen Sammlungen
GOL Goldbach (nr Gotha), Pfarrbibliothek
GRu Greifswald, Universitätsbibliothek
GRH Gerolzhofen, Katholische Pfarrei [on loan to WÜd]
GÜ Güstrow, Museum der Stadt
GZsa Greiz, Thüringisches Staatsarchiv Rudolstadt, Aussenstelle Greiz
Ha Hamburg, Staatsarchiv
Hkm ——, Kunstgewerbemuseum, Bibliothek
Hmb ——, Öffentlichen Bücherhallen, Musikbücherei
Hs ——, Staats- und Universitätsbibliothek Carl von Ossietzky, Musiksammlung
HAf Halle, Hauptbibliothek und Archiv der Franckeschen Stiftungen
HAh ——, Händel-Haus
HAmi ——, Martin-Luther-Universität, Universitäts- und Landesbibliothek Sachsen-Anhalt, Institut für Musikwissenschaft, Bibliothek
HAmk ——, Marktkirche Unser Lieben Frauen, Marienbibliothek
HAu ——, Martin-Luther-Universität, Universitäts- und Landesbibliothek Sachsen-Anhalt
HAR Hartha (Kurort), Kantoreiarchiv
HB Heilbronn, Stadtarchiv
HEms Heidelberg, Musikwissenschaftliches Seminar der Rupert-Karls-Universität
HEu ——, Ruprecht-Karls-Universität, Universitätsbibliothek, Abteilung Handschriften und Alte Drucke
HER Herrnhut, Evangelische Brüder-Unität, Archiv
HGm Havelberg, Prignitz-Museum, Bibliothek
HL Haltenbergstetten, Schloss (über Niederstetten, Baden-Württemberg), Fürst zu Hohenlohe-Jagstberg'sche Bibliothek [in Mbs]

HOE Hohenstein-Ernstthal, Kantoreiarchiv der Christophorikirche
HR Harburg (nr Donauwörth), Fürstlich Oettingen-Wallerstein'sche Bibliothek Schloss Harburg [in Au]
HRD Arnsberg-Herdringen, Schlossbibliothek (Bibliotheca Fürstenbergiana) [in Au]
HSj Helmstedt, Ehemalige Universitätsbibliothek
HSk ——, Kantorat St Stephani [in W]
HVkm Hanover, Bibliothek des Kestner-Museums
HVl ——, Niedersächsische Landesbibliothek
HVs ——, Stadtbibliothek, Musikbibliothek
HVsa ——, Staatsarchiv
IN Markt Indersdorf, Katholisches Pfarramt, Bibliothek [on loan to FS]
ISL Iserlohn, Evangelische Kirchengemeinde, Varnhagen-Bibliothek
Jmb Jena, Ernst-Abbe-Bücherei und Lesehalle der Carl-Zeiss-Stiftung, Musikbibliothek
Jmi Jena, Friedrich-Schiller-Universität, Sektion Literatur- und Kunstwissenschaften, Bibliothek des ehem. Musikwissenschaftlichen Instituts [in Ju]
Ju ——, Friedrich-Schiller-Universität, Thüringer Universitäts- und Landesbibliothek
JE Jever, Marien-Gymnasium, Bibliothek
Kdma Kassel, Deutsches Musikgeschichtliches Archiv
Kl ——, Gesamthochschul-Bibliothek, Landesbibliothek und Murhardsche Bibliothek, Musiksammlung
Km ——, Musikakademie, Bibliothek
Ksp ——, Louis Spohr-Gedenk- und Forschungsstätte, Archiv
KA Karlsruhe, Badische Landesbibliothek
KAsp ——, Pfarramt St Peter
KAu ——, Universitätsbibliothek
KBs Koblenz, Stadtbibliothek
KFp Kaufbeuren, Protestantisches Kirchenarchiv
KIl Kiel, Schleswig-Holsteinische Landesbibliothek
KIu ——, Universitätsbibliothek
KMs Kamenz, Stadtarchiv
KNa Cologne, Historisches Archiv der Stadt
KNd ——, Kölner Dom, Erzbischöfliche Diözesan- und Dombibliothek
KNh ——, Staatliche Hochschule für Musik, Bibliothek
KNmi ——, Musikwissenschaftliches Institut der Universität
KNu ——, Universitäts- und Stadtbibliothek
KPs Kempten, Stadtbücherei
KPsl ——, Stadtpfarrkirche St Lorenz, Musikarchiv
KR Kleinröhrsdorf (nr Bischofswerda), Pfarrkirchenbibliothek
KZa Konstanz, Stadtarchiv
Lm Lüneburg, Michaelisschule
Lr ——, Ratsbücherei, Musikabteilung
LA Landshut, Historischer Verein für Niederbayern, Bibliothek
LB Langenburg, Fürstlich Hohenlohe-Langenburg'sche Schlossbibliothek [on loan to NEhz]
LEb Leipzig, Bach-Archiv
LEbh ——, Breitkopf & Härtel, Verlagsarchiv
LEdb ——, Deutsche Bücherei, Musikaliensammlung
LEm ——, Leipziger Städtische Bibliotheken, Musikbibliothek
LEmi ——, Universität, Zweigbibliothek Musikwissenschaft und Musikpädagogik [in LEu]
LEsm ——, Stadtgeschichtliches Museum, Bibliothek, Musik- und Theatergeschichtliche Sammlungen
LEst ——, Stadtbibliothek [in LEu and LEm]
LEt ——, Thomanerchor, Bibliothek [in LEb]
LEu ——, Karl-Marx-Universität, Universitätsbibliothek, Bibliotheca Albertina
LFN Laufen, Stiftsarchiv
LI Lindau, Stadtbibliothek
LIM Limbach am Main, Pfarrkirche Maria Limbach
LST Lichtenstein, Stadtkirche St Laurentius, Kantoreiarchiv
LÜh Lübeck, Bibliothek der Hansestadt, Musikabteilung
LUC Luckau, Stadtkirche St Nikolai, Kantoreiarchiv
Ma Munich, Franziskanerkloster St Anna, Bibliothek
Mb ——, Benediktinerabtei St Bonifaz, Bibliothek
Mbm ——, Bibliothek des Metropolitankapitels
Mbn ——, Bayerisches Nationalmuseum, Bibliothek
Mbs ——, Bayerische Staatsbibliothek
Mf ——, Frauenkirche [on loan to FS]
Mh ——, Staatliche Hochschule für Musik, Bibliothek
Mhsa ——, Bayerisches Hauptstaatsarchiv
Mk ——, Theatinerkirche St Kajetan Mm ——, Bibliothek St Michael Mo ——, Opernarchiv
Msa ——, Staatsarchiv
Mth ——, Theatermuseum der Clara-Ziegler-Stiftung
Mu ——, Ludwig-Maximilians-Universität, Universitätsbibliothek, Abteilung Handschriften, Nachlässe, Alte Drucke
MAl Magdeburg, Landeshauptarchiv Sachsen-Anhalt [in WERa]
MAs ——, Stadtbibliothek Wilhelm Weitling, Musikabteilung
ME Meissen, Stadt- und Kreisbibliothek
MEIk Meiningen, Bibliothek der Evangelisch-Lutherischen Kirchengemeinde
MEIl ——, Thüringisches Staatsarchiv
MEIr ——, Meininger Museen, Abteilung Musikgeschichte/Max-Reger-Archiv
MERa Merseburg, Domstift, Stiftsarchiv
MG Marburg, Westdeutsche Bibliothek [in Bsb]
MGmi ——, Musikwissenschaftliches Institut der Philipps-Universität, Abteilung Hessisches Musikarchiv
MGs ——, Staatsarchiv und Archivschule
MGu ——, Philipps-Universität, Universitätsbibliothek
MGB Mönchen-Gladbach, Bibliothek Wissenschaft und Weisheit, Johannes-Duns-Skotus-Akademie der Kölnischen Ordens-Provinz der Franziskaner
MH Mannheim, Wissenschaftliche Stadtbibliothek
MHrm ——, Städtisches Reiss-Museum
MHst ——, Stadtbücherei, Musikbücherei
MLHb Mühlhausen, Blasiuskirche, Pfarrarchiv Divi Blasii [on loan to MLHm]
MLHm ——, Marienkirche
MLHr ——, Stadtarchiv
MMm Memmingen, Evangelisch-Lutherisches Pfarramt St Martin, Bibliothek
MR Marienberg, Kirchenbibliothek
MT Metten, Abtei, Bibliothek
MÜd Münster, Bischöfliches Diözesanarchiv
MÜp ——, Bischöflishes Priesterseminar, Bibliothek
MÜs ——, Santini-Bibliothek [in MÜp]
MÜu ——, Westfälische Wilhelms-Universität, Universitäts- und Landesbibliothek, Musiksammlung
MÜG Mügeln, Evangelisch-Lutherisches Pfarramt St Johannis, Musikarchiv
MY Mylau, Kirchenbibliothek
MZmi Mainz, Musikwissenschaftliches Institut der Johannes-Gutenberg-Universität MZp ——, Bischöfliches Priesterseminar, Bibliothek
MZs ——, Stadtbibliothek
MZsch ——, Musikverlag B. Schott's Söhne, Verlagsarchiv
MZu ——, Johannes-Gutenberg-Universität, Universitätsbibliothek, Musikabteilung
Ngm Nuremberg, Germanisches National-Museum, Bibliothek
Nla ——, Bibliothek beim Landeskirchlichen Archiv
Nst ——, Bibliothek Egidienplatz
NA Neustadt an der Orla, Evangelisch-Lutherische Kirchgemeinde, Pfarrarchiv
NAUs Naumburg, Stadtarchiv
NAUw ——, St Wenzel, Bibliothek
NEhz Neuenstein, Hohenlohe-Zentralarchiv
NH Neresheim, Bibliothek der Benediktinerabtei
NL Nördlingen, Stadtarchiv, Stadtbibliothek und Volksbücherei
NLk ——, Evangelisch-Lutherisches Pfarramt St Georg, Musikarchiv
NM Neumünster, Schleswig-Holsteinische Musiksammlung der Stadt Neumünster [in KIl]

NNFw Neunhof (nr Nürnberg), Freiherrliche Welser'sche Familienstiftung
NO Nordhausen, Wilhelm-von-Humboldt-Gymnasium, Bibliothek
NS Neustadt an der Aisch, Evangelische Kirchenbibliothek
NT Neumarkt-St Veit, Pfarrkirche
NTRE Niedertrebra, Evangelisch-Lutherische Kirchgemeinde, Pfarrarchiv
OB Ottobeuren, Benediktinerabtei
OBS Gessertshausen-Oberschönenfeld, Abtei
OF Offenbach am Main, Verlagsarchiv André
OLH Olbernhau, Evangelisch-Lutherisches Pfarramt, Pfarrarchiv
ORB Oranienbaum, Landesarchiv
Pg Passau, Gymnasialbibliothek
Po ——, Bistum, Archiv
PA Paderborn, Erzbischöfliche Akademische Bibliothek [in HRD]
PE Perleberg, Pfarrbibliothek
PI Pirna, Stadtarchiv
PL Plauen, Stadtkirche St Johannis, Pfarrarchiv
PO Pommersfelden, Graf von Schönbornsche Schlossbibliothek
POL Polling, Katholisches Pfarramt
POTh Potsdam, Fachhochschule Potsdam, Hochschulbibliothek
Rp Regensburg, Bischöfliche Zentralbibliothek, Proske-Musikbibliothek
Rs ——, Staatliche Bibliothek
Rtt ——, Fürst Thurn und Taxis Hofbibliothek
Ru ——, Universität Regensburg, Universitätsbibliothek
RAd Ratzeburg, Domarchiv
RB Rothenburg ob der Tauber, Stadtarchiv und Rats- und Konsistorialbibliothek
RH Rheda, Fürst zu Bentheim-Tecklenburgische Musikbibliothek [on loan to MÜu]
ROmi Rostock, Universitätsbibliothek, Fachbibliothek Musikwissenschaften
ROs ——, Stadtbibliothek, Musikabteilung
ROu ——, Universität, Universitätsbibliothek
RT Rastatt, Bibliothek des Friedrich-Wilhelm-Gymnasiums
RUh Rudolstadt, Hofkapellarchiv [in RUl]
RUl ——, Thüringisches Staatsarchiv
Sl Stuttgart, Württembergische Landesbibliothek
SBj Straubing, Kirchenbibliothek St Jakob [in Rp]
SCHOT Schotten, Liebfrauenkirche
SHk Sondershausen, Stadtkirche/Superintendentur, Bibliothek
SHm ——, Schlossmuseum
SHs ——, Schlossmuseum, Bibliothek [in SHm]
SI Sigmaringen, Fürstlich Hohenzollernsche Hofbibliothek
SNed Schmalkalden, Evangelisches Dekanat, Bibliothek
SPlb Speyer, Pfälzische Landesbibliothek, Musikabteilung
STBp Steinbach (nr Bad Salzungen), Evangelische-Lutherisches Pfarramt, Pfarrarchiv
STOm Stolberg (Harz), Pfarramt St Martini, Pfarrarchiv
SUH Suhl, Wissenschaftliche Allgemeinbibliothek, Musikabteilung
SÜN Sünching, Schloss
SWl Schwerin, Landesbibliothek Mecklenburg-Vorpommern, Musiksammlung
SWs ——, Stadtbibliothek, Musikabteilung [in SWl]
SWth ——, Mecklenburgisches Staatstheater, Bibliothek
Tl Tübingen, Schwäbisches Landesmusikarchiv [in Tmi]
Tmi ——, Bibliothek des Musikwissenschaftlichen Institut
Tu ——, Eberhard-Karls-Universität, Universitätsbibliothek
TEG Tegernsee, Pfarrkirche
TEGha ——, Herzogliches Archiv
TEI Teisendorf, Katholisches Pfarramt, Pfarrbibliothek
TIT Tittmoning, Pfarrkirche [in Fs]
TO Torgau, Evangelische Kirchengemeinde, Johann-Walter-Kantorei
TRb Trier, Bistumarchiv
TRs ——, Stadtbibliothek
TZ Bad Tölz, Katholisches Pfarramt Maria Himmelfahrt [in FS]
Us Ulm, Stadtbibliothek
Usch ——, Von Schermar'sche Familienstiftung, Bibliothek
UDa Udestedt, Evangelisch-Lutherisches Pfarramt [in Dl]
URS Ursberg, St Josef-Kongregation, Orden der Franziskanerinnen
W Wolfenbüttel, Herzog August Bibliothek, Handschriftensammlung
Wa ——, Niedersächsisches Staatsarchiv
WA Waldheim, Stadtkirche St Nikolai, Bibliothek
WAB Waldenburg, St Bartholomäus, Kantoreiarchiv
WD Wiesentheid, Musiksammlung des Grafen von Schönborn-Wiesentheid
WERhb Wernigerode, Harzmuseum, Harzbücherei
WEY Weyarn, Pfarrkirche, Bibliothek [on loan to FS]
WF Weissenfels, Schuh- und Stadtmuseum Weissenfels (mit Heinrich-Schütz-Gedenkstätte) [on loan to BKÖs]
WFe ——, Ephoralbibliothek
WFmk ——, Marienkirche, Pfarrarchiv [in HAmk]
WGl Wittenberg, Lutherhalle, Reformationsgeschichtliches Museum
WGH Waigolshausen, Katholische Pfarrei [on loan to WÜd]
WH Bad Windsheim, Stadtbibliothek
WIl Wiesbaden, Hessische Landesbibliothek
WINtj Winhöring, Gräflich Toerring-Jettenbachsche Bibliothek [on loan to Mbs]
WO Worms, Stadtbibliothek und Öffentliche Büchereien
WRdn Weimar, Deutsches Nationaltheater und Staatskappelle, Archiv
WRgm ——, Goethe-National-Museum (Goethes Wohnhaus)
WRgs ——, Stiftung Weimarer Klassik, Goethe–Schiller-Archiv
WRh ——, Hochschule für Musik Franz Liszt
WRiv ——, Hochschule für Musik Franz Liszt, Institut für Volksmusikforschung
WRl ——, Thüringisches Hauptstaatsarchiv Weimar
WRtl ——, Thüringische Landesbibliothek, Musiksammlung [in WRz]
WRz ——, Stiftung Weimarer Klassik, Herzogin Anna Amalia Bibliothek
WS Wasserburg am Inn, Chorarchiv St Jakob, Pfarramt [on loan to FS]
WÜd Würzburg, Diözesanarchiv
WÜst ——, Staatsarchiv
WÜu ——, Bayerische Julius-Maximilians-Universität, Universitätsbibliothek
Z Zwickau, Ratsschulbibliothek, Wissenschaftliche Bibliothek
Zsa ——, Stadtarchiv
Zsch ——, Robert-Schumann-Haus
ZE Zerbst, Stadtarchiv
ZEo ——, Gymnasium Francisceum, Bibliothek
ZGh Zörbig, Heimatmuseum
ZI Zittau, Christian-Weise-Bibliothek, Altbestand [in Dl]
ZL Zeil, Fürstlich Waldburg-Zeil'sches Archiv
ZZs Zeitz, Stiftsbibliothek

DK: DENMARK

A Århus, Statsbiblioteket
Ch Christiansfeld, Brødremenigheden (Herrnhutgemeinde)
Kar Copenhagen, Det Arnamagnaeanske Institut
Kc ——, Carl Claudius Musikhistoriske Samling [in Km]
Kk ——, Kongelige Bibliotek
Kmk ——, Kongelige Danske Musikkonservatorium
Ku ——, Det Kongelige Bibliotek Fiolstraede
Kv ——, Københavns Universitét, Musikvidenskabeligt Institut, Bibliotek
Ol Odense, Landsarkivet for Fyen

Ou ——, Universitetsbibliotek, Musikafdelingen
Sa Sorø, Sorø Akademi, Biblioteket
Tv Tåsinge, Valdemars Slot

E: SPAIN

Ac Avila, S Apostólica Iglesia Catedral de el Salvador, Archivo Catedralicio
Asa ——, Monasterio de S Ana
AL Alquézar, Colegiata
ALB Albarracín, Catedral, Archivo
AR Aránzazu, Archivo Musical del Monasterio de Aránzazu
AS Astorga, Catedral
Bac Barcelona, Archivo de la Corona de Aragón/Arixiu de la Corona d'Aragó
Bbc ——, Biblioteca de Catalunya, Seccíon de Música
Bc ——, S.E. Catedra Basiclica, Arixiu
Bcd ——, Centro de Documentació Musical de la Generalitat de Catalunya 'El Jardi Dels Tarongers'
Bih ——, Arixiu Históric de la Ciutat
Bim ——, Consejo Superior de Investigaciones Científicas, Departamento de Musicología, Biblioteca
Bit ——, Institut del Teatre, Centre d'Investigació, Documentació i Difusió Boc ——, Orfeó Catalá, Biblioteca
Bu ——, Universitat Autónoma
BA Badajoz, Catedral, Archivo Capitular
BUa Burgos, Catedral, Archivo
BUlh ——, Cistercian Monasterio de Las Huelgas
C Córdoba, S Iglesia Catedral, Archivo de Música
CA Calahorra, Catedral
CAL Calatayud, Colegiata de S María
CU Cuenca, Catedral, Archivo Capitular
CUi ——, Instituto de Música Religiosa
CZ Cádiz, Archivo Capitular
E San Lorenzo de El Escorial, Monasterio, Real Biblioteca
G Gerona, Catedral, Archivo/Arxiu Capitular
Gp ——, Biblioteca Pública
GRc Granada, Catedral Metropolitana, Archivo Capitular [in GRcr]
GRcr ——, Capilla Real, Archivo de Música
GRmf ——, Archivo Manuel de Falla
GU Guadalupe, Real Monasterio de S María, Archivo de Música
H Huesca, Catedral
J Jaca, Catedral, Archivo Musical
JA Jaén, Catedral, Archivo Capitular
JEc Jerez de la Frontera, Colegiata
L León, Catedral, Archivo Histórico
Lc ——, Real Basilica de S Isidoro
LEc Lérida, Catedral
LPA Las Palmas de Gran Canaria, Catedral de Canarias
Mah Madrid, Archivo Histórico Nacional
Mba ——, Archivo de Música, Real Academia de Bellas Artes de S Fernando Mc ——, Real Conservatorio Superior de Música, Biblioteca
Mca ——, Casa de Alba
Mcns ——, Congregación de Nuestra Señora
Md ——, Centro de Documentación Musical del Ministerio de Cultura
Mdr ——, Convento de las Descalzas Reales Mm ——, Biblioteca Histórica Municipal Mmc ——, Casa Ducal de Medinaceli, Biblioteca
Mn ——, Biblioteca Nacional
Mp ——, Patrimonio Nacional
Msa ——, Sociedad General de Autores y Editores
MA Málaga, Catedral, Archivo Capitular
MO Montserrat, Abadía
MON Mondoñedo, Catedral, Archivo
OL Olot, Biblioteca Popular
ORI Orihuela, Catedral, Archivo
OV Oviedo, Catedral Metropolitana, Archivo
P Plasencia, Catedral, Archivo de Música
PAc Palma de Mallorca, Catedral, Archivo
PAp ——, Biblioteca Provincial
PAL Palencia, Catedral de S Antolín, Archivo de Música
PAMc Pamplona, Catedral, Archivo
PAS Pastrana, Museo Parroquial
RO Roncesvalles, Monasterio S María, Biblioteca
Sc Seville, Institución Colombina
SA Salamanca, Catedral, Archivo Catedralicio
SAc ——, Conservatorio Superior de Música de Salamanca, Biblioteca
SAu ——, Biblioteca Universitaria
SAN Santander, Biblioteca de la Universidad Menéndez, Sección de Música
SC Santiago de Compostela, Catedral Metropolitana
SCu ——, Biblioteca de la Universidad
SD Santo Domingo de la Calzada, Catedral Archivo
SE Segovia, Catedral, Archivo Capitular
SEG Segorbe, Archivo de la Catedral
SI Silos, Abadía de S Domingo, Archivo
SU Seo de Urgel, Catedral
Tc Toledo, Catedral, Archivo y Biblioteca Capítulares
Tp ——, Biblioteca Pública Provincial y Museo de la S Cruz
TAc Tarragona, Catedral
TE Teruel, Catedral, Archivo Capitular
TO Tortosa, Catedral
TUY Tuy, Catedral
TZ Tarazona, Catedral, Archivo Capitular
V Valladolid, Catedral Metropolitana, Archivo de Música
Vp ——, Parroquia de Santiago
VAa Valencia, Archivo Municipal
VAc ——, Catedral Metropolitana, Archivo y Biblioteca, Archivo de Música
VAcp ——, Real Colegio: Seminario de Corpus Christi, Archivo Musical del Patriarca VAu ——, Biblioteca Universitaria
VI Vich, Museu Episcopal
Zac Zaragoza, Catedrale de La Seo y Basílica del Pilar, Archivo de Música de las Catedrales
Zcc ——, Colegio de las Escuelas Pías de S José de Calasanz, Biblioteca
Zs ——, La Seo, Biblioteca Capitular [in Zac]
Zvp ——, Iglesia Metropolitana [in Zac]
ZAc Zamora, Catedral

ET: EGYPT

Cn Cairo, National Library (Dar al-Kutub)
MSsc Mount Sinai, St Catherine's Monastery

EV: ESTONIA

TALg Tallinn, National Library of Estonia

F: FRANCE

A Avignon, Médiathèque Ceccano
Ac ——, Bibliothèque du Conservatoire
AB Abbeville, Bibliothèque Nationale
AG Agen, Archives Départementales de Lot-et-Garonne
AI Albi, Bibliothèque Municipale
AIXc Aix-en-Provence, Bibliothèque du Conservatoire
AIXm ——, Bibliothèque Méjanes
AIXmc ——, Bibliothèque de la Maîtrise de la Cathédrale
AL Alençon, Bibliothèque Municipale
AM Amiens, Bibliothèque Municipale
AN Angers, Bibliothèque Municipale
APT Apt, Basilique Ste Anne
AS Arras, Médiathèque Municipale
ASOlang Asnières-sur-Oise, Collection François Lang
AUT Autun, Bibliothèque Municipale
AVR Avranches, Bibliothèque Nationale
B Besançon, Bibliothèque Municipale
Ba ——, Bibliothèque de l'Archevêché
BE Beauvais, Bibliothèque Municipale
BG Bourg-en-Bresse, Bibliothèque Municipale
BO Bordeaux, Bibliothèque Municipale
BS Bourges, Bibliothèque Municipale
C Carpentras, Bibliothèque Municipale (Inguimbertine)

CA Cambrai, Médiathèque Municipale
CAc ——, Cathédrale
CC Carcassonne, Bibliothèque Municipale
CF Clermont-Ferrand, Bibliothèque Municipale et Interuniversitaire, Département Patrimoine CH Chantilly, Musée Condé
CHd ——, Musée Dobrie
CHRm Chartres, Bibliothèque Municipale
CLO Clermont-de-l'Oise, Bibliothèque
CO Colmar, Bibliothèque de la Ville
COM Compiègne, Bibliothèque Municipale
CSM Châlons-en-Champagne, Bibliothèque Municipale
Dc Dijon, Conservatoire Jean-Philippe Rameau, Bibliothèque
Dm ——, Bibliothèque Municipale
DI Dieppe, Fonds Anciens et Local, Médiathèque Jean Renoir
DO Dôle, Bibliothèque Municipale
DOU Douai, Bibliothèque Nationale
E Epinal, Bibliothèque Nationale
EMc Embrun, Trésor de la Cathédrale
EV Evreux, Bibliothèque Municipale
F Foix, Bibliothèque Municipale
G Grenoble, Bibliothèque Municipale
Lad Lille, Archives Départementales du Nord
Lc ——, Bibliothèque du Conservatoire
Lm ——, Bibliothèque Municipale Jean Levy
LA Laon, Bibliothèque Municipale
LG Limoges, Bibliothèque Francophone Municipale
LH Le Havre, Bibliothèque Municipale
LM Le Mans, Bibliothèque Municipale Classée, Médiathèque Louis Aragon
LYc Lyons, Conservatoire National de Musique
LYm ——, Bibliothèque Municipale
Mc Marseilles, Conservatoire de Musique et de Déclamation
MD Montbéliard, Bibliothèque Municipale
ME Metz, Médiathèque
MH Mulhouse, Bibliothèque Municipale
ML Moulins, Bibliothèque Municipale
MO Montpellier, Bibliothèque de l'Université
MOf ——, Bibliothèque Inter-Universitaire, Section Médecine
MON Montauban, Bibliothèque Municipale Antonin Perbosc
Nm Nantes, Bibliothèque Municipale, Médiathèque
NAc Nancy, Bibliothèque du Conservatoire
O Orléans, Médiathèque
Pa Paris, Bibliothèque de l'Arsenal
Pan ——, Archives Nationales
Pc ——, Conservatoire [in Pn]
Pcf ——, Bibliothèque de la Comédie Française
Pcnrs ——, Centre National de la Recherche Scientifique, Bibliothèque
Pd ——, Centre de Documentation de la Musique Contemporaire
Pe ——, Schola Cantorum
Peb ——, Ecole Normale Supérieure des Beaux-Arts, Bibliothèque
Pgm ——, Gustav Mahler, Bibliothèque Musicale
Phanson ——, Collection Hanson
Pi ——, Bibliothèque de l'Institut de France
Pim ——, Bibliothèque Pierre Aubry
Pm ——, Bibliothèque Mazarine
Pmeyer ——, André Meyer, private collection
Pn ——, Bibliothèque Nationale de France
Po ——, Bibliothèque-Musée de l'Opéra
Ppincherle ——, Marc Pincherle, private collection
Ppo ——, Bibliothèque Polonaise de Paris
Prothschild ——, Germaine, Baronne Edouard de Rothschild, private collection
Prt ——, Radio France, Documentation Musicale
Ps ——, Bibliothèque de la Sorbonne
Psal ——, Editions Salabert
Pse ——, Société des Auteurs, Compositeurs et Editeurs de Musique
Psg ——, Bibliothèque Ste-Geneviève
Pshp ——, Société d'Histoire du Protestantisme Français, Bibliothèque
Pthibault ——, Geneviève Thibault, private collection [in Pn]
R Rouen, Bibliothèque Municipale
Rc ——, Bibliothèque du Conservatoire
RS Reims, Bibliothèque Municipale
RSc ——, Maîtrise de la Cathédrale
Sc Strasbourg, Bibliothèque du Conservatoire
Sgs ——, Union Sainte Cécile, Bibliothéque Musicale du Grand Séminaire
Sim ——, Université des Sciences Humaines, Institut de Musicologie
Sm ——, Bibliothèque Municipale
Sn ——, Bibliothèque Nationale et Universitaire
Ssp ——, Bibliothèque du Séminaire Protestant
SDI St Dié, Bibliothèque Municipale
SEm Sens, Bibliothèque Municipale
SERc Serrant, Château
SO Solesmes, Abbaye de St-Pierre
SOM St Omer, Bibliothèque Municipale
SQ St Quentin, Bibliothèque Municipale
T Troyes, Bibliothèque Municipale
TLm Toulouse, Bibliothèque Municipale
TOm Tours, Bibliothèque Municipale
V Versailles, Bibliothèque
VA Vannes, Bibliothèque Municipale
VAL Valenciennes, Bibliothèque Municipale
VN Verdun, Bibliothèque Municipale

FIN: FINLAND

A Turku, Åbo Akademi, Sibelius Museum, Bibliotek ja Arkiv
Hy Helsinki, Helsingin Yliopiston Kirjasto/Helsinki University Library/Suomen Kansalliskikjasto
Hyf ——, Helsingin Yliopiston Kirjasto, Department of Finnish Music

GB: GREAT BRITAIN

A Aberdeen, University, Queen Mother Library
AB Aberystwyth, Llyfryell Genedlaethol Cymru/National Library of Wales
ABu ——, University College of Wales
ALb Aldeburgh, Britten-Pears Library
AM Ampleforth, Abbey and College Library, St Lawrence Abbey
AR Arundel Castle, Archive
Bp Birmingham, Public Libraries
Bu ——, Birmingham University
BA Bath, Municipal Library
BEcr Bedford, Bedfordshire County Record Office
BEL Belton (Lincs.), Belton House
BENcoke Bentley (Hants.), Gerald Coke, private collection
BEV Beverley, East Yorkshire County Record Office
BO Bournemouth, Central Library
BRp Bristol, Central Library
BRu ——, University of Bristol Library
Ccc Cambridge, Corpus Christi College, Parker Library
Ccl ——, Central Library
Cclc ——, Clare College Archives
Ce ——, Emmanuel College
Cfm ——, Fitzwilliam Museum, Dept of Manuscripts and Printed Books
Cgc ——, Gonville and Caius College
Cjc ——, St John's College
Ckc ——, King's College, Rowe Music Library
Cmc ——, Magdalene College, Pepys Library
Cp ——, Peterhouse College Library
Cpc ——, Pembroke College Library
Cpl ——, Pendlebury Library of Music
Cssc ——, Sidney Sussex College
Ctc ——, Trinity College, Library
Cu ——, University Library
CA Canterbury, Cathedral Library
CDp Cardiff, Public Libraries, Central Library
CDu ——, University of Wales/Prifysgol Cymru
CF Chelmsford, Essex County Record Office
CH Chichester, Diocesan Record Office
CHc ——, Cathedral
CL Carlisle, Cathedral Library
DRc Durham, Cathedral Church, Dean and Chapter Library

DRu	——, University Library
DU	Dundee, Central Library
En	Edinburgh, National Library of Scotland, Music Dept
Ep	——, City Libraries, Music Library
Er	——, Reid Music Library of the University of Edinburgh
Es	——, Signet Library
Eu	——, University Library, Main Library
EL	Ely, Cathedral Library [in Cu]
EXcl	Exeter, Cathedral Library
Ge	Glasgow, Euing Music Library
Gm	——, Mitchell Library, Arts Dept
Gsma	——, Scottish Music Archive
Gu	——, University Library
GL	Gloucester, Cathedral Library
GLr	——, Record Office
H	Hereford, Cathedral Library
HAdolmetsch	Haslemere, Carl Dolmetsch, private collection
HFr	Hertford, Hertfordshire Record Office
Ir	Ipswich, Suffolk Record Office
KNt	Knutsford, Tatton Park (National Trust)
Lam	London, Royal Academy of Music, Library
Lbbc	——, British Broadcasting Corporation, Music Library
Lbc	——, British Council Music Library
Lbl	——, British Library
Lcm	——, Royal College of Music, Library
Lcml	——, Central Music Library
Lco	——, Royal College of Organists
Lcs	——, English Folk Dance and Song Society, Vaughan Williams Memorial Library
Ldc	——, Dulwich College Library
Lfm	——, Faber Music
Lgc	——, Guildhall Library
Lk	——, King's Music Library [in Lbl]
Lkc	——, King's College Library
Llp	——, Lambeth Palace Library
Lmic	——, British Music Information Centre
Lmt	——, Minet Library
Lpro	——, Public Record Office
Lrcp	——, Royal College of Physicians
Lsp	——, St Paul's Cathedral Library
Lspencer	——, Woodford Green: Robert Spencer, private collection
Lst	——, Savoy Theatre Collection
Lu	——, University of London Library, Music Collection
Lue	——, Universal Edition
Lv	——, Victoria and Albert Museum, Theatre Museum
Lwa	——, Westminster Abbey Library
Lwcm	——, Westminster Central Music Library
LA	Lancaster, District Central Library
LEbc	Leeds, University of Leeds, Brotherton Library
LEc	——, Leeds Central Library, Music and Audio Dept
LF	Lichfield, Cathedral Library
LI	Lincoln, Cathedral Library
LVp	Liverpool, Libraries and Information Services, Humanities Reference Library
LVu	——, University, Music Department
Mch	Manchester, Chetham's Library
Mp	——, Central Library, Henry Watson Music Library
Mr	——, John Rylands Library, Deansgate
MA	Maidstone, Kent County Record Office
NH	Northampton, Record Office
NO	Nottingham, University of Nottingham, Department of Music
NTp	Newcastle upon Tyne, Public Libraries
NW	Norwich, Central Library
NWhamond	——, Anthony Hamond, private collection
NWr	——, Record Office
Oas	Oxford, All Souls College Library
Ob	——, Bodleian Library
Oc	——, Coke Collection
Occc	——, Corpus Christi College Library
Och	——, Christ Church Library
Ojc	——, St John's College Library
Olc	——, Lincoln College Library
Omc	——, Magdalen College Library
Onc	——, New College Library
Ouf	——, Faculty of Music Library
Owc	——, Worcester College
P	Perth, Sandeman Public Library
PB	Peterborough, Cathedral Library
PM	Parkminster, St Hugh's Charterhouse
R	Reading, University, Music Library
SA	St Andrews, University of St Andrews Library
SB	Salisbury, Cathedral Library
SC	Sutton Coldfield, Oscott College, Old Library
SH	Sherborne, Sherborne School Library
SHR	Shrewsbury, Salop Record Office
SHRs	——, Library of Shrewsbury School
SOp	Southampton, Public Library
SRfa	Studley Royal, Fountains Abbey [in LEc]
STb	Stratford-on-Avon, Shakespeare's Birthplace Trust Library
STm	——, Shakespeare Memorial Library
T	Tenbury Wells, St Michael's College Library [in Ob]
W	Wells, Cathedral Library
WA	Whalley, Stonyhurst College Library
WB	Wimborne, Minster Chain Library
WC	Winchester, Chapter Library
WCc	——, Winchester College, Warden and Fellows' Library
WCr	——, Hampshire Record Office
WMl	Warminster, Longleat House Old Library
WO	Worcester, Cathedral Library
WOr	——, Record Office
WRch	Windsor, St George's Chapel Library
WRec	——, Eton College, College Library
Y	York, Minster Library
Ybi	——, Borthwick Institute of Historical Research

GCA: GUATEMALA

Gc	Guatemala City, Cathedral, Archivo Capitular

GR: GREECE

Aels	Athens, Ethniki Lyriki Skini
Akounadis	——, Panayis Kounadis, private collection
Aleotsakos	——, George Leotsakos, private collection
Am	——, Mousseio ke Kendro Meletis Ellinikou Theatrou
An	——, Ethnikē Bibliotēkē tēs Hellados
AOd	Mt Athos, Mone Dionysiou
AOdo	——, Mone Dohiariou
AOh	——, Mone Hilandariou
AOi	——, Mone ton Iveron
AOk	——, Mone Koutloumousi
AOml	——, Mone Megistis Lávras
AOpk	——, Mone Pantokrátoros
AOva	——, Vatopedi Monastery
P	Patmos
THpi	Thessaloniki, Patriarhikó Idryma Paterikon Meleton, Vivliotheke

H: HUNGARY

Ba	Budapest, Magyar Tudományos Akadémia Könytára
Bami	——, Magyar Tudományos Akadémia Zenetudományi Intézet, Könyvtár
Bb	——, Bartók Béla Zeneművészeti Szakközépiskola, Könyvtár [in Bl]
Bl	——, Liszt Ferenc Zeneművészeti Főiskola, Könyvtár
Bn	——, Országos Széchényi Könyvtár
Bo	——, Állami Operaház
Br	——, Ráday Gyűjtemény
Bs	——, Központi Szemináriumi Könyvtár
Bu	——, Eötvös Loránd Tudományegyetem, Egyetemi Könyvtár
BA	Bártfá, St Aegidius [in Bn]
Efko	Esztergom, Főszékesegyházi Kottatár
Efkö	——, Főszékesegyházi Könyvtár
Gc	Győr, Püspöki Papnevelő Intézet Könyvtára
Gk	——, Káptalan Magánlevéltár Kottatára
GYm	Gyula, Múzeum

K Kalocsa, Érseki Könyvtár
KE Keszthely, Helikon Kastélymúzeum, Könyvtár
P Pécs, Székesegyházi Kottatár
PH Pannonhalma, Főapátság, Könyvtár
Se Sopron, Evangélikus Egyházközség Könyvtára
SFm Székesfehérvár, István Király Múzeum
VEs Veszprém, Székesegyházi Kottatár

HR: CROATIA

Dsmb Dubrovnik, Franjevački Samostan Male Braće, Knjižnica
KIf Kloštar Ivanić, Franjevački Samostan
OMf Omiš, Franjevački Samostan
R Rab, Župna Crkva
Sk Split, Glazbeni Arhiv Katedrale Sv. Dujma
SMm Samobor, Samoborski Muzej
Vu Varaždin, Uršulinski Samostan
Zaa Zagreb, Hrvatska Akademija Znanosti i Umjetnosti, Arhiv
Zh ——, Hrvatski Glazbeni Zavod, Knjižnica i Arhiv
Zha ——, Zbirka Don Nikole Udina-Algarotti [on loan to Zh]
Zhk ——, Arhiv Hrvatsko Pjevačko Društvo Kolo [in Zh]
Zs ——, Glazbeni Arhiv Nadbiskupskog Bogoslovnog Sjemeništa
Zu ——, Nacionalna i Sveučilišna Knjižnica, Zbirka Muzikalija i Audiomaterijala
ZAzk Zadar, Znanstvena Knjižnica

I: ITALY

Ac Assisi, Biblioteca Comunale [in Af]
Ad ——, Cattedrale S Rufino, Biblioteca dell'Archivio Capitolare
Af ——, Sacro Convento di S Francesco, Biblioteca-Centro di Documentazione Francescana
ALTsm Altamura, Associazione Amici della Musica Saverio Mercadante, Biblioteca
AN Ancona, Biblioteca Comunale Luciano Benincasa
AO Aosta, Seminario Maggiore
AOc ——, Cattedrale, Biblioteca Capitolare
AP Ascoli Piceno, Biblioteca Comunale Giulio Gabrielli
APa ——, Archivio di Stato
AT Atri, Basilica Cattedrale di S Maria Assunta, Biblioteca Capitolare e Museo
Baf Bologna, Accademia Filarmonica, Archivio
Bam ——, Collezioni d'Arte e di Storia della Casa di Risparmio (Biblioteca Ambrosini)
Bas ——, Archivio di Stato, Biblioteca
Bc ——, Civico Museo Bibliografico Musicale
Bca ——, Biblioteca Comunale dell'Archiginnasio
Bl ——, Conservatorio Statale di Musica G.B. Martini, Biblioteca
Bof ——, Congregazione dell'Oratorio (Padri Filippini), Biblioteca
Bpm ——, Università degli Studi, Facoltà di Magistero, Cattedra di Storia della Musica, Biblioteca
Bsf ——, Convento di S Francesco, Biblioteca
Bsm ——, Biblioteca del Convento di S Maria dei Servi e della Cappella Musicale Arcivescovile
Bsp ——, Basilica di S Petronio, Archivio Musicale
Bu ——, Biblioteca Universitaria, sezione Musicale
BAca Bari, Biblioteca Capitolare
BAcp ——, Conservatorio di Musica Niccolò Piccinni, Biblioteca
BAn ——, Biblioteca Nazionale Sagarriga Visconti-Volpi
BAR Barletta, Biblioteca Comunale Sabino Loffredo
BDG Bassano del Grappa, Biblioteca Archivio Museo (Biblioteca Civica)
BE Belluno, Biblioteche Lolliniana e Gregoriana
BGc Bergamo, Biblioteca Civica Angelo Mai
BGi ——, Civico Istituto Musicale Gaetano Donizetti, Biblioteca
BI Bitonto, Biblioteca Comunale E. Bogadeo (ex Vitale Giordano)
BRc Brescia, Conservatorio Statale di Musica A. Venturi, Biblioteca
BRd ——, Archivio e Biblioteca Capitolari
BRq ——, Biblioteca Civica Queriniana
BRs ——, Seminario Vescovile Diocasano, Archivio Musicale
BRsmg ——, Chiesa della Madonna delle Grazie (S Maria), Archivio
BV Benevento, Biblioteca Capitolare
BZa Bolzano, Archivio di Stato, Biblioteca
BZf ——, Convento dei Minori Francescani, Biblioteca
BZtoggenburg ——, Count Toggenburg, private collection
CAcon Cagliari, Conservatorio di Musica Giovanni Pierluigi da Palestrina, Biblioteca
CARc Castell'Arquato, Archivio Capitolare (Parrocchiale)
CARcc ——, Chiesa Collegiata dell'Assunta, Archivio Musicale
CAS Cascia, Monastero di S Rita, Archivio
CATa Catania, Archivio di Stato
CATc ——, Biblioteche Riunite Civica e Antonio Ursino Recupero
CATm ——, Museo Civico Belliniano, Biblioteca
CATus ——, Università degli Studi di Catania, Facoltà di Lettere e Filosofia, Dipartimento di Scienze Storiche, Storia della Musica, Biblioteca
CC Città di Castello, Duomo, Archivio Capitolare [in CCsg]
CCc ——, Biblioteca Comunale Giosuè Carducci
CCsg ——, Biblioteca Stori Guerri e Archivi Storico
CDO Codogno, Biblioteca Civica Luigi Ricca
CEc Cesena, Biblioteca Comunale Malatestiana
CF Cividale del Friuli, Duomo (Parrocchia di S Maria Assunta), Archivio Capitolare
CFm ——, Museo Archeologico Nazionale, Biblioteca
CFVd Castelfranco Veneto, Duomo, Archivio
CHc Chioggia, Biblioteca Comunale Cristoforo Sabbadino
CHf ——, Archivio dei Padri Filippini [in CHc]
CHTd Chieti, Biblioteca della Curia Arcivescovile e Archivio Capitolare
CMac Casale Monferrato, Duomo di Sant'Evasio, Archivio Capitolare
CMbc ——, Biblioteca Civica Giovanni Canna
CMs ——, Seminario Vescovile, Biblioteca
COc Como, Biblioteca Comunale
COd ——, Duomo, Archivio Musicale
CORc Correggio, Biblioteca Comunale
CRas Cremona, Archivio di Stato
CRd ——, Biblioteca Capitolare [in CRsd]
CRg ——, Biblioteca Statale
CRsd ——, Archivio Storico Diocesano
CRE Crema, Biblioteca Comunale
CT Cortona, Biblioteca Comunale e dell'Accademia Etrusca
DO Domodossola, Biblioteca e Archivio dei Rosminiani di Monte Calvario [in ST]
E Enna, Biblioteca e Discoteca Comunale
Fa Florence, Ss Annunziata, Archivio
Fas ——, Archivio di Stato, Biblioteca
Fbecherini ——, Becherini private collection
Fc ——, Conservatorio Statale di Musica Luigi Cherubini
Fd ——, Opera del Duomo (S Maria del Fiore), Biblioteca e Archivio
Ffabbri ——, Mario Fabbri, private collection
Fl ——, Biblioteca Medicea Laurenziana
Fm ——, Biblioteca Marucelliana
Fn ——, Biblioteca Nazionale Centrale, Dipartimento Musica
Folschki ——, Olschki private collection
Fr ——, Biblioteca Riccardiana
Fs ——, Seminario Arcivescovile Maggiore, Biblioteca
Fsa ——, Biblioteca Domenicana di S Maria Novella
Fsl ——, Parrocchia di S Lorenzo, Biblioteca
Fsm ——, Convento di S Marco, Biblioteca
FA Fabriano, Biblioteca Comunale
FAd ——, Duomo (S Venanzio), Biblioteca Capitolare
FAN Fano, Biblioteca Comunale Federiciana
FBR Fossombrone, Biblioteca Civica Passionei
FEc Ferrara, Biblioteca Comunale Ariostea
FEd ——, Duomo, Archivio Capitolare
FELc Feltre, Museo Civico, Biblioteca

FEM Finale Emilia, Biblioteca Comunale
FERaa Fermo, Archivio Storico Arcivescovile con Archivio della Pietà
FERas ——, Archivio di Stato di Ascoli Piceno, sezione di Fermo
FERc ——, Biblioteca Comunale
FERd ——, Metropolitana (Duomo), Archivio Capitolare [in FERaa]
FERvitali ——, Gualberto Vitali-Rosati, private collection
FOc Forlì, Biblioteca Comunale Aurelio Saffi
FOLc Foligno, Biblioteca Comunale
FOLd ——, Duomo, Archivio
FRa Fara in Sabina, Monumento Nazionale di Farfa, Biblioteca
FZac Faenza, Basilica Cattedrale, Archivio Capitolare
FZc ——, Biblioteca Comunale Manfrediana, Raccolte Musicali
Gc Genoa, Biblioteca Civica Berio
Gim ——, Civico Istituto Mazziniano, Biblioteca
Gl ——, Conservatorio di Musica Nicolò Paganini, Biblioteca
Gremondini ——, P.C. Remondini, private collection
Gsl ——, S Lorenzo (Duomo), Archivio Capitolare
Gu ——, Biblioteca Universitaria
GO Gorizia, Seminario Teologico Centrale, Biblioteca
GR Grottaferrata, Biblioteca del Monumento Nazionale
GUBd Gubbio, Biblioteca Vescovile Fonti e Archivio Diocesano (con Archivio del Capitolo della Cattedrale)
I Imola, Biblioteca Comunale
IBborromeo Isola Bella, Borromeo private collection
IE Iesi, Biblioteca Comunale
IV Ivrea, Cattedrale, Biblioteca Capitolare
La Lucca, Archivio di Stato
Las ——, Biblioteca-Archivio Storico Comunale
Lc ——, Biblioteca Capitolare Feliniana e Biblioteca Arcivescovile
Lg ——, Biblioteca Statale
Li ——, Istituto Musicale L. Boccherini, Biblioteca
Ls ——, Seminario Arcivescovile, Biblioteca
LA L'Aquila, Biblioteca Provinciale Salvatore Tommasi
LANc Lanciano, Biblioteca Diocesano (con Archivio della Cattedrale)
LT Loreto, Santuario della S Casa, Archivio Storico
LU Lugo, Biblioteca Comunale Fabrizio Trisi
LUi ——, Istituto Musicale Pareggiato G.L. Malerbi
Ma Milan, Biblioteca Ambrosiana
Malfieri ——, Familglia Trecani degli Alfieri, private collection
Mas ——, Archivio di Stato
Mb ——, Biblioteca Nazionale Braidense
Mc ——, Conservatorio di Musica Giuseppe Verdi, Biblioteca
Mcap ——, Archivio Capitolare di S Ambrogio, Biblioteca
Mcom ——, Biblioteca Comunale Sormani
Md ——, Capitolo Metropolitano, Biblioteca e Archivio
Mgallini ——, Natale Gallini, private collection
Mr ——, Biblioteca della Casa Ricordi
Ms ——, Biblioteca Teatrale Livia Simoni
Msartori ——, Claudio Sartori, private collection [in Mc]
Msc ——, Chiesa di S Maria presso S Celso, Archivio
Mt ——, Biblioteca Trivulziana e Archivio Storico Civico
Mu ——, Università degli Studi di Milano, Facoltà di Giurisprudenza, Biblioteca Muc ——, Università Cattolica del Sacro Cuore, Biblioteca
MAa Mantua, Archivio di Stato
MAad ——, Archivio Storico Diocesano
MAav ——, Accademia Nazionale Virgiliana di Scienze, Lettere ed Arti, Archivio Musicale
MAc ——, Biblioteca Comunale
MAC Macerata, Biblioteca Comunale Mozzi-Borgetti
MC Montecassino, Monumento Nazionale di Montecassino, Biblioteca
MDAegidi Montefiore dell'Aso, Francesco Egidi, private collection
ME Messina, Biblioteca Regionale Universitaria
MEs ——, Biblioteca Painiana (del Seminario Arcivescovile S Pio X)
MOd Modena, Duomo, Biblioteca e Archivio Capitolare
MOe ——, Biblioteca Estense e Universitaria
MOs ——, Archivio di Stato [in MOe]
MTc Montecatini Terme, Biblioteca Comunale
MTventuri ——, Antonio Venturi, private collection [in MTc]
MZ Monza, Parrocchia di S Giovanni Battista, Biblioteca Capitolare
Na Naples, Archivio di Stato
Nc ——, Conservatorio di Musica S Pietro a Majella, Biblioteca
Nf ——, Biblioteca Oratoriana dei Gerolamini (Filippini)
Ng ——, Monastero di S Gregorio Armeno, Archivio
Nlp ——, Biblioteca Lucchesi Palli [in Nn]
Nn ——, Biblioteca Nazionale Vittorio Emanuele III
NON Nonantola, Seminario Abbaziale, Biblioteca
NOVd Novara, S Maria (Duomo), Biblioteca Capitolare
NOVg ——, Seminario Teologico e Filosofico di S Gaudenzio, Biblioteca
NOVi ——, Istituto Civico Musicale Brera, Biblioteca
NT Noto, Biblioteca Comunale Principe di Villadorata
Od Orvieto, Opera del Duomo, Biblioteca
OFma Offida, Parrocchia di Maria Ss Assunta, Archivio
OS Ostiglia, Opera Pia G. Greggiati Biblioteca Musicale
Pas Padua, Archivio di Stato
Pc ——, Duomo, Biblioteca Capitolare, Curia Vescovile
Pca ——, Basilica del Santo, Biblioteca Antoniana
Pci ——, Biblioteca Civica
Pl ——, Conservatorio Cesare Pollini
Ps ——, Seminario Vescovile, Biblioteca
Pu ——, Biblioteca Universitaria
PAac Parma, Duomo, Archivio Capitolare con Archivio della Fabbriceria PAas ——, Archivio di Stato
PAc ——, Biblioteca Palatina, sezione Musicale
PAcom ——, Biblioteca Comunale
PAp ——, Biblioteca Nazionale Palatina
PAt ——, Archivio Storico del Teatro Regio [in PAcom]
PAVc Pavia, Chiesa di S Maria del Carmine, Archivio
PAVs ——, Seminario Vescovile, Biblioteca
PAVu ——, Biblioteca Universitaria
PCc Piacenza, Biblioteca Comunale Passerini Landi
PCcon ——, Conservatorio di Musica G. Nicolini, Biblioteca
PCd ——, Duomo, Biblioteca e Archivio Capitolare
PCsa ——, Basilica di S Antonino, Biblioteca e Archivio Capitolari
PEas Perugia, Archivio di Stato
PEc ——, Biblioteca Comunale Augusta
PEd ——, Biblioteca Domincini
PEl ——, Conservatorio di Musica Francesco Morlacchi, Biblioteca
PEsf ——, Congregazione dell' Oratorio di S Filippo Neri, Biblioteca e Archivio
PEsl ——, Duomo (S Lorenzo), Archivio
PEsp ——, Basilica Benedettina di S Pietro, Archivo e Museo della Badia
PEA Pescia, Biblioteca Comunale Carlo Magnani
PESc Pesaro, Conservatorio di Musica G. Rossini, Biblioteca
PESd ——, Duomo, Archivio Capitolare [in PESdi]
PESdi ——, Biblioteca Diocesana
PESo ——, Ente Olivieri, Biblioteca e Musei Oliveriana
PESr ——, Fondazione G. Rossini, Biblioteca
PIa Pisa, Archivio di Stato
PIp ——, Opera della Primaziale Pisana, Archivio Musicale
PIraffaelli ——, Raffaelli private collection
PIst ——, Chiesa dei Cavalieri di S Stefano, Archivio PIt ——, Teatro Verdi
PIu ——, Biblioteca Universitaria
PLa Palermo, Archivio di Stato
PLcom ——, Biblioteca Comunale
PLcon ——, Conservatorio di Musica Vincenzo Bellini, Biblioteca

PLi ——, Università degli Studi, Facoltà di Lettere e Filosofia, Istituto di Storia della Musica, Biblioteca
PLn ——, Biblioteca Centrale della Regione Sicilia tex (Nazionale)
PLpagano ——, Roberto Pagano, private collection
PO Potenza, Biblioteca Provinciale
PR Prato, Archivio Storico Diocesano, Biblioteca (con Archivio del Duomo)
PS Pistoia, Basilica di S Zeno, Archivio Capitolare
PSc ——, Biblioteca Comunale Forteguerriana
PSrospigliosi ——, Rospigliosi private collection
Ra Rome, Biblioteca Angelica
Raf ——, Accademia Filarmonica Romana
Ras ——, Archivio di Stato, Biblioteca
Rbompiani ——, Bompiani private collection
Rc ——, Biblioteca Casanatense, sezione Musica
Rcg ——, Curia Generalizia dei Padre Gesuiti, Biblioteca
Rchg ——, Chiesa del Gesù, Archivio
Rcsg ——, Congregazione dell'Oratorio di S Girolamo della Carità, Archivio [in Ras]
Rdp ——, Archivio Doria Pamphili
Rf ——, Congregazione dell'Oratorio S Filippo Neri
Ria ——, Istituto di Archeologia e Storia dell'Arte, Biblioteca
Ribimus ——, Istituto di Bibliografia Musicale, Biblioteca [in Rn]
Rig ——, Istituto Storico Germanico di Roma, sezione Storia della Musica, Biblioteca
Rims ——, Pontificio Istituto di Musica Sacra, Biblioteca
Rli ——, Accademia Nazionale dei Lincei e Corsiniana, Biblioteca
Rlib ——, Basilica Liberiana, Archivio
Rmalvezzi ——, Lionello Malvezzi, private collection
Rmassimo ——, Massimo princes, private collection
Rn ——, Biblioteca Nazionale Centrale Vittorio Emanuele II
Rp ——, Biblioteca Pasqualini [in Rsc]
Rps ——, Chiesa di S Pantaleo (Padri Scolipi), Archivio
Rrai ——, RAI-Radiotelevisione Italiana, Archivio Musica
Rrostirolla ——, Giancarlo Rostirolla, private collection [in Fn and Ribimus]
Rsc ——, Conservatorio di Musica S Cecilia
Rscg ——, Abbazia di S Croce in Gerusalemme, Biblioteca
Rsg ——, Basilica di S Giovanni in Laterano, Archivio Musicale
Rslf ——, Chiesa di S Luigi dei Francesi, Archivio
Rsm ——, Basilica di S Maria Maggiore, Archivio Capitolare [in Rvat]
Rsmm ——, S Maria di Monserrato, Archivio
Rsmt ——, Basilica di S Maria in Trastevere, Archivio Capitolare [in Rvic]
Rsp ——, Chiesa di S Spirito in Sassia, Archivio
Rss ——, Curia Generalizia dei Domenicani (S Sabina), Biblioteca
Ru ——, Biblioteca Universitaria Alessandrina
Rv ——, Biblioteca Vallicelliana
Rvat ——, Biblioteca Apostolica Vaticana
Rvic ——, Vicariato, Archivio
RA Ravenna, Duomo (Basilica Ursiana), Archivio Capitolare [in RAs]
RAc ——, Biblioteca Comunale Classense
RAs ——, Seminario Arcivescovile dei Ss Angeli Custodi, Biblioteca
REm Reggio nell'Emilia, Biblioteca Panizzi
REsp ——, Basilica di S Prospero, Archivio Capitolare
RI Rieti, Biblioteca Diocesana, sezione dell'Archivio Musicale del Duomo RIM Rimini, Biblioteca Civica Gambalunga
RPTd Ripatransone, Duomo, Archivio
RVE Rovereto, Biblioteca Civica Girolamo Tartarotti
RVI Rovigo, Accademia dei Concordi, Biblioteca
Sac Siena, Accademia Musicale Chigiana, Biblioteca
Sas ——, Archivio di Stato
Sc ——, Biblioteca Comunale degli Intronati
Sco ——, Convento dell'Osservanza, Biblioteca
Sd ——, Opera del Duomo, Archivio Musicale
Smo Asciano (nr Siena), Abbazia Benedettina di Monte Oliveto Maggiore, Biblioteca
SA Savona, Biblioteca Civica Anton Giulio Barrili
SAa ——, Seminario Vescovile, Biblioteca
SE Senigallia, Biblioteca Comunale Antonelliana
SO Sant'Oreste, Collegiata di S Lorenzo sul Monte Soratte, Biblioteca
SPc Spoleto, Biblioteca Comunale Giosuè Carducci
SPd ——, Biblioteca Capitolare (Duomo di S Lorenzo)
SPE Spello, Collegiata di S Maria Maggiore, Archivio
SPEbc ——, Biblioteca Comunale Giacomo Prampolini
ST Stresa, Biblioteca Rosminiana
STE Vipiteno, Convento dei Cappuccini (Kapuzinerkloster), Biblioteca
Ta Turin, Archivio di Stato
Tci ——, Civica Biblioteca Musicale Andrea della Corte
Tco ——, Conservatorio di Musica Giuseppe Verdi, Biblioteca
Td ——, Cattedrale Metropolitana di S Giovanni Battista, Archivio Capitolare, Fondo Musicale della Cappella dei Cantori del Duomo e della Cappella Regia Sabauda
Tf ——, Accademia Filarmonica, Archivio
Tfanan ——, Giorgio Fanan, private collection
Tn ——, Biblioteca Nazionale Universitaria, sezione Musicale
Tr ——, Biblioteca Reale
Trt ——, RAI – Radiotelevisione Italiana, Biblioteca
TAc Taranto, Biblioteca Civica Pietro Acclavio
TE Terni, Istituto Musicale Pareggiato Giulio Briccialdi, Biblioteca
TEd ——, Duomo, Archivio Capitolare
TLp Torre del Lago Puccini, Museo di Casa Puccini
TOL Tolentino, Biblioteca Comunale Filelfica
TRa Trent, Archivio di Stato
TRbc ——, Castello del Buon Consiglio, Biblioteca [in TRmp]
TRc ——, Biblioteca Comunale
TRcap ——, Biblioteca Capitolare con Annesso Archivio
TRfeininger ——, Biblioteca Musicale Laurence K.J. Feininger [in TRmp]
TRmd ——, Museo Diocesano, Biblioteca
TRmp ——, Castello del Buonconsiglio: Monumenti e Collezioni Provinciali, Biblioteca
TRmr ——, Museo Trentino del Risorgimento e della Lotta per la Libertà, Biblioteca
TRE Tremezzo, Count Gian Ludovico Sola-Cabiati, private collection
TRP Trapani, Biblioteca Fardelliana
TSci Trieste, Biblioteca Comunale Attilio Hortis
TScon ——, Conservatorio di Musica Giuseppe Tartini, Biblioteca
TSmt ——, Civico Museo Teatrale di Fondazione Carlo Schmidl, Biblioteca
TVco Treviso, Biblioteca Comunale
TVd ——, Biblioteca Capitolare della Cattedrale
Us Urbino, Cappella del Ss Sacramento (Duomo), Archivio
UD Udine, Duomo, Archivio Capitolare [in UDs]
UDa ——, Archivio di Stato
UDc ——, Biblioteca Comunale Vincenzo Joppi
UDs ——, Seminario Arcivescovile, Biblioteca
URBcap Urbania, Biblioteca Capitolare [in URBdi]
URBdi ——, Biblioteca Diocesana
Vas Venice, Archivio di Stato
Vc ——, Conservatorio di Musica Benedetto Marcello, Biblioteca
Vcg ——, Casa di Goldoni, Biblioteca
Vgc ——, Fondazione Giorgio Cini, Istituto per le Lettere, il Teatro ed il Melodramma, Biblioteca
Vlevi ——, Fondazione Ugo e Olga Levi, Biblioteca
Vmarcello ——, Andrighetti Marcello, private collection
Vmc ——, Museo Civico Correr, Biblioteca d'Arte e Storia Veneziana
Vnm ——, Biblioteca Nazionale Marciana
Vqs ——, Fondazione Querini-Stampalia, Biblioteca
Vs ——, Seminario Patriarcale, Archivio
Vsf ——, Biblioteca S Francesco della Vigna

Vsm	——, Procuratoria di S Marco [in Vlevi]
Vsmc	——, S Maria della Consolazione detta Della Fava
Vt	——, Teatro La Fenice, Archivio Storico-Musicale
VCd	Vercelli, Biblioteca Capitolare
VEaf	Verona, Accademia Filarmonica, Biblioteca e Archivio
VEas	——, Archivio di Stato
VEc	——, Biblioteca Civica
VEcap	——, Biblioteca Capitolare
VEss	——, Chiesa di S Stefano, Archivio
VIb	Vicenza, Biblioteca Civica Bertoliana
VId	——, Biblioteca Capitolare
VIs	——, Seminario Vescovile, Biblioteca
VIGsa	Vigévano, Biblioteca del Capitolo della Cattedrale
VRNs	Chiusi della Verna, Santuario della Verna, Biblioteca

IL: ISRAEL

J	Jerusalem, Jewish National and University Library, Music Dept
Jgp	——, Greek Orthodox Patriarchate, Library (Hierosolymitike Bibliotheke)
Jp	——, Patriarchal Library
Ta	Tel-Aviv, American for Music Library in Israel, Felicja Blumental Music Center and Library
Tmi	——, Israel Music Institute

IRL: IRELAND

C	Cork, Boole Library, University College
Da	Dublin, Royal Irish Academy Library
Dam	——, Royal Irish Academy of Music, Monteagle Library
Dc	——, Contemporary Music Centre
Dcb	——, Chester Beatty Library
Dcc	——, Christ Church Cathedral, Library
Dm	——, Archbishop Marsh's Library
Dmh	——, Mercer's Hospital [in Dtc]
Dn	——, National Library of Ireland
Dpc	——, St Patrick's Cathedral
Dtc	——, Trinity College Library, University of Dublin

J: JAPAN

Tma	Tokyo, Musashino Ongaku Daigaku, Ioshokan
Tn	——, Nanki Ongaku Bunko

LT: LITHUANIA

V	Vilnius, Lietuvos Muzikos Akademijos Biblioteka
Va	——, Lietuvos Moksly Akademijos Biblioteka

LV: LATVIA

J	Jelgava, Muzei
R	Riga, Latvijas Mūzikas Akademijas Biblioteka

M: MALTA

Vnl	Valletta, National Library

MD: MOLDOVA

KI	Chişinău, Biblioteka Gosudarstvennoj Konservatorii im. G. Muzyčesku

MEX: MEXICO

Mc	Mexico City, Catedral Metropolitana, Archivo Musical
Pc	Puebla, Catedral Metropolitana, Archivo del Cabildo

N: NORWAY

Bo	Bergen, Offentlige Bibliotek, Griegsamlingen
Ou	Oslo, Universitetsbiblioteket
Oum	——, Nasjonalbiblioteket, Avdeling Oslo, Norsk Musikksamling
T	Trondheim, Norges Teknisk-Naturvitenskapelige Universitet, Gunnerusbiblioteket

NL: THE NETHERLANDS

At	Amsterdam, Toonkunst-Bibliotheek
Au	——, Universiteitsbibliotheek
DEta	Delden, Huisarchief Twickel
DHa	The Hague, Koninklijk Huisarchief
DHgm	——, Haags Gemeentemuseum, Muziekafdeling
DHk	——, Koninklijke Bibliotheek
E	Enkhuizen, Archief Collegium Musicum
L	Leiden, Gemeentearchief
Lml	——, Museum Lakenhal
Lt	——, Bibliotheca Thysiana [in Lu]
Lu	——, Rijksuniversiteit, Bibliotheek
LE	Leeuwarden, Provinciale Bibliotheek van Friesland
R	Rotterdam, Gemeentebibliotheek
SH	's-Hertogenbosch, Illustre Lieve Vrouwe Broederschap
Uim	Utrecht, Letterenbibliotheek, Universiteit
Uu	——, Universiteit Utrecht, Universiteitsbibliotheek

NZ: NEW ZEALAND

Aua	Auckland, University of Auckland, Archive of Maori and Pacific Music
Wt	Wellington, Alexander Turnbull Library

P: PORTUGAL

AR	Arouca, Mosteirode de S Maria, Museu de Arte Sacra, Fundo Musical
BRp	Braga, Arquivo Distrital
BRs	——, Arquivo da Sé
Cmn	Coimbra, Museu Nacional de Machado de Castro
Cs	——, Arquivo da Sé Nova
Cug	——, Universidade de Coimbra, Biblioteca Geral, Impressos e Manuscritos Musicais
Cul	——, Faculdade de Letras da Universidade
Em	Elvas, Biblioteca Municipal
EVc	Évora, Arquivo da Sé, Museu Regional
EVp	——, Biblioteca Pública e Arquivo Distrital
F	Figueira da Foz, Biblioteca Pública Municipal Pedro Fernandes Tomás
G	Guimarães, Arquivo Municipal Alfredo Pimenta
La	Lisbon, Biblioteca da Ajuda
Lac	——, Academia das Ciências, Biblioteca
Lant	——, Arquivo Nacional da Torre do Tombo
Lc	——, Biblioteca do Conservatório Nacional
Lcg	——, Fundação Calouste Gulbenkian, Biblioteca Geral de Arte, Serviço de Música
Lf	——, Fabrica da Sé Patriarcal
Ln	——, Biblioteca Nacional, Centro de Estudos Musicológicos
Lt	——, Teatro Nacional de S Carlos
LA	Lamego, Arquivo da Sé
Mp	Mafra, Palácio Nacional, Biblioteca
Pm	Porto, Biblioteca Pública Municipal
Va	Viseu, Arquivo Distrital
Vs	——, Arquivo da Sé
VV	Vila Viçosa, Fundaçao da Casa de Brangança, Biblioteca do Paço Ducal, Arquivo Musical

PL: POLAND

B	Bydgoszcz, Wojewódzka i Miejska Biblioteka Publiczna, Dział Zbiórów Specjalnych
BA	Barczewo, Kościoła Parafialny, Archiwum
CZ	Częstochowa, Klasztor Ojców Paulinów: Jasna Góra Archiwum
GD	Gdańsk, Polska Akademia Nauk, Biblioteka Gdańska
GDp	——, Wojewódzka Biblioteka Publiczna
GNd	Gniezno, Archiwum Archidiecezjalne
GR	Grodzisk Wielkopolski, Kościół Parafialny św. Jadwigi [in Pa]
Kc	Kraków, Muzeum Narodowe, Biblioteka Czartoryskich
Kcz	——, Muzeum Narodowe, Biblioteka Czapskich
Kd	——, Biblioteka Studium OO. Dominikanów
Kj	——, Uniwersytet Jagielloński, Biblioteka Jagiellońska
Kk	——, Archiwum i Biblioteka Krakowskiej Kapituły Katedralnej
Kn	——, Muzeum Narodowe
Kp	——, Biblioteka Polskiej Akademii Nauk
Kpa	——, Archiwum Państwowe
Kz	——, Biblioteka Czartoryskich
KA	Katowice, Biblioteka Sląska

KO Kórnik, Polska Akademia Nauk, Biblioteka Kórnicka
KRZ Krzeszów, Cysterski Kościół Parafialny [in KRZk]
KRZk ——, Klasztor Ss Benedyktynek
Lw Lublin, Wojewódzka Biblioteka Publiczna im. H. Lopacińskiego
LA Łańcut, Biblioteka-Muzeum Zamku
LEtpn Legnica, Towarzystwa Przyaciół Nauk, Biblioteka
LZu Łódź, Biblioteka Uniwersytecka
MO Mogiła, Opactwo Cystersów, Archiwumi Biblioteka
OB Obra, Klasztor OO. Cystersów
Pa Poznań, Archiwum Archidiecezjalna
Pm ——, Biblioteka Zakładu Muzykologii Uniwersytetu Poznańskiego
Pr ——, Miejska Biblioteka Publiczna im. Edwarda Raczyńskiego
Pu ——, Uniwersytet im. Adama Mickiewicza, Biblioteka Uniwersytecka, Sekcja Zbiorów Muzycznych
PE Pelplin, Wyższe Seminarium Duchowne, Biblioteka
R Raków, Kościół Parafialny, Archiwum
SA Sandomierz, Wyższe Seminarium Duchowne, Biblioteca
SZ Szalowa, Archiwum Parafialne
Tm Toruń, Książnica Miejska im. M. Kopernika
Tu ——, Uniwersytet Mikołaja Kopernika, Biblioteka Głowna, Oddział Zbiorów Muzycznych
Wm Warsaw, Muzeum Narodowe, Biblioteka
Wn ——, Biblioteka Narodowa
Wtm ——, Warszawskie Towarzystwo Muzyczne im Stanisława Moniuszki, Biblioteka, Muzeum i Archiwum
Wu ——, Uniwersytet Warszawski, Biblioteka Uniwersytecka, Gabinet Zbiorów Muzycznych
WL Wilanów, Biblioteka [in Wn and Wm]
WRk Wrocław, Biblioteka Kapitulna
WRu ——, Uniwersytet Wrocławski, Biblioteka Uniwersytecka
WRzno ——, Zakład Narodowy im. Ossolińskich, Biblioteka

RO: ROMANIA

Ba Bucharest, Academiei Române, Biblioteca
BRm Braşov, Biblioteca Judeteana
Cu Cluj-Napoca, Universitatea Babes Bolyai, Biblioteca Centrală Universitară Lucian Blaga
J Iaşi, Biblioteca Centrală Universitară Mihai Eminescu, Departmentul Colecţii Speciale
Sa Sibiu, Direcţia Judeţeană a Arhivelor Naţionale
Sb ——, Muzeul Naţional Bruckenthal, Biblioteca

RUS: RUSSIAN FEDERATION

KA Kaliningrad, Oblastnaya Universal′naya Nauchnaya Biblioteka
KAg ——, Gosudarstvennaya Biblioteka
KAu ——, Nauchnaya Biblioteka Kalingradskogo Gosudarstvennogo Universiteta
Mcl Moscow, Rossiyskiy Gosudarstvenniy Arkhiv Literaturï i Iskusstva (RGALI)
Mcm ——, Gosudarstvenniy Tsentral′niy Muzey Musïkal′noy Kul′turï imeni M.I. Glinki
Mim ——, Gosudarstvenniy Istoricheskiy Muzey
Mk ——, Moskovskaya Gosudarstvennaya Konservatoriya im. P.I. Chaykovskogo, Nauchnaya Muzikal′naya Biblioteka imeni S.I. Taneyeva
Mm ——, Gosudarstvennaya Publichnaya Istoricheskaya Bibliotheka
Mrg ——, Rossiyskaya Gosudarstvennaya Biblioteka
Mt ——, Gosudarstvenniy Tsentral′niy Teatral′niy Musey im. A. Bakhrushina
SPan St Petersburg, Rossiyskaya Akademiya Nauk, Biblioteka
SPia ——, Gosudarstvenniy Tsentral′niy Istoricheskiy Arkhiv
SPil ——, Biblioteka Instituta Russkoy Literaturï Rossiyskoy Akademii Nauk (Pushkinskiy Dom)
SPit ——, Rossiyskiy Institut Istorii Iskusstv
SPk ——, Biblioteka Gosudarstvennoy Konservatorii im. N.A. Rimskogo-Korsakova
SPph ——, Gosurdarstvennaya Filarmoniya im D.D. Shostakovicha
SPsc ——, Rossiyskaya Natsional′naya Biblioteka
SPtob ——, Gosudarstvenniy Akademichesky Mariinsky Teatr, Tsentral′naya Muzïkal′naya Biblioteka

S: SWEDEN

A Arvika, Ingesunds Musikhögskola
B Bålsta, Skoklosters Slott
Gu Göteborg, Universitetsbiblioteket
Hfryklund Helsingborg, Daniel Fryklund, private collection [in Skma]
HÄ Härnösand, Länsmuseet-Murberget
HÖ Höör, Biblioteket
J Jönköping, Per Brahegymnasiet
K Kalmar, Stadtsbibliotek, Stifts- och Gymnasiebiblioteket
Klm ——, Länsmuseet
L Lund, Universitet, Universitetsbiblioteket, Handskriftsavdelningen
LB Leufsta Bruk, De Geer private collection [in Uu]
LI Linköping, Linköpings Stadsbibliotek, Stiftsbiblioteket
N Norrköping, Stadsbiblioteket
Sdt Stockholm, Drottningholms Teatermuseum
Sfo ——, Frimurare Orden, Biblioteket
Sic ——, Svensk Musik
Sk ——, Kungliga Biblioteket: Sveriges Nationalbibliotek
Skma ——, Statens Musikbibliothek
Sm ——, Musikmuseet, Arkiv
Smf ——, Stiftelsen Musikkulturens Främjande
Sn ——, Nordiska Museet, Arkivet
Ssr ——, Sveriges Radio Förvaltning, Musikbiblioteket
St ——, Kung. Teatern [in Skma]
Sva ——, Svenskt Visarkiv
STr Strängnäs, Roggebiblioteket
Uu Uppsala, Universitetsbiblioteket
V Västerås, Stadsbibliotek, Stiftsavdelningen
VIl Visby, Landsarkivet
VX Växjö, Landsbiblioteket

SI: SLOVENIA

Lf Ljubljana, Frančiškanski Samostan, Knjižnica
Ln ——, Narodna in Univerzitetna Knjižnica, Glavni Knjižni Fond Lna ——, Nadškofijski Arhiv
Lng ——, Narodna in Univerzitetna Knjižnica, Glasbena Zbirka
Lnr ——, Narodna in Univerzitetna Knjižnica, Rokopisna Zbirka
Ls ——, Katedral, Glazbeni Arhiv
Nf Novo Mesto, Frančiškanski Samostan, Knjižnica
Nk ——, Kolegiatni Kapitelj, Knjižnica
Pk Ptuj, Knjižnica Ivana Potrča

SK: SLOVAKIA

BRa Bratislava, Štátny Oblastny Archív
BRhs ——, Knižnica Hudobného Seminára Filozofickej Fakulty Univerzity Komenského
BRm ——, Archív Mesta Bratislavy
BRmp ——, Miestne Pracovisko Matice Slovenskej [in Mms]
BRnm ——, Slovenské Národné Múzeum, Hudobné Múzeum
BRsa ——, Slovenský Národný Archív
BRsav ——, Ústav Hudobnej Vedy Slovenská Akadémia Vied
BRu ——, Univerzitná Knižnica, Narodné Knižničné Centrum, Hudobňy Kabinet
BSk Banská Štiavnica, Farský Rímsko-Katolícky Kostol, Archív Chóru
J Júr pri Bratislave, Okresny Archív, Bratislava-Vidiek [in MO]
KRE Kremnica, Štátny Okresny Archív Žiar nad Hronom
Le Levoča, Evanjelická a.v. Cirkevná Knižnica
Mms Martin, Matica Slovenská
Mnm ——, Slovenské Národné Múzeum, Archív

MO	Modra, Štátny Okresny Archív Pezinok
NM	Nové Mesto nad Váhom, Rímskokatolícky Farsky Kostol
TN	Trenčín, Štátny Okresny Archív
TR	Trnava, Štátny Okresny Archív

TR: TURKEY

Ino	Istanbul, Nuruosmania Kütüphanesi
Itks	——, Topkapi Sarayi Müzesi
Iü	——, Üniversite Kütüphanesi

UA: UKRAINE

Kan	Kiev, Natsional'na Akademiya Nauk Ukraïni, Natsional'na Biblioteka Ukraïni im V.I. Vernads'kyy
Km	——, Spilka Kompozytoriv Ukrainy, Centr. 'Muz. Inform'
LV	L'viv, Biblioteka Vyshchoho Muzychnoho Instytutu im. M. Lyssenka

US: UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

AAu	Ann Arbor, University of Michigan, Music Library
AB	Albany (NY), New York State Library
AKu	Akron (OH), University of Akron, Bierce Library
ATet	Atlanta (GA), Emory University, Pitts Theology Library
ATu	——, Emory University Library
ATS	Athens (GA), University of Georgia Libraries
AU	Aurora (NY), Wells College Library
AUS	Austin, University of Texas at Austin, The Harry Ransom Humanities Research Center
AUSm	——, University of Texas at Austin, Fine Arts Library
Ba	Boston, Athenaeum Library
Bc	——, New England Conservatory of Music, Harriet M. Spaulding Library
Bfa	——, Museum of Fine Arts
Bgm	——, Isabella Stewart Gardner Museum, Library
Bh	——, Harvard Musical Association, Library
Bhs	——, Massachusetts Historical Society Library
Bp	——, Public Library, Music Department
Bu	——, Boston University, Mugar Memorial Library, Department of Special Collections
BAep	Baltimore, Enoch Pratt Free Library
BAhs	——, Maryland Historical Society Library
BApi	——, Arthur Friedheim Library, Johns Hopkins University
BAu	——, Johns Hopkins University Libraries
BAue	——, Milton S. Eisenhower Library, Johns Hopkins University
BAw	——, Walters Art Gallery Library
BAR	Baraboo (WI), Circus World Museum Library
BEm	Berkeley, University of California at Berkeley, Music Library
BER	Berea (OH), Riemenschneider Bach Institute Library
BETm	Bethlehem (PA), Moravian Archives
BL	Bloomington (IN), Indiana University Library
BLl	——, Indiana University, Lilly Library
BLu	——, Indiana University, Cook Music Library
BO	Boulder (CO), University of Colorado at Boulder, Music Library
BU	Buffalo (NY), Buffalo and Erie County Public Library
Cn	Chicago, Newberry Library
Cp	——, Chicago Public Library, Music Information Center
Cu	——, University, Joseph Regenstein Library, Music Collection
Cum	——, University of Chicago, Music Collection
CA	Cambridge (MA), Harvard University, Harvard College Library
CAe	——, Harvard University, Eda Kuhn Loeb Music Library
CAh	——, Harvard University, Houghton Library
CAt	——, Harvard University Library, Theatre Collection
CAward	——, John Milton Ward, private collection [on loan to CA]
CF	Cedar Falls (IA), University of Northern Iowa, Library
CHua	Charlottesville (VA), University of Virginia, Alderman Library
CHum	——, University of Virginia, Music Library
CHAhs	Charleston (SC), The South Carolina Historical Society
CHH	Chapel Hill (NC), University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill
CIhc	Cincinnati, Hebrew Union College Library: Jewish Institute of Religion, Klau Library
CIp	——, Public Library
CIu	——, University of Cincinnati College – Conservatory of Music, Music Library
CLp	Cleveland, Public Library, Fine Arts Department
CLwr	——, Western Reserve University, Freiberger Library and Music House Library
CLAc	Claremont (CA), Claremont College Libraries
COhs	Columbus (OH), Ohio Historical Society Library
COu	——, Ohio State University, Music Library
CP	College Park (MD), University of Maryland, McKeldin Library
CR	Cedar Rapids (IA), Iowa Masonic Library
Dp	Detroit, Public Library, Main Library, Music and Performing Arts Department
DAu	Dallas, Southern Methodist University, Music Library
DAVu	Davis (CA), University of California at Davis, Peter J. Shields Library
DMu	Durham (NC), Duke University Libraries
DN	Denton (TX), University of North Texas, Music Library
DO	Dover (NH), Public Library
E	Evanston (IL), Garrett Biblical Institute
Eu	——, Northwestern University
EDu	Edwardsville (IL), Southern Illinois University
EU	Eugene (OR), University of Oregon
FAy	Farmington (CT), Yale University, Lewis Walpole Library
FW	Fort Worth (TX), Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary
G	Gainesville (FL), University of Florida Library, Music Library
GB	Gettysburg (PA), Lutheran Theological Seminary
GR	Granville (OH), Denison University Library
GRB	Greensboro (NC), University of North Carolina at Greensboro, Walter C. Jackson Library
Hhc	Hartford (CT), Hartt College of Music Library, The University of Hartford
Hm	——, Case Memorial Library, Hartford Seminary Foundation [in ATet]
Hs	——, Connecticut State Library
Hw	——, Trinity College, Watkinson Library
HA	Hanover (NH), Dartmouth College, Baker Library
HG	Harrisburg (PA), Pennsylvania State Library
HO	Hopkinton (NH), New Hampshire Antiquarian Society
I	Ithaca (NY), Cornell University
IDt	Independence (MO), Harry S. Truman Library
IO	Iowa City (IA), University of Iowa, Rita Benton Music Library
K	Kent (OH), Kent State University, Music Library
KC	Kansas City (MO), University of Missouri: Kansas City, Miller Nichols Library
KCm	——, Kansas City Museum, Library and Archives
KN	Knoxville (TN), University of Tennessee, Knoxville, Music Library
Lu	Lawrence (KS), University of Kansas Libraries
LAcs	Los Angeles, California State University, John F. Kennedy Memorial Library
LApiatigorsky	——, Gregor Piatigorsky, private collection [in STEdrachman]
LAs	——, The Arnold Schoenberg Institute Archives
LAuc	——, University of California at Los Angeles, William Andrews Clark Memorial Library
LAum	——, University of California at Los Angeles, Music Library

LAur ——, University of California at Los Angeles, Special Collections Dept, University Research Library
LAusc ——, University of Southern California, School of Music Library
LBH Long Beach (CA), California State University
LEX Lexington (KY), University of Kentucky, Margaret I. King Library
LOu Louisville, University of Louisville, Dwight Anderson Music Library
LT Latrobe (PA), St Vincent College Library
M Milwaukee, Public Library, Art and Music Department
Mc ——, Wisconsin Conservatory of Music Library
MAhs Madison (WI), Wisconsin Historical Society
MAu ——, University of Wisconsin
MB Middlebury (VT), Middlebury College, Christian A. Johnson Memorial Music Library
MED Medford (MA), Tufts University Library
MG Montgomery (AL), Alabama State Department of Archives and History Library
MT Morristown (NJ), National Historical Park Museum
Nf Northampton (MA), Forbes Library
Nsc ——, Smith College, Werner Josten Library
NA Nashville (TN), Fisk University Library
NAu ——, Vanderbilt University Library
NBu New Brunswick (NJ), Rutgers – The State University of New Jersey, Music Library, Mabel Smith Douglass Library
NEij Newark (NJ), Rutgers – The State University of New Jersey, Rutgers Institute of Jazz Studies Library
NH New Haven (CT), Yale University, Irving S. Gilmore Music Library
NHoh ——, Yale University, Oral History Archive
NHub ——, Yale University, Beinecke Rare Book and Manuscript Library
NO Normal (IL), Illinois State University, Milner Library, Humanities/Fine Arts Division
NORsm New Orleans, Louisiana State Museum Library
NORtu ——, Tulane University, Howard Tilton Memorial Library
NYamc New York, American Music Center Library
NYbroude ——, Broude private collection
NYcc ——, City College Library, Music Library
NYcu ——, Columbia University, Gabe M. Wiener Music & Arts Library
NYcub ——, Columbia University, Rare Book and Manuscript Library of Butler Memorial Library
NYgo ——, University, Gould Memorial Library [in NYu]
NYgr ——, The Grolier Club Library
NYgs ——, G. Schirmer, Inc.
NYhs ——, New York Historical Society Library
NYhsa ——, Hispanic Society of America, Library
NYj ——, The Juilliard School, Lila Acheson Wallace Library
NYkallir ——, Rudolf F. Kallir, private collection
NYlehman ——, Robert O. Lehman, private collection [in NYpm]
NYlibin ——, Laurence Libin, private collection
NYma ——, Mannes College of Music, Clara Damrosch Mannes Memorial Library
NYp ——, Public Library at Lincoln Center, Music Division
NYpl ——, Public Library, Center for the Humanities
NYpm ——, Pierpont Morgan Library
NYpsc ——, New York Public Library, Schomburg Center for Research in Black Culture in Harlem
NYq ——, Queens College of the City University, Paul Klapper Library, Music Library
NYu ——, University Bobst Library
NYw ——, Wildenstein Collection
NYyellin ——, Victor Yellin, private collection
OAm Oakland (CA), Mills College, Margaret Prall Music Library
OB Oberlin (OH), Oberlin College Conservatory of Music, Conservatory Library
OX Oxford (OH), Miami University, Amos Music Library
Pc Pittsburgh, Carnegie Library, Music and Art Dept
Ps ——, Theological Seminary, Clifford E. Barbour Library
Pu ——, University of Pittsburgh
Puf ——, University of Pittsburgh, Foster Hall Collection, Stephen Foster Memorial PHci Philadelphia, Curtis Institute of Music, Library
PHf ——, Free Library of Philadelphia, Music Dept
PHff ——, Free Library of Philadelphia, Edwin A. Fleisher Collection of Orchestral Music
PHgc ——, Gratz College
PHhs ——, Historical Society of Pennsylvania Library
PHlc ——, Library Company of Philadelphia
PHmf ——, Musical Fund Society [on loan to PHf]
PHphs ——, The Presbyterian Historical Society Library [in PHlc]
PHps ——, American Philosophical Society Library
PHu ——, University of Pennsylvania, Van Pelt-Dietrich Library Center
PO Poughkeepsie (NY), Vassar College, George Sherman Dickinson Music Library
PRs Princeton (NJ), Theological Seminary, Speer Library
PRu ——, Princeton University, Firestone Memorial Library
PRw ——, Westminster Choir College
PROhs Providence (RI), Rhode Island Historical Society Library
PROu ——, Brown University
PRV Provo (UT), Brigham Young University
R Rochester (NY), Sibley Music Library, University of Rochester, Eastman School of Music
Su Seattle, University of Washington, Music Library
SA Salem (MA), Peabody and Essex Museums, James Duncan Phillips Library
SBm Santa Barbara (CA), Mission Santa Barbara
SFp San Francisco, Public Library, Fine Arts Department, Music Division
SFs ——, Sutro Library
SFsc ——, San Francisco State University, Frank V. de Bellis Collection
SJb San Jose (CA), Ira F. Brilliant Center for Beethoven Studies, San José State University
SL St Louis, St Louis University, Pius XII Memorial Library
SLug ——, Washington University, Gaylord Music Library
SLC Salt Lake City, University of Utah Library
SM San Marino (CA), Huntington Library
SPma Spokane (WA), Moldenhauer Archives
SR San Rafael (CA), American Music Research Center, Dominican College
STu Palo Alto (CA), University, Memorial Library of Music, Department of Special Collections of the Cecil H. Green Library
STEdrachmann Stevenson (MD), Mrs Jephta Drachman, private collection; Mrs P.C. Drachman, private collection
STO Stony Brook (NY), State University of New York at Stony Brook, Frank Melville jr Memorial Library
SY Syracuse (NY), University Music Library
SYkrasner ——, Louis Krasner, private collection [in CAh and SY]
TA Tallahassee (FL), Florida State University, Robert Manning Strozier Library
U Urbana (IL), University of Illinois, Music Library
Uplamenac ——, Dragan Plamenac, private collection [in NH]
V Villanova (PA), Villanova University, Falvey Memorial Library
Wc Washington, DC, Library of Congress, Music Division
Wca ——, Cathedral Library
Wcf ——, Library of Congress, American Folklife Center and the Archive of Folk Culture
Wcg ——, General Collections, Library of Congress
Wcm ——, Library of Congress, Motion Picture, Broadcasting and Recorded Sound Division
Wcu ——, Catholic University of America, Music Library

Wdo ——, Dumbarton Oaks
Wgu ——, Georgetown University Libraries
Whu ——, Howard University, College of Fine Arts Library
Ws ——, Folger Shakespeare Library
WB Wilkes-Barre (PA), Wilkes College Library
WC Waco (TX), Baylor University, Music Library
WGc Williamsburg (VA), College of William and Mary, Earl Gregg Swenn Library WI Williamstown (MA), Williams College Library
WOa Worcester (MA), American Antiquarian Society Library
WS Winston-Salem (NC), Moravian Music Foundation, Peter Memorial Library
Y York (PA), Historical Society of York County, Library and Archives

YU: YUGOSLAVIA (REPUBLICS OF MONTENEGRO AND SERBIA)

Bn Belgrade, Narodna Biblioteka Srbije, Odelenje Posebnih Fondova

ZA: SOUTH AFRICA

Csa Cape Town, South African Library

A Note on the Use of the Dictionary

This note is intended as a short guide to the basic procedures and organization of the dictionary. A fuller account will be found in the Introduction, vol. l, pp.xix–xxix.

Abbreviations in general use in the dictionary are listed on pp.vii–xi; bibliographical ones (periodicals, reference works, editions etc.) are listed on pp.xiii–xviii and discographical abbrevations on pp.xix–xx.

Alphabetization of headings is based on the principle that words are read continuously, ignoring spaces, hyphens, accents, bracketed matter etc., up to the first comma; the same principle applies thereafter. 'Mc' and 'M'' are listed as 'Mac', 'St' as 'Saint'.

Bibliographies are arranged chronologically (within section, where divided), in order of year of first publication, and alphabetically by author within years.

Cross-references are shown in small capitals, with a large capital at the beginning of the first word of the entry referred to. Thus 'The instrument is related to the BASS TUBA' would mean that the entry referred to is not 'Bass tuba' but 'Tuba, bass'.

Signatures where the article was compiled by the editors or in the few cases where an author has wished to remain anonymous are indicated by a square box (□).

Work-lists are normally arranged chronologically (within section, where divided). Italic symbols used in them (like D-Dl or GB-Lbl) refer to the libraries holding sources, and are explained on pp.xxi–xxxvii; each national sigillum stands until contradicted.

Contents

S

[continued]

Sources of instrumental ensemble music to 1630. This article is one of a series which discusses the principal medieval and Renaissance sources of music. It is concerned with the principal sources to 1630 of music for two or more instruments (excluding two or more keyboards, lutes and other chordal instruments) to play together without the voice. A truly comprehensive catalogue would have to include publications bearing the words 'per cantare e sonare' or 'apt both for viols and voices', and indeed virtually all vocal sources since their music could be and was played on instruments. Clearly this would defeat the central purpose of such an article, and an attempt has therefore been made to identify music originally conceived for instruments, in spite of the fact that many compositions resist this kind of categorization. Some pieces (like Isaac's Helas) have specific stylistic features that point to a purely instrumental origin, but others (like Tinctoris's Helas) lack these traits, yet always appear without words in the sources. The question as to whether the latter work should be regarded as instrumental in conception, or as a setting of words now lost and which came in its own time to be extensively treated as an instrumental piece, was probably of no consequence in the early 16th century and is hence virtually unanswerable today. For the present purpose, therefore, this article is restricted to sources that contain pieces of undoubted instrumental origin and, in addition, some sources that contain a significant quantity of pieces that might have been conceived for instruments, or that seem to be important for the history of instrumental ensemble music in some other way.

1. General. 2. Italy. 3. France. 4. Germany. 5. Netherlands. 6. Spain and Portugal. 7. British Isles.

1. General. The sources fall naturally into six geographical categories, though the divisions are far from equal. Manuscripts are listed in approximate chronological order under their area of origin, regardless of their contents or the nationality of the scribe. Printed sources are listed under the country in which they were published, with appropriate cross-references for works reprinted in other countries. The terminal date coincides with a rapid falling off in the production of prints in Italy and Germany, the two main areas of published instrumental ensemble music in the early 17th century. The date also marks a shift towards the solo and trio sonata as the focal point of chamber music on the Continent. In the British Isles, however, the production of manuscripts for domestic performance of consort music continued unabated until well into the second half of the 17th century. Nevertheless the terminal date 1630 has been retained in this section too, partly in order to present clearly the relative quantities of source material from different countries over a single period of time, and partly because of the extent of the research currently being conducted into these late sources with their complex interrelationships.

In the following individual entries manuscripts are denoted by their present location, followed by a note in parentheses on their original provenance, authorship or ownership, and a date. Printed sources are cited by their author or editor, if known, followed by as much material from the title-page as is useful to describe the content of instrumental ensemble music. For both manuscript and printed sources the format is normally given, with a note in square brackets if the source is lost or depleted, partbooks being abbreviated S, A, T, B, 5, 6 and so on. Further description of the source is then given as necessary. Entries that concern the work of more than one composer are completed by references to modern editions of all or part of the source, and to literature other than published library catalogues. For single-composer sources, details of this kind will be found under the article on the composer concerned.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

BrownI; EitnerQ; MeyerMS; SartoriB

T. Dart: 'A Hand-List of English Instrumental Music printed before 1681', GSJ, viii (1955), 13–26

K. Elliott: Music of Scotland, 1500–1700 (diss., U. of Cambridge, 1960)

F. Lesure, ed.: Recueils imprimés, XVIe–XVIIe siècles, RISM, B/I/1 (1960)

'The Viola da Gamba Society Provisional Index of Viol Music', Chelys, i– (1969–) [selected 17th-century Eng. composers]

D. Kämper: Studien zur instrumentalen Ensemblemusik des 16. Jahrhunderts in Italien, AnMc, no.10 (1970)

F. Lesure, ed.: Ecrits imprimés concernant la musique, RISM, B/VI/1–2 (1971)

K. Schlager, ed.: Einzeldrucke vor 1800, RISM, A/I (1971–80)

W.A. Edwards: The Sources of Elizabethan Consort Music (diss., U. of Cambridge, 1974) [dated descriptions with thematic catalogue]

E. Selfridge-Field: Venetian Instrumental Music from Gabrieli to Vivaldi (Oxford, 1975, 3/1994)

C. Monson: Voices and Viols in England, 1600–1650 (Ann Arbor, MI, 1982)

P. Holman: Four and Twenty Fiddlers: the Violin at the English Court 1540–1690 (Oxford, 1993, 2/1995)

A.E. Planchart: 'Northern Repertories in Florence in the Fifteenth Century', La musica a Firenze al tempo di Lorenzo il Magnifico: Florence 1992, 101–12

2. Italy. Several Italian sources of the early Renaissance contain scattered pieces without words except for text incipits. Such pieces are normally vocal in origin, but genuine instrumental compositions may be present in, for example, I-TRmp 87 and 89 (see Sources, ms, §IX, 2). The following sources, compiled *c*1480 to *c*1510, contain a substantial proportion of wordless compositions; indeed some sources have no texted pieces at all and may have been compiled for instrumental use. Many of the wordless pieces in fact originated as chansons or, less often, motets by Netherlandish composers, but a significant number seem likely to have been conceived without words. Admittedly the identification of such pieces is highly problematic, but each of the sources listed probably contains at least one or two examples. The sources are all in choirbook format and are grouped by their three principal geographical areas: Naples, north Italy and Florence.

Perugia, Biblioteca Comunale, 431 (G20) (Naples, 1480s). Includes several wordless pieces, at least one of which, a La Spagna setting, is presumably of instrumental origin. Literature: M.F. Bukofzer: 'A Polyphonic Basse Dance of the Renaissance', Studies in Medieval & Renaissance Music (New York, 1950), 190–216 [incl. transcr. of La Spagna]

Seville, Biblioteca Colombina, 5–I–43; Paris, Bibliothèque Nationale, n.a.fr.4379, ff.1–42 (?Naples, 1480s). Single MS, now split into two parts, that includes several wordless pieces. Facsimile: Sevilla 5–I–43 & Paris N.A. Fr. 4379 (Pt. I) (Brooklyn, NY, 1962). Literature: D. Plamenac: 'A Reconstruction of the French Chansonnier in the Biblioteca Colombina, Seville', MQ, xxxvii (1951), 501–42; xxxviii (1952), 85–117, 245–77

Rome, Biblioteca Casanatense, 2856 (formerly O.V.208) (Isabella d'Este Chansonnier, Ferrara, ?1485). 123 wordless compositions, mainly a 3. Literature: J.M. Llorens: 'El Códice Casanatense 2.856', AnM, xx (1965), 161–78; A.S. Wolff: The Chansonnier Biblioteca Casanatense 2856: its History, Purpose and Music (diss., North Texas U., 1970); L. Lockwood: 'Music at Florence and Ferrara in the late Fifteenth Century: Rivalry and Interdependence', La musica a Firenze al tempo di Lorenzo il Magnifico: Florence 1992, 1–13

Bologna, Civico Museo Bibliografico-Musicale, Q16 (formerly 109) (compiled chiefly by Domenicus Marsilius, Naples, 1487). 131 wordless compositions a 2–4. Literature: E. Pease: 'A Report on Codex … Bologna', MD, xx (1966), 57–94; S. Fuller: 'Additional Notes on the 15th-century Chansonnier Bologna Q16', MD, xxiii (1969), 81–103

Florence, Biblioteca Nazionale Centrale, B.R.229 (Magl.XIX.59) (compiled for Alessandro Braccesi, Florence, *c*1491–2). 268 compositions a 3 and 4, mostly without words. Edition: H.M. Brown: A Florentine Chansonnier from the Time of Lorenzo the Magnificent, MRM, vii (1983). Literature: L. Lockwood: 'Music at Florence and Ferrara in the late Fifteenth Century: Rivalry and Interdependence', La musica a Firenze al tempo di Lorenzo il Magnifico: Florence 1992, 1–13; Planchart

Rome, Biblioteca Vaticana, C.G.XIII 27 (? compiled for Giuliano de' Medici, Florence, *c*1492–4). 108 wordless compositions a 3 and 4. Literature: A. Atlas: The Cappella Giulia Chansonnier (Brooklyn, NY, 1975–6) [incl. selected transcrs.]

Florence, Biblioteca Nazionale Centrale, Magl.XIX.178 (Florence, 1490s). 73 wordless compositions a 3 and 4. Literature: Planchart; W.J. Powers: The Music Manuscript Fondo Magliabecchi XIX.178 of the Biblioteca Nazionale Centrale, Florence: a Study in the Changing Role of the Chanson in Late Fifteenth-Century Florence (diss., Columbia U., 1994)

Bologna, Civico Museo Bibliografico-Musicale, Q17 (formerly 148) (Florence, 1490s). 71 compositions, almost entirely wordless. Literature: L. Torchi: 'I monumenti dell'antica musica francese a Bologna', RMI, xiii (1906), 451–505, 575–615; R. Wexler: 'Newly Identified Works by Bartolomeo degli Organi in the MS Bologna Q 17', JAMS, xxiii (1970), 107–18; Planchart

Bologna, Civico Museo Bibliografico-Musicale, Q18 (formerly 143) (Bologna, 1502–5). After an opening section of frottolas, 73 wordless compositions a 3 and 4, many of which are probably of instrumental origin. Facsimile: (Peer, 1998). Literature: S.F. Weiss; 'Bologna Q18: Some Reflections on Content and Context', JAMS, xli (1988), 63–101; J. Banks: The Motet as a Formal Type in Northern Italy, Ca. 1500 (New York, 1993) [incl. discussion of 'instrumental' motets]

Volumes printed in Venice by Ottaviano Petrucci: Harmonice musices odhecaton A (1501, 2/1503, 3/1504). Facsimilies: (Milan, 1932); (New York, 1973). Edition: H. Hewitt (Cambridge, MA, 1942). Canti B numero cinquanta (1502, 2/1503). Facsimile: (New York, 1975). Editions: MRM, ii (1967). Canti C N° cento cinquanta (1504). Facsimile: (New York, 1978). The contents of these volumes are almost entirely without words, and include several compositions a 3 and 4 probably of instrumental origin. Some of Petrucci's motet publications also include wordless compositions, a few of which are almost certainly instrumental, e.g. Ghiselin's 4-part La Spagna in Motetti A numero trentatre A (1502). Literature: M. Cauchie: 'L'Odhecaton, recueil de musique instrumentale', RdM, vi (1925), 148–56; M. Cauchie: 'A propos des trois recueils instrumentaux de la série de l'Odhecaton', RdM, ix (1928), 64–7; G. Reese: 'The First Printed Collection of Part-Music', MQ, xx (1934), 39–76; C. Sartori: Bibliografia delle opere musicali stampate da Ottaviano Petrucci (Florence, 1948); S. Boorman: 'The "first" Edition of the Odhecaton A', JAMS, xxx (1977), 183–207

Paris, Bibliothèque Nationale, Rés. Vm⁷676 (?compiled for Lodovicus Millias, Mantua, 1502). Includes several pieces without words. Facsimile: Manuscrit italien de frottole (1502) (Geneva, 1977). Literature: F. Torrefranca: Il segreto del quattrocento (Milan, 1939) [incl. transcrs. of 3 inst pieces]; N. Bridgman: 'Un manuscrit italien du début du XVIe siècle à la Bibliothèque nationale', AnnM, i (1953), 177–267; W.F. Prizer: 'Paris, Bibliothèque Nationale, Rés. Vm⁷ 676 and Music in Mantua', IMSCR XIV: Bologna 1987, 235–9

Florence, Biblioteca Nazionale Centrale, Panciatichi 27 (north Italy, beginning of 16th century; fig.1). Includes wordless pieces of which some are probably instrumental in origin. Of special interest is an anon. caminata a 4 with passamezzo-like harmonies. Edition: J. Wolf: Sing- und Spielmusik aus älterer Zeit (Leipzig, 1926) [caminata]

Verona, Biblioteca Capitolare, DCCLVII (north Italy, beginning of 16th century). Over 60 wordless compositions a 3–5, mostly anon. and without text incipits. Facsimile: RMF, xxiv (1987). Literature: A. Smijers: 'Vijftiende en zestiende eeuwsche muziekhandschriften in Italië met werken van Nederlandsche componisten', TVNM, xiv/3 (1935), 165–81

Trent, Biblioteca Comunale, 1947–4 (north Italy, beginning of 16th century). German songs and chansons, without the words. One of the compositions is apparently an instrumental setting a 3 of the chanson J'ay prins amours. Edition: IMa, 1st ser., i (1954). Literature: B. Disertori: 'Il manoscritto 1947–4 di Trento e la canzone "i'ay prins amours"', RMI, xlviii (1946), 1–29

Florence, Biblioteca Nazionale Centrale, Magl.XIX.107bis (Florence, *c*1510–13). Includes over 40 textless compositions a 3 and 4.

From 1540 Italian sources devoted to ensemble music begin to appear in vast quantities, especially collections of ricercares, canzonas and similar forms. Most of the sources are prints, and further details of them can be found in BrownI and SartoriB. Some are collections of works by several composers.

Musica nova accommodata per cantar et sonar sopra organi, et altri strumenti (Venice: [Andrea Arrivabene], 1540). 4 partbooks [B alone extant]. 20 ricercares a 4 by Willaert, Segni and others, and a cantus-firmus setting by Parabosco. 19 pieces are reprinted in Musicque de joye (Lyons, [1540s]; see §3). Edition: MRM, i (1964). Literature: O. Mischiati: 'Tornano alla luce i ricercari della "Musica nova" del 1540', L'organo, ii (1961), 73–9

Tiburtino, Giuliano: Fantasie, et recerchari a tre voci (Venice: Girolamo Scotto, 1549). 3 partbooks. 12 wordless pieces with solmization syllable titles, and a fantasia, by Tiburtino; 8

1. Florence, Biblioteca Nazionale Centrale, Panciatichi 27, f.116v (north Italy, beginning of 16th century): cantus and tenor parts of the anonymous four-part caminata madrigals by Willaert, Rore and others; 7 ricercares by Willaert (reprinted in Fantasie recercari, 1551; see below). Edition: IIM, i (1994)

Fantasie recercari contrapunti a tre voci di M. Adriano & de altri autori (Venice: Antonio Gardane, 1551 [T and B lost], 2/1559, 3/ Angelo Gardane, 1593 [T lost]). 3 partbooks. 15 ricercares a 3 by Willaert (reprinted from Tiburtino's 1549 print; see above), Antonino Barges, Girolamo Cavazzoni and anon. Facsimile: (Peer, 1986). Edition: Adrian Willaert: 9 Ricercari für drei Instrumente, ed. H. Zenck (Mainz, 1933)

London, British Library, Roy.App.59–62 (*c*1550–60). 4 partbooks. 44 dances a 4, followed by vocal music. Edition: M. Morrow, ed.: Italian Dances of the Sixteenth Century (London, 1978). Literature: Kämper

Florence, Biblioteca Nazionale Centrale, Magl.XIX.107 (II.I.295) (2nd half of 16th century). Score. 23 ricercares a 4, 3 anon., 10 by Buus (from the 1547 print; see below), and 10 by Malvezzi (from the 1577 print; see below)

Verona, Biblioteca Capitolare, MCXXVIII (*c*1585). 4 out of 6 partbooks. 37 canzonas a 4 by Merulo, Guami and others; 7 canzonas a 5 and 2 a 6 also survive incomplete. Editions: Claudio Merulo: Sei canzoni da sonar a 4, ed. B. Disertori (Milan, 1950); Giuseppe Guami: Canzoni da sonare, ed. I. Fuser and O. Mischiati (Florence, 1968). Literature: B. Disertori: 'Le canzoni strumentali da sonar a quattro di Claudio Merulo', RMI, xlvii (1943), 305–21; C.M. McDermott: The Canzoni d'Intavolatura of Claudio Merulo: a Guide to the Art of Improvised Ornamentation (diss., U. of California, Berkelely, 1979)

Canzon di diversi per sonar con ogni sorte di stromenti a quatro, cinque & sei voci ... libro primo (Venice: Giacomo Vincenti, 1588[21]). 6 partbooks. 4 canzonas a 4, 5 a 5 and 4 a 6, by Merulo, Crecquillon, Guami, Willaert, Gombert and anon. Edition: IIM, x (1994)

Terzi, Giovanni Antonio: Intavolatura di liutto (Venice: Ricciardo Amadino, 1593). Includes 11 canzonas by Florentio Maschera for solo lute, or lute 'in concerto', i.e., presumably, with the ensemble versions of the same pieces in Maschera's publication of 1582 (see below)

Bologna, Civico Museo Bibliografico-Musicale, Q35 (Brescia, 1603). Score. Includes 21 canzonas a 4 by Florentio Maschera. Literature: E.E. Lowinsky: 'Early Scores in Manuscript', JAMS, xiii (1960), 126–73

Canzoni per sonare con ogni sorte di stromenti a quattro, cinque & otto ... libro primo (Venice: Alessandro Raverii, 1608). 8 partbooks, and basso continuo. 17 canzonas a 4, 6 a 5, and 13 a 8, by Costanzo Antegnati, Bartolini, Chilese, Frescobaldi, Giovanni Gabrieli, G.B. Grillo, Gioseffo Guami, Lappi, Luzzaschi, Maschera, Massaino and Merulo. Editions: Giovanni Gabrieli: Vier Canzoni per sonar, ed. A. Einstein (Mainz, 1933); H. Mönkemeyer, ed.: Venezianische Canzonen (Mainz, 1958); Zwei doppelchörige Kanzonen, ed. H. Mönkemeyer (Wilhelmshaven, 1963). Literature: L.E. Bartholomew: Alessandro Raverii's Collection of 'Canzoni per sonare' (Venice, 1608) (Fort Hays, Kansas, 1965)

Florence, Biblioteca Nazionale Centrale, Magl.XIX.106bis (compiled by Carlo del Rio, *c*1615). Score. Compositions a 4: an anon. romanesca, canzona and ricercare con 7 fughe e rovesci; also, in a different hand, a cycle of 12 ricercares in the 12 modes by Giovanni de Macque, and 8 madrigals by Nenna (wordless except for the 1st and part of the 2nd). Literature: E.E. Lowinsky: 'Early Scores in Manuscript', JAMS, xiii (1960), 126–73

Lucino, Francesco, ed.: Seconda aggiunta alli concerti ... con ... dodeci canzoni per sonare (Milan: Filippo Lomazzo, 1617[2]). 4 partbooks, and organ partitura. Includes 12 canzonas a 4 by Ardemanio, Bottaccio, Cantone, Casato, Andrea and G.P. Cima, Vincenzo Pellegrini and G.D. Rivolta. Edition: IIM, xxix (1995)

Bona, Valerio: Otto ordini di litanie della Madonna che si cantano ogni Sabbato nella Santa Casa di Loreto, concertate a doi chori, con le sue sinfonie inanzi, accommodate in modo, che le parti de gli instromenti sono per li sonatori, et le parti appartate anco per li cantori (Venice: Giacomo Vincenti, 1619[6]). ?8 partbooks (lost), and basso continuo. Includes sinfonias and canzonas a 8 by Bona, Giovanni Gabrieli, G.G. Gastoldi, G.B. Riccio and Viadana

Flores praestantissimorum virorum a Philippo Lomatio (Milan: Filippo Lomazzo, 1626[5]). 4 partbooks, and organ partitura. Concludes with 7 canzonas by J.F. Cambiagho, G.P. Cima, Frissoni, G.D. Rivolta and Francesco Rognoni Taeggio

The following late source of popular Italian dance music merits listing on account of its retrospective nature, the rarity of such collections from the period in question, its relationship with Cesare Negri's Le gratie d'Amore (1602), its choreographies, and its detailed bowings (related to Francesco Rognoni's Selva de varii passaggii, 1620)

Zanetti, Gasparo: Il scolaro (Milan: Carlo Camagno, 1645). Staff notation and tablature. Edition: J. Tyler, ed. (London, 1984)

With the growth of Italian music printing, the number of volumes devoted to the work of one composer grew rapidly. Below are listed some volumes where instrumental ensemble music forms a major part of the contents.

Buus, Jacques: Recercari ... libro primo (Venice: Antonio Gardane, 1547) and Il secondo libro di recercari (Venice: Antonio Gardane, 1549). Edition: IIM, iii (1993)

Bendusi, Francesco: Opera nova de balli (Venice: Antonio Gardane, 1553)

Padovano, Annibale: Il primo libro de ricercari a quattro voci (Venice: Antonio Gardane, 1556, 2/Angelo Gardane, 1588 [incomplete]). Edition: IIM, iv (1994)

Conforti, Giovanni Battista: Il primo libro de ricercari a quattro voci (Rome: Valerio Dorico, 1558)

Ruffo, Vincenzo: Capricci in musica a tre voci (Milan: Francesco Moscheni, 1564)

Merulo, Claudio: Il primo libro de ricercari da cantare, a quattro voci (Venice: sons of Antonio Gardane, 1574). Edition: IIM, v (1987)

Malvezzi, Cristofano: Il primo libro de recercari a quattro voci (Perugia: Pietroiacomo Petrucci, 1577) [incomplete]. Includes a ricercare a 4 by Zazzerino. The contents are complete in score in I-Fn II.I.295, ff.38*v* 50

Mainerio, Giorgio: Il primo libro de balli a quatro voci (Venice: Angelo Gardane, 1578)

Maschera, Florentio: Libro primo de canzoni da sonare, a quattro voci (Brescia: Vincenzo Sabbio, ?1582 [lost], 2/1584, 3/Venice: Ricciardo Amadino, 1588, 4/Giacomo Vincenti, 1590 [lost; MS copy at US-Wc], 5/Angelo Gardane, 1593, 6/Milan: heirs of Francesco and Simon Tini, 1596 [incomplete], 7/Venice: Giacomo Vincenti, 1604 [incomplete], 8/Alessandro Raverii, 1607 [incomplete], 9/Bartolomeo Magni, 1621 [incomplete]) Edition: IIM, ix (1995) [1584 edn]

Bassano, Giovanni: Fantasie a tre voci (Venice: Giacomo Vincenti and Ricciardo Amadino, 1585). Edition: IIM, viii (1995)

Gabrieli, Andrea: Sonate a cinque per istromenti (Venice: Angelo Gardane, 1586) [lost]

Bassano, Giovanni: Il fiore de caprici musicali a quatro voci, per sonar con ogni sorte di stromenti (Venice: Giacomo Vincenti, 1588) [incomplete]

Gabrieli, Andrea: Madrigali et ricercari ... a quattro voci (Venice: Angelo Gardane, 1589, 2/1590 [incomplete]). Edition: IIM, viii (1995)

Stivori, Francesco: Ricercari a quatro voci (Venice: Ricciardo Amadino, 1589) [incomplete]

Luzzaschi, Luzzasco: Ricercari a 4 (Venice: Angelo Gardane, 1580s) [lost]

Vinci, Pietro: Il secondo libro de motetti, e ricercari a tre voci, con alcuni ricercari di Antonio Il Verso suo discepolo (Venice: heirs of Girolamo Scotto, 1591)

Bona, Valerio: Il secondo libro delle canzonette a tre voci con l'aggionta di dodeci tercetti a note (Venice: Ricciardo Amadino, 1592). Edition: IIM, viii (1995)

Bariolla, Ottavio: Capricci overo canzoni a quattro ... libro terzo (Milan: heirs of Francesco and Simon Tini, 1594). Edition: IIM, xii (1995)

Stivori, Francesco: Il secondo libro de ricercari a 4 voci (Venice: Ricciardo Amadino, 1594) [lost]

Usper, Francesco: Ricercari et arie francesi a quattro voci (Venice: Giacomo Vincenti, 1595). Edition: IIM, xi (1989)

Banchieri, Adriano: Canzoni alla francese a quattro voci per sonare dentrovi, un echo, & in fine una battaglia a otto, & dui concerti fatti sopra lieto godea ... libro secondo (Venice: Ricciardo Amadino, 1596)

Mazzi, Luigi: Ricercari a quattro et canzoni a quattro, a cinque, et a otto voci (Venice: Giacomo Vincenti, 1596)

Raval, Sebastián: Il primo libro di ricercari a quatro voci cantabili per liuti, cimbali, et viole d'arco, quattro o sei opere con parole spirituali, in canoni ad echo, ad otto, et a dodeci voci, che cantano in quattro parte coniunti et divisi chori, e ricercar in contreponti osservati sciolti, et in quattro fughe d'accordio di studi particulari, et utilissimi per studiosi (Palermo: Giovan Antonio de' Franceschi, 1596)

Cavaccio, Giovanni: Musica ... ove si contengono due fantasie, che dan principio e fine all'opera, canzoni alla franzese, pavana co'l saltarello, madrigali, & un proverbio non so se antico, o moderno, a quattro voci (Venice, 1597)

Gabrieli, Giovanni: Sacrae symphoniae ... senis, 7, 8, 10, 12, 14, 15, & 16, tam vocibus, quam instrumentis (Venice: Angelo Gardane, 1597)

Borgo, Cesare: Canzoni alla francese à 4. Lib 2 (Venice, 1599) [lost]

Stivori, Francesco: Ricercari, capricci et canzoni a quattro voci (Venice: Ricciardo Amadino, 1599) [incomplete]

Canale, Floriano: Canzoni da sonare a quattro et otto voci ... libro primo (Venice: Giacomo Vincenti, 1600). Edition: IIM, xiv (1988)

Mortaro, Antonio: Primo libro de canzoni da sonare a quattro voci (Venice: Ricciardo Amadino, 1600, 2/1610 [incomplete]). Edition: IIM, xiii (1989)

Canale, Floriano: Ricercari di tutti li tuoni con una battaglia alla francese a quattro voci (Venice: Giacomo Vincenti, 1601)

Guami, Gioseffo: Partidura per sonare delle canzonette alla francese (Venice: Giacomo Vincenti, 1601). Score. Also published at Antwerp, 1612 (see §5)

Quagliati, Paolo: Recercate, et canzone per sonare et cantare ... libro primo (Rome: heirs of Nicolo Mutij, 1601). Edition: IIM, xv (1994)

Bonelli, Aurelio: Il primo libro de ricercari et canzoni a quattro voci, con due toccate e doi dialoghi a otto (Venice: Angelo Gardane, 1602)

Stivori, Francesco: Madrigali et canzoni a otto voci (Venice: Ricciardo Amadino, 1603) [incomplete]

Beretta, Lodovico: Partitura del primo libro delle canzoni a quattro & otto voci da suonare (Milan: Agostino Tradate, 1604). Score

Rognoni Taeggio, Giovanni Domenico: Canzoni à 4. & 8. voci (Milan: heirs of Simon Tini, and Filippo Lomazzo, 1605). Includes a canzona by Gasparo Costa. Edition: IIM, xvi (1992)

Mayone, Ascanio: Primo libro di ricercari a tre voci (Naples: Giovanni Battista Sottile, 1606). Edition: IIM, xviii (1995)

Troilo, Antonio: Il primo libro delle canzoni da sonare ... a quatro et cinque voci (Venice: Ricciardo Amadino, 1606). Edition: IIM, xvii (1989)

Merulo, Claudio: Ricercari da cantare a quattro voci ... libro secondo (Venice: Angelo Gardane and brothers, 1607). Edition: IIM, vi (1987)

Radino, Giulio: Concerti per sonare et cantare (Venice: Angelo Gardane, 1607) [incomplete]. Includes a canzona a 4 by Schröter

Rossi, Salamone: Il primo libro delle sinfonie et gagliarde a tre, quatro, & a cinque voci (Venice: Ricciardo Amadino, 1607)

Gussago, Cesario: Sonate a quattro, sei, et otto, con alcuni concerti a otto, con le sue sinfonie da suonare avanti, & doppo secondo il placito, & commodo de sonatori (Venice: Ricciardo Amadino, 1608). Edition: IIM, xx (1994)

Merulo, Claudio: Ricercari da cantare a quattro voci ... libro terzo (Venice: Angelo Gardane and brothers, 1608). Edition: IIM, vii (1987)

Rognoni Taeggio, Francesco: Canzoni francese per sonar con ogni sorte de instromenti a quattro, cinque, et otto (Milan: heirs of Agostino Tradate, 1608) [incomplete]. Includes canzonas by Francesco Rovigo and Riccardo Rognoni and Giovanni Domenico Rognoni Taeggio

Rossi, Salamone: Il secondo libro delle sinfonie e gagliarde a tre voci, per sonar due viole, & un chittarrone con alcune delle dette à quattro, & à cinque, & alcune canzoni per sonar à quattro nel fine (Venice: Ricciardo Amadino, 1608)

Soderini, Agostino: Canzoni à 4. & 8. voci ... libro primo, opera seconda (Milan: heirs of Simon Tini, and Filippo Lomazzo, 1608). Includes a canzona by G.P. Olegio. Edition: IIM, xix (1992)

Bottaccio, Paolo: Il primo libro delle canzoni da suonare a quattro, & otto voci (Venice: Angelo Gardane and brothers, 1609) [incomplete]

Cima, Giovanni Paolo: Canzoni, con sequenze & contrapunti doppii à 2. 3, 4 (Milan, 1609) [lost]

Valentini, Giovanni: Canzoni a 3, 5, 6 et 8 voci, libro primo (Venice: Ricciardo Amadino, 1609) [incomplete]

Viadana, Lodovico: Sinfonie musicali a otto voci ... opera XVIII (Venice: Giacomo Vincenti, 1610). Edition: IIM, xxi (1994)

Bargnani, Ottavio: Secondo libro delle canzoni da suonare a quatro, cinque, et otto voci (Milan: heirs of Simon Tini, and Filippo Lomazzo, 1611)

Franzoni, Amante: Apparato musicale di messa, sinfonie, canzoni, motetti, & letanie della Beata Vergine, a otto voci ... opera quinta ... libro primo (Venice: Ricciardo Amadino, 1613)

Rossi, Salamone: Il terzo libro de varie sonate, sinfonie, gagliarde, brandi, e corrente ... opera duodecima (Venice: Alessandro Vincenti, ?1613 [date of dedication; no copy known], 2/1617 [lost], 3/1623, 4/1638 [lost])

Rovigo, Francesco, and Trofeo, Ruggier: Partitura delle canzoni da suonare a quattro, & a otto (Milan: Filippo Lomazzo, *c*1613). Score. Edition: IIM, xxii (1988)

Bona, Valerio: Sei canzoni italiane da sonare concertate a doi chori in echo ... opera vigesima prima (Venice: Giacomo Vincenti, 1614) [incomplete]

Cangiasi, Giovanni Antonio: Scherzi forastieri per suonare a quattro voci ... opera ottava (Milan: Filippo Lomazzo, 1614). Edition: IIM, xxiv (1991)

Riccio, Giovanni Battista: Il secondo libro delle divine lodi accomodate per concertare nell'organo (Venice: Ricciardo Amadino, 1614) [incomplete]

Rognoni Taeggio, Francesco: Aggiunta del scolare di violino & altri strumenti col basso continuo per l'organo (Milan, 1614) [lost]

[Corradini, Nicolò: Ricercari a quattro voci (1615)]. Score [lacking title-page in unique copy at I-Bc]. 12 ricercares a 4

Gabrieli, Giovanni: Canzoni et sonate ... a 3. 5. 6. 7. 8. 10. 12. 14. 15. & 22. voci (Venice: Gardane, 1615)

Kapsberger, Johann Hieronymus: Libro primo de balli, gagliarde et correnti, a quattro voci (Rome: Giovanni Battista Robletti, 1615). Not in SartoriB. Edition: IIM, xxv (1993)

Kapsberger, Johann Hieronymus: Libro primo di sinfonie a quattro ... raccolte dal Sig. Francesco di Gennaro (Rome: Giovanni Battista Robletti, 1615)

Merula, Tarquinio: Il primo libro delle canzoni a quattro voci per sonare ... aggiontovi due alemane, & una corrente (Venice: Bartolomeo Magni, 1615)

Puliti, Gabriello: Lunario armonico perpetuo calculato al meridiano, & clima delle principali città d'Italia, a tre voci ... opera XVI (Venice: Giacomo Vincenti, 1615) [incomplete]

Bernardi, Stefano: Concerti academici con varie sorte di sinfonie a sei voci ... libro primo, opera ottava (Venice: Giacomo Vincenti, 1616) [2 of the partbooks dated 1615]

Bonzanini, Giacomo: Capricci musicali per cantare, e suonare a quattro voci (Venice: Giacomo Vincenti, 1616)

Lappi, Pietro: Canzoni da suonare ... a 4. 5. 6. 7. 8. 9. 10. 11. 12. & 13, libro primo, con partitura ... opera nona (Venice: Gardane, 1616). Edition: IIM, xxvi (1990)

Kapsberger, Johann Hieronymus: Capricci a due stromenti, tiorba e tiorbino (Rome, 1617) [lost]. Not in SartoriB

Marini, Biagio: Affetti musicali ... opera prima, nelle quale si contiene symfonie, canzon, sonate, balletti, arie, brandi, gagliarde & corenti, a 1. 2. 3 (Venice: Gardane, 1617)

Allegri, Lorenzo: Il primo libro delle musiche (Venice: Gardane, 1618). Score. Includes several dances a 5 and 6. Edition: IIM, xxvii (1995)

Grillo, Giovanni Battista: Sacri concentus ac symphoniae ... 6. 7. 8. 12. voc (Venice: Gardane, 1618). Not in SartoriB. Edition: IIM, xxviii (1988)

Marini, Biagio: Madrigali et symfonie a una, 2. 3. 4. 5 ... opera seconda (Venice: Gardane, 1618) [incomplete]

Priuli, Giovanni: Sacrorum concentuum ... pars prima (Venice: Gardane, 1618). Includes 10 canzonas and 2 sonatas

Cifra, Antonio: Ricercari e canzoni franzese ... libro primo (Rome: Luca Antonio Soldi, 1619) and Ricercari e canzoni franzese ... libro secondo (Rome: Luca Antonio Soldi, 1619). Score

Usper, Francesco: Compositioni armoniche nelle quali si contengono motetti, sinfonie, sonate, canzoni & capricci a 1. 2. 3. 4. 5. 6. 7. & 8. voci, con basso continuo, et in fine La battaglia a 8. per cantar e sonar ... opera terza (Venice: Gardane, 1619) [lost]. Among the instrumental pieces were 2 by Gabriel Usper

Marini, Biagio: Arie, madrigali et corenti a 1. 2. 3. ... opera terza (Venice: Gardane, 1620). Score

Riccio, Giovanni Battista: Il terzo libro delle divine lodi musicali (Venice: Gardane, 1620)

Vivarino, Innocentio: Il primo libro de motetti ... da cantarsi a una voce, con otto sonate per il violone o altro simile stromento (Venice: Gardane, 1620)

Castello, Dario: Sonate concertate in stil moderno, per sonar nel organo overo spineta con diversi instrumenti, a 2. & 3. voci, con basso continuo, libro primo (Venice: Gardane, 1621 [lost], 2/1629 [partitura lost], 3/Francesco Magni, 1658). Also published at Antwerp, 1658

Rossi, Salamone: Il quarto libro de varie sonate sinfonie, gagliarde, brandi, e corrente per sonar due violini, et un chitarrone o altro stromento simile (Venice: Alessandro Vincenti, 1622 [incomplete], 2/1642)

Corradini, Nicolò: Partitura del primo libro de canzoni francese a 4. & alcune suonate (Venice: Bartolomeo Magni, 1624). Score

Puliti, Gabriello: Fantasie, scherzi et capricci da sonarsi in forma di canzone, con un violino solo o vero cornetto con il basso principale ... opera decimanona (Venice: Alessandro Vincenti, 1624). Only the solo partbook survives

Rognoni Taeggio, Francesco: Correnti e gagliarde a 4 con la quinta parte ad arbitrio (Milan, 1624) [lost]

Picchi, Giovanni: Canzoni da sonar con ogni sorte d'istromenti a due, tre, quattro, sei, & otto voci, con il suo basso continuo (Venice: Alessandro Vincenti, 1625)

Banchieri, Adriano: Il virtuoso ritrovo academico del dissonante, publicamente practicato con varati concerti musicali a 1. 2. 3. 4. 5. voci o stromenti ... opera XLIX (Venice: Bartolomeo Magni, 1626)

Buonamente, Giovanni Battista: Il quarto libro de varie sonate, sinfonie, gagliarde, corrente, e brandi per sonar con due violini & un basso di viola (Venice: Alessandro Vincenti, 1626)

Marini, Biagio: Sonate, symphonie, canzoni, pass'emezzi, baletti, corenti, gagliarde, & retornelli, a 1. 2. 3. 4. 5. & 6. voci, per ogni sorte d'instrumenti; un capriccio per sonar due violini quatro parti; un ecco per tre violini, & alcune sonate capricciose per sonar due e tre parti con il violino solo, con altre curiose & moderne inventioni, opera ottava (Venice: Gardane, 1626 [changed to 1629]) [incomplete]

Biumi, Giacomo Filippo: Fantasie a 4. voci (before 1627) [lost] and Partito delle canzoni alla francese a 4. et a 8. con alcune arie de correnti a 4 ... libro primo, opera seconda (Milan: Gratiadio Ferioli, 1627). Score [partbooks lost]

Frescobaldi, Girolamo: Il primo libro delle canzoni ad una, due, tre, e quattro voci (Rome: Giovanni Battista Robletti [partbooks] and Paolo Masotti [score], 1628, rev. 2/Venice: Alessandro Vincenti, 1634 [partbooks]). An edition of 1623 is erroneously recorded in SartoriB

Grandi, Ottavio Maria: Sonate per ogni sorte di stromenti, a 1. 2. 3. 4. & 6, con il basso per l'organo ... opera seconda (Venice: Gardane, 1628) [incomplete]

Possenti, Pellegrino: Concentus armonici duobus, tribus, & quatuor instrumentis concertati (Venice: Gardane, 1628) [incomplete]

Buonamente, Giovanni Battista: Il quinto libro de varie sonate, sinfonie, gagliarde, corrente, & ariette per sonar con due violini, & un basso di viola (Venice: Alessandro Vincenti, 1629) [incomplete]

Castello, Dario: Sonate concertate in stil moderno ... libro secondo (Venice: Gardane, 1629 [incomplete], 2/Bartolomeo Magni, 1644). Also published at Antwerp, 1656

Montalbano, Bartolomeo: Sinfonie ad uno, e doi violini, a doi e trombone, con il partimento per l'organo, con alcune a quattro viole (Palermo: Giovanni Battista Maringo, 1629)

Scarani, Giuseppe: Sonate concertate a due, e tre voci ... libro primo, opera prima (Venice: Gardane, 1630) [incomplete]

Many treatises have music examples which seem to be complete pieces, possibly with a life of their own away from theoretical sources. One or two of these contain instrumental ensemble music.

Perugia, Biblioteca Comunale, 1013 (M36) (copied by Johannes Materanensis, Venice, 1509). Contains treatises on plainchant, mensuration, counterpoint and proportional notation. The section on proportions (ff.78–123) is illustrated with numerous lengthy musical examples a 2 (a few a 3), including 2 anon. La Spagna settings and several other compositions apparently instrumental in conception. Edition: O. Gombosi, ed.: Compositione di Meser Vincenzo Capirola (Neuilly-sur-Seine, 1955), pp.xxxviii ff [incl. La Spagna settings]. Literature: A. Seay: Quaestiones et solutiones (Colorado Springs, CO, 1977) [incl. facs.]; B.J. Blackburn: 'A Lost Guide to Tinctoris's Teachings Recovered', EMH, i (1981), 29–116; N. Bridgman: 'De l'attribution à Tinctoris des exemples musicaux du Liber de arte contrapuncti', A Festschrift for Albert Seay: Essays by his Friends and Colleagues, ed. M.D. Grace (Colorado Springs, CO, 1982), 33–44

Ortiz, Diego: Trattado de glosas sobre clausulas y otros generos de puntos en la musica de violones (Rome: Valerio Dorico, 1553, repr. 1553 with Italian title, prefatory material and textual commentary). Includes several ricercares for viol and keyboard. Edition: M. Schneider (Berlin, 1913, rev. 3/1961/R) [part facs.]. Literature: J. Savall: 'Contribución al estudio de la obra instrumental de Diego Ortiz', Musica antiqua, ii (1986), 17–26; iii (1986), 40–51

Caroso, Fabritio: Il ballarino (Venice: Francesco Ziletti, 1581, rev. edns under the title Nobiltà di dame, 1600, 1605 and 1630). Treatise on dancing, the first part containing instructions, the second containing the choreography and music of 83 dances. The first 22 dances are arranged for lute and one instrument; the remainder are arranged for solo lute. Facsimile: (New York, 1967). Edition: Courtly Dance in the Renaissance, ed. J. Sutton (text), F.M. Walker (music) (New York, 1995). Literature: M. Dolmetsch: Dances of Spain and Italy from 1400 to 1600 (London, 1954)

Angleria, Camillo: La regola del contraponto, e della musical compositione (Milan: Giorgio Rolla, 1622). Includes ricercares and canons a 2–5 by Angleria and G.P. Cima

Throughout the period two-part compositions (bicinia) and canons tend to be associated with musical pedagogy. In many cases those without words are indistinguishable in musical style from those with words. Thus the contents of some of the following sources stand on the borderline between instrumental and vocal music.

Eustachio Romano: Musica (Rome: Johannes Jacobi, 1521). 45 compositions a 2 without title or words, though a few have concordances with vocal music

Licino, Agostino: Primo libro di duo cromatici (Venice: Antonio Gardane, 1545, 2/heirs of Girolamo Scotto, 1586) [incomplete]) and Il secondo libro di duo cromatici (Venice: Antonio Gardane, 1546). Each 2 partbooks

Lupacchino, Bernardino, and Tasso, Gioan Maria: Il primo libro a due voci (?2 Venice: Antonio Gardane, 1559[24] [S lost], 3/Girolamo Scotto, 1560, 4/Scotto, 1562 [T lost], 5/Claudio Merulo, 1568 [S lost], 6/Giacomo Vincenti and Ricciardo Amadino, 1584 [T lost], 7/Amadino, 1587, 8/Milan: Francesco Tini and heirs of Simon Tini, 1590 [S lost], 9/Venice: Giacomo Vincenti, 1591, 10/Angelo Gardane, 1594 [T lost], 11/Giacomo Vincenti, 1607, 12/Ricciardo Amadino, 1615, 13/Gardane, 1616 [S lost], 14/Rome: Luca Antonio Soldi, 1620, 14–20/various publishers, 1642–88). 2 partbooks

Vinci, Pietro: Il primo libro della musica a due voce (Venice: Girolamo Scotto, 1560, 2/1586). 2 partbooks

Lupacchino, Bernardino, and Tasso, Gioan Maria: Il primo libro a note negre a due voci (Venice: Girolamo Scotto, 1565). 2 partbooks [S lost]. 35 duos, some reprinted from Lupacchino and Tasso, Il primo libro a due voci (1559; see above)

Infantas, Fernando de las: Plura modulationum genera quae vulgò contrapuncta appellantur super excelso gregoriano cantu (Venice: Girolamo Scotto, 1579). 100 canons in 2–8 parts over the cantus firmus 'Laudate Dominum omnes gentes', all but 11 without words. On the last page are 3 further canons, 2 on different plainsongs and one entitled 'Duo'

Lassus, Orlande de: Motetti et ricercari ... a due voci (Venice: Angelo Gardane, 1579 [T lost], 2/1585, 3/Giacomo Vincenti, 1586, 4/ Vincenti, 1589, 5/Vincenti, 1610). 2 partbooks. Same contents as Munich edition of 1577 (see §4), except that wordless pieces are labelled 'ricercare'

Galilei, Vincenzo: Contrapunti a due voci (Florence: Giorgio Marescotti, 1584). 2 partbooks. 29 compositions a 2 without words or titles. Literature: A. Einstein: 'Vincenzo Galilei and the Instructive Duo', ML, xviii (1937), 360–68

Guami, Francesco: Ricercari a due voci (Venice: Angelo Gardane, 1588). 2 partbooks. 23 compositions

Metallo, Grammatio: Ricercari a due voci (Venice: Giacomo Vincenti, ?1591 [lost, if it ever existed], 2/1595 [lost], 3/Ricciardo Amadino, 1605 [T lost], 4/Amadino, 1609, rev. 5/Amadino, 1614, rev. 6/Naples: Gargano and Nucci, 1617 [T lost, except pp.39 and 46], 7/Venice: Bartolomeo Magni, 1620 [T lost], 8/Magni, 1626, 9–16/various publishers, 1639–85). 2 partbooks. 1605 edition contains 36 compositions, wordless except for text incipits, and a canon a 2. The 1614, 1620 and 1626 editions are expanded to contain 44 ricercares and the same canon. Further variations in content occur in the 1617, 1639 and subsequent editions; for details see SartoriB

Il Verso, Antonio: Il primo libro della musica a due voci (Palermo, 1596). Edition: P.E. Carapezza: Musiche strumentali didattiche (Rome, 1971)

Fonghetto, Paolo: Capricii, et madrigali ... a due voci (Verona: Francesco dalle Donne and Scipione Vargnano, 1598). 2 partbooks. 9 duos with Italian words, and 16 without words

Gastoldi, Giovanni Giacomo, and others: Il primo libro della musica a due voci (Milan: heirs of Simon Tini, and Giovanni Francesco Besozzi, 1598). 2 partbooks. 20 instrumental duos by Gastoldi, 2 each by Girolamo Baglioni, Cantone, G.P. Cima, Riccardo Rognoni, Giovanni Domenico Rognoni Taeggio and Orfeo Vecchi, and 4 anon. duos. Editions [selections]: E. Doflein, ed.: Spielmusik für Violine: alte Musik, ii (1932); HM, xxiii–xxiv (1949)

Calì, Giovan Battista: Il primo libro di ricercari a due voci (Venice: Ricciardo Amadino, 1605). 2 partbooks

Zuccharo, Anibale: Ricercate a due voci ... libro primo (Venice: Alessandro Raverii, 1606). 2 partbooks. Includes one work a 3

Cavi, Pietro Paolo da: Il primo libro di recercari a due voci (Rome: Bartolomeo Zannetti, 1608, 2/Luca Antonio Soldi, 1620). 2 partbooks

Sangiorgio, Pietro: Il primo libro de capricci a due voci (Venice: Alessandro Raverii, 1608). 2 partbooks

Troilo, Antonio: Sinfonie, scherzi, ricercari, capricci, et fantasie, a due voci (Venice: Ricciardo Amadino, 1608). 2 partbooks

Bianco, Giovanni Battista: Musica a due voci utilissima per instruir i figliuoli a cantar sicuramente in breve tempo, & commodi per sonar con ogni sorte di strumenti (Venice: Giacomo Vincenti, 1610). 2 partbooks

Bartei, Girolamo: Il primo libro de ricercari a due voci … opera duodecima (Rome: Bartolomeo Zannetti, 1618, 2/Ancona, 1674). 2 partbooks

Mussi, Giulio: Il primo libro delle canzoni da sonare a due voci … opera quinta … et nel fina una toccata in ecco a doi soprani (Venice: Alessandro Vincenti, 1620, 2/1625 [B and bc alone extant]). 2 partbooks and basso continuo

De Spagnolis, Giovanni Camillo: Il primo libro delle recercate a due voci con alcuni curiosi canoni a due, tre, & a quattro voci … opera terza (Naples: Ottavio Beltrano, 1626). 2 partbooks

The following sources contain relatively few instrumental ensemble pieces, being devoted primarily to other kinds of music.

Manuscripts: I-Bc Q38 (end of 16th century; see E.E. Lowinsky: 'Early Scores in Manuscript', JAMS, xiii, 1960, pp.126–73), F-Pn Rés.Vma.851 ('Bourdeney MS', end of 16th century; see O. Mischiati: 'Un antologia manoscritta in partitura del secolo XVI', RIM, x, 1975, pp.265–328); A. Newcomb: 'The Anonymous Ricercares of the Bourdeney Codex', Frescobaldi Studies: Madison, WI, 1983, 97–123

Prints (for further details see BrownI and SartoriB): Motetta trium vocum (Gardane, 1543, 2/1551, 3/1569), Scotto (1562 [lost]), V. Galilei (1568, rev. 2/1584), N. Vicentino (1572), M. Ingegneri (1579, 2/1584), L. Agostini (1583), J. Peetrinus (1583 [incomplete]), Andrea and Giovanni Gabrieli (1587), Andrea Gabrieli and Annibale Padovano (1590, 2/1592, 3/1594 [lost]), O. Scaletta (1590), O. Vecchi (1590), 2/1595, 3/1611 [incomplete]), L. Viadana (1590 [incomplete]), C. Malvezzi (1591; music for the wedding of Ferdinando de' Medici and Christine of Lorraine), S. Raval (1593), G. Metallo (1594 [lost]), G. Aichinger (1595), A. Banchieri (1595), A. Marino (1597 [incomplete]), J. Handl (1598), L. Bellanda (1599), G. Fattorini (1601 [incomplete]), L. Viadana (1602 [incomplete], 2/1605, 3/1607 [incomplete], 4/1612), C. Antegnati (1603), A. Falcone (1603), G. Moro (1604, 2/Antwerp, 1613 [incomplete], 3/Antwerp, 1621 [incomplete]), O. Scaletta (1604 [incomplete]), A. Balbi (1606), A. Il Verso (1606 [incomplete]), A. Banchieri (1607), A. Caterina (1609), P. Fonghetto (1609), E. Porta (1609), G.P. Cima (1610), A. Mortaro (1610), A. Franzoni (1611), N. Zielenski (1611 [incomplete]), A. Banchieri (1612), G.A. Cangiasi (1612 [incomplete; instrumental piece lost]), G.B. Riccio (1612), Giulio Belli (1613, 2/Frankfurt, 1621), S. Bernardi (1613, 2/1623), G. Ghizzolo (1613), A. Grandi (i) (1613 [incomplete], rev. 2/1617 [incomplete], 3/1619 [incomplete], 4/1623, 5/1628), S. Patta (1613), E. Porta (1613 [incomplete]), A. Brunelli (1614), A. Coma (1614), A. Franzoni (1614 [incomplete]), G. Ghizzolo (1614), P. Lappi (1614 [incomplete], 2/Frankfurt, 1621, 3/Antwerp, 1622), F. Usper (1614 [incomplete]), A. Borsaro (1615 [incomplete]), M. da Gagliano (1615), F. Ugoni (1616), A. Brunelli (1617), Francesco Milleville (1617 [2 publications, 1 incomplete]), P. Vitali (1617), Lilia sacra (Vincenti, 1618), G.C. Gabussi and V. Pellegrini (1619 [2 publications]), G. Ghizzolo (1619, 2/1622 [incomplete]), G. Priuli (1619), A. Banchieri (1620), E. Porta (1620), S. Bernardi (1621, 2/1627), P.M. Lamoretti (1621), F. Turini (1621 [incomplete], rev. 2/1624, rev. 3/1624), C. Milanuzzi (1622), C. Merulo (1623 [incomplete]), F. Vitali (1623), S. Bernardi (1624 [incomplete]), T. Merula (1624 [incomplete]), A. Brunelli (1626), G. Rovetta (1626 [incomplete], 2/1641), M.A. Grancino (1627 [incomplete]), F. Bellazzo (1628), T. Cecchino (1628 [incomplete]), T. Merula (1628), P. Lappi (1629), G. Pietragrua (1629), ?C. Rusca (1630 [lost])

3. France. Very little French instrumental ensemble music survives from this period, and that apparently only in printed collections. The larger part, particularly in the earlier years, comprises ensemble dance settings, from the presses of Attaingnant and Du Chemin.

Volumes printed in Paris by Pierre Attaingnant: Dixhuit basses dances (1530) contains dances for solo lute, of which a few have the melody (called 'subjectum') notated separately in staff notation, and may be intended for ensemble performance. Edition: D. Heartz, ed.: Preludes, Chansons and Dances for Lute (Neuilly-sur-Seine, 1964). Six gaillardes et six pavanes avec treze chansons musicales a quatre parties (1530) and Neuf basses dances, deux branles, vingt et cinq pavennes, avec quinze gaillardes en musique a quatre parties (1530, ?2/1538 [lost]). Each 4 partbooks. In spite of the latter title one of the dances is a 5 and one a 6. Edition: F.J. Giesbert, ed.: Pierre Attaingnant: Pariser Tanzbuch aus dem Jahre 1530 (Mainz, 1950). Conseil, Jean: Livre de danceries à six parties (1543 [lost]). This may be the first of a series of titles of which vols.iii–vi were edited by Gervaise and vii by Du Tertre. Second livre … a quatre parties (1547). Includes one dance a 5. Gervaise, Claude: Troisième livre de danceries a quatre et cinq parties (1556). Edition: E. Mohr: Die Allemande (Zürich, 1932) [selected almains]. Quart livre de danceries a quatre parties (1550). Includes dances a 5. Cinquiesme livre de danceries, a quatre parties, contenant dix bransles gays, huict bransles de Poictou, trentecinq bransles de Champaigne (1550). Sixième livre de danceries, mis en musique a quatre parties (1555). Includes a dance pair a 5. Du Tertre, Etienne: Septième livre de danceries, mis en musique a quatre parties (1557; ff.20 to end missing from unique copy at F-Pn). 27 dances survive, including 2 pairs a 5. Editions of the Livres de danceries: MMRF, xxiii (1908) [selection]; B. Thomas (London, 1972–5). Literature: D. Heartz: Sources and Forms of the French Instrumental Dance in the Sixteenth Century (diss., Harvard U., 1957); D. Heartz: Pierre Attaingnant, Royal Printer of Music (Berkeley and Los Angeles, 1969)

Volumes printed in Paris by Nicolas Du Chemin: Estrée, Jean d': Premier livre de danseries. Second livre de danseries. Tiers livre de danseries. (1559 [A and T lost]). All a 4 except for one a 5 and 2 a 6 in the third book. Quart livre de danseries (1564 [B alone extant; unique copy at GB-Lbl lacks f.21]). Dances a 4, 5 and 6. Literature: P. Nettl: 'Die Tänze Jean d'Estrees', Mf, viii (1955), 437–45; D. Heartz: Sources and Forms of the French Instrumental Dance in the Sixteenth Century (diss., Harvard U., 1957); C.M. Cunningham: Estienne du Tertre: scavant musicien, Jean d'Estree: joueur de hautbois du roy, and the Mid-Sixteenth-Century Franco–Flemish Chanson and Ensemble Dance (diss., Bryn Mawr College, 1969)

Beaujoyeux, Balthasar de: Balet comique de la Royne (Paris: Le Roy, Ballard & Patisson, 1582). Description of the theatrical entertainments for the wedding of the Duke of Joyeuse, including 4 instrumental pieces a 5 and one a 12. Facsimile: (Turin, 1962). Edition: C. and L. MacClintock (Rome, 1971) [Eng. trans.]. Literature: H. Prunières: Le ballet de cour en France (Paris, 1914); F.A. Yates: The French Academies of the Sixteenth Century (London, 1947); O. Bonniffet: 'Esquisses du ballet humaniste (1572–1581)', Cahiers de l'IRHMES, i (1992), 15–51

Arbeau, Thoinot: Orchésographie (Langres: J. des Preyz, 1588, 2/1589, repr. 1596, 3/1597). Treatise on dancing, including the complete melodies of 44 dances, and one pavan a 4. Facsimile: (Langres, 1988). Edition: J. Sutton (New York, 1967). Literature: E.P. Barker: 'Master Thoinot's Fancy', ML, xi (1930), 383–93; A. Mary: '"L'Orchésographie" de Thoinot Arbeau', Les trésors des bibliothèques de France, ed. R. Cantinelli and A. Boinet, v (1935), 85–99; Y. Guilcher: 'Les différentes lectures de l'Orchésographie de Thoinot Arbeau', Le recherche en danse, i (1982), 39–49; J. Sutton: 'Triple Pavans: Clues to Some Mysteries in 16th-Century Dance', EMc, xiv (1986), 175–81

Relatively few volumes contain fantasias and other polyphonic forms.

Musicque de joye (Lyons: Jacques Moderne, [1540s]). 4 partbooks. 22 ricercares by Willaert, Segni and others (of which 19 were also printed in Musica nova (Venice, 1540); see §2), followed by 29 anon. dances. All the compositions are a 4 except the 8th ricercare which is a 3. Facsimile: (Peer, 1991). Editions: F.J. Giesbert, ed.: Jacques Moderne: Fröhliche Musik (Musique de joye) (Kassel, 1934) [all the dances]; F.J. Giesbert, ed.: Instrumental-Fantasien des 16. Jahrhanderts für vierstimmigen Blockflöten-, Violen-, oder Fidelchor (Kassel, 1954) [selected ricercares] SF Pogue, ed. (Peer, 1991)

Lassus, Orlande de: Moduli duarum vocum nunquam hactenus editi Monachii Boioariae (Paris: Le Roy & Ballard, 1578, 2/Robert and Pierre Ballard, 1601). 2 partbooks. Same contents as Munich edition of 1577 (see §4) but wordless pieces labelled 'fantaisie'

3 sets of partbooks printed in Paris by Pierre Ballard: Du Caurroy, Eustache: Fantasies a III, IIII, V et VI parties (1610; fig.2). Guillet, Charles: Vingt-quatre fantaisies a quatre parties disposées selon l'ordre des douze modes (1610). Le Jeune, Claude: Second livre des meslanges (1612, 2/1617 [according to FétisB; lost]). Includes 3 fantasias, 2 a 4 and one a 5. Literature: D. Launay: 'La fantaisie en France jusqu'au milieu du XVIIe siècle', La musique instrumentale de la Renaissance: Paris 1954, 327–8; A. Cohen: 'The Fantaisie for Instrumental Ensemble in 17th-century France – its Origin and Significance', MQ, xlviii (1962), 234–43

4. GERMANY. Although not strictly-speaking sources of instrumental ensemble music, some 15th- and early 16th-century keyboard MSS include intabulations of significant quantities of textless part-music. The most important are A-Wn 5094, D-Mbs Cim.352b (Buxheim Organ MS), D-Bsb 40026 (Kleber MS), CH-SGs 530 (Fidolin Sicher's organ book). For further details see SOURCES OF KEYBOARD MUSIC TO 1660, §2(iii). Several other early German sources, while devoted chiefly to vocal music, contain a few apparently instrumental pieces. With the passage of time the instrumental pieces become more distinct, often being labelled 'canzona', for example.

Kraków, Biblioteka Jagiellonska, Mus.ms.40098 (Glogauer Liederbuch, ?Kloster der Augustiner-Chorherren, Sagan (Silesia), possibly owned by Andreas Ritter, *c*1480). 3 partbooks. Includes 61 wordless compositions; some have been identified as French chansons, but at least 15 seem to be instrumental in origin. Facsimile: RMF, vi (1986). Edition: EDM, 1st ser., iv (1936), viii (1937), lxxxv–lxxxvi (1981) [wordless pieces all in iv]. Literature: H. Ringmann: 'Das Glogauer Liederbuch (um 1480)', ZMw, xv (1932–3), 49–60; H. Braun: 'Volksliedhaftes im Glogauer Liederbuch', Jb für musikalische Volks- und Volkerkunde, vi (1972), 77–88; J. Černý: 'Petrus Wilhelmi de Grudencz', Hudební věda, xii (1975), 195–238, Eng. trans. in Musica Antiqua IV: Bydgoszcz 1975, 91–103 [proposes Wilhelmi's authorship of the MS]; L. Hoffmann-Erbrecht: 'Auf den Spuren des Schreibers der Glogauer Handschrift (ca. 1480)', Augsburger Jb für Musikwissenschaft, vii (1990), 19–29; StrohmR

Leipzig, Universitätsbibliothek, 1494 (Apel Codex, late 15th century). Choirbook. Includes several wordless pieces, some of which are of instrumental origin, e.g. Isaac's La morra a 3 (f.85*v*), and an anon. La Spagna setting a 3 (f.63*v*) also in PL-Wu Rps.Mus.58; see below. Edition: EDM, 1st ser., xxxii–xxxiv (1956–75). Literature: H. Riemann: 'Der Mensural-codex des Magister Nikolaus Apel', KJb, xii (1897), 1–23

Linz, Studienbibliothek, 529 (Tyrol, *c*1490). Fragment, including music for instrumental ensemble. Literature: W.L. Smith: 'An Inventory of pre-1600 Manuscripts, Pertaining to Music in the Bundesstaatliche Studienbibliothek (Linz, Austria)', FAM, xxvii (1980), 162–9; R. Strohm: 'Native and Foreign Polyphony in Late Medieval Austria', MD, xxxviii (1984), 205–30

Berlin, Staatsbibliothek Preussischer Kulturbesitz, Mus.ms.40021 (formerly Z 21) (end of 15th century). Choirbook. Includes several pieces without words. Literature: M. Just: Der Mensuralkodex Mus.ms.40021 der Staatsbibliothek Preussischer Kulturbesitz Berlin (Tutzing, 1975)

Warsaw, Biblioteka Uniwersytecka, Rps.Mus.58 (formerly PL-WRu Mf.2016) (? Silesian-Bohemian border, *c*1500). Choirbook. At least 2 compositions are instrumental: a setting a 2 of De tous biens plaine [?1 voice for lute] and a setting a 3 of La Spagna (also in D-LEu 1494; see above). Literature: F. Feldmann: 'Zwei weltliche Stücke des Breslau Codex Mf. 2016', ZMw, xiii (1930–31), 252–66 [incl. transcr. of De tous biens plaine]; F. Feldmann: Der Codex Mf. 2016 des musikalischen Instituts bei der Universität Breslau (Breslau, 1932)

Heilbronn, Gymnasialbibliothek, X, 2 (early 16th century). Partbook. Bassus of 31 wordless compositions a 3, of which some are probably instrumental in origin, e.g. Isaac's Helas and La morra, Obrecht's Si sumpsero, Senfl's Das Lang, and the anon. La stangetta, Si dormiero and Si bibero. Literature: M. Staehelin: 'Zum Egenolff Discantband der Bibliothèque Nationale in Paris', AMw, xxiii (1966), 93–109

St Gall, Stiftsbibliothek 462 (Liederbuch des Johannes Heer von Glarus, early 16th century). Choirbook. Includes several wordless pieces, mostly of vocal origin but including such instrumental pieces as Isaac's Der Hund and La morra, and Alexander Agricola's Caecus. Edition: SMd, v (1967)

2. Opening of the dessus part of the first three-part fantasie from Du Caurroy's 'Fantasies' (Paris, 1610)

Augsburg, Staats- und Stadtbibliothek, 2° 142a (1505–14). Choirbook. Includes several anon. pieces without words or title, some of which are certainly instrumental, e.g. La gambetta a 3 (f.18*v*, exceptionally headed Mantuanner dantz de schallter cel), Passamezzo moderno a 3 (f.20), La monina a 3 (f.20*v*), Passamezzo antico caminata a 4 (f.21), Obrecht's Si sumpsero a 3 (f.31*v*). Edition: Das Augsburger Liederbuch, ed. L. Jonas (Munich, 1983)

St Gall, Stiftsbibliothek, 461 (Fridolin Sicher's MS, *c*1515). Choirbook. 49 compositions a 3–5, all without words. Facsimile: The Songbook of Fridolin Sicher (Peer, 1996). Edition: F.J. Giesbert, ed.: Ein altes Spielbuch … Liber Fridolini Sichery (Mainz, 1936)

Regensburg, Proske-Bibliothek, C.120 (Petrus Pernner MS, Innsbruck, 1518–19, Augsburg, 1520–21, part copied by Lucas Wagenrieder). Choirbook. Includes over 100 compositions, three-quarters of which are without words and include some pieces of instrumental origin. Literature: R. Birkendorf: Der Codex Pernner: Quellenkundliche Studien zu einer Musikhandschrift des frühen 16. Jahrhunderts (Augsburg, 1994)

Munich, Universitätsbibliothek, 4° 718 (Mathematics and Tablature Book of Jorg Weltzell, 1523–4). Includes songs (some incomplete) by Hofhaimer, Senfl and others, set in tablature for viols

Vienna, Österreichische Nationalbibliothek, 18810 (copied by Lukas Wagenrieder, *c*1524–33). 5 partbooks. Includes some wordless carmina a 3 and a 4 by Alexander Agricola, Hofhaimer, Isaac, La Rue, Senfl and anon. (cf D-Mu 8° 328–31 below). Facsimile: Collection of German, French and Instrumental Pieces (Peer, 1987). Edition: J. Robison: Vienna, Nationalbibliothek Manuscript 18810: A Transcription of the Unpublished Pieces with Comments on Performance Practices in Early Sixteenth-Century Germany (DMA diss., Stanford U., 1975)

Munich, Universitätsbibliothek, 8° 328–31 (formerly Cim.44*a*) (copied by Lukas Wagenrieder, ?Munich, owned by Heronimus Welser and dated 1527). 4 partbooks. Includes a few wordless carmina a 3 and a 4 by Hofhaimer, Isaac and La Rue (concordant with A-Wn 18810 above). Literature: D. Smithers: 'A Textual–Musical Inventory and Concordance of Munich University MS 328–331', RMARC, no.8 (1970), 34–89

[3 anon. untitled collections] (Frankfurt: Christian Egenolff, *c*1532–5). Partbooks [S alone extant]. The unique copies in F-Pn are bound together in a single volume (Rés.Vm⁷504). The entire contents are without words except for text incipits, and the 3rd collection includes several pieces probably of instrumental origin. Literature: N. Bridgman: 'Christian Egenolff, imprimeur de musique', AnnM, iii (1955), 77–177; M. Staehelin: 'Zum Egenolff-Discantband der Bibliothèque Nationale in Paris', AMw, xxiii (1966), 93–109 [not in BrownI]

Trium vocum carmina (Nuremberg: Hieronymus Formschneider, 1538). 3 partbooks. 100 compositions a 3 without words, title or attribution (some of this information supplied by hand in the 2 surviving copies at D-Bhm and Ju), of which several are probably instrumental in origin. Literature: K. Holzmann: Hieronymus Formschneyders Sammeldruck Trium Vocum Carmina (diss., U. of Freiburg, 1956)

Zwickau, Ratsschulbibliothek, LXXVIII, 3 (1st half of 16th century). 3 partbooks. 26 compositions a 3 without words, including some of instrumental origin. Literature: H.M. Brown: 'Music for a Town Official in Sixteenth-Century Zwickau', Musica antiqua VII: Bydgoszcz 1985, 479–92

Munich, Bayerische Staatsbibliothek, Mus.ms.1516 (south Germany, *c*1540). 4 partbooks. 161 compositions, all but one without words, including a few dances and other pieces probably of instrumental origin. Edition: B.A. Whisler: Munich Mus. ms. 1516: a Critical Edition (diss., U. of Rochester, NY, 1974)

Copenhagen, Kongelige Bibliotek, Gl.Kgl.Sml.1872–4° (Konigsberg, *c*1540–50). 7 partbooks. Written for the wind players of Duke Albrecht of Prussia. Vocal compositions a 5–8, all without words except for text incipits. There are also some dances and other pieces of probable instrumental origin, including anon. settings a 5 of La Spagna (found elsewhere as a vocal composition, Propter peccata, attributed to Josquin) and T'Andernaken [bassus specifies 'Krumbhörner']. Edition: Josquin Desprez: Wereldlijke werken, v (Amsterdam, 1968). Literature: J. Foss: 'Det Kgl. Cantoris Stemmebøger A.D. 1541', Aarbog for musik 1923, 24

Copenhagen, Kongelige Bibliotek, Gl.Kgl.Sml.1873–4° (Königsberg, *c*1540–50). 5 out of 6 partbooks [A lost]. Companion to the previous set. At the end several dances have been somewhat haphazardly added. Literature: J. Foss: 'Det Kgl. Cantoris Stemmebøger A.D. 1541', Aarbog for musik 1923, 24

Basle, Universitätsbibliothek, F.X.17–20 (*c*1555–60). 4 partbooks. Includes an instrumental setting a 4 of La bataglia

Regensburg, Proske-Bibliothek, A.R.940/41 (1557–9). 5 partbooks. Sacred and secular music a 2–6, and a 8, with Latin, German and French words. Several compositions without words, some of vocal origin, some probably instrumental including 2 dances a 4 (1 by Othmayr) and 1 a 3, and 13 pieces a 4 (one each by Finck and Keutzenhoff, the rest anon.) which may be instrumental carmina. Edition: HM, cxxxvii–cxxxviii (1956–7). Literature: W. Brennecke: Die Handschrift A.R. 940/41 der Proske-Bibliothek zu Regensburg (Kassel, 1953); W. Brennecke: 'Musique instrumentale d'après un manuscrit allemand', La musique instrumentale de la Renaissance: Paris 1954, 127–37

Ulm, Bibliothek der Von Schermarschen Familienstiftung, 236a–d (laid out by Johann and Werner Schermar, Wittenberg, ?*c*1560). Includes some instrumental dances, all a 4. Literature: A. Wendel: Eine studentische Musiksammlung der Reformationszeit: Die Handschrift Misc. 236a–d der Schermar-Bibliothek in Ulm (Baden-Baden, 1993)

Kraków, Biblioteka Jagiellońska, Berlin, Staatsbibliothek, Mus. ms. 40027 (formerly Z 27) (Owned and compiled by Adam Gumpelzhaimer, 1599–1617). Score. Includes a wordless composition a 5 by Christian Erbach. Literature: R. Charteris: Adam Gumpelzhaimer's Little-Known Score-Books in Berlin and Kraków (Neuhausen, 1996)

Berlin, Staatsbibliothek Preussischer Kulturbesitz, Mus.ms.40028 (formerly Z 28) (Owned or compiled by Adam Gumpelzhaimer, whose name appears inside the front cover with the date 1599; 1599–1617). Score. Includes 3 instrumental compositions: on p.25 a canzona a 5 by Erbach, on p.86 a capriccio di cornetti a 6 by Lichtlein, and on p.138 a canzona a 8 by Bramieri [also in D-Rp B.205–10]. Literature: E.E. Lowinsky: 'Early Scores in Manuscript', JAMS, xiii (1960), 126–73; R. Charteris: Adam Gumpelzhaimer's Little-Known Score-Books in Berlin and Kraków (Neuhausen, 1996)

Liegnitz [Legnica], the former Königliche Ritter-Akademie, 58 (catalogue no.24) [lost] (early 17th century). 8 partbooks. Included the following dances a 5 (nos.75–8): Englische Paduane, galliard, pavan by Groh, and Lachrymae pavan

Regensburg, Proske-Bibliothek, B.205–10 (owned and chiefly compiled by Adam Gumpelzhaimer, Augsburg, early 17th century). 6 partbooks. Includes an instrumental canzona La foccara, a 8, by Bramieri [lacks S I; score in D-Bsb Mus.ms.40028; see above]. Literature: R. Charteris and G. Haberkamp: 'Regensburg, Bischofliche Zentralbibliothek, Butsch 205–210: a Little-Known Source of the Music of Giovanni Gabrieli and his Contemporaries', MD, xliii (1989), 195–249

Berlin, Staatsbibliothek Preussischer Kulturbesitz, Mus.ms.40377 (1612). Tenor partbook. Includes dances, mainly a 4, by Freudenreich, Hagius (Engelländisch Galliard), Haussmann, Lechner, Simpson and anon.

Augsburg, Staats- und Stadtbibliothek, Tonkunst Schletterer 39 (copied by Caspar Flurschütz, Augsburg, 1616). Score. Copy of Giovanni Gabrieli's Sacrae symphoniae (Venice, 1597; see §2), followed by vocal music from other prints

Augsburg, Staats- und Stadtbibliothek, 4° 255 (?Augsburg, 1625). On ff.103*v*–106 a courante a 2 with continuo by Gregor Aichinger, 2 dances with continuo, and the upper voice of an instrumental suite

Wrocław, the former Breslau Stadtbibliothek, 59 [lost] (1st half of 17th century). 25 partbooks. Included 3 anon. canzonas a 2, 7 and 12, and an intrada a 4

Wrocław, the former Breslau Stadtbibliothek, 90 [lost] (1st half of 17th century). 4 partbooks and basso continuo. Included 2 anon. canzonas

In most anthologies of instrumental ensemble music by more than one composer, dances are strongly represented. However, the later sources show an increasing predilection for fantasias and italianate forms such as the ricercare and canzona.

Hessen, Paul and Bartholomeus: Viel feiner lieblicher Stucklein, spanischer, welscher, englischer, frantzösischer Composition und Tentz, uber drey hundert, mit sechsen, fünffen, und vieren, auff alle Instrument ... zusamen bracht (Breslau: Crispin Scharffenberg, 1555). 5 partbooks [S lost]. 322 compositions without words, title or attribution. Several are identified in BrownI from concordances in printed volumes of dances for instrumental ensemble

Hessen, Paul and Bartholomeus: Etlicher gutter teutscher und polnischer Tentz, biss in die anderthalbhundert mit fünff und vier Stimmen, zugebrauchen, auff allerley Instrument ... zusamen getragen (Breslau: Crispin Scharffenberg, 1555). 5 partbooks [S lost]. 155 compositions without words, title or attribution

Kassel, Landesbibliothek, 4° mus.125 (Kassel, *c*1600). 5 partbooks. 53 pavans, 4 In Nomines, and 2 further pieces, all a 5 and without title or ascription, mainly, if not entirely, by English composers. Edition: C. Wool: A Critical Edition and Historical Commentary of Kassel 4° MS Mus. 125 (M.Mus. diss., U. of London, 1983); Holman

Königsberg, the former Königliche- und Universitäts-Bibliothek, 13763(5), I–IV [lost] (1601–2). 4 partbooks. 'Etzliche geschriebene lustige polnische Täntze, colligiret durch mich Johannem Hänisch anno 1601'. Contained 15 dances a 4

Kassel, Landesbibliothek, 4° mus.72 (Kassel, 1601–3). 5 partbooks. Pavans, galliards and other instrumental compositions, mainly a 5. Several are by Moritz, Landgrave of Hessen-Kassel, including some pieces with specific instrumentation, e.g. Pavana del Francisco Segario for 'fiauto, corneto muto, trombone, sordone et viola di gamba'. The MS may have been compiled by Richard Machin, an Englishman at the Kassel court, and also contains 23 dances a 5 (some incomplete) with English titles. A copy by Liebing (1887) is in GB-Lbl Add.33295. Edition: EDM, 2nd ser., Kurhessen, i/1 (1936) [Landgrave Moritz's compositions]. Literature: G. Oberst: Englische Orchestersuiten um 1600 (Wolfenbüttel, 1929); P.E. Mueller: The Influence and Activities of English Musicians on the Continent (diss., Indiana U., 1954)

Füllsack, Zacharias, and Hildebrand, Christian: Ausserlesener Paduanen und Galliarden, erster Theil (Hamburg: Philipp von Ohr, 1607). 5 partbooks. 24 pavans and 24 galliards a 5 by Borchgrevinck, Brade, Dowland, Grep, James Harding, Holborne, Edward Johnson, Mercker, Mons, Peter Philips, Jacob Praetorius and anon. Edition: B. Engelke: Musik und Musiker am Gottorfer Hofe, i: Die Zeit der englischen Komödianten, 1590–1627 (Breslau, 1930)

Füllsack, Zacharias, and Hildebrand, Christian: Ander Theil ausserlesener lieblicher Paduanen, und auch so viel Galliarden (Hamburg: Philipp von Ohr, 1609). 5 partbooks. 18 pavans and 18 galliards a 5 by Bateman, Borchgrevinck, Brade, Gistou, Grep, Mercker, Sommer, Stephen and anon. Edition: B. Engelke: Musik und Musiker am Gottorfer Hofe, i: Die Zeit der englischen Komodianten, 1590–1627 (Breslau, 1930)

Simpson, Thomas: Opusculum neuwer Pavanen, Galliarden, Couranten, unnd Volten (Frankfurt: Nikolaus Stein, 1610). 5 partbooks. 30 compositions a 5 by Dowland, Farmer, Simpson and Tomkins. Editions: G. Oberst: Englische Orchestersuiten um 1600 (Wolfenbüttel, 1929) [2 pieces]; MB, ix (1955, rev. 2/1962) [Tomkins]

Hagius, Konrad: Newe künstliche musicalische Intraden, Pavanen, Galliarden, Passamezen, Courant unnd Uffzüg, zu 4. 5. und 6. Stimmen darunter etliche Phantasien oder Fugen mit 2. und 3. Stimmen zu finden (Nuremberg: Abraham Wagenmann, 1616 [?an edn of 1614 lost]). 6 partbooks [S and A lost]. Vocal and instrumental music by Hagius and various other composers listed in RISM 1616[24]

Kraków, Biblioteka Jagiellońska, Berlin, Staatsbibliothek, Mus.ms.40350 (1619). 5 partbooks. Contains dances a 5 by Michael Altenburg, Eisentraut, Franck, Simpson, Sommer, Staden, Zangius and anon. Literature: G. Oberst: Englische Orchestersuiten um 1600 (Wolfenbüttel, 1929)

Obendörffer, David: Allegrezza musicale: ausserlesene künstlich musicalische Paduanen, Galliarden, Intraden, Canzoneten, Ricercaren, Balleten, Allmanden und Volten ... mit 4. 5. und 6. Stimmen (Frankfurt: Nikolaus Stein, 1620). Partbooks [A alone extant]. Compositions by Brade, Groh, Haussmann, Otto, Bartholomaeus Praetorius, J.H. Schein and Simpson. Literature: G. Oberst: Englische Orchestersuiten um 1600 (Wolfenbüttel, 1929)

Simpson, Thomas: Taffel Consort: erster Theil von allerhand newen lustigen musicalischen Sachen mit vier Stimmen, neben einem General Bass (Hamburg: Paul Lang, 1621). 4 partbooks and basso continuo. 50 compositions a 4 by Bateman, Nicolaus Bleyer, Chezam, Dowland, Engelmann, Alfonso Ferrabosco (ii), Grabbe, Edward Johnson, Robert Johnson (ii), Krosch, Peter Philips, Scherley, Simpson, Töpffer, Webster and anon. Editions: J. Wolf: Sing- und Spielmusik aus älterer Zeit (Leipzig, 1926) [Ferrabosco]: MB, ix (1955, 2/1962) [1 piece by Dowland and 3 by Simpson]; H. Mönkemeyer (Wilhelmshaven, 1962) [selection]. Literature: SartoriB

Amoenitatum musicalium hortulus ... fantas. canz. padovan. intrad. galliard. courant. ballet. volt. almand. bransl. gallicarum. anglicarum & belgicarum, insertis etiam choreis, inclitae polonicae nationi hoc tempore usitatissimis (Leipzig: Caspar Klosmann, 1622) [lost]. 4 partbooks. Contained *c*100 compositions by 13 composers listed in SartoriB. Editions: R. Eitner: 'Taenze des 15. bis 17. Jahrhunderts', MMg, vii (1875), suppl. [canzona by Hassler]; DTÖ, lxx, Jg.xxxvi/2 (1929) [ballet by Posch]

Herbst, Johann Andreas, ed.: 1. Theil 20 Canzonen und 8 Sonaten von den berühmbsten Autoribus, mit 5. 6. und 8. Stimmen (Frankfurt, 1626) [lost]

Wrocław, the former Breslau Stadtbibliothek, 111 [lost] (1627). 5 partbooks. 'Canzoni e concerti a due, tre e quattro voci cum basso continuo di Adamo Harzebsky [Adam Jarzębski] Polono anno MDCXXVII' (13 compositions a 2, 10 a 3, and 5 a 4). The MS also contained Echo a 4 by Scheidt, and 9 sonatas a 3–5 by O.M. Grandi. Editions: WDMP, xi, xv, xxi, xxvii, xxxii, xxxix (1932–58). Literature: J.J. Dunicz: Adam Jarzębski i jego 'Canzoni e concerti' (1627) (Lwów, 1938)

Kassel, Landesbibliothek, 2° mus.59. Not a single MS, but 18 sets of parts (labelled a to s) written at various times in the 17th century for use at the Kassel Hofkapelle. The following contain instrumental ensemble music before *c*1630: 2° mus.59c. Sonata a 15 by Giovanni Gabrieli. 2° mus.59f. Canzona a 8 by Giovanni Gabrieli. 2° mus.59h. Ricercar sopra re fa mi do for violetta, viola da braccio, viola da gamba, basso di viola and continuo. 2° mus.59r. Canzon in echo duodecim toni a 10. 2° mus.59s [incomplete]. Canzona a 8 by Moritz, Landgrave of Hessen-Kassel. Edition: S. Kunze: Die Instrumentalmusik Giovanni Gabrielis, ii (Tutzing, 1963) [Ricercar and Canzon in echo]

Kassel, Landesbibliothek, 4° mus.147. 5 sets of parts (labelled a to e) written for use at the Kassel Hofkapelle, probably all in the 1st half of the 17th century: 4° mus.147a. Canzona a 8 by Giovanni Gabrieli. 4° mus.147b. Canzona a 7 by Priuli. 4° mus.147c. Canzona a 8 by Cornet. 4° mus.147d. Echo canzona a 12 by Giovanni Gabrieli. 4° mus.147e [incomplete]. Sonata a 12 by Priuli. Edition: S. Kunze: Die Instrumentalmusik Giovanni Gabrielis, ii (Tutzing, 1963) [Echo canzona]

Kassel, Landesbibliothek, 2° mus.60. 25 sets of parts (labelled a to z) written for use at the Kassel Hofkapelle. The following sets contain music (all anon.) from *c*1630 or somewhat later: 2° mus.60f. Sonata a 8 for '4 viole e 4 fagotti'. 2° mus.60l. Sonata a 6. 2° mus.60o. 4 sonatas 'a 5 bombardi'.

Wrocław, the former Breslau Stadtbibliothek, 112 [lost] (1st half of 17th century). Contained sinfonias, a galliard, capriccios, sonatas, canzonas and an instrumental aria, a 2–6, with basso continuo

An isolated early source devoted to instrumental ensemble music by a single composer is:

Zwickau, Ratsschulbibliothek, CVI, 5 (*c*1525). 5 partbooks. T. Stoltzer's 'Octo tonorum melodiae', consisting of 8 fantasias a 5 (1 in each of the 8 ecclesiastical modes). According to Reese they form the 'earliest preserved example of a cycle of instrumental pieces in the literature of music' (ReeseMR, 725)

Many 17th-century volumes are devoted to the work of one composer. They are often not exclusively instrumental, although the instrumental section seems to have been a popular component. Unless otherwise stated they are in partbook format.

Luetkeman, Paul: Der erste Theil newer lateinischer und deutscher Gesenge ... nebenst nachfolgenden schönen Fantasien, Paduanen und Galliarden ... mit 5. 6. und mehr Stimmen componiret (Stettin: heirs of Andreas Kellner, 1597) [incomplete]

Orologio, Alessandro: Intradae ... quinque & sex vocibus ... liber primus (Helmstedt: Giacomo Luzio, 1597)

Haussmann, Valentin: Neue artige und liebliche Täntze, zum theil mit Texten ... zum theil ohne Text gesetzt (Nuremberg: Paul Kauffmann, 1598 [lost], 2/1599 [A lost], 3/1600 [lost], 4/1602, 5/1604 [lost], 6/1606)

Demantius, (Johannes) Christoph: Sieben und siebentzig, neue ausserlesene, liebliche, zierliche, polnischer und teutscher Art, Täntze mit und ohne Texten, zu 4. und 5. Stimmen, nebern andern künstlichen Galliarden, mit fünff Stimmen (Nuremberg: Conrad Bauer, 1601)

Hassler, Hans Leo: Lustgarten neuer teutscher Gesäng, Balletti, Galliarden und Intraden (Nuremberg: Paul Kauffmann, 1601, 2/1605, 3/1610)

Haussmann, Valentin: Venusgarten, darinnen hundert ausserlesene gantz liebliche mehrerntheils polnische Täntze (Nuremberg: Paul Kauffmann, 1602)

Franck, Melchior: Newer Pavanen, Galliarden, unnd Intraden (Coburg: Justus Hauck, 1603)

Groh, Johann: Sechsunddreissig neue liebliche und zierliche Intraden ... mit fünff Stimmen gesetzet (Nuremberg: Paul Kauffmann, 1603, 2/1611)

Haussmann, Valentin: Rest von polnischen und andern Täntzen nach Art wie im Venusgarten zu finden colligirt und zum Theil gemacht auch mit weltlichen amorosischen Texten untergelegt (Nuremberg: Paul Kauffmann, 1603)

Franck, Melchior: Deutsche weltliche Gesäng unnd Täntze (Coburg: Justus Hauck, 1604) [incomplete]

Groh, Johann: Dreissig neue ausserlesene Padouane und Galliard (Nuremberg: Paul Kauffmann, 1604, 2/1612)

Haussmann, Valentin: Neue fünffstimmige Paduane und Galliarde auff Instrumenten fürnemlich auff Fiolen lieblich zugebrauchen (Nuremberg: Paul Kauffmann, 1604)

Haussmann, Valentin: Neue Intrade, mit sechs und fünff Stimmen auff Instrumenten fürnemlich auff Fiolen lieblich zugebrauchen. Nach disen sind etliche Englische Paduan und Galliarde anderer Composition zu finden (Nuremberg: Paul Kauffmann, 1604)

Colerus, Valentin: Neue lustige liebliche und artige Intraden, Täntze und Gagliarde mit vier und fünff Stimmen auff allerley Seitenspiel ... (wie auch etliche auff vier Zincken) ... zugebrauchen (Jena: Johann Weidner, 1605) [incomplete]

Franck, Melchior: Der ander Theil deutscher Gesäng unnd Täntze mil vier Stimmen sampt beygesetzten Quodlibeten (Coburg: Justus Mauck, 1605) [incomplete]

Fritsch, Balthasar: Primitiae musicales, paduanas et galiardas (Frankfurt: Nikolaus Stein, 1606)

Staden, Johann: Neue teutsche Lieder (Nuremberg: Paul Kauffmann, 1606). Includes 6 balletts, 3 courantes and 6 galliards, all a 4 , and 1 galliard and 2 pavans a 5

Demantius (Johannes) Christoph: Conviviorum deliciae, das ist: Neue liebliche Intraden und Aufzüge, neben künstlichen Galliarden, und frölichen polnischen Täntzen, mit sechs Stimmen (Nuremberg: David Kauffmann, 1608)

Frank, Melchior: Neue musikalische Intraden ... mit 6. Stimmen componirt (Nuremberg: David Kauffmann, 1608) [incomplete]

Brade, William: Newe ausserlesene Paduanen, Galliarden, Cantzonen, Allmand und Coranten (Hamburg: Michael Hering, 1609)

Haussmann, Valentin: Ausszug auss ... zweyen unterschiedlichen Wercken (Nuremberg: Paul Kauffmann, 1609 [single copy of A in D-Tu dated 1608]). Part repr. of 1598 and 1602 publications

Mercker, Matthias: 20 neue ausserlesene Padouane und Galliard ... mit 5 Stimmen (Helmstedt: Giacomo Luzio, 1609) [lost]. 8 of the compositions, along with fugas and almains a 4, are found, apparently in Mercker's hand, in Kl 4° mus.96, a MS entitled Harmonia musica quatuor et quinis vocibus (Kassel, 1609)

Schein, Johann Hermann: Venus Kräntzlein ... oder Newe weltliche Lieder mit 5. Stimmen neben etzlichen Intraden, Gagliarden und Canzonen (Wittenberg: Thomas Schürer, 1609)

Staden, Johann: Neue teutsche Lieder ... samt etlichen Galliarden und Couranten ... mit 4. Stimmen componirt (Nuremberg: Paul Kauffmann, 1609)

Thesselius, Johann: Neue liebliche Paduanen, Intraden und Galliarden ... mit fünff Stimmen componirt (Nuremberg: Paul Kauffmann, 1609)

Franck, Melchior: Musikalische Fröligkeit von etlichen neuen lustigen deutschen Gesängen, Täntzen, Galliarden und Concerten, sampt einem dialogo mit vier, fünff sechs unnd acht Stimmen (Coburg: Justus Hauck, 1610) [incomplete]

Hagius, Konrad: Ander Theil neuer teutscher Tricinien (Frankfurt, 1610) [lost]. Included fugas and canons a 2–6

Lyttich, Johann: Sales venereae musicales, oder Newe deutsche politsche Gesänge ... auch lustige Intraden, Galliardae, und Paduanen mit 5 Stimmen (Jena: Johann Weidner, 1610) [lost]

Lyttich, Johann: Venus Glöcklein, oder Neue weltliche Gesänge mit anmuthigen Melodien und lustigen Texten auff vier und fünff Stimmen: item Intraden, Paduanen und Galliardae, auch mit fünff Stimmen componirt (Jena: Johann Weidner, 1610)

Möller, Johann: Neue Paduanen, unnd darauff gehörige Galliarden, von fünff Stimmen: sampt einem neuen Quodlibet (Frankfurt: Nikolaus Stein, 1610)

Staden, Johann: Venus Kräntzlein: newer musicalischer Gesäng und Lieder so wol auch etliche (ohne Text) Galliarden, Couranten, Auffzüg und Pavanen ... mit 4. und 5. Stimmen componirt (Nuremberg: Paul Kauffmann, 1610)

Otto, Valerius: Newe Paduanen, Galliarden, Intraden und Currenten, nach englischer und frantzösischer Art ... mit fünff Stimmen componirt (Leipzig: Abraham Lamberg, 1611) [incomplete]

Peuerl, Paul: Newe Padouan, Intrada, Däntz unnd Galliarda mit vier Stimmen (Nuremberg: Abraham Wagenmann, 1611) [incomplete]. According to Bukofzer (Music in the Baroque Era, New York, 1947, 113), includes the earliest known examples of variation suite

Krombhorn, Tobias: Newe Paduanen, Corranten und Täntz mit 4 Stimmen (Liegnitz, 1612) [lost]

Möller, Johann: Andere noch mehr neue Paduanen und darauff gehörige Galliarden, mit 5. Stimmen, sampt eins von 3. Stimmen (Darmstadt: Balthasar Hoffmann, 1612) [incomplete]

Copenhagen, Kongelige Bibliotek, Gl.Kgl.Sml.1875n-4° (Rostock, 1612). Tenor partbook. Antonius Mors: Etliche schone und liebliche Fantasien so mit V Stimmen welche 23 bei einander, und auch Galliarda so man auff allerhandt Instrumentenn zu gebrauchen, in Sonderheit uff Violeen gesetzt und componirt. Autograph

Praetorius, Michael: Terpsichore musarum aoniarum quinta darinnen allerley französische Däntze und Lieder als 21. Branslen, 13. andere Däntze mit sonderbaren Namen, 162. Couranten, 48. Volten, 37. Balletten, 3. Passameze, 23. Gaillarden, und 4. Reprinsen mit 4. 5. und 6. Stimmen (Wolfenbüttel: Michael Praetorius, 1612)

Demantius, (Johannes) Christoph: Fasciculus chorodiarum: neue liebliche und zierliche, polnischer und teutscher Art, Täntze und Galliarden, mit und ohne Texten, zu 4. und 5. Stimmen (Nuremberg: David Kauffmann, 1613) [incomplete]

Getzmann, Wolfgang: Phantasiae sive cantiones mutae ad duodecim modos figurales (Frankfurt: Nikolaus Stein, 1613 [? earlier edns in 1610 and 1612]) [incomplete]

Rivander, Paul: Prati musici ander Theil, darinnen newe weltliche Gesäng, von 3. 4. 5. und 8. Stimmen ... benebens etlichen Paduanen, Intraden, Currenten und Täntzen, nach allerhandt Instrumenten (Ansbach: Paul Böhem, 1613)

Völckel, Samuel: Newe teutsche weltliche Gesänglein, mit vier und fünff Stimmen, auff Galliarden, Täntz, unnd musicalische Art, benebenst Cuorranten und Galliarden ohne Text (Nuremberg: Georg Leopold Fuhrmann, 1613)

Widmann, Erasmus: Musicalischer Tugendtspiegel: gantz newer Gesäng ... mit fünff Stimmen ... darbey auch newe Däntz und Galliarden mit vier Stimmen gestellt (Nuremberg: Abraham Wagenmann, 1613)

Brade, William: Newe ausserlesene Paduanen und Galliarden mit 6. Stimmen (Hamburg: Michael Hering, 1614)

Büchner, Johann Heinrich: Series von schönen Villanellen, Tänzen, Galliarden und Couranten mit 4 Stimmen (Nuremberg, 1614) [lost]

Franck, Melchior: Recreationes musicae, lustige anmutige teutsche Gesäng mit schönen Texten neben etlichen Galliarden, Couranten und Auffzügen ... mit 4. und 5. Stimmen (Nuremberg: Georg Leopold Fuhrmann, 1614) [incomplete]

Mercker, Matthias: Neue künstliche musikalische Fugen, Pavanen, Galliarden unnd Intraden auff allerley Instrumenten zu gebrauchen mit II. III. IV. V. und VI. Stimmen componirt (Frankfurt: Nikolaus Stein 1614) [incomplete]

Mercker, Matthias: Allen Liebhabern der edlen Musica ... publiziret (n.d.). Includes 3 instrumental fugas and a pavan, all a 5

Rivander, Paul: Neue lustige Couranten ... mit 4 Stimmen (Onoltzbach, 1614) [lost]

Selich, Daniel: Prodromus cantilenarum harmonicarum ... exhibens paduanas, intradas, galliardas, & courantes (Wittenberg, 1614) [lost]

Hassler, Hans Leo, and Haussmann, Valentin: Venusgarten, oder Neue lustige liebliche Täntz teutscher und polnischer Art, auch Galliarden und Intraden mit 4. 5. 6. Stimmen mit und ohne Text (Nuremberg: Paul Kauffmann, 1615) [incomplete]. 13 compositions by Hassler and 41 by Haussmann, repr. from various previous edns listed in EitnerQ

Selich, Daniel: Prodromus exercitationum musicanum exhibens Paduanas, Galliardas, Intradas, & Courantes, 4. 5. & 6. voc (Wittenberg, 1615) [lost]

Eichhorn, Adolarius: Schöne ausserlesene ganz neue Intraden, Galliarden und Couranten ohne Text mit 4. Stimmen (Nuremberg, 1616) [lost]

Engelmann, Georg (i); Fasciculus quinque vocum concentuum, cujusmodi paduanas & galliardes vulgo vocare solent (Leipzig: heirs of Thomas Schürer, 1616)

Franck, Melchior: Lilia musicalia: schöne, liebliche, fröliche, neue Liedlein, mit lustigen kurtzweiligen Texten unterlegt, sampt etlicher anmutiger Pavanen, Galliarden und Curranten ... mit vier Stimmen componiret (Nuremberg: Georg Leopold Fuhrmann, 1616) [incomplete]

Gross, Peter: Paduanen und Intraden a 5 (Zeitz, 1616) [lost]

Praetorius, Bartholomaeus: Newe liebliche Paduanen und Galliarden mit fünff Stimmen (Berlin: Georg Runge, 1616) [incomplete]

Brade, William: Newe ausserlesene liebliche Branden, Intraden Mascharaden, Balletten, All'manden, Couranten, Volten ... mit fünff Stimmen (Hamburg: Michael Hering, 1617) [incomplete]. Includes 3 compositions by Robert Bateman

Engelmann, Georg (i): Fasciculus sive missus secundus quinque vocum concentuum, cujusmodi paduanas & galliardos vulgo vocant (Leipzig: heirs of Thomas Schürer, 1617)

Schein, Johann Hermann: Banchetto musicale: newer anmutiger Padouanen, Gagliarden, Courenten, und Allemanden à 5 (Leipzig: Abraham Lamberg, 1617). Includes a pavan for 4 crumhorns

Schultz, Johannes: Viertzig neuwe ausserlesene schöne liebliche Paduanen, Intraden, und Galliard mit vier Stimmen, benebenst zwo chorigen Passametzen mit 8. Stimmen (Hamburg: Heinrich Carstens, 1617)

Simpson, Thomas: Opus newer Paduanen, Galliarden, Intraden, Canzonen, Ricercaren, Fantasien, Balleten, Allmanden, Couranten, Volten unnd Passamezen (Hamburg: Michael Hering, 1617)

Posch, Isaac: Musicalische Ehrenfreudt, das ist, Allerley neuer Balleten, Gagliarden, Couranten und Täntzen teutscher Art mit 4. Stimmen ... erster Theil (Regensburg: Isaac Posch, 1618). For a later edn see below, 1626

Schaeffer, Paul: 12 intradae & courants super modos 12 consuetos, cum una canzon 6 voc (Breslau, 1618) [lost]

Staden, Johann: Neue Pavanen, Galliarden, Curranten, Balletten, Intraden und Canzonen mit vier and fünff Stimmen (Nuremberg: David Kauffmann, 1618) [incomplete]

Widmann, Erasmus: Gantz neue Cantzon, Intraden, Balletten, und Courranten ... mit 5. und 4. Stimmen componirt (Nuremberg: Abraham Wagenmann, 1618)

Christenius, Johann: Omnigeni: mancherley Manier neuer weltlicher Lieder, Paduanen, Intraden, teutscher und polnischer Täntze, mit Texten und ohne Texte ... in fünff Stimmen gesetzet (Erfurt: Johann Birckner, 1619)

Praetorius, Michael: Musa Aonia Thalia, darinnen etliche Toccaten oder Canzonen mit B. Stimmen (Nuremberg, 1619) [lost]

Altenburg, Michael: Erster Theil newer lieblicher und zierlicher Intraden mit sechs Stimmen (Erfurt: Johann Röhbock, 1620)

Peuerl, Paul: Etliche lustige Padouanen, Intraden, Galliarden, Couranten und Däntz sampt zweyen Canzon mit vier Stimmen (Nuremberg, Abraham Wagenmann, 1620) [incomplete]

Praetorius, Michael: Filia: ander Theil Terpsichore (Leipzig, 1620) [lost]

Brade, William: Newe lustige Volten, Couranten, Balletten, Padouanen, Galliarden, Masqueraden, auch allerley Arth newer frantzösischer Täntz (Berlin: Martin Guth, 1621)

Cesare, Giovanni Martino: Musicali melodie, per voci et instrumenti, a una, due, tre, quattro, cinque, e sei (Munich: Nicolaus Heinrich, 1621)

Posch, Isaac: Musicalische Tafelfreudt, das ist, allerley neuer Paduanen and Gagliarden mit 5. dessgleichen Intraden und Couranten mit 4. Stimmen (Nuremberg: Abraham Wagenmann, 1621). For a later edn see below, 1626

Scheidt, Samuel: Paduna, galliarda, couranta, alemande, intrada, canzonetto, ut vocant, quaternis & quinis vocibus (Hamburg: Michael Hering, 1621)

Engelmann, Georg (i): Fasciculus tertius quinque vocum concentuum, cujusmodi paduanas & galliardas vulgo vocare solent (Leipzig: heirs of Thomas Schürer, 1622)

Jocolot, Claudius: Allerley Art französischer, teutscher, hispanischer and welscher Tänze mit 5. & 6. Stimmen (Jena, 1622) [lost]

Schaeffer, Paul: Pratum musicale: padouan, canzon, intrad, galiard, courant, ballet, volt, bransl, & choreas quas vocant polonicas, quam plurimas 4 voc. continens, inventiae, & cum basso generali editae (Leipzig: Caspar Klosmann, 1622) [incomplete]

Scheidt, Samuel: Ludorum musicorum secunda pars, continens paduan galliard, alemand, canzon, et intrad: IV. V. & VII. voc (Hamburg: Michael Hering, 1622) [incomplete]

Schultz, Johannes: Musicalischer Lüstgarte darinnen neun und funfftzig schone newe Moteten, Madrigalien, Fugen, Phantasien, Cantzonen, Paduanen, Intraden, Galliard, Passametz, Täntze, etc. ... mit 2. 3. 4. 5. 6. 7. 8. Stimmen (Lüneburg: Johannes Schultz, 1622)

Franck, Melchior: Viertzig neue deutzsche lustige musicalische Täntze, deren eins Theils mit schönen amorosischen Texten, die andern aber ohne Text uff allerley Instrumenten mit 4. Stimmen lieblich zugebrauchen (Coburg: Salomon Gruner, 1623) [incomplete]

Roth, Christian: Couranten Lustgärtlein, in welchem vier und siebentzig Couranten ... mit 4. und 5. Stimmen (Dresden: Wolfgang Seyffert, 1624 [incomplete], 2/1625)

Utrecht, Heinrich: Parnassi musici Terpsichore: hoc est, paduana, galliarda, alemanda, intrada, mascharada, aria, couranta, volta, quinque vocum, cum basso generali (Wolfenbüttel: Heinrich Utrecht, 1624)

Franck, Melchior: Neues musicalisches Opusculum, in welchem etliche gantz neue lustige Intraden und Auffzüg ... mit 5. Stimmen componiret (Coburg: Salomon Gruner, 1625) [incomplete]

Peuerl, Paul: Gantz neue Padouanen, auffzüg Balleten, Couranten, Intraden und Däntz ... mit dreyen Stimmen gesetzt und in zweyen Partibus und unterschiedlichen Tabulaturen zum Druck verfertiget (Nuremberg: Abraham Wagenmann, 1625) [lost]

Scheidt, Samuel: Tertia pars [Ludorum musicorum], continens paduan, courant, canzon, à 3. 4. 7. 8. voc cum basso continuo (Hamburg: Michael Hering, 1625) [incomplete]

Staden, Johann: Opusculum novum, von Pavanen, Galliarden ... mit vier Stimmen (Nuremberg: Simon Halbmayer, 1625) [lost]

Farina, Carlo: Libro primo delle pavane, gagliarde, brand, mascharata, aria franzesa, volte, balletti, sonate, canzone, a 2. 3. 4. voce, con il basso per sonare (Dresden: Wolfgang Seyffert, 1626)

Hetz, Adam: Choro musico ... 50 auserlesene Stück von den allerneusten und besten Pavanen, Allemanden, Couranten und Balleten ... mit 4. Stimmen (Strasbourg, 1626) [lost]

Posch, Isaac: Musicalische Ehrn- und Tafelfreudt (Nuremberg: Abraham Wagenmann, 1626) [incomplete]. New edition of the 1618 and 1621 publications (see above)

Schaeffer, Paul: Promulsis epuli musicalis, continens modulationes aliquot, vulgo dictas canzon, padovan, intrad, ballet, courant, galliard, volt, bransl, alamand, et choreae polonicae (Leipzig, 1626) [lost]

Farina, Carlo: Ander Theil neuer Paduanen, Gagliarden, Couranten, französischen Arien, benebenst einem kurtzweiligen Quodlibet ... sampt etlichen teutschen Täntzen ... mit vier Stimmen (Dresden: Gimel Bergen, 1627)

Farina, Carlo: Il terzo libro delle pavane, gagliarde, brand, mascherata, arie franzese, volte, corrente, sinfonie, a 3. 4. voci, con il basso per sonare (Dresden: Gimel Bergen, 1627)

Franck, Melchior: Deliciae convivales, das ist, Neue musicalische anmutige Intraden ... mit 4. 5. und 6. Stimmen neben General-Bass componiret (Coburg: Friedrich Gruner, 1627) [incomplete]

Michael, Samuel: Neue Paduanen, Intraden, Balletten, Alemanden, Auffzüge, Galliarden, Volten, Couranten und Schertzi, mit 5. 4. und 3. Stimmen sampt dem Basso pro organis (Leipzig: Michael Wassmann, 1627) [incomplete]

Scheidt, Samuel: Quarta pars [Ludorum musicorum], continens paduan, galliard, courant, canzon, a 3. & 4. voc (Hamburg: Michael Hering, 1627) [incomplete]

Bleyer, Nicolaus: Erster Theil newer Paduanen, Galliarden, Balletten, Mascaraden und Couranten, mit 5. Stimmen neben einem General Bass (Hamburg: Michael Hering, 1628) [incomplete]

Farina, Carlo: Il quarto libro delle pavane, gagliarde balletti, volte, passamezi, sonate, canzon, a 2. 3. & 4. voci, con il basso per sonare (Dresden: Johann Gonkeritz, 1628)

Farina, Carlo: Fünffter Theil neuer Pavanen, Gagliarden, Brand, Mascharaden, Balletten, Sonaten, mit 2. 3. und 4. Stimmen auff Violen anmutig zugebrauchen (Dresden: Gimel Bergen, 1628)

Vintz, Georg: Intraden, Couranten, Galliarden, Balletten, Alamanden und etliche Täntze auff polnische Arth ... mit vier und fünff Stimmen nebenst den Basso continuo (Erfurt: Johann Birckner, 1629)

Avenarius, Thomas: Convivium musicale, in welchen etzliche neue Tractamenta, als gar schöne und fröliche Paduanen, Galliarden, Couranden, Intraden, und Balletten sonderlicher Art offeriret werden ... mit 4. und 5. Stimmen (Hamburg: Michael Hering, 1630)

Michael, Samuel: Erster und ander Theil newer Paduanen, Balletten, Couranten, Allemanden, Intraden, Galliarden, a 3. 4. und 5 Stimmen (Leipzig, 1630) [lost]

Kassel, Landesbibliothek, 4° mus.23 (1st half of 17th century). 14 fugas by Moritz, Landgrave of Hessen-Kassel

The former library of Landgraf Philipp von Butzbach [lost MS]. According to Meyer, contained intradas, galliards etc. a 4 by C. Textor (MeyerMS, 251)

A few printed German treatises contain significant quantities of instrumental ensemble music.

Gerle, Hans: Musica teusch, auf die Instrument der grossen unnd kleinen Geygen, auch Lautten (Nuremberg: Hieronymus Formschneider, 1532, 2/1537, rev. 3/1546). Instruction book whose earlier editions include 15 vocal pieces intabulated for 4 Grossgeigen (2 are also printed in staff notation) and 2 vocal pieces intabulated for 4 Kleingeigen (fig.3). Some of the compositions are reprinted in the 1546 edition, which includes 21 pieces for 4 Grossgeigen and 2 for 4 Kleingeigen. Editions: L. Senfl: Sämtliche Werke, ed. A. Geering and W. Altwegg, vii (Basle, 1960); H. Gerle: Spielstücke, ed. H. Mönkemeyer (1964). Literature: A. Einstein: Zur deutschen Literatur für Viola da Gamba im 16. und 17. Jahrhundert (Leipzig, 1905/R1972)

Agricola, Martin: Duo libri musices, continentes compendium artis, & illustria exempla (Wittenberg: Georg Rhau, 1561). 'An introduction to music theory written for classroom use. On ff.E8 to the end are 54 textless pieces (mostly a 3 and some a 4) for use in connection with instrumental instruction' (BrownI). Edition: H. Funck, ed.: Instrumentalische Gesänge um 1545 (Wolfenbüttel, 1933)

Gumpelzhaimer, Adam: Compendium musicae, pro illius artis tironibus (Augsburg: Valentin Schönig, 1591, rev. 2/1595, rev. 3/1600, 4–13/1605–81). Elementary introduction to the rudiments of music; a revision, expansion and translation of Heinrich Faber's Compendiolum musicae pro incipientibus (Brunswick, 1548). The 1591 edition includes as musical examples canons a 2–8, with Italian, Latin or German words, and without words. Some of these are included, along with new canons, in the expanded edition of 1595, which also includes 12 wordless compositions a 4 , each illustrating the properties of a mode, and 6 ricercares a 2 by various composers listed in BrownI. Edition: A. Gumpelzhaimer: Zwölf kleine Fantasien, ed. F.J. Giesbert (Mainz, 1950)

Walliser, Christoph Thomas: Musicae figuralis praecepta brevia ... quibus praeter exempla, praeceptorum usum demonstrantia, accessit centuria exemplorum fugarumque, ut vocant, 2. 3. 4. 5. 6. et plurium vocum, in tres classes distributa (Strasbourg: Paul Ledertz, 1611)

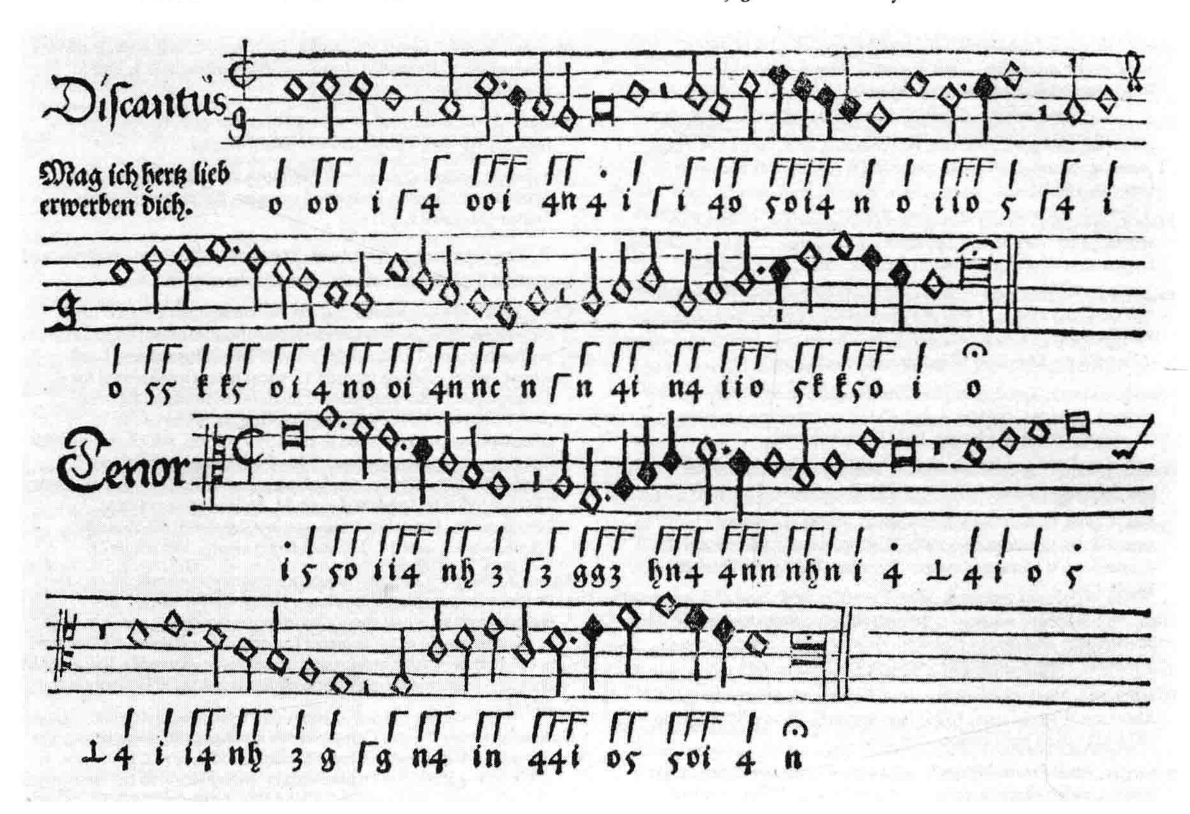
Caus, Salomon de: Institution harmonique (Frankfurt: J. Norton, 1615). Treatise on intervals and composition; it includes 3 fantasias a 3, one of which is by Peter Philips. Facsimile: (New York, 1969)



As with Italian sources, bicinia and canons have pedagogic implications, and form a distinct category.

Munich, Bayerische Staatsbiblithek, Mus.ms.260 (*c*1550). 100 bicinia, of which 30 are wordless except for incipits. According to Bellingham and Evans, 5 compositions appear to be instrumental in conception. Edition: B. Bellingham and E.G. Evans jr, eds.: Sixteenth-century Bicinia, RRMR, xvi–xvii (1974)

Lassus, Orlande de: Novae aliquot et ante hac non ita usitatae ad duas voces cantiones suavissimae omnibus musicis summè utiles (Munich: Adam Berg, 1577, 2/1590 [lost]). 2 partbooks. 12 duos with Latin words, and 12 without words or title. For further editions see §§2, 3, 5 and 7. Editions: Orlande de Lassus: Sämtliche Werke, ed. F.X. Haberl and A. Sandberger, i (Leipzig, 1904); HM, xviii–xix (1949)

Paix, Jakob: Selectae, artificiosae et elegantes fugae duarum, trium, quatuor, et plurium vocum (Lauingen: Leonhard Reinmichel, 1587 [lost], 2/1590, 3/1594). 41 canons, mostly without words. Some are reprinted from Glarean, Dodecachordon (1547). In the 1594 edition 3 compositions are dropped and one new one substituted

Lindner, Friedrich, ed.: Bicinia sacra (Nuremberg: Catharina Gerlach, 1591) [upper part lost]. 80 duos by various composers listed in BrownI, 12 of which are wordless

3. Discantus and tenor parts of Senfl's 'Mag ich herzlieb erwerben dich' (in staff notation and tablature) for four Grossgeigen from Gerle's 'Musica teusch' (Nuremberg, 1532)

Mancinus, Thomas: Duum vocum cantiuncularum (Helmstedt: Giacomo Luzio, 1597). 10 duos with words, and 16 without words or title

The following printed sources, all publications devoted primarily to vocal music, contain relatively few instrumental ensemble pieces (for further details see BrownI and MeyerMS):

T. Mancinus (1588), F. Lindner (1589), Fiori del giardino (P. Kauffmann, 1597), O. Vecchi (1600–01), F. Friederich (1601), H.L. Hassler (1601, rev. 2/1612 [incomplete]), H. Steuccius (1602 [2 publications]), K. Hagius (1604), H. Steuccius (1604), G. Aichinger (1606, 2/1609), G. Aichinger (1609 [incomplete]), A. Berger (1609 [incomplete]), H.L. Hassler (1609 [incomplete]), M. Franck (1610 [incomplete]), G. Hasz (1610 [incomplete]), M. Franck (1611), P. Peuerl (1613), P. Luetkeman (1615 [lost]), J.H. Schein (1615), J. Christenius: Gülden Venus Pfeil (1619 [incomplete]), V. Dretzel (1620), M. Altenburg (1620–21) [incomplete]), Giulio Belli (1621) [contents = G. Belli (1613) in §2], P. Lappi (1621 [incomplete]) [contents = P. Lappi (1614) in §2], V. Jelich (1622), M. Franck (1623 [incomplete]), G. Victorinus (1624), G. Aichinger (1626)

5. Netherlands. At least four early 16th-century Flemish sources contain substantial quantities of wordless pieces.

Florence, Biblioteca del Conservatorio di Musica, Basevi 2439 (? copied by Martin Bourgeois for an Italian recipient, *c*1508). Choirbook. Includes several wordless pieces a 3–4, some of which are of instrumental origin. Facsimile: Basevi Codex (Peer, 1990). Edition: P.G. Newton: Florence, Biblioteca del Conservatorio di Musica Luigi Cherubini, Manuscript 2439: Critical Edition and Commentary (diss., North Texas U., 1968). Literature: L. de Burbure: 'Etude sur un manuscrit du XVIe siècle, contenant des chants à quatre et a trois voix', Mémoires ... par l'Académie royale des sciences, des lettres, et des beaux-arts de Belgique, xxxiii/6 (1882), 1–44; H. Meconi: 'The Manuscript Basevi 2439 and Chanson Transmission in Italy', IMSCR XIV: Bologna 1987, 163–74; H. Meconi: 'Sacred Tricinia and Basevi 2439', I Tatti Studies, iv (1991), 151–99

Vienna, Österreichische Nationalbibliothek, 18746 (signed and partly copied by Pierre Alamire, 1523, sent to R. Fugger the elder). 5 partbooks. Over 50 wordless compositions a 5, a few of which are possibly of instrumental origin, especially among the concluding section of 6 Fors seulement settings.

Vienna, Österreichische Nationalbibliothek, 18832 (copied by Pierre Alamire, *c*1523, sent to R. Fugger the elder). 2 partbooks. 89 bicinia, without words or attribution. Literature: L. Nowak: 'Eine Bicinienhandschrift der Wiener Nationalbibliothek', ZMw, xiv (1931–2), 99–102; D. Kämper: 'Das Lehr- und Instrumentalduo um 1500 in Italien', Mf, xviii (1965), 242–53

The later Dutch repertory, contained entirely in printed sets of partbooks, is small and not very significant. Like the French, it is built round collections of dances, with only a few volumes of music in polyphonic style. Several volumes from the late 16th century onwards are reprints of Venetian titles.

Het derde musyck boexken (Antwerp: Tylman Susato, 1551). 57 dances a 4. Facsimile: (Peer, 1987). Edition: F.J. Giesbert (Mainz, 1936)

Liber primus leviorum carminum ... Premier livre de danseries (Leuven: Pierre Phalèse & Jean Bellère, 1571). 103 compositions a 4, all dances except for 2 fantasias at the beginning. Editions [all selections]: F. Blume: Studien zur Vorgeschichte der Orchestersuite im 15. und 16. Jahrhundert (Leipzig, 1925); E.F. Schmid, ed.: Tänze des 16. Jahrhunderts für vier Instrumenten (1926); E. Mohr: Die Allemande (Zürich, 1932); P. Phalèse: 'Löwener Tanzbuch', ed. H. Mönkemeyer (Wilhelmshaven, 1962); W. Twittenhoff, ed.: Tanzsätze des 16. Jahrhunderts (n.p., n.d.), ii–iii.

Literature: R. Oppel: 'Einige Feststellungen zu den französischen Tänzen des 16. Jahrhunderts', ZIMG, xii (1910–11), 213–22

Petit trésor des danses et branles à quatre et cinq parties (Leuven: Pierre Phalèse, 1573) [lost]. Literature: FétisB, i, 241

Lassus, Orlande de: Novae aliquot suavissimae cantiones 2 vocum (Leuven: Pierre Phalèse, 1577) [lost]. Same contents as Munich edition of 1577 (see §4)

Chorearum molliorum collectanea (Antwerp: Pierre Phalèse & Jean Bellère, 1583). 104 instrumental dances or dance suites a 4. Facsimile: (Peer, 1991). Editions [all selections]: D. van Reysschoot, ed.: 'Danses du XVIe siècle d'après le recueil "Chorearum molliorum collectanea" (1583) conservé à la Bibliothèque I. et R. de Berlin', RHCM, vi–viii (1906–8), suppls.; F. Blume: Studien zur Vorgeschichte der Orchestersuite im 15. und 16. Jahrhundert (Leipzig, 1925); E. Mohr: Die Allemande (Zürich, 1932); P. Phalèse: 'Antwerpener Tanzbuch', ed. H. Mönkemeyer (Wilhelmshaven, 1962)

Bicinia, sive cantiones suavissimae duarum vocum ... nec non & quibusvis instrumentis accommodae (Antwerp: Pierre Phalèse & Jean Bellère, 1590, 2/1609). 29 duos with French, Italian or Latin words, followed by 18 without words including several reprinted from the collections of Lassus (1577, see §4), and Lupacchino and Tasso (1559, see §2). Facsimile: Bicinia (Peer, 1987) [1609 edn]

Schuyt, Cornelis: Dodeci padoane et altretante gagliarde, composte nelle dodici modi, con due canzone fatte alla francese per sonare a sei (Leiden: C. Rafelengius, 1611)

Guami, Gioseffo: Canzonette francese a quattro, cinque et otto voci, per concertare con più sorte strumenti, con un madrigale passegiato (Antwerp: Pierre Phalèse, 1612) [incomplete]. Same contents as Venice edition of 1601 (see §2)

Moro, Giacomo: Concerti ecclesiastici (Antwerp: Pierre Phalèse, 1613, 2/1621) [both editions incomplete]. Same contents as Venice edition of 1604 (see §2)

Brade, William: Melodieuses paduanes, chansons, galliardes (Antwerp: Pierre Phalèse, 1619) [lost]. 45 dances a 5 (part reprint of earlier Brade volumes)

Lappi, Pietro: Sacrae melodiae (Antwerp: Pierre Phalèse, 1622). Same contents as Venice edition of 1614 (see §2)

6. Spain and Portugal. There are no Iberian prints containing instrumental ensemble music, and no manuscripts devoted to the genre. Indeed, very few such pieces survive at all, and some of them appear in Italian sources (such as Ortiz's 1553 treatise; see §2). The following three manuscripts do include some such music:

Segovia, Archivo de la Catedral [without shelf-mark] (Toledo, *c*1501–3). Over 200 compositions a 2–5, mainly wordless except for text incipits, by Franco-Flemish and Spanish composers. Some pieces are of instrumental origin. Literature: H. Anglès: 'Un manuscrit inconnu avec polyphonie du XVe siècle conserve à la cathédrale de Ségovie', AcM, viii (1936), 6–17; MME, i (1941); N.K. Baker: An Unnumbered Manuscript of Polyphony in the Archives of the Cathedral of Segovia, (diss., U. of Maryland, 1978); C. Martinez Gil: 'De tous biens plaine: un tema favorito en el cancionero de la Catedral de Segovia', Nassarre: Revista aragonesa de musicologia, viii (1992), 71–154; J. Banks: 'A Piece of Fifteenth-Century Lute Music in the Segovia Codex', The Lute, xxxiv (1994), 3–10

Madrid, Biblioteca del Palacio Real, 2-I-5 (Cancionero Musical de Palacio, *c*1525). Includes 2 wordless compositions: on f.223, Alta by Francisco de la Torre, a dance a 3 with the La Spagna tune as cantus firmus, and on f.244, O voy, a 4-part composition by Román. Editions: F. Asenjo Barbieri, ed.: Cancionero musical de los siglos XV y XVI (Madrid, 1890); MME, v, x (1947–51); HAM, i (1946), no.102*a* [Alta]. Literature: MME, i (1941); StevensonSM

Coimbra, Biblioteca Geral da Universidade, 48 (*c*1560). Principally a keyboard MS (see Sources of keyboard music to 1660, §2, V), but includes the 10 ensemble sonatas of Buus published at Venice, 1547 (see §2).

7. British Isles. Most of the British sources are discussed in detail in Edwards (1974). Principal editions, other than those detailed below and under individual composers, are as follows: MB, ix (1955, 2/1966) (Jacobean consort music); xv (1957, 3/1975) (Scottish); xl (1977) (mixed consort); xliv–xlv (1979–88) (Elizabethan). In the vast majority of sources, instrumental ensemble music is in polyphonic style (e.g. cantus-firmus settings, fantasias and similar pieces), usually in company with vocal works (e.g. motets, anthems, consort songs, chansons, Italian madrigals). Manuscripts considerably outnumber prints.

London, British Library, Add.31922 ('Henry VIII's Book', *c*1510–20). Includes a substantial number of apparently instrumental pieces a 3 and 4 by William Cornysh (ii), Henry VIII, Isaac and others. Edition: MB, xviii (1962, 2/1969). Literature: J. Stevens: 'Rounds and Canons from an Early Tudor Songbook', ML, xxxii (1951), 29–37; J. Stevens: Music and Poetry in the Early Tudor Court (London, 1961); W. Edwards: 'The Instrumental Music of Henry VIII's Manuscript', The Consort, xxxiv (1978), 274–82; D. Fallows: 'Henry VIII as a Composer', Sundry Sorts of Music Books: Essays on The British Library Collections Presented to O.W. Neighbour, ed. C. Banks, A. Searle and M. Turner (London, 1993), 27–39

XX. Songes (London, 1530). 4 partbooks [only f.1 of triplex, ff.1 and 45 of medius, and the complete bassus extant]. Includes 3 apparently instrumental pieces, 1 a 3 (Cornysh), and 2 a 4 (Fayrfax and Cowper). Literature: H.M. Nixon: 'The Book of XX Songs', British Museum Quarterly, xvi (1951–2), 33–6; C. Saunders: A Study of the Book of XX Songes (1530) (M.Mus. diss., U. of London, 1985); J. Milsom: 'Songs and Society in Early Tudor London', EMH, xvi (1997), 235–93

Edinburgh, University Library, La.III.483 and Dk.5.14–15; London, British Library, Add.33933; Dublin, Trinity College, F.5.13; Washington, Georgetown University Library. ('The Thomas Wode Partbooks', compiled by Thomas Wode of St Andrews, 1562–*c*1590). 2 sets of partbooks, 1 complete [S, T, B (GB-Eu La.III.483), A (Lbl) and 5 (IRL-Dtc)], the other incomplete [S, B (GB-Eu Dk.5.14–15) and A (US-Wgu) alone]. Includes an instrumental piece a 3 by Cowper, Tallis's 2 In Nomines a 4 , and 3 dances a 4 . The 2nd set of partbooks is a partial copy of the 1st. Literature: Elliott; J.C. Hirst: 'An Unnoticed Thomas Wood MS of the St Andrews Psalter, 1586', Notes and Queries, new ser., xviii (1971), 209–10; K. Elliott: 'Another One of Thomas Wood's Missing Parts', Innes Review, xxxix (1988), 151–5

London, British Library, Add.30480–4 (*c*1565–*c*1600). 5 partbooks. English anthems a 4 , followed by vocal and instrumental music a 4 and a 5 by Byrd, Parsley, Parsons, Weelkes and others

Oxford, Bodleian Library, Tenbury, 1464 (?Norfolk, *c*1570–75). Bassus partbook. Ff.1–15*v* contain In Nomines and other instrumental music a 5 by Byrd, Parsley, Tye and White, interspersed with Latin motets without the words. Literature: TCM, appx (1948), 8

London, British Library, Add.31390 (Chichester, 1578; fig.4). 'A booke of In nomines & other solfainge songes of v: vj: vij: & viij: pts for voyces or Instrumentes' (f.1). Contains instrumental music a 5–7 by Byrd, Parsons, Strogers, Tye, White and other English composers, alongside wordless motets, chansons and anthems by English and continental composers. Literature: J. Noble: 'Le répertoire instrumental anglais: 1550–1585', La musique instrumentale de la Renaissance: Paris 1954, 91–114; R. Ford: 'Clement Woodcock's Appointment at Canterbury Cathedral', Chelys, xvi (1987), 36–43; R. Rastall: 'Spatial Effects in English Instrumental Consort Music, c.1560–1605', EMc, xxv (1997), 269–88

London, British Library, Add.47844 (1581). Contratenor partbook. Includes 3 instrumental pieces a 5 and a 6 by Parsons, Strogers and Tye. The fly-leaves contain additional unidentified wordless fragments

Oxford, Christ Church, Mus.984–8 ('Dow partbooks' compiled by Robert Dow, Oxford, 1581–8). 5 partbooks. Includes sections of instrumental music a 5 by Byrd, Parsons, Strogers and other English composers. At the end is an instrumental La gamba and a

4. London, British Library, Add.31390, ff.46v–47r (Chichester, 1578): the five-part In nomine 'Blamles' by Tye; this instrumental ensemble music source is unique in its use of the table-book layout characteristic of English lute-song publications canon, both a 3 and apparently copied from Vincenzo Ruffo's Milan print of 1564 (see §2). Literature: D. Mateer: 'Oxford, Christ Church Music MSS 984–8; an Index and Commentary', RMARC, no.20 (1986–7), 1–18

London, British Library, Add. 32377 (?Dorset, *c*1584). Cantus partbook. Includes instrumental music (mainly In Nomines) by Brewster, Byrd, Alfonso Ferrabosco (i), William Mundy, Parsley, Parsons, Strogers, Tallis, Tye, White and others

London, British Library, Add.22597 (*c*1585). Tenor partbook. Includes instrumental music (In Nomines, etc.) a 4 and 5 by Byrd, Parsons, Pointz, Tallis, Tye, White and others

Oxford, Bodleian Library, Mus.Sch.E.423 (copied by John Bentley, personal servant of Byrd's friend and patron, John Petre, *c*1580–90). Contratenor partbook. Includes a few instrumental pieces a 5 by Byrd, Parsons, Tye and others; also, at the end, 2 fantasias a 6 by Byrd. Literature: D. Mateer: 'William Byrd, John Petre and Oxford, Bodleian MS Mus.Sch. E. 423', RMARC, no.29 (1996), 21–46

MS owned by David McGhie, and Oxford, Bodleian Library, Tenbury 389 (*c*1590). Upper 2 of a set of ?5 partbooks. Includes sections of instrumental music, mainly a 5, by Blankes, Byrd, Alfonso Ferrabosco (i), Johnson, Parsons, Strogers, Tallis, Tye and others. Microfilms of both partbooks are at GB-Cpl

Oxford, Christ Church, Mus.979–83 (copied by John Baldwin, *c*1580–*c*1600). 5 out of 6 partbooks [T lost]. Includes a few instrumental pieces a 3 and 6 by Baldwin, Bevin, Byrd and Parsons; also Hugh Ashtons maske a 3 with a 4th part apparently added by Whytbroke. Literature: R. Bray: 'The Part-books Oxford, Christ Church, MSS 979–83: an Index and Commentary', MD, xxv (1971), 179–97

London, British Library, R.M.24.D.2 (copied by John Baldwin, 1588–1606). Ff.1–89 contain, in open score, sacred and secular vocal music without the words, and 7 instrumental In Nomines a 4–6 by Baldwin, Robert Golder, John Mundy and Taverner. Ff.89*v*–188*v* are in choir-book format and contain vocal music, and instrumental music a 2–4, including fancies, Brownings and plainsong settings, by Baldwin, Bevin, Bull, Alfonso Ferrabosco (i), Giles and others. Facsimile: RMF, viii (1987). Literature: R. Bray: 'British Library, R.M. 24 d 2 (John Baldwin's Commonplace Book): an Index and Commentary', RMARC, no.12 (1974), 13–51

London, Public Record Office, SP 46/126, f.248; 46/162, f.244–6. Autograph fragment of 5-part consort piece by Bull.

Washington, Folger Shakespeare Library, V.a.408 (*c*1600). Cantus partbook. Ff.1–26 contain wordless treble parts for songs and motets by continental composers, and for instrumental In Nomines, fantasias etc., a 5, by Blankes, Byrd, Matthew Jeffries, Mallorie and others

Dublin, Trinity College, Press B.1.32. 6 partbooks. Copy of Tallis's and Byrd's Cantiones sacrae (1575) with MS additions (*c*1600), including fragments of instrumental ensemble music by Bradley, Dowland, Parsons, Philips, Woodcock and anon. Literature: R. Charteris: 'Manuscript Additions of Music by John Dowland and his Contemporaries in Two Sixteenth-Century Prints', The Consort, xxxvii (1981), 399–401

New Haven, Yale University, School of Music Library, Filmer 2 (*c*1600). 21 dances, together with untexted Italian vocal music; includes five 4-part fantasias by Thomas Lupo. Literature: R. Ford: 'The Filmer Manuscripts, a Handlist', Notes, xxxiv (1977–8), 814–25; Holman

London, British Library, Add.34800A–C (*c*1600–50). 3 partbooks. The earliest section contains wordless canzonets a 3 from Morley's 1593 print, and 6 wordless compositions by Blankes which may also be vocal in origin. A slightly later section includes a fantasia a 3 by Byrd, and a still later section includes a copy of Gibbons's printed fantasias of *c*1620 (see below)

London, British Library, Add.36484 (compiled by David Melvill, Aberdeen, 1604). Bassus partbook. Includes some instrumental music a 4 and 5 by Black, Lauder and others. Treble parts to some pieces are in GB-Cfm 31.H.27 (see below). Edition: C. Foster, ed.: Sixteenth-Century Scottish Fantasies and Dances: for Four Instruments (London, 1995). Literature: Elliott

'The Paston Manuscripts'. A family of sources compiled *c*1590–*c*1620, probably all for Edward Paston; they include motets, mass movements and songs by English and continental composers. The following also contain a little instrumental ensemble music by Byrd and his predecessors: GB-CF D/DP Z 6/1–2 (2 bassus partbooks); Lbl Add.29246 (lacking top part; lower parts arranged for lute in Italian tablature), Add.29401–5 (5 partbooks), Add.34049 (cantus partbook), Add.41156–8 (3 out of 4 partbooks); Lcm 2036 (3 partbooks); Ob Tenbury 341–4 (4 out of 5 partbooks), 354–8 (5 partbooks), 369–73 (5 partbooks), 379–84 (6 partbooks); US-Ws V.a.405–7 (3 out of 4 partbooks). Literature: P. Brett: 'Edward Paston (1550–1630): a Norfolk Gentleman and his Musical Collection', Transactions of the Cambridge Bibliographical Society, iv (1964–8), 51–69; P. Brett: Pitch and Transposition in the Paston Manuscripts', Sundry Sorts of Music Books: Essays on The British Library Collections Presented to O.W. Neighbour, ed. C. Banks, A. Searle and M. Turner (London, 1993), 89–118

London, British Library, Add.18936–9 (related to the 'Paston Manuscripts', early 17th century). 4 out of 5 partbooks. Includes instrumental pieces (mostly cantus-firmus settings) a 3–6 by Byrd, Cobbold, Stevenson, White and anon. Literature: P. Brett, ibid.

London, British Library, Add.17786–91 (? compiled by or associated with William Wigthorpe, Oxford, early 17th century). 6 out of 7 partbooks [missing book probably contained vocal parts only]. Includes instrumental fantasias and dances a 5 and 6 by Byrd, Dering, Leetherland, Martin Peerson, Okeover, Parsons, Ward, Weelkes and anon. Edition: E.H. Fellowes, ed.: Eight Short Elizabethan Dance Tunes (London, 1924). Literature: Monson

London, British Library, Add.29366–8 (early 17th century). 3 out of 5 partbooks [A and T lost]. Includes fantasias a 5 by Coprario, Dering, Alfonso Ferrabosco (ii) and Lupo. Literature: Monson

London, Royal College of Music, 2049 (early 17th century). 4 out of ?6 partbooks [? S and A lost]. Includes instrumental music (including fantasias, In Nomines and pavans) a 5 by Byrd, Alfonso Ferrabosco (i), Johnson, Parsons, Pointz, Weelkes and others. Literature: P. Brett: The Songs of William Byrd (diss., U. of Cambridge, 1965)

East, Michael: The Third Set of Bookes: wherein are Pastorals, Anthemes, Neopolitanes, Fancies, and Madrigales (London: Thomas Snodham, 1610). 6 partbooks. Includes 8 instrumental fancies a 5

London, British Library, Add.37402–6 (*c*1605–15). 5 partbooks. Italian madrigals a 5, lacking words and probably intended for instrumental use. They are followed by a rather disorganized mixture of vocal music by English composers, sometimes with words, more often without, and instrumental pieces (mostly fantasias) a 5 and 6 by Byrd, Lupo, Mundy, Parsons, Peerson, Tye and others. Literature: Monson

Oxford, Bodleian Library, Mus.Sch.D.212–16. 5 partbooks. The main section of *c*1610 is devoted entirely to In Nomines a 4 and 5 from Taverner to Gibbons. The later layer of *c*1625 contains In Nomines a 5 by Alfonso Ferrabosco (i) and (ii), Gibbons, Ives and Ward, followed by anthems with English words. Literature: Monson; R. Thompson: 'A Further Look at the Consort Music Manuscripts in Archbishop Marsh's Library, Dublin', Chelys, xxiv (1995), 3–18

Cambridge, Fitzwilliam Museum, Mu 687 (formerly 31.H.27) (belonged to Alexander Forbes, heir of Tolquhon, Aberdeenshire, 1611). Cantus partbook (bass parts, in the same hand, in GB-Lbl Add.36484; see above). Includes some instrumental music a 4 and 5 by Black. Literature: H.M. Shire and P.M. Giles: 'Court Song in Scotland after 1603: Aberdeenshire, I. The Tolquhon Cantus Part Book', Edinburgh Bibliographical Society Transactions, iii (1948–55), 161–5; H.M. Shire: 'Scottish Song-book, 1611', Saltire Review, i/2 (1954), 46–52

London, British Library, Add.29427 (before 1616). Altus partbook. A collection of MSS in various hands brought together and foliated in a single sequence by Thomas Myriell, apparently as a source for his MS anthology of 1616, Tristitiae remedium (Lbl Add.29372–7; contains no instrumental music). The partbook includes 10 anon. fantasias a 3, fantasias a 4 by Byrd, Alfonso Ferrabosco (ii) and Wilbye, In Nomines a 5 by Alfonso Ferrabosco (i) and (ii) and 2 canzonas a 4 by Guami. Literature: P.J. Willetts: 'Musical Connections of Thomas Myriell', ML, xlix (1968), 36–42; C. Monson: 'Thomas Myriell's Manuscript Collection: One View of Musical Taste in Jacobean London', JAMS, xxx (1977), 419–66; Monson

Oxford, Christ Church, Mus.61–6, and 67 (*c*1613–18). 5 partbooks and an organbook. Includes instrumental fantasias a 3, 5 and 6 by Colman, Coprario, Alfonso Ferrabosco (ii), Gibbons, Ives and William White. The organbook contains parts for some of these compositions, as well as for other vocal and instrumental music from partbooks now lost. The set was probably compiled for use in the household of Sir Henry Fanshawe. Literature: J. Aplin: 'Sir Henry Fanshawe and Two Sets of Early Seventeenth-century Part-books at Christ Church, Oxford', ML, lvii (1976), 11–24; Monson

Oxford, Christ Church, Mus.423–8 (*c*1615). 6 partbooks. Fantasias, In Nomines, pavans and almains by Coprario, Alfonso Ferrabosco (i) and (ii), Lupo, Ward and others

London, British Library, Add.29996 (*c*1548–*c*1650). Primarily a keyboard MS, but contains some consort music in open score (see SOURCES OF KEYBOARD MUSIC TO 1660, §2, vi)

London, British Library, Eg.3665 (? copied by Francis Tregian the younger *c*1609–19). Score. Includes fantasias a 4 by Philip van Wilder, Alfonso Ferrabosco (ii) and Eustache du Caurroy; also In Nomines and fantasias a 5 by Byrd, Coprario, Dering, Du Caurroy, East, Alfonso Ferrabosco (i) and (ii), Lupo, William Mundy, Parsons, Strogers and Ward. A final section includes several dances a 5 by Augustine Bassano, Alfonso Ferrabosco (i), Joseph Lupo, Philips and others. Facsimile: RMF, vii (1988). Edition: Augustine Bassano: Pavans and Galliards in Five Parts, ed. P. Holman (London, 1981). Literature: B. Schofield and T. Dart: 'Tregian's Anthology', ML, xxxii (1951), 205–16; correspondence in ML, xxxiii (1952), 98; E. Cole: 'L'anthologie de madrigaux et de musique instrumentale pour ensembles de Francis Tregian', La musique instrumentale de la Renaissance: Paris 1954, 115–26; R.R. Thompson: 'The "Tregian" Manuscripts: a Study of their Compilation', British Library Journal, xviii (1992), 202–4; Holman; A. Cuneo: 'Francis Tregian the Younger: Musician, Collector and Humanist?', ML, lxxvi (1995), 398–404; R.R. Thompson: 'Francis Tregian the Younger as Music Copyist: the Growth of a Legend', ML (forthcoming)

New York, Public Library, Drexel 4302 ('The Francis Sambrooke Book', named after an early owner; ? copied by Francis Tregian the younger *c*1609–19). Score. The sequel to the previous MS, including a pair of compositions for 6 basses and for 6 trebles by Alfonso Ferrabosco (i) and William Daman respectively, which may be instrumental, and a passamezzo pavan a 6 by Philips (printed in MB, ix, 1955, rev. 2/1962). Literature: H. Botstiber: 'Musicalia in der New York Public Library', SIMG, iv (1902–3), 738–50; see also previous entry

East, Michael: The Fift Set of Bookes, wherein are Songs full of Spirit and Delight, so composed in 3. Parts, that they are as apt for Vyols as Voyces (London: Matthew Lownes & John Browne, 1618). 3 partbooks. 20 compositions a 3, wordless except for text incipits. They may have originated as vocal canzonets a 5

Gibbons, Orlando: Fantazies of III. parts (London, *c*1620), reissued with the title Fantasies of Three Parts ... cut in Copper, the Like not Heretofore Extant (London, *c*1620). 3 partbooks. The 9 fantasias were reprinted in Paul Matthysz's Amsterdam edition of 1648

New York, Public Library, Drexel 4180–85 (copied by John Merro, Gloucester, *c*1620). 6 partbooks. Vocal and instrumental music a 3–6 by Byrd, Bull, Alfonso Ferrabosco (i) and (ii), Gibbons, Ives, Jenkins, Parsons and others. Edition: S. Beck, ed.: Nine Fantasias in Four Parts (New York, 1947). Literature: P.J. Willetts: 'Music from the Circle of Anthony Wood at Oxford', British Museum Quarterly, xxiv (1961), 71–5; A. Ashbee: 'Lowe, Jenkins and Merro', ML, xlviii (1967), 310–11; Monson

London, British Library, Add.17792–6 (copied by John Merro, Gloucester, *c*1620). 5 out of 6 partbooks. Vocal and instrumental music a 3–6 by Byrd, Coprario, Dering, Alfonso Ferrabosco (ii), Gibbons, Holborne, Ives, Lupo, William Mundy, Okeover, Tomkins, Ward, William White and others. Add.17795 also contains duets for treble and bass instruments, and lyra viol pieces a 2 and 3. Literature: P.J. Willetts, op. cit.; A. Ashbee, op. cit.; Monson

Oxford, Bodleian Library, Mus.Sch.D.245–7 (copied by John Merro, Gloucester, *c*1620). 3 partbooks. Consort music, mainly a 3, and music for lyra viols, by Byrd, Alfonso Ferrabosco (ii), Gibbons, Hume, Ives, Jenkins, Okeover, Tomkins and others. Literature: A. Ashbee, op. cit.

Edinburgh, University Library, La.III.488 (owned and possibly compiled by Sir William Mure of Rowallan, *c*1627–37). Cantus partbook. Includes several instrumental pieces. Literature: Elliott

Oxford, Bodleian Library, Mus.Sch.E.437–42 (*c*1630). 6 partbooks. Includes instrumental music a 3–6 by Coprario, Lupo, Philips and Ward. Edition: MB, ix (1955, rev. 2/1962) [selection]

Oxford, Bodleian Library, Tenbury 302 (2nd quarter of 17th century). Score. Fantasias and other instrumental pieces a 3–5 by Coprario, Cranford, East, Ives, Gibbons, Jenkins and Lupo. There is also some vocal music, without the words, by Marenzio and Morley

Washington, Library of Congress, M990.C66F4 (formerly ML96.C7895) (2nd quarter of 17th century). 2 sets of 5 partbooks (the 2nd set was formerly in the library of Arnold Dolmetsch). Fantasias a 5 by Coprario, East and Lupo. Literature: G. Dodd: 'The Coperario–Lupo Five-part Books at Washington', Chelys, i (1969), 36–40

As with Italian sources, bicinia and canons have pedagogic implications. Significantly, all but one of the main sources are printed.

Bathe, William: A Briefe Introduction to the Skill of Song (London: Thomas East, 1580s). Includes '10. sundry waies of 2. parts in one upon the plain song'

Whythorne, Thomas: Duos, or Songs for Two Voices (London: Thomas East, 1590)

Farmer, John: [Divers and Sundry Waies of Two Parts in One, to the number of Fortie, uppon one Playn Song (London: Thomas East, 1591)]. The first and last leaves are missing from the unique copy in GB-Ob; the last 2 canons, contained on the final leaf, survive in Lbl R.M.24.D.7.(1.), a MS copy of the whole print made in 1748

Morley, Thomas: The First Booke of Canzonets to Two Voyces (London: Thomas East, 1595, 2/Matthew Lownes & John Browne, 1619). Includes 9 instrumental fantasias a 2. An Italian edition was evidently printed by East, also in 1595, but no copies survive

Lassus, Orlande de: Novae aliquot et ante hac non ita usitatae ad duas voces cantiones suavissimae (London: Thomas East, 1598). Same contents as Munich edition of 1577 (see §4)

Byrd, William, and Ferrabosco, Alfonso: Medulla Musicke ... 40tie Severall Waies ... 2 Partes in One upon the Playne Songe 'Miserere' ... sett in Severall Distinct Partes to be songe ... by Master Thomas Robinson, and ... transposed to the Lute by the said Master Thomas Robinson (London: Thomas East, 1603) [lost, if ever printed]. Listed in E. Arber, ed.: A Transcript of the Registers of the Company of Stationers of London; 1554–1640 (London, 1875–94), iii, 102

London, British Library, R.M.24.C.14 (hand of Elway Bevin, *c*1611). Over 300 short canons by Bevin in score, mainly on plainsong cantus firmi, ranging from 3 to 20 parts

The earlier sources of ensemble dance music tend to form a distinct category. Towards the end of the period, however, dances more commonly occur side by side with ensemble music in polyphonic style (e.g. in GBL-Lbl Add.17786–91, Och Mus.423–8 and Lbl Eg.3665; see above).

London, British Library, Roy.App.58 (*c*1530). Includes 7 anon. dances a 3 in keyboard score, and some fragmentary compositions which may be for instrumental ensemble. See also SOURCES OF KEYBOARD MUSIC TO 1660, §2 (vi). Edition: EKM, i (1955)

London, British Library, Roy.App.74–6 (formerly in the Arundel–Lumley library). 3 out of 4 partbooks primarily devoted to English church music *c*1548. At the end of each book various later hands (before 1580) have added instrumental music, mainly dances a 4 and 5 in rough open score. Edition: MB, xliv [incl. inventory]. Literature: Holman; J. Milsom: 'The Nonesuch Music Library', Sundry Sorts of Music Books: Essays on The British Library Collections Presented to O.W. Neighbour, ed. C. Banks, A. Searle and M. Turner (London, 1993), 146–82

Holborne, Antony: Pavans , Galliards, Almains, and Other Short Aeirs both Grave, and Light, in Five Parts, for Viols, Violins, or Other Musicall Winde Instruments (London: William Barley, 1599). 5 partbooks.

Dowland, John: Lachrimae, or Seaven Teares figured in Seaven Passionate Pavans, with divers other Pavans, Galiards, and Almands, set forth for the Lute, Viols, or Violons, in Five Parts (London: John Windet, *c*1604).

Cambridge, Fitzwilliam Museum, Mu 734 (formerly 24.E.13–17). 5 out of 6 partbooks [T lost] bearing the arms of King James I, and containing, in Thurston Dart's view, the repertory of the royal wind musicians between about 1603 and 1665. The 2 earlier sections are devoted to wordless compositions a 6: the 1st section Italian madrigals, continental motets, and a fantasia by G. Bassano; the 2nd mainly almains by A. and G. Bassano, Alfonso Ferrabosco (ii), Guy, Harding, Robert Johnson (ii), Lupo and others connected with the court. Edition: T. Dart, ed.: Suite from the Royal Brass Music of King James I (London, 1959) [selection]. Literature: T. Dart: 'The Repertory of the Royal Wind Music', GSJ, xi (1958), 70–7; R. Charteris: 'A Rediscovered Source of English Consort Music', Chelys, v (1973–4), 3–6; Holman

London, British Library, Add.30826–8 (early 17th century). 3 out of 5 partbooks apparently associated with Trinity College, Cambridge, and possibly copied *c*1614 by Thomas Staresmore while a lay clerk there. Pavans and galliards a 5 by Amner, Dethick, Gibbons, Mason, Tomkins, Weelkes and others. Literature: I. Payne: 'British Library Add. MS 30826–28: a Set of Part-Books from Trinity College, Cambridge?', Chelys, xvii (1988), 3–15

Adson, John: Courtly Masquing Ayres, composed to 5. and 6. Parts, for Violins, Consorts and Cornets (London: John Browne, 1621). 6 partbooks

The peculiarly English mixed consort, consisting of specific instruments from different families, also has a repertory mainly of dance music.

MSS owned by Lord Hotham and deposited at Hull, Brynmor Jones Library, DDHO/20/1–3; Oakland, CA, Mills College Library, MS cittern partbook ('The Walsingham Consort Books', 1588). Partbooks for treble viol, flute, bass viol (Hull) and cittern (Oakland) [lute and bandora lost]. Music for mixed consort by Alison, Daniel Bacheler and others, probably compiled by a close associate of Bacheler for use in the household of Sir Francis Walsingham. Edition: MB, xl (1977) [selection]. Literature: W. Edwards: 'The Walsingham Consort Books', ML, lv (1974), 209–14

Cambridge, University Library, Dd.3.18, Dd.14.24, Dd.5.20–21 (copied by Matthew Holmes, Oxford, *c*1595). Partbooks for lute, cittern, bass viol and recorder respectively [treble violin and bandora lost]. Music for mixed consort by Alison, John Johnson, Nicholson, Reade and others. The bass viol part is bound with a separate MS (possibly copied by Alfonso Ferrabosco (ii), *c*1630) containing music for solo bass viol, and solos and duets for lyra viol. Edition: MB, xl (1977) [selection]. Literature: I. Harwood: 'The Origins of the Cambridge Lute Manuscripts', LSJ, v (1963), 32–48, vi (1964), 29 only; L. Nordstrom: 'The Cambridge Consort Books', JLSA, v (1972), 70–103

Morley, Thomas: The First Booke of Consort Lessons, made by Divers Exquisite Authors, for Six Instruments to play together, the Treble Lute, the Pandora, the Citttern [sic], the Base-violl, the Flute & the Treble-violl (London: William Barley, 1599, rev. 2/ John Browne, 1611). 6 partbooks [treble viol and lute of 1st edn lost; lute, cittern and bass viol of 2nd edn lost]. 23 compositions (with a further 2 in the 1611 edition), all without attribution although some settings may be attributed to Alison. Editions: T. Dart, ed.: Two Consort Lessons (London, 1957); S. Beck (New York, 1959). Literature: T. Dart: 'Morley's Consort Lessons of 1599', PRMA, lxxiv (1947–8), 1–9

London, Royal Academy of Music, Robert Spencer Collection. 'The Browne (formerly Braye) bandora and lyra viol manuscript' (*c*1600). 35 consort bandora parts, probably copied by or for Thomas Browne, whose son John added several compositions for lyra viol, *c*1630–40. Literature: N. Fortune and I. Fenlon: 'Music Manuscripts of John Browne (1608–91) and from Stanford Hall, Leicestershire', Source Materials and the Interpretation of Music: a Memorial Volume to Thurston Dart (London, 1981)

Rosseter, Philip: Lessons for Consort (London: John Browne, 1609). 6 partbooks [only flute, part of cittern and fragments of lute extant]. 25 compositions by Alison, Baxter, Campion, Farmer, Holborne, Kete, Lupo, Morley and Rosseter, arranged for lute, treble viol, bass viol, bandora, cittern and flute. Edition: MB, xl (1977) [selection]. Literature: I. Harwood: 'Rosseter's Lessons for Consort of 1609', LSJ, vii (1965), 15–23

There are two principal sources containing music for a chordal instrument accompanied by a bass instrument:

Holborne, Antony: The Cittharn Schoole (London: Peter Short, 1597). Includes 23 dances for cittern and a bass instrument (in staff notation), and 2 fantasias a 3 with cittern.

Hole, Robert, ed.: Parthenia In-violata, or Mayden-musicke for the Virginalls and Bass-viol (London: J. Pyper, ?1625)

A number of 17th-century lyra viol sources include ensemble music with at least one part notated in viol tablature.

Hume, Tobias: The First Part of Ayres, French, Pollish, and Others together (London: John Windet, 1605)

Ford, Thomas: Musicke of Sundrie Kindes (London: John Browne, 1607). Includes duets for lyra viols

Hume, Tobias: Captaine Humes Poeticall Musicke (London: John Windet, 1607)

Ferrabosco, Alfonso (ii): Lessons for 1. 2. and 3. Viols (London: John Browne, 1609)

Maynard, John: The XII. Wonders of the World (London: John Browne, 1611). Includes 6 dances for lute and viol, and 7 pavans for lyra viol with optional bass viol

See also GB-Cu Dd.5.20, Lbl Add.17792–6 and Ob Mus.Sch.D.245–7 above

The following printed sources contain only one or two instrumental ensemble pieces in publications devoted primarily to other kinds of music: John Dowland (1600), Francis Pilkington (1605), William Byrd (1611).

WARWICK EDWARDS

Sources of keyboard music to 1660.

1. General. 2. Principal individual sources: (i) Italy (ii) France (iii) Germany, Eastern Europe and Scandinavia (iv) The Netherlands (v) Spain and Portugal (vi) British Isles.

1. GENERAL. The following lists include sources up to about 1660, divided into broad geographical areas, and further divided within those areas into manuscript and printed sources arranged chronologically. The geographical divisions are somewhat unequal, section (iii) in particular covering a very wide area; but to separate even Poland from this division would have caused difficulties in connection with sources from such places as Breslau (Wrocław), Danzig (Gdańsk) or Thorn (Toruń), especially with a manuscript actually carrying a German inscription. By and large this division represents the sphere of influence of German organ tablature (old and new), though not all the sources cited make use of it, and there are some exceptional instances of letter notation outside the Germanic sphere. At the other end of the scale is the very small list of sources from the Low Countries, where it was nevertheless felt that this area had to be distinguished from the Germanic on the one hand and from the French on the other. Sources are listed under their area of origin, and not according to their contents nor even by the nationality of their scribe; thus the Netherlands section includes GB-Och 89, which may have been written by Richard Dering, and the third section has autographs of the Belgian composer Samuel Mareschall, which were written in German tablature in Basle.

The choice of terminal date was fairly obvious in the case of England, where the restoration of the monarchy introduced a new cultural epoch. There were advantages in choosing the same date for all countries, in view of the frequent copying of works from one country into manuscripts of another; and in fact the extension of the limits of these lists to 1660 has permitted the inclusion of a number of sources of a broadly retrospective character from about that date. But because of the difficulty of applying a rigid cut-off date, a selection of later manuscripts carrying a mainly earlier repertory has been given in the appendix to the appropriate list.

Sources not primarily intended for keyboard players are enclosed within square brackets. They include most (but not all) of the listed publications in separate partbooks, and are included if performance on a keyboard instrument is mentioned as a possibility on the title-page or if they are of particular importance in the history of keyboard music. Most works published in open score were intended primarily for keyboard, even though this was not always made clear on the title-page; but this was not always the case, and a few such works are therefore enclosed in square brackets. Many works intended originally for vocal or instrumental ensemble could be performed on a keyboard instrument, but they would normally have been embellished, sometimes heavily. A number of works survive in both forms.

Manuscripts are denoted by their present location, followed by the provenance and scribe if known, and a date, approximate or exact. However, manuscripts once belonging to the Musikabteilung of the Deutsche Staatsbibliothek in Berlin, but currently in Kraków, Biblioteka Jagiellońska, are marked *. While every effort has been made to verify the locations and pressmarks of eastern European sources, some of these may now be obsolete. Printed collections are preceded by the name of the publisher, who for the present purpose is regarded as editor of the collection. There follows a brief characterization of the source and its contents.

Separate partbooks are indicated by a series of separate foliations, e.g. 16, 14, 14, 13 ff., or 4 x 16 ff. The sign '+' connects different sections of the same volume. Keyboard sources are on two staves ('keyboard score') unless otherwise noted. Further subdivisions of this category are not noted. Other methods of notation are described as follows: open score (sometimes called 'keyboard partitura'); OGT is old German tablature (upper part in staff notation, lower part or parts in letters); NGT is new German tablature (entirely in letters); ST is Spanish tablature (in figures: the various systems are not distinguished here). A film of the source in the collection of the Deutsches Musikgeschichtliches Archiv, Kassel, is indicated 'DMA'. Modern editions are then cited. The entry is completed by references to literature other than published library catalogues.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

BrownI

W. Merian: Der Tanz in den deutschen Tabulaturbüchern des 16. Jahrhunderts (Leipzig, 1927)

Y. Rokseth: La musique d'orgue au XVe siècle et au début du XVIe (Paris, 1930)

F. Welter: Katalog der Musikalien der Ratsbücherei Lüneburg (Lippstadt, 1950)

T. Dart: 'New Sources of Virginal Music', ML, xxxv (1954), 93–106

B. Becherini: Catalogo dei manoscritti musicali della Biblioteca nazionale di Firenze (Kassel, 1959)

F.W. Riedel: Quellenkundliche Beiträge zur Geschichte der Musik für Tasteninstrumente in der 2. Hälfte des 17. Jahrhunderts (Kassel and Basle, 1960)

L. Schierning: Die Überlieferung der deutschen Orgel- und Klaviermusik aus der ersten Hälfte des 17. Jahrhunderts (Kassel, 1961)

H.C. Slim: The Keyboard Ricercar and Fantasia in Italy, ca. 1500–1550 (diss., Harvard U., 1961)

H.B. Lincoln: 'I manoscritti chigiani di musica organo-cembalistica della Biblioteca apostolica vaticana', L'organo, v (1964–7), 63–82

W. Apel: Geschichte der Orgel- und Klaviermusik bis 1700 (Kassel, 1967; Eng. trans., rev., 1972)

D. Heartz: Pierre Attaingnant, Royal Printer of Music (Berkeley and Los Angeles, 1969)

N. Bergenfeld: The Keyboard Fantasy of the Elizabethan Renaissance (diss., New York U., 1978)

B. Gustafson: French Harpsichord Music of the 17th Century: a Thematic Catalog of the Sources with Commentary (Ann Arbor, 1979)

M.L. Göllner: Tabulaturen und Stimmbücher bis zur Mitte des 17. Jahrhunderts, Kataloge Bayerischer Musiksammlungen, v/2 (Munich, 1979)

A. Silbiger: Italian Manuscript Sources of 17th Century Keyboard Music (Ann Arbor, 1980)

C.T. Johnson: Keyboard Intabulations Preserved in Sixteenth- and Seventeenth- Century German Organ Tablatures: a Catalogue and Commentary (diss., U. of Oxford, 1986)

M. Staehelin: 'Münchner Fragmente mit mehrstimmige Musik des späten Mittelaeters', Nachrichten der Akademie der Wissenschaften in Göttingen, I: Phil.-Hist. Klasse, (1988), 167–90

B. Brzezińska: Repertuar polskich tabulatur organowych z pierwszej połowy xvi wieku (Kraków, 1987)

R. Judd: The Use of Notational Formats at the Keyboard: a Study of Printed Sources of Keyboard Music in Spain and Italy c.1500–1700, Selected Manuscript Sources Including Music Writings by Claudio Merulo, and Contemporary Writings Concerning Notations (diss., U. of Oxford, 1988)

C. Bailey: English Keyboard Music, c1625–1680 (diss., Duke U., 1992)

V. Brookes: British Keyboard Music to c.1660: Sources and Thematic Index (Oxford, 1996)

For further bibliography see also KEYBOARD MUSIC, §I.

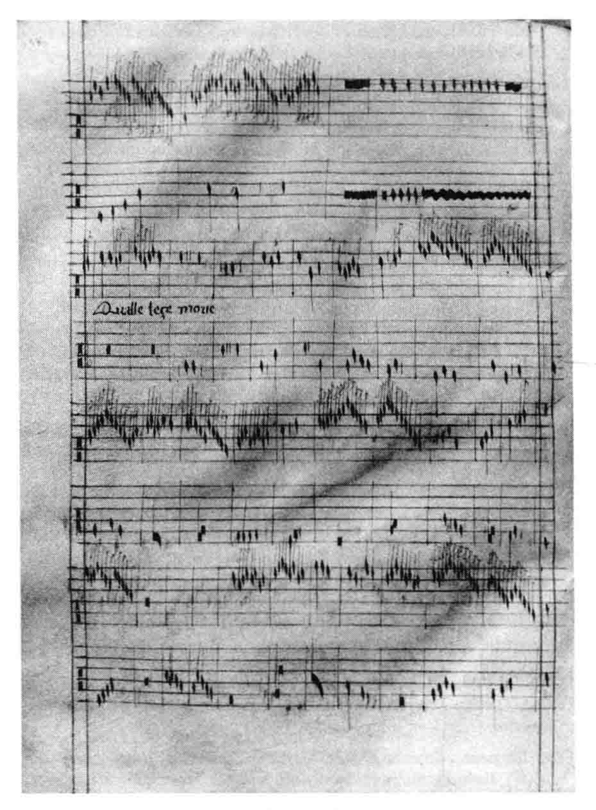
2. PRINCIPAL INDIVIDUAL SOURCES.



(i) Italy.

MANUSCRIPT SOURCES

Padua, Archivio di Stato, S. Giustina 553 (14th century). Fragmentary Gloria. Edition: PMFC, xiii (1987), 229 only. Literature: G. Cattin: 'Ricerche sulla musica a S. Giustina di Padova ...', AnnM, vii (1964–77), 17–41

[Assisi, Biblioteca Comunale, 87, f.108 (*c*1400). Edition: PMFC, xiii (1987), 228 only. Literature: A. Ziino: 'Un antico "kyrie" a due voci per strumento a tastiera', NRMI, xv (1981), 628–31. Not certainly instrumental]

Faenza, Biblioteca Comunale, 117 ['Faenza Codex'] (*c*1420). 79 ff., of which 52 contain intabulations of vocal works and liturgical cantus firmus settings (fig.1). Editions: MSD, x. (1961) [facs.]; CMM, lvii (1972); Literature: MGG1 ('Faenza, Codex 117'; D. Plamenac) D. Plamenac: 'Keyboard Music of the 14th Century in Codex Faenza 117', JAMS, iv (1951), 179–201; D. Plamenac: 'New Light on the Codex Faenza', IMSCR V: Utrecht 1952, 310–26; N. Pirrotta: 'Note su un codice di antiche musiche per tastiere', RMI, lvi (1954), 333–9; D. Plamenac: 'Faventina', Liber amicorum Charles van den Borren (Antwerp, 1964), 145–64; M. Kugler: Die Tastenmusik im Codex Faenza (Tutzing, 1972); A. Cavicchi: 'Sacro e profano: Documenti e note su Bartolomeo da Bologna e gli organisti della cattedrale di Ferrara nel primo Quattrocento', RIM, x (1975), 46–71; O. Mischiati: 'Indice descrittivo del manoscritto 117 della Biblioteca Comunale di Faenza', L'organo, xx (1982), 3–35; T. McGee: 'Instruments and the Faenza Codex', EMc, xiv (1986), 480–90; J. Caldwell: 'Two Polyphonic istampite from the 14th Century', EMc, xviii (1990), 371–80

1. Faenza, Biblioteca Comunale, 117, f.69v (formerly 68v): a keyboard intabulation of Bartolino da Padova's madrigal 'Qual lege move', using the top part and tenor only

Paris, Bibliothèque Nationale, nouv.acq.fr.6771 ['Reina Codex'] (French or Italian, 15th century). 2 pieces on ff.85–85*v*. Edition: C. Parrish: The Notation of Medieval Music (New York, 1957) [part facs.]. Literature: Y. Rokseth: 'The Instrumental Music of the Middle Ages and Early Sixteenth Century', NOHM, iii (1960), 405–65 (*see also*SOURCES, MS, §VIII, 2)

Groningen, University Library, Incunabulum no.70, Flyleaf fragment I.2 (early 15th century). Italian mensural notation, but possibly of northern origin. Literature: M. van Daalen and F. Harrison: 'Two Keyboard Intabulations of the Late Fourteenth Century on a Manuscript Leaf now in the Netherlands', TVMN, xxxiv (1984), 97–108 [with facs. and transcr.]

Bologna, Biblioteca Universitaria, 596.HH.2⁴ (*c*1480). OGT

Venice, Biblioteca Nazionale Marciana, ital.iv.1227 (*c*1530). 21 ff. 40 dances (1 now lost and 2 inc.) and 2 liturgical pieces, all anon. Edition: Balli antichi veneziani per cembalo, ed. K. Jeppesen (Copenhagen, 1962). Literature: K. Jeppesen: 'Ein altvenezianisches Tanzbuch', Festschrift Karl Gustav Fellerer zum sechzigsten Geburtstag, ed. H. Hüschen (Regensburg, 1962/R), 245–63; Silbiger, 1980

Castell'Arquato, Archivio della Chiesa Collegiata, collection of keyboard MSS (early 16th–early 17th century). Sacred and secular music by Giacomo Fogliano, Segni, Jacques Brunel, Veggio and later composers. Editions: CMI, i (1941) [part edn]; K. Jeppesen: Die italienische Orgelmusik am Anfang des Cinquecento (Copenhagen, 1943, enlarged 2/1960) [part edn]; CEKM, xxxvii

(1975). Literature: K. Jeppesen: 'Eine frühe Orgelmesse aus Castell'Arquato', AMw, xii (1955), 187–205; H.C. Slim: 'Keyboard Music at Castell'Arquato by an Early Madrigalist', JAMS, xv (1962), 35–47; Silbiger, 1980

Munich, Bayerische Staatsbibliothek, Mus.ms.9437 (*c*1550). Edition: Eine neue Quelle zur italienischen Orgelmusik des Cinquecento, ed. M.L. Göllner (Tutzing, 1982). Literature: Göllner, 1979

Florence, Biblioteca Medicea-Laurenziana, Acquisti e Doni 641 (*c*1565–1600). 62 ff. 'Intavolatura di M. Alemanno Aiolli'. Literature: F. D'Accone: 'The "Intavolatura di M. Alemanno Aiolli"', MD, xx (1966), 151–74; Silbiger, 1980

[Brussels, Conservatoire Royal de Musique, 26660 (1582). Transcription into open score of Maschera's Libro primo de canzoni da sonare, evidently from the now lost 1st edition of ?1582]

London, Royal College of Music, 2088 (1586). 22 ff. 11 pieces, of which the 1st at least may be from Facoli's lost 1st book of keyboard music. Literature: BrownI, 343; Silbiger, 1980

[Brussels, Conservatoire Royal de Musique, 26661 (?1588). Transcription into open score of Padovano's Il primo libro de ricercari, evidently from the 2nd edition of 1588]

Washington, Library of Congress, holds a volume of 26 ff. entitled Canzoni di Florientio Maschera a 4 voci novamente ristampate per i professori d'organo libro primo (Venice: Giacomo Vincenti, 1590). Open score. This was evidently the copy prepared for the printer. The contents are those of Maschera's 1st book of ensemble canzonas in a lost keyboard edition of 1590

[Florence, Biblioteca Nazionale Centrale, Magl.XIX.107 (II.I.295) (2nd half of 16th century). 50 ff. Open score. 3 anon. ricercares, 10 by J. Buus and 10 by C. Malvezzi transcribed from his Il primo libro de recercari a quattro voci (1577). Literature: Becherini, 1959]

[Florence, Biblioteca Nazionale Centrale, Magl.XIX.106bis (*c*1600–20). 42ff. Open score. Anon. romanesca, canzona and ricercare; 12 ricercares by Macque; 8 madrigals by P. Nenna. Literature: Becherini, 1959; Silbiger, 1980]

Naples, Biblioteca del Conservatorio di Musica, Mus.str.48 (olim 61.4.11) (*c*1600 and early 17th century). 65 ff. Music by Macque, Merulo, E. Pasquini, etc. Literature: Silbiger, 1980

Spello, Archivio di Santa Maria Maggiore [unnumbered MS] (*c*1600). 38ff. Literature: Silbiger, 1980

Florence, Biblioteca Nazionale Centrale, Magl.XIX.115 (*c*1600–20). 15 ff. 24 pieces: transcriptions of arias and dances. Literature: Becherini, 1959; Silbiger, 1980

Florence, Biblioteca Nazionale Centrale, Magl.XIX.138 (*c*1600–20). 48 ff. 23 pieces: transcriptions of laudi, arias and dances. Literature: Becherini, 1959; Silbiger, 1980

Bagnacavallo, Biblioteca Comunale, C.M.B.1 (early 17th century). 96 ff. Diruta, Merulo, Fabri. Literature: Silbiger, 1980; Judd, 1988

London, British Library, Add.40080 (early 17th century). 49 + 2 ff. (38 with music). 'Fioretti', attributed to Frescobaldi. Edition: SCKM, ii (1987) [facs.]. Literature: Silbiger, 1980

[Florence, Biblioteca Nazionale Centrale, Ant. di Galileo 9 (early 17th century, believed to have belonged to V. Galilei). 45 ff. Open score. Transcriptions of 77 madrigals by C. Porta, P. Vinci, P. Animuccia and A. Padovano. Literature: Becherini, 1959]

London, British Library, Add.30491 (written by Luigi Rossi, *c*1610–20). 51 ff. Mostly in open score. Keyboard works by Macque, Trabaci and others. Editions: CEKM, xxiv (1967); SCKM, xi (1987) [facs.]. Literature: Silbiger, 1980

[Bologna, Civico Museo Bibliografico-Musicale, Q34 (1613). 161 ff. Open score. Intabulations of works by Palestrina and others. Literature: Silbiger, 1980]

Rome, Biblioteca Vaticana, Barb.lat.4181, 4182, 4288 (early 17th century). 1, 5, 27 written ff. Literature: Silbiger, 1980

Los Angeles, University of California Music Library 51/1 (*c*1620–60). 32 ff. Literature: Silbiger, 1980

Rome, Biblioteca Doria-Pamphilij, 250A, 250B (*c*1630–50). 48, 50 ff. Literature: Silbiger, 1980

Assisi, Archivio di San Francesco [unnumbered MS] (*c*1640). 24 ff. Open score. Selections from Frescobaldi, Fiori musicali (1635), and 1 piece by Merula. Edition: MMI, i/1 (1976) [the Merula piece]. Literature: A. Curtis: 'L'opera cembalo-organistica di T. Merula', L'organo, i (1960), 141–51

Ravenna, Biblioteca Comunale Classense, 545 ['Libro di fra Gioseffo da Ravenna: opere di diversi autori'] (*c*1640). 116 ff. Pieces by Frescobaldi, E. Pasquini, Cifra, Cesare Argentino, Merula and anon. composers. Edition: SCKM, xii (1987) [facs.]. Literature: A. Curtis: 'L'opera cembalo-organistica di T. Merula', L'organo, i (1960), 141–51; Apel, Eng. trans., 1972; Silbiger, 1980

Nürnberg, Germanisches Nationalmuseum, 33748-V (olim 271-V) (*c*1640–60). 12 ff. Literature: Silbiger, 1980

Naples, Biblioteca del Conservatorio di Musica, 73 (olim 34.5.28) ['Cemino MS'] (written by Donato Cemino, *c*1650; an inscription on f.112*v* contains the date 1675, but this may have been added later). 142 ff. Works by Boerio, Salvatore, Frescobaldi, Macque, G. Anzalone, E. Pasquini. Editions: CEKM, iii (1964) [Salvatore], xii (1966) [Pasquini], xxx (1968) [Frescobaldi]. Literature: Apel, Eng. trans., 1972; Silbiger, 1980

Trent, Museo Provinciale d'Arte, Biblioteca Musicale L. Feininger [unnumbered MS] (*c*1650). 97 ff. 47 pieces including 9 by E. Pasquini. Editions: CEKM, xii (1966) [part edn]; SCKM, xvi (1987) [facs.]. Literature: Apel, Eng. trans., 1972

Rome, Biblioteca Vaticana, Chigi Q IV 24 (*c*1650). 56 ff. Editions: CEKM, xxxii (1968); SCKM, xv/1 (1989) [facs.]. Literature: Lincoln, 1964–7; Apel, Eng. trans, 1972; Silbiger, 1980

Rome, Biblioteca Vaticana, Chigi Q IV 25 (*c*1650). 69 ff. 14 pieces by Frescobaldi. Editions: P.A. Santini (1965); CEKM, xxx (1968); SCKM, i (1988). Literature: Lincoln, 1964–7; Apel, Eng. trans., 1972; Silbiger, 1980

Rome, Biblioteca Vaticana, Chigi Q IV 26 (*c*1650). 28 ff. Editions: CEKM, xxxii (1968); SCKM, xv/1 (1989) [facs.]. Literature: Lincoln, 1964–7; Apel, Eng. trans., 1972; Silbiger, 1980

Rome, Biblioteca Vaticana, Chigi Q IV 27 (*c*1650). 107 ff. Editions: CEKM, xii (1966), xxx (1968), xxxii (1968); SCKM, xv/2 (1989) [facs.]. Literature: Lincoln, 1964–7; Apel, Eng. trans., 1972; Silbiger, 1980

Rome, Biblioteca Vaticana, Chigi Q IV 28 (*c*1650). 72 ff. Editions: CEKM, xxxii (1968); SCKM, xv/2 (1989) [facs.]. Literature: Lincoln, 1964–7; Apel, Eng. trans., 1972; Silbiger, 1980

Rome, Biblioteca Vaticana, Chigi Q IV 29 (*c*1650). 101 ff. (music on 46 ff. only). Editions: CEKM, xxxii (1968); SCKM, xv/2 (1989) [facs.]. Literature: Lincoln, 1964–7; Apel, Eng. trans./ 1972; Silbiger, 1980

Rome, Biblioteca Vaticana, Chigi VIII 205–6 (*c*1650). 234 single sheets and booklets in 2 large envelopes. Editions: CEKM, xii (1966), xxx (1968), xxxii (1968); SCKM, xv/3 (1989) [facs.]. Literature: Lincoln, 1964–7; Apel, Eng. trans., 1972; Silbiger, 1980

Cologny-Geneva, Biblioteca Bodmeriana, Musik T.II.1 (*c*1650–70). 94 ff. Music by, and attributed to, Frescobaldi. Literature: Silbiger, 1980

Rome, Biblioteca Vallicelliana, Z.121 (c1650–60). 47ff. Literature: Silbiger, 1980

APPENDIX

A number of Italian keyboard sources of the middle to later 17th century are catalogued by Silbiger, in addition to those listed above. As precise dates are mostly uncertain, they are given here, in the order in which he lists them, with his estimate of date but without further information: London, British Library, Add.14246 (*c*1664–85); Assisi, Archivio musicale del Sacro Convento [unnumbered MS] (2nd half of 17th century); Bologna, Civico Museo Bibliografico-Musicale, AA/360 (*c*1640–80), BB/258 (*c*1700), DD/53 (2nd decade of 18th century or later; other estimates *c*1700; facs. in SCKM, x, 1987), Z.270 (?18th century: copies of Frescobaldi's Ricercari (1615) and Fiori musicali (1635)); Como, Archivio Musicale del Duomo, 820/40 and 820/55 (late 17th century); Florence, Biblioteca del Conservatorio, D.2358 (late 17th century); Modena, Biblioteca Estense, App. Campori 491 (olim γ.K.7.8.) (*c*1650–70); Rome, Biblioteca del Pontificio

Ataneo Antoniano [unnumbered MS] (*c*1650); Rome, Biblioteca Vaticana, Vat.Mus.569 ('Mutius MS', *c*1660–65; facs. in SCKM, xiv, 1987); Rome, Biblioteca del Conservatorio di Musica S Cecilia, A/400 (1st half of 18th century; other estimates *c*1700; facs. in SCKM, xiii, 1988); Venice, Biblioteca Marciana, It.IV-1727 (2nd half of 17th, or 18th century); Verona, Biblioteca Capitolare, MCXXIX (1703); Vicenza, Biblioteca Civica Bertoliana, Mus.ms. FF 2.7.17 (probably 18th century); New York ['Garofalo MS'] (late 17th or early 18th century; present whereabouts unknown).

In addition the following MSS are represented in SCKM: Berlin, Deutsche Staatsbibliothek, L.215 (B. Pasquini autograph), vol.vii (1988); London, British Library, Add.31501 (B. Pasquini, partial autograph), vol.viii (1988).

PRINTED SOURCES

Antico, Andrea, ed.: Frottole intabulate da sonare organi libro primo (Rome, 1517). 40 ff. Transcriptions of 26 frottolas. The copy in Rome, Biblioteca Polesini contains MS additions (trivial). Editions: K. Jeppesen: Die italienische Orgelmusik am Anfang des Cinquecento (Copenhagen, 1943, enlarged 2/1960) [part edn]; G. Radole (Bologna, 1970) [facs.]; C. Hogwood (Tokyo, 1984). Literature: Judd, 1988

Cavazzoni, Marco Antonio: Recerchari motetti canzoni composti per Marcoantonio di Bologna, libro primo (Venice, 1523; for illustration seeLEGER LINE). 38 ff. 2 ricercares, 2 motets, 4 chansons. Editions: CMI, i (1941); K. Jeppesen: Die italienische Orgelmusik am Anfang des Cinquecento (Copenhagen, 1943, enlarged 2/1960). Literature: Slim, 1961; Apel, Eng. trans., 1972; Judd, 1988

[Arrivabene, Andrea, ed.: Musica nova accommodata per cantar et sonar sopra organi, et altri strumenti, composta per diversi eccelentissimi musici (Venice, 1540). 4 x 16 ff. 20 ricercares and 1 motet. Reprinted as Musicque de joye (Lyons: Jacques Moderne, [1540s]). Edition: MRM, i (1964). Literature: O. Mischiati: 'Tornano alla luce ricercari della "Musica nova" del 1540', L'organo, ii (1961), 73–9; Slim, 1961]

Cavazzoni, Girolamo: Intavolatura cioe recercari canzoni himni magnificati composti per Hieronimo de Marcantonio da Bologna detto d'Urbino, libro primo (Venice, 1543). 28 ff. 4 ricercares, 2 chansons, 4 hymns, 2 Magnificat settings. Edition: O. Mischiati (Mainz, 1959–61). Literature: Slim, 1961; Judd, 1988

[Buus, Jacques: Recercari ... da cantare & sonare d'organo & altri stromenti ... libro primo a quattro voci (Venice: Antonio Gardano, 1547). 13, 14, 14, 12 ff. 10 4-part ricercares. Edition: Orgelwerke, ii, ed. T.D. Schlee (Vienna, 1983). Literature: G. Sutherland: 'The Ricercari of Jacques Buus', MQ, xxxi (1945), 448–63; Slim, 1961]

Cavazzoni, Girolamo: Intabulatura dorgano, cioe misse himni magnificat composti per Hieronimo de Marcantonio da Bologna detto d'Urbino (Venice, before 1549). 40 ff. 3 masses, 8 hymns, 2 Magnificat settings. The 3 masses were reprinted in Venice, probably between 1557 and 1570. Editions: O. Mischiati (Mainz, 1959–61); L'organiste liturgique, xxxiv, xli, xlviii (Paris, n.d.). Literature: Judd, 1988

Buus, Jacques: Intabolatura d'organo di recercari ... libro primo (Venice: Antonio Gardano, 1549; seeNOTATION, fig.73). 32 ff. 4 ricercares. Editions: M.S. Kastner (Hilversum, 1957) [part edn]; Orgelwerke, i, ed. T.D. Schlee (Vienna, 1980). Literature: G. Sutherland: 'The Ricercari of Jacques Buus', MQ, xxxi (1945), 448–63; Slim, 1961; Judd, 1988

[Buus, Jacques: Il secondo libro di recercari ... da cantare & sonare d'organo... a quattro voci (Venice: Antonio Gardane, 1549). 16, 16, 16, 14 ff. 8 ricercares. Literature: G. Sutherland: 'The Ricercari of Jacques Buus', MQ, xxxi (1945), 448–63; Slim, 1961]

Segni, Julio: Ricercari, intabulature da organi e da tocco (1550) [lost]

[Gardano, Antonio, ed.: Fantasie recercari contrapunti a tre voci (Venice, 1551, repr. 1559, 1593). 3 x 20 ff. Settings of Regina caeli by Willaert and Rore; 15 ricercares by Willaert, Barges, G. Cavazzoni and anon. composers. Literature: Slim, 1961]

Gardano, Antonio, ed.: Intabolatura nova di varie sorte de balli da sonare per arpichordi, claviciembali, spinette, & manachordi ... libro primo (Venice, 1551 see NOTATION, fig.97). 23 ff. Anon. dances. Editions: CEKM, viii (1965); Stainer & Bell, Keyboard Series, xxiii (1965); (Bologna, 1971) [facs.]; F. Cerha (Vienna and Munich, 1975). Literature: Judd, 1988

[Ortiz, Diego: Tratado de glosas sopra clausulas (Rome: Valerio Dorico, 1553; simultaneously pubd in Italian). 62ff. Keyboard material, all accompanimental, in open score (without barlines). Edition: ed. M. Schneider (Berlin, 1913, 3/1961/R). Literature: Judd, 1988]

[Padovano, Annibale: Il primo libro de ricercari a quattro voci (Venice: Antonio Gardane, 1556, 2/1588). 14, 15, 13, 11 ff. 13 ricercares. Transcribed into open score in Brussels, Conservatoire Royal de Musique, 26661. Edition: Ricercari, ed. N. Pierront and J.P. Hennebains (Paris, 1934)]

[Conforti, Giovanni Battista: Il primo libro de ricercari a quattro voci (Rome: Valerio Dorico, 1558). 4 x 17 ff. 15 ricercares]

Merulo, Claudio: Ricercari d'intavolatura d'organo ... libro primo (Venice, 1567, 2/1605). 42 ff. 8 ricercares

Merulo, Claudio: Messe d'intavolatura d'organo ... libro quarto (Venice, 1568). 74 ff. 3 masses and 3 Credos. Editions: J.B. Labat (Paris, 1865); CEKM, xlvii/5 (1991)

[Merulo, Claudio: Il primo libro de ricercari da cantare, a quattro voci ... libro primo (Venice: sons of Antonio Gardane, 1574). 4 x 16 ff. 19 ricercares]

Rodio, Rocco: Libro di ricercate a quattro voci ... con alcune fantasie sopra varii canti fermi (Naples: Gioseppe Cacchio dall'Aquila, 1575). 49 ff. Open score. 5 ricercares, 2 hymns, Salve regina and La mi re fa mi re. Editions: Salve regina in A. Valente: Intavolatura de cimbalo (1576), ed. C. Jacobs (Oxford, 1973); 5 ricercares and La mi re fa mi re, ed. M.S. Kastner (Padua, 1958). Literature: Judd, 1988

Valente, Antonio: Intavolatura de cimbalo: ricercate fantasie et canzoni francese desminuite con alcuni tenori balli et varie sorte de contraponti libro primo (Naples: Gioseppe Cacchio dall'Aquila, 1576). 46 ff. ST. 1 fantasia, 6 ricercares, etc. Edition: C. Jacobs (Oxford, 1973). Literature: Judd, 1988

Gardano, Angelo, ed.: Musica de diversi autori: la bataglia francese et canzon delli ucelli, insieme alcune canzoni francese (Venice, 1577). 27 ff. Open score. Chansons by Janequin, Crecquillon, Clemens non Papa, J. Courtois and Lassus. Literature: Judd, 1988

[Malvezzi, Cristofano: Il primo libro de recercari a quattro voci (Perugia: Pietroiacomo Petrucci, 1577). 4 x 10 ff. 10 ricercares. Complete transcription into open score in Florence, Biblioteca Nazionale Centrale, Magl.XIX.107]

Rore, Cipriano de: Tutti i madrigali ... a quattro voci, spartiti et accommodati per sonar d'ogni sorte d'instrumento perfetto (Venice: Angelo Gardane, 1577). 32 ff. Open score. 36 madrigals without texts. Literature: Judd, 1988

Valente, Antonio: Versi spirituali sopra tutte le note, con diversi canoni spartiti per sonar negli organi, messe, vespere, et altri officii divini (Naples: heirs of Mattio Cancer, 1580). 56 ff. Open score. 43 verses on C, D, E, F, G, A, B♭, E♭. Edition: I. Fuser (Padua, 1958). Literature: Judd, 1988

[Maschera, Florentio: Libro primo de canzoni da sonare, a quattro voci (Brescia, ?1582 [lost], 2/1584, 3/1588, 4/1590 [lost], 5/1593, 6/1596, 7/1604, 8/1607, 9/1621). 4 x 12 ff. in 1584 edition. Copied into open score in Brussels, Conservatoire Royal de Musique, 26660; MS printers' copy for an edition in open score, 1590, in Washington, Library of Congress (see above). 21 canzonas. Edition and literature: W.E. McKee: The Music of Florentio Maschera (1540–1584) (diss., North Texas State College, 1958)]

Bariolla, Ottavio: Ricercate per suonar l'organo (Milan, 1585) [lost, but reproduced in Turin, Biblioteca Nazionale Universitaria, Dono Renzo Giordano 8 (VIII), ff.67*v*–94. Edition: CEKM, xlvi (1986)]

Facoli, Marco: Il primo libro d'intavolatura d'arpicordo [lost]. ?1 piece in London, Royal College of Music, 2088 (1586)

Verovio, Simone, ed.: Diletto spirituale: canzonette a tre et a quattro voci composte da diversi ecc.mi musici ... con l'intavolatura del cimbalo et liuto (Rome, 1586, repr. 1590 [lost], 1592). 24 ff. Includes keyboard score (for illustration seeVEROVIO, SIMONE). An edition for voices only was also first published in 1586. 7 canons and 22 other works, all originally for voices. Literature: Judd, 1988

Facoli, Marco: Il secondo libro d'intavolatura di balli d'arpicordo, pass'e mezzi, saltarelli, paduoane, & alcuni aeri novi dilettevoli da cantar ogni sorte de rima (Venice: Angelo Gardane, 1588). 34 ff. 22 dances, etc. Editions: CEKM, ii (1963); F. Cerha: Intabulatura nova (Vienna and Munich, 1975) [part edn]. Literature: W. Apel: 'Tänze und Arien für Klavier aus dem Jahre 1588', AMw, xvii (1960), 51–60; Judd, 1988

Verovio, Simone, ed.: Ghirlanda di fioretti musicali, composta da diversi ecc[ti] musici a 3. voci, con lintavolatura del cimbalo, et liuto (Rome, 1589, repr. in 3 vols., 1591). 27 ff. in 1589 edition. 25 works, originally for voices, by various composers listed in RISM 1589[11]. Literature: Judd, 1988

Maschera, Florentio: Canzoni ... a 4 (Venice: Giacomo Vincenti, 1590) [lost]. Evidently an open-score edition of the ensemble canzonas of 1582 (see above, Washington, Library of Congress)

Bertoldo, Sperindio: Canzoni francese intavolate per sonar d'organo (Venice: Giacomo Vincenti, 1591). 16 ff. Transcriptions of 4 chansons, 2 by Crecquillon and 1 each by Janequin and Clemens non Papa. Edition: CEKM, xxxiv (1969). Literature: J.R. Carruth: The Organ Works of Sperindio Bertoldo (diss., Cornell U., 1948); Judd, 1988

Bertoldo, Sperindio: Tocate ricercari et canzoni francese intavolate per sonar d'organo (Venice: Giacomo Vincenti, 1591). 16 ff. 2 toccatas, 3 ricercares and 1 canzon francese. Edition: CEKM, xxxiv (1969). Literature: J.R. Carruth: The Organ Works of Sperindio Bertoldo (diss., Cornell U., 1948); Judd, 1988

Verovio, Simone, ed.: Canzonette a quattro voci, composte da diversi ecc[ti] musici, con l'intavolatura del cimbalo et del liuto (Rome, 1591; repr. without intabulations, 1597). 22 ff. 20 works originally for voices. Edition: Chansons italiennes (Leipzig, n.d.). Literature: Judd, 1988

Asola, Giammateo, ed.: Canto fermo sopra messe, hinni, et altre cose ecclesiastiche (Venice: Giacomo Vincenti, 1592; 2/1596, 3/1603, 4/1616). 32 ff. 4 masses, 3 Credos, hymns, Magnificat settings, antiphons, Te Deum. Literature: Judd, 1988

Merulo, Claudio: Canzoni d'intavolatura d'organo ... a quattro voci, fatte alla francese ... libro primo (Venice: Angelo Gardane, 1592). 43 ff. 9 canzonas. Edition: P. Pidoux (Kassel, 1941). Literature: Judd, 1988

Radino, Giovanni Maria: Il primo libro d'intavolatura di balli d'arpicordo (Venice: Giacomo Vincenti, 1592). 26 ff. 7 dances. Editions: R.E. Harding (Cambridge, 1949); CEKM, xxxiii (1968). Literature: Judd, 1988

Diruta, Girolamo, ed.: Il transilvano: dialogo sopra il vero modo di sonar organi, et istromenti da penna (Venice: Giacomo Vincenti, 1593, repr. 1597, 1612, 1625). 40 ff. in 1st edition. Manual of instruction with 13 pieces by various composers including 4 by Diruta. Edition: L. Cervelli (Bologna, 1969) [facs.]. Literature: Judd, 1988

Gabrieli, Andrea and Giovanni: Intonationi d'organo ... composte sopra tutti li dodeci toni della musica (Venice: Angelo Gardane, 1593). 44 ff. 22 intonations by Giovanni, 8 intonations and 4 toccatas. Editions: P. Pidoux (Kassel, 1952), i [Andrea]; S. dalla Libera (Milan, 1957–9), i [Giovanni]; (Bologna, 1972) [facs.]; MSD, xxviii (1972) [complete]. Literature: Judd, 1988. References to an earlier edn of A. Gabrieli's kbd works rest on doubtful authority.

Gabrieli, Andrea and Giovanni: Ricercari di Andrea Gabrieli ... composti & tabulati per ogni sorte di stromenti da tasti ... libro secondo (Venice: Angelo Gardane, 1595). 44 ff. 13 ricercares, 11 by Andrea and 2 by Giovanni. Editions: P. Pidoux (Kassel, 1952), ii–iii [Andrea]; S. dalla Libera (Milan, 1957–9), i [Giovanni]. Literature: Judd, 1988

Verovio, Simone, ed.: Lodi della musica a.3. voci, composte da diversi ecc[ti] musici con l'intavolat[a] del cimbalo e liuto (Rome, 1595). 20 ff. 18 works by various composers, originally for voices. Literature: Judd, 1988

Gabrieli, Andrea: Il terzo libro de ricercari ... insieme uno motetto, dui madrigaletti, & uno capricio sopra il pass'è mezo antico (Venice: Angelo Gardane, 1596). 44 ff. 6 ricercares, Fantasia allegra, Cantate Domino, 2 madrigals, Passamezzo antico. Edition: P. Pidoux (Kassel, 1952), i, iii, iv. Literature: Judd, 1988

[Raval, Sebastián: Il primo libro di ricercari a quatro voci cantabili per liuti, cimbali, et viole d'arco (Palermo: Giovan Antonio de' Franceschi, 1596). 4 x 12 ff. 17 ricercares, Viderunt te atque Deus per organum, 4 canons]

Merulo, Claudio: Toccate d'intavolatura d'organo ... libro primo (Rome: Simone Verovio, 1598). 43 ff. 9 toccatas. Edition: S. dalla Libera (Milan, 1959), i. Literature: Judd, 1988

Vincenti, Giacomo, ed.: Intavolatura d'organo facilissima, accommodata in versetti sopra gli otto tuoni ecclesiastici (Venice, 1598). 17 ff. 16 versetti. Edition: Altitalienische Versetten, ed. M.S. Kastner (Mainz and new York, 1957). Literature: M.S. Kastner: 'Una intavolatura d'organo italiana del 1598', CHM, ii (1957), 237–43; Judd, 1988

[Borgo, Cesare: for an intabulation of his Canzoni per sonare (Venice, 1599), see Turin, Biblioteca Nazionale Universitaria, Raccolta Mauro Foà 1 (X); also, in part, in Pelplin, Biblioteka Seminarium, 308a. Edition: G. Gentili Verona (Padua, 1985)]

Pellegrini, Vincenzo: Canzoni de intavolatura d'organo fatte alla francese ... libro primo (Venice: Giacomo Vincenti, 1599). 61 ff. 13 canzonas. Edition: CEKM, xxxv (1972). Literature: Judd, 1988

[Rovigo, Francesco, and Trofeo, Ruggier: Partitura della canzoni da suonare a quattro, & a otto (Milan: Filippo Lomazzo, ?1600). 103 pp. Open score. 17 4-part, 2 8-part canzonas. Literature: Judd, 1988 (?1613)]

[Mortaro, Antonio: Primo libro de canzoni da sonare (Venice: Amadino, 1600). Edition (based also on Turin, Biblioteca Nazionale Universitaria, Raccolta Mauro Foà 1 (X)): CEKM, xxii (1995)

Anerio, Giovanni Francesco: Gagliarde a quattro voci intavolate per sonare sul cimbalo et sul liuto ... libro primo ([Rome: Simone Verovio], *c*1600). 10ff. 16 galliards. Literature: Judd, 1988

[Guami, Gioseffo: Partidura per sonare delle canzonette alla francese (Venice: Giacomo Vincenti, 1601). 41 ff. Open score. 20 compositions. Literature: Judd, 1988]

[Banchieri, Adriano: Fantasie overo canzoni alla francese per suonare nell'organo et altri stromenti musicali, a quattro voci (Venice: Ricciardo Amadino, 1603). 4 x 22 pp. 21 fantasias]

Mayone, Ascanio: Primo libro di diversi capricci per sonare (Naples: Constantino Vitale, 1603). 100 pp. 4 ricercares, 4 canzonas, 1 madrigal, 5 toccatas, 21 partite on Ruggiero, 10 partite on Fidele. Edition: C. Stembridge (Padua, 1981). Literature: Judd, 1988

Trabaci, Giovanni Maria: Ricercate, canzone franzese, capricci, canti fermi, gagliarde, partite diverse, toccate, durezze, ligature, consonanze stravaganti, et un madrigale passegiato nel fine ... primo libro (Naples: Constantino Vitale, 1603). 122 pp. 12 ricercares, 7 canzonas, etc, as title-page. Edition: AMI, iii (1959) [part edn]. Literature: Judd, 1988

[Beretta, Lodovico: Partitura del primo libro delle canzoni (Milan: Agostino Tradate, 1604). 42 pp. Open score. 17 canzonas a 4, 2 a 8. Literature: Judd, 1988

Merulo, Claudio: Toccate d'intavolatura d'organo ... libro secondo (Rome: Simone Verovio, 1604). 49 pp. 10 toccatas. Edition: S. dalla Libera (Milan, 1959), ii. Literature: Judd, 1988

Padovano, Annibale: Toccate et ricercari d'organo (Venice: Angelo Gardane, 1604). 39 ff. 3 toccatas, 2 ricercares, and 5 toccatas 'd'Incerto' (i.e. anon.). Editions: F. Benetti (Padua, 1962); CEKM, xxxiv (1969). Literature: Judd, 1988

Banchieri, Adriano: L'organo suonarino ... opera terza decima (Venice: Ricciardo Amadino, 1605; 2/1611, repr. 1620, 'opera ventesima quinta'; 3/1622, repr. 1627, 1638, 'opera xxxxiii ... appresso Alessandro Vincenti'). 125, 105 and 159 pp. in the 3 editions respectively. Many liturgical and other pieces divided into 5 'registri' (6 in the 3rd edn). Editions: AMI, iii (1959) [part edn]; G. Cattin (Amsterdam, n.d.) [facs.]. Literature: H.-J. Wilbert: 'Le messe organistiche sul canto fermo di Adriano Banchieri', L'organo, x (1972), 213–22; Judd, 1988

Gabrieli, Andrea: Canzoni alla francese et ricercari ariosi, tabulati per sonar sopra istromenti da tasti ... libro quinto (Venice: Angelo Gardane, 1605). 44 ff. 5 canzonas and 7 ricercares. Edition: P. Pidoux (Kassel, 1952), iv. Literature: Judd, 1988. No copy of the 4th Book in this series has survived.

Gabrieli, Andrea: Canzoni alla francese per sonar sopra stromenti da tasti ... libro sesto et ultimo (Venice: Angelo Gardane, 1605). 43 ff. 9 pieces. Edition: P. Pidoux (Kassel, 1952), v. Literature: Judd, 1988

[Taegio, Domenico Rognoni: Canzoni à 4 & 8 voci (Milan: heirs of Simon Tini, and Filippo Lomazzo, 1605). 4 partbooks and open score. 4 x 21 pp., 121 pp. 17 canzonas a 4, 4 a 8. Literature: Judd, 1988

[Balbi, Aloisio: Partitura delli concerti ecclesiastici ... per sonare nell'organo ò altri instrumenti, con una canzone a quattro (Venice: Alessandro Raverii, 1606). 60 pp. Open score. 89 motets with text incipits only, 1 canzona]

Cima, Giovanni Paolo: Partito de ricercari & canzoni alla francese (Milan: heirs of Simon Tini, and Filippo Lomazzo, 1606). 95 pp. Open score. 7 ricercares, 16 canzonas, etc. Edition: CEKM, xx (1969). Literature: Judd, 1988

Merulo, Claudio: Libro secondo di canzoni d'intavolatura d'organo ... a quattro voci, fatte alla francese (Venice: Angelo Gardane and brothers, 1606). 19 ff. 11 canzonas. Literature: Judd, 1988

[Banchieri, Adriano: Eclesiastiche sinfonie dette canzoni in aria francese, a quattro voci ... opera sedicesima (Venice: Ricciardo Amadino, 1607). 4 x 20, 21 ff. (basso seguente). 14 sinfonias and 6 concertos; the preface makes it clear that these works may be intabulated for keyboard alone. Literature: Judd, 1988]

[Merulo, Claudio: Ricercari de cantare a quattro voci ... libro secondo (Venice: Angelo Gardane and brothers, 1607). 4 x 33 ff. 21 ricercares]

Antegnati, Costanzo: L'Antegnata: intavolatura de ricercari d'organo ... opera decimasesta (Venice: Angelo Gardane and brothers, 1608). 15 pp. 12 ricercares, 1 in each tone, and short treatise. Edition: CEKM, ix (1965). Literature: Judd, 1988

Frescobaldi, Girolamo: Il primo libro delle fantasie a quattro (Milan: heirs of Simon Tini, and Filippo Lomazzo, 1608). 75 pp. Open score. 12 fantasias. Edition: P. Pidoux (Kassel, 1948–54), i. Literature: Judd, 1988

[Lucino, Francesco, ed.: Partitura delli concerti de diversi eccell. auttori (Milan: heirs of Simon Tini, and Filippo Lomazzo, 1608; rev. 2/1612 with Aggiunta nuova, repr. 1616). 119 pp. in the 1st edition., 112 + 37 pp. in the 2nd. Open score. Numerous works originally for voices (for the Seconda aggiunta see the publication of F. Lomazzo, 1617)]

[Merulo, Claudio: Ricercari da cantare a quattro voci ... libro terzo (Venice: Angelo Gardane and brothers, 1608). 4 x 29 ff. 20 ricercares]

[Banchieri, Adriano: Conclusioni del suono dell'organo (Bologna: heirs of Giovanni Rossi, 1609 etc.). Editions: (Milan, 1934; Bologna, 1968; New York, 1975) [facss.]. Literature: FétisB, i. 233 (refers to an earlier edition, Conclusioni per organo, Lucca: Silvestre Marchetti, 1591); Judd, 1988. This theoretical work contains no musical examples but is an important source for contemporary practice.]

Mayone, Ascanio: Secondo libro di diversi capricci per sonare (Naples: Gio. Battista Gargano and Lucretio Nucci, 1609). 152 ff. 5 ricercares, 4 canzonas, 5 toccatas, 3 sets of variations. Editions: Orgue et liturgie, lxiii (1964), lxv (1965); C. Stembridge (Padua, 1984). Literature: Judd, 1988

[Cima, Giovanni Paolo: Partitura delli concerti ecclesiastici (Milan: heirs of Simon Tini, and Filippo Lomazzo, 1610). 66 ff. Numerous vocal and some instrumental works, none originally for keyboard solo]

Diruta, Girolamo: Seconda parte del Transilvano, dialogo divisi in quattro libri (Venice: Giacomo Vincenti, 1610, repr. 1622). 21 + 36 + 12 + 26 pp. Numerous compositions, all by Diruta, including 3 masses. Editions: AMI, iii (1959) [part edn]; L. Cervelli (Bologna, 1969) [facs.]. Literature: Judd, 1988. Although the title-page of the 1st edn bears the date 1609, the preface is dated 25 March 1610

[Bargnani, Ottavio: Secondo libro delle canzoni (Milan: heirs of Simon Tini, and Filippo Lomazzo, 1611). 5 partbooks and open score. 5 x 21 ff., 97 ff. 15 canzonas a 4, 3 a 5, 2 a 8. The 1st book of the series is lost. Literature: Judd, 1988]

Merulo, Claudio: Terzo libro de canzoni d'intavolatura d'organo ... a cinque voci fatte alla francese (Venice: Angelo Gardane, 1611). 29 pp. 3 canzonas. Literature: Judd, 1988

Banchieri, Adriano: Moderna armonia di canzoni alla francese, opera vigesima sesta (Venice: Ricciardo Amadino, 1612). 19 ff. Open score. 15 canzonas, 2 fantasias for ensemble and Magnificat in concerto for organ and voices. Literature: Judd, 1988

[Franzoni, Amante: Apparato musicale (Venice: Ricciardo Amadino, 1613). 8 partbooks and a 'partitura de bassi'. Sacred music, for which solo organ performance was apparently a possibility. Literature: Judd, 1988]

Bottazzi, Bernardino: Choro et organo libro primo (Venice: Giacomo Vincenti, 1614). 136 pp. An instruction book for organists with examples of cantus firmus treatment for alternatim use. Literature: Judd, 1988

[Cangiasi, Giovanni Antonio: Scherzi forastiere per suonare a quattro voci ... con la partitura per l'organo ... opera ottava (Milan: Filippo Lomazzo, 1614). 21 x 5 ff. Open score. 21 pieces]

Frescobaldi, Girolamo: Toccate e partite d'intavolatura di cimbalo ... libro primo (Rome: Nicolò Borboni, 1615; the dedication is dated 22 Dec 1614; with addns, 2/1615, but with new title-page, and engraver's signature dated 1616; repr., n.d., but with engraver's signature and preface dated 1616; repr. 1628; 3/1637 with Aggiunta). 4 + 58 pp. (1st edn), 4 + 68 pp. (2nd edn), 2 + 94 + 1 pp. (3rd edn.). 12 toccatas and 3 sets of variations; 2nd edition enlarges the 3 sets of variations and adds a 4th (folia) and 4 correntes; 3rd edition contains numerous additional pieces. Editions: P. Pidoux (Kassel, 1948–54), iii [follows 3rd edn]; CEKM, xxx (1968) [variant versions from earlier edns]. Literature: Judd, 1988

Corradini, Nicolò: Ricercari a quattro voci ([? Venice: B. Magni], 1615). Open score. 12 ricercares. Literature: L.F. Tagliavini: 'Un musicista cremonese dimenticato', CHM, ii (1957), 413–19; Judd, 1988

Frescobaldi, Girolamo: Ricercari, et canzoni franzese fatte sopra diverse oblighi in partitura ... libro primo (Rome: Bartolomeo Zannetti, 1615, repr. 1618 and, with the Capricci of 1624, in 1626, 1628 and 1642). 59 pp. Open score. 10 ricercares and 5 canzonas. Editions: P. Pidoux (Kassel, 1948–54), ii; facs. of 1615 edn (Farnborough, 1967). Literature: Judd, 1988

Trabaci, Giovanni Maria: Il secondo libro de ricercate, e altri varii capricci, con cento versi sopra li otto finali ecclesiastici (Naples: Giovanni Giacomo Carlino, 1615). 132 pp. Numerous fughe and versi. Edition: L'organiste liturgique, liv (1965–6), lvii (1965–6). Literature: Judd, 1988

[Lomazzo, Filippo, ed.: Seconda aggiunta alli concerti raccolti dal molto reverendo Don Francesco Lucino ... con la partitura per l'organo (Milan, 1617). 59 x 4, 163 pp. Numerous works originally for voices; the successor to the publication of Lucino (1608). Literature: Judd, 1988 ('Lucino')]

[Cifra, Antonio: Ricercari e canzoni franzese ... libro primo (Rome: Luca Antonio Soldi, 1619). 4 x 24, 56 pp. 5th book in open score. 10 ricercares and 6 canzonas. Literature: Judd, 1988]

[Cifra, Antonio: Ricercari et canzoni franzese ... libro secondo (Rome: Luca Antonio Soldi, 1619). 60 pp. Open score. 8 ricercares, 8 canzonas. Literature: Judd, 1988]

Pesenti, Martino: the volume of correnti repr. in 1635 appeared in a catalogue of 1621. See O. Mischiati: Indici, cataloghi e avvisi (Florence, 1984), 138; Judd, 1988, ii, p.146

Picchi, Giovanni: Intavolatura di balli d'arpicordo ... novamente corrette, & ristampate (Venice: Alessandro Vincenti, 1621). 58 + 2 pp. 12 dances. Editions: O. Chilesotti (Milan, ?1884: Biblioteca di rarità musicali, ii); CEKM, xxxviii (1977); ed. H. Ferguson (Tokyo, 1979). Literature: Judd, 1988. The original date of pubn is unknown

[Zuffi, Giovanni Ambrosio: Concerti ... con partitura (Milan, 1621; repr. with a 2nd book, 1624); both lost]

[Angleria, Camillo: La regola del contraponto e della musical compositione (Milan: Giorgio Rolla, 1622). VIII + 124 pp. Open score. A treatise with musical compositions on pp.111–21: 1 ricercare for organ or ensemble, and a Cantilena by Angleria and a ricercare and 3 canons by G.P. Cima 'da cantarsi in vari modi'. Literature: Judd, 1988]

[Grancini, Michel'Angelo: Partitura dell'armonia ecclesiastica (Milan: Giorgio Rolla, 1622). 113 pp. Open score. Vocal works by Grancini and others and 2 canzonas. Literature: Judd, 1988]

[Corradini, Nicolò: Partitura del primo libro de canzoni francese a 4. & alcune suonate (Venice: Bartolomeo Magni, 1624). 72 pp. Open score. 10 canzonas and 4 sonatas; the sonatas are not suitable for solo keyboard. Literature: Judd, 1988]

Frescobaldi, Girolamo: Il primo libro di capricci fatti sopra diversi soggetti, et arie in partitura (Rome: Luca Antonio Soldi, 1624; 2/ Venice: Alessandro Vincenti, 1626, repr. 1628, 1642). 96 + 1 pp. (1st edn), 169 + 1 pp. (2nd edn). Open score. In the 1st edn, 12 capriccios; the 2nd edn adds the Ricercari, et canzoni franzese of 1615, but omits 1 capriccio ('sopra Or che noi rimena'). Edition: P. Pidoux (Kassel, 1948–54), ii [follows the 2nd edn but retains 'Or che noi rimena']. Literature: Judd, 1988

Cavaccio, Giovanni: Sudori musicali ... accomodati in partitura & divisi in tre parti (Venice: Bartolomeo Magni, 1626). 68 pp. Open score. 4 toccatas, 8 ricercares, 20 canzonas. Literature: Judd, 1988

[Biumi, Giacomo Filippo: Fantaisie à 4. voci (before 1627); lost]

Biumi, Giacomo Filippo: Partito delle canzoni alla francese à 4. et à 8. con alcune arie de correnti à 4 ... libro primo, opera seconda (Milan: Gratiadio Ferioli, [1627]). 133 pp. Open score. 18 canzonas and 4 arie di corrente. Literature: Judd, 1988

Frescobaldi, Girolamo: Il secondo libro di toccate canzone versi d'hinni magnificat gagliarde correnti et altre partite d'intavolatura di cimbalo et organo ([Rome, 1627]; repr. Rome: Nicolò Borboni, 1637, without the ciaccona and passacagli). 2 + 90 pp. (2 + 86 pp. in the repr.). 12 toccatas, 6 canzonas, 4 hymns, 3 Magnificat settings, Aria del balletto, 5 galliards, Aria detta la frescobalda, 5 correntes, 15 partite sopra ciaccona, 30 partite sopra passacagli. Editions: P. Pidoux (Kassel, 1948–54), iv [contents of repr. only]; CEKM, xxx (1968) [ciaccona and passacagli]. Literature: Judd, 1988

[Grancini, Michel'Angelo: Partitura delle messe, motetti et canzoni a otto voci ... opera quarta (Milan: Filippo Lomazzo, 1627). 39 pp. Open score. This volume of the 9 partbooks contains 3 canzonas and 1 ensemble sonata]

[Frescobaldi, Girolamo: Il primo libro delle canzoni ad una, due, tre e quattro voci, accomodate, per sonare ogni sorte de stromenti (Rome: Giovanni Battista Robletti [partbooks] and Paolo Masotti [score], 1628; rev. 2/Venice: Alessandro Vincenti, 1634 [dedication dated 10 Jan 1635], with addl pieces). 150 pp in 1st edition. Open score. 37 canzonas with a toccata for 'spinettina' and violin, and a toccata and canzona for 'spinettina sola', all with basso continuo. Edition: CEKM, xxx (1968; pieces with 'spinettina'). Literature: Judd, 1988]

[Sabbatini, Galeazzo: Regola facile e breve per sonare sopra il basso continuo nell'organo, manacordo, ò altro simile stromento (Venice: Il Salvadore, 1628, repr. Venice: Alessandro Vincenti, 1644). 30 + 1 pp. Literature: Judd, 1988]

Pesenti, Martino: Il secondo libro delle correnti alla francese per sonar nel clavicembalo, et altri stromenti, con alcune correnti spezzate a tre (Venice: Alessandro Vincenti, 1630, repr. 1644). 33 pp. Open score. 22 correntes, 2 with volte. The only surviving copy of book 1 is dated 1635. Literature: Judd, 1988

Rossi, Michelangelo: Toccate e corente d'intavolatura d'organo e cimbalo (Rome: Nicolò Borbone, ?1633/4). 44 pp. 10 toccatas, 10 correnti. Repr. (?) before 1638, 1657 (Carlo Ricarii), and after 1658 (Caifabri). Edition: CEKM, xv. Literature: Judd, 1988

Frescobaldi, Girolamo: Fiori musicali di diverse compositioni: toccate, kirie, canzoni, capricci e recercari in partitura a quattro utili per sonatori ... opera duodecima (Venice: Alessandro Vincenti, 1635; fig.2). 2 + 103 pp. Open score. 3 masses. Edition: P. Pidoux (Kassel, 1948–54), v. Literature: Judd, 1988

Pesenti, Martino: Il primo libro delle correnti alla francese per sonar nel clavicembalo, et altri stromenti ... nuovamente ristampate con una agionta di alcune correnti et un baletto a tre (Venice: Alessandro Vincenti, 1635; book 2 1st pubd in 1630). 26 pp. Open score. 22 correntes, 3 with volte, with 4 additional correntes and 1 balletto a 3. Literature: Judd, 1988

2. Girolamo Frescobaldi's 'Fiori musicali' (1635): the 'Toccata avanti la Messa della Madonna', in open score

[Della Porta, Francesco: Ricercate à 4 (lost). Probably a set of partbooks containing the 5 ricercares and 5 canzonas intabulated in Turin, Biblioteca Nazionale Universitaria, Dono Renzo Giordano 8 [=VIII], and hence pubd before 1639. Edition: CEKM, xli (1977; wrongly attrib. on the title-page to Costanzo Porta). Literature: Judd, 1988]

[Pesenti, Martino: Correnti alla francese, gagliarde, e balletti da cantarsi à voce sola, e suonarsi nel clauicembalo, & altri instromenti ... con un brando d'incerto dall'istesso sig. Pesenti diminuito in più modi, libro primo opera decima (Venice: Alessandro Vincenti, 1639). Literature: Judd, 1988]

Del Buono, Gioanpietro: Canoni oblighi et sonate in varie maniere sopra l'Ave maris stella (Palermo: Antonio Martarello and Santo d'Angelo, [1641]). 72 ff. Numerous canons and 14 sonate di cimbalo. Literature: W.S. Newman: 'The XIII Sonate di Cimbalo by Giovanni Pietro del Buono, 'Palermitano' (1641)', CHM, ii (1957), 297–310; Judd, 1988

Pesenti, Martino: Correnti alla francese, balletti, gagliarde, pass'e mezzi a due, et a tre da suonarsi nel clavicembalo, et altri instromenti ... libro terzo, opera duodecima (Venice: Alessandro Vincenti, 1641). 26 pp. 6 correntes, 5 ballettos, 4 galliards, 2 passamezzos. Literature: Judd, 1988

Salvatore, Giovanni: Ricercari a quattro voci, canzoni francesi, toccate, et versi per rispondere nelle messe con l'organo al choro (Naples: Ottavio Beltrano, 1641). 119 pp. Open score. 8 ricercares, 4 canzonas, 2 toccatas, 3 masses. Edition: CEKM, iii (1964). Literature: Judd, 1988

Croci, Antonio: Frutti musicali di messe tre ecclesiastiche ... opera quarta (Venice: Alessandro Vincenti, 1642). 1 + 98 + 1 pp. Miscellaneous pieces divided into 3 masses. Literature: Judd, 1988

Frescobaldi, Girolamo: Canzoni alla francese in partitura ... libro quarto (Venice: Alessandro Vincenti, 1645). 55 + 1 pp. Open score. 11 canzonas. The 2nd and 3rd volumes of this series are lost; the 1st is probably that listed here as Frescobaldi, 1628. Edition: P. Pidoux (Kassel, 1948–54), i. Literature: Judd, 1988

Fasolo, Giovanni Battista: Annuale, che contiene tutto quello, che deve far un organista, per risponder al choro tutto l'anno ... opera ottava (Venice: Alessandro Vincenti, 1645). 264 pp. Te Deum, 18 hymns, 3 masses, 8 Magnificat settings, Salve regina, 8 ricercares, 8 canzonas, 4 fugues. Edition: R. Walter (Altötting, 1959). Literature: Judd, 1988

Pesenti, Martino: Correnti, gagliarde, e balletti diatonici ... libro quarto, opera decimaquinta (Venice: Alessandro Vincenti, 1645). 75 pp. 37 dances. Literature: Judd, 1988

Cecchino, Tomaso: Note musicali per risponder con facilità e al choro per tutto le feste dell'anno (Venice: Alessandro Vincenti, before 1649) [lost]. Literature: Judd, 1988

Milanuzzi, Carlo: Corenti, baletti (Venice: Alessandro Vincenti, before 1649) [lost]

Piazza, Giovanni Battista: Correnti et baletti alla francese (Venice: Alessandro Vincenti, before 1649) [lost]

Scipione, Giovanni: Intavolatura di cembalo, et organo: toccate, capricci, hinni sopra il canto fermo, corrente, balletti, ciaccone, e passacagli diversi, libro primo (Perugia: heirs of Bartoli, and Angelo Laurenti, 1650) [lost], MS copy of title and preface survives in Bologna, Civico Museo Bibliografico-Musicale, 31, p.124. Literature: Judd, 1988 ('Giovanni')

Scipione, Giovanni: Partitura di cembalo et organo ... libro secondo opera terza (Venice: Alessandro Vincenti, 1652) [lost]. MS copy of title and preface in Bologna, Civico Museo Bibliografico-Musicale, 31, p.124. Literature: Judd, 1988 ('Giovanni')

Boccella, Francesco: Primavera di vaghi fiori musicali (Ancona: Ottavio Beltrano, 1653). 44 + 20 pp. [lost]

(ii) France.

MANUSCRIPT SOURCES

Munich, Bayerische Staatsbibliothek, Mus.ms.2987 (*c*1550). Includes 6 ff. in OGT. In spite of the notation the source is considered to be of French origin. 9 transcriptions of chansons by Sandrin, Janequin, Gombert and others. Edition: Le pupitre, v (1968). Literature: W. Apel: 'Du nouveau sur musique française pour orgue au XVIe siècle', ReM, nos.171–4 (1937), 96–108

Aberdeen, King's College Library, printed book π 7841 Arc (late 16th century). Among MS additions to an edition of Arcadelt's 1st book of madrigals dated 1561 are 14 pages of keyboard music: 11 anon. dances, etc., including a 'Fantasie sur l'air de ma bergere'

Paris, Bibliothèque Nationale, f.fr.9152 (*c*1600). Includes Costeley's Fantasie sus orgue ou espinette. Edition: MGG1, ii, 1707 [part facs.]

Paris, Bibliothèque des Arts et Métiers, holds Mersenne's own annotated copy of Harmonie universelle (1636–7). In the 'Traité des instrumens a chordes', book 6 ('Des orgues'), between pp.392 and 393, are 3 leaves containing an organ piece by Charles Racquet. Editions: Les maîtres français de l'orgue, ii (1925)C. Racquet: Fantasie, ed. A. Tessier (Paris, 1939); M. Mersenne: Harmonie universelle (Paris, 1636), iii, ed. F. Lesure (Paris, 1965) [facs.]

Paris, Bibliothèque Ste Geneviève, 2348 (*c*1650). 24 ff. C50 pieces by Chambonnières (all but 1 anon.), Louis Couperin (anon.) and anon. composers. Edition: Les préclassiques, nos.25–9 and suppl. [anon. composers]

Paris, Bibliothèque Ste Geneviève, 2353 (?*c*1650). 3 ff. Includes anon. Pange lingua. Edition: Les préclassiques, no.30 and suppl.

Tours, Bibliothèque Municipale, 825 (*c*1650) [lost]. Versets and fantasias in the 8 modes, versets for Office chants, anon. Literature: A. Pirro: 'L'art des organistes', EMDC, II/ii (1926), 1181–374

London, MS owned by G. Oldham (*c*1660; partly autograph of L. Couperin, whose pieces are dated 1650–59). 83 ff. C100 pieces by Chambonnières, L. Couperin, D'Anglebert, Frescobaldi and anon. composers. Literature: G. Oldham: 'Louis Couperin: a New Source of French Keyboard Music of the Mid 17th Century', RMFC, i (1960), 51–9

APPENDIX

There are a number of retrospective French sources of the later 17th century. Paris, Bibliothèque Nationale, Vm⁷674–5, the 'Bauyn MS', is sometimes dated *c*1660 but is probably a little later: it includes music by Froberger, L. Couperin, Chambonnières and many others (facs. edn by F. Lesure, Geneva, 1977). Others include Paris, Bibliothèque Nationale, Vm⁷1817bis ('Thomelin MS', *c*1680); Paris, Bibliothèque Nationale, fonds du Conservatoire Rés.89ter (autograph of D'Anglebert); Paris, Bibliothèque Ste Geneviève, 2350, 2354, 2356, 2357; and Munich, Bayerische Staatsbibliothek, 1503. A number of later 17th-century sources are discussed by A. Curtis: 'Musique classique française à Berkeley', RdM, lvi (1970), 123–64; these include the 'Parville MS' (Berkeley, California, US-LAum, MS778, not before 1689 but including numerous works by L. Couperin)

PRINTED SOURCES

Attaingnant, Pierre, ed.: Magnificat sur les huit tons avec Te deum laudamus et deux preludes (Paris, 1530), 40 ff. 2 preludes, 8 Magnificat settings, Te Deum. Edition: PSFM, i (1925). Literature: Rokseth, 1930; Heartz, 1969

Attaingnant, Pierre, ed.: Dixneuf chãsons musicales reduictes en la tabulature des orgues espinettes manicordions, et telz semblables instrumentz musicaulx (Paris, 1531; see NOTATION, fig.110). 40 ff. 19 chanson transcriptions. Editions: Chansons und Tänze, i: Pariser Tabulaturdrucke für Tasteninstrumente aus dem Jahr 1530 von Pierre Attaingnant, ed. E. Bernoulli (Munich, 1914) [facs.]; CMM, xx (1961). Literature: Rokseth, 1930; Heartz, 1969

Attaingnant, Pierre, ed.: Vingt et cinq chãsons musicales reduictes en la tabulature des orgues espinettes manicordions & telz sẽblables instrumẽtz musicaulx (Paris, 1531). 40 ff. 25 chanson transcriptions. Editions: Chansons und Tänze, ii: Pariser Tabulaturdrucke für Tasteninstrumente aus dem Jahr 1530 von Pierre Attaingnant, ed. E. Bernoulli (Munich, 1914) [facs.]; CMM, xx (1961). Literature: Rokseth, 1930; Heartz, 1969

Attaingnant, Pierre, ed.: Vingt et six chansons musicales reduictes en la tabulature des orgues espinettes manicordions & telz sẽblables instrumẽtz musicaulx (Paris, 1531). 40 ff. 26 chansons transcriptions. Editions: Chansons und Tänze, iii: Pariser Tabulaturdrucke für Tasteninstrumente aus dem Jahr 1530 von Pierre Attaingnant, ed. E. Bernoulli (Munich, 1914) [facs.]; CMM, xx (1961). Literature: Rokseth, 1930; Heartz, 1969

Attaingnant, Pierre, ed.: Quatorze gaillardes neuf pauennes sept branles et deux basses dances le tout reduict de musique en la tabulature du ieu dorgues espinettes manicordions & telz semblables instrumentz musicaulx (Paris, [1531]). 40 ff. 32 dances. Editions: Chansons und Tänze, iv: Pariser Tabulaturdrucke für Tasteninstrumente aus dem Jahr 1530 von Pierre Attaingnant, ed. E. Bernoulli (Munich, 1914); CEKM, viii (1965). Literature: Rokseth, 1930; Heartz, 1969

Attaingnant, Pierre, ed.: Tablature pour le jeu dorgues ... sur le plain chant de Cunctipotens et Kyrie fons, avec leurs Et in terra, Patrem, Sanctus et Agnus Dei (Paris, [1531]). 40 ff. 2 masses. Edition: PSFM, i (1925). Literature: Rokseth, 1930; Heartz, 1969

Attaingnant, Pierre, ed.: Treze motetz musicaulx avec ung prelude, le tout reduict en la tabulature (Paris, 1531). 40 ff. 13 motet transcriptions. 1 prelude. Edition: PSFM, v (1930). Literature: Rokseth, 1930; Heartz, 1969

Brayssingar, Guillaume de: Tablature d'epinette (Lyons: Jacques Moderne, 1536) [lost]. Contains ricercares, fantasias and variations

[Moderne, Jacques, ed.: Musicque de joye. See §2(i): Arrivabene (1540)]

Gorlier, Simon, ed.: Premier livre de tabulature d'espinette, contenant motets, fantasies, chansons, madrigales & gaillardes (Lyons, [1560]) [lost]

Titelouze, Jehan: Hymnes de l'église pour toucher sur l'orgue, avec les fugues et recherches sur leur plain-chant (Paris: Pierre Ballard, 1623; BUCEM cites an edn of 1624; fig.3). 48 ff. 12 hymns. Editions: Archives des maîtres de l'orgue, i (1898); N. Dufourcq (Paris, 1965)

Titelouze, Jehan: Le Magnificat, ou cantique de la vierge pour toucher sur l'orgue, suivant les huit tons de l'église (Paris: Pierre Ballard, 1626). 60 ff. 8 Magnificat settings. Edition: Archives des maîtres de l'orgue, i (1898)

Mersenne, Marin: Harmonie universelle (Paris: Sebastien Cramoisy, 1636–7). In the 'Traité des instrumens a chordes', bk 6 ('Des orgues'), p.391 is a 'Chanson composée par le Roy, & mise en tablature par le Sieur de la Barre', the keyboard part of which is complete in itself. On pp.394–5 follow the first 2 bars of 8 variations that demonstrate techniques of diminution, for keyboard alone. Editions: Orgue et liturgie, xxxi (1956); F. Lesure (Paris, 1965), iii [facs.]

Denis, Jean: Traité de l'accord de l'espinette (Paris: Robert Ballard, 1650). This is a 2nd, augmented edn of a work of which 1st is not extant. On pp.16f, Prelude pour souder si l'accord est bon par tout

Du Mont, Henry: Cantica sacra II.III.IV. cum vocibus tum et instrumentis modulata ... liber primus (Paris: Robert Ballard, 1652, repr. 1662). 5 partbooks, of which the 5th, bassus continuus, has on ff.24*v*–25*r* an 'Allemanda gravis' in keyboard score. Also vocal verses designated 'pro organo'. Edition: L'organiste liturgique, xiii (1956). The optional nature of the viol parts in this work is confirmed by a MS source for keyboard solo

Du Mont, Henry: Meslanges a II.III.IV. et V. parties, avec la basse-continuë, contenant plusieurs chansons, motets, magnificats, preludes, & allemandes pour l'orgue & pour les violes ... livre second (Paris: Robert Ballard, 1657). 6 partbooks, of which the basse-continuë has on ff.29*v*–30*r* an 'Allemande', and on ff.30*v*–32*r* an 'Allemande grave', both in keyboard score. In addition, 4 of the preludes for 2 viols are said to be 'propres pour l'orgue'. The viol parts of the allemandes are stated to be optional. Edition: L'organiste liturgique, xiii (1956). [Note: the set of 6 books in London, British Library, D 980, lacks the basse-continuë. Its 6th book, a Troisième partie (i.e. a 3rd instrumental part) adjoustée aux préludes des Meslanges ... avec la basse continue des motets (1661), does not include any keyboard music]

Roberday, François: Fugues et caprices à quatre parties, mises en partition pour l'orgue (Paris: Sanlecque, 1660). [10] + 100 + [2] pp. Open score. 12 pieces, 3 by Frescobaldi, Ebner and Froberger. Editions: Archives des maîtres de l'orgue, iii (1901); Le pupitre, xliv (1972)

(iii) Germany, Eastern Europe and Scandinavia.

MANUSCRIPT SOURCES

A number of sources in alphabetical notation, though apparently for the use of keyboard players, do not amount to 'keyboard music' and are not included here.

Vienna, Österreichische Nationalbibliothek, 3617, f.10*v* (early 15th century). OGT. Kyrie (Vatican edn no.V). Edition: CEKM, i (1963), 10–11. Literature: T. Göllner: Formen früher Mehrstimmigkeit in deutschen Handschriften des späten Mittelalters (Tutzing, 1961)

Wrocław, Biblioteka Uniwersytecka, I Q 438 ['Sagan Keyboard MS'] (Sagan, Silesia; early 15th century). OGT. A single leaf containing a Gloria fragment (Vatican edn ad lib, I). Edition: CEKM, i (1963), 11–12. Literature: F. Feldman: 'Mittelalterliche Musik und Musikpflege in Schlesien', Deutsches Archiv für Landes- und Volksforschung, ii (1937) [transcr., suppl.ii, 1–3]

Wrocław, Biblioteka Uniwersytecka, I Q 42 (Breslau, Dominican friary, early 15th century). OGT. A short cantus firmus setting followed by a fragmentary Fundamentum. Edition: CEKM, i (1963), 12–13. Literature: F. Feldman: 'Mittelalterliche Musik und Musikpflege in Schlesien', Deutsches Archiv für Landes- und Volksforschung, ii (1937) [transcr., suppl.ii, 4]

Munich, Bayerische Staatsbibliothek, Clm 7755, ff.276*r*–280*r* (early 15th century). OGT. A short treatise on composition and organ playing with 1 complete piece. Editions: T. Göllner: Formen früher Mehrstimmigkeit in deutschen Handschriften des späten Mittelalters (Tutzing, 1961), 157–97 [facs. and transcr. of treatise and piece]; CEKM, i (1963), 14–15 [piece only]

Munich, Bayerische Staatsbibliothek, Clm 5963, f.248*r* (early 15th century). OGT. A short Magnificat. Edition: CEKM, i (1963), 15. Literature: L. Schrade: Die ältesten Denkmäler der Orgelmusik als Beitrag zu einer Geschichte, der Toccata (Münster, 1928); L. Schrade: Die handschriftliche Überlieferung der ältesten Instrumentalmusik (Lahr, 1931/R), 91–3

Berlin, Staatsbibliothek, theol.q.290, ff.56*v*–58*r* ['Winsem [Windsheim] Fragment'] (from a collection of sermons, some marked 'in Wynsem' [?Windsheim] and dated 1431). OGT. Editions: J. Wolf: Musikalische Schrifttafeln (Bückeburg, 1930), nos.32–3 [2 facs.]; CEKM, i (1963), 15–18. Literature: L. Schrade: Die handschriftliche Überlieferung der ältesten Instrumentalmusik (Lahr, 1931/R), 87; L. Schrade: 'Die Messe in der Orgelmusik des 15. Jahrhunderts', AMf, i (1936), 129–75 [with transcr.]; L. Schrade: 'The Organ in the Mass of the 15th Century', MQ, xxviii (1942), 329–36, 467–87

3. Jehan Titelouze's 'Hymnes de l'église' (1623): a keyboard setting of the hymn 'Ave maris stella', with the chant in the lowest part

Wrocław, Biblioteka Uniwersytecka, I F 687 (Breslau, Dominican friary, early 15th century). OGT. A fragment containing 4 short pieces and examples of cadential formulae. Edition: CEKM, i (1963), 18–22. Literature: F. Feldman: 'Ein Tabulaturfragment des Breslauer Dominikaner Klosters aus der Zeit Paumanns', ZMw, xv (1932–3), 241–58 [with transcr.]

Hamburg, Staatsarchiv, ND VI 3225 (early 15th century). OGT. Contains 4 pieces in black notation and 5 in white notation. Editions: J. Wolf: Musikalische Schrifttafeln (Bückeburg, 1930), no.8 [1. facs.]; CEKM, i (1963), 22–7. Literature: L. Schrade: Die handschriftliche Überlieferung der ältesten Instrumentalmusik (Lahr, 1931/R), 94–6

Erlangen, Universitätsbibliothek 554 (olim 729) (early 15th century). Ff.127r–134. OGT. 4 preludes, 2 short fragments and Paumann's Fundamentum. Edition: CEKM, i (1963), 51–2. Literature: A. Reichling: 'Die Präambeln der Hs. Erlangen 554 und ihre Beziehungen zur Sammlung Ileborghs', GfMKB: Kassel 1962, 109–11

[Regensburg, Bischöfliche Ordinariatsbibliothek, MS. Th. 98 (early 15th century). Includes, pp. 411–13, a counterpoint treatise specifically for keyboard players. Literature and edition: C. Meyer: 'Ein deutcher Orgeltraktat vom Anfang des 15. Jahrhunderts', Musik in Bayern, xxix (Tutzing, 1984), 43–60.]

Paris, private collection ['Ileborgh Tablature'] (Adam Ileborgh, 1448). 7 ff. OGT. Preludes etc. by ?Ileborgh. Edition: CEKM, i (1963), 28–32. Literature: MGG1 ('Ileborgh von Stendhal M. Reimann); W. Apel: 'Die Tabulatur des Adam Ileborgh', ZMw, xvi (1934), 193–212; G. Knoche: 'Der Organist Adam Ileborgh von Stendal', Franziskanische Studien, xxviii/1 (1941), 53–62; W. Apel: The Notation of Polyphonic Music, 900–1600 (Cambridge, Mass., 1942, 5/1953/R; Ger. trans., 1962); G. Most: 'Die Orgeltabulatur von 1448 des Adam Ileborgh aus Stendal', Altmärkisches Museum Stendal, viii (1954), 43–80; A. Reichling: 'Die Präambeln der Hs. Erlangen 554 und ihre Beziehungen zur Sammlung Ileborghs', GfMKB: Kassel 1962, 109–11 (see ILEBORGH, ADAM)

Berlin, Staatsbibliothek Preussischer Kulturbesitz, Mus.ms.40613 (olim Wernigerode, Fürstlich Stolbergsche Bibliothek, Zb 14) ['Lochamer Liederbuch'] (1452–6). 92 pp. + 1 f. at each end (fig.4). Pp.45–92: Fundamentum organisandi by Conrad Paumann with miscellaneous organ pieces. OGT. The Fundamentum itself is dated 1452. Editions: K. Ameln: Locheimer Liederbuch und Fundamentum organisandi des Conrad Paumann (Berlin, 1925) [facs.]; W. Arnold and H. Bellermann: Das Locheimer Liederbuch nebst der Ars Organisandi von Conrad Paumann (Leipzig, 1926/R) [orig. pubd in Jb für musikalische Wissenschaft, ii (1867), 1–234]; CEKM, i (1963) 32–51. Literature: C. Wolff: 'Conrad Paumanns Fundamentum organisandi und seine verschiedenen Fassungen', AMw, xxv (1968), 196–222

Munich, Bayerische Staatsbibliothek, clm 29775/6 (*c*1450), ff i*r*–2*v*. OGT. Fragments of 3 pieces. Literature: Staehelin, 1988 [incl. facs.]

Munich, Bayerische Staatsbibliothek, clm 29775/7 (*c*1450), ff.i*r*–2*v*. OGT. 6 or 7 secular pieces, 3 (or 4) incomplete. Literature: Staehelin, 1988 [incl. facs.]

Munich, Bayerische Staatsbibliothek, clm 14311 (*c*1450). Fragment, OGT. Literature: H. Schmid: 'Ein unbekanntes Fragment eines "fundamentum organisandi"', Mitteilungsblatt der Gesellschaft für Bayerische Musikgeschichte, vii (1973), 135–43

Wolfenbüttel, Herzog August Bibliothek, 19.26.3 Aug. 4° (*c*1450), f.259*v*. Facsimile: M. Staehelin and others: Musikalischer Lustgarten (Wolfenbüttel Exhibition Catalogue, 1985), 85. Literature: K. Hortschansky: 'Eine unbekannte Tabulaturaufzeichnung für Tasteninstrumente aus dem 15. Jahrhundert', Renaissance-Studien: Helmuth Osthoff zum 80. Geburstag (Tutzing, 1979), 91–101.

Vienna, Österreichische Nationalbibliothek, 5094 (mid-15th century). Pieces on ff.148bis*v*, 155*v* and 158*r*–v. OGT, alphabetical notation and keyboard score. Editions: F. Crane: '15th-Century Keyboard Music in Vienna MS 5094', JAMS, xviii (1965), 237–43 [edn of 1 piece and some facs.]; T. Göllner: 'Notationsfragmente aus einer Organistenwerkstatt des 15. Jahrhunderts', AMw, xxiv (1967), 170–77 [facs.]. Literature: R. Strohm: 'Native and Foreign Polyphony in Late Medieval Austria', MD, xxxviii (1984), 205–30

4. Berlin, Staatsbibliothek, Mus.ms.40613, p.81r: Conrad Paumann's 'Domit ein gut jare' (from his 'Fundamentum organisandi', 1452) where the top voice is written on a staff and the lower voices are written in alphabetic notation with rhythmic indications above

Melk, Benediktinerstift, 689 (olim 775). Fragment, 1460s, OGT. Edition: R. Flotzinger and G. Gruber: Musikgeschichte Österreichs (Graz, 1977), 103–4. Literature: J. Angerer: 'Die Begriffe "Discantus", "Organa" und "Scholares" . . .', Anzeiger der Österreichischen Akademie der Wissenschaften, Phil.-Hist. Klasse, cix (1972), 146–70.

Munich, Bayerische Staatsbibliothek, Mus.3725 (also Cim.352b) ['Buxheim Keyboard Manuscript', 'Buxheimer Orgelbuch'] (*c*1470; see NOTATION, fig.108). V + 169 ff. OGT. An extensive collection of intabulations, liturgical compositions, and Paumann's Fundamentum. Editions: DM, 2nd ser., i (1955) [facs.]; EDM, xxxvii–xxxix (1958–9). Literature: W. Schrammek: 'Zur Numerierung im Buxheimer Orgelbuch', Mf, ix (1956), 298–302; R.S. Lord: The Buxheim Organ Book: a Study in the History of Organ Music in Southern Germany during the Fifteenth Century (diss., Yale U., 1960); E. Southern: The Buxheim Organ Book (New York, 1963); H.R. Zöbeley: Die Musik des Buxheimer Orgelbuchs: Spielvorgang, Niederschrift, Herkunft, Faktur (Tutzing, 1964); Göllner, 1979

Trent, Biblioteca Comunale, 1947 (*c*1500). 37 pp. OGT. Salve regina, Preambulum in re, Salve regina, Magnificat octavi toni, all anon. Editions: H.J. Moser: Paul Hofhaimer: ein Lied- und Orgelmeister des deutschen Humanismus (Stuttgart, 1929, 2/1966) [with transcr. of Hofhaimer's complete works repr. from 91 gesammelte Tonsätze Paul Hofhaimers und seines Kreises, Stuttgart, 1929]; H.J. Moser: 'Eine Trienter Orgeltabulatur aus Hofhaimers Zeit', Studien zur Musikgeschichte: Festschrift für Guido Adler (Vienna, 1930/R), 84–6 [edn of Preambulum]; O. Gombosi: 'Hofhaimeriana', ZMw, xv (1932–3), 127–38 [edn of the second Salve]

Basle, Universitätsbibliothek, F.IX.57 (early 16th century). 10 pp. OGT. Tandernack by P. Hofhaimer. Edition: H.J. Moser: Paul Hofhaimer (Stuttgart, 1929, enlarged 2/1965). Literature: J.

Richter: Katalog der Musik-Sammlung auf der Universitäts-Bibliothek in Basel (Leipzig, 1892)

St Gall, Stiftsbibliothek, 530 (F. Sicher, *c*1503–31). OGT. Intabulations and cantus firmus settings (including Hofhaimer, Salve regina). Edition: SMd, viii (1992). Literature: W.R. Nef: 'Der St. Galler Organist Fridolin Sicher und seine Orgeltabulatur', Schweizerisches Jb für Musikwissenschaft, vii (1938), 3–215; Johnson, 1986

Basle, Universitätsbibliothek, F.IX.22 (copied by Hans Kotter and others, 1513–32). 133 ff. OGT. 55 pieces by Kotter, Buchner, Weck and others, including intabulations of works by Isaac, Hofhaimer, Agricola, Josquin, Barbireau and others. Edition: SMd, vi (1967). Literature: J. Richter: Katalog der Musik-Sammlung auf der Universitäts-Bibliothek in Basel (Leipzig, 1892); J. Wolf: Handbuch der Notationskunde (Leipzig, 1913–19/R); W. Merian: Die Tabulaturen des Organisten Hans Kotter (Leipzig, 1916); Merian, 1927; H.J. Moser: Paul Hofhaimer (Stuttgart, 1929, 2/1965); W. Apel: The Notation of Polyphonic Music, 900–1600 (Cambridge, MA, 1942, 5/1953/R; Ger. trans., 1962); H.J. Marx: 'Der Tabulatur-Codex des Basler Humanisten Bonifacius Amerbach', Musik und Geschichte/Music and History: Leo Schrade zum sechzigsten Geburtstag (Cologne, 1963), 50–70; Johnson, 1986

Basle, Universitätsbibliothek, F.VI.26(c) (a Fundamentum written for Oswald Holzach, 1515). 8 ff. Salve regina by Kotter, Fortuna d'un gran tempo by Josquin and an anon. fragment. Edition: SMd, vi (1967) [without the Fundamentum itself]. Literature: J. Wolf: Handbuch der Notationskunde (Leipzig, 1913–19/R); J. Stenzl: 'Un'intavolatura tedesca sconosciuta della prima metà del Cinquecento', L'organo, x (1972), 51–82; Johnson, 1986

Trent, Archivio di Stato, Sez.ted., misc., cod.105 (1520). Mensural notation in separate parts. 10 settings of Gaude Dei genitrix and 2 settings of Ascendo ad Patrem meum by Arnolt Schlick, composed for the coronation of Charles V (1520). Editions: Hommage à l'empereur Charles-Quint: dix versets pour orgue, ed. M.S. Kastner and M. Querol Gavaldá (Barcelona, 1954); A. Schlick: Orgelkompositionen, ed. R. Walter (Mainz, 1970). Literature: R. Lunelli: 'Contributi trentini alle relazioni musicali fra l'Italia e la Germania nel Rinascimento', AcM, xxi (1949), 41–70

Berlin, Staatsbibliothek Preussischer Kulturbesitz, Mus.ms.40026 (olim Z 26) (L. Kleber, 1520–4). OGT. Intabulations, preludes, etc. Edition: EDM, xc–xci (1987). Literature: R. Eitner: 'Das Buxheimer Orgelbuch', MMg, xx (1888), suppl.2 [with exx. from this MS and Kleber's MS]; H.K. Loewenfeld: Leonard Kleber und sein Orgeltabulaturbuch (Berlin, 1897); H.J. Moser: Paul Hofhaimer (Stuttgart, 1929, 2/1965); K. Kotterba: Die Orgeltabulatur des Leonhard Kleber: ein Beitrag zur Orgelmusik der ersten Hälfte des 16. Jahrhunderts (diss., U. of Freiburg, 1958); Johnson, 1986

Warsaw, Biblioteka Publiczna m. st. Warszawy, akc.3141 (1520). Fragments, 19 ff. OGT. Literature: Brzezińska, 1987

Zurich, Zentralbibliothek, 284b (H. Buchner, Fundamentum, *c*1520). OGT. Theoretical work on organ playing and composition with *c*20 liturgical pieces; MS 284*a* includes a German version of the treatise, Fundament unnd gruntliche Anzeigung. Edition: EDM, lv (1974). For literature see Basle, Universitätsbibliothek F.I.8a (1551) below

Basle, Universitätsbibliothek, F.IX.58 (copied by Hans Kotter, *c*1525). 13 ff. OGT. 11 pieces by Weck, Buchner, Kotter and others. Edition: SMd, vi (1967). Literature: J. Wolf: Handbuch der Notationskunde (Leipzig, 1913–19/R); W. Merian: Die Tabulaturen des Organisten Hans Kotter (Leipzig, 1916); Johnson, 1986

Warsaw, Biblioteka Narodowa, Mus.2081 (1528). 1 f., OGT. Literature: Brzezińska, 1987 (facs., pl.12)

Leipzig, Musikbibliothek der Stadt, printed book I.191 (copy of Agricola: Ein kurz deudsche Musica, 1528, with Musica instrumentalis deudsch, MS insertions *c*1530), 43 ff. of MS. OGT. Diagram explaining the tablature and 19 anon. pieces. Literature: BrownI; J. Stenzl: 'Un'intavolatura tedesca sconosciuta della prima metà del cinquecento', L'organo, x (1972), 51–82

Zurich, Zentralbibliothek, Z.XI.301 (tablature of Clemens Hör, *c*1535). 180 ff., 32 of which contain keyboard music. OGT. 47 pieces, mostly arrangements of works by Dietrich, Senfl, Hofhaimer, Josquin, Isaac, Greiter, Fritz, Zwingli, Adam von Fulda and anon. composers. Edition: SMd, vii (1970). Literature: J. Stenzl: 'Un'intavolatura tedesca sconosciuta della prima metà del cinquecento', L'organo, x (1972), 51–82

Kraków, Biblioteka Polskiej Akademii Nauk, 1716 (Jan z Lublina, 1537–48). 260 ff. OGT. Preludes, liturgical compositions, intabulations, dances, pedagogic examples; composers include Finck, Stoltzer and 'N.C.' (? Nicolaus Cracoviensis (Mikołaj z Krakowa)). Edition: CEKM, vi (1964–7). Literature: J.R. White: 'The Tablature of Johannes of Lublin', MD, xvii (1963), 137–62; Johnson, 1986; Brzezińska, 1987 (facs. pls.17–19, 21–3)

Aberdeen, King's College Library, π 0919:0949 Fra 8 (*c*1540). 4 ff. OGT. Fragments of didactic music

Warsaw, Biblioteka Narodowa, 564 (photocopy of lost MS from the Holy Spirit Monastery, Kraków, 1548). 362 pp. OGT. Many intabulations, some cantus firmus settings. Literature: Z. Jachimecki: 'Eine polnische Orgeltabulatur aus dem Jahre 1548', ZMw, ii (1919–20), 206–12; H.J. Moser: Paul Hofhaimer (Stuttgart, 1929, 2/1965); Johnson, 1986; Brezezińska, 1988 (facs. pls.20, 24–30)

Basle, Universitätsbibliothek, F.I.8a (1551). Copy of Zurich Zentralbibliothek, 284b, with a larger selection of pieces. OGT. All the compositions are for the liturgy. Edition: EDM, liv (1974). Literature: C. Päsler: 'Fundamentbuch von Hans von Constanz', VMw, v (1889), 1–192; W. Nagel: 'Fundamentum Authore Johanne Buchnero', MMg, xxiii (1891), 71–109; E. von Werra: 'Johann Buchner', KJb, x (1895), 88–92

MS formerly in the collection of Jules Labarte, Paris [lost] (*c*1560). 56 pp. OGT. 3 alternatim masses for organ, anon. Literature: A. de La Fage: Essais de diphthérographie musicale (Paris, 1864/R), 261

Klagenfurt, Landesregierungsarchiv, GV 4–3 (*c*1560–70). 25 ff. NGT. Senfl: Preambulum a 6; anon. Exercitatio bona; transcriptions of vocal works by Josquin, Senfl, Verdelot, La Rue and of 2 anon. works. Edition: MAM, ix (1958) [the 2 original works]. Literature: H. Federhofer: 'Eine Kärntner Orgeltabulatur', Carinthia I, cxlii (1952), 330–37; Johnson, 1986

Wrocław, Biblioteka Uniwersytecka (*c*1565) [lost]. ?NGT. Anon. Magnificat settings, psalm tones, Te Deum, Wir glauben all an einem Gott. Literature: F. Dietrich: Geschichte des deutschen Orgelchorals im 17. Jahrhundert (Kassel, 1932); Apel, Eng. trans., 1972, 97–8

Regensburg, Fürstlich Thurn und Taxissche Hofbibliothek, F.K.Mus.II 21 (*c*1575). NGT. Short preambula, etc. Edition: Cantantibus organis, ix (1962). Literature: E. Tscheuschner: Die Neresheimer Orgeltabulaturen (diss., U. of Erlangen-Nürnberg, 1963)

Warsaw, Biblioteka Warszawskiego Towarzystwa Muzycznego, I/200 (*c*1580). 98 ff. NGT. 75 liturgical pieces by Klabon, Leopolita, Marcin Warteki, and ? Jacob Sowa, etc. [photographic copy at Harvard University, Isham Memorial Library]. Editions: CEKM, x (1968); AMP, xv (1968); [part edn.]. Literature: J. Gołos: 'Zaginiona tabulatura organowa Warszawskiego Towarzystwa Muzycznego (ca. 1580)', Muzyka kwartalnik, v/5 (1960), 70–79, vi/4 (1961), 60–70; J. Gołos in L'organo, ii (1961), 129–46

Berlin, Staatsbibliothek Preussischer Kulturbesitz, Mus.ms.40034 (tablature of Christoph Löffelholtz, 1585). 39 ff. NGT. Dances and intabulations. Literature: Merian, 1927; Johnson, 1986

Basle, Universitätsbibliothek, F.IX.44 (*c*1585–88). 124 ff. numbered 141–264, following on from the copy of Rühling's Tabulaturbuch with which it is bound. Intabulations of *c*50 works by Lassus, Handl, Marenzio, Clemens non Papa, Johann Walter (i) and others. Literature: J. Richter: Katalog der Musik-Sammlung auf der Universitäts-Bibliothek in Basel (Leipzig, 1892); Johnson, 1986

Brunswick, Stadtarchiv, G II 7:60 (*c*1585–1602 or later). NGT. Intabulations, etc. Literature: Johnson, 1986

Munich, Bayerische Staatsbibliothek, Clm 4748 (mid-1580s, 1601, Schweinfurt, assembled by Wilhelm Sixt). NGT. Intabulated chansons and motets. Literature: Göllner, 1979; Johnson, 1986

Gdańsk, Wojewódzkie Archiwum Państwowe, 300, R [Vv, 123] (1591). Fantasias etc. Edition: CEKM, x (1965–7) [part edn.]

Passau, Staatliche Bibliothek, 115 (1590s). 112 ff. NGT. Intabulations. Literature: Johnson, 1986

Regensburg, Proskesche Musikbibliothek, C119 (1590s). 185 ff. NGT. Intabulations. Literature: A. Scharnagl: 'Die Orgeltabulatur C 119 der Proske-Musikbibliothek Regensburg', Festschrift Bruno Stäblein, ed. M. Ruhnke (Kassel, 1967), 207–8; Johnson, 1986

Berlin, Deutsche Staatsbibliothek, Mus.ms.40115* (anon. tablature, 1593–7). 63 ff. NGT. Dances and intabulations, etc. Literature: Merian, 1927

Regensburg, Fürstliche Thurn und Taxissche Hofbibliothek, F.K.Mus.II 24 (1590s). 164 ff. NGT. Intabulations. Literature: E. Tscheuschner: Die Neresheimer Orgeltabulaturen (diss., U. of Erlangen-Nürnberg, 1963); Johnson, 1986

Basle, Universitätsbibliothek, F.IX.43 (1593, 1594, same hand as F.IX.44). 233 ff. NGT. Numerous intabulations of works by Handl, O. Vecchi, Waelrant, H.L. Hassler, Croce, Lechner, Ferretti, A. Gabrieli, F. Anerio, Lassus, J. Regnart, Marenzio, Monte, G. Gabrieli, Wert and others. Literature: J. Richter: Katalog der Musik-Sammlung auf der Universitäts-Bibliothek in Basel (Leipzig, 1892); Johnson, 1986

Toruń, Archiwum Wojewódzkie, XIV 13a (tablature of Johannes Fischer 1594–*c*1604). NGT. Motet intabulations and fantasias. Edition: CEKM, x (1965–7) [part edn]. Literature: A. Osostowicz: 'Nieznany motet Diomedesa Catoni i jego utwory organowe z toruńskiej tabulatury', Muzyka kwartalnik, iv/3 (1959), 45–9; Johnson, 1986

Munich, Bayerische Staatsbibliothek, Mus.ms.264 (1596). 41 ff. NGT. Motet transcriptions. Literature: Schierning, 1961; Göllner, 1979; Johnson, 1986

Berlin, Deutsche Staatsbibliothek, Mus.ms.40089* (tablature of Augustus Nörmiger, 1598). NGT. 77 chorales for the church year, intabulations and dances. Literature: Merian, 1927

Munich, Bayerische Staatsbibliothek, Mus.ms.1641 (end of 16th century). 221 ff. NGT. Literature: Göllner, 1979; Johnson, 1986

Munich, Bayerische Staatsbibliothek, Mus.ms.4480 (*c*1600). 80 ff. Intabulations of motets and madrigals, with dances, etc. Literature: Göllner, 1979

Stockholm, Kungliga Musikaliska Akadamiens Bibliotek, Tablature no.1 (belonged to Elisabeth Eysbock, *c*1600). 64 ff. 91 English, Italian, French and German pieces, all anon., including arrangements of works by Dowland, Lassus, G. Converso, etc. Literature: Schierning, 1961; R.T. Dart: 'Elisabeth Eysbock's Keyboard Book', STMf, xliv (1962), 5–12; R.T. Dart: 'Elisabeth Eysbock's Keyboard Book', Hans Albrecht in memoriam, ed. W. Brennecke and H. Haase (Kassel, 1962), 84; Johnson, 1986

Berlin, Deutsche Staatsbibliothek, Mus.ms.40318* (single leaf, fragments of organ verses, early 17th century). The name 'Johann Stephan' has been added in a 19th-century hand: cf next item.

'Cellisches Tabulaturbuch' (Celle, 1601; lost). Photographic copy in Berlin, Deutsche Staatsbibliothek (Bü 84). 75 ff. (9 missing). NGT. 61 chorales, etc., by Johann Stephan (Steffens), 'O.D.' and anon. composers. Edition: CEKM, xvii (1971). Literature: Schierning, 1961; W. Apel: 'Die Celler Orgeltabulatur von 1601', Mf, xix (1966), 142–51

Levoča, Library of the Protestant Rectory, Ms.mus.13990a (1603–*c*1620), 13990b. NGT. Intabulations. Literature: Johnson, 1986

Kremsmünster Benediktiner-Stift, Regenterei, L 9 (1604–6 and later). 310 pp. NGT. 130 transcriptions of motets by Lassus, Erbach, Pevernage, Regnart, etc., and anon. composers. Literature: Schierning, 1961; Johnson, 1986

Visby, Sweden, Cathedral Chapter (tablature of Berendt Petri, written by Petri at Hamburg, 1611). NGT. Magnificat cycle by H. Praetorius; many anon. settings of Latin hymns, mass movements, sequences, etc.; O lux by Johann Bahr added 1655 [DMA 1–890]. Edition: CEKM, iv (1963) [part edn]. Literature: Schierning, 1961

Linz, Landesmuseum 16, Inc.9467 (begun 6 Sept 1611). 93 ff. NGT. Anon. dances (42) and lied arrangements (21). Literature: Schierning, 1961

Wolfenbüttel, Herzog August Bibliothek, 227 (north Germany, between 1615 and 1625). 17 ff. NGT. Toccata by Scheidemann, 12 short anon. Benedicamus settings, a set of variations jointly by Sweelinck and Scheidt [DMA 1–349]. Literature: Schierning, 1961; Johnson, 1986

Wolfenbüttel, Herzog August Bibliothek, Helmstedt 1055 (early 17th century). Anon. preludes, chorales and dances. Literature: Apel, Eng. trans., 1972

Munich, Bayerische Staatsbibliothek, Mus.ms.263 (early 17th century). 118 ff. Intabulations of sacred vocal works. Literature: Schierning, 1961; Göllner, 1979

Munich, Bayerische Staatsbibliothek, Mus.ms.265 (early 17th century). 116 ff. NGT. Motet intabulations [DMA 1–810]. Literature: Schierning, 1961; Göllner, 1979; Johnson, 1986

Munich, Bayerische Staatsbibliothek, Mus.ms.1640 (early 17th century). 159 ff. NGT. Motet intabulations [DMA 1–811]. Literature: Schierning, 1961; Göllner, 1979; Johnson, 1986

[Munich, Bayerische Staatsbibliothek, Mus.ms.4481 (early 17th century). Open score. 49 + 2 ff. Untexted scores of vocal works. Literature: Göllner, 1979]

Regensburg, Fürstlich Thurn und Taxissche Hofbibliothek, F.K.Mus.II 22–23 (?early 17th century, Neresheim), 233, 196 ff. NGT. Intabulations of motets, etc. Literature: Schierning, 1961; E. Tscheuchner: Die Neresheimer Orgeltabulaturen (diss., U. of Erlangen-Nürnberg, 1963)

Warsaw, Biblioteka Narodowa, 327 (olim 4577, olim 5229; olim Legnica, Ritter-Akademie 98) [microfilm no.19, 581] (early 17th century). NGT. An intabulation of Schadaeus, Promptuarium musicum (Strasbourg 1611–17) with a few chorale settings added. Literature: Schierning, 1961; G. Gołos: 'Tre intavolature manoscritte di musica vocale rintracciate in Polonia', L'organo, iii (1962), 123–48; Pfuhl in MMg, xix, suppl.; Johnson, 1986

Warsaw, Biblioteka Narodowa 326 (olim 4579, olim 5231 and D 590–114; olim Legnica, Ritter-Akademie 100) (early 17th century). 328 ff. NGT. 298 intabulations of vocal works, mostly in skeletal form for accompanimental purposes. Literature: Schierning, 1961; G. Gołos: 'Tre intavolature manoscritte di musica vocale rintracciate in Polonia', L'organo, iii (1962), 123–48; Pfuhl in MMg, xix, suppl.; Johnson, 1986

Kraków, Biblioteka Jagiellońska, 24 (olim Legnica, Ritter-Akademie, 101) (early 17th century). 185 ff. NGT. Intabulations of secular works by Lassus, Marenzio, Gastoldi, Crecquillon, etc. on ff.137*v*–142*v*, 160*r*–165*r*. Literature: Schierning, 1961; G. Gołos; 'Tre intavolature manoscritte di musica vocale rintracciate in Polonia', L'organo, iii (1962), 123–48; Pfuhl in MMg, xix, suppl.

Vienna, Österreichische Nationalbibliothek, 17771 (after 1621). 220 ff. NGT. Keyboard music by Bull and Sweelinck; also canons in staff notation [DMA 1–892]. Editions: MB, xiv (1960) [Bull]; Sweelinck: Werke. Literature: J.H. van der Meer: 'The Keyboard Works in the Vienna Bull Manuscript', TVNM, xviii/2 (1957), 72–105; Schierning, 1961

[Berlin, Staatsbibliothek Preussischer Kulturbesitz, Mus.ms.40075 (*c*1625 and later). NGT. Intabulations, from vocal sources no later than the 1620s; also figured basses of later date. The intabulations were probably intended as accompaniments. Literature: Johnson, 1986]

Pelplin, Biblioteka Seminarium, 304–8, 308a ['Pelplin Keyboard Tablatures'] (Pelplin, Cistercian monastery, 1620–30). 6 vols. NGT. 797 transcriptions of vocal works and 91 keyboard compositions by Polish, Italian, German, Austrian, Netherlandish, Spanish and English (Morley, Philips) composers; also 12 organ chorales by Scheidemann, Tunder, etc., added in the 2nd half of the 17th century. Editions: AMP, ii–vii (1964–5) [facs.]; AMP, viii–x (1970) [part edn]; CEKM, x/1–2 (1965) (chorales). Literature: AMP, i; A. Sutkowski: 'Nieznane polonika muzyczne z XVI i XVII wieku', Muzyka kwartalnik, v/1 (1960), 62–77; Schierning, 1961; A. Sutkowski and O. Mischiati: 'Una preciosa fonte di musica strumentale: l'intavolatura di Pelplin', L'organo, ii (1961), 53–72; Johnson, 1986

New York, Public Library, MN T 131 (*c*1620–36). 45 ff. (77 pp. of music). NGT. Literature: F. Blume: 'Die Hs.T.131 der New York Public Library', Syntagma Musicologicum, ii: Gesammelte Reden

und Schriften 1962–1972, ed. A.A. Abert and M. Ruhnke (Kassel, 1973), 116–28

Copenhagen, Kongelige Bibliotek, 376 (*c*1626–39). 34 ff. NGT. 65 pieces, including 14 vocal arrangements, 6 preludes, 7 allemandes, 12 courantes, 3 German dances, etc., all anon. Literature: A. Pirro: 'L'art des organistes', EMDC, II/ii (1926), 1181–374; P. Hamburger: 'Ein handschriftliches Klavierbuch aus der ersten Hälfte des 17. Jahrhunderts', ZMw, xiii (1930–31), 133–40; Schierning, 1961

The MSS Deutsche Staatsbibliothek Mus.ms.40316 and Lynar A 1–2, formerly considered as possibly of southern German origin, are classified below in §2(iv).

Berlin, Deutsche Staatsbibliothek, Lynar B 1–10, C 1 (before 1635). C200 ff. NGT. Music by D. Abel, A. Düben, W. Karges, J. Praetorius, S. and G. Scheidt, Scheidemann, P. Siefert, M. Schildt, Sweelinck, etc. [DMA 1–414–424]. Editions: Allein Gott in der Höh sei Ehr: 20 Choralvariationen der deutschen Sweelinck-Schule, ed. H.J. Moser and T. Fedtke (Kassel and Basle, 1953); Choralbearbeitungen und freie Orgelstücke ... aus den Tabulaturen Lynar B1, B3, B6, ed. H.J. Moser and T. Fedtke (Kassel and Basle, 1955) [part edns]. Literature: A.E.F. Dickinson: 'A Forgotten Collection: a Survey of the Weckmann Books', MR, xvii (1956), 97–109; A.E.F. Dickinson: 'The Lübbenau Keyboard Books: a Further Note on Faceless Features', MR, xxvii (1966), 270–86

Vienna, Minoritenkonvent, Klosterbibliothek und Archiv, XIV 714 (olim 8) (*c*1630). 248 ff. 529 compositions, many liturgical, followed by a composition treatise using NGT [DMA 1–894]. Edition: SCKM, xxiv (1988) [facs.]. Literature: Schierning, 1961; F.W. Riedel: Das Musikarchiv im Minoritenkonvent zu Wien (Kassel, 1963)

Padua, Biblioteca Universitaria, 1982 (*c*1630) [lost]. 150 ff. NGT. Nearly 40 compositions by Sweelinck, Erbach and others [DMA 1–817]. Editions: CEKM, xxxvi (1971–7) [part edn]; Sweelinck: Werke. Literature: Schierning, 1961

Wolfenbüttel, Herzog August Bibliothek, Musikabteilung, MS bound with 1.2.2. Musica 2° (copy of Neusidler, Teutsch Lautenbuch, 1574; autograph of Christian Erbach, ?*c*1630). 33 ff. NGT. 14 ricercares, 5 introits, 1 toccata and 2 fragments by Erbach [DMA 1–336]. Edition: CEKM, xxxvi (1971–7). Literature: Schierning, 1961

Munich, Bayerische Staatsbibliothek, Mus.ms.4480 (*c*1630). 80 ff. Many intabulations of motets, chansons, etc., given anonymously; several original keyboard works including 2 by Adam Steigleder. Literature: M. Schuler: 'Eine neu entdeckte Komposition von Adam Steigleder', Mf, xxi (1968), 42–4

Munich, Bayerische Staatsbibliothek, Mus.ms.1581 (*c*1630). NGT. C100 compositions by Frescobaldi, C. Erbach, G. Gabrieli, Hassler and others [DMA 1–1247]. Editions: DTB, vii, Jg.iv/2 (1903–10) [Erbach, Hassler]; CEKM, xvii (1971), xxx (1968), xxxvi (1971–7), etc. [part edns]. Literature: Schierning, 1961; Göllner, 1979

Lüneburg, Stadtarchiv, Musikabteilung, Mus.ant.pract. KN 209 (1634 and later). NGT. Free compositions and chorales by C. Flor, Jakob Kortkamp, Morhard, Jacob Praetorius (ii), Scheidemann, M. Schildt, D. Strungk, Tunder, M. Weckmann and M. Woltmann; intabulations. Editions: see composers mentioned; 3 anon. free pieces in The Free Organ Compositions of the Lueneburg Organ Tablatures, ed. J.R. Shannon (St Louis, 1958). Literature: Welter, 1950; Schierning, 1961; Johnson, 1986

Berlin, Deutsche Staatsbibliothek, Mus.ms.40615 (*c*1635). 323 ff. NGT. Numerous compositions by C. Erbach and others [DMA 2–1410]. Edition: CEKM, xii (1966), xxx (1968), xxxvi (1971–7) [part edns.]. Literature: Schierning, 1961

Basle, Universitätsbibliothek, F.IX.42 (*c*1635). NGT. Intabulations of madrigals, etc., by Croce, Hassler, Giovannelli and anon. composers. Literature: J. Richter: Katalog der Musik-Sammlung auf der Universitäts-Bibliothek in Basel (Leipzig, 1892); Schierning, 1961

London, British Library, Add.34898 (*c*1635). 33 ff. NGT. Formerly bound with Steigleder, Tabulatur Buch, 1627; the anon. compositions in this MS are no longer considered to be by J.U. Steigleder. 22 keyboard pieces, anon. liturgical works, and ricercares by 'Joann Benn' and anon. composers. Literature: F. Hirtler: 'Neue aufgefundene Orgelstücke von J.U. Steigleder und Johann Benn', AMf, ii (1937), 92–100; Schierning, 1961

Turin, Biblioteca Nazionale Universitaria, Raccolta Mauro Foà 1–8, Dono Renzo Giordano 1–8 (Augsburg, 1637–40). 16 vols. NGT. In Mischiati's catalogue the 16 MSS are numbered I–VIII (=Giordano 1–8), X, IX, XI–XVI (Foà 1–8). C1750 compositions by C. Erbach, Frescobaldi, A. and G. Gabrieli, Merulo, Sweelinck and others. Editions: apart from those listed by Mischiati, substantial portions of the collection have appeared in CEKM, xxii (1995; Mortaro), xxx (1968; Frescobaldi), xxxvi (1971–7; Erbach), xli (1977; Bianciardi, Della Porta), xlv (1985; Hassler, Hans Leo), xlvi (1986; Bariolla) and xlvii/5 (1991; Merulo); also in Borgo, Cesare: Canzoni per sonare, ed. G. Gentile Verona (Padua, 1985). Literature: Schierning, 1961; O. Mischiati: 'L'intavolatura d'organo tedesca della Biblioteca nazionale di Torino', L'organo, iv (1963), 1–154, 237–8; Johnson, 1986; Judd, 1988

Basle, Universitätsbibliothek, F.IX.47–50 (autographs of S. Mareschall, 1638–40). 4 vols. of song transcriptions, ballets, fugues, 12 tons and ornamental harmonizations of the 150 psalms, etc., by Mareschall. Edition: CEKM, xxvii (1967). Literature: J. Richter: Katalog der Musiksammlung auf der Universitäts-Bibliothek in Basel (Leipzig, 1892); Merian, 1927; Schierning, 1961; Johnson, 1986

Berlin, Bibliothek der Streit'schen Stiftung, HB 103 (olim Graues Kloster 52) (*c*1640). 38 ff. NGT. 15 compositions, 11 by Sweelinck, 1 by S. Scheidt [DMA 1–1200]. Editions: Allein Gott in der Höh sei Ehr: 20 Choralvariationen der deutschen Sweelinck-Schule, ed. H.J. Moser and T. Fedtke (Kassel and Basle, 1953); Scheidt: Werke; Sweelinck: Werke; Choralbearbeitungen und freie Orgelstücke ... aus den Tabulaturen Lynar B1, B3, B6, und Graues Kloster Ms. 52, ed. H.J. Moser and T. Fedtke (Kassel and Basle, 1955) [part edns]. Literature: Schierning, 1961

Uppsala, Universitätsbiblioteket, Instr.mus.hs.408 (tablature of Gustav Düben, 1641). 44 ff. NGT. 20 works by 'Sibern' [Siefert], Scheidemann, Bull, Tomkins, Philips, Byrd, Sweelinck, S. Scheidt, Schildt, Felice, Anerio, Striggio, Frescobaldi, etc. [DMA 1–887]. Editions: CEKM, xxviii (2000). Literature: Riedel, 1960 [p.128 apparently refers to this MS as 409]; Schierning, 1961

Levoča, Library of the Protestant Rectory, Ms.mus.13992, 13993 (1641–5). NGT. Intabulations copied by Ján Šimbracký. Literature: Johnson, 1986

Levoča, Library of the Protestant Rectory, Ms.mus.13994 (*c*1650). NGT. Tablature of Samuel Marckfel[d]ner. Literature: F. Matúš, ed.: Tabulatúrny Zborník Samuela Marckfelnera (Bratislava, 1981)

[Uppsala, Universitätsbiblioteket, Instr.mus.hs.409 (*c*1650 and later): though not a keyboard MS, this is written in NGT. See J. Mráček: 'An Unjustly Neglected Source for the Study and Performance of Seventeenth-Century Instrumental Dance Music', IMSCR: Copenhagen 1972, 563–75]

Copenhagen, Kongelige Bibliotek (MS insertion in copy of Gabriel Voigtländer, Oden, 1642; *c*1650). 8 ff. A dozen or so pieces by Schildt, Scheidemann and anon. composers [DMA 1–1709]. Literature: Schierning, 1961

Berlin, Deutsche Staatsbibliothek, MS 600 (from the Amalienbibliothek of the Joachimsthalsche Gymnasium) (?written by Matthäus Härtel; includes the dates 1643, 1651 and 1669). 419 pp. NGT. Intabulations of masses, Magnificat settings, hymns and motets. Literature: Schierning, 1961

Clausthal-Zellerfeld, Kirchenbibliothek, Organ tablature I (1635–45). 253 pp. NGT. 59 compositions including Sweelinck's variations on Allein zu dir

Leipzig, Musikbibliothek der Stadt, II.2.51, part 1 (north Germany, 1646). NGT. 13 fantasias of which the 1st is certainly and the rest are probably by P. Siefert; variations on Wie schön leuchtet by S. Scheidt [DMA 1–795]. Editions: Organum, 4th ser., xx (Leipzig, n.d.) [works of Siefert]; Schiedt: Werke. Literature: Schierning, 1961

[Lüneburg, Stadtarchiv, Musikabteilung Mus.ant.pract. KN 206 (Hamburg, 1647). 160 ff. Open score. 'Study scores' of church music by Italian and German composers. Literature: Riedel, 1960; Schierning, 1961]

*_Berlin, Deutsche Staatsbibliothek, Mus.ms.40604_ (1648). NGT. Frescobaldi, etc.

*_Berlin, Deutsche Staatsbibliothek, Mus.ms.40065_ (1649–55). NGT. Chorales by M. Vulpius, 'transponirt von Johannes Vockerodt ... 1649'; signed and dated Joh[ann] Rudolf Ahle, 1655

Vienna, Österreichische Nationalbibliothek, 18491 ['Clavierbuch of Regina Clara Imhoff'] (1649). NGT. Keyboard dances by David Schedlich and anon. composers. Literature: W. Apel: _The Notation of Polyphonic Music, 900–1600_ (Cambridge, Mass., 1942, 5/1953/R; Ger. trans., 1962); Schierning, 1961; Apel, Eng. trans., 1972 [reads the date as 1629]

Vienna, Österreichische Nationalbibliothek, 18706 (Froberger autograph, 'libro secondo', dated Vienna, 29 Sept 1649). 111 ff. Partly open score. 6 toccatas, 6 fantasias, 6 canzonas, 6 suites, by Froberger. Editions: DTÖ, viii, Jg.iv/1 (1897); xiii, Jg.vi/2; xxi, Jg.x/2 (1903); Le pupitre, lvii (1979); SCKM, iii (1988) [facs.]. Literature: Riedel, 1960, 75; Schierning, 1961

Budapest, Országos Széchényi Könyvtár, Bártfa 28 (1649). ?NGT. Intabulation of a wedding concerto by Z. Zarevutius, etc. Literature: Schierning, 1961; Johnson, 1986

Basle, Universitätsbibliothek, F.IX.51 (17th century, ?c1650). 2 vols. NGT. 72 intabulations of sacred works by Lassus and others. Literature: J. Richter: _Katalog der Musik-Sammlung auf der Universitäts-Bibliothek in Basel_ (Leipzig, 1892); Schierning, 1961

Basle, Universitätsbibliothek, F.IX.52 (17th century, ?c1650, marked 'Danielis Hoferi'). NGT. 57 settings of French psalm tunes and 53 settings of Lutheran melodies. Literature: J. Richter: _Katalog der Musik-Sammlung auf der Universitäts-Bibliothek in Basel_ (Leipzig, 1892); Schierning, 1961

*_Berlin, Deutsche Staatsbibliothek, Mus.ms.40147_ (?c1650), 3 + 170 ff. NGT. Works by Froberger, Kindermann, etc.

Copenhagen, Kongelige Bibliotek, 'Clausholm MS' (c1650). 21 fragments, NGT. Edition: _Musikhåndskrifterne fra Clausholm_ [The Clausholm music fragments], ed. H. Glahn and S. Sørensen (Copenhagen, 1972)

Lüneburg, Stadtarchiv, Musikabteilung, Mus.ant.pract. KN 146–9, 207–10, is a series of MSS dating mostly from c1650 or later, fully described in Welter, 1950. For _KN 209_ see also above, under 1634

Lüneburg, Stadtarchiv, Musikabteilung, Mus.ant.pract. KN 146 (Joachim Drallius, 1650). 191 ff. NGT. Dances, song settings, chorale settings, preludes, toccata, by Scheidemann and others (many anon.). Editions: see SCHEIDEMANN, HEINRICH; 10 anon. free compositions in _The Free Organ Compositions of the Lueneburg Organ Tablatures_, ed. J.R. Shannon (St Louis, 1958). Literature: Schierning, 1961

Lüneburg, Stadtarchiv, Musikabteilung, Mus.ant.pract. KN 207.2–3, 18 (c1650). NGT. Motet intabulations [DMA 1–1231, 1232]. Literature: Schierning, 1961; Johnson, 1986

Lüneburg, Stadtarchiv, Musikabteilung, Mus.ant.pract. KN 210 (c1650). 93 ff., including 168 pp. in NGT. Intabulations of motets and madrigals, 4 chorale preludes (anon.), 2 fugues (anon.), 1 prelude (anon.) [DMA 1–1245]. Editions: 3 anon. pieces in _The Free Organ Compositions of the Lueneburg Organ Tablatures_, ed. J.R. Shannon (St Louis, 1958). Literature: Schierning, 1961; Johnson, 1986

Lüneburg, Stadtarchiv, Musikabteilung, Mus.ant.pract. KN 207.15 (c1650). 42 ff., including 68 pp. in NGT. 53 short preludes, 3 fantasias, 2 fugues, 1 canzona, by Scheidemann, J. Praetorius, C. Flor, M. Schildt, M. Olter, D. Meyer, J. de Werg, M. Weckmann, F. Tunder and anon. composers [DMA 1–1238]. Editions: see composers cited; 31 pieces in _The Free Organ Compositions of the Lueneburg Organ Tablatures_, ed. J.R. Shannon (St Louis, 1958). Literature: Schierning, 1961

Lüneburg, Stadtarchiv, Musikabteilung, Mus.ant.pract. KN 207.17.1–2 (c1650). 9, 10 ff. NGT. 4 settings of the _Te Deum_, nos.1 and 3, with preludes, by J. Praetorius (no.2 dated 1636), Jakob Kortkamp, F. Tunder. Literature: Schierning, 1961

Lüneburg, Stadtarchiv, Musikabteilung, Mus.ant.pract. KN 207.18 (c1650). NGT. Intabulation by Scheidemann of a motet by H.L. Hassler. Literature: Johnson, 1986

Lüneburg, Stadtarchiv, Musikabteilung, Mus.ant.pract. KN 208.2 (c1650). 64 ff., including 112 pp. in NGT. Preludes and chorale settings. 42 pieces by Scheidemann, S. Scheidt and anon. composers [DMA 1–1243]. Editions: see composers cited; 3 pieces in _The Free Organ Compositions of the Lueneburg Organ Tablatures_, ed. J.R. Shannon (St Louis, 1958). Literature: Schierning, 1961

Leipzig, Musikbibliothek der Stadt, II.6.16 (c1650, belonged to Elisabeth Angelina Eygers). Hymns, songs, fugues, etc.

Lüneburg, Stadtarchiv, Musikabteilung, Mus.ant.pract. KN 208.1 (1652–6). 60 ff. NGT. 43 chorales, preludes, fugues, toccatas; 6 pieces are by Scheidemann, the rest anon. Editions: EDM, xxxvi (1957); 10 pieces in _The Free Organ Compositions of the Lueneburg Organ Tablatures_, ed. J.R. Shannon (St Louis, 1958). Literature: Schierning, 1961

Budapest, Országos Széchényi Könyvtár, Bártfa 26 (1 piece dated 1653). ?NGT. Intabulations of motets and masses, etc. [DMA 1–1204]. Literature: Johnson, 1986

Vienna, Österreichische Nationalbibliothek, 18707 (Froberger autograph, 'libro quarto', dated 1656). 118 ff. Partly open score. 6 toccatas, 6 ricercares, 6 capriccios, 6 partitas, by Froberger. Editions: DTÖ, viii, Jg.iv/1 (1897); xiii, Jg.vi/2; xxi, Jg.x/2 (1903); Le pupitre, lvii; SCKM, iii (1988) [facs.]. Literature: Riedel, 1960, 76

Vienna, Österreichische Nationalbibliothek, 16560 (Froberger autograph, not before 18 Aug 1658). 47 ff. Open score. 6 capriccios, 6 ricercares. Editions: DTÖ, viii, Jg.iv/1 (1897); xiii, Jg.vi/2; xxi, Jg.x/2 (1903); Le pupitre, lvii; SCKM, iii (1988) [facs.]. Literature: Riedel, 1960, 76

Berlin, Staatsbibliothek Preussischer Kulturbesitz, Mus.ms.40158 (Daniel Schmidt, 1658–9 and possibly earlier). 88 ff. NGT. Motet intabulations, dances, etc. [DMA 1–1695]. Literature: Johnson, 1986

Budapest, Országos Széchényi Könyvtár, Bártfa 27 (c1660). 59 ff. NGT. 33 canzonas, intabulations, chorale variations, songs, dances, etc.; composers include Scheidt and Sweelinck. Literature: Johnson, 1986

APPENDIX

Numerous German sources from 1660 to 1680 are of a broadly retrospective character. Among them may be cited the later additions to the 'Pelplin MS' of 1620–30; the 3rd section (1669) of _Berlin, Staatsbibliothek, Amalienbibliothek, 600_; _Berlin, Amalienbibliothek, 340_ (1664); the 2nd and 3rd parts of _Leipzig, Musikbibliothek der Stadt, II.2.51_; the additions (up to 1703) to _Berlin, Staatsbibliothek Preussischer Kulturbesitz, Mus.ms.40158_; _Budapest, Országos Széchényi Könyvtár, Bártfa 25_; the _Celler Klavierbuch_ (1662: see J.H. Schmidt: 'Eine unbekannte Quelle zur Klaviermusik des 17. Jahrhunderts, das Celler Klavierbuch 1662', _AMw_, xxii (1965), 1-11); _Munich, Bayerische Staatsbibliothek, 5368_ ['Neresheim MS'] (1661–82); a Göttweig MS (see F.W. Riedel: 'Eine unbekannte Quelle zu J.K. Kerlls Musik für Tasteninstrumente', _Mf_, xiii (1960), 310–14); _Vienna, Minoritenkonvent, Klosterbibliothek und Archiv, 699_; _Clausthal-Zellerfeld, Kirchenbibliothek, II_ (c1668: see Sweelinck, _Instrumental Works_, ii); tablatures of Podbielski (lost) and Zeleckowski (_Kraków, Biblioteka Jagiellońska, 10002_) (both c1680: CEKM, x, 1965–7); _Leipzig, Musikbibliothek der Stadt, II.6.18_; the 'Hintze MS' (_New Haven, Yale University, Library of the School of Music, 21.h.59_); _Lüneburg, Stadtarchiv, KN 147–9, 207.6_ (1663), _207.14, 207.16, 207.19–22_; _Uppsala, Universitetsbiblioteket, Ihre 284–5_ (1679: see A. Grape: _Ihreska handskriftssamlingen i Uppsala universitets bibliotek_, ii (Uppsala, 1949); W. Apel: 'Neu aufgefundene Clavierwerke von Scheidemann, Tunder, Froberger, Reincken, und Buxtehude', _AcM_, xxxiv (1962), 65–7). For most of these, and for many other German sources of the later 17th century, see especially Riedel, 1960, Apel, Eng. trans., 1972 and Johnson, 1986

PRINTED SOURCES

Virdung, Sebastian: _Musica getutscht und aussgezogen_ (Basle, 1511; _see_ TABLATURE, fig.4). 56 ff.: OGT. Intabulation of a German song on ff.J1_v_–J2_r_. Editions: PÄMw, x (1981–92) [facs.]; ed. L. Schrade (Kassel, 1931) [facs.]; DM, 1st ser., xxxi (1970) [facs.]. Literature:

BrownI. For the Latin version see Luscinius (1536); for the French and Flemish versions see §2(iv) Vorsterman (1529, 1554, 1568)

Schlick, Arnolt: Tabulaturen etlicher Lobgesang und Lidlein uff die Orgeln und Lauten (Mainz: Peter Schöffer, 1512). 4 + 42 ff. OGT. The organ compositions comprise a Salve regina and 9 other pieces. Editions: G. Harms (Klecken, 1924, rev. 2/1957); Orgelkompositionen, ed. R. Walter (Mainz, 1970). Literature: BrownI

Agricola, Martin: Musica instrumentalis deudsch (Wittenberg: Georg Rhau, 1528, repr. 1529, 1530, 1542; 2/1545), 60 ff. There is 1 purely theoretical example of OGT in this treatise; see however above, Leipzig, Musikbibliothek der Stadt (*c*1530). Editions: PÄMw xxiv (1900) [facs. of both edns]. Literature: BrownI

Luscinius, Othmar: Musurgia seu praxis musicae (Strasbourg: Johannes Schottus, 1536). 56 ff. This is a Latin version of Virdung's Musica getutscht (1511), and carries the same example of OGT. Literature: BrownI

Ammerbach, Elias Nikolaus: Orgel oder Instrument Tabulatur (Leipzig: Jacob Berwalds Erben, 1571; 2/Nuremberg: Typis Gerlachianis, 1583). 111 ff. (1st edn), 116ff. (2nd edn). NGT. 90 pieces (135 in 2nd edn). Edition: C. Jacobs (Oxford, 1984). Literature: BrownI; Johnson, 1986 (For illustration see AMMERBACH, ELIAS NIKOLAUS.)

Ammerbach, Elias Nikolaus: Ein neu kunstlich Tabulaturbuch (Nuremberg: Dietrich Gerlach, 1575). 90 ff. NGT. 41 intabulations of vocal works by Lassus and others. Literature: BrownI; Johnson, 1986

Schmid, Bernhard (i): Zwey Bücher einer neuen kunstlichen Tabulatur auff Orgel und Instrument (Strasbourg: Bernhard Jobin, 1576, repr. 1577; fig.5. A supposed Latin version, Bernhard Fabricii tabulaturae organis et instrumentis inservientes, Àrgent, apud Jobin.77 is no more than an entry in Draudius, Bibliotheca classica, 1611). 98 ff. NGT. 65 intabulations, dances, etc. Literature: BrownI; Johnson, 1986

Paix, Jakob: Ein schön nutz unnd gebreüchlich Orgel Tabulaturbuch (Lauhingen: Georg Willer, 1583; an entry in Draudius, Bibliotheca classica, 1611, refers to Jacobi Paix Tabulatura organi fistularum, Lauing. 87. fol). 176 ff. NGT. 88 intabulations, dances, etc. Literature: BrownI; Johnson, 1986

Rühling, Johannes: Tabulaturbuch, auff Orgeln und Instrument (Leipzig: Johan Beyer, 1583), 143 ff. NGT. 85 motet intabulations in order of the liturgical year. Literature: BrownI; Johnson, 1986

Paix, Jakob: Thesaurus motetarum (Strasbourg: Bernhart Jobin, 1589). 59 ff. NGT. 24 motet intabulations. Literature: BrownI; Johnson, 1986

Schmid, Bernhard (ii): Tabulatur Buch (Strasbourg: Lazarus Zetzner, 1607). 6 + 114 pp. NGT. Intonations by A. and G. Gabrieli; toccatas by A. and G. Gabrieli, G. Diruta and C. Merulo; motet arrangements, galliards. Edition: Monuments of Music and Music Literature in Facsimile, 1st ser., xx (1967). Literature: SartoriB; Johnson, 1986

Praetorius, Michael: Musae Sioniae ... siebender Theil (Wolfenbüttel: in Verlegung des Autoris, 1609). 4 partbooks. The volume concludes with four chorale settings for organ, written out in the separate partbooks. Editions: W. Gurlitt, AMw, iii (1921), 135–98; Sämtliche Werke, vii; K. Matthaei (Wolfenbüttel, 1930)

Praetorius, Michael: Hymnodia Sionia (Wolfenbüttel: sumtibus Autoris, 1611). 4 partbooks. There are four settings of Latin hymns marked 'pro organico'. Editions: W. Gurlitt, AMw, iii (1921), 135–98; Sämtliche Werke, xii; K. Matthaei (Wolfenbüttel, 1930)

Caus, Salomon de: Les raisons des forces mouvantes avec diverses machines (Frankfurt, 1615). Includes a shortened version of P. Philips's arrangement of Striggio's madrigal Chi fara fed'al cielo. Edition: Archives des maîtres de l'orgue, x (1909–11). Literature: G. Reese: Music in the Renaissance (New York, 1954, 2/1959), 436

Woltz, Johann: Nova musices organicae tabulatura (Basle: Johann Jacob Genath, 1617). 360 pp. NGT. Numerous motet intabulations in parts 1 and 2; in part 3, canzonas by F. Maschera, G. de Macque, C. Merulo, C. Antegnati, F. Tresti and A.

5. Bernhard Schmid's 'Zwey Bücher einer neuen kunstlichen Tabulatur' (1577): a keyboard transcription of Lassus's 'Benedicam Dominum' (with some ornamentation) in new German tablature, in which all the parts are written in alphabetic notation with rhythmic indications above

Banchieri, fugues by Simon Lohet. Literature: SartoriB; Johnson, 1986

Amoenitatum musicalium hortulus ([?Leipzig: Casper Klosman], 1622) [lost]. ?NGT. Contained *c*100 compositions by German and Italian composers; the sole copy mentioned by Sartori was at Liegnitz (Legnica), and is presumably lost. Literature: SartoriB

Scheidt, Samuel: Tabulatura nova, continens variationes aliquot psalmorum, fantasiarum, cantilenarum, passamezzo, et canones aliquot (Hamburg: Typis et sumptibus Heringianis, 1624). 3 vols. (the title-page is that of the 1st only). Open score. Editions: DDT, i (1958); Werke, vi–vii

Steigleder, Johann Ulrich: Ricercar, tabulatura, organis et organoedis unice inserviens et maxime conducens ([Stuttgart]: Autoris sumptibus, 1624). 37 pp. 12 ricercares. Edition: CEKM, xiii(1968–9). Literature: Schierning, 1961, 11

Steigleder, Johann Ulrich: Tabulaturbuch, darinn das Vater unser auff 2. 3 and 4 Stimmen componirt, und viertzigmal varirt würdt, auch bei jeder musicalischen Instrumenten ordentlich zu appliciren (Strasbourg: Marx von der Heyden, 1627). 155 pp. Open score. Edition: CEKM, xiii (1968–9). Literature: Schierning, 1961, 12

Klemm, Johann: Partitura, seu Tabulatura italica, exhibens triginta sex fugas, 2, 3, et 4 vocibus, ad duodecim consuetos tonos musicos compositas (Dresden: sumptibus Autoris, 1631). 94 pp. Open score [DMA 1–1018]. Literature: Schierning, 1961, 15

Kindermann, Johannes Erasmus: Harmonia organica, in tabulaturam Germanicam composita: I Preambula per omnes tonos figurales; II Fantasiae; III Fuga; IV Intonationes; V Magnificat (Nuremberg: sumptibus Autoris, 1645). 24 pp. NGT. Editions: DTB, xxxii,

6. London, British Library, Add.29486, f.27v: an anonymous verse for a 'Magnificat', with an indication for divided stops, early 17th century

Jg.xxi–xxiv (1913–24); SOB, ix (1966). Literature: Schierning, 1961, 15

Michel, Christian: Tabulatura, darin Präludien, Toccaten auf dem Klavier (Brunswick, 1645). 75 pp. 18 preludes, 6 toccatas, 10 courantes. Edition: MMg, vii (1815), suppls., 132–3 [2 courantes]. Literature: Schierning, 1961, 16

Ebner, Wolfgang: Aria augustissimi ... Imperatoris Ferdinandi III ... XXXVI modis variata ac pro cimbalo accomodata (Prague, 1648). Literature: Riedel, 1960, 58

Scheidt, Samuel: Tabulaturbuch hundert geistlicher Lieder und Psalmen (Görlitz: Martin Herman, 1650). Open score. Edition: Werke, i

Kircher, Athanasius: Musurgia universalis (Rome, 1650, 2/1662, 3/1690) includes a work for keyboard attributed to J.C. Kerll but probably by Poglietti, and Froberger's Fantasia no.1. Open score. Editions: DTÖ, viii, Jg.iv/1 (1897) [Froberger]; Die Orgel, 2nd ser., v (1957) [Poglietti]. Literature: Apel, Eng. trans., 1972

(iv) The Netherlands.

MANUSCRIPT SOURCES

London, British Library, Add.29485 ['Van Soldt Keyboard MS'] (?copied in the Netherlands, *c*1570; but the last 4 pieces copied by an English scribe for Suzanne van Soldt, 1599). 27 ff. Dutch music of the generation before Sweelinck, and 4 pieces of English character, all anon. Edition: MMN, iii (1961). Literature: A. Curtis: Sweelinck's Keyboard Music (Leiden and London, 1969, 2/1972)

Liège, Université, Bibliothèque, 153 (olim 888) ['Liège Organbook'] (Liber fratrum cruciferorum leodiensium, copied probably by Gerard Scronx, last piece dated 1617). 77 ff. 54 pieces by A. Gabrieli, P. Philips, C. Merulo, Sweelinck, 'Wilhelmo Brouno' (William Brown), 'Gerardus Scronx' and anon. composers. Editions: Archives des maîtres de l'orgue, x. Literature: R.T. Dart: 'The Organ-Book of the Crutched Friars of Liège', RBM, xvii (1963), 21–8; Judd, 1988

London, British Library, Add.29486 (1618). 84 ff. numbered 2–85 (85 blank). A large repertory of liturgical organ music for the Catholic Church, mostly anon. (fig.6). Preludes on the 8 tones; alternatim masses and Magnificat settings; preludes (i.e. intonazioni) on the 12 tones by G. Gabrieli; *c*50 fugues on the 8 tones (at end, 'finis tonorum 27 Semptembris [sic] 1618'); Sweelinck, Quarti toni fantasia and 2 anon. fantasias. Editions: Sweelinck: Werke; G. Gabrieli, ed. S. dalla Libera, i (Milan, 1957). Literature: B. van den Sigtenhorst Meyer: Jan P. Sweelinck en zijn instrumentale muziek (The Hague, 1934, enlarged 2/1946), 154–5, 167ff; G.S. Bedbrook: Keyboard Music from the Middle Ages to the Baroque (London, 1949/R with introduction by F.E. Kirby), 98; Apel, Eng. trans., 1972

MS of Vincentius de la Faille (1625) [lost]. 128 ff., of which *c*30 contain music. Miscellaneous dances, including some pieces by English composers. Literature: C. van den Borren: 'Le livre de clavier de Vincentius de la Faille', Mélanges de musicologie offerts à M. Lionel de la Laurencie (Paris, 1933), 85–96

Oxford, Christ Church Library, 89 (copied in the Netherlands, ? by Richard Dering, *c*1625). viii + 348 pp. Toccata by 'Guil. Brouno' (William Brown), Veni Creator by 'P.Phil.', 2 fantasias by Peeter Cornet, and a large number of anon. organ pieces for the Tridentine liturgy, probably composed by Dering. Literature: T. Dart: 'An Early Seventeenth-Century Book of English Organ Music for the Roman Rite', ML, lii (1971), 27–38

Berlin, Deutsche Staatsbibliothek, Mus.ms.40316* (olim 191 fol.) (at least partly before 1626) [lost]. 85 ff. 3 compilers; music by Cornet, Frescobaldi, Sweelinck, English composers, etc. [DMA 2–533; Harvard University Music Library 2203.5.1; Berlin,

Deutsche Staatsbibliothek F 1134]. Editions: Archives des maîtres de l'orgue, x; CEKM, xxvi (1969) [Cornet]; CEKM, xxx (1968) [Frescobaldi]

London, British Library, Add.23623 (G. Messaus; 1629). 18 ff. 70 pieces by Bull and others. Edition: Harpsichord Pieces from Dr. Bull's Flemish Tablature, ed. H.F. Redlich (Wilhelmshaven and London, 1958). Literature: J. Ward: 'Bull', Lives of the Professors of Gresham College (London, 1740) [incl. description of 2 companion MSS, formerly the property of Pepusch and now lost]

Berlin, Deutsche Staatsbibliothek, Lynar A1 (*c*1640). 331 pp. 82 works, by Sweelinck (27), C. Erbach, G. Gabrieli, P. Philips, Bull, G. Farnaby, L. Woodson, [P.] de la Barre, etc. That the 'M.W.' of this MS is Matthias Weckmann has been disproved [DMA 2–412]. Editions: Allein Gott in der Höh sei Ehr: 20 Choralvariationen der deutschen Sweelinck-Schule, ed. H.J. Moser and T. Fedtke (Kassel and Basle, 1953); Choralbearbeitungen aus der Tabulatur Lynar A1, ed. H.J. Moser and T. Fedtke (Kassel and Basle, 1956); L'organiste liturgique, lviii–lix (1965) [part edns]. Literature: A.E.F. Dickinson: 'A Forgotten Collection: a Survey of Weckmann Bodes', MR, xvii (1956), 97–109, and 'The Lübbenau Keyboard Books: a further Note on Faceless Features', MR, xxvii (1966), 270–86; W. Breig: 'Die Lübbenauer Tabulaturen Lynar A1 und A2: eine quellenkundliche Studie', AMw, xxv (1968), 96–117, 223–36

Berlin, Deutsche Staatsbibliothek, Lynar A2 (*c*1640). 33 ff. 44 works by C. Erbach, G. Gabrieli, T. Merula, Byrd, Bull and anon. composers. Literature: A.E.F. Dickinson in MR, xvii (1956), 97–109, and MR, xxvii (1966), 270–86; W. Breig: 'Die Lübbenauer Tabulaturen Lynar A1 und A2: eine quellenkundliche Studie', AMw, xxv (1968), 96–117, 223–36

Leningrad, Biblioteka Akademii Nauk, Q N 204 (*c*1650). 95 ff., of which only 1–35 contain music, partly in NGT. Dances, etc., mostly anon., but including 3 by Sweelinck. Edition: MMN, iii (1961) [part edn]

Collection of the late Hans Brandt Buys, 'Camphuysen MS' (1650–60). 79 ff., of which only 1–52 contain music. Anon. dances and psalm tunes. Edition: MMN, iii (1961) [part edn]

APPENDIX

Among Dutch MSS shortly after 1660 must be mentioned the 'Gresse MS' now in Utrecht, Universiteitsbibliotheek (selection ed. in MMN, iii, 1961), and the keyboard book of Anna Maria van Eyl, 1671 (MMN, ii, 1959).

PRINTED SOURCES

Vorsterman, Guillaume, ed.: Livre plaisant et tres utile pour apprendre a faire et ordonner toutes tabulatures hors le discant (Antwerp: Guillaume Vorsterman, 1529). 40 ff. A free translation of the 2nd part of Virdung's Musica getutscht, with an arrangement of Een vrolijc wesen (by Barbireau, Isaac or Obrecht) in OGT on ff.D3*r*–E1*v* in place of Virdung's example. A Flemish translation of this French version, with the same music examples, was published in 1554 (2/1568)

Speuy, Hendrick: De Psalmen Davids, gestelt op het tabulateur van het orghel ende clavercymmel met 2 partijen (Dordrecht: Peeter Verhaghen, 1610). 49 pp. 2-part settings of Genevan psalm tunes. Edition: H.J. Speuy: Psalm Preludes, ed. F. Noske (Amsterdam, 1962). Literature: A. Curtis: Sweelinck's Keyboard Music (Leiden and London, 1969, 2/1972)

Noordt, Anthoni van: Tabulatuur-boeck van psalmen en fantasyen (Amsterdam: Willem van Beaumont, 1659). 10 psalm settings and 6 fantasias. Edition: UVNM, xix (1896)

(v) Spain and Portugal.

MANUSCRIPT SOURCES

Coimbra, Biblioteca Geral da Universidade, 48 (*c*1560). 128 ff. Open score. 93 compositions consisting mostly of motet and chanson transcriptions; also the 10 ensemble ricercares of J. Buus (1547), a tiento by F. Soto de Langa and a fragment of a 'Tento de meyo registo' by 'Dom Gabriel'. Literature: M.S. Kastner: 'Los manoscritos musicales ns. 48 y 242 de la Biblioteca general de la Universidad de Coimbra', AnM, v (1950), 78–96

Coimbra, Biblioteca Geral da Universidade, 242 (*c*1570). 184 ff. Open score. 230 compositions including numerous transcriptions, and original works by J. Bermudo, A. de Cabezón, A. Carreira, A. de Macedo, H. de Paiva and A. Gómez de Yepes. Edition: PM, ser.A, xix (1969) [part edn]. Literature: M.S. Kastner: 'Los manoscritos musicales ns. 48 y 242 de la Biblioteca general de la Universidad de Coimbra', AnM, v (1950), 78–96

Lisbon, Biblioteca do Palácio Nacional da Ajuda (MS postscript to copy of Correa de Arauxo's Libro de tientos; date of edn, 1626). A work by J. (?or F.) de Peraza. Editions: MME, xii (1948–52) [Correa]; CEKM, xiv (1971). A similar MS appendix occurs in the copy in Madrid, Biblioteca Nacional, Raros 14069

El Escorial, Real Monasterio [2 unnumbered MSS] (*c*1660). Compositions by Clavijo, (?F.) de Peraza, Aguilera, Ximénez, Bruna, Torrijos, Perandreu, Sinxano, Joan Sebastian. Edition: CEKM, xiv (1971) [part edn]. Literature: W. Apel: 'Die spanische Orgelmusik vor Cabanilles', AnM, xvii (1962), 15–29; W. Apel: 'Spanish Organ Music of the Early 17th Century', JAMS, xv (1962), 174–81

Oporto, Biblioteca Pública Municipal, 1576 Col.B–5 (*c*1660). 78 ff. contain music. Open score. Works by João da Costa, André [da Costa], Gasper dos Reis, Mateo Romero. Edition: PM, ser.A, vii (1963). Literature: W. Apel: 'Die spanische Orgelmusik vor Cabanilles', AnM, xvii (1962), 15–29. [MS 1577 is similar but of later date and in ST]

PRINTED SOURCES

Baena, Gonzalo de: Arte nouamente inuentada pera aprender a tãger (Lisbon: German Galharde, 1540). Literature: T. Knighton: 'A Newly Discovered Keyboard Source', Plainsong and Medieval Music, v (1996), 81–112. Previously reported as lost

Mudarra, Alonso: Tres libros de musica en cifras para vihuela (Seville: Juan de León, 1546). 117 ff. On f.61 of the 'Libro tercero' is a tiento for organ or harp in ST. Editions: Silva ibérica de música para tecla de los siglos XVI, XVII y XVIII, ed. M.S. Kastner (Mainz, 1954); MGG1, v, 1567 [part facs.]. Literature: Judd, 1988

Bermudo, Juan: Comiença el arte Tripharia (Osuna, Juan de León, 1550), 40 ff. A short composition for 2 voices, the romance Donde son estas serranas, is given in mensural notation and ST on f.38*v*. Editions: (n.p., *c*1970) [facs.]; R. Stevenson: Juan Bermudo (The Hague, 1960) [the kbd piece]

Bermudo, Juan: Comiença el libro llamado Declaración de inst[r]umentos musicales (Osuna: Juan de León, 1555). 5 books, 150 ff. 14 complete pieces for keyboard, 1 in ST and the others in separate parts arranged in choirbook fashion. The Declaración of 1549 had contained no keyboard music; but see the Tripharia, 1550. Editions: DM, 1st ser., xi (1957) [facs.], Orgue et liturgie, xlvii (1960); R. Stevenson: Juan Bermudo (The Hague, 1960) [edns of kbd exx.]. Literature: Judd, 1988

Venegas de Henestrosa, Luis, ed.: Libro de cifra nueva para tecla, harpa y vihuela, en el qual se enseña brevemente cantar canto llano, y canto d'organo, y algunos avisos para contrapunto (Alcalá: Joan de Brocar, 1557). 78 ff. ST. 138 compositions by Antonio de Cabezón and others. Edition: MME, ii (1944). Literature: J. Ward: 'The Editorial Methods of Venegas de Henestrosa', MD, vi (1952), 105–13; Judd, 1988

Alberch Vila, Pere: Tentos de organo (155?) [lost]. Formerly in the library of John IV of Portugal

Santa María, Tomás de: Libro llamado: Arte de tañer fantasia, assi para tecla como para vihuela (Valladolid: Francisco Fernández de Córdoba, 1565). 2 books, 94 + 124 ff. Numerous musical examples. Editions: (Geneva, 1973) [facs.]; Orgue et liturgie, xlix (1961) [edn of kbd exx.]

Rodriguez de Mesa, Gregorio Silvestre: Libro de cifra para tecla (156?) [lost]

Cabezón, Antonio de: Obras de música para tecla arpa y vihuela ... recopiladas y puestas en cifra por Hernando de Cabeçon su hijo (Madrid: Francisco Sanchez, 1578; *see*TABLATURE, fig.3). 213 ff. ST. 129 works of various kinds. Editions: Hispania schola musica sacra, iii–iv, vii–viii (1894–8); MME, xxvii–xxix (1966). Literature: Judd, 1988

Pimental, Pedro: Livro de cifra de varias obras para se tangerem no orgao (1599) [lost]

Arratia, Joao de, Clavijo, Bernardo, and Castillo, Diego del: Tentos para orgao (159?) [lost]. Formerly in the library of John IV of Portugal

Peraza, Francisco de: Tentos de tecla (159?) [lost]. Formerly in the library of John IV of Portugal Rodrigues Coelho, Manuel: Flores de Musica pera o instrumento de tecla, & harpa (Lisbon: Pedro Craesbeeck, 1620). 241 ff. Open score. 24 tientos, 4 settings of Lassus's Susanne un jour, and numerous liturgical works. Edition: PM, ser.A, i (1959), iii (1961)

Correa de Arauxo, Francisco: Libro de tientos y discursos de musica practica y theorica de organo intitulado facultad organica (Alcalá: Antonio Arnao, 1626). 234 ff. ST. Numerous tientos, discursos, etc. Edition: MME, vi (1948), xii (1952). Literature: C. Jacobs: Francisco Correa de Arauxo (The Hague, 1973); Judd, 1988

(vi) British Isles.

MANUSCRIPT SOURCES

London, British Library, Add.28550 [Robertsbridge Codex] (*c*1360). Keyboard music on ff.43–4 only (see TABLATURE, fig.1). 3 estampies (the 1st incomplete) and 3 motet arrangements (the last incomplete), all anon.; the 1st 2 motets are from the Roman de Fauvel. Editions: Early English Harmony, i (1897), pl.42–5 [facs.]; CEKM, i (1963), 1–9. Literature: J. Wolf: 'Zur Geschichte der Orgelmusik im vierzehnten Jahrhundert', KJb, xiv (1899), 14–31; W. Apel: The Notation of Polyphonic Music, 900–1600 (Cambridge, MA, 1942, 5/1953/R; Ger. trans., 1962); C. Parrish: The Notation of Medieval Music (London, 1958); Apel, Eng. trans., 1972. For the date, see E.H. Roesner: Introduction to Philippe de Vitry: Complete Works (Monaco, 1984)

London, British Library, Roy.App.56 (*c*1530). 32 ff. Anon. keyboard works, arrangements and other items. Edition: EECM, vi (1966), x (1969) [part edn]; remaining keyboard items in MB, lxvi (1995). Literature: J. Stevens: Music and Poetry in the Early Tudor Court (London, 1961)

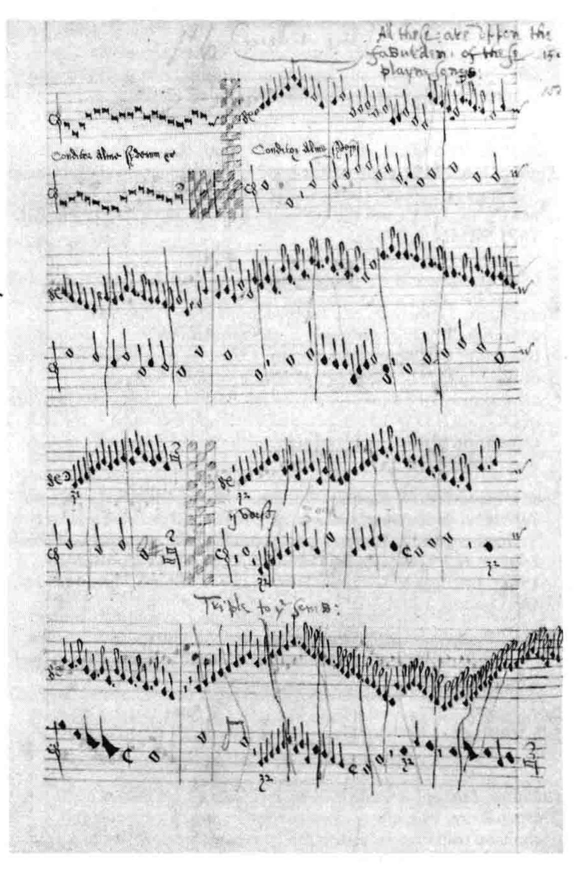
Evesham, Almonry Museum: music written in a copy of the 'Matthew Bible', 1st edn 1537, by John Alcester, monk of Evesham, *c*1540. 2 pp. of keyboard music, anon. Edition: MB, lxvi (1995). Literature: T. Dart: 'Notes on a Bible of Evesham Abbey (ii): a Note on the Music', English Historical Review, lxxix (1964), 777–8

London, British Library, Add.15233 (*c*1540). 11 ff. contain music. 9 liturgical pieces, mostly ascribed to Redford and probably all by him; several leaves of this portion of the MS are missing. Edition: EECM, vi (1966), x (1969) [edn of kbd music]

London, British Library, Roy.App.58 (*c*1540). 60 ff. Its numerous items include 10 keyboard pieces, of which 7 are arrangements of ensemble works; 1 of the original works, 'A Hornpipe', is by Hugh Aston, and the other 2 may also be by him. Edition: MB, lxvi. Literature: J. Stevens: Music and Poetry in the Early Tudor Court (London, 1961)

Oxford, Brasenose College, fragment 156 (*c*1550). 2 ff. Fragments of 2 Te Deum settings. Edition: MB, lxvi (1995)

Durham, University Library, printed book E OCT C27R (T. James: Index generalis librorum prohibitorum (Oxford, 1627)), end-leaves. Fragments of 2 liturgical compositions. Edition: MB, lxvi (1995)



London, British Library, Add.29996 (*c*1548–*c*1650). 216 ff. of 16th–17th-century paper. A large composite MS in 5 main sections: (1) ff.1–2, 6–48, liturgical organ music by Redford, Rhys, Thorne, Wynslate, Coxsun, (?J.) Preston, E. Strowger, Kyrton; also 'Uppon la me re' ?by (T.) Preston: (2) ff.49–71, liturgical organ music by T. Preston with later additions of works by Byrd and Robert Parsons (i); (3) ff.72–157 largely in open score, 17th-century copies of fantasias by Alfonso Ferrabosco (ii), and of vocal works by Byrd, Morley, John Farmer and Tomkins; also brief works by Tomkins and Bevin, and Byrd's The Leaves be Greene; (4) ff.158–83, liturgical organ compositions, anon.: these are faburden settings of hymns (?by T. Preston) of the mid-16th century (fig.7). Also some later additions; (5) ff.184–219, 17th-century hands, works by T. Tomkins, J. Tomkins, T. Woodson, A. Ferrabosco, N. Carleton, A. Phillips, Byrd, O. Gibbons. Editions: EKM, iv (1951); J. Caldwell: British Museum Additional Manuscript 29996 (diss., U. of Oxford, 1965); MB, lxvi (1995). EECM, vi, (1966), x (1969); Literature: D. Stevens: 'Unique Tudor Organ Masses', MD, vi (1952), 167–75; 'Further Light on "Fulgens praeclara"', JAMS, ix (1956), 1–11; 'Thomas Preston's Organ Mass', ML, xxxix (1958), 29–34; F.Ll. Harrison: Music in Medieval Britain (London, 1958, 2/1963)

London, British Library, Add.30513 ['Mulliner Book'] (hand of T. Mulliner, *c*1550–75). 133 ff. Keyboard music by Redford, Blitheman, Tallis, etc.; liturgical organ music, dances, and many arrangements of vocal and instrumental works. Edition: MB, i (1951). Literature: D. Stevens: The Mulliner Book: a Commentary (London, 1952, 2/1954)

London, British Library, Add.5465 ['Fayrfax MS'] (keyboard music, ?*c*1555). The keyboard music, the end of a Felix namque setting, without title or composer's name, is on f.2*r*. Edition: EECM, x (1969)

London, British Library, Add.60577 (additions of *c*1560). 12 pieces for keyboard among other musical items. Editions: The Winchester Anthology, ed. E. Wilson and I. Fenlon (Cambridge, 1981) [facs.]; MB, lxvi (1995). Literature: J. Blezzard: 'A New Source of Tudor Secular Music', MT, cxxii (1981), 532–5; I. Fenlon, 'Instrumental Music, Songs and Verse from Sixteenth-Century Winchester', Music in Medieval and Early Modern Europe (Cambridge, 1981), 93–116

Oxford, Christ Church, Mus.371 (*c*1560–70). 25 ff. Liturgical and non-liturgical keyboard works (some arrangements) by Tye, Tallis, (?R.) White, 'Wodson', Byrd, Redford, N. Strogers and anon. composers. Editions: Early English Organ Music, ed. M. Glyn (London, 1939) [part edn]; Altenglische Orgelmusik, ed. D. Stevens (Kassel and Basle, 1953) [part edn]; T. Tallis: Complete Keyboard Works, ed. D. Stevens (London, 1953) [part edn]; EECM, vi (1966), x (1969) [part edns]; remainder in MB, lxvi (1995)

7. London, British Library, Add.29996, f.158r: a keyboard setting of 'Conditor alme siderum' on the faburden, with comments by Thomas Tomkins, c1555

Oxford, Christ Church. Mus.1034A (*c*1570). 4 ff. An untitled piece by John Ambrose, the 2nd section of a Tui sunt caeli by Redford, and the 2nd section of an untitled piece by Tallis, the last found in full in Christ Church, Mus.371. Editions: T. Tallis: Complete Keyboard Works, ed. D. Stevens (London, 1953) [part edn]; EECM, x (1969) [part edn]; MB, lxvi (1995); [part edn]

Dublin, Trinity College Library, D.3.30/i ['Dublin Virginal MS'] (*c*1570, bound with the 'Dallis Lute-book'). 33 ff. contain keyboard music. Anon. dances and song-tunes; no.3 (? and 4) by 'Master Taylor' (? John Taylor of Westminster, fl 1561–8). Edition: WE, iii (1954). Literature: T. Dart: 'Le manuscrit pour le virginal de Trinity College, Dublin', La musique instrumentale de la Renaissance: Paris 1954, 237–9; Dart, 1954

London, Public Record Office, E 36/170 (*c*1570). One piece on p.110. Edition: MB, lxvi (1995)

Dublin, Trinity College, 278 (*c*1570). 2 fragments on ff.59v, 60. Edition: MB, lxvi (1995)

Nottingham, University Library, 'Lord Middleton's Lutebook' (*c*1575). Setting of P. van Wilder's Je file on ff.91*v*–92*v*. Literature: Dart, 1954

York, Minster Library, M 91 (S) (*c*1580). Duos and keyboard intabulations on blank staves below vocal music in score. Edition: MB, lxvi (1995). Literature: I. Fenlon and J. Milsom: '"Ruled Paper Imprinted: Music Paper and Patents in Sixteenth-Century England"', JAMS, xxxvii (1984), 139–63

'My Ladye Nevells Booke' (privately owned; hand of John Baldwin, completed 11 Sept 1591). 192 ff. 42 pieces by Byrd. Edition: H. Andrews (London, 1926/R) [edn of music by Byrd]. Literature: E.H. Fellowes: William Byrd (London, 1936, 2/1948); E.H. Fellowes: 'My Ladye Nevells Booke', ML, xxx (1949), 1–7; A. Brown: '"My Lady Nevell's Book" as a Source of Byrd's Keyboard Music', PRMA, xcv (1968–9), 29–39

London, British Library, Add.29485 (Suzanne van Soldt, 1599). Last 4 pieces of the MS, with a notation table and other jottings, written in London by an English scribe. Edition: MMN, iii (1961)

Cambridge, University Library, Dd.4.22 (*c*1600). 2 anon. pieces on ff.27*v*–28*r*. Literature: Dart, 1954

Friskney, Lincolnshire, Parish Register (*c*1600). Parts of 2 pieces by Byrd on a single leaf. Literature: R. Pacey: 'Byrd's Keyboard Music: a Lincolnshire Source', ML, lxvi (1985), 123–6 [with photographs]

London, British Library, Add.30486 (*c*1600). 23 ff. 14 pieces by Byrd and anon. composers. Edition: EKM, iii [part edn]

London, British Library. Add.31392 (*c*1600). The MS, primarily a lute source, contains also 4 pavan-galliard sets by Byrd, the 1st pavan being incomplete at the beginning. Edition: MB, xxvii–xxviii (1962–71)

Oxford, Bodleian Library, Mus.d.143. Fragments of 3 pieces on ff.3–6 (*c*1600). Literature: Dart, 1954

Oxford, Christ Church, Mus.1207 (early 17th-century). 1 + 3 ff. Pieces by Bull, [Byrd] and 1 anon. [?Bull]

Cambridge, Fitzwilliam Museum, 32.g.29 (Mu. MS 168) ['Fitzwilliam Virginal Book'] (? copied by Francis Tregian, 1609–19). 220 ff., of which 209 contain music. Chief composers are Byrd, Bull and G. Farnaby. Editions: J.A. Fuller Maitland and W.B. Squire (London and Leipzig, 1894–9/R); Stainer and Bell, Keyboard Series, xvi (1964) [24 pieces]). Literature: J.A. Fuller Maitland and A.H. Mann: Catalogue of Music in the Fitzwilliam Museum, Cambridge (London, 1893); E.W. Naylor: An Elizabethan Virginal Book (London, 1905); E. Cole: 'Seven Problems of the Fitzwilliam Virginal Book', PRMA, lxxix (1952–3), 51–64

London, British Library, Add.30485 (?hand of Weelkes, *c*1610). 119 ff. Music by Byrd, Marchant, Kinloch, Tallis, 'Bickerll', 'Renold', J. Harding, Alwood, Weelkes, Blitheman, Richardson, Bull and anon. composers; arrangements of works by (?) P. van Wilder, 'Alfonso' [Ferrabosco (ii)], Lassus and [John] Johnson. Edition: MB, lv (1989) [part edn] and in edns of composers' works

Cambridge, Fitzwilliam Museum, 52.d.25 (catalogue no.782) ['Tisdale Virginal Book'] (owned by Bull *c*1610; ?copied by Tisdale). Keyboard music on ff.73–97. Arrangements and original compositions by 'Briant Ladlawe', 'Mr. Randall', 'Tisdale', 'Mr. Marchunt', Byrd, Morley, Heybourne, Robert Johnson (ii) and John Holmes. Edition: Stainer and Bell, Keyboard Series, xxiv (1966). Literature: Dart, 1954

Paris, Bibliothèque Nationale, Rés.1185 (olim 18548) (*c*1610 and not after 1652). iv + 350 pp. Index in the hand of Cosyn, dated 1652. The principal hand is probably that of Bull: in it are written nearly 80 pieces, mostly by him but including a few which are not, all without ascription. In the hand of Cosyn are *c*50 pieces, most of which are probably either composed or arranged by him. Other named composers include Formiloe, Orlando Gibbons, Simon Ives (i), La Barre, Lawes, Tresure and William Young. Edition: various pieces in MB, xiv (1960), xix (1963). Literature: M. Pereyra: 'Les livres de virginal de la bibliothèque du Conservatoire de Paris', RdM, xiii (1932), 86–94; M.C. Maas: Seventeenth-Century English Keyboard Music (diss., Yale U., 1969); Bailey, 1992; O. Memed: Seventeenth-Century English Keyboard Music: Benjamin Cosyn, (New York, 1993) [incl. part edn]

Edinburgh, National Library of Scotland, Panmure 9 ['Clement Matchett's Virginal Book'] (compiled 12–25 Aug 1612). 29 ff. contain keyboard music. The composers are Byrd, Bull and [Dowland set by] 'Mr. Willoughby' (?Wilbye). Edition: Stainer and Bell, Keyboard Series, ix. Literature: Dart, 1954

Edinburgh, National Library of Scotland, Panmure 10 ['Duncan Burnett's Book'] (*c*1615). 166 ff. 23 complete keyboard pieces, mostly composed or set by William Kinloch (see British Library, Add.30485 below. Edition: Stainer and Bell, Keyboard Series, xv (1958) [part edn]. Literature: Dart, 1954

London, British Library, Add.15117 (*c*1615). Short keyboard piece on f.22*v*. Literature: M. Joiner: 'British Museum Add. MS 15117: an Index, Commentary and Bibliography', RMARC, vii (1969), 51–109

London, British Library, R.M.23.L.4 ['Ben Cosyn's Virginal Book'] (index dated 1620). 146 ff. On ff.2–111, *c*90 compositions by Bull, Byrd, Cosyn, Gibbons, Tallis and anon. composers. Editions: see works of composers cited. Literature: O. Memed: Seventeenth-Century English Keyboard Music: Benjamin Cosyn (New York, 1993) [incl. part edn]

Oxford, Christ Church, Mus.1113 (*c*1620). The binding bears the initials 'W.E.', which are also found on f.20*r*; but it is not, as has been supposed, in the hand of William Ellis, for which see Christ Church, Mus.1236. 253 pp. Music by Bull, Byrd, 'B.C.' (?Cosyn), 'W.E.', O. Gibbons, T. Holmes, (?R.) Johnson, P. Philips, Frescobaldi and Sweelinck. Editions: see works of composers cited. Literature: Bailey, 1992

New York, Public Library, Drexel 5612 (at least 5 compilers, *c*1620–60). C230 pp. of keyboard music, and organ accompaniments to O. Gibbons's 3-part fantasias. Keyboard music by Bull, O. Gibbons, T. Tomkins, etc. Editions: see works of composers cited. Literature: Bailey, 1992

London, British Library, R.M.24.d.3 ['Will Forster's Virginal Book'] (index dated 31 Jan 1624/5). 236 ff. C80 compositions by Bull, Byrd, Cosyn, Englitt, Morley, Tallis, ?T. Tomkins and anon. composers; also sacred compositions in short score for keyboard performance (?or accompaniment) by Ward. Editions: Three Anonymous Keyboard Pieces attributed to William Byrd, ed. O. Neighbour (Sevenoaks, 1973); MB, lv (1989) [part edn]; see also works of composers cited

Oxford, Christ Church, Mus.431 (*c*1625). 21 ff. 19 pieces by Bull, Byrd, O. Gibbons, Lugge and anon. composers. Editions: see works of composers cited. Literature: Bailey, 1992

Oxford, Christ Church, Mus.1003 (olim G 14) (*c*1625, in part derived from Christ Church, Mus.1113; however, parts of the MS date from *c*1670 or later; the book was owned by C. Morgan). Ff.1–12; music by [Frescobaldi], Sweelinck, O. Gibbons, Bull, P. Philips and anon. composers; the later part includes Lawes's suite The Golden Grove. Literature: Bailey, 1992

Oxford, Christ Church, Mus.44 (additions after 1625). On ff.131*v*–133*r*, 7 skeleton tunes (2 without bass, 1 incomplete) in hand of Benjamin Cosyn. Literature: O. Memed: Seventeenth-Century English Keyboard Music: Benjamin Cosyn (New York, 1993) [incl. edn]

Edinburgh, National Library of Scotland, Panmure 8 ['Lady Jean Campbell's Book'] (*c*1630). Keyboard music on ff.3–7. Edition: pieces in Stainer and Bell, Keyboard Series, xv (1958). Literature: Dart, 1954

London, British Library, Add.31403 (partly written by Edward Bevin, *c*1630). Music before 1660 occupies ff.3–33; the remainder of the MS dates from *c*1700. The earlier part contains music by both 'Edward Bevin' and 'Elway Bevin', the former being the son of the latter. Edward Bevin wrote also the Graces in play, followed by the same 'exprest in notes' on f.5. The other composers named are Bull, O. Gibbons, 'Emmanuell Soncino' (a piece dated 1633), Blitheman, Byrd and Tallis; there are several anon. works. Literature: R. Ford: 'Bevins, Father and Son', MR, xliii (1982), 104–8; Bailey, 1992

London, British Library, Add.36661 (?compiled by Thomas Tunstall, *c*1630). Ff.40–67: pieces by Bull, Frescobaldi, Gibbons, and others; also settings of psalm tunes and 'A Devision ffor a trible violl to play with a virgenall'. Editions: CEKM, xxx (1968) [Frescobaldi]; see also works of Bull and Gibbons. Literature: Bailey, 1992

Oxford, Christ Church, Mus.49 (John Lugge, *c*1630). On pp.201–42 of this composite MS are pieces by John Lugge which show every sign of being autograph: a Miserere, 7 settings of Gloria tibi Trinitas (or In Nomine) a Christe qui lux and 3 voluntaries. Edition: S. Jeans and J. Steele (1956) [3 voluntaries]. Literature: Bailey, 1992; C.D. Maxim: British Cantus Firmus Settings for Keyboard from the Early 16th Century to the Middle of the 17th Century (diss., U. of Wales, Cardiff, 1996) [incl. edn of plainsong settings]

MS formerly the property of W.H. Cummings (hand of B. Cosyn, date unknown but possibly *c*1630) [lost]. This MS is known to have contained voluntaries by Cosyn. Literature: 'The Charterhouse', MT, xliv (1903), 777–85, esp. 781

Paris, Bibliothèque Nationale, Rés.1186 (olim 18546) (compiled by R. Creighton, *c*1630–40). 125 ff. Pieces by Creighton (some dated 1635, 1636, 1638), O. Gibbons, H. Mudd, Byrd, Bull, Lugge, etc.; also numerous transcriptions of vocal works (editions of Gibbons, Byrd, Bull, Lugge). Literature: M. Pereyra: 'Les livres de virginal de la bibliothèque du Conservatoire de Paris,' RdM, viii (1927), 36–9; M.C. Maas: Seventeenth-Century English Keyboard Music (diss., Yale U., 1969); Bailey, 1992

Paris, Bibliothèque Nationale, Rés.1186 bis II (olim 18570) (*c*1635). Music by Tallis, O. Gibbons and others. Edition: MB, xx (1962) [Gibbons]. Literature: M. Pereyra: 'Les livres de virginal de la bibliothèque du Conservatoire de Paris', RdM, viii (1927), 205; M.C. Maas: Seventeenth-Century English Keyboard Music (diss., Yale U., 1969); Bailey, 1992

Durham, Chapter Library, A1 (*c*1635). This organ accompaniment book includes 2 fantasias by William Smith

London, London Museum, Kensington Palace, 46.78–748, on loan to Huntingdon, Cromwell Museum ['Anne Cromwell's Virginal Book'] (belonged to and perhaps partly written by Anne Cromwell, 1638). 46 ff. 50 pieces by Bull (Prelude in G) and anon. composers, including settings of works by Dowland, Ward, W. Lawes, S. Ives, T. Holmes, Bulstrode Whitelocke and H. Lawes. Editions: copy of a limited edn of 1900 [facs.] in Cambridge, University Library, MR 340.c.90.1; Anne Cromwell's Virginal Book, 1638, ed. H. Ferguson (London, 1974). Literature: Bailey, 1992

Oxford, Christ Church, Mus.437 (*c*1640). 52 ff. Organ scores of services and anthems, and some keyboard music added later, by O. Gibbons and anon. composers. Literature: Bailey, 1992

Paris, Bibliothèque Nationale, Rés.1122 (olim 18547) (hand of T. Tomkins, *c*1640–1654). 194 pp. of the original paper. Compositions by Bull, Byrd and T. Tomkins, with many annotations in the hand of Tomkins. Editions: MB, v (1955), xiv (1960), xix (1963), xx (1962; a work ascribed to Bull in this MS) and xxvii–xxviii (1962–71) between them include all the musical contents of this MS; see also other editions of the composers cited. Literature: MB, v (1955) [full description]; Bailey, 1992

Oxford, Christ Church, Mus.92 (*c*1645, in several hands). 27 ff. Apart from miscellaneous jottings and keyboard scores of vocal music, *c*20 pieces by T. Holmes (2), 'S.C.' (1) and anon. composers. Literature: Bailey, 1992

Poulton Lancelyn, Merseyside, private collection, 'Priscilla Bunbury's Virginal Book' (*c*1645). Music by Byrd, O. Gibbons, Robert Hall, Jewett. Edition: V. Brookes (Albany, 1993). Literature: J.L. Boston: 'Priscilla Bunbury's Virginal Book', ML, xxxvi (1955), 365–73; Bailey, 1992

London, Royal College of Music, 2093 (mostly *c*1650). 46 ff. The composers include Bull, Byrd, Child, Maynard and Rogers. Editions: see works of composers cited. Literature: Bailey, 1992

New York, Public Library, Drexel 5611 (copied by Thomas Heardson, *c*1650). viii + 160 pp. Music by Heardson, Roberts, Facy, Tresure, Rogers, C. Gibbons, Mercure, Cobb, T. Tomkins, Gibbs, La Barre, O. Gibbons, Cosyn, A. Phillips. Suites by Locke and Bryne were added later, perhaps after 1660, partly in Bryne's hand. Some of the ascriptions are incorrect. Editions: see works of C. Gibbons, O. Gibbons, Rogers, Tomkins, Locke. Literature: Bailey, 1992

Oxford, Bodleian Library, Mus.Sch.C.93 (hands of T. Tomkins and associates, *c*1650). Ff.67–82: Ut re mi fa sol la (fragmentary), Ut mi re, offertory (1637) and 3 short pieces for Edward Thornburgh by T. Tomkins, a hymn verse by Redford and some transcriptions. Editions: MB, v (1955), EECM, vi (1966), and T. Tomkins: Three Hitherto Unpublished Voluntaries, ed. D. Stevens (London, 1959) contain between them all the original keyboard music of this part of the MS. Literature: Bailey, 1992

Oxford, Christ Church, Mus.1142A (1st gathering *c*1650). Ff.1–20: music by O. Gibbons, C. Gibbons, [Blitheman] and anon. composers. Edition: MB, xx (1962) [O. Gibbons]. Literature: Bailey, 1992

Oxford, Christ Church, Mus.1236 (compiled by William Ellis, *c*1650). 19 + 20 ff. (reversing the book). Music by Bryne, Chambonnières, Charles Coleman, Du Fault, Ellis, J. Ferrabosco, La Barre, [W. Lawes], Henry Loosemore, Mercure, Rogers and Tresure. Edition: Stainer and Bell, Keyboard Series, xxix (1969) [part edn]. Literature: Bailey, 1992

Tokyo, Ohki Collection, Nanki Music Library, n.3.35 (*c*1650). On ff.1–13 music by Bull, Byrd and anon. composers. Literature: H. McLean: 'Blow and Purcell in Japan', MT, civ (1963), 702–5; Bailey, 1992

Oxford, private collection, MS 'IB' (hand of Edward Lowe, 1652). The music appears to be all anon. Edition: MB, xx (1962), 92. Literature: J.R. Magrath, ed.: The Flemings in Oxford, i: 1650–1680 (1904), 541–63

London, British Library, Add.10337 ['Elizabeth Rogers hir Virginall booke'] (dated 27 Feb 1656/7). Keyboard music on ff.2–54; 79 pieces, mostly anon. but including suites by T. Strengthfeild, Mercure and [P.] de la Barre, and also a version of Byrd's The Battle (here anon.). Editions: EKM, v (1951) [part edn] CEKM, xix (1971). Literature: Bailey, 1992

London, British Library, Add.63852 ['Griffith Boynton MS'] (1650s and later). 117 ff. (37ff. of keyboard music). Literature: Bailey, 1992

Wimborne (Dorset), Wimborne Minster Chain Library [unnumbered keyboard MS] (formerly dated 1635–40, probably *c*1670), Oxford, Christ Church, Mus.1175–7 and Paris, Bibliothèque Nationale, Rés. 1186 bis I, contain a partly pre-Restoration repertory. Numerous other MSS of 1660–1800 contain 1 or more pieces composed before 1660 (see J. Caldwell: English Keyboard Music before the Nineteenth Century, Oxford, 1973; B. Cooper: English Solo Keyboard Music of the Middle and Late Baroque, New York, 1989; G. Cox: Organ Music in Restoration England, New York, 1989; Bailey, 1992). A MS formerly in the possession of W.H. Cummings (Sale Catalogue 488) (*c*1665) contained music by Ayleward, Byrd, Cobb, C. Gibbons, O. Gibbons, Gibbs, W. Lawes, Locke, Morley, Price, Tresure, etc. (see J.E. West: 'Old English Organ Music', PMA, xxxvii (1910–11), 1–16)

PRINTED SOURCES

Parthenia (London: G. Lowe, [1613], [1615], 1646, 1651, 1655, 1659). Music by Bull, Byrd and O. Gibbons. Editions: E.F. Rimbault (London, 1847); M. Glyn (London, 1927); O.E. Deutsch (London, 1942) [facs.]; K. Stone (New York, 1951); EKM, xix

Hole, Robert, ed. Parthenia In-violata (London: J. Pyper, [1614]). The music, which includes a separate bass viol part, is all anon. Editions: T. Dart and R.J. Wolfe (New York, 1961) [facs.]

APPENDIX

J. Playford, ed.: Musickes Hand-Maide (London, 1663, 2/1668, 3/1678) contains much music composed before 1660; see also Melothesia (London: J. Carr, 1673)

JOHN CALDWELL

Sources of lute music. This is one of a group of articles that give an outline of the spread of music and the range of sources before *c*1600. While the bulk of music throughout the period is vocal (as far as is known) and is discussed in the article SOURCES, MS, there are still some repertories that were always distinct. The sources of lute music are perhaps the clearest to distinguish for, with few exceptions, they were written in a special range of notations that did not use the staff.

The terminal date adopted here is later than that for other articles in the group because many important repertories of lute music date from after 1600. Thus the repertory of the English golden age straddles the turn of the century, the principal French school flourished internationally in the 17th century, and a group of central European lutenists sustained the instrument as a viable medium well into the last decades of the 18th century.

Reference to the sources solely of music for the CITTERN, THEORBO, CHITARRONE and BANDORA, which represent quite different styles, will be found in those articles.

1. INTRODUCTION. Although the lute has been known in Western music from medieval times, the earliest extant sources containing music specifically intended for lutenists date only from the end of the 15th century: the use of bare fingers instead of a quill to sound the strings, a major advance in right-hand technique, was the impulse for polyphonic music, which required a distinct system of score notation – lute tablature. Over the next 250 years the lute remained one of the most widely used domestic solo instruments, amassing a repertory equalling and in some areas and periods even exceeding that for keyboard. Printed sources, of which over 360 titles survive, range from selections of didactic music for novices to books that preserve the legacy of a famed virtuoso; others, some edited by or for skilled dilettantes, are cosmopolitan anthologies with hundreds of pieces by renowned contemporary lutenist composers. A few publishers, in order to expand the market for their books and cater for parochial needs, retained 'house arrangers' to intabulate their miscellanies of part-music and to 'translate' lute pieces from foreign systems of tablature. Over 500 extant manuscripts, some of immense size, embrace the barely legible scribblings of adolescents, personal working repertories of professional singers and players, manuscripts from commercial scriptoria, lessons assembled by distinguished lutenists for aristocratic pupils and, most frequently, the commonplace-books of amateurs who were diplomats, jurists, physicians, clergy, merchants, students or other members of a generally mobile élite who often entered favourite pieces casually over a lifetime, at times giving neither composer nor title.

It is convenient to divide the sources according to the general dispersal of lute music from centres of influence in Italy during the 16th century, France during the 17th and central Europe during the 18th, and to describe the contents of some representative prints and manuscripts for each area. (As information on books devoted to music of individual lutenists is covered under specific articles, some preference has been given to anthologies; additional information on the sources may be found in the bibliographies of Boetticher (RISM B/VII), Brown, Pohlmann, Rudén and Goy and others, as well as in national union catalogues of music, catalogues of individual libraries and RISM.) With the repertory of tablatures numbering nearly 60,000 pieces (including concordances), bibliographical control over the repertory still leaves much to be desired.

GENERAL BIBLIOGRAPHY, COLLECTED EDITIONS

AdlerHM; BrownI; WolfH

O. Chilesotti, ed.: Lautenspieler des XVI. Jahrhunderts/Liutisti del Cinquecento (Leipzig, 1891/*R*1969 in BMB, section 4, xxxi) [141 pieces]

O. Körte: Laute und Lautenmusik bis zur Mitte des 16. Jahrhunderts (Leipzig, 1901/R)

W. Tappert, ed.: Sang und Klang aus alter Zeit: Hundert Musikstücke aus Tabulaturen des XVI. bis XVIII. Jahrhunderts (Berlin, 1906)

J. Wolf: Musikalische Schrifttafeln (Leipzig, 1922–3, 2/1927)

J. Zuth: Handbuch der Laute und Gitarre (Vienna, 1926–8/R)

L. de La Laurencie: Les luthistes (Paris, 1928/R)

W. Apel: The Notation of Polyphonic Music. 900–1600 (Cambridge, MA, 1942, 5/1961; Ger. trans., rev. 1970)

R.M. Murphy: Fantasia and Ricercare in the Sixteenth Century (diss., Yale U., 1954)

Le luth et sa musique: Neuilly-sur-Seine 1957 [contributions by Boetticher, Heartz, Moe, Murphy, Noske, Thibault and others]

F. Lesure, ed.: Recueils imprimés, XVIe–XVIIe siècles, RISM, B/I/1 (1960)

H.C. Slim: The Keyboard Ricercar and Fantasia in Italy, ca. 1500–1550, with Reference to Parallel Forms in European Lute Music of the Same Period (diss., Harvard U., 1961) [incl. thematic index and concordances for lute ricercares and fantasias]

H. Radke: 'Beiträge zur Erforschung der Lautentabulaturen des 16. bis 18. Jahrhunderts', Mf, xvi (1963), 34–51, 208 only

F. Lesure, ed.: Recueils imprimés, XVIIIe siècle, RISM, B/II (1964)

J. Tichota: 'Tabulatory pro loutnu a příbuzné nástroje na území ČSSR' [Tablatures for lutes and related instruments in Czechoslovakia], Acta Universitatis Carolinae, Philosophica et Historica, ii (1965), 139–49

H. Mönkemeyer, ed.: Die Tabulatur (Hofheim am Taunus, 1965–)

E. Pohlmann: Laute, Theorbe, Chitarrone: die Instrumente, ihre Musik und Literatur von 1500 bis zur Gegenwart (Bremen, 1968, rev., enlarged 5/1982)

A. Quadt, ed.: Lautenmusik aus der Renaissance (Leipzig, 1968–83)

M.L. Martinez-Göllner: 'Die Augsburger Bibliothek Herwart und ihre Lautentabulaturen', FAM, xvi (1969), 29–48 [MSS and prints at D-Mbs]

K.-H. Schlager, ed.: Einzeldrucke vor 1800, RISM, A/I (1971–81; suppls., 1986–)

H. Radke: 'Theorbierte Laute (liuto attiorbato) und Erzlaute (arciliuto)', Mf, xxv (1972), 481–4, 485–8

R. Chiesa: 'Storia della letteratura del liuto e della chitarra', Il 'Fronimo', no.1– (1972–) [continuing ser.]

J. Tichota: 'Francouzská loutnová hudba v Čechách', MMC, nos.25–6 (1973), 7–77

D. Fallows: '15th-Century Tablatures for Plucked Instruments: a Summary, a Revision and a Suggestion', LSJ, xix (1977), 7–33 [incl. facs.]

W. Boetticher, ed.: Handschriflich überlieferte Lauten- und Gittarrentabulaturen des 15. bis 18. Jahrhunderts, RISM B/VII (1978); see also reviews by D.A. Smith in JLSA, xii (1979), 78–82; D. Fabris, NRMI, xv (1981), 457–61; A.J. Ness, JAMS, xxxiv (1981), 339–45

W. Boetticher: 'Zur inhaltlichen Bestimmung des für Laute intavolierten Handschriftsbestand', AcM, li (1979), 193–203

M.L. Göllner, ed.: Bayerische Staatsbibliothek: Katalog der Musikhandschriften, ii: Tabulaturen und Stimmbücher (Munich, 1979)

Le luth et sa musique II: Tours 1980 [incl. articles by M. Morrow, P. Pozniak, J. Tichota, K. Sparr, A.J. Ness, T. Crawford, H.M. Brown, P. O'Dette, R. Spencer, A. Bailes, M. Vaccaro]
C. Page: 'The 15th-Century Lute: New and Neglected Sources', EMc, ix (1981), 11–21
J.O. Rudén: Music in Tablature: a Thematic Index with Source Descriptions of Music in Tablature Notation in Sweden (Stockholm, 1981)
D. Fabris: 'Prime aggiunte Italiane al volume RISM B/VII: intavolature mss per liuto e chitarra', FAM, xxix (1982), 203–21
J. Hanekuyk and F. Pliester: Luit en gitaar: muziek en literatuur in de muziekbibliotheek van het Haags Gemeentemuseum (The Hague, 1984)
J. Tichota: 'Bohemika a česky repertoár v tablaturách pro renesanční loutnu', MMa, xxxi (1984), 143–289
Lute Symposium: Utrecht 1986 [incl. articles by H.M. Brown, A.J. Ness, L. Nordstrom]
D.H. Smith: Guitar and Lute Music in Periodicals: an Index (Berkeley, 1990)
D. Fabris: 'Influenze stilistiche e cirulazione manoscritta della musica per liuto in Italia e in Francia nella prima metà del Seicento', RdM, lxxvii (1991), 311–33
F.-P. Goy and others: Sources manuscrites en tablature: luth et theorbe (c.1500–c.1800), i: Confoederatio Helvetica (CH), France (F); ii: Bundesrepublik Deutschland (D); iii/1: Oesterreich (A); iii/2: Republic Tcheque (CZ), Hongrie (H), Lituanie (LT), Pologne (PL), Federation de Russie (RF), Slovaquie (SK), Ukraine (UKR) (Baden-Baden, 1991–9)
D. Kirsch: Berliner Lautentabulaturen in Krakau: bescheibender Katalog der handschriftlichen Tabulaturen ... in der Biblioteka Jagiellonska (Mainz, 1992)

2. ITALIAN SOURCES TO *c*1680. Italian lute music survives in about 170 sources, many of them published at Venice and devoted to works of individual composers. Among the earliest sources of tablature from Italy is I-PESo 1144 (olim 1193), whose oldest scribal layers date from the late 15th century. The earliest printed sources were published by Petrucci between 1507 and 1511 and include the four important collections edited by Spinacino, Dalza and Gian Maria Alemanni, and two collections of frottolas for voice and lute arranged by Bossinensis from works of Tromboncino, Cara, Michele Pesenti and others. These books, which include rudiments on reading from tablature and playing the lute, were obviously intended for novices. Although the book by Alemanni (Petrucci's only lutenist editor to enjoy great fame as a virtuoso) is unfortunately lost, the Capirola Lutebook of *c*1517 does contain pieces that illustrate the prowess of professional players of the time. The failure of later publishers to rediscover Petrucci's double-impression process may account for the dearth of prints during the quarter-century following the last Petrucci book.

Books of works by Francesco da Milano, the most influential lutenist of the second generation, appeared in 1536 at Venice, Milan and Naples: the printers experimented with copper-plate engraving, primitive double-impression and movable founts that incorporate staff and cipher. Castiglione's Milanese anthology of the same year contains important works by the most influential lutenists of Francesco's generation. These prints mark the first trickle of what a decade later became a deluge of lute music, most of it issued from Venice at the rival presses of Scotto and Gardane: during a four-year span, 1546–9, they published some 600 pieces, exceeding the total printed output of the previous 40 years. Scotto published ten volumes containing music of Rotta, Francesco da Milano, Borrono, Melchiore de Barberiis and Giovanni Maria da Crema (see Bernstein, 1986), but pieces from Gardane's prints enjoyed wider dissemination throughout Europe and featured a wider range of important figures including Francesco (three books of fantasias and ricercares), Abondante, Pifaro and Balletti (Venetian dances), Borrono and Gorzanis (variation dance suites), Vindella and Gintzler (intabulations), and two large volumes of music by the Augsburg lutenist Melchior Neusidler. The so-called Siena Lutebook (now at NL-DHgm; fig.1), which may date from the 1590s but contains a largely pre-1550 repertory, is unparalleled in the accuracy of its readings, thus shedding light on the corrupt nature of some printed sources with which it has concordances (few Renaissance prints appear to have been prepared under the composers' supervision). After the mid-century Dorico published some important lutebooks in Rome that present the tablature without bar-lines, a not infrequent practice in manuscript sources.

Vincenzo Galilei's surviving autographs (at I-Fn and Fr) include short 'aerie' – formulae for reciting Italian verse to the lute – and madrigals arranged for bass voice and lute, as well as variation dance suites in several partes and other pieces in various stages of composition, intended for inclusion in the various editions of his treatise on lute playing, Fronimo: dialogo (1568–9, 1584). During the last decades of the century Barbetta, Terzi and Fallamero prepared important summary collections that include heavily embellished intabulations (some for lute duet), abstract pieces (fantasias and canzonas) and new Italian dances. Some of the newer dances are illustrated with lute tablature in the manuals of Cesare Negri, Caroso and Lupi da Caravaggio. The Cavalcanti and Bottegari manuscripts are representative collections gathered by professional lutenist singers and contain many Italian dances, ricercares and vocal pieces with underlaid texts and extra stanzas scribbled in the margins. At this time

1. The Hague, Gemeentemuseum, 20.860 (Siena Lutebook), f.17r: 'Ricercar' by Francesco da Milano, and the opening of a prelude printed in a corrupt version in Attaingnant's 'Tres breve et familiere introduction' (1529)

large numbers of canzonettas, villanellas and napolitane for one or more voices with lute were published at Venice by Gardane, Scotto and Vincenti, including books devoted to works of I. Tromboncino, Gastoldi, Orazio Vecchi, Marenzio and many others; at Rome Simone Verovio (using copper-plate engraving) collected similar pieces with lute and keyboard accompaniments by Soriano, Nanino, Palestrina and other members of Pope Gregory XIII's 'Sodalitas musicorum', and a collection of galliards and a Christmas pastorale in dialogue form by Anerio.

Because of their appropriateness for accompanying solo song and realizing figured bass, the chitarrone, guitar 'alla spagnola' and theorbo largely replaced the lute in 17th-century Italy, and some prints provide alternative tablatures for those instruments. A small but distinctive literature for 'liuto attiorbato' did continue there, largely independent of the more persuasive currents of the French Gaultier school: Kapsperger (1604–19), Pietro Paolo Melli (1612–20), Castaldi (1622), Piccinini (1623–39), M.A. Galilei (Munich, 1620) and Gianoncelli (1650) made particularly important contributions.

Pesaro, Biblioteca Oliveriana, Ms.1144: Miscelanea di Tempesta Blondi, Poesie del 1500. 386 pp.; 40 pieces. A cordiform MS with pre-ruled 6- and 7-line staves. The oldest layer, copied in French tablature in Venice, c1490–95, contains a bassadanza, 14 pieces titled 'arecercar' and intabulations of chansons by ?Busnoys (2), Japart and Hayne van Ghizeghem, and 4 anonymous frottolas. Seven of the pieces (including 2 of the intabulations) are for plectrum lute. Mid-century, after the manuscript had become his property, Blondi added 11 'recercate' by Gasparo, 'Antonio' and anon., and 2 pieces in Neapolitan tablature for lira da braccio, intended as formulae to accompany the collection of poetry (pp.100–386). The MS was also used by the Blondi family to record important family events (births, deaths, marriages, etc., which perhaps accounts for its survival). Literature: W. Rubsamen: 'The Earliest French Lute Tablature', JAMS, xxi (1968), 286–99; D. Fallows (1977); V. Ivanoff: Das Pesaro-Manuskript: eine zentrale Quelle der frühen italienischen Lautenpraxis (Tutzing, 1988) [edn with diplomatic tablature]; V. Ivanoff: Das Pesaro-Manuskript: ein Beitrag zur Frühgeschichte der Lautentabulatur (Tutzing, 1988); V. Ivanoff: 'An Invitation to the Fifteenth-Century Plectrum Lute: the Pesaro Manuscript', Performance on Lute, Guitar and Vihuela Historial Practice and Modern Interpretation, ed. V.A. Coelho (Cambridge, 1997), 1–15

Spinacino, Francesco: Intabulatura de lauto, libro primo [libro secondo] (Venice: Ottaviano Petrucci, 1507/R) (RISM 1507[5-6], BrownI 1507[1-2]). 2 vols., 56 ff. each; 81 pieces (7 for duet): intabulations of motets, chansons, a Flemish song and instrumental ensemble music (including 2 Spagnas) by Josquin (9), Alexander Agricola (8), Brunel (3), Ghiselin (3), Hayne van Ghizeghem (3), Isaac (3), Ockeghem (3), Busnoys (2), Obrecht (2), Caron, Morton, Stokem and Urrede, drawn mainly from Petrucci's Odhecaton (1501, 3/1503/R), Canti B (1502/R, 2/1503), Canti C (1504) and Motetti C (1505); 27 ricercares by Spinacino, some intended as preludes for the intabulations; each volume contains instructions for reading tablature. Facsimiles: J. Wolf (1919), ii, 52–5; W. Apel (1942), 63; MGG1, xii, 1047–8. Transcriptions: GMB, no.63; HAM, i, no.101; B. Disertori: Le frottole per canto e liuto intabulate da Franciscus Bossinensis (Milan, 1964) [12 pieces]. Literature: H.L. Schmidt: The First Printed Lute Books (diss., U. of North Carolina, 1969) [incl. transcrs. with parallel tablature of both books]; L. Nordstrom: 'Ornamentation of Flemish Chansons as found in the Lute Duets of Francesco Spinacino', JLSA, ii (1969), 1–5; R. Chiesa: Il 'Fronimo', no.1 (1972), 24–6; no.2 (1973), 11–15; no.3 (1973), 22–6; R. Meylan: 'La technique de transcription au luth de Francesco Spinacino', Schweizer Beiträge zur Musikwissenschaft, i (1972), 83–93; P. Pozniak: 'Problems of Tonality in the Ricercars of Spinacino and Bossinensis', JLSA, xxiii (1990), 63–79

Dalza, Joan Ambrosio: Intabulatura de lauto, libro quarto (Venice: Ottaviano Petrucci, 1508/R) (RISM 1507[6], BrownI 1508[2]). 56 ff.; 42 pieces (3 for lute duet): 13 ricercares and tastares de corde; 16 calatas and miscellaneous dances; 9 pavan–saltarello–piva suites; 4 intabulations of a motet and frottolas (2 by Bartolomeo Tromboncino). Facsimiles: J. Wolf (1919), ii, 54; AdlerHM, 398. Transcriptions: HAM, i, no.99; B. Disertori: Le frottole (Milan, 1964), 223, 228; H. Mönkemeyer, ed.: Die Tabulatur, vi–viii (Hofheim am Taunus, 1967). Literature: R.J. Snow: Petrucci: Intabulatura de lauto, Joan Ambrosio Dalza (diss., Indiana U., 1955) [incl. complete transcr.]; R. Chiesa: Il 'Fronimo', no.4 (1973), 20–25; no.5 (1973), 15–20; P. O'Dette: 'Quelques observationes sur l'execution de la musique de danse de Dalza', Le luth et sa musique II: Tours 1980, 183–92. Thematic index: L. Moe (1956), i, 348–9

Chicago, Newberry Library, Case MS VM C.25: Compositione di meser Vincenzo Capirola, gentil homo bresano (copied in Venice by Capirola's student Vidal, c1517/R; see NOTATION, fig.121). 74 ff.; 42 compositions: 13 ricercares, 7 dances (2 Spagnas, a basse danse, 2 paduanas 'alla francese' and a balletto), intabulations of frottolas by Bartolomeo Tromboncino (2), Marchetto Cara and Michele Vicentino. and intabulations of French chansons, motets and mass movements by Josquin (3), Alexander Agricola (2), Brunel (2), Hayne van Ghizeghem (2), Caen, Févin, Ghiselin, Obrecht, Prioris and Urrede. A valuable preface, translated in Gombosi (1955) and Marincola (1983), contains information on ornamentation, fingerings, selecting strings, tenuto playing and fretting. Literature: O. Gombosi, ed.: Compositione di meser Vincenzo Capirola: Lute-book (circa 1517) (Neuilly-sur-Seine, 1955) [incl. thorough study of the contents with facs., tablatures and transcrs.]; L. Rottner: The Intabulation Practices of Vincenzo Capirola with Special Emphasis on Music Ficta (diss., U. of Hartford, 1967); R. Chiesa: Il 'Fronimo', no.10 (1975), 20–24; no.11 (1975), 18–22 [incl. list of contents]; RISM B/VII, pp.79–80; F. Marincola: 'The Instructions from Vicenzo Capirola's Lute Book: a New Translation', The Lute, xxiii (1983), 23–4

Munich, Bayerische Staatsbibliothek, Mus.Ms.1511b (copied c1530–40). 26 ff.; 57 dances with titles in Venetian dialect: 'Munaro in piva', 'Donna imprestare over burato', 'La moricella', 'La castalda', 'Lodesana', 'La chara cosa', 'Saltarello ala ferrarese' (by Dalza, 1508), 'Ala "El ballo de la torcha"', 'La rocha el fuso', etc. Literature: A.J. Ness: The Herwarth Lute Manuscripts at the Bavarian State Library, Munich: a Bibliographical Study with Emphasis on the Works of Marco dall'Aquila and Melchior Newsidler (diss., New York U., 1984), i, 36–40; F.-P. Goy and others, eds. (1994), 221–3

Francesco da Milano: Intavolatura de viola o vero lauto … libro primo [libro secondo] della fortuna (Naples: J. Sulzbach, 1536/R) (RISM FF159I, 1). 2 vols., 32 and 40 ff. First has 21 pieces in Italian tablature: 8 ricercares; 9 intabulations of chansons by Sermisy (2), Josquin or Févin, Mouton, anon. composers, and intabulations of motets by Josquin (3) and Compère. Second has 33 ricercares in Neapolitan tablature. (In the unique copy at F-Pn the last 28 ff. have been exchanged in binding.) Editions: A.J. Ness, ed. (1970); R. Chiesa, ed. (1971). Literature: Y. Giraud: 'Deux livres de tablature inconnus de Francesco da Milano', RdM, lv (1969), 217–19

Castiglione, Giovanni Antonio da (publisher): Intabolatura de leuto de diversi autori (Milan, 1536/R) (RISM 1536[10]; BrownI 1536[9]). 64 ff.; 19 compositions grouped roughly by mode: fantasias, pavan–saltarello suites (some with a concluding 'tochata da sonare nel fine del ballo'). The dances and all but 1 toccata are by Pietro Paulo Borrono, a toccata and 4 fantasias are by Francesco da Milano, and other fantasias are by Alberto da Ripa (3), Marco dall'Aquila (3), Giovanni Giacopo Albuzio (2) and Borrono. Editions: J. Wolf (1919), ii, 55–7 [incl. quasi-facs.]; GMB, nos.94 and 95; E.A. Wienandt (1951) [incl. complete thematic index and selected transcrs.]; G. Lefkoff, ed. (1960) [11 pieces]; A.J. Ness, ed. (1970); R. Chiesa, ed. (1971)

Bianchini, Domenico: Intabolatura de lauto … libro primo (Venice: Gardane, 1546/R, 2/1554/R, 3/1563) (RISM 1546[24]; BrownI 1546[5], 1554[2], 1563[2]). 20 ff; 25 compositions: 6 ricercares (intabulated apparently from ensemble music of Julio Segni, Richafort and others); intabulations of motets by Gombert and Berchem, of chansons by Sermisy (3), anon. composer and Willaert, of madrigals by Arcadelt and Berchem, and of a napolitana by Willaert; dances include a 4-movement suite (passamezzo–paduana–saltarello–forze d'Ercule) and 5 other dances of Venetian provenance: 'Lodesana', 'Meza notte', 'Cara cosa', 'Burato' and 'Torza'. Gerle published the ricercares and dances in German tablature in his Eyn newes sehr künstlichs Lautenbuch (Nuremberg, 1552). Edition: O. Chilesotti (1902) [incl. 9 transcrs.]. Literature: L. Moe (1956), 367 [thematic index]; H.C. Slim (1961), ii, 485 [thematic index]; R. de Morcourt: 'Le livre de tablature de luth de Domenico Bianchini (1546)', La musique instrumentale de la Renaissance: Paris 1954, 177–95 [incl. 4 transcrs., 2 with vocal models]; A.J. Ness: 'Domenico Bianchini: Some Recent Findings', Le luth et sa musique II: Tours 1980, 97–112

Dorico, Valerio and Ludovico (publishers): Intabolatura de lauto di M. Francesco Milanese et M. Perino Fiorentino ... Libro primo (Rome: Dorico [1546]; 2/Venice: Gardano, 1547; 4/Venice: Scotto, 1563). 12 fantasias by Francesco da Milano and 4 by Perino Fiorentino, and intabulations by Perino of 2 madrigals by Arcadelt, and intabulations by Francesco da Milano of 4 chansons by Josquin, Richafort and anonymous, and of 3 madrigals by Arcadelt. The volume was edited by Perino, Francesco da Milano's student and ward, and is remarkable for the accuracy of the tablatures, which are printed without barlines. Mistakenly dated 'MDLXVI', the print appeared in 1546 (see Falkenstein, 22–8). Literature: E.A. Wienandt: 'Perino Fiorentino and his Lute Pieces', JAMS, vii (1955), 2–13; A.J. Ness, ed. (1970); R. Chiesa, ed. (1971); R.K. Falkenstein: The Lute Works of Pierino [sic] degli Organi (diss., SUNY/Buffalo, 1987) [incl. complete transcriptions of the Perino pieces]

Barberiis, Melchiore de: Opera intitolata Contina, intabolatura di lauto, libro decimo (Venice: Scotto, 1549) (RISM 1549[39]; BrownI 1549[2]). 30 ff.; 28 pieces (23 for solo lute, 2 for lute duet and 4 for 4-course, 7-string guitar): intabulations of motets by anon. composers (4), Mouton, Sandrin and Sermisy, of chansons by Lupi and Passereau, of madrigals by Verdelot (2), and of an English song by Henry VIII; 12 fantasias (1 by Francesco da Milano), a fantasia in 3 partes and a ricercare–fantasia pair. Several of the fantasias are parodies of vocal compositions and call for scordatura. Guitar pieces (pubd by Koczirz) are labelled 'fantasia'. The Cortot copy is now at GB-Lbl. Literature: A. Koczirz: 'Die Fantasien des Melchior de Barberis für die siebensaitige Gitarre', ZMw, iv (1921–2), 11–17; H.C. Slim (1961), ii, 520; J.A. Echols: Melchiore de Barberiis's Lute Intabulations of Sacred Music (thesis, U. of North Carolina, 1973) [incl. transcrs.]

Balletti, Bernardino: Intabolatura de lauto ... libro primo (Venice: Gardane, 1554) (RISM B777, BrownI 1554[1]). 20 ff.; 14 compositions: paduana–saltarello and 'Lamoretta–represe' pairs, a 5-movement suite (short chordal toccata, paduana, saltarello, 'La gamba' and 'Ciel turchino'), and miscellaneous dances (incl. 'Ti parti', 'La favorita', 'Rocha il fuso', etc.). Literature: L. Moe (1956) [incl. thematic index and concordances]; G. Lefkoff, ed. (1960) [incl. complete transcr.]

The Hague, Gemeentemuseum, 20.860 (olim 28.B.39): Siena Lutebook. 118 ff.; 159 compositions (a few for 7-course lute), most without title or composer attribution, grouped by genre and mode: 100 fantasias attributed to Francesco da Milano (21) (also called 'Francesco da Parigi' and 'Monzino' in the MS), Fabrizio Dentice (7), Giulio Severino (7), Perino Fiorentino (4), 'B.M.' (4), 'F.B.' [? Francesco Bianciardi] (2), Alberto da Ripa (2), 'G.P.', Pineta, and a prelude appearing in Attaingnant's Tres breve et familiere introduction (Paris, 1529) in a corrupt version; 25 intabulations of chansons by Sandrin (5), Crecquillon (3), Boyvin (2), Janequin (2), Pathie (2), Villiers (2), Arcadelt, Sohier; 22 addl ricercares by Francesco da Milano (6), Fabrizio Dentice (5), Andrea Feliciani (3) and Vindella; an intabulation of a motet by Josquin; 14 toccatas (10 by Amadis Moretti) and 7 dances including 4 settings of the 'Spagna detta Lamire'. Because of its extraordinary accuracy, the MS is one of the most important sources of Italian 16th-century lute music. Facsimile: Tablature de lute italienne dit Siena Manuscript (c1560–1570) (Geneva, 1988) [with introduction by A.J. Ness]. Literature: K.H. Yong: Bijdragen tot de studie der luitmuziek (diss., U. of Utrecht, 1963); K.H. Yong: 'A New Source of Prelude I in Attaingnant's Tres breve et familiere introduction', TVNM, xxi/4 (1970), 211–21; A.J. Ness, ed. (1970), 3, 8–10 [also incl. 2 facs. and 16 transcrs.]; A.J. Ness: 'The Siena Lute Book and its Arrangements of Vocal and Instrumental Part-Music', Lute Symposium: Utrecht 1986, 30–49

Matelart, Ioanne: Intavolatura de leuto ... libro primo (Rome: Valerio Dorico, 1559/*R*1989, with preface by O. Cristoferetti) (RISM 1559[27]; BrownI 1559[7]). 12 ff.; 24 pieces: 15 'recercate o vero fantasie' by Matelart and an intabulation of 2 mass movements by Morales; 7 fantasias (called 'recercate concertate') by Francesco da Milano (6), Julio da Modena (Segni) and Giovanni Maria da Crema, to which Matelart composed parts for a second lute. The tablature is without barlines. Editions: MGG1, viii, 1784 [facs. of title-page]; O. Chilesotti, ed. (1891) [2 pieces, incl. 1 duet]; O. Chilesotti: edn of Morales's 'Osanna', EMDC, I/ii (1914), 655–6; A.J. Ness, ed. (1970), 416–39 [all of the 'recercate concertate' for 2 lutes]

Pacoloni, Giovanni: Longe elegantissima excellentissimi musici: Joannes Pacoloni Celestae Patavini tribus testudinibus (Leuven: Phalèse, 1564; 2/Milan: Tini, 1583 [lost?]; 3/Antwerp: Phalèse, 1591 [lost?]; *R*1981 as Tribus testudinibus ludenda carmina, with preface by H. Vanhulst). (RISM P42). 3 vols.; 272 ff. For lutes tuned G, D and c. Twelve passomezzo–padoana–saltarello suites, and 35 single dances, most on popular Venetian tunes: 'Tu te partti cor mio caro', 'Rocco el fusa', 'La desperata', 'Il est jour' [a street song after Sermisy], 'Forze de Hercules', 'Mezza notte', 'El burato', etc. Frederic Viarea arranged many of the dances for a trio of citterns (Leuven: Phalèse, 1564, BrownI 1564/7). Pacoloni's autograph is in an unavailable manuscript at I-CC. Edition: D. Benkő, ed. (Budapest, 1984) [edn for guitar]. Literature: A. Rooley and J. Tyler: 'The Lute Consort', LSJ, xiv (1972), 13–24.

Florence, Biblioteca Nazionale Centrale, Landau-Finaly Mus.2 (MS appx to a copy of Fronimo: dialogo (1568–9) thought to be in the hand of Vincenzo Galilei (RISM B/VII, p.115). 20 ff.; 20 compositions copied *c*1568–84 in Florence: 14 madrigals by anon. composers (6), Lassus (2), Palestrina (2), Ferretti, Giacomini, Striggio and Wert, arranged for bass voice (in mensural notation on the facing page) and lute; 4 romanescas and 3 passamezzos. Facsimile: MGG1, iv, pl.54 (facing 1313). Literature: C. Palisca: 'Vincenzo Galilei's Arrangements for Voice and Lute', Essays in Musicology in Honor of Dragan Plamenac, ed. G. Reese and R.J. Snow (Pittsburgh, 1969/R), 207–32 [incl. 2 transcrs., incipits and lists of contents]; Falkenstein (1997)

Florence, Biblioteca Riccardiana, F.III.10431 (MS appx to a copy of Fronimo dialogo (1568–9), partly in the hand of Vincenzo Galilei) (RISM B/VII, p.124). 20 ff. (all but 3 blank); 10 items: 'arias' (incl. formulae for reciting sonetti and capitoli) and 6 short dances (passamezzos, galliards, contrapasso and romanesca). Literature: C. Palisca, ibid. (1969) [incl. 3 transcrs. and list of contents]; Falkenstein (1997)

Modena, Biblioteca Estense, C 311: Arie e canzoni in musica di Cosimo Bottegari. 55 ff.; 132 pieces copied by Bottegari during his service in Munich and Florence, *c*1574–*c*1600: 108 arrangements of arias, canzonettas, napolitane etc. for voice and lute by Bottegari (27), Ippolito Tromboncino (6), Lassus (3), Fabrizio Dentice (2), Striggio (2), Regnart (2), Caccini, Conversi, Ferretti, Isabella de' Medici (?), Nola, Orsini, Palestrina, Policreto, Primavera, Roiccandert and Rore, and 24 of sacred pieces (laudi, motets etc.) by Bottegari, Lassus, Wert and Pietro Vinci. Solo lute pieces include 2 fantasias (1 'sopra la canzone degli ucelli'), a romanesca and balli 'a la tedesca' and 'forestiere'. Editions: (of the poetry) L. Valdrighi: Il libro di canto e liuto di Cosimo Bottegari (Florence, 1891/R); (of the music) C. MacClintock, ed.: The Bottegari Lutebook, WE, viii (1965). See also W.V. Porter, JAMS, xx (1967), 126–31, for addl concordances. Literature: C. MacClintock: 'A Court Musician's Songbook: MS C 311', JAMS, ix (1956), 177–92; D. Nutter: 'Ippolito Tromboncino: Cantare al Liuto', I Tatti Studies, iii (1989), 127–74; Falkenstein (1997)

Montreal, Conservatoire de Musique: Intavolatura di liuto: Orazio Vecchi e discépoli. 116 pp.; *c*71 pieces in random order: intabulations of madrigals by Rore (2), Palestrina and Renaldi; 10 napolitane with underlaid text by Vecchi (2), Bastiano, Cavaccio, Paratico, Regnart, Rore and others; 4 toccatas, 3 fantasias, 4 canzonas (1 for lute duet) and a 'bataglia' (duet) by Maschera (2) and Cavaccio; and the following dances: 19 paired dances (passamezzo–saltarello, paganina–saltarello, ballo francese–galliard, etc.), 18 saltarellos (incl. 'Antola', 'Tu te parti', 'Brunello', etc.), and 6 miscellaneous dances (spagnola, tedescha, barriera, mezza gamba, bergamasco and Ruggiero). Literature: Coelho (1995), 104–6, 336–7

Caroso, Fabritio: Il ballarino (Venice: Ziletti, 1581; later expanded edns entitled Nobiltà di dame) (BrownI 1581[1]). 24 + 188 ff.; 83 dances (22 for lute and a solo instrument, in mensural notation).

The volume is a treatise on French, Italian and Spanish styles of dancing with detailed choreographies; the dances included are 20 balletto–sciolta pairs, cascardas, galliards, pavaniglia, villanella, passamezzo, baletto–sciolta–canario suites, barrieras, spagnoletta, bassa e alta, contrapasso, tordiglione, chiarentana, canario and balli. In addition to Caroso the dances are by Battistino, Oratio Martire, Bastinao, Paolo Arnandes and Ippolito Ghiditti da Crema. Facsimile: Monuments of Music and Music Literature in Facsimile, 2nd ser., xlvi (New York, 1967). Edition: O. Chilesotti, ed. (1891) [4 pieces]. Literature: M.T. Annoni: 'Ulteriori osservazioni sul manoscritto Galliano "6" della Biblioteca Nazionale di Firenze', Il 'Fronimo', xvii (1989), 22–32

Florence, Biblioteca Nazionale Centrale, Anteriori di Galileo 6: Libro d'intavolatura del liuto … composte in diversi tempi da Vincenzo Galilei scritto l'anno 1584. 141 ff., divided into 3 sections: first has 11 passamezzo–romanesca–saltarello suites followed by a 'Matriciana' in 12 partes; second has 12 other passamezzos and romanescas with variations; third has 54 galliards with descriptive titles ('Calliope', 'Talia', 'Polymnia', 'Amarilli', 'Galatea', etc.) and 23 aiere di diversi, some by Santino Garsi ('Lanfredina', 'Bardoccia', 'Coureant', 'Ruggieri', 'La moresca', and other untitled). Editions: O. Chilesotti: 'Trascrizioni da un codice musicale di Vincenzo Galilei', Congresso internationale di scienze storiche [III]: Rome 1903, viii, 135–56 [incl. facs. and 12 transcrs.]; F. Fano, ed.: La camerata fiorentina: Vincenzo Galilei, IMi, iv (1934) [incl. facs. and 17 transcrs.]. Facsimile: complete vol. (Florence 1992) [with introduction by O. Cristoferretti]; Literature: P. Possiedi: 'Il manoscritto galliano della Nazionale di Firenze', Il 'Fronimo', xvi (1987), 14–25; M.T. Annoni: Il 'Fronimo', xvii (1989), 22–32

Brussels, Bibliothèque Royale de Belgique, II 275: Lutebook of Rafaello Cavalcanti (dated Jan 1590). 3 + 104 ff.; *c*247 pieces (some for duet), grouped roughly by genre. Ff.1–49*v*: 22 galliards, 18 passamezzos (some on the romanesca) and other dances (saltarellos, ghieromettas, pavaniglias, spagnolettas, 'ruggieri da cantar', pavans, calatas, Spagnas, etc.), and 15 ricercares (1 on a fuga by Merulo), fantasias, a toccata and a canon for duet; composers include 'Giovanni' (22), Giovanbattista da Milano (13), Francesco da Milano (7), Santino Garsi (7) and Franchesino. Ff.50–62*v*: 35 napolitane and madrigals (most with several stanzas of text) by Vecchi (7), Lassus, Rore and Striggio. Ff.62–73*v*: 10 passamezzos, 4 galliards and other dances by Fiorenza (6), Garadino and Santino Garsi, and 10 ricercares, fantasias and a toccata (5 by Francesco da Milano). Ff. 74–87: 34 napolitane by composers including Malvezzi, Striggio and Vecchi. Ff.87–104: 6 napolitane and 10 miscellaneous dances (romanesca, galliards, 2 'bataglias', a calata, etc.) by Santino Garsi (6), 'Giovanni' and 'Monsu Balahart'. Editions: A.J. Ness, ed. (1970); R. Chiesa, ed. (1971). Literature: H. Osthoff: Der Lautenist Santino Garsi da Parma (Leipzig, 1926/R), 51–4, 146–61 [incl. 17 transcrs.]; R.K. Falkenstein (1997), 101–52; V. Coelho: 'Raffaello Cavalcanti's Lute Book (1590) and the Ideal of Singing and Playing', Le concert des voix et des instruments à la Renaissance: Tours 1991, 423–42

Terzi, Giovanni Antonio: Intavolatura di liutto, accomodata con diversi passaggi per suonar in concerti a duoi liutti & solo, libro primo (Venice: Ricciardo Amadino, 1593/*R*1981, with introduction by O. Cristoferetti) (RISM 1593[11]; BrownI 1593[7]). 68 ff.; 61 pieces grouped by genre and medium: intabulations for solo lute of motets by Andrea Gabrieli (2), Palestrina (2), Cavaccio, Ingegneri, Lassus, Merulo and Renaldi; 7 intabulations of chansons and a canzona by Merulo (3), Striggio, Basso and Palestrina, all with an ad lib 'contrapunto' for a second lute; 11 intabulations of canzonas by Maschera for lute solo, or in concerto with the ensemble canzonas of Maschera's Libro primo de canzoni da sonare, a quattro voci (Brescia: Sabbio, 1584); 7 intabulations for solo lute of madrigals by Andrea Gabrieli, Marenzio, Monte, Giovanni Maria Nanino, Costanzo Porta, Rore and Wert; 6 fantasias by Terzi; 30 dances, 4 attrib. Terzi, 1 to his father: passamezzos, galliards, saltarellos, balli tedeschi and francesi, and coranti francesi, some gathered in 2-, 3- and 4-movement suites. Facsimiles: M. Caffagni, ed.: Ioannis Antonii Terzi opera: Intavolatura di liuto libro primo (Bergamo, 1964); M. Caffagni, ed.: Il secondo libro de intavolatura di liuto, AntMI, Monumenta lombarda, ii (1966). Literature: S.E. Court: Giovanni Antonio Terzi and Lute Intabulations of Late Sixteenth-Century Italy (diss., U. of Orago, 1988)

Lucca, Biblioteca Statale, MS. 774: Intavolatura di leuto da sonare e cantare (*c*1595–7). 26 + 23 ff. First fasc. contains 10 passamezzos, 3 romanescas and a spagnoletta; second has 14 texted arie (3 with vocal part in mensural notation, the others with text underlaid, or given in the margin), and 4 passamezzos, 10 galliards, 5 romanescas, 10 'contrapuntos' (1 by 'P.M.') and 25 other miscellaneous dances: fiorentina, tornado da Bologna, spagnuola, pavaniglia, fantina, tordiglione, moresca, tuti parti, chiarentana, bergamasca, canario, balletto, etc. Edition: O. Chilesotti, ed. (1891), 185–6 [3 dances]. Literature: G. Sforza: 'Poesie musicali del sec. xvi', Giornale storico della letteratura italiana, viii (1886), 312–18; C. MacClintock: 'Notes on Four Tuscan Lutebooks', JLSA, iv (1971), 1–8 [incl. 2 transcrs. and list of contents]

Molinaro, Simone: Intavolatura di liuto … libro primo (Venice: Ricciardo Amadino, 1599/*R*1978, with introduction by O. Cristoferetti) (RISM 1599[18]; BrownI 1599[7]). 74 ff.; 68 pieces for 6-course lute with 2 diapasons, grouped by genre: 7 saltarellos, 12 passamezzo–galliard pairs, 15 fantasias by Molinaro followed by 25 fantasias and 3 intabulations of chansons by his uncle and teacher Giovanni Battista della Gostena, a fantasia on Lassus's Susanne un jour by Giulio Severino, and intabulations of 3 chansons and 2 canzonas. The passamezzos and fantasias are grouped in pairs by mode. Composers of the models are Clemens non Papa (2), Crecquillon (2), Guami (2 canzonas), Costeley and Lassus. Editions: G. Gullino, ed.: S. Molinaro: Intavolatura di liuto, libro primo (Florence, 1940, 3/1963); G. Gullino, ed.: G.B. della Gostena: Intavolatura di liuto (Florence, 1949/R); O. Chilesotti, ed. (1891) [14 pieces]. Literature: T. Dart: 'Simone Molinaro's Lutebook of 1599', ML, xxviii (1947), 258–61; J. Ward: 'Parody Technique in 16th-Century Instrumental Music', The Commonwealth of Music, in Honor of Curt Sachs, ed. G. Reese and R. Brandel (New York, 1965), 208–28 [incl. 1 transcr.]; L. Moe (1956), 283, 475 [thematic index and concordances of the dances]

Anerio, Giovanni Francesco: Gagliarde a quattro voci intavolate per sonare sul cimbalo et sul liuto, libro primo (?Rome: ?Verovio, *c*1607) (RISM A1126). 18 pp.; 16 galliards with keyboard score and intabulation for 7-course lute. Facsimiles: J. Wolf (1919), ii, facing p.256; GMB, no.181. Literature: B. Becherini: 'Giovanni Francesco Anerio ed alcune sue gagliarde per cembalo', La bibliofilia, xli (1939), 159–64

San Francisco, State University Library, Frank V. de Bellis Collection. M2.1.M3 (MS 'cominciato al 5 agosto 1615', perhaps by Ascanio Bentivoglio, Milan). 96 pp. (16 missing); 81 pieces for 11- and 13-course lute, all unattrib.: 5 passamezzos, 7 galliards, 15 correntes, 5 ballettos, 2 balli, 4 pavaniglias, 3 spagnolettas, a piva, 2 settings of 'aria del gran duca', a romanesca, 2 Ruggieros, and other untitled and miscellaneous dances ('matachins', 'marinetta', 'bergamasca', etc.). Literature: G. Reese: 'An Early 17th-Century Italian Lute Manuscript at San Francisco', Essays in Musicology in Honor of Dragan Plamenac, ed. G. Reese and R.J. Snow (Pittsburgh, 1969/R), 253–80 [incl. thematic index]; Coelho (1995), 154–6, 589–619

Melli, Pietro Paulo: Intavolatura di liuto attiorbato libro terzo nel quale si contiene varie sonate in una cordatura differente dall'ordinaria (Venice: Giacomo Vincenti, 1616/*R*1979, with introduction by O. Cristoferetti) (RISM M2220). 40 pp.; 23 pieces for solo lute: 3 capriccios, 4 correntes, a volta and galliard, 5 allemandes, a canzona, 2 passamezzo–saltarello pairs and 2 intabulations of madrigals 'passeggiate' (1 by Palestrina). The unusual tuning mentioned on the title-page is G–c–e–g–b–e′ with 4 diapasons.

Melli, Pietro Paulo: Intavolatura di liuto attiorbato libro quarto (Venice: Giacomo Vincenti, 1616/*R*1979, with introduction by O. Cristoferetti). 44 pp.; 17 pieces: a capriccio and 15 correntes for lute with 4 diapasons, and an intrada–balletto–corrente suite for an ensemble of 9 instruments: harpsichord, bass viol, double harp, violin, flute (in mensural notation), 'lauto corista', 'lauto più grande un tasto', 'lauto alla quarta bassa' and 'citarra tiorbato' (in tablature). Literature: F. Torelli: 'Una prima documentazione sur Melli, musicisti di Reggio Emilia', Flauto Dolce, x–xi (1984), 35–9; F. Torelli: 'Pietro Paolo Melli, Musician of Reggio Emilia', JLSA, xvii–xviii (1984–5), 42–9 Piccinini, Alessandro: Intavolatura di liuto et di chitarrone, libro primo … et una inscrittione d'avertimenti, che insegna la maniera, & il modo di ben sonare con facilità i sudetti stromenti (Bologna: G.P. Moscatelli, 1623/*R*1983, with introduction by O.

Cristoferetti) (RISM P2043). 132 pp.; 63 pieces for lute with 7 and 8 diapasons. 5 arie, a balletto in several 'partite', 12 correntes, 5 canzonas (1 for lute trio), 12 galliards, 2 ricercares and 26 toccatas (1 for lute duet); and 31 for chitarrone: 10 correntes, a chaconne, 4 galliards, 3 partite on the folia, romanesca and allemande and 13 toccatas. Instruction on playing the lute and chitarrone includes detailed information on hand positions, right- and left-hand fingering, arpeggiata, and 'histories' of the chitarrone, bandora and archlute. Edition: M. Caffagni, ed.: Opera, i: Intavolatura di liuto e di chitarrone, libro primo, AntMI, Monumenta bononiensia, xi (1962) [facs. and transcr.]; D. Perret, R. Correa and M. Chatton, eds.: Sämtliche Werke, i (Wilhelmshaven, 1983). Literature: G.L. Kinsky: 'Alessandro Piccinini und sein Arciliuto', AcM, x (1938), 103–18; S. Buetens: 'The Instruction of Alessandro Piccinini', JLSA, ii (1969), 6–17

Florence, Biblioteca Nazionale, Magl.XIX.105: Questro libro è da sonare di leuto: di me Giulio Medici et suoi amici (signed 'Giuseppe Rasponi a di 12 di marzo 1635'; ex-Medici Palatina). 18 ff. (5 blank); 35 dances: galliards, correntes, saisones, passamezzos, balli (1 with 'rotta') and other miscellaneous dances (bergamasco, pavaniglia, romanesca, spagnoletta, 'passa gallio', canario, chaconne, etc.). Edition: O. Chilesotti, ed. (1891)

Thomassini, Filippo (publisher): Conserto vago ... composti da buono, ma incerto auttore, libro primo (Rome, 1645). 36 pp.; a variation suite (balletto, volta, corrente, galliard, canzone francese–'recercata') for lute, theorbo and 4-course guitar 'alla napolitana', to be played solo or in ensemble. The print includes an explanation of ornaments and performance signs.

Gianoncelli, Bernardo [Il Bernardello]: Il liuto (Venice: heirs of Gianoncelli, 1650/*R*1981, with introduction by O. Cristoferetti) (RISM G1839). 48 pp.; 97 pieces for 14-course liuto attiorbato, some arranged in suites ('tasteggiata–gagliarda–spezzata', etc.). Edition: O. Chilesotti, ed. (1891) [5 suites and 2 pieces]

BIBLIOGRAPHY, COLLECTED EDITIONS

O. Chilesotti: 'Note circa alcuni liutisti italiani della prima metà del cinquecento', RMI (1902), 36–61, 235–63; pubd separately (Turin, 1902)

E.A. Wienandt: Musical Style in the Lute Compositions of Francesco da Milano (diss., U. of Iowa, 1951) [incl. complete thematic indexes of some prints containing Francesco's music]

L. Moe: Dance Music in Printed Italian Lute Tablatures from 1507 to 1611 (diss., Harvard U., 1956) [incl. thematic indexes and concordances]

G. Lefkoff, ed.: Five Sixteenth Century Venetian Lute Books (Washington DC, 1960) [incl. complete transcr. of the books of Abondante, Borrono, Scotto (1563), Becchi (1568) and Balletti (1554)]

A.J. Ness, ed.: The Lute Music of Francesco Canova da Milano (1497–1543), HPM, iii–iv (1970)

R. Chiesa, ed.: Francesco da Milano: Opere complete per liuto (Milan, 1971)

V. Coelho: 'Frescobaldi and the Lute and Chitarrone Toccatas of Tedesco della Tiorba', Frescobaldi Studies: Madison, WI, 1983, 137–56

K.B. Mason: The Chitarone and its Repertoire in Early Seventeenth-Century Italy (diss., Washington U., 1983)

J.M. Meadors: Italian Lute Fantasias and Ricercars Printed in the Second Half of the Sixteenth Century (diss., Harvard U., 1984)

J. Bernstein: 'The Burning Salamander: Assigning a Printer to Some Sixteenth-Century Music Prints', Notes, xlii (1985–6), 483–501

D. Fabris: Andrea Falconieri Napoletano: un liutista-compositore del Seicento (Rome, 1987)

K. Underwood: The Renaissance Lute in Solo Song and Chamber Ensemble: a Study of Musical Sources to ca. 1530 (diss., Stanford U., 1987)

R.d'A. Jensen: The Lute Ricercar in Italy, 1507–1517 (diss., UCLA, 1988)

D. Fabris: 'Voix et instruments pour la musique de danse: à propos des "Arie per cantare e ballare"', Le concert des voix et des instruments à la Renaissance: Tours 1991, 389–422

V. Coelho: The Manuscript Sources of Seventeenth-Century Italian Lute Music (New York, 1995)

R.K. Falkenstein: The Late Sixteenth-century Repertory of Florentine Lute Song (diss., SUNY, 1997), 153–226

3. CENTRAL EUROPEAN SOURCES TO *c*1650. Central European sources preserve a repertory considerably larger than that of other regions though much of it is imported. The earliest known lute tablature is German and dates from about 1460 (Tischler, 1974). These sources are seldom arranged around a single genre, showing wide diversity of design. Many of the earliest prints and manuscripts are didactically ordered: Judenkünig began by using the metres of Horatian odes to teach musical rhythm and concluded (in the 1523 book) with a group of pieces in successively higher positions; some manuscripts and the Nuremberg prints by Hans Neusidler and Hans Gerle began either with fundamenta (short preludes designed to illustrate various playing techniques) and intabulations a 2 followed by others a 3, or with strummed Gassenhauer leading to pieces 'coloriert' with figuration in the organist's manner. Volumes published by Wyssenbach (1550), Gerle (1552) and Drusina (1573) drew their contents mainly from the Venetian prints of Scotto and Gardane, but also from material gathered while studying in Italy, 'translating' the pieces from Italian into German tablature; a massive manuscript copied in southern Germany *c*1590–1610 (now at D-DO G.I.4/11–13) contains some 350 pieces in German tablature, many copied in sequence from printed French and Italian tablatures. After mid-century Johann and Andreas Eichorn published at Frankfurt an der Oder a series of volumes by the dilettantes Drusina (1556), Gregor Krengel (1584) and Matthäus Waissel (1573, 1592 – the last print to use German tablature), the principal aims of which appear to have been the collection and dissemination of favourite pieces edited from earlier prints, or gathered during travels abroad.

Many other prints contained new intabulations of polyphony, rather than merely copying earlier volumes: at Strasbourg Bernhard Jobin published important collections in Italian tablature for lute and for cittern, including four books by Sixt Kargel that include large numbers of intabulations of vocal music by Lassus. Over two-thirds of the German repertory consists of such arrangements, some favourite intabulations often reappearing from source to source with successive encrustations of ornamentation. Ochsenkun's book (1558), a work that marks a turn away from the earlier pedagogically orientated prints, often uses 'heighted' ciphers to show the part-writing of the original polyphony (which was possible only with the German tablature; fig.2). After 1575, many intabulations were drawn from the villanella repertory of Italians such as Marenzio and Scandello and their German imitators Regnart, Lechner and Ivo de Vento.

Although Italian dance music is contained in the earliest prints and manuscripts alongside indigenous German and 'Polish' dances, the newer French dances enter the sources in considerable numbers only with Denss's widely admired anthology (1594). Several enormous books display the wide range of genres and composers known in three particular areas of Germany at the turn of the century: the largest and most famous is Besard's Thesaurus harmonicus (Cologne, 1603) in French tablature; a somewhat more localized collection in Italian tablature is the manuscript prepared for the Augsburg patrician and diplomat Philipp Hainhofer; the third is the fascinating commonplace-book of a Danish student at the University at Rostock, in which Petrus Fabricius recorded his developing erudition as dances and songs for lute and jocular marginalia give way to serious music and Latin homilies. The three collections contain works by German, French, Polish, Italian, Hungarian, Dutch and English lutenists, a parade of the most important international figures of the time, indicating the knowledge of players in many parts of Germany. It was also during the first half of the 17th century that troupes of English actors and musicians, some fleeing religious turmoil at home, took to the Continent the 'marigold pavans', 'Englisch gaillardts', 'allemandes à Globe', 'thoys' and other pieces by Englishmen whose names are scattered throughout German manuscripts, along with intabulations of dances and chorale settings by Hassler and Haussmann and Arien by Heinrich Albert.

Extant Central European sources before 1650 consist of some 65 prints and 100 manuscripts.

Berlin, Staatsbibliothek: Preussischer Kulturbesitz: germ.qu.719, fasc.4 (ff 103–85): Königstein Liederbuch (c1470–73). 4 monophonic melodies (nos.82, 133–5) in German tablature for 5-course lute. Literature: P. Sappler, ed.: Das Königsteiner Liederbuch Münchner Texte und Untersuchungen zur deutschen Literatur des Mittelalter, xxix (Munich, 1970) [incl. facs. and transcr.]; H. Tischler: 'The Earliest Lute Tablature?', JAMS, xxvii (1974), 100–03 [incl. transcrs.]; Fallows (1977); Goy and others, ii (1994), 19

Freiburg, Couvent des Capucins, Ms. Falk Z105, ff. [2–2*v*]. Ornate intabulation (*c*1510) of De tous biens in Italian tablature (often used in southern Germany). Literature: J. Stenzel: 'Peter Falk und die Musik in Freiburg', SMz, cxxi (1981), 298–96 [incl. facs.]

Vienna, Österreichische Nationalbibliothek, Mus.Ms.9704: Lautenbüchlein des Jakob Thuerner (copied at Vienna, *c*1522). 31 ff.; 24 pieces: 13 intabulations of German lieder and 2 dances ('Marusca Danntz' and 'Zeiner Danz'), and from H. Judenkünig's Utilis et compendiaria introductio (Vienna, *c*1515) 7 Horatian odes and 2 lieder. Edition: R. Flotzinger, ed.: Das Lautenbüchlein des Jakob Thurner, MAM, xxvii (1971) [complete transcr., facs. and study]

Munich, Bayerische Staatsbibliothek, Mus.Ms.1512: Lauttenpuechl Anno &33 (probably copied at the Bavarian Court, Munich, *c*1533–44; a later MS by the same musician is D-Bsb Mus.Ms.40632). 72 ff.; 70 pieces: 21 German dances with Nachtänze ('Hoff dantz', 'Maruscat Danntz', 'Stat pfeiffer Danntz', etc.); 12 Italian dances ('D'annto boloigna', 'Paduaner', 'Latraditora', etc.); 13 secular German lieder, each intabulated in 2 and 3 parts; 4 sacred German lieder and a motet; 4 chansons each in 2 and 3 parts and 2 praeambula. The vocal models are drawn from works by Senfl (7), Hofhaimer (2), Stoltzer, Isaac, Sermisy (3) and Moulu. The MS also contains instructions, quoted in DTÖ, xxviii, Jg.xiv/1 (1907), and lxxii, Jg.xxxvii/2 (1931), on playing, tuning and fretting a lute. Editions: DTÖ, xxviii, Jg.xiv/1 (1907), and lxxii, Jg. xxxvii/2 (1931) [7 pieces]; H. Bischoff, ed.: Lieder und Tänze auf die Lauten (um 1540) (Mainz, 1938) [16 pieces]; A. Geering and W. Altwegg, eds. (1960) [12 pieces]. Literature: K. Dorfmüller (1967) [thorough study of the entire MS and its contents]; Göllner (1979), 87–92; Goy and others, ii (1994), 225–9

2. Sebastian Ochsenkun, 'Tabulaturbuch auff die Lauten' (1558): 'Jetzt bringt Sanct Martin' by Senfl; the letters and numbers are aligned to show the part-writing of the original polyphony

Neusidler, Hans: Ein newgeordent künstlich Lautenbuch (Nuremberg: Johann Petreius, 1536) (RISM 1536[12]; BrownI 1536[6]). 87 ff.; A tutor with pieces in progressive order of difficulty. 73 items: instructions on how to play the lute; intabulations of 20 2-part vocal works; intabulations of 37 3-part pieces; and praeambula and Italian and German dances. Neusidler's remarks on the pieces are interspersed throughout; the vocal models are drawn from works by Hofhaimer (14), anon. composers (10), Senfl (7), Isaac (5), Sporer (4), Stoltzer (4), Grefinger (3), Sixt Dietrich (2), Wüst (2), Adam von Fulda, Alexander Agricola, Lapicida, Brätel and Josquin. A few of the pieces are reprinted from Judenkünig's print of 1523 and Gerle's of 1532. Der ander Theil des Lautenbuchs (Nuremberg: Johann Petreius, 1536) (RISM 1536[13]; BrownI 1536[7]). 102 ff.; 47 pieces: 2 praeambula and intabulations of lieder by Hofhaimer (3), Senfl (2), Isaac and Obrecht, and intabulations of pieces from the Petrucci repertory, especially the Odhecaton (Venice, 1501): mass movements and motets by Alexander Agricola (2), Brumel (2), N. Caen (2), Josquin (2), Andreas de Silva, Févin, Finck and Obrecht; French chansons by Ghiselin (6), Josquin (5), Alexander Agricola (3), Compère (2), Obrecht (2), anon. composers (2), Hofhaimer, Isaac and Stokem. Editions: O. Chilesotti, ed. (1891) [12 pieces]; H. Bruger, ed.: Schule des Lautenspiels (Wolfenbüttel, 1926/R) [5 pieces]; DTÖ, xxxvii, Jg.xviii/2 (1911) [15 pieces]; DTÖ, lxxii, Jg.xxxvii/2 (1931) [21 pieces]; A. Geering and W. Altwegg, eds. (1960) [9 pieces]; GMB, no.93; HAM, i, no.105*a*; H. Mönkemeyer, ed.: Die Tabulatur, i, ix (Hofheim am Taunus, *c*1965) [selected transcrs. with quasi-facs. of tablature]; S. McCoy, ed.: Das erst Buch 1544 (Harrow, 1988) [Fr. tablature]. Facsimiles: J. Wolf (1919), ii, 40, 43; W. Apel (1942), 75; MGG1, v, 765–6, and ix, 1409–10; P. Päffgen and M. Schäffer, eds.: Institutio pro arte testudinis (Neuss, 1974–). Literature: O. Chilesotti: 'Di Hans Newsidler', RMI, i (1894), 48–59; K. Dorfmüller (1967), 75–85, 135–76 [concordances]

Vienna, Österreichische Nationalbibliothek, 18688: Lutebook of Stephan Crauss (Ebenfurt, Lower Austria). 35 ff.; 42 pieces copied by 3 hands: Italian dances (3 suites, each praeambulum–paduana–piva, 5 paduanas (1 with saltarello) and 7 other dances, including a pavan by Spinacino, calata, cara cosa, etc.); 8 German dances; 13 intabulations of pieces with German, Latin and French titles; and 3 praeambula and 1 ricercare. The MS was originally bound with the Linz copy of Judenkünig's lutebook of 1523 and contains biographical information about him. Literature: DTÖ, xxxvii, Jg. xviii/2 (1911) [list of contents, facs. and 15 transcrs.]; J. Dieckmann (1931), 108; K. Dorfmüller (1967), 40–41; MGG1, viii, 360 (pl.15); J. Wirth: 'La tablature de luth de Stephan Craus', Musique ancienne, vii (1979), 4–20; Goy and others, iii/1 (1997), 125–7

Berlin, Staatsbibliothek: Preussischer Kulturbesitz, Mus.Ms.40588: Tabulatur uf die Luten (Swiss; dated 1552 at beginning). 82 pp.; 62 pieces arranged in progressive order (beginning with strummed and ending with 'coloriert' pieces): 28 sacred and secular German lieder, 21 dances, 4 preludes and postludes, and intabulations of a motet and chanson. The MS also contains instructions on playing the lute and a diagram of the fingerboard (reproduced in MMg, viii, 1876, p.6). Literature: J. Wolf: 'Ein Lautenkodex der Staatsbibliothek Berlin', Festschrift Adolph Koczirz, ed. R. Haas and J. Zuth (Vienna, 1930), 46–50 [incl. list of contents]; K. Dorfmüller (1967), 41; Meyer (1986); Goy and others, ii (1994), 48–50

L'viv, Universitetskaya Biblioteka, 1400/I: Tabulatura (copied at Kraków by Hans Kernsthok, 1555; also known as Strzeskowsky Lutebook). 124 pp.; 66 pieces: intabulations of 3 motets, of 7 chansons by anon. composers (3), Sermisy (2), Lassus and Sandrin, of 6 madrigals by Verdelot (3), Arcadelt, Azzaiolo and Berchem, and of a German lied; 6 fantasias (1 by Giovanni Pacoloni) and a prelude; 12 Polish songs and dances; and 13 Italian dances (including a passamezzo–paduana–saltarello suite by Pacoloni and a galliard 'Non dite mai ch'io habia il forte' attrib. Bakfark). Edition: Z. Szweykowski, ed.: Muzyka w dawnym Krakowie (Kraków, 1964) [5 pieces]. Literature: M. Szczepańska: 'Nieznana krakowska tabulatura lutniowa z drugiej połowy xvi stulecia', Księga pamiątkowa ku czci Prof. Adolfa Chybińskiego w 70-lecie urodzin (Kraków, 1950), 198–217; Goy and others, iii/2 (1999), 263–5

Ochsenkun, Sebastian: Tabulaturbuch auff die Lauten (Heidelberg: Johann Kohlen, 1558; 2/1564, Johann Maier) (RISM 1558[20]; BrownI 1558[5], 1564[6]). 92 ff.; intabulations of 29 motets, 38 sacred and secular German lieder and 9 French and Italian pieces (the lieder include several stanzas of text) by Senfl (14), Gregor Petschin (12), Josquin (9), Mouton (5), Crecquillon (4), Arcadelt (3), Sermisy (3), Benedictus Appenzeller (2), Brandt (2), Hofhaimer (2), Isaac (2), Kilian (2), Zirler (2), Wilhelm Braitgasser, Briant, Adrian Caen, Févin, Glanner, Gombert, Lupus, Mahu, Othmayr, Stoltzer, Verdelot and Zirler. The voice-leading is shown with heighted ciphers (see fig.2). Editions: DTÖ, xxviii, Jg.xiv/1 (1907), and lxxii, Jg.xxxvii/2 (1931) [9 pieces]; A. Geering and W. Altwegg, eds. (1960) [7 pieces]. Facsimiles: J. Wolf (1919), ii, 37, 44–5; MGG1, ix, 1825. Literature: J. Robison: 'Ornamentation in Ochsenkhun's Tabulaturbuch', JLSA, xv (1982), 5–26; C.M. Hong: Sebastian Ochsenkun's Tabulaturbuch auff die Lauten (1588) (diss., Michigan State U., 1984)

Jobin, Bernhard (publisher): Das erste [ander] Büch newerlessner fleissiger ettlicher viel schöner Lautenstück (Strasbourg, 1572–3/R) (RISM 1572[12], 1573[24]); BrownI 1572[1], 1573[2]). 2 vols., 50 and 30 ff.; 70 pieces, arranged by genre: 4 fantasias, intabulations of madrigals by Lassus (2), Arcadelt, Domenico Ferrabosco, Verdelot, ?Berchem, ?Rore and Pathie, of chansons by Lassus (7), Crecquillon (3) and Willaert, of German lieder by Lassus (3), Scandello and Zirler, of motets by Lassus (6); and 3 passamezzo–saltarello pairs. 4 of the intabulations are drawn from Melchior Neusidler's prints (Venice, 1566). [Das ander Büch]: 5 passamezzo–saltarello pairs (incl. 'antiquo', 'ungaro' and 'commun'), 7 galliards (incl. 'chi passa', 'brunnette', 'varionessa'), 6 branles (1 by N. de Rans), and 15 teutscher Dantz–Nachdantz pairs. Literature: O.P. de Vallier: 'Die Musik in Joh. Fischarts Dichtungen', AMf, xviii (1961), 205–22; R.K. Inglefield: The Bernhard Jobin Lutebooks (1572, 1573) (diss., U. of Cincinnati, 1973) [incl. concordances, embellishment practice, facs. and transcrs.; summary in JLSA, viii (1975), 5–21]

Zwickau, Ratsschulbibliothek, CXV.3 (codex 50): Prima pars tabellaturae continens choreas et galliardas tantum (copied *c*1600–10 by Johann Arpin a Dorndorf (*c*1571–1606)). In 2 sections, paginated 1–63 and 1–12. First section has 54 pieces (12 for 2 lutes tuned a 2nd apart): 20 galliards (1 entitled 'Galliarta britannica elegans', another 'Cyprian galliarda' [by ?Rore]), 14 German dances (with Nachtänze), 11 choreas, 3 'Tanecz polsky', a passamezzo ungaro, a praeambulum, a canzonetta by Vecchi and a Czechoslovak song 'Dobrou noc má mila'. The second section has 6 Italian dance suites (passamezzo–saltarello–ripresa). Editions: A. Quadt, ed. (1968) [7 pieces]; Z. Stęszewski, ed. (1962) [5 pieces and 1 facs.]. Literature: J. Dieckmann (1931), 109–10 (list of dances with concordances]; L. Schrade: 'Eine Gagliarde von Ciprian de Rore', AMw, viii (1926), 385–9 [incl. transcr.]; E. Vogl: Mf, xviii (1965), 281–90; Goy and others, ii (1994), 318–22

Waissel, Matthäus: Lautenbuch darinn von der Tabulatur und Application der Lauten gründlicher und voller Unterricht (Frankfurt an der Oder: Andreas Eichorn, 1592) (BrownI 1592[12]). 28 ff.; 52 pieces: 4 'deudtsche Tentze', 12 'polnische Tentze', 4 passamezzo–saltarello–ripresa suites, 12 galliards (including 'Cara cosa', 'Rocha el fus'io', 'Traditora' and 'Chi passa'), 8 German villanellas by Regnart, 6 napolitane by Vecchi and 4 'phantasias'. The volume contains 16 pages of instructions on lute playing, including reading tablature, right- and left-hand fingering, mordants, coloration, selection of strings, and tuning. Editions: Z. Stęszewski, ed. (1962) [12 Polish dances]; D. Benkő, ed.: Matthäus Waissel: Tabulatura (1573) (Budapest, 1980) [edn for guitar with parallel Ger. tablature]. Literature: H.-P. Kosack (1935), 67–70, 108–119 [incl. thematic index]; H. Grimm: Meister der Renaissancemusik an der Viadrana (Frankfurt an der Oder, 1942), 104; D.A. Smith: 'The Instructions in Matthaeus Waissel's Lautenbuch', JLSA, viii (1975), 49–79 [trans.]

Karlsruhe, Badische Landesbibliothek, Sammelband Mus.Bd.A 678 (olim Te 12) (MSS bound in the 16th century with prints of Ochsenkun (1558) and Jobin (1572); ex-Kloster Ettenheim-Münster). Ff.i–v (at beginning of vol.): Latin instructions on intabulating vocal music for lute. Ff.1–61 (at end of vol.): 74 pieces and (on f.61) short instructions in German on tuning 3 lutes in consort. First section has 16 German 'madrigals' by Hassler (12) and J. Jeep; 1 'Philippi Pauan'. Second section has 26 chorale settings, sacred and secular lieder by J. Jeep (5), Joachim a Burck (2) and Lassus (2); 6 galliards (2 by Hassler) and an 'Englysh Galliardt & Auff Zug'; 3 allemandes (1 by Tain); a passamezzo–saltarello pair by 'D.C.'; and 2 intradas by Hassler, a fuga and 3 miscellaneous pieces. Literature: Goy and others, ii (1994), 132–5.

Reymann, Matthias: Noctes musicae (Heidelberg: Voeglin, 1598/R; 2/1600 as pt.ii of J. Rude's Flores musicae) (RISM R1230; BrownI 1598[10]). 100 ff.; 73 pieces in French tablature for 8-course lute: 21 preludes, 16 fantasias (9 based on German chorale melodies), 12 passamezzo–proportio variation suites, 5 pavans, 10 galliards and 8 choreas. The preludes and passamezzos are grouped alternating major and minor modes on G, F, D, E and B♭. Literature: H.B. Lobaugh: Three German Lute Books (diss., U. of Rochester, 1968) [incl. thematic index and selected transcrs.]

Wolfenbüttel, Herzog August Bibliothek, Guelf. 18.7 Aug.2°; 18.8 Aug. 2°: Philippi Hainhoferl Lautenbuecher (Bindings dated 1603 and 1604; compiled by 1 copyist for the Augsburg patrician and diplomat Philipp Hainhofer (1578–1647)). Two vols. 568 ff. (many blank following initial entries in each section); 212 pieces in Italian lute tablature, divided into 11 parts. First part (94 ff.): explanations of French, German and Italian lute tablature; 27 anon. sacred and secular German lieder intabulated by Conrad Neusidler (14), Melchior Neusidler (9) and Reys (4). Second part (54 ff.): 47 miscellaneous intabulations, most with text given above the tablature and several in 2 versions (the second 'alio modo'). The vocal models are 12 secular lieder by anon. composers (9) and Hassler (5), 32 Italian pieces (madrigals, canzonas, canzonettas, napolitane, etc.) by anon. composers (18), Vecchi (7), Hassler (3), Gastoldi (2), Arcadelt, Ferretti, Lindner, Marenzio, Palestrina, Regnart and Rossetto, 3 chansons by Lassus (2) and Sermisy, and a motet by Kneselius. Hainhofer is named as intabulator of 1 piece. Third part (48 ff.): 26 abstract pieces: preludes by La Grotte (3), Besard (3), Romani, Dowland and Melchior Neusidler; fantasias by Cato [Francesco da Milano], Dentice, Dowland, Edinthon, Perla, Raël and Reys; 6 ricercares by Rotta; a toccata by Nicolai and 3 miscellaneous pieces by an anon. composer, Ballard and Santino Garsi. The part ends with Besard's Latin instructions for playing the lute. Fourth part (43 ff.): 1 spagnoletta with 2 variations and 33 German dances with Nachtänze. Many dances have underlaid texts; others have dedicatory titles (some to Augsburg personages). Except for 1 dance each by Regnart, Besard and Bakfark, all are anon. Fifth part (55 ff.): 9 passamezzo–galliard pairs, most with variations (1 has 25 variations); individual variations are attrib. Besard (3), Nicolai (2), Bocquet, Eques Romanus (?Lorenzini), Alfonso Ferrabosco, Laurencini, Mercurius and Pompanio Boninensis. 1 pair bear the descriptive titles 'bombarde', 'bataglia et jube'. Sixth part (26 ff.): galliards by Nicolai (5), Besard (4), Cato (2), Dowland (2), Eques Romanus (2), Laurencini (2), Pompanio (2), Bakfark, Bocquet, Dentice, Montbuisson, Mertel, Melchior Neusidler and Vaumesnil. Seventh part (10 ff.): pavans by Perla (2), Cato, Alfonso Ferrabosco, Nicolai and Pompanio. Eighth part (10 ff.): 15 paduanas and 3 romanescas with Perla and Nicolai named as composers of several. Ninth part (5 ff.): 2 settings of the 'Ballo del Gran Duca' (aria di Fiorenza) and 1 'Ballo di Savoia'. Tenth part (9 ff.): a spagnoletta by Długoraj, 2 intradas (1 by Conrad Neusidler), a Polish dance and 2 branles (1 in 11 partes by Laurencini requires cordes avalées). Eleventh part (7 ff.): courantes and voltes by Ballard, Besard, Dentice, Edinthon, Montbuisson, Regains and Sainzancy. The volumes were decorated with engravings (since removed) by Dürer, Correggio and others. Editions: A. Souris and M. Rollin, eds.: Oeuvres pour luth seul de Jean-Baptiste Besard, CM, Corpus des luthistes français (1969, 2/1981), 145–56, 162 [incl. 6 transcrs. and incipits for 19 pieces]; A. Souris and M. Rollin, eds.: Oeuvres de Vaumesnil, ibid. (1974) [9 pieces by Vaumesnil, Edinthon, Perrichon, Raël and Montbuisson]. Literature: W. Tappert: 'Philipp Hainhofer's Lautenbücher', MMg, xvii (1885), 29–34; Goy and others, ii

(1994), 302–16; J. Lüdtke Die Launtenbücher Philipp Hainhofers (1578–1647) (Göttlingen, 1999)

Besard, Jean-Baptiste: Thesaurus harmonicus (Cologne: Greuenbach, 1603*R*) (RISM 1603[15]). 172 ff.; 405 compositions (in French tablature) grouped in 10 'books'. First book (12 ff.): 36 preludes; second book (24 ff.): 40 fantasias; third book (20 ff.): 16 madrigals by Ferretti, Rore, Palestrina, Regnart, Striggio, Vecchi and others and 10 villanellas by Marenzio arranged for voice(s) and lute; fourth book (26 ff.): 11 chansons (most by Lassus), 5 psalm settings and 34 airs de cour for voice and lute; fifth book (24 ff.): 9 passamezzo–courante pairs; sixth book (21 ff.): 52 galliards with diminutions; seventh book (12 ff.): 43 allemandes and a chorea; eighth book (12 ff.): Polish dances, branles and balletts (3 for lute duet); ninth book (14 ff.): 33 courantes; tenth book (15 ff.): a 'Battaille de Pavia' and 3 fantasias. At the end of the volume is a 4-folio treatise on lute playing which was widely translated and reprinted. John Dowland's translation appears in Robert Dowland's Varietie of Lute-Lessons (1610). Lutenist composers represented in the Thesaurus include Besard (46), Laurencini (44), Cato (19), Bocquet (15), Reys (9), Długoraj (8), Perrichon (8), Eques Romanus (6), Dentice (5), Dowland (5), Edinthon (3), Montbuisson (3), Alfonso Ferrabosco (2), Mercure (2), Mertel (2), Bakfark, Ballard, Maphon, Pomponio de Bologna, Raël and Vaumesnil. The compositions are for 7- to 10-course lute. Facsimiles: MGG1, i, 1818; ii, 616. Editions: O. Chilesotti, ed. (1891); O. Chilesotti, ed.: Madrigali, villanelle ed arie di danza del cinquecento dalle opere di J.B. Besardo, Biblioteca di rarità musicale, ix (Milan, 1892); O. Chilesotti: Villanelle a tre voci del Thesaurus harmonicus di J.-B. Besard (Leipzig, 1909); M. Szczepańska, ed.: Jakub Polak, WDMP, xxii (1951); M. Szczepańska, ed.: Diomedes Cato, ibid., xxiv (1953); A. Souris and M. Rollin, eds.: Oeuvres pour luth seul de Jean-Baptiste Besard, CM, Corpus des luthistes français (1969, 2/1981); A. Souris and M. Rollin, eds.: Oeuvres des Bocquet, ibid. (1972); A. Souris and M. Rollin, eds.: Oeuvres de Vaumesnil, ibid. (1974). Literature: O. Chilesotti: 'Di G.-B. Besardo e del suo "Thesaurus harmonicus"', GMM (1886), 231, 246; O. Chilesotti: Di Giovanni Battista Besardo e del suo 'Thesaurus harmonicus' (Milan, 1886); O. Chilesotti: 'Jean-Baptiste Bésard et les luthistes du XVIe siècle', RHCM, i (1901), 94–102, 143–6; O. Chilesotti: 'Airs de court del "Thesaurus harmonicus" di J.-B. Besard', Congresso internazionale di scienze storiche [III]: Rome 1903, viii, 131–4 [incl. 10 transcrs.]; J.N. Garton: The 'Thesaurus Harmonicus' of J.B. Besard 1603 (diss., Indiana U., 1952)

Copenhagen, Kongelige Bibliotek, Samling Thott. 4° 841: Liederbuch des Petrus Fabricius (1587–1651) (copied while a student at Rostock, *c*1605–8, and a clergyman in Schleswig). 152 ff.; *c*400 pieces: 196 German lieder, most with several stanzas of text, in either mensural notation or lute tabulature (or both), by Haussmann (44), Regnart (11), Lechner (6), Horn 'Fridericus D.', Dedekind, Franck, Caspar, 'H.K.', Lange, Meiland, Scandello, Spatz, Steccius and others; 2 preludes and a fantasia; *c*200 dances by Pietro Paolo Borrono, Brade, Friderici, Melchior Neusidler, 'M. Schō.' and Waissel, including 54 German dances, 7 Polish and Swedish dances, a Gassenhauer, 4 allemandes, a canary, 32 galliards, 6 'padoanas' and 'galiardas anglicas', a pavan in 9 partes, 3 chi passas and 48 passamezzos (many with variations and saltarellos); and (at the end of the book) settings of 26 German chorales. Scattered throughout the volume as a decorative border are rhymes, riddles and homilies. Editions: W. Tappert, ed.: Sang und Klang aus alter Zeit (Berlin, 1906), 60 ['Roland-Lied' and 'La bataglia']; P. Hamburger, ed.: ZMw, xi (1928–9), 444–6; Z. Stęzewski, ed. (1962) [8 transcrs. and a facs.]. Literature: J. Bolte: 'Das Liederbuch des Petrus Fabricius', Jb des Vereins für niederdeutsche Sprachforschung, xiii (1887), 55–68, 101–9 [incl. 22 melodies with discussion of texts]; J. Bolte: 'Aus dem Liederbuche des Petrus Fabricius', Alemannia, xvii (1899), 248–68; A. Kopp: 'Die Liederhandschrift des Petrus Fabricius', Archiv für das Studium der neueren Sprachen und Literaturen, cxvii (1906), 1–68, 241–55; B. Engelke: 'Das Lautenbuch des Petrus Fabricius', Die Heimat, xxxix (1929), 265–9; J. Dieckmann (1931), 96–101 [list of dances with some concordances], K. Gudewill: 'Fabricius, Petrus', MGG1 [incl. 1 facs.]; P. Hamburger: 'Über die Instrumentalstücke in dem Lautenbuch des Petrus Fabricius', Festskrift Jens Peter Larsen (Copenhagen, 1972), 35–46 [incl. 5 transcrs. and 2 facs.], J.O. Rudén: Per Brahes visbok (diss., U. of Uppsala, 1962); R. Wohlfarth: Die Liederhandschrift des Petrus Fabricius Kgl. Bibl. Kopenhagen, Thott. 4° 841: eine Studentenliederhandschrift aus dem frühen 17. Jahrhundert und ihr Umfeld (Münster, 1989)

Kassel, Murhard'sche und Landesbibliothek, 4° Mus 108.1 (titled on f. 54*v*): Livre de tablature de lhut pour madame Elizabeth princesse de Hesse, commencé par Victor de Montbuysson, le dernier janvier 1611. 100 ff.; 150 pieces copied in 1 hand (?Montbuisson's), in 2 sections. Ff.1–54: 4 courantes attrib. Moritz, Landgrave of Hesse, and 32 arrs. of German, French and Italian vocal music for lute solo, voice and lute, or voice and continuo, including pieces from Monteverdi's fifth book (1605), ff. 54*v*–100: lute pieces including cadences, technical exercises, preludes, an intrada by Hassler, pavans, galliards, courantes, voltes, ballets, English dances (6 by Dowland), branles, villanellas and a sarabande, with other attribs. to Gautier d'Angleterre, Mercure and Montbuisson. Literature: A. Arnheim: 'Ein Beitrag zur Geschichte des einstimmigen weltlichen Kunstliedes in Frankreich', SIMG, x (1908–9), 399–421 [incl. 3 chansons for S and B]; W. Rave: Some Manuscripts of French Lute Music, 1630–1700 (diss., U. of Illinois, 1972), 27

Nelahozeves, Lobkowitz Study Centre, XXIII.F.174 (olim Prague, Hudební Oddělení, Universitní Knihovny): Lautten Tabulatur Buech, darinnen … viel herrliche Stüeck beschrieben seindt von mier Nicolao Schmall von Lebendorf … Kantzeleischrebern des … Herrn Jaroslai Borzita vonn Martinicz … Hoffmarchalchen in Königreich Beheimb. Anno Domini. 1613. 75 ff.; 25 pieces for 9-course lute in German tablature, including instructions for tuning, 7 German lieder, 2 Catholic songs, 3 madrigals (1 by Pace), and various dances (bergamasche, choreas, correntes, galliards, Spanish and Czech dances and passamezzo–saltarello pairs with variations). Last 28 ff. contain Czech sayings and Marian prayers. Facsimile: J. Tichota, ed.: Loutnová tabulatura psaná Mikulášem Šmalem z Lebendorfu, Cimelia bohemica, viii (Prague, 1969) [with commentary]. Literature: E. Vogl, Mf, xviii (1965), 284; J. Klima: 'Die Tänze des Nicolaus Schmall von Lebendorf (1613)', ÖMz, xxi (1966), 460–61 [incl. facs. and 2 transcrs.]; J. Tichota, MMC, no.20 (1967), 65 [incl. 7 transcrs.]; A. Simpson: 'The Lute in the Czech Lands', JLSA, iv (1971), 9–20; K.-P. Klaus: 'Ein Dokument tschechisch-polnisch-deutscher Musikbeziehungen', DJbM, xviii (1973–7), 173–84

Leipzig, Musikbibliothek der Stadt, II.6.15: Lautenbuch (dated 1619; sometimes incorrectly known as the 'Długoraj-Buch'). 553 pp.; 460 pieces for 7-and 8-course lute, arranged roughly by genre: intabulations of German, Italian and French vocal music, abstract pieces (preludes, fantasias, toccatas, ricercares, fughe, etc.), and dances (10 passamezzo–saltarello pairs, 39 pavans, 66 galliards, 49 correntes, 41 ballets, 78 choreas and 17 allemandes and branles); many of the dances have national designations: Polish, Bohemian, English, Turkish, etc. The following composers are represented in the MS: Aloysius, Adriaenssen, Besard, Cato, Dowland, Długoraj, Engelmann, 'I.A.F.', Ferber, Gregorius, Groh, Hassler, Haussmann, Heller, Huet, Jenkins, Johnson, 'C.K.', Klipstein, Kühn, Lassus, Laurencie, Mercurius, Mertel, Otto, Peter Philips, Dalla Viola, Reinwald [Montbuisson], Reymann, Scandello, Schein, Schultz, Steuccius, Torrn, Tuartues and Walter. Editions: W. Tappert, ed. (1906) [5 pieces]; J. Wolf (1919), ii, 40 [facs.]; Z. Stęszewski, ed. (1962) [15 pieces and 1 facs.]; Z. Szweykowski, ed.: Muzyka w dawnym Krakowie (Kraków, 1964) [9 pieces]; A. Quadt, ed. (1968–83) [11 pieces]; D. Poulton and B. Lam, eds.: The Collected Lute Music of John Dowland (London, 1974) [5 pieces]. Literature: J. Dieckmann (1931), 101–2 [list of dances]

London, British Library, Sloane 1021: Lutebook ex-libris Johannes Stobaeus (1580–1646) (dated Königsberg, 1640, but with contents from *c*1600–15). 115 ff.; *c*150 pieces, most in French tablature for lute with 10 courses, and 9 pieces for 6-string mandora: German, Polish and Lithuanian sacred and secular lieder (some by Lindner and Decker), fantasias and preludes, many courantes and galliards and other miscellaneous dances (incl. chorea polonica, pavans, ballets with variations, branles, etc.). Composers include Decker (7), F. and T. Lindner of Lübeck (5), 'C.A.', Dowland, Henckel and Wade. MS also contains 2 treatises on lute playing. 1 (ff.36–43*v*), entitled 'Instituochlis', contains instructions on playing in the German manner of Waissel (with music examples in German tablature); the other (ff.24–28*v*), 'De methodo studendi testudine', discusses right- and left-hand technique, ornamentation (coloration, various types of mordents), tuning, etc., in the newer manner. There is no evidence that Stobaeus was responsible for

3. Pierre Attaingnant, 'Tres breve et familiere introduction' (1529): opening of Sermisy's chanson 'Jouissance vous donneray' arranged for lute any of the contents of this manuscript. Edition: Z. Stęszewski, ed. (1962) (incl. 19 pieces, facs. and short discussion of the MS]. Literature: H.-P. Kosack (1935), 46–7, 85–8; D. Lumsden: The Sources of English Lute Music, 1540–1620 (diss., U. of Cambridge, 1955), i, 175; D. Arnold: The Lute Music and Related Writings in the 'Stammbuch' of Johann Stobaeus (diss., North Texas State U., 1982)

BIBLIOGRAPHY, COLLECTED EDITIONS

E. Radecke: 'Das deutsche weltliche Lied in der Lautenmusik des 16. Jahrhunderts', VMw, vii (1891), 285–336

J. Wolf, ed.: Weltliche Werke von Heinrich Isaak, DTÖ, xxviii, Jg.xiv/1 (1907)

A. Koczirz, ed.: Österreichische Lautenmusik im XVI. Jahrhundert, DTÖ, xxxvii, Jg.xviii/2 (1911)

J. Dieckmann: Die in deutscher Lautentabulatur überlieferten Tänze des 16. Jahrhunderts (Kassel, 1931) [incl. lists of dances with concordances]

L. Nowak, A. Koczirz and A. Pfalz, eds.: Das deutsche Gesellschaftslied in Österreich von 1480 bis 1550, DTÖ, lxxii, Jg.xxxvii/2 (1931)

O. Gombosi: Bakfark Bálint élete és müvei (1507–1576)/Der Lautenist Valentin Bakfark: Leben und Werke (1507–1576) (Budapest, 1935, rev. 2/1967 by Z. Falvy in Ger. only)

H.-P. Kosack: Geschichte der Laute und Lautenmusik in Preussen (Kassel, 1935) [incl. some thematic indexes and lists of contents]

A. Geering and W. Altwegg, eds.: Ludwig Senfl: Instrumental-carmina aus handschriftlichen und gedruckten Quellen: Lieder in Bearbeitungen, Sämtliche Werke, vii (Wolfenbüttel, 1960) [incl. lute transcr.]

Z. Stęszewski, ed.: Tańce polskie z tabulatur lutniowych, ZHMP, ii (1962)

E. Vogl: 'Lautenisten der böhmischen Spätrenaissance', Mf, xviii (1965), 281–90

K. Dorfmüller: Studien zur Lautenmusik in der ersten Hälfte des 16. Jahrhunderts (Tutzing, 1967)

J. Tichota: 'Deutsche Lieder in Prager Lautentabulaturen des beginnenden 17. Jahrhunderts', MMC, no.20 (1967), 63–99

H. Tischler: 'The Earliest Lute Tablature?', JAMS, xxvii (1974), 100–02

I. Homolya and D. Benkő, eds.: Valentini Bakfark Opera omnia (Budapest, 1976–81)

4. French sources, 1529–99. Printed lute music flourished in France for only about 40 years, beginning in 1529 when Attaingnant's 'house arranger', Pierre Blondeau, prepared two volumes of lute music containing arrangements of chansons by Sermisy and others (fig.3), italianate preludes in the modes of the chansons, a battle-piece and the earliest extant polyphonic dance music in France: basses danses and branles, Italian pavans and galliards. Peripheral collections in Italian tablature (the usual system in southern France) were published at Lyons edited by Francescho Bianchini (*c*1547), Paladino (*c*1549, 1553) and Bakfark (1553) and include some intabulations drawn from Moderne's anthologies of vocal music.

But the apogee of Parisian lute music was reached in 1552 when Guillaume Morlaye contracted for a 1200-copy posthumous edition of works by his teacher Alberto da Ripa; each of the volumes usually contains a single genre of composition with appropriate fantasias. Morlaye and his chief competitor, Adrian Le Roy (who brought out a second Ripa series), also published books of their own pieces which have important typographical advances: ciphers are inserted between single five-line flanges which print the staff, and diagonal lines show precise lengths of notes and chords sustained in 'jeu couvert'. Le Roy wrote an influential treatise (now extant only in the 1568–74 English translation) that details 'rules' for playing the lute and explains exhaustively how to set vocal music in tablature (examples are drawn from Lassus chansons which are intabulated voice by voice and then 'more finelier handeled' with diminutions). The vogue for psalm singing is reflected in the collections for voice and lute prepared by Morlaye, Le Roy and Paladino; in post-1571 manuscripts the usual fashionable Italian villanellas appear, as well as newer French dances which, however, emerge in quantity only after 1600.

Le Roy, Adrian: Premier livre de tabulature de luth (Paris: Le Roy and Ballard, 1551) (RISM 1551^{24}; BrownI 1551^{2}). 40 ff.; 28 pieces: 2 fantasias, 7 intabulations (a psalm and 3 motets by Maillard and chansons by Sandrin, Sermisy and Estraigues) and 19 dances (pavane–galliard pairs, allemandes, branles), all except 1 arranged from Gervaise's third and fourth books of Danceries (Paris: Attaingnant, 1556 and 1550); many of the compositions are provided with alternative versions 'plus diminuées'. Edition: A. Souris and R. de Morcourt, eds.: Adrian Le Roy: Premier livre de tabulature de luth (1551) (Paris, 1960)

Le Roy, Adrian: Tiers livre de tabulature de luth, contenant vingt & un Pseaulmes (Paris: Le Roy & Ballard, 1552) (BrownI 1552^{2}). 24 ff.; psalm settings (after Marot's print, Lyons, 1549) for voice in mensural notation with lute accompaniment. Edition: R. de Morcourt, ed.: Adrian Le Roy: Psaumes (tiers livre de tablature de luth, 1552 [et] Instruction 1574) (Paris, 1962). Literature: R. de Morcourt: 'Adrian Le Roy et les psaumes pour luth', AnnM, iii (1955), 179–212 [incl. 4 transcrs.]

Ripa, Alberto da: Premier livre de tabulature de leut (Paris: M. Fezandat, 1552, 2/1553) (RISM 1552^{36}; BrownI 1552^{8}, $2/1553^{8}$). 48 ff.; 19 pieces: 6 fantasias and intabulations of chansons by anon. composers (5), Sandrin (4), Janequin (2), Lupus and Maillard. (The Cortot copy is now at GB-Lbl.) Editions: R.W. Buggert: Alberto da Ripa, Lutenist and Composer (diss., U. of Michigan, 1956), ii, 1; J.-M. Vaccaro, ed.: Oeuvres d'Albert de Rippe, CM, Corpus des luthistes française (1972–5). Literature: J.G. Prod'homme: 'Guillaume Morlaye, éditeur d'Albert de Rippe, luthiste et bourgeois de Paris', RdM, vi (1925), 157–67

Morlaye, Guillaume: Premier livre de tabulature de leut (Paris: M. Fezandat, 1552/R) (RISM 1552^{34}; BrownI 1552^{4}). 44 ff.; 24 pieces: 6 fantasias by Francesco da Milano, Julio Segni and Narváez (3); intabulations of chansons by Mithou (2), anon. composers, Gentian, Janequin, Magdelain, Mornable and Olivier, and of madrigals and frottolas by Arcadelt (2) and Tromboncino; and 6 paduana–galliard dance suites. Literature: J.G. Prod'homme: 'Guillaume Morlaye, éditeur d'Albert de Rippe, luthiste et bourgeois de Paris', RdM, vi (1925), 157–67

Morlaye, Guillaume: Premier livre de psalmes mis en musique par maistre Pierre Certon (Paris: M. Fezandat, 1554) (BrownI 1554^{5}). 24 ff.; 13 psalm settings of Certon arr. voice and lute by Morlaye. Edition: F. Lesure and R. de Morcourt, eds.: Psaumes de Pierre Certon (Neuilly-sur-Seine, 1957). Literature: P. Pidoux: 'Les psaumes d'Antoine de Mornable, Guillaume Morlaye et Pierre Certon', AnnM, v (1957), 179–98; NOHM, iv, 695 only

Ripa, Alberto da: Second livre de tabulature de leut (Paris: M. Fezandat, 1554) (RISM 1554^{34}; BrownI 1554^{6}). 24 ff.; 11 pieces: 3 fantasias, and intabulations of 2 motets by Sermisy and of chansons by Sandrin (2), Févin or Josquin, Gentian and Janequin. Edition: J.-M. Vaccaro, ed. (1972–5)

Ripa, Alberto da: Troisiesme livre de tabulature de leut (Paris: M. Fezandat, 1554) (RISM 1554^{35}; BrownI 1554^{7}). 24 ff.; 10 pieces: 3 fantasias, and intabulations of chansons by Sandrin (2), Arcadelt, Gentian, Gombert and Pathie, and of a motet by Consilium. Edition: R.W. Buggert (1956), ii, 58; J.-M. Vaccaro, ed. (1972–5)

Ripa, Alberto da: Quatriesme livre de tabulature de leut (Paris: M. Fezandat, 1554) (RISM 1554^{36}; BrownI 1554^{8}). 24 ff.; 10 pieces: 3 fantasias (1 'sans chanterelle'), and intabulations of 2 motets (1 by Morales), and of chansons by Arcadelt, Certon, Le Brun and Sandrin. Editions: R.W. Buggert (1956), ii, 86; J.-M. Vaccaro, ed. (1972–5)

Ripa, Alberto da: Cinquiesme livre de tabulature de leut (Paris: M. Fezandat, 1555) (RISM 1555^{36}; BrownI 1555^{4}). 24 ff.: 8 pieces: 2 fantasias, intabulations of a motet by Josquin, a frottola by Sebastiano Festa, and a chanson by Sandrin, and 2 pavane–galliard pairs. Editions: R.W. Buggert (1956), ii, 117; J.-M. Vaccaro, ed. (1972–5)

Uppsala, Universitetsbiblioteket, Vokalmusik i handskrift 87: Codex Carminum Gallicorum (copied *c*1557 in southern France and probably brought to Sweden by a musician at the court of Erik XIV). 72 ff.; 180 pieces in Italian tablature (many of the vocal pieces have underlaid texts): intabulations of motets by La Fague, Maillart, Verdelot and Werrecore, of madrigals by Ruffo (31), Arcadelt (12), Belleo (9), Rore (8), Verdelot (2), Corteccia, Costanzo Festa, Domenico Ferrabosco and Gero, of chansons by Arcadelt (14), Janequin (12), Sandrin (4), Le Heurteur (2), Cadéac, Certon, Clemens non Papa, Gombert, Maillart, Marle and Naich, of 43 anon. napolitane and villanellas, and of 21 Calvinist psalms by Certon, Costeley and Tessier; 6 ricercares and fantasias by Francesco da Milano (3), Giaches Organista (Brunel) and Ripa, and 2 untitled instrumental pieces. Some of the intabulations are by Bakfark, Franceschо Bianchini and Ripa. Literature: B. Hambraeus: Codex carminum gallicorum, Studia musicologica upsaliensia, vi (Uppsala, 1961) [incl. 17 complete transcrs., 68 incipits and 2 facs.). See also A. Cohen, JAMS, xvi (1963), 399–401; J.O. Rudén (1981), 46–9 [list of contents with musical incipits]

Ripa, Alberto da: Sixiesme livre de tabulature de leut (Paris: M. Fezandat, 1558) (BrownI 1558^{6}). 24 ff.; 10 pieces: 2 fantasias; intabulations of motets by Josquin and Sermisy, of chansons by Boyvin and Certon; and 2 galliards and a pavane. Editions: R.W. Buggert (1956), ii, 147; J.-M. Vaccaro, ed. (1972–5)

BIBLIOGRAPHY, COLLECTED EDITIONS

M. Brenet: 'Notes sur l'histoire du luth en France', RMI, v (1898), 637–76; vi (1899), 1–44; pubd separately (Turin, 1899/R)

L. de La Laurencie, A. Mairy and G. Thibault, eds.: Chansons au luth et airs de cour français du XVIe siècle, PSFM, 1st ser., iv–v [recte iii–iv] (1934/R) [incl. chansons for voice and lute pubd by Attaingnant, 1529]

J.-M. Vaccaro: La musique de luth en France au XVI siècle (Paris, 1981)

A. Souris, M. Rollin, J.-M. Vaccaro and others, eds.: CM, Corpus des luthistes français (1957–): Oeuvres pour luth seul de Jean-Baptiste Besard (1969, 2/1981); Oeuvres d'Albert de Rippe, i–iii (1972–5); Oeuvres de Vaumesnil, Edinthon, Perrichon, Rael, Montbuysson, La Grotte, Saman, La Barre (1974); Adrian Le Roy: Fantaisies, motets, chansons et danses (Premier Livre, 1551) (1975); Adrian Le Roy: Fantaisies et danses: extraites de A briefe and easye instruction (1568) (1975); Adrian Le Roy: Instruction pour le luth, 1574, i–ii (1977); Adrian Le Roy: Sixiesme livre de luth, 1559 (1978); Oeuvres de Guillaume Morlaye, i–ii (1980–89); Oeuvres de Jean-Paul Paladin (1986); Adrian Le Roy: Psaumes, 1567 (1993); Oeuvres de Franceschо Bianchini (1997)

D. Heartz, ed.: Preludes, Chansons and Dances for Lute Published by Pierre Attaingnant, Paris (1529–1530) (Neuilly-sur-Seine, 1964)

H.M. Brown: 'La musica ficta dans les mises en tablatures d'Albert de Rippe et Adrian LeRoy', Le luth et sa musique II: Tours 1980, 163–82

J.-M. Vaccaro: 'La fantasia chez les luthistes Français au XVIe siècle', AnM, xxxviii (1983), 139–45

W.J. Rave: 'Remarks on Gallot Sources: how Tablatures Differ', JLSA, xx–xxi (1987–8), 87–107

5. VIHUELA SOURCES, 1536–76. Spanish sources encompass some 730 pieces contained in seven large printed tutors for vihuela de mano by Luys Milán (1535–6), Narváez (1538), Mudarra (1546), Valderrábano (1547), Pisador (1552), Fuenllana (1554) and Daza (1576). Except for Milán's well-known El maestro, which uses Spanish (inverted Italian) tablature, all employ the normal Italian system. They are dominated by motets and mass movements (including eight complete masses by Josquin des Prez in Pisador's book), and indigenous Spanish and Portuguese songs, such as romances, villancicos and sonetos. To permit alternative performance by voice or vihuela, complete texts are often underlaid and prominent lines and cantus firmi may be printed in red ciphers. In meeting the didactic aims of their publications, the vihuelistas provided explanations of solmization and modes, metre and tempo, playing of glosas, and other matters usually taken for granted in non-Spanish sources. Sometimes the pieces are graded by difficulty or classified by mode and they may explore, like a study, a technical problem or musical device. The models for parody fantasias, tientos and glosas are usually identified in the title or even during the course of the composition, a practice virtually unknown elsewhere, although parody pervades other repertories as well. Italian dances, abundant outside Spain, appear seldom, the Spaniards having a preference for the improvisational skills taught by diferencias on villancico melodies and hymns, or on the romanesca and antico formulae. Some of the earliest sources also include music for guitar, which before 1550 was already gaining international currency over the six-course vihuela. Although several 17th- and 18th-century Spanish and Latin American manuscripts indicate that they contain music for 'viguela', the pieces are for guitar.

4. Diego Pisador, 'Libro de musica de vihuela' (1552), bk 1: parts of two 'romances viejos' for voice and vihuela, with the voice part notated in red ciphers (appearing here light grey)

Milán, Luys: Libro de música de vihuela de mano intitulado El maestro (Valencia: Francesco Diaz Romano, 1535–6/R) (BrownI 1536[5]). 102 ff.; 72 pieces for vihuela in Spanish tablature: 22 fantasias and 6 pavans, followed by 11 Spanish and Portuguese villancicos and romances, and Italian sonetos for voice (notated in the tablature with red ciphers) and vihuela; 22 fantasias followed by 11 more romances, villancicos (1 by Vasquez) and sonetos, similarly notated. The volume contains short descriptions of technical difficulties encountered in the various pieces. Editions: G. Morphy, ed. (1902), i [32 fantasias, pavans and arrs.]; L. Schrade, ed.: Publikationen älterer Musik, ii (Leipzig, 1927/R) [diplomatic facs. and transcr. of the entire vol.: see also O. Gombosi: 'Neuausgaben alter Musikwerke', ZMw, xiv, 1931–2, 185–9]; HAM, i, no.121–9; R. Chiesa, ed.: 'El maestro': opere complete per vihuela (Milan, 1971, 2/1974); C. Jacobs, ed.: Luys Milán: El maestro (Philadelphia, 1971). Facsimiles: J. Wolf (1927), pl.74; W. Apel (1942), 57; MGG1, v, 180, ix, 289–90; Monuments of Music and Music Literature in Facsimile, 1st ser., xxx (New York, 1975). Literature: J.B. Trend (1925); J.M. Ward: 'The Lute in 16th-Century Spain', Guitar Review, ix (1949), 26–8; J.M. Ward (1953); J. Roberts: LSJ, vii (1965), 24–31; C. Jacobs: 'An Introduction to Luis de Milán's El maestro (Valencia, 1536)', Cahiers canadiens de musique, i (1970), 99–104; C.M. Russell: 'The Eight Modes as Tonal Forces in the Music of Luis Milán', De musica hispana et aliis: miscelánea en honor al Prof. Dr. José López-Calo, ed. E. Casares and C. Villanueva (Santiago de Compostela, 1990), 321–62

Mudarra, Alonso: Tres libros de musica en cifras para vihuela (Seville: Juan de León, 1546/*R*1980, with preface by J. Tyler) (BrownI 1546[14]). 117 ff.; 76 pieces in 3 books: first has 16 pieces for vihuela and 6 for guitar: fantasias (studies in vihuela technique), intabulations of 2 mass movements by Josquin, variations on 'Guardame las vacas' and 'Conde claros', and 3 dances (pavans and a galliard); second has 26 pieces for vihuela: fantasias and tientos and intabulations of mass movements by Josquin (4) and Févin; third has 27 arrangements for voice (in mensural notation) and vihuela of motets by Gombert, Escobar and Willaert, romances, villancicos, sonetos and odes with attribs. to Boscán and Hofhaimer. Editions: MME, vii [complete]; G. Morphy, ed. (1902), ii [16 pieces]; MGG1, v, 1567–8 [facs.]. Literature: J.M. Ward, MD, vi (1952), 105; NOHM, iv, 126–9, facing p.129 [facs.], 686–7

Pisador, Diego: Libro de musica de vihuela (Salamanca: G. Millis, 1552/R) (RISM 1552[35]; BrownI 1552[7]). 112 ff.; 95 pieces (58 with voice, notated in red ciphers in the tablature or in mensural notation) in 7 books: first has 14 villancicos and romances with diferencias (fig.4); second has 16 villancicos (4 by Vasquez) and 3 intabulations of motets; third has 24 fantasias (12 with a vocal part in red ciphers); fourth and fifth have intabulations of 10 masses (a few movements omitted) by Josquin; sixth has intabulations of motets by Josquin (4), Gombert (3), García de Basurto (2), Willaert (2), Mouton and Morales; seventh has intabulations of villancicos, madrigals and chansons by Fontana (6), Willaert (4), Arcadelt, Festa and Flecha. Edition: G. Morphy, ed. (1902), ii [13 pieces]. Literature: N.A. Cortés: 'Diego Pisador: algunos datos biográficos', Boletin de la Biblioteca Menéndez y Pelayo, iii (1921), 331–5; L. Hutchinson: The Vihuela Music of Diego Pisador (diss., Eastman School of Music, 1937)

Daza, Esteban: Libro de musica en cifras para vihuela, intitulado El parnasso (Valladolid: Fernandez de Cordova, 1576/R) (RISM 1576[8]; BrownI 1576[1]). 120 ff.; 112 pieces in 3 books: first has 33 fantasias arranged by mode and number of voices, some intended as technical exercises; second has 13 motets arr. for voice (noted in ciphers in the tablature) and vihuela by Buleau (6), Crecquillon (2), Guerrero (2), García de Basurto, Maillard and Richafort; third has 24 pieces, also for voice and vihuela, and 2 solo pieces, sonetos, villanesche, villancicos and chansons attributed to Cevallos (4), Guerrero (3), Navarro (3), Ordoñez (2), Clemens non Papa and Crecquillon. Editions: G. Morphy, ed. (1902), ii [10 villancicos and villanesche]; J.A. Griffiths, ed.: Esteban Daza: the Fantasias for Vihuela, RRMR, liv (1982)

Kraków, Biblioteka Jagielonska, Mus Ms 40032 (olim Z32), formerly D-Bsb: Lautennoten nach der alten Tabulatur. 404 pp.; 350 pieces (many anonymous and some incomplete since 43 folios are missing). The oldest layer, which is described below, was copied in the Spanish kingdom of Naples, *c*1590; later the manuscript was brought to Germany (*c*1626) at which time additional pieces were entered. It is one of the most important sources of Spanish vihuela music, and is divided by genre into four parts. Part I (pp.1–149): canzonas by J. Tartiglia and Giulio Severino with anon. tiradas, clausulas and passos, and intabulations (4 attrib. Jehan de Liège) of sacred vocal music by Castillo (2), Jacquet of Mantua (3), Francesco de Aguyles and Josquin (6 – 2 with the rubric 'Van Gelinga' [for the Gospel]), and madrigals by Palestrina (4), Striggio (2), Ferrabosco (2), Rore (2), Castellini, Lassus, Verdelot, Donata, Reno, Faignant, Wert and Monte, and chansons by Lassus (15), Crecquillon (5 – 4 are intabulations of his 'Ung gay bergier') and Sandrin. Part II

5. Adriaen Valerius, 'Nederlandtsche gedenck-clanck' (1626): 'Almande nonette' ('Une jeune fillette')

(pp.150–99): passomezzos (some paired with gagliardas), mostly anonymous, but with some attributions to Lorenzino (2), Luis Majone and Pietro Paulo, 2 romanescas and a set of differencias by Majone (on 'Guardame las vacas'). Part III (pp.200–99): fantasias by Fabrizio Dentice (3), Francesco da Milano (3), Lorenzino (2), Giuseppe Giovanni (2 – one in 4 partes); ricercars by Giovanni (3), Dentice, a fuga by Cardone, an entrata on Renier's 'Chi dicomo', 'tochatas' and tientos. Part IV (pp.300–404): gagliardas by Santino Garsi (20 – some with descriptive or dedicatory titles, including 'La Garsi', 'Cesarina', 'Balduvina', 'Duca di Loreno', 'Giuliana', etc.), Lorenzino and Juan Farnese; 6 voltas, 5 courantes, 3 allemandes, 3 sets of folia variations, 4 ballettas, 'Matachin con differencias' by Lorenzino, 4 pavanas, a canarios, 'Segedillas par cantar' and miscellaneous dances with descriptive titles ('Rosina', 'Barone', 'Barriera', 'Rustica palma', 'L'appassionata', etc.). Editions: H. Osthoff: Der Lautenist Santino Garsi da Parma (Leipzig, 1926, 2/1973); D. Kirsch, ed.: Santino Garsi da Parma: Werke für Laute (Cologne, 1989) [edn for guitar with facs. of tablatures]

BIBLIOGRAPHY, COLLECTED EDITIONS

G. Morphy, ed.: Les luthistes espagnols du XVIe siècle (Leipzig, 1902)
E.M. Torner, ed.: Colección de vihuelistas españoles del siglo XVI (Madrid, 1923)
J.B. Trend: Luis Milán and the Vihuelistas (London, 1925)
W. Apel: 'Early Spanish Music for Lute and Keyboard Instruments', MQ, xx (1934), 289–301
J.M. Ward: 'The Editorial Methods of Venegas de Henestrosa', MD, vi (1952), 105–13
J.M. Ward: The Vihuela de Mano and its Music (1536–1576) (diss., New York U., 1953)
I. Pope: 'La vihuela y su música en el ambiente humanístico', Nueva revista de filología hispánica, xv (1961), 365–76
C. Jacobs: Tempo Notation in Renaissance Spain (Brooklyn, NY, 1964)
J. Roberts: 'Some Notes on the Music of the Vihuelistas', LSJ, vii (1965), 24–31
J.A. Griffiths: The Vihuela Fantasia: a Comparative Study of Forms and Styles (diss., Monash U., 1983)

6. The Low Countries, *c*1545–1626. Before the growth of a native school late in the century, the thesauri published at Leuven by Phalèse between 1545 and 1575 constituted almost the entire output of lute music in the Low Countries. Although sometimes unjustly reproached for his musical piracy, Phalèse (and his later partner at Antwerp, Bellère) provided an important service by making available in French tablature a select range of pieces drawn from Italian, Spanish and German presses, through which much Continental lute music reached the British Isles.

Original Netherlandish lute music, which begins with Adriaenssen's print (1584), at first echoes the international propensity for vocal forms nurtured by Italian composers, but Van den Hove's later prints and manuscripts, and the widely influential books of Nicolas Vallet contain a forward-looking repertory of metrical psalms, distinct prelude-fantasia genres (some in style brisé), newer French dances, and (in Vallet's books) explanation of graces, the most vital component of 17th century lute style, and notes on their use. The enormous 'Thysius Lutebook', copied by Adrian Smout at Leiden, exemplifies cross-Channel exchanges, with nearly a third of its some 626 pieces being of English origin (19 for lute ensemble). The last Netherlandish printed tablature, Valerius's 1626 nationalistic account in song of the Netherlands revolution (fig.5), draws timbres from English, French and Netherlandish lute repertories.

Phalèse, Pierre, and Jean Bellère (publishers): Theatrum musicum, longe amplissimum (Antwerp, 1571) (RISM 1571[16]; BrownI 1571[6]). 126 ff.; 196 items (7 for duet): fantasias by Melchior Neusidler (8), Francesco da Milano (7), Kargel (5), Morlaye (3), Giovanni Maria da Crema (2), Paladino (2), Borrono and Raphael Viola; intabulations of chansons by Lassus (38), Clemens non Papa (9), Crecquillon (9), Sandrin (5), Sermisy (3), Certon (2), Godard (2), Pathie (2), Verius (2), Ebran, Arcadelt, Cadéac, Gascongne, Janequin, Lupi, Mittantier and Rore, of madrigals by Lassus (15), Arcadelt (4), Rore (3), Berchem, Domenico Ferrabosco, Pathie and Verdelot, of motets by Lassus (8), Clemens non Papa (3), Josquin (2), Jacquet of Mantua and Lupus, and of a Netherlandish song by Clemens non Papa; and 29 dances, including pieces by Barbetta (12), Le Roy (9) and Neusidler. 60 of the pieces appear in earlier Phalèse anthologies and are drawn from prints by Francesco da Milano (Venice, 1536), Castigliono (Milan, 1536), Borrono (Venice, 1546), Crema (Venice, 1546), Gintzler (Venice, 1547), Pietro Teghi (Leuven, 1547), Le Roy (Paris, 1551), Morlaye (Paris, 1552, 1558), Bakfark (Paris, 1564), Melchior Neusidler (Venice, 1566), Barbetta (Venice, 1569), Bakfark (Antwerp, 1569) and Kargel (Mainz, 1569).

Berlin, Staatsbibliothek: Preussischer Kulturbesitz, Mus.autogr.Hove 1 (MS is in the hand of Joachim van den Hove and dated Leiden, 1615 on various folios). 178 ff. (some blank); 106 pieces for 9-course lute. It contains 2 preludes, 6 toccatas, a fantasia and intrada; 11 passamezzos (4 paired with galliards), 14 courantes, a sarabande, 4 voltes, 6 allemandes (1 entitled 'Pools almande' with 4 variations), 5 galliards, 2 pavan–galliard pairs (entitled 'Inferno' and 'Paradiso'), 2 ballets, 3 English masqueradas, 2 masques (1 'du Roy'), 3 'bouffons', a spagnoletta and 3 'fortunas angleses'; and intabulations of 11 Netherlandish songs, 3 chansons (1 by Lassus), and 10 madrigals and villanellas (1 by Domenico Ferrabosco, 2 by Striggio – intabulated by Romani). Editions: L. Liepmannssohn: Katalog 221: Musikalische Seltenheiten (Berlin, *c*1930) [facs.]; A. Quadt, ed. (1968–83)

Vallet, Nicolas: Secretum musarum in quo vera et genuina dextre simul et prompte pulsandi ratio ad amussim proponitur/Le secret des muses, auquel est nayfuement demonstrée la vraye maniere de bien & promptement apprendre a sonner du luth/Het gheheymenisse der Zang-Godinnen, waer in levendich wort vertoont de rechte maniere om wel ende veerdichlijck op de luyt te spelen (Amsterdam: Nicolas Vallet, 1615/*R*1986–92 with preface by L.P. Grijpe and R. Spencer; repr. 1618 as Paradisus musicus testudinis, by J. Janssonius, from the same engravings). 6 + 94 pp.; 92 pieces for 7-course lute with 1 to 3 diapasons, grouped roughly by genre: 14 preludes and 5 fantasias (1 on the 'passemeze', another 'mediante' (chromatic)), 3 pavans (1 'en forme de complainte', another 'd'Espagne'), 4 passamezzos, 7 galliards (1 'anglois', 1 'Essex'), 2 allemandes, 5 ballets, 3 bourrées (1 'd'Avignon'), 19 courantes (1 by Bocquet), 5 voltes (1 'de la complainte'), a 'Brande yrlandt', 'Sarabande de Espagnole', dance entitled 'Courante-sarabande', chaconne, moresca, 'Une jeune fillette' and 'Mall Simms'; 3 chansons (2 by Le Jeune and 1 'anglois'), 3 Dutch and 2 Polish pieces, and 13 miscellaneous compositions with descriptive titles ('Les pantalones', 'La sigrolle', 'L'espagnolle', 'La daulphine', 'Guillemette', etc.). It includes a valuable 5-page treatise on lute playing (Petit discours contenant la manière de se bien servir … du present livre … par lequel on peut en peu de temps arriver ala vraye connoissance du vrai maniment du luth), containing information on left-hand positions, right-hand fingering (including extension of the thumb in the Baroque manner) and ornamentation (part pubd by J. Wolf (1919) and J. Dodge (1907–8) [see Le second livre, 'Literature'], and in facs. by A. Souris and M. Rollin (1970)).

Vallet, Nicolas: Le second livre de tablature de luth, intitulé Le secret des muses … fort faciles & utiles pour tous amateurs/Het tweede boeck van de luyt-tablateur, ghenoemt Het gheheymenisse der Sangh-Godinnen (Amsterdam: Nicolas Vallet, 1616/R, 3/1619) (RISM 1619[17]). 56 pp.; 36 compositions (7 for lute quartet): 9 ballets (1 'des gueux', another 'L'escoisse'), 2 bourrées, 2 branles ('Loreyn' and 'de la Royne'), 2 fantasias (1 by L'Espine), a pavan and passamezzo d'Italie/galliard, 5 French, Dutch and English pieces (incl. 'Mall Simms') and the 'Onse Vader in hemel', and 6 pieces with descriptive titles ('Battaille', 'Carillon', 'La pinçante', 'La piccarde', 'La volecte' etc.); the quartets (for lutes pitched D, G, A, d) consist of 2 ballets, a chanson and courante based on it, a galliard and 2 additional chanson arrangements. Facsimiles: J. Wolf (1927), pl.73; MGG1, ii, 1009–10, 1011–12. Editions: ZHMP, ii (1962) [2 pieces]; K.H. Yong, ed.: Nederlandse luitmuziek uit de 17e eeuw (Nijmegen, 1965) [3 pieces], A. Souris and M. Rollin, ed.: Oeuvres de Nicolas Vallet pour luth seul, CM, Corpus des luthistes français (1965, 2/1989) [incl. facs. of the Petit discours]. Literature: D.F. Scheurleer: 'Het luitboeck van Nicolaas Vallet', TVNM, v/1 (1896), 13–39 [incl. selected transcrs.]; D.F. Scheurleer: 'Twee bijdragen tot de geschiedenis van Nicolaas Vallet', TVNM, vi/3 (1899), 176–8; J. Dodge: 'Ornamentation as Indicated by Signs in Lute Tablature', SIMG, ix (1907–8), 318–36 [quotes from Petit discours]; J. Wolf (1919), ii, 149; H.-P. Kosack (1935), 43 only, 72–4; M. Falk: 'Die Lautenbücher des N. Vallet', SMz, xcviii (1958), 148–52; M. Falk: 'De Amsterdamse liutspeler N. Vallet', Mens en melodie, xiv (1959), 140–43; S. Buetens: 'Nicolas Vallet's Lute Quartets', JLSA, ii (1969), 28–36 [incl. 1 piece]

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J.P.N. Land: Het luitboek van Thysius, beschreven en toegelicht (Amsterdam, 1889); orig. in TVNM, i/3 (1884), 129–95; i/4 (1885), 205–10; ii/1 (1885), 1–56; ii/2 (1886), 109–74; ii/3 (1887), 177–94; ii/4 (1887), 278–350; iii/1 (1888), 1–57 [incl. part listing of contents with some incipits; see also R. Eitner, MMg (1886), 39–43; xix (1887), 11–12]

G. Robyns-Becquart: Les livres de luth de Pierre Phalèse (diss., Catholic U. of Leuven, 1956)

F. Noske: 'Remarques sur les luthistes des Pays-Bas (1580–1620)', Le luth et sa musique: Neuilly-sur-Seine 1957, 179–92

A. Souris, M. Rollin and F.-P. Goy, eds.: Oeuvres de Nicolas Vallet, CM, Corpus des luthistes français (Paris, 1965, 2/1989)

H. Vanhulst: 'Edition comparative des instructions pour le luth, le cistre et la guitare publiés à Louvain par Pierre Phalèse (1545–1579)', RBM, xxxiv–xxxv (1980–81), 81–105

The Complete Works of Nicolaes Vallet (Utrecht, 1986–92) [facs. with introduction by L.P. Grijp and biographical study by R. Spencer]

H. Quittard: 'L'Hortus Musarum de 1552–53 et les arrangements de pièces polyphoniques pour voix seule et luth', Musique ancienne, xxiii (1989), 30–59

H. Vanhulst: 'A Fragment of a Lost Lutebook Printed by Phalèse (*c*1575)', TVNM, xl/2 (1990), 57–80

7. ENGLISH LUTE MUSIC. English solo lute music comprises some 1600 pieces contained in about 60 books, nearly all manuscript (a repertory nearly four times as great as that for virginals), while the sources of the lute ayre, on the other hand, are mostly prints. The earliest manuscripts, *c*1540–70, reflect the English proclivity for dances, grounds and song arrangements. Although works by continental lutenists such as Narváez, Francesco da Milano, Gorzanis and Melchior Neusidler (some of whose works reached England through the Leuven prints of Phalèse) are scattered through second-generation sources, dance forms by native composers occur with increasing frequency until they soon dominate the repertory.

One of the consummate periods in the entire history of lute music was reached between 1590 and 1626, a classical phase as English lutenists headed by John Dowland (whose works are represented in nearly every source) effected a successful synthesis of imported techniques, forms and styles with inherent gifts for melody and variation. The sources are overflowing with pavans and galliards, almans and courantes, fancies on Italian models, miniature toys and jigs, and many grounds, particularly the quadro and passymeasures, the Rogero, 'le vecchie' and the ubiquitous funereal dump. The only printed collections of solo lute music appeared at this time, the books of Barley (1596) and Robert Dowland (1603), alongside some 35 prints devoted to the lute ayre. The ayres were printed with the vocal parts so disposed on the page that the pieces could be performed as solo songs with lute or as partsongs with the singers seated around a table (for illustration, see TABLE-BOOK), and include books by Dowland, Morley, Cavendish, Allison, Robert Jones (ii), Rosseter, Pilkington, Coprario, Danyel, Campion, Ferrabosco and others – for the most part composers who did not contribute substantially to the solo lute repertory.

With the appearance at court of Jacques Gautier in 1619 and the death of Dowland in 1626, indigenous English lute style declined before a gradual encroachment of French influences, well documented in Filmer's French Court-Aires, with their Ditties Englished (1629), and in manuscripts such as Lord Herbert of Cherbury's Lutebook and the Burwell Tutor. By 1676, as Mace recorded in his nostalgic Musick's Monument, or A Remembrancer of the Best Practical Musick, the lute had been almost entirely ousted by the louder Italian chitarrone, an instrument more suited to thoroughbass realization, although several collections of Scottish tunes arranged for lute or mandore deserve mention.

London, British Library, Roy.App.58., ff.51v–56 (8 short pieces copied *c*1547–55 in a collection of miscellaneous keyboard and part-music). The pieces include intabulations of a Dutch lied ('Ough warder mount') and of 4 English songs ('Pastyme with good companye', by ?Henry VIII, 'In wynter's just returne', etc.), and 'The Duke of Somersett's' and 'Queen Marie's' dumps. Literature: A. Byler (1952), 43, 125 [complete transcr.]; D. Lumsden (1955), i, 165; J.M. Ward: 'The Lute Music of MS Royal Appendix 58', JAMS, xiii (1960), 117–25 [discussion, facs. and transcrs. of the 8 pieces]; J.M. Ward (1992), i, 13–16 [incl. concordances], ii, exx.8b, 9a, 13, 126 [transcr.]

Washington, Folger Shakespeare Library, V.a.159 (olim 448.16): the so-called Giles Lodge Book. 136 ff. (24 containing lute tablature); a commonplace-book of a novice player containing recipes and remedies, instructions on writing a testament, etc., a grammar school play (July and Julian), and 38 lute pieces. Ff.3–13 (27 pieces copied *c*1559–71): 10 English songs ('Will you walk the woods so wilde' attrib. Charles Jackson, 'Blame not my lute', 'In winter's just retorne', etc.), 'Mounsiers Almayne', 2 pavans (1 by Weston), 4 galliards, 'The bagpipes horn pipe', 'The antycke' (i.e. 'Les bouffons'), and other untitled and miscellaneous pieces. Ff.13*v*–21 (11 pieces copied *c*1572–6): 5 English songs ('Maid wil you marie', 'The upright esquire', 'All of a greene willow', etc.), a pavan by Weston, 2 galliards (including a French galliard by Johnson), 'Militis dumpe', 'Brawl' (branle) by 'F.G.', and an alman. Literature: G. Dawson and A. Brown, eds.: July and Julian, Malone Society Reprints (Oxford, 1955) [incl. facs. of 1 page from lute section, facing p.xvi]; D. Lumsden (1955), i, 266; J.M. Ward: JAMS, x (1957), 151–80 [incl. 2 transcrs.]; J.M. Ward: JAMS, xx (1967), 28–86 [incl. 3 transcrs.]; F.W. Sternfeld: Music in Shakespearean Tragedy (London, 1963) [transcr. and facs.]; MGG1, xii, 615–16 [facs.]; J.M. Ward (1992), i, 16–21, 87–8 [incl. concordances], ii [27 transcrs.]

Dublin, Trinity College Library, D.3.30/i, Book: Thomas Dallis Pupil's Lute (dated Cambridge, 1583, but containing a repertory from the 1570s). 254 pp.; 288 compositions (198 for lute solo, 4 lute duets, 1 lute trio, a lute quintet, 20 lute and voice pieces, a branle for cittern, and 8 pieces for bandora): 21 sacred pieces (Dutch and English psalms, 3 Magnificat settings, a Nunc dimittis and 'Vader onse'), 2 by Dallis; 16 chansons by Janequin (2), Lupi (2), Sandrin (2), Cadéac, Crecquillon, Josquin (intabulated by Spinacino in 1507), Lassus, Villiers and Van Wilder; 10 Italian madrigals and villanesche by Arcadelt, Gorzanis and Pathie (including 2 settings of 'Era di maggio'); 4 English songs (2 set by Adriaenssen); fantasias by 'M. Antonio', Dallis and Francesco da Milano, and a ricercare by Spinacino; 4 grounds ('Rogero', In Nomine and 'Queen Marys Dumpe'); *c*142 dances: 63 passamezzos ('hauboys', 'd'Italie', 'Zorzy', 'rocha el fuso', and many on the antico and moderno formulae) by David [?Pollacky] (13), Gorzanis (8), Barbetta, Padbrué and Newman; 3 passamezzo–galliard pairs (1 on the In Nomine for 2 lutes by Strogers); 36 pavans ('quadro', 'flatt', 'La vecchie', etc.) by John Johnson (i) (5), Peter Philips (3), Brewster, Byrd, Cotton, F. C(?utting) and Weston; 25 galliards ('Chi passa', 'Wigmores', 'Earle of Oxford', 'Cara cossa', 'All a greene willow', etc.) by Johnson (3) and Dallis; 3 pavan–galliard pairs, including 1 by Peter Philips arranged by Thomas Wudd, and 1 by Newman; 6 almans including 'Queens', 'Princes' and 'Slaepen gaen'). The 20 pieces for voice and lute include 3 Italian villancicos and songs by Byrd and Parsons. The bandora pieces include 'Tinternel', 'Chi passa', 'Rogero', pavans and galliards. The MS appears to draw heavily upon continental sources, particularly the various prints of Phalèse & Bellère (Leuven and Antwerp, 1552–84). The unrelated Dublin Virginal Manuscript (D.3.30/ii) is bound with the Dallis Book. Edition: C. Goodwin, ed.: The English Lute Song before Dowland, i (Guildford, 1996). Literature: H.M. FitzGibbon: 'The Lute Books of Ballet and Dallis', ML, xi (1930), 71–7 [incl. 1 facs.]; J.M. Ward: 'The "Dolfull Domps"', JAMS, iv (1951), 111–21; D. Lumsden (1955), i, 232; J.M. Ward: JAMS, x (1957), 151–80 [1 transcr.]; F.W. Sternfeld: 'Lasso's Music for Shakespeare's "Samingo"', Shakespeare Quarterly, ix (1958), 105–15; F.W. Sternfeld (1963), 46 [information on Dallis with facs. and transcr. of his setting of 'All a greene willow']; J.M. Ward: JAMS, xx (1967), 28–86 [incl. 1 transcr.]; J.M. Ward and others: 'The Lute Books of Trinity College, Dublin', LSJ, ix (1967), 17–40 [list of contents and concordances]; xii (1970), 43–4 [additions]

Cambridge, University Library, Dd.2.11 (copied by Matthew Holmes *c*1590–1600 at Oxford and in Westminster). 101 ff.; 326 pieces (53 for bandora); the lute pieces include 74 galliards, 53 pavans, 12 almans, 5 courantes, 5 grounds, 8 toys and jigs (1 by Bull), a masque tune, 24 abstract pieces (fancies, preludes, In Nomines, etc.) by Alfonso Ferrabosco (3), Francesco da Milano (3), Holborne, Paradiso, Parsons and Taverner, and 11 intabulations of chansons by Lassus (4), Sermisy, Gerarde, Arcadelt, Philips and Ferrabosco. The bandora pieces include 19 pavans (3 by Holborne and 2 by Dowland), 5 galliards (1 by Cutting), 6 grounds by Holborne, and 9 fantasias (2 by Holborne and 1 by Allison). Editions: M. Kanazawa, ed. (1967) [incl. 13 bandora pieces]; B. Jeffery, ed. (1968) [5 pieces and facs.]; A.J. Ness, ed.: The Lute Music of Francesco Canova da Milano, HPM, iii–iv (1970), nos.82–3, appx no.29. Literature: D. Lumsden (1955), i, pp.181, 204, 212, 220; I. Harwood: 'The Origins of the Cambridge Lute Manuscripts', LSJ, v (1963), 32–48

New Haven, Yale University, School of Music Library, Ma.21.W.632: the so-called 'Wickhambrook' Lute Manuscript. 68 ff. (10 blank); 25 pieces: 3 intabulations of chansons by Arcadelt, Lassus and Peter Philips, 7 pavans ('Le vecchie', 'Spanish', etc.) by Johnson (4) and Philips; galliards by Holborne, Johnson and Knowles; a ground by Johnson; and an alman and 3 other pieces by Dowland ('Tarleton's Resurrection', 'My Lord Willoughbye's Tune', 'Mistris White's Dumpe'). The MS also contains the 'La vecchie' pavan–galliard for lute duet. Editions: D. Poulton and B. Lam, eds. (1974), nos.50, 59; D.E.R. Stephens, ed.: The Wickhambrook Lute Manuscript, Collegium Musicum, iv (New Haven, 1963); Monuments of Music and Music Literature in Facsimile, 3rd ser., iii (New York, 1974). Literature: R. Newton (1938–9); D. Lumsden (1955), i, 280

Dublin, Trinity College Library, D.1.21/ii. 42 pp.; 63 pieces (1 for viol). An important source for broadside ballad tunes, here in simple, unadorned settings; the MS, though bound with the Ballet Lutebook, is unrelated to it. 27 popular tunes ('Lusty gallant', 'The woods so wilde', 'The hunt is up', 'Greensleeves', 'Turkeylony', etc.); 10 galliards, 8 pavans, and other miscellaneous pieces ('Earle of Darbye's Coraunta', 'Orlando Sleepeth', 'Scotis jig', 'Buffons', a toy, march, etc.). Composers include Johnson (5), Pearce (2), Cotton, Newman and Robinson. Editions: W. Chappell: Popular Music of the Olden Time (London, 1855–9), i, pl.3 [quasi-facs. of 'Greensleeves']; O. Chilesotti, ed. (1891), 17 [1 transcr.]; G. Bontoux: La chanson en Angleterre au temps d'Elizabeth (Oxford, 1936), pl.iv [facs.]. Literature: A.M. FitzGibbon: 'The Lute Books of Ballet and Dallis', ML, xi (1930), 71–7 [incl. 2 facs.]; A. Byler (1952), 99, 189; D. Lumsden (1955), i, 244; D. Poulton: 'Notes on the Spanish Pavan', LSJ, iii (1961), 5–16; F.W. Sternfeld (1963) 70–78 [incl. 2 transcrs.]; C.M. Simpson: The British Broadside Ballad and its Music (Brunswick, NJ, 1966); J.M. Ward: 'The Lute Books of Trinity College, Dublin', LSJ, x (1968), 15–32 [list of contents with concordances and 4 facs.]

London, British Library, Add.4900, ff.54v–65v. 18 songs (1 duet) by Heywood, Johnson, Taverner and Sheppard. Edition: C. Goodwin, ed.: The English Lute Song before Dowland, ii (Guildford, 1997). Literature: U. Olshausen (1963), 241–5

Glasgow, University Library, Euing 25 (olim R.d.43): Euing Lutebook. 8 + 50ff.; 71 pieces: 6 fantasias by Dowland, 19 pavans ('Lacrimae', 'Captain Piper's', etc.), 20 galliards ('Mr. Langton's', 'Melancholy', 'Earle of Derby's', etc.), 4 almans and a French volte, and 22 miscellaneous pieces, including 'Image of Mr. Melancholy', 'Loath to depart', 'Infernum' and 'Countess of Pembroke's funeral', and Dowland's 'Mrs. Winter's Jump', 'Fortune my foe', 'Solus cum sola', 'My Lorde Willoughbye's Welcome home', 'Goe from my window', 'Semper dolens', 'Aloe'. Other attributions are to Dowland (17), Cutting (7), Holborne (6), Alfonso Ferrabosco (3), Bacheler (2), Robert and John Johnson (2), Askew, Bulman and Cavendish. The MS also contains thoroughbass instructions in verse (? by Ferdinando Gunther) for theorbo, *c*1680 (ff.50, 135–54*v*). Editions: M. Kanazawa, ed. (1967), nos.21, 25, 29; D. Poulton and B. Lam, eds. (1974), nos.9, 10, 72, 76, 78; Monuments of Music and Music Literature in Facsimile, 3rd ser., ii (New York, 1974). Literature: D. Lumsden (1955), i, 167

Washington, Folger Shakespeare Library, V.b.280 (olim 1610.1): the so-called 'Dowland' Lutebook (*c*1600). 136 ff. (54 blank and some torn out); 44 complete pieces: 5 pavans ('Leveche', 'Lacrimae', 'Delight', etc.), 6 galliards ('Lord of Oxford', 'Battel', 'Frogg', etc.), a 'passinmeser' pavan–galliard, 4 almans ('Mrs. Clifton's' [? in Dowland's hand], 'My Lady Hunsdons', etc.), 'Cobbler's Jig', 'Zouch's March', 7 courantes and a volta, 11 English tunes and variation sets ('Mall Syms', 'Robin is to the greenwood gone', 'What if a day', 'Paul's Wharf', 'The voice', etc.), and 6 duets and consort parts (including 'Green slivis'). The MS contains attributions to Dowland (10), Robert and John Johnson (6) and Allison. Dowland's autograph appears on ff.11*v*, 12*v*, 14, 16, 22*v* (incl. the tablature; facs. in EMc, iii, 1975, 117). Editions: B. Jeffery, ed. (1968) [3 facs. and transcrs.]; D. Poulton and B. Lam, eds. (1974), nos.23*a*, 39, 42, 48*a*, 53, 55, 66 and 79.

Literature: R. Newton (1938–9) [incl. facs.]; J.M. Ward: 'The So-called "Dowland Lute Book"', JLSA, ix (1976), 5–29

Robinson, Thomas: The Schoole of Musicke (London: Thomas East, 1603/R) (RISM, R1800). 28 ff.; a lute method with instructions on reading tablature, singing, right- and left-hand fingering, tuning, with 4 psalm tunes for voice and lute and 34 pieces (6 duets) for 7-course lute: Spanish pavan, 5 galliards, 2 almans, 13 toys and gigues, 9 variation sets and arrangements ('Go from my window', 'Row well, you mariners', 'Bonny sweet' etc.), 3 grounds and a fantasia. Edition: D. Lumsden, ed.: Thomas Robinson: The Schoole of Musicke, CM, Corpus des Luthistes français (1971). Literature: D. Lumsden (1955), i, 296

Dowland, Robert, ed.: A Musicall Banquet … collected out of the Best Authors in English, French, Spanish, and Italian (London: printed for T. Adams, 1610) (RISM 1610[20]). 23 ff.; 21 pieces by Dowland (4), Caccini (2), Bacheler, Hales, Holborne, Martin, Melli and Tessier. Editions: EL, 2nd ser., xx; F.W. Sternfeld, ed. (1967–71), iv/19. Literature: Anon.: 'Robert Dowland's Musicall Banquet (1610)', MA, i (1909–10), 45–55 [incl. 4 transcrs.]; D. Poulton (1972), 314–17

Dowland, Robert, ed.: Varietie of Lute-lessons (London: T. Adams, 1610/R) (RISM 1610[23]). 36 ff.; 42 compositions for 9-course lute with 2 diapasons, grouped 7 pieces per genre: fantasias by Cato, 'Knight of the Lute' [?Lorenzini], Reys, Lorenzini, Huet; pavans by Moritz, Landgrave of Hesse, Holborne, Morley; galliards; almans ('maskes'); courantes by Saman (2), Ballard and Perrichon; and voltes. Other composers include John Dowland (7), Bacheler (2), Robert Dowland (2), Alfonso Ferrabosco (2), Guilford and Smith. The print includes a translation of Jean-Baptiste Besard's instructions on lute playing (Cologne, 1603) with 'Necessarie observations' by John Dowland (ed. W. Nagel, MMg, xxiii, 1901, 145–62). Editions: E. Hunt, ed.: Varietie of Lute-lessons (London, 1956) [transcrs.]; D. Poulton and B. Lam, eds. (1974), nos.1*a*, 14*a*, 40, 41, 42*a*, 43*a*, 44*a*, 45 and 47. Literature: D. Lumsden (1955), 303; D. Poulton (2/1982), 109–12, 387–90 [quotes from instructions for tuning and fretting]

Dowland, John: A Pilgrimes Solace (London: M. Lownes, J. Browne, T. Snodham, 1613/R) (RISM D3486). 24 ff.; 21 ayres in 4 parts with lute and a galliard on Lachrymae for lute solo. Editions: EL, 1st ser., xii, xiv; F.W. Sternfeld, ed. (1967–71), iv/18; MB, vi (2/1963). Literature: D. Poulton (2/1982), 287–320

Tailour, Robert: Sacred Hymns (London: T. Snodham, 1615) (RISM T54). 136 pp.; 50 psalms in 5 parts with lute and viol.

Mason, George, and Earsden, John: The Ayres that were Sung and Played, at Brougham Castle in Westmerland, in the Kings Entertainment: given by the Right Honourable the Earle of Cumberland (London: T. Snodham, 1618/R) (RISM M1256). 10 ff.; 10 ayres and dances. Editions: EL, 2nd ser., xviii; F.W. Sternfeld, ed. (1967–71), viii/31. Literature: U. Olshausen (1963), 285–6, appx 27

Cambridge, King's College Library, Rowe 2: the Turpyn Book of Lute-songs (copied *c*1600–25). 21 ff.; 13 ayres by Dowland (3), Hales, Jones, Morley and Parsons. Editions: R. Rastall, ed.: Early Music in Facsimile, ii (Leeds, 1973); R. Rastall, ed.: The Turpyn Book (Kilkenny, 1973). Literature: P. Oboussier: 'Turpyn's Book of Lute-Songs', ML, xxxiv (1953), 145–9; U. Olshausen (1963), 260

London, British Library, Add.15117: Swarland Book (fig.6). 23 ff.; 34 ayres and sacred songs by John Dowland (4), Byrd (3), Leighton (2), Morley (2), Robert Dowland, Ferrabosco, Hume, Jones, Parsons and Tallis. Edition: E.B. Jorgens, ed.: British Library Manuscripts, i (New York, 1986). Literature: P. Seng: 'The Earliest Known Music for Desdemona's "Willow Song"', Shakespeare Quarterly, ix (1958), 419–22; M. Joiner: 'A Song in "Damon and Pithias"', ML, xlix (1968), 98–100; M. Joiner: 'British Museum Add. MS 15117: an Index, Commentary and Bibliography', RMARC, no.7 (1969), 51–109; no.8 (1970), 102 only

Cambridge, Fitzwilliam Museum, Mus.689: Lute Book [of Lord Herbert of Cherbury] containing Divers Selected Lessons of Excellent Authors in Severall Cuntreys (*c*1619–40). 94 ff.; 248 compositions grouped roughly by key (g/d, f/F, E♭, B♭/b♭, c/C, a, A♭/f): 94 preludes, fantasias and a fugue, 24 pavans, 7 galliards, 2 almans, 76 courantes, 3 sarabandes, 17 voltes, a ballet and a chaconne, and other pieces ('Pseaume 5', 'Ehi', 'Sussana ung jour', 'angelica', etc.) by Reys (31), Gaultier (21), Bacheler (20), Cato (13), Despont (12), du Gast 'Gentilhomme Provencal' (10) Perrichon (10), Herbert (9), Belleville (8), Holborne, Polonois [?Reys] (8), Saman (8), Heart (5), Johnson (5), Ballard (4), Sweelinck (4), Bataille (3), Dowland (3), Rosseter (3), Cavalier (2), Courroy (2), Lorenzini (2), Bocquet, Coprario, Ferrabosco, Harding, L'Enclos and L'Espin. Editions: A Souris, M. Rollin and others, eds.: Oeuvres de Chancy, Bouvier, Belleville, Dubuisson, Chevalier, CM, Corpus des luthistes français (1967) [6 pieces]; Oeuvres des Bocquet, ibid. (1972) [1 piece]; Oeuvres de Vaumesnil, Perrichon, Raël, Montbuysson, La Grotte, Saman, La Barre, ibid. (1974) [9 pieces]; M. Kanazawa, ed. (1967), nos.15, 16; F. Noske, ed.: J.P. Sweelinck: Opera omnia, editio altera, i/3 (Amsterdam, 1968) [4 transcrs. and a facs.]; complete vol. (Geneva, forthcoming). Literature: T. Dart: 'Lord Herbert of Cherbury's Lute-Book', ML, xxxviii (1957), 136–48; F. Noske: 'Luitcomposities van J.P. Sweelinck', Orgaan van de Koninklijke Nederlandsche toonkunstenaars-vereeniging, xii (1957), 46–8; F. Noske: 'Remarques sur les luthistes des Pays-Bas (1580–1620)', Le luth et sa musique: Neuilly-sur-Seine 1957, 179–92; C. Price: 'An Organizational Peculiarity of Lord Herbert of Cherbury's Lute Book', LSJ, ix (1969), 3–27; P. Poźniak: 'Wersja kamerlna i lutniowa jednej z fantazji Diomesesa Catona', Muzyka, xiii (1968), 79–82 [incl. transcr.]; P. Pózniak: 'Utwory polskich lutnistów w rękopisie lorda Herbaerta of Cherbury', Z dziejow muzyki polskiej, xv (1971), 27–40 [incl. transcrs.] B. Cockburn: The Music of Cuthbert Hely in Cambridge, Fitzwilliam, MS 659 (diss., U. of Arizona, 1988) [incl. complete transcription of the Hely pieces]; J. Craig-McFeely: 'A Can of Worms: Lord Herbert of Cherbury's Lute Book', The Lute, xxxi (1991), 20–35

6. London, British Library, Add.15117 (Swarland Book), f.19v: opening of 'O God but God', a sacred consort song by Byrd arranged for voice and lute

London, Royal Academy of Music, MS.604 (formerly part of the private collection of Robert Spencer): the Burwell Lute Tutor (copied *c*1660–72, perhaps by John Rogers). 92 pp.; instructions prepared for Mary Burwell Walpole on the French style of lute playing, with many short examples and exercises, and 11 complete pieces by Dubut, Ennemond Gaultier, Jacques Gautier, Mercure, Pinel and Vincent. Edition: T. Dart: 'Miss Mary Burwell's Instruction Book for the Lute', GSJ, xi (1958), 3–62 [part edn of text, with musical examples in tablature and transcr.]. Reproductions of EMc, i (1974) [with introduction by R. Spencer]. Literature: F. Rosse: 'Studio introduttivo sul Burwell Lute Tutor', Il 'Fronimo', xlix (1984), 20–34; l (1985), 53–84

Manchester, John Rylands Library: the Crawford Lutebook (on loan from the Earl of Crawford and Balcarres). 200 pp. (63 blank); *c*230 pieces: mostly Scottish songs, many set several times ('Celia is my foe', 'I love my love in secret', 'Willie winks', 'Greensleeves', 'I was but a furlong from Edinburgh', 'Scots measure', 'Tweedsyde', 'Sugar candie', 'The Lady Errols delight', 'Greene grow the rushes', 'Over the moor to Maggie', 'Buckingham', 'John come kiss me now', etc.), and *c*30 dances of French origin (minuets, sarabandes, canaries, etc.) with attributions to Gallot (12), Morton (5), Gaultier (2) and Mercure. The songs have many attributions to John Morrison (or Jean Mores), David Grieves, John Red, Lesslie, John McLachland and McLaughlen, and often appear to have been arranged by 'Mr. Beck' and his daughter, who also included many of their own pieces. Literature: M. Spring (1987); M. Spring: 'The Balcarres Ms', The Lute, xxxii (1992), 2–45

BIBLIOGRAPHY, COLLECTED EDITIONS

SpinkES
E.H. Fellowes, ed.: English School of Lutenist Song Writers, 1st ser. (London, 1920–32), 2nd ser. [without tablature] (London, 1925–7) [ESLS]; both rev., enlarged, by T. Dart, I. Spink and others as The English Lute-Songs (London, 1968–) [EL]
P. Warlock: The English Ayre (London, 1926/R)
P. Warlock and P. Wilson, eds.: English Ayres, Elizabethan and Jacobean (London, 1931)
R. Newton: 'English Lute Music of the Golden Age', PMA, lxv (1938–9), 63–92
B. Pattison: Music and Poetry of the English Renaissance (London, 1948/R, 2/1970)
A. Byler: Italian Currents in the Popular Music of England in the 16th Century (diss., U. of Chicago, 1952)
T. Dart and N. Fortune, eds.: John Dowland: Ayres for Four Voices, MB, vi (1953, 2/1970)
D. Lumsden, ed.: An Anthology of English Lute Music (London, 1954)
N. Greenberg, W.H. Auden and C. Kallman, eds.: An Elizabethan Song Book (Garden City, NY, 1955/*R*1970 as An Anthology of Elizabethan Lute Songs, Madrigals, and Rounds)
D. Lumsden: The Sources of English Lute Music, 1540–1620 (diss., U. of Cambridge, 1955) [incl. thematic index and concordances]
J.M. Ward: 'Music for "A Handefull of pleasant Delites"', JAMS, x (1957), 151–80
R.J. McGrady: The English Solo Song from William Byrd to Henry Lawes (diss., U. of Manchester, 1963)
U. Olshausen: Das lautenbegleitete Sololied in England um 1600 (Frankfurt, 1963)
D. Greer: 'The Lute Songs of Thomas Morley', LSJ, viii (1966), 25–37
D. Greer: 'Campion the Musician', LSJ, ix (1967), 7–16
M. Kanazawa, ed.: The Complete Works of Anthony Holborne, HPM, i (1967)
J.M. Ward: 'Apropos The British Broadside Ballad and its Music', JAMS, xx (1967), 28–86
D. Greer: 'The Part-Songs of the English Lutenists', PRMA, xciv (1967–8), 97–110
F.W. Sternfeld and others, eds.: English Lute Songs, 1597–1632, i–ix (Menston, 1967–71) [repr. of selected vols. from ESLS and elswhere]
W.W. Newcomb: Studien zur englischen Lautenpraxis im elisabethanischen Zeitalter (Kassel, 1968)
D. Lumsden, ed.: Music for the Lute (London, 1968–79) [most with facs. of the orig. tablature]: (i) Elizabethan Popular Music, ed. B. Jeffery: (ii) Francis Cutting: Selected Works, ed. M. Long; (iii) Francis Pilkington: Complete Works for Solo Lute, ed. B. Jeffery; (iv) Robert Johnson: Complete Works for the Lute, ed. A. Sunderman; (v) Daniel Bacheler: Selected Works, ed. M. Long; (vi) William Byrd, ed. N. North; (vii) Easy Lute Music, ed. A. Simpson; (viii) Alfonso Ferrabosco: Collected Works for Lute and Bandora, ed. N. North
E. Doughtie: Lyrics from English Airs, 1596–1622 (Cambridge, MA, 1970)
I. Spink, ed.: English Songs, 1625–1660, MB, xxxiii (1971)
D. Poulton: John Dowland (London, 1972, 2/1982)
D. Poulton and B. Lam, eds.: The Collected Lute Music of John Dowland (London, 1974)
J.M. Ward: 'A Dowland Miscellany', JAMS, x (1977), 5–153
L. Nordstrom: 'The Lute in Settings for Consort', Lute Symposium: Utrecht 1986, 50–63
M. Spring: The Lute in England and Scotland after the Golden Age (1620–1750) (diss., U. of Oxford, 1987)
J.M. Ward: Music for Elizabethan Lutes (London, 1992)
J. Craig-McFeely: English Lute Manuscripts and Scribes, 1530–1630 (diss., U. of Oxford, 1994)

8. French sources, 1600–99. When the publication of lute music resumed in France after a 30-year lapse due to religious strife, the nature of the repertory had been considerably transformed: in the books of Antoine Francisque (1600) and Robert Ballard (1611–14) intabulations of vocal works are virtually absent, preludes and fantasias are distinct types, and the new court dances predominate, especially the ballet, branle, volte, entrée and the most frequently encountered dance of the epoch, the courante. The anthologies published by Ballard's son, Pierre (1623–38), provide a good cross-section of first-generation composers (the only notable omissions are Bocquet and Ennemond Gaultier); these are the first printed sources to employ the accords nouveaux, a proliferation of (ultimately 28) different tunings, all stressing the interval of a 3rd between courses: G-c-f-a-c'-f'; G-c-f-a♭-c'-e♭'; G-c-f-a♭–c'-e', etc. (see Schulze-Kurz, 1990). (The air de cour repertory, for the most part by a separate group of composers, retained the Renaissance tuning in 4ths.) To accommodate the many tunings the sources segregate pieces by tuning and/or key into suite-like ordres: non-metrical prelude, allemandes, courantes and sarabandes, with less common genres (when they occur) clustered at the end (chaconnes, arrangements, folies d'Espagne, gavottes, etc.). After mid-century the tunings became stabilized in the 'Baroque' or standard D minor tuning: A-d-f-a-d'-f'.

A generation of composers active at this time has been called a 'Parisian school', and its works exerted practically unchallenged international domination. Headed by Denis Gaultier, the school included dynastic families of salon lutenists including the Pinels, Dubuts, Gallots and various Gautiers or Gaultiers, creating some still unresolved problems of attribution in the sources. The core of dances is further expanded with the regular inclusion of gigues and bourrées, and most of the sources show a profusion of literary, allegorical and depictive titles describing the alleged affective contents of the pieces; tombeaux (some for deceased lutenists) appear so regularly that they become a separate genre in their own right. Most prints (and some manuscripts as well) have extensive listings and descriptions of the many agréments with which the pieces abound, and it is not unusual to encounter as many different versions of a piece as there are sources for it: block chords in one version may elsewhere be broken up in style brisé (in essence a decorative device), different ornaments may be applied, rhythmic displacement (such as notes inégales) may occur, and a piece may even be rewritten in another key, tuning or mode. This style much influenced the French clavicinistes (see Ledbetter, 1987).

A convenient terminus for middle-generation sources is the publication in 1670 of Denis Gaultier's music, towards the end of his career, thus foreshadowing the retrospective character of many succeeding sources, to which only Mouton and Gallot le jeune made significant contributions. Of the seven extant printed sources of the last third of the century, three are thoroughbass methods for lute or theorbo and a fourth is en musique – in normal notation. During the 1680s a vogue at court for the easily strummed guitar with its fashionable bucolic associations dealt French lute music a fatal blow, so telling that after 1700 virtually no lute sources of French provenance are known.

The French 17th-century solo repertory consists of some 50 manuscripts (many on manuscript paper printed by the Ballard firm) and 20 prints, and about 15 sources for the air de cour.

Francisque, Antoine: Le trésor d'Orphée (Paris: heirs of Robert Ballard and Pierre Ballard, 1600/R). 32 ff.; 69 pieces for 8-course lute with 1 diapason: 6 preludes and fantasias, 3 passamezzos and 3 pavanes, 3 galliards, 26 branles and a gavotte, 13 courantes, 12 voltes, and a ballett. Edition: H. Quittard, ed.: Le trésor de Orphée (Paris, 1906). Literature: L. de La Laurencie: 'Les luthistes Charles Bocquet, Antoine Franciscque et J.-B. Besard', RdM, x (1926), 69–77, 126–33; L. Lesca: 'Antoine Francisque, joueur de luth et compositeur', Musique ancienne, xix (1985), 45–56

Aix-en-Provence, Bibliothèque Méjanes, 147(203)-R312: Manuscrit Reynaud. Ff.1–95 (copied *c*1600–20): 95 airs by Le Roy, Tessier, Bataille and others in Italian tablature with voice in mensural notation; ff.98–116*v* (copied *c*1650–60): 73 pieces for lute (3 with 'contrepartie' for a second lute) grouped according to tuning by Denis and Ennemond Gaultier (26), Pinel (5), Bocquet (2), Dubut (2), La Pierre, Lully (arr. by Trouché) (2), Bernace and Gayte. Edition: A. Souris, M. Rollin and others, eds.: Oeuvres du vieux Gautier, CM, Corpus des luthistes français (1966) [8 pieces]. Literature: A. Verchaly: Le 'Livre des vers du luth' (manuscrit d'Aix-en-Provence) (Aix-en-Provence, 1958)

Airs de différents autheurs mis en tablature de luth, [premier]–sixiesme livre, ed. G. Bataille (Paris: Pierre Ballard, 1608–15/R). 6 vols.; 410 airs by Guédron (56), Bataille (36), Boesset (14), Vincent (12) and others. Septiesme–huictiesme livre, ed. P. Ballard (Paris, 1617–18). 2 vols.; 113 airs and psalms by Guédron (20), Boesset (15), Grand-Rue (14), Vincent (11) and others. Neufiesme–seiziesme livre, ed. A. Boesset (Paris, 1620–43). 8 vols.; 207 airs by Boesset (148), Guédron (19), Richard (6), J.B. Boesset (4), Auget (3) and Bataille (3). Editions: P. Warlock, ed.: French Ayres from Gabriel Bataille's Airs de différents autheurs (Oxford, 1926); A. Verchaly, ed.: Airs de cour pour voix et luth (1603–1643) (Paris, 1961); Monuments of Music and Music Literature in Facsimile, 1st ser., xxxiii [books i–vi]. Literature: T. Gérold: L'art du chant en France au 17ème siècle (Strasbourg, 1921/R); P. Alderman: Anthoine Boesset and the 'Air de cour' (diss., U. of Southern California, 1946); A. Verchaly: 'Gabriel Bataille et son oeuvre personnelle pour chant de luth', RdM, xxvi (1947), 1–24; A. Verchaly: Chansons et airs de cour (Paris, 1954)

Haslemere, Dolmetsch Library, II.B.1 (olim library of Max Kalbeck, Vienna): lutebook of Austrian origin (*c*1620). 287 ff.; *c*306 pieces (8 à corde avalée; a few in Italian tablature), grouped roughly by genre and key: 12 intradas, 4 fantasias, a capriccio and 'fuga seu passagio'; 112 courantes and 6 sarabandes; 8 pavans, 36 galliards, 27 passamezzos (10 with saltarellos); 9 allemandes, 32 ballets, 38 voltes, 15 bergamasche, a 'taned polski', follie and canaries; 9 intabulations of napolitane (3 by Vecchi), and 13 miscellaneous pieces with fanciful titles ('La testament', 'La Poulnoise', 'La Gaymbarde', 'La Matrizinie', etc.). The few composer attributions include Besard (14), Ballard (12), M.A. Galilei (11), L'Espin (9), Vallet (8), Gaultier (7), Bocquet (5), La Grotte (4), Pietro Paolo Melli (4), Perrichon (3), 'B' (2), Guèdon de Presles (2), Lorenzini (2), Mercurius (2), Mesangeau (2), Reys (3), 'Augustin', 'Baro di colon', La Barre, Louys de Moy, Montbuisson and 'VE'. (This scribe also copied CZ-Pnm, Ms.IV.G.18.) This is the MS from which W. Tappert copied 26 pieces (his copy is at D-Bsb Mus.Ms.40165). The original was never in that library: see W. Rave, p.44, and L. Liepmannssohn: Katalog 137 (Berlin, 1899), 28. Edition: A. Souris, M. Rollin and others, eds.: Oeuvres de René Mesangeau, CM, Corpus des luthistes français (1971) [2 pieces, after the Berlin copy]. Literature: W. Rave (1972), 44

Ballard, Pierre, ed.: Tableture de luth de differens auteurs sur les accords nouveaux (Paris, 1631) (RISM 1631[6]), 78pp.; works by Bouvier (20), Chevalier (14), Dufaut (13), Chancy (12), Mesangeau (12), Robert Ballard (7; fig.7), Belleville (6), and Du Buisson (2), grouped by composer, tuning and key, into pseudo-suites: prelude (or recherche or intrada), allemandes, courantes (usually several), sarabandes and settings of timbres.

Paris, Bibliothèque du Centre National de la Recherche Scientifique: MS dated 1632 belonging to Bullen Reymes, an English student of René Mesangeau, and partially in Mesangeau's hand (see Goy, 1988–9, p.190). 74 ff.; *c*125 pieces (and some fragments), most without title or attribution, but including works by Mesangeau (10), Merville (6), John la Flalle (4 pieces played 'in the Queens maske on his harp') and 'Go' (?Gaultier, 3 preludes). Many pieces omit use of the first course; right-hand finger indications and tenue signs are carefully shown. Another Mesangeau autograph is at US-Cn, Ms Case 7.Q.5. Edition: A. Souris, M. Rollin and others, eds.: Oeuvres de René Mesangeau, CM, Corpus des luthistes français (1971). Literature: M. Rollin: 'A propos du manuscrit d'un élève de Mesangeau', ibid., pp.xvii–xx; W. Rave (1972), 109–14

Ballard, Pierre, ed.: Tableture de luth de differents autheurs sur les accords nouveaux (Paris, 1638) (RISM 1638[7]). 64 pp.; 41 pieces by Mesangeau (20), Dufaut (8), Bouvier (8) and Dubut (5), similarly arranged with a set of branles and 2 canaries. Editions: A. Souris, M. Rollin and others, eds. (1957–) [edns of all the pieces with information about the composers and their music]. Literature: W. Rave (1972), 101–03

Berlin, Staatliche Museen (Kupferstichkabinett), Hamilton 142 (olim 78.C.12): [Denis Gaultier]: La rhétorique des dieux (*c*1652). 260 pp.; the famous manuscripts prepared for Anne de Chambre with 56 pieces grouped by tonality into suites (prelude, pavane, allemande, courante, etc.), each group headed with an engraving depicting the 'passions' associated with the mode. Many pieces have descriptive titles ('L'héroïque', 'Mars superbe', 'Allemande: Le tombeau de Blanrocher', etc.) and anecdotal commentaries about their expressive qualities. Some pieces are by Ennemond Gaultier. Tessier edition (1932) retains the order of Rhétorique but draws most of its pieces and facsimiles from the more ornate versions in Gaultier's Pièces de luth and Livre de tablature (Paris, 1666; *c*1672). Editions: O. Fleischer: 'Denis Gaultier', VMw, ii (1886), 1–181 [edn with some other pieces; see also W. Tappert: 'Zur Geschichte der französischen Lauten-Tabulatur', Allgemeine deutsche Muzikzeitung (1886), no.23, p.140]; A. Tessier, ed. (1932) [facs. and transcrs., most after other sources]; A. Souris, M. Rollin and others, eds.: Oeuvres du vieux Gautier, CM, Corpus des luthistes français (1966) [7 pieces]; GMB, no.215; HAM, ii, no.211; D. Buch, ed.: Denis Gaultier: La rhétorique des dieux (Madison, WI, 1990). Facsimiles: MGG1, iv, pl.60 (facing 1442), 1471–2; viii, pl.16 (facing 362). Literature: M. Brenet (1899), 67–9; M. Brenet: 'Les tombeaux en musique', RHCM, iii (1903), 568–75, 631–8; A. Tessier: 'Ennemond Gaultier, sieur de Nève', Mélanges de musicologie offerts à M. Lionel de La Laurencie (Paris, 1933), 97–106; E.W. Häfner: Die Lautenstücke des Denis Gaultier (diss., U. of Freiburg, 1939); W. Rave (1972), 175; D. Buch: La rhétorique des dieux: a Critical Study of Text, Illustrations and Musical Style (diss., Northwestern U., 1983); C. Goldberg: 'Appolon orateur', Musik in Antike und Neuzeit, ed. M. van Albrecht and W. Schubert (Frankfurt, 1987), 67–76; A. Schlegel: 'Bemerkungen zur Rhétorique des Dieux', Gitarre & Laute, xi/1 (1989), 15–22; xi/2 (1989), 12–23; xi/4 (1989), 27–32; D. Buch: 'The Coordination of Text, Illustration, and Music in Seventeenth-Century Manuscript: La rhéorique des dieux', Imago musicale, vi (1989), 39–81; D. Buch: 'On Dating the Lute Music in "La rhétorique des dieux": New Evidence from Watermarks', JLSA, xxv (1992), 25–37; F.-P. Goy: 'Antiquité et Musique . . . "la rhétorique des Dieux"', Bulletin de l'Association Guillaume Budé (Oct 1995, 263–76; A. Schlegel: 'Was ich dank der Rhétorique des Dieux lernen konnte', Die Laute, i (1997), 45–83

7. Pierre Ballard, ed., 'Tableture de luth de differens auteurs sur les accords nouveaux' (1631): part of a courant by Robert Ballard using 17th-century lute tuning

Gallot, Jacques: Pièces de luth, composées sur differens modes … avec les folies d'Espagne, enrichies de plusieurs beaux couplets (Paris: H. Bonneüil, *c*1673–5/R). Copies are at CZ-Pu and US-Wc; a copy in F-Pc contains just the title-page, the contents being Mouton's Livre, i. 77 pp.; 34 pieces, 16 in f♯ ('ton de la chèvre') and 18 in a (comprising 3 suites and the folies d'Espagne); most pieces have fanciful titles, 'Gigue la grande virago', 'Allemande la belle Lucrece', 'Gavotte la dauphine', 'Menüet la cigale' – which are the first gavottes and minuets to appear in printed sources. The book contains 16 'reigles' for performance, ornaments and left- and right-hand technique. Gallot promised a second livre that has not survived, although pieces for (or from) such a book may be in D-LEm II.6.14. Transcription: F-Pc Rés.1605 (20) by H. Quittard. Literature: W. Tappert: 'Die Minuita – kein Menuett', MMg, xxxiii (1901), 93–5; O. Chilesotti: 'L'evoluzione nella scrittura dei suoni musicali', RMI, viii (1901), 123–6 [1 piece with tablature]; O. Chilesotti: EMDC, I/ii (1914), 675 [1 piece with tablature]; L. de La Laurencie (1928/R), 110–12; M. Rollin: Revue des études du XVIIe siècle, nos.21–2 (1954), 463–79; H. Radke: 'Bemerkungen zur Lautenistenfamilie Gallot', Mf, xiii (1960), 51–5; C. Callahan: Jacques Gallot's 'Pièces de luth': a Style Study and Critical Edition (diss., Ohio State U., 1963); W. Rave (1972), 246–8, 409–13

New York, Pierpont Morgan Library, Morgan 17524 (*c*1677–83/*R*1997 with preface by C. Chauvel). 98 ff.; 34 pieces by Hurel, including suites in c, F, C, B♭ and a, each with 1 or 2 preludes, and other miscellaneous dances, etc. (7 preludes, 2 allemandes, 8 courantes, 3 menuets de Poictou, 4 gavottes (1 'pour Mademoiselle de Lionne'), a gigue, 6 sarabandes ('Boulonoise', etc.), 'Les pellerins', a chaconne 'pour Mademoiselle de la Balme'). The MS is copied (? by a professional hand) on paper printed by Robert Ballard. Literature: J.B. Holland: 'Notes on a Lute Manuscript in the Pierpont Morgan Library', AcM, xxxiv (1962), 191–4 [incl. facs.]; J.B. Holland: 'The Pierpont Morgan Lute Manuscript: a Stylistic Survey', AcM, xxxiv (1964), 1–18 [see also H. Radke: 'Wodurch unterscheiden sich Laute und Theorbe?', AcM, xxxvii (1965), 73–4]

Perrine: Pièces de luth en musique avec des regles pour les toucher parfaitement sur le luth et sur le clavessin (Paris, *c*1680/R) (RISM [1680[6]]; RISM P1462). 72 pp.; 22 pieces in keyboard notation by Denis Gaultier (15) and Ennemond Gaultier (7) transcribed from the Pièces (*c*1670) and arranged in 3 suites: allemande (or fantasia), gigue, courantes, canaries (gigue or sarabande). Edition: A. Souris, M. Rollin and others, eds.: Oeuvres du vieux Gautier [6 transcrs.]. Literature: O. Fleischer: 'Denis Gaultier', VMw, ii (1886), 1–180 [with 2 transcrs. in appx]; H. Sommer: Lautentraktate des 16. und 17. Jahrhunderts in Rahmen der deutschen und französischen Lautentabulaturen (diss., U. of Berlin, 1923), 97

Paris, Bibliothèque Nationale, Rés.823 (olim 22342): Recueil des plus belles pieces de lut des meilleurs maitres, sur les 14 modes de la musique, savoir sept en bemol, & sept en becare (copied *c*1690 by René Milleran, a pupil of Mouton and La Baule, and translator at the court of Louis XIV; *R*1977 with preface by F. Lesure). 120 pp.; 98 pieces copied in diverse colours for 6–11 course lute, some gathered into suites with tombeaux as second movements, by Mouton (26), V. Gaultier (26), Dupré d'Angleterre (4), Emond (4), Antoine Gallot (4), Jacques Gallot (3), Bocquet, Dufaut Delaunay, Hubert, Mercure, Pasch and La Baule, including the usual dances, a 'balet polonais', passacaille, brunettes arranged by Mouton ('Le gris de lin', 'Le Cardinalle Revenir', 'Les tricotins', etc.), and 8 pieces from Lully operas produced between 1659 and 1681, and arranged by Mouton. The MS is organized by key (c, C, d, D … b, B) and contains a valuable list of important lutenist composers of the time: Mouton, Ennemond Gaultier, Denis Gaultier, Jacques Gautier, 'Gallot frères', Gallot le jeune, Dufaut, Bocquet, 'Dubut le père et les deux fils', Mesangeau, Jasseve, Merville, Blanc Rocher (Charles Fleury), 'Mrs Pinels', Emond, Vignon, Le Fevre, 'De Launay le père', Porion, Jacquesson, d'Espon, 'Bechon les deux frères', Caron, La Baule, Solerat, Bourgsaisi, Dupré d'Angleterre, Valentin Strobel (ii), Niver, Raveneau, Berens, Chevalier, Esaias Reusner (ii), Otto, Eards, Gumprecht and Jakob Kremberg.

Literature: M. Brenet (1899), 64; K. Koletschka: 'E. Reussner der Jüngerer', SMw, vii (1928), 18–45; W. Rave (1972), 264–70

Nelahozeves, Lobkowitz Study Centre. II.Kk 80 (olim Prague, Hudební Oddělení, Universitní Knihovny). 140 pp.; 58 pieces, grouped by key (c, C, a, A, g, b, G) into suites, some with tombeaux as second movement and ending with chaconnes. MS perhaps copied by Charles Mouton for Ferdinand August Lobkowitz (1655–1715; see Rave, p.323). It complements items in Mouton's extant Pièces (Paris, *c*1695): 17 movements are by Denis Gaultier, embellished in the style of Mouton (10 also have doubles by Mouton). Other pieces by Mouton (35) and Ennemond Gaultier (7) include a 'sarabande en rondeau', passacaille, menuet, 'Sarabande Richelieu' and 'L'oraison de Mr. Gautier par Mouton'. Edition: A. Tessier, ed. (1932), nos.91–5 and pp.127–31 [7 pieces with 5 facs.; incorrectly cited as II.Kk 82]. Literature: W. Rave (1972), 316; J. Tichota, MMC, nos.25–6 (1973), 55

BIBLIOGRAPHY, COLLECTED EDITIONS

L. de La Laurencie: 'Essai de chronologie de quelques ouvrages de luth', RdM, i (1917–19), 227–32

A. Tessier: 'Quelques sources de l'école française de luth du XVIIe siècle', IMSCR I: Liège 1930, 217–24

A. Tessier: La rhétorique des dieux et autres pièces de luth de Denis Gautier (Paris, 1932)

M. Rollin: 'Le "tombeau" chez les luthistes Denis Gautier, Jacques Gallot, Charles Mouton au XVIIe siècle', Revue des études du XVIIe siècle, nos.21–2 (1954), 463–79

A. Souris, M. Rollin, J.-M. Vaccaro and others eds.: CM, Corpus des luthistes français (Paris, 1957–): Oeuvres de Chancy, Bouvier, Belleville, Dubuisson, Chevalier (1967); Oeuvres de René Mesangeau (1971); Oeuvres de Bocquet (1972); Robert Ballard: Deuxième Livre, 1614 et pièces diverses (1976); Robert Ballard: Premier Livre, 1611 (1976); Oeuvres de Julien Belin (1976); Oeuvres de Mercure (1977); Oeuvres de Dubut (1979); Oeuvres du Vieux Gautier (1980); Oeuvres de Pinel (1982); Oeuvres de Pierre Gautier (1984); Oeuvres des Gallot (1987); Oeuvres de Dufaut (1988); Oeuvres de Charles Mouton (1992); Oeuvres de Gumprecht (1993)

A. Verchaly: Airs de cour pour voix et luth (1603–1643) (Paris, 1961)

W. Rave: Some Manuscripts of French Lute Music, 1630–1700 (diss., U. of Illinois, 1972) [incl. concordances for about 60 prints and MSS]

A. Bailes: 'An Introduction to French Lute Music of the XVIIth Century', Le luth et sa musique II: Tours 1980, 203–13

C. Horrix: Studien zur französische Lautenmusik im 17. Jahrhundert (diss., U. of Tübingen, 1981)

J.-M. Vaccaro: La musique de luth en France au XVI siècle (Paris, 1981)

D. Ledbetter: Harpsichord and Lute Music in 17th-Century France (London, 1987)

P. Vendrix: 'Le tombeau en musique en France', RMFC, xxv (1987), 105–38

F.-P. Goy: Les sources manuscrites de la musique pour luth sur les 'accords nouveaux' (vers 1624–vers 1710): cataloge commente (diss., U. of Paris, Sorbonne, 1988–9)

D. Ledbetter: 'French Lute Music, 1600–1650: Towards a Definition of Genres', The Lute, xxx (1990), 25–47

M. Rollin: 'Les oeuvres de Lully transcrites pour le luth', Jean-Baptiste Lully: Saint Germain-en-Laye and Heidelberg 1987, 483–94

E. Schulze-Kurz: Die Laute und ihre Stimmungen in der ersten Hälfte des 17. Jahrhunderts (Wilsingen, 1990)

G. Durosoir: L'air de cour en France (Liège, 1991)

9. CENTRAL EUROPEAN SOURCES AFTER *c*1650. Although dominated from the mid-century until about 1710 by the Parisian Gautier school, Central European sources of the later 17th century display a greater fondness for assembling pieces (sometimes from works of different composers) into suites or partitas, and give more meticulous attention to indications of notes inégales, style brisé and ornamentation. An important circle of lutenists (including the Strobels and Gumprecht) was active at Strasbourg, and works of the prolific and influential Breslau lutenist Esaias Reusner (ii), were also widely disseminated. They include over 100 chorale settings in style brisé (*c*1677) and three prints (1667–76) that contain many extended 'parties' (or suites) regularly combining Italian genres (sonatas, paduanas, arias, toccatas, etc.) with the French core of non-metrical prelude, allemande, courante and sarabande.

While the lute was falling into obsolescence elsewhere, the appearance at the end of the century of a circle of Austro-Bohemian lutenist composers provided a renewed vigour that was to keep the lute as a solo instrument flourishing in Central Europe for nearly a century. The most representative composers of this 'school' include the Belgian-born Jacques de Saint-Luc, Jan Antonín Losy, Hinterleithner, Eckstein, Radolt, Ginter and Bohr von Bohrenfels, many of whom were patronized by Eugen of Savoy in Vienna and Philipp Hyacinth Lobkowitz (the Lobkowitz library, now again in Nelahozeves after having been in Prague, contains many manuscripts of pieces by these composers as well as some important manuscripts of music by the Parisian Gautier circle).

Since many Austro-Bohemian composers were guitar players as well, the school's newly evolved galant style naturally assimilated guitar rasgueado and the cantabile of Italian-dominated court opera into the earlier French fashions of play. A popular medium was the 'Lauthen-Concert' (violin and cello intermittently double the lute to produce pseudo-concertato effects) and many such works are cast in extended suites with as many as 11 movements including the usual French core, many minuets (by far the most frequently encountered dance; some are canonic) and locally favoured types (retiradas, arias, trezzas, toccatas, Tyrolian paysannas and Bohemian murkys and dumky). Echo pieces, carillons (campanellas) and pastorellas are so widely diffused through the sources that they become genres in their own right, reflecting an insatiable fascination with programmatic titles that reaches a manneristic plateau with Saint-Luc's pieces named after royal proclamations, sieges and naval engagements, many inspired by contemporary events. Some tombeaux are in the form of miniature suites – one by Gebel closes with an intense movement entitled 'Les roupies'.

Although the Austrians Lauffensteiner and Weichenberger are represented in most sources from the 1720s, the central tradition passed to north German lutenists, many trained in Breslau or Leipzig. The lute was especially cultivated at Mainz, Dresden (where the calichon was a popular instrument of amateurs) and Bayreuth, and eastern European sources include manuscripts prepared in or for monasteries at Grüssau, Kremsmünster, Göttweig and Rajhrad, among them the lutebooks of Gelinek and Kniebandl. The most widely disseminated works at the mid-century were by Baron, author of an important treatise (1727) on the history and technique of the lute, Falckenhagen, whose many chorale settings, concertos and sonatas were engraved by the Nuremberg lutenist and publisher J.U. Haffner, and the prolific S.L. Weiss, the greatest master of the age. In addition to some 80 original sonatas and concertos for lute, Weiss is also thought to have made many lute arrangements of opera arias and keyboard sonatas by his Dresden colleague Hasse. (Of J.S. Bach's pupils, the London immigrant Straube composed sonatas (Leipzig, 1746) that stand among the finest of the time.)

During the second half of the 18th century, the lute was increasingly employed as an ensemble instrument in solo concertos, quartets, trios and duos, of which especially large and important collections containing works by Baron, Kühnel, Pichler, Weiss, Toeschi, Hagen, Kleinknecht, Kohaut, Haydn, Kropffgans, Arne, and others are at libraries in Augsburg (D-As), Salzburg (A-Smi) and Brussels (B-Br). Continuing interest in the lute is manifest in Breitkopf prints devoted to Seidel (1757, issued to initiate Breitkopf's new typeface for lute tablature), Beyer's Gellert odes (1760) and Kohaut's divertimentos for lute and strings (1761), as well as the large numbers of works for lute listed in the catalogues of manuscript music available upon demand from the Leipzig firm. Some of these manuscripts survive in B-Br and D-Bsb (see Breitkopf und Härtel, 1836, and Brook, 1966). Among the last significant works for lute are the sonatas with violin or with viola (*c*1791) by F.W. Rust and the beautiful duo by Naumann arranged for lute and glass harmonica by J.A.F. Weiss. Lost is a quartet for lute and strings by J.F. Reichardt, composed for his father, one of the last lutenists.

Extant from the period 1650 to 1799 are about 145 manuscript and 40 printed Central European sources.

Strobel, Valentin (ii): Concert mit einem Mandor und drei Lauthen, wie auch vier Lauthen, samt dessus und bassus (Strasbourg: F. Spoorn, 1648); Concerten mit vier Lauthen, samt Dessus und Bassus, anderer Theil (Strasbourg, 1651); Zwey Symphonie mit drei Lauthen und einem Mandor, auch mit vier Lauthen, samt Bassus und Dessus (Strasbourg, 1654); Concerten mit zwey Angeliquen und Theorbe, samt Dessus und Bassus (Strasbourg, 1668). These prints, listed in the Frankfurter Mess-Katalogen, appear not to have survived.

Rostock, Universitätsbibliothek, Mus.saec.XVII.18.54. 402 pp.; 358 pieces for 11- and 12-course lute (mostly in d tuning), copied in Württemberg, grouped according to tuning and key; one of the central sources of the century, with few conflicting attributions and a reasonable number of unica. The MS (*c*1660–70, ? or later) contains works by Pinel (39), Denis and Ennemond Gaultier (39), Dufaut (34), Dubut (28), Vincent (28), Mereville (19), Bechon (28), Mercure (6), Denis Gaultier (9), Gumprecht (21), Mesangeau (4), Strobel (11), Einmont (2), Blancrocher (Charles Fleury), NeuWert, Pierre Gautier (i), Jacques Gautier, Havernikkel, Henri, Montrovil, Villiers and 'N.W.' (NeuWert?); throughout the MS are scattered intabulations from Albert's Arien (1640–42) and from Strobel's Melodien (1656), chorales and several Polish dances. Edition: A. Souris, M. Rollin and others, eds.: Oeuvres de Dufaut, CM, Corpus des luthistes français (1965) [2 pieces]. Facsimile: K-P. Koch, ed.: Französische Tänze und Arien (Leipzig, 1983). Literature: H.-P. Kosack (1935), 53–4, 90 only; W. Rave (1972), 215–27

Rochester (NY), Sibley Music Library, Eastman School of Music, ML 96 L973 (vault); (lute and mandora MS, copied in Saxony, *c*1665; ex-P. Nettl). 38 ff.; 38 pieces for 5-string mandora and 50 for the lute. The lute pieces (some of which are also in mandora versions) include unmeasured preludes, a fantasia, allemandes, correntes, gavottes, a 'sallomon', canary, chaconne, 'Clory', 'Boemica', 'Tambour', 'Buffons' and 3 arrangements German lieder and a French song. No attributions are given. Literature: A. Koczirz: 'Eine Gitarren- und Lautenhandschrift aus der zweiten Hälfte des 17. Jahrhunderts', AMw, viii (1926), 433–40 [incl. 15 transcrs.]; P. Nettl: 'Böhmische Tänze in Handschriften des 17. Jahrhunderts', Beiträge zur böhmischen und mährischen Musikgeschichte (Brno, 1927), 9–13 [1 transcr.]

Berlin, Staatsbibliothek: Preussischer Kulturbesitz, Mus.Ms.40264 (olim 20052; not lost): Lautenbuch der Virginia Renata von Gehema (copied *c*1670, but containing an earlier repertory). 198 pp.; 157 pieces gathered by tuning, and grouped by key: many arrangements of lieder by Greflinger, German psalms and chorales, preludes (sinfonias, a fuga, etc.), many Polish dances and the usual French dances, attributed to 'A.C.', Dufaut, Jeremias Erben (? Gehema's teacher; at least 30 pieces), 'N.F.', Gaultier, Gumprecht, 'S.L.', Mereville, Mesangeau, Pinel and 'V.S.' [?Strobel]. Facsimiles: J. Wolf (1927), no.51 [Polish dance]; complete vol. (Leipzig, 1984). Literature: Goy and others, ii (1994)

Berlin, Staatsbibliothek: Preussischer Kulturbesitz, Mus.Ms.40068 (olim Z 68) Lautenbuch des Christian Francisci Co[mte] à Wolckenstein & Roddnegg, In Colleggio Parmensi A° 1656 (dated 20 Dec 1674 on last leaf). 81 ff.; 173 pieces (28 in Italian tablature, some notated without rhythm signs.) for 10-, 12- and 13-course lute. The Italian pieces (in Renaissance tuning) include intabulations of vocal music, some with underlaid text, Ruggieros, passamezzos and 'canzone francesi' with attributions to Eremite (3) and [?Pierre] Gautier. Includes instructions on playing the lute. The French repertory (mostly in d tuning) consists of the usual dances by Dufaut (10), Pinel (10), V. Gauteri (9), Wolckenstein (7), Dubut (6), Denis Gaultier (2), Gumprecht (2), Heart (2), Horny (2), Mercure (2), Strobel (2), Vincent (2), Losy, Louys de Moy, Lully and Pietro Paolo Melli. Editions: J. Wolf (1919), ii, 92; J. Wolf (1927), pl.26; A. Souris, M. Rollin and others, eds.: Oeuvres de Dufaut, CM, Corpus des luthistes français (1965) [17 transcrs.]; Oeuvres du vieux Gautier, ibid. (1966) [1 transcr.]. Literature: W. Rave (1972), 193–7

Bittner, Jacob: Pièces de lut, ... gravées par Gerard de Groos (Nuremberg, 1682/R) (RISM B2760). iv + 108pp.; 57 pieces grouped into 10 suites: prelude, sarabande, courante, gigue (or chaconne or passacaille). Literature: W. Rave: A Baroque Lute Tablature: Jacob Bittner, Pieces de Lut, 1682 (diss. U. of Illinois, 1966)

London, British Library, Sloane 2923: Lutebook of Engelbert Kämpfer (dated 1683). 115 ff. (65 blank); 92 pieces in 2 sections: ff.3*v*–36: 6 suites by 'I.A.K' [?Kämpfer], 16 arrangements of sacred and secular German lieder, and 12 individual pieces, including attributions to Dufaut, Herzog Bernhard and ?Vignon; ff.101*v*–115: 22 pieces of French origin, including attributions to Gumprecht (6), Béthune (3), Pinel (3), Gaultier (2), Bocquet, Mercure, Merville and Vincent. References to Kämpfer's travels and remarks in Polish, German and Arabic are scattered throughout the volume. Literature: W. Rave (1972), 350–54

Kremberg, Jakob: Musicalische Gemüths-Ergötzung, oder Arien, samt deren unterlegten hochdeutschen Gedichten ... welche also eingerichtet, dass sie entweder mit einer Stimme allein zu singen benebst dem General-Bass, oder aber zugleich und besonders auf der Lauthe, Angelique, Viola di Gamba und Chitarra können gespielt werden (Dresden: C. Mathesius, 1689) (RISM K2000; the D-Bsb copy is in PL-Kj). 46 pp.; 40 German arias (some with texts by Kremberg) with accompaniments for lute, angélique or guitar (in tablature) or basso continuo; a 20-folio appendix contains 6 3- to 6-movement sonatas for angélique and continuo, 2 each in the keys of a, d and g. The preface provides information on playing and tuning the instruments (quoted in Tappert, 1882, p.77); the agréments are written out in the tablatures. Editions: W. Tappert, ed. (1906), no.82 [3 versions of an aria with quasi-facs.]; J. Wolf (1919), ii, 128–9, 153 [facs. and transcrs. of the 4 varieties of tablature]. Literature: W. Tappert: 'Zur Geschichte der Guitarre', MMg, xiv (1882), 77–85

Klagenfurt, Kärntner Landesarchiv, GV.Hs.5.5/37 (*c*1695; ex-Bibliothek Wieser). 92 ff. (18 blank); 65 pieces for 7-course lute with 4 diapasons, gathered into 7 suites, all anon., but in the style of Losy. The pieces include 30 minuets. Edition: J. Klima, ed.: Fünf Partiten aus einem Kärntner Lautenbuch, MAM, xvi (1965) [transcrs. with parallel tablature]

Le Sage de Richée, Philipp Franz: Cabinet der Lauten (Breslau, 1695, 2/1735) (RISM L2054–5). 41 ff.; 98 pieces (preludes, allemandes, courantes (1 by Losy), sarabandes, gigues, gavottes, minuets, bourrées, chaconnes, passacaglias, ouvertures, rondeaux in echo), grouped into 12 partitas for lute with 5 diapasons. 4-page instruction with information on tuning, fingering, ornamentation, etc. (see Eitner, p.13). Edition: H. Neemann, ed.: Alte Meister der Laute, iii (Berlin, 1927) [3 pieces with tablature]. Literature: R. Eitner: 'Ein wenig bekanntes Lauten-Werk', MMg, xxi (1889), 9–24 [incl. 1 transcr. and quotation of the instruction]; T. Wortmann: Philipp Franz Le Sage de Richée und sein Cabinet der Lauten (diss., U. of Vienna, 1919); D.A. Smith and P. Danner: '"How Beginners ... should proceed": The Lute Instructions of Le Sage de Richée', JLSA, ix (1976), 87–94

Radolt, Baron Wenzel Ludwig von: Die aller treüste verschwigneste und nach wohl fröhlichen als traurigen Humor sich richtende Freindin, Vergeselschafft sich mit anderen getrëuen Fasalen Unser inersten gemeutz Regungen (Vienna, 1701) (RISM R30). 5 partbooks: lute I (78 pp.), lute II (83 pp.), violin I or flute (38 pp.), violin II (38 pp.) and bass (25 pp.). 8 'concertos' in suite form for the instruments in various settings, including one for 3 lutes, 3 violins and bass (with continuo for a fourth lute); Radolt suggests that throughout the performers may select and arrange the instrumentation at their pleasure. 4 additional multi-movement works are entitled 'Simphonia', capriccio, toccatas and contrapartie, some including canonic minuets, retiradas, programme pieces ('Querelle des amantes'), etc. Editions: DTÖ, 1, Jg.xxv/2 (1918) [conc. and contrapartie]; MGG1, i, 1313–14 [facs. of title-page]. Literature: A. Koczirz: 'Klosterneuberger Lautenbücher', Musica divina, i (1913), 176–7; A. Koczirz, SMw (1918), 54–9 [biographical information, quotation of performance indications from preface and list of contents]; J. Pohanka: 'Loutnové tabulatury z rajhradského kláštera', Časopis moravského musea, xl/2 (1955), 199–213; B. Samson and M. Hodgson: 'Von Radolt's Instructions to Lute Players (Vienna 1701), FoMRHI Quarterly, no.45 (1986), 48–55

Nelahozeves, Lobkowitz Study Centre, X.Lb.210 (olim Prague, Hudební Oddělení, Národní Muzeum) (after *c*1705). 89 pp.; 94 pieces grouped in suites, many with programmatic titles ('Le départ de la flotte', 'Le combat naval', 'La prise de Barcelona' [1705], etc.). 8 pieces (a suite in A) are apparently by Count Camillo Tallard, the others by Laurent de Saint-Luc. Edition: DTÖ, 1, Jg.xxv/2 (1918). Literature: A. Koczirz, SMw, v (1918), 64–8 [incl. list of contents]

Nelahozeves, Lobkowitz Study Centre, II.Kk 49a–c (olim Prague, Hudební Oddělení, Universitní Knihovna): Pièces de luth acc. d'un violon et le basse par le Sieur Saint Luc. 3 vols.: lute (104 pp.), violin (77 pp.), bass (33 pp.); 120 pieces by Saint-Luc, many grouped in suites with programmatic references to contemporary events and people: 'La reduction de Naple' [1707]: allemande, courante, sarabande, gigue, bourrée 'pour les trompettes en rondeau'; 'Carillon d'Anvers', 'Le cocq' gigue, 'La proclamation du Roy d'Espagne Charles 3me', 'La feste du nom de ... le Prince Lobkowis', etc. Literature: A. Koczirz, SMw, v (1918), 65–7

II.Kk 54a–c: Pièces de luth acc. d'un violon et basse par le Sieur Saint Luc. 3 vols.; lute (104 pp.), violin (37 pp.), bass (33 pp.); 52 similar pieces by Saint-Luc, incl. 'La prise de Lille' [1708], march, 'L'arrivée du Prince Eugène', etc. Edition: DTÖ, 1, Jg.xxv/2 (1918). Literature: A. Koczirz, SMw, v (1918), 67–85 [incl. some pieces]

Kremsmünster, Benediktiner-Stift, L77. 188 ff.; 179 pieces, in 3 groups: 105 French pieces (including Dufaut and Ennemond Gaultier); 5 suites, 1 attrib. Lauffensteiner; 4 partitas in 3 parts (lute, violin and bass), 1 in 5 parts (lute, chalumeau, oboe, viola d'amore and bassoon), and a partita in C by Weichenberger (lute, violin and bass). Literature: R. Flotzinger (1965), 48–51, 232–56; W. Rave (1972), 388

Lund, Universitetsbiblioteket, Wenster Litt.G. No.37: Luthenisten D. Holtz stycken (ex-libris P. Platin, Mahlmöö, 1712). 23 ff.; 30 pieces attrib. Holst (10), Gaultier (2), Losy (2), Dubut and 'P.R.'; 4-page instruction describing frets, tuning and playing technique (see Vretblad). Literature: Å. Vretblad: 'Något om musikaliska ornament i svensk 1700-talspraxis', STMf, xxxi (1949), 155–60; J.O. Rudén (1981), 31

Prague, Hudební Oddělení, Národní Muzeum, IV. E.36: Musica sopra il liuto (copied by Iwan Gelinek at the monastery of St Joannis at Berau, and dated 1712). 298 pp.; *c*195 pieces (most without attribution), but including at least 3 partitas or suites by Gelinek (1 with lituus, violin and bass), a partita by Czerwenka, almost all the pieces (40 compositions) from Mouton's Pièces de luth, i (Paris, *c*1690), and other pieces attrib. Weiss and Aureus Dix. The volume passed through the hands of Anton Seidl in 1819 and contains biographical information on Gelinek. Literature: E. Vogl: 'Páter Ivan Jelínek (1683–1759)', HV, iv (1967), 693–6; E. Vogl: 'Der Lautenist P. Iwan Jelínek', Mf, xxii (1969), 53–5; J. Holěck: J.A. Seydl, decani Beronensis, operum artis musicae collectio, Catalogus Artis Musicae in Bohemia et Moravia Cultae, ii (Prague, 1976)

Warsaw, Biblioteca Uniwersytecka, Rps.60/1–2 (olim Wrocław, Mf 2001 a-b): Parthies à deux luths. 2 vols.: 59 and 62 ff.; 13 partitas for 2 lutes some with (according to the title-page) ad libh. violins, hunting-horns, oboes and bass, attrib. 'Melante' (Telemann, a 'Partie polonoise' in B♭ and 1 in G), Prantl, Richter, Thielli and 3 anon. composers.

Brno, Hudební Archív Moravský, A 13.268 (olim Rahjrad, Benedictine Monastery, 2): Lautenbuch des Casimir Comes à Werdenberg et Namischt (dated 1713). 55 ff.; *c*63 pieces for 11-course lute (allemandes, courantes, etc., ouvertures, 'Carillon', 'chasseur', minuets, etc.), attributed to 'W' (8), Fux, Frischauff, Joseph I of Austria, Lauffensteiner (a partita in c), Questenberg and Wielland. Editions: G. Adler, ed.: Musikalische Werke der Kaiser Ferdinand III., Leopold I. und Joseph I. (Vienna, 1892/R), ii, 273 [pieces by Joseph I and Frischauff with facs.]; MAM, xxx (1973) [1 partita]. Literature: A. Koczirz, SMw (1918), 60–63, 68–9; A. Koczirz: 'Böhmische Lautenkunst um 1720', Alt-Prager Almanach, ed. P. Nettl (Prague, 1926), 88–100; J. Pohanka: 'Loutnové tabulatury z rajhradského kláštera', Časopis moravského musea, xl/2 (1955), 193–203 [incl. facs.]

London, British Library, Add.30387. 160 ff.; 32 sonatas, suites, divertimentos, ouvertures, etc., 28 single movements ('Tombeau sur la mort de M[onsie]ur Comte d'Logÿ' (fig.8), 'Le fameaux corsaire', 'Le Sans Soucie', 'L'amant malheureaux', etc.), concertos for flute and lute in F and B♭ by S.L. Weiss and 1 concerto by Johann Sigismund Weiss for flute and lute. Many of the pieces are in Silvius Leopold Weiss's hand and bear dates Prague, 1717 and 1719, Dresden 1719, 1721 and 1724. For the concertos only the lute part is extant, but they are reconstructed by Eileen Hadidian in the Smith edition (1990). Editions: W.E. Mason: The Lute Music of Sylvius Leopold Weiss (diss., U. of North Carolina, 1949); R. Chiesa, ed.: S.L. Weiss: Intavolatura di liuto (Milan, 1970) [both edns contain complete transcrs. of MS (Chiesa omits the concs.)]; EDM, 1st ser., xii (1939) [3 pieces incl. the tombeau in b for Losy]. Literature: H. Neemann, AMf (1939), 157–89; D.A. Smith, ed. Silvius Leopold Weiss: Sämtliche Werke für Laute in Tabulatur und Ubertragung, iv/1–4 (Frankfurt, 1990) [transcr. and facs.]

Stockholm, Kungliga Biblioteket, Kalmar Läroverks, 4a: Book of Matthias Silvius Swenonsis (dated Stockholm, 1721; ex libris Isac Baris). 68 ff.; 116 pieces in German keyboard tablature: allemandes, sarabandes, caprices, gavottes, echoes, etc., many minuets and polonaises with serras, and other pieces ('La viole d'Espagne', 'Air de les boissons', 'de Busck', 'Dahl dantz', 'Entrée d'Apollon') attributed to Losy (18), Düben (7), Ennemond Gaultier (2), Denis Gaultier, Croll, Lindst(?et) and Ratge. There are also several arrangements of songs with French, German and Swedish texts. The monogram 'J.B.' (the arranger, J[I]sac Baris) appears throughout. Literature: A. Lindgren: 'En tabulaturbok i Kalmar', Ny illustreread tidning, xxix (1893), 400, 411, 417, 436 [incl. several transcrs.]; J.O. Rudén (1978), 28, 56–7

Vienna, Österreichische Nationalbibliothek, Suppl.Mus.1078: Lauthen-Tabulatur. 119 ff.; 58 items copied by various hands: 3 anon. partitas (in g ['La querelle d'amour'], B♭, F), and others by Lobkowitz (B♭), Bergen (F, a, B♭), Porsille (g) and S.L. Weiss (F); 3 single movements by Weiss (prelude, paisane and minuet) and an arrangement of an aria from Caldara's Ormisda (1721). Edition: EDM, 2nd ser., i (1942) [partitas by Bergen, Porsille, Lobkowitz and the Caldara aria]. Literature: A. Koczirz (1926), 88–100; E. Maier (1972), i, 17; ii, 1 [thematic index]

Baron, Ernst Gottlieb: Historisch-theoretische und practische Untersuchung der Lauten (Nuremberg: Rüdiger, 1727/R). 218 pp.; an important discussion of the lute, its origins, players, builders and playing technique. Edition: D.A. Smith, ed.: E.G. Baron: a Study of the Lute (Redondo Beach, CA, 1976) [incl. trans.]. Literature: D.A. Smith: 'Baron and Weiss contra Mattheson: in Defense of the Lute', JLSA, vi (1973), 48–62

Brussels, Bibliothèque Royale de Belgique, II 4085 (Fétis 2910): Pièces pour la luth à Monsieur [Joseph or Vincent] Schouster par J.S. Bach (autograph, *c*1727–31); Leipzig, Musikbibliothek der Stadt, III.11.3: Pièces pour le lut par S^re J.S. Bach. 10 ff. (tablature). [Suite in g BWV995]. Editions: H.D. Bruger, ed.: J.S. Bach: Kompositionen für die Laute, Denkmäler alter Lautenkunst, i (3/1925/R); H. Scherchen, ed.: Musica viva, iii (Brussels, 1936) [complete facs. of BWV995]; H.J. Schulze, ed.: J.S. Bach: Drei Lautenkompositionen in zeitgenössischen Tabulaturen (Leipzig, 1975). Literature: W. Tappert: 'Sebastian Bachs Kompositionen

8. London, British Library, Add.30387, f.150v [=p.300]: the beginning of S.L. Weiss's tombeau on the death of the lutenist Jan Antonín Losy für die Laute', Redenden Künste, vi, 36–40; H. Neemann: 'J.S. Bachs Lautenkompositionen', BJb 1931, 72–87; H.J. Schulze: 'Wer intavolierte Bachs Lauten-kompositionen?', Mf, xix (1966), 326–48; T. Kohlhase: Johann Sebastian Bachs Kompositionen für Lauteninstrumente (diss., U. of Tübingen, 1972); H.J. Schulze: 'Monsieur Schouster', Bachiana et alia musicologica: Festschrift Alfred Dürr, ed. W. Rehm (Kassel, 1983), 243–50; R. Grossman: 'Der Intavolator als Interpret: BWV995 im Autograph und in zeitgenossicher Tabulatur', Basler Jb für historische Musikpraxis, x (1986), 223–44; A. Burgette: 'Johann Sebastian Bachs Lautenwerke: Ende eines Mythos', Gitarre & Laute, xvi/2 (1994), 66–72; xvi/4 (1994), 50–53

Brussels, Bibliothèque Royale de Belgique, II 4087 (Fétis 2913): Recueil de pièces de luth par Baron. Contains 2 concertos for lute obbligato, violin and cello (*c*1730), a duetto for lute and flute (*c*1735), a suite, 8 partitas and a fantasia for lute solo, all apparently by Baron.

II 4089 (Fétis 2914): Recueil de concertos pour le luth. Includes works by Blohm à Vienne: concerto for lute and violin; Corigniani: concerto (B♭) for 2 lutes and bass; Falckenhagen [? or Kohaut]: concerto (B♭) for lute and strings; Kühnel: concertos (F, C, A) for lute, viola da gamba and bass; Lauffensteiner: concerto (g) for lute, 2 violins and cello; Meusel: a concerto for lute and 2 for lute, flute or oboe, viola da gamba and bass; Pichler: trietto (G) for lute, violin and cello. Most of the works are cast in suites or partitas. Edition: MAM, xxx (1973) [Lauffensteiner conc. in g]

New York, Public Library, JOG 72–29, vols.xi–xiv. Collection of 18th-century Manuscript Music (ex-Harrach family, Vienna). Vol.xi (53 ff.): Lauten-Musik mit Begleitung; anon. pieces. Vol.xii (19 ff.): Lauten-Musik, pieces attributed to Gleitsmann (4), Jacobi, Meusel and Weichenberger. Vol.xiii (31 ff.): E.G. Baron, Lautenmusik mit Begleitung auf Violine, Violoncello, dann Flöte und Oboe; 3 works by Baron. Vol.xiv (21 ff.): an overture and suite for lute, violin and cello by August Kühnel, a suite for lute by Lauffensteiner and a concerto (which the lute part only) by Gleimius.

Rochester (NY), Sibley Music Library, Eastman School of Music, M2.1 D172 (vault) olim ML96 D172 (vault): My Lord Danby, his Book. 137 pp.; 92 pieces, some grouped in suites. 12 arrangements of music by Handel from Almira (1705), Florindo (1708) and Daphne (1708), and keyboard suites. A gavotte, bourrée, ritornello and air, and overture attrib. Handel are otherwise unknown. In addition to some 11 other pieces in Handel's style are pieces by 'N' (2) and 'C.N.' (3), Visée (3), Lully (3), Corelli, Lord Danby, Fannel, Gallot, Losy and Purcell. Titles include: ouverture, courante/double, bourrée, gavotte, aria, air ('No, no', 'La favorite du Roy de France'), minuet, 'La belle … pour la Maîtresse de Monsr Schutz', tombeaux ('du Roy d'Orange', 'Mazarini'), gigue, etc. Facsimile: complete vol. (Geneva, forthcoming). Literature: T. Crawford: 'Lord Danby, "Lutenist of Quality"', The Lute, xxv (1988), 53–68; T. Crawford: 'Lord Danby's Lute Book: a New Source of Handel's Hamburg Music', Göttinger Händel-Beiträge, ii (1986), 19–50

Salzburg, Studienbibliothek der Universität, M III 25: Musica: Partieen pro liutho, violino, basso. 153 ff.; 50 'Parthias' and 'Kammer-concertos': 35 for solo lute by Fichtel (24), anon. composers (6), Beher, Lauffensteiner, Peutro (?Pietro), Serta and Weiss; 14 for lute with violin and bass by S.L. Weiss (7), Christ

(2), Meckh (2), Lauffensteiner and Johann Sigismund Weiss; and a 'Concerto da camera à 4' by Blockh for lute, mandore, violin or flute, and basso continuo. The works extend from 3-movement concertos to partitas with 11 dances; some of the attributions have been questioned. Parts (other than lute) are extant only for the works by Christ and Meckh. Editions: DTÖ, lxxxiv, Jg.xlvi (1966) [2 partitas by Fichtel and 1 ascribed to Bohr von Bohrenfels]; MAM, xxx (1973) [conc. and partita]. Literature: J. Klima: 'Die Paysanne', Jb des Österreichischen Volksliedwerkes, x (1961), 102–6 [incl. 2 transcrs.]

Martin, Philippe: Trio VI: III con luito [sic], flauto traversiere et fondamento, III con liuto, violin et fondamento (Augsburg: Leopold, *c*1731–8) (RISM M1172). 3 partbooks; 6 trio sonatas with flute and 3 with violin; most sonatas have 4 movements (capriccio, scherzo, minuet and trio, arietta; entrée, ballo, siciliano, minuet and trio; etc.). Literature: H. Neemann: 'Philipp Martin: ein vergessener Lautenist', ZMw, ix (1926–7), 545–65

Wrocław, Biblioteka Uniwersytecka Mf 2002: Livre du luth, contenant des pieces les plus exquises: et gaillardes de quatre tons del accord françois ordinaire, scavoire: G.D.F. et A. & Des six tons des autres accords, pour la Paterneté trés Réligieuse, le Père Hermien Kniebandl, … ala Maison des Graces à Grissau (dated 1739 on f.91). 136 pp.; 120 pieces, many grouped into partitas (14 anon., and 1 each attrib. Kühnel and S.L. Weiss), and individual movements and arrangements of German lieder attrib. S.L. Weiss, 'W' and Jiunior Weiss. Also a 4-page instruction by Le Sage de Richée on playing the lute.

Dresden, Sächsische Landesbibliothek, 2389/0/4c; London, British Library, Add.31305, ff.10–23v: Antonio Vivaldi: Concerto in d for viola d'amore, lute, strings and cembalo P266/R540 (performed for the Dresden court at Venice in 1740). Edition: O. Malipiero, ed.: A. Vivaldi: Opere strumentali (Milan, 1947–72), cccxx

Krakow, Bibliotek Jagielońska (olim D-Bsb) Mus.Ms.40151: Canzoni devoti tradotti nell' liuto da me J[ohann] M[ichael] Sciurus [Eichorn?] 1742 (ex-libris Christina Anna Agnera Princesse d'Anhalt Cöthen). 135 ff.; chorales and sacred lieder in settings for 13-course lute by Johann Michael Sciurus from the Cöthenische Lieder zum Lob des dreyeiniger Gottes (8 settings) and from J.A. Freylinghausen's Geistreiches Gesang-Buch of 1704 (219 settings). The settings are grouped into 3- and 4-piece 'suites'. Literature: Kirsch (1992), 142–77

Dresden, Sächsische Landesbibliothek, 2423/I: J.F. Fasch: Concerto in d (autograph) for lute and strings, *c*1745–50. An arrangement for lute of an oboe concerto. Edition: R. Chiesa, ed. (Milan, 1969); W. Hobohm, ed.: Johann Friedrich Fasch: Konzert D-moll für Laute, Streicher und Basso continuo, Musik der Dresdner Hofkapelle, i (Leipzig, 1989). Literature: W. Hobohm: 'Johann Friedrich Faschs Lautentranscription seines Oboenkonzert d-Moll', Studien zur Auffuhrungspraxis und Interpretation von Instrumentalmusik des 18. Jahrhunderts, xxiv (1984), 76–83

Munich, Bayerische Staatsbibliothek, Mus.Ms.5362 (copied perhaps in Leipzig, after *c*1745). 64 ff.; 134 pieces: partitas by S.L. Weiss (a, c, G, C), Kropfgans (g) and an anon. composer (E♭), and individual pieces with attributions to Kropfgans (14), S.L. Weiss (12), Falckenhagen (9), Lauffensteiner (8), Gebel ('Tombeau–Adagio–Les roupies'), Kühnel, Pichler (3), David Kellner (attrib. Weiss) (2), Baron, 'Graf in Merseburg', Hoffmann and Schauer, and 5 opera arias by Hasse. Edition: MAM, xxx (1973) [2 minuets]

Daube, Johann Friedrich: VI. Sonatas pour le lut, dans le gout moderne, Op. 1 (Nuremberg: Haffer, 1746) [lost]; D-ROu, Mus Saec XVIII.18/10: Trio à Liuto, Traverso e Basso; D-ROu, Mus Saec XVIII-13/2: Trio à Liuto traverso e Basso; D-ROu, Mus Saec XVIII.13/2a–c: Sonatas (e, F, d) and a suite (A) two arias with underlaid text arranged from operas by Hasse (Cleopatra and Clemenza di Tito). Editions: H. Neemann, ed.: J.F. Daube: Trio in D-moll (Berlin, *c*1930); K. Schnürl, ed.: Trio in A-moll, DTÖ, lxxxiv (1942). Literature: S.P. Snook-Luther: The Musical Dilettante: a Treatise on Composition by J.F. Daube (Cambridge, 1992)

Kropfgans, Johann: III. Sonates pour le lut, op.1 (Nuremberg: J.U. Haffner, *c*1746) [?lost].

Kellner, David: XVI. auserlesene Lauten-Stücke (Hamburg: C. Brandt, 1747/R) (RISM K263). 48 pp.; 17 pieces: 6 'phantasias' (miniature canzonas), a chaconne, rondeau, 2 gigues, a pastorale, passepied, campanella, courante, sarabande and double, aria and gavotte. The volume may have appeared in a keyboard arrangement as Pièces pour clavecin (Hamburg: C. Brandt, 1747). Editions: W. Tappert, ed. (1906), 125–6 [selected variations from the chaconne]; H. Neemann, ed.: Alte Meister der Laute, iv (Berlin, 1928) [2 pieces]. Literature: E.A. Wienandt: 'David Kellner's Lautenstücke', JAMS, x (1957), 29–38; K. Sparr: 'A Poet's Description of the Lute Playing of Silvius Leopold Weiss, and a Possible Link between Weiss and David Kellner', JLSA, xviii (1986), 58–67; K. Sparr: 'David Kellner: a Biographical Survey', The Lute, xxix (1989), 3–36; K. Sparr: 'David Kellner: ein biographischer Überblick', Gitarre & Laute, xiv/6 (1992), 13–18; xv/1 (1993), 17–21; xv/2 (1993), 17–21

Kohaut, Karl: Divertimento primo per il liuto obligato, due violini et basso (Leipzig: Breitkopf, *c*1761) (RISM K1302). W. Tappert's transcription of the Leipzig exemplar is in D-Bsb Mus.Ms.11833. Concertos in D, F and B♭ for lute, 2 violins and cello, concertos in E and B♭ for lute, 2 violins, viola and bass, D-Bsb Mus.Ms.11834/1, 3, 5, 7, 9. Editions: H. Neemann, ed.: K. Kohaut: Konzert in F-dur (Berlin, 1927/R); EDM, 2nd ser., i (1942) [conc. and divertimentos]; DTÖ, lxxxiv, Jg.xlvi (1966) [Conc. in B♭]

Brussels, Bibliothèque Royale de Belgique, II 4088 (Fétis 2013; ex-Breitkopf): Recueil de pièces de luth. 7 works for lute with violin and cello (or bass) by Kropfgans: 2 divertimentos, a trietto, concerto and 3 sonatas; and a concerto (or partita) in D for lute obbligato, 2 horns, violin, viola d'amore and bass by Neruda. From the Breitkopf scriptorium.

II 4086 (Fétis 2911): Recueil de trios et concertos pour le luth (*c*1770; ex-Breitkopf). P.C. Durante: Concerto for lute, cembalo and strings, Concerto in F for lute and strings, a duetto and a divertimento for lute and violin, and a Sonata in a for lute solo; Haydn: Cassation in C for lute, violin and cello (an arrangement of H III:6); Kohaut: Divertimento l'amoureaux (trio per il liuto obligato, violino et violoncello) and a concerto for lute and strings; by Kohaut or Durante: 4 triettos for lute, violin and cello, and a divertimento for lute, 2 violins and cello. Editions: H. Neemann, ed.: J. Haydn: Cassation C-Dur für obligate Laute, Violine und Cello (Berlin, 1927); EDM, 2nd ser., i (1942) [works by Kohaut]; J. Domning, ed.: Paul Charles Durant: Gesamtausgabe (Hamburg, 1986)

Mělník, Okresný Vlastivědné Muzeum, VM412: Aria tempore adventus producenda à c[anto] et alto in recit. (copied *c*1750–60 by Sebastian Böhm). 3 movements (recitative, sonata, aria and tutti) for SATB, 2 violins, 11-course lute in tablature, cello obbligato with figured bass for organ. The work is a parody, being constructed over an entrée, gavotte and paisane known elsewhere as solo lute pieces. Literature: J. Tichota: 'Die Aria tempore adventus producenda und einige Zusammenhänge', MMC, nos.31–3 (1970), 153–70 [incl. facs. and thematic index of movements]

Seidel, Ferdinand: 12 Menuette für die Laute … samt einer Fantasie von Herrn Baron, … als eine Probe eines neuen Drucks von musicalischen Charakteren (Leipzig: Breitkopf, 1757/R). Preface and 11 pp. Editions: H. Neemann, ed.: Alte Meister der Laute, iv (Berlin, 1928); EDM, 2nd ser., i (1942) [the 12 minuets]; A. Quadt, ed. (1968–83) [incl. notes and transcrs.]

Beyer, Johann Christian: Herrn Professor Gellerts Oden, Liedern und Fabeln … für die Laute übersetzt (Leipzig: Breitkopf, 1760) (RISM B2492). 38 pp.; arrangements of odes, lieder, French and Italian songs; the volume also contains tables for tuning the lute and explanations of ornamentation signs. Edition: R. Gies and A. Nachtsheim (Dausenau, 1993) [incl. facsimile and transcription]. Literature: J. Wolf (1919), ii, 94–5, 156–7 [diplomatic facs. and extracts from the tables of ornaments]; R. Eklund and M. Thiel: 'The Instructions of Johann Christian Beyer', The Lute, xxviii (1988), 34–46

Krebs, Johann Ludwig: 2 concertos (C and F) for lute, 2 violins and cello. MSS (2 copies) D-Bsb, Mus.Ms.12019/1–2; 12020. Edition: R. Chiesa, ed.: Johann Ludwig Krebs: Concerto in Do [Fa] per liuto e archi (Milan, 1971)

Naumann, Johann Gottlieb: 'Wie ein Hirt sein Wolck weiden', duo for lute and glass harmonica, arranged by Johann Adolf Faustinus

Weiss from Cora och Alonzo (Stockholm, 1782). MS, D-Bsb Mus.Ms. 15976/5, 15948. Facsimile: MGG1, ix, pl.73 (facing 1311) [lute part]. Edition: R. Engländer: Die Dresdner Instrumentalmusik, Acta universitatis upsaliensis, v (Uppsala, 1956), appx. Literature: R. Engländer: 'Zu J.G. Naumanns Duo für Laute und Glasharmonica', Mf, xi (1958), 199–201

Rust, Friedrich Wilhelm: Tre sonata (G, d, C) per il liuto con violino obligato … nell'anno 1791 (MS, D-Bsb Mus.Ms.autogr. Rust 53); B-Dur Sonata für Laute und Violinie … 1795 (MS, D-Bsb Mus.Ms. autogr. Rust 49; Mus.Ms.19138/20, 21, 23 (copies)). Editions: Friedrich Wilhelm Rust: Sonate, Erste (G-dur) [Zweite (D-moll), Dritte (C-dur)] für Pianoforte oder Laute mit Violine (Hamburg, 1892); H. Neemann, ed.: Johann Friedrich Rust: Sonate in d-Moll (Berlin, 1925); J. Klima, ed.: Friedrich Wilhelm Rust (1739–1796): Werke für die Laute (Maria Enzersdorf, nr Vienna, 1981). Edition: A. Schlegel: Friedrich Wilhelm Rust: Drei Sonaten (Menziken, 1998). Literature: A. Schlegel: 'Zur Neuausgabe der Sonaten für Laute and obligate Violine/Flöte von Friedrich Wilhelm Rust', Gitarre & Laute, xi/5 (1989), 41–7

Augsburg, Staats- und Stadtbibliothek, Tonk.2° Hs.Fasc.III/1–2 (52 compositions in partbooks and 4 'Sammelhefte'; copied *c*1761–75, perhaps at the Bayreuth court/*R*2000 with preface by J. Domning). Toeschi: Conc. (F), lute, str, 2 fl, 2 hn; Ruge: Conc. (E♭), lute, 2 vn, vc, 2 hn; Concs. a 5 (lute, 2 vn, va, bc) by Falckenhagen (F), Hagen (d, A), Kleinknecht (C), Pfeiffer (B♭; with mutes), and S.L. Weiss (C); Kohaut: Divertimento in B♭, Conc. in A and 2 in F for lute, 2 vn, bc; Quartettos, lute, vn, va, vc, by Haydn (D; H III:8) and Seckendorf (B♭); Sonatas a 3 (lute, vn, vc) by Hagen (C, F, E♭, a, B♭), Haydn (F; H IV:F2) and Solnitz (B♭), Hagen: Trio (c), 2 lutes, vn obbl; Kleinknecht: Sonata, lute, fl, vc; Kohaut: Sonata, D, lute, va obbl, vc; Lauffensteiner: Sonata (A), 2 lutes (or lute and vn), va da gamba; Falckenhagen: Duetto (F), 2 lutes; Hagen: Sonata (G), lute, vn; Sonatas, lute solo: c, d, D, E♭, f ('Solo' and a sonata), F (a 'Sonatina' and a sonata), g, B♭, by Hagen (B♭), by Kleinknecht (D), by Kohaut; 3 anon. works (concertino, divertimento and sonata); and miscellaneous pieces by P.C. Durante, Falckenhagen, Kühnel, Locatelli, Weiss, Kleinknecht, Kehl, Hagen, (?Michael) Arne, Pfeiffer, Gaultier, Mouton, Steinmetz [?Stamitz], Felice, Geminiani, Giardino. Editions: H.D. Bruger, ed.: Joseph Haydn: Quartett in D-dur für obligate Laute, Violine, Bratsche und Violoncell (Wolfenbüttel, 1924); H. Neemann, ed.: Wolff Jacob Lauffensteiner: Sonate A-Dur für 2 Lauten (Berlin, 1927); H. Neemann, ed.: Alte Meister der Laute, iv (Berlin, 1928) [Hagen and Falckenhagen]; EDM, 2nd ser., i (1942) [Kohaut]: MAM, xxx (1973) [the duetto for 2 lutes]. Literature: 'Joseph Haydn und die Laute', Musik im Haus, vi/3 (1927); H. Küffner: 'Eine Augsburger Sammelhandschrift als Quelle zur Geschichte der Bayreuther Hofmusik', Archiv für Geschichte von Oberfranken, xlix (1969), 103–96 [list of contents and study of works by composers active at the Bayreuth court: Falckenhagen, Kehl, Kleinknecht and Pfeiffer]

BIBLIOGRAPHY, COLLECTED EDITIONS

BrookB

Verzeichniss geschriebener und gedruckter Musikalien aller Gattungen, welche am 1. Juni 1836 … von Breitkopf & Härtel … verkauft werden sollen (Leipzig, 1836)

A. Koczirz: 'Österreichische Lautenmusik zwischen 1650 und 1720', SMw, v (1918), 49–96

A. Koczirz, ed.: Österreichische Lautenmusik zwischen 1650 und 1720, DTÖ, l, Jg.xxv/2 (1918/R)

A. Koczirz: 'Verschollene neudeutsche Lautenisten (Weichmanberg, Pasch, de Bronikowsky, Raschke)', AMw, iii (1921), 270–84

A. Koczirz: 'Böhmische Lautenkunst um 1750', Alt-Prager Almanach, ed. P. Nettl (Prague, 1926), 88–120

P. Nettl: 'Musicalia der fürstlich Lobkowitz'schen Bibliothek in Raudnitz', Beiträge zur böhmischen und mährischen Musikgeschichte (Brno, 1927), 60–70

H. Neemann: 'Die Lautenistenfamilie Weiss', AMf, iv (1939), 157–89

H. Neemann, ed.: Lautenmusik des 17./18. Jahrhunderts, EDM, 1st ser., xii (1939)

A. Koczirz, ed.: Wiener Lautenmusik des 18. Jahrhunderts, EDM, 2nd ser., Alpen-und Donau-Reichsgau, i (1942)

R. Flotzinger: Die Lautentabulaturen des Stiftes Kremsmünster: thematischer Katalog (Vienna, 1965)

B.S. Brook, ed.: The Breitkopf Thematic Catalogue, 1762–1787 (New York, 1966)

K. Schnürl, ed.: Wiener Lautenmusik im 18. Jahrhundert, DTÖ, lxxxiv (1966)

H. Radke, ed.: Johann Georg Weichenberger: Sieben Präludien, drei Partien und eine Fantasie für Laute, MAM, xxv–xxvi (1970)

E. Maier: Die handschriftlich überlieferten Tabulaturen für Lauteninstrumente des 17. und 18. Jahrhunderts aus dem Bestand der Öesterreichischen Nationalbibliothek mit dem Wiener Lautenbuch des Jacques de Saint Luc (diss., U. of Vienna, 1972) [thematic index in vol.ii]

W. Rave: Some Manuscripts of French Lute Music, 1630–1700 (diss., U. of Illinois, 1972)

H. Radke, ed.: Wolff Jakob Lauffensteiner: Zwei Präludien und fünf Partien für Laute, MAM, xxx (1973)

P. Cherci: 'Le opera per liuto di Bach', Il 'Fronimo', xxxii (1980), 26–30

T. Crawford: 'Haydn's Music for Lute', Le luth et sa musique II: Tours 1980, 69–86

L. Hoffmann-Erbrecht: 'Der Lautenist Silvius Leopold Weiss und Johann Sebastian Bach', Ars musica, musica scientia: Festschrift Heinrich Hüschen, ed. D. Altenberg (Cologne, 1980), 246–54

T. Schmitt: 'Johann Sebastian Bachs Werke für Laute', Gitarre & Laute, vii/6 (1985), 13–20; viii (1986), 26–7, 64–5

R. Flotzinger: 'Graz und die österreichische Lautenmusik zwischen 1650 und 1750', Florilegium musicologicum: Hellmut Federhofer zum 75. Geburtstag, C.-H. Mahling (Tutzing, 1988), 103–8

L. Hoffmann-Erbrecht: 'Ernest Gottlieb Barons Kompositionen für Laute', Quaestiones in musica: Festschrift für Franz Krautwurst, ed. F. Brusniak and H. Leuchtmann (Tutzing, 1989), 227–40

P.K. Farstad: 'Ornaments in 18th-Century German Lute Music', Die Laute, ii (1998), 85–113

P.K. Farstad: German Galant Lute Music in the 18th Century (Göteborg, 2000)

ARTHUR J. NESS (with C.A. KOLCZYNSKI)

Sourdéac, Marquis de [Rieux, Alexandre de] (*b c*1620; d Le Neubourg, Normandy, 7 May 1695). French machinist and opera manager. He provided the machines for Pierre Corneille's tragedy La toison d'or, which was first performed in 1660 in a specially constructed theatre in Sourdéac's castle in Normandy and later (1661) given in Paris. In December 1669 he and the rich financier Sieur de Champeron became business managers of Perrin's Académies d'Opéra; Sourdéac also acted as machinist and designed the adventurous effects for Cambert's Pomone (1671). Apparently seduced by the opera's financial success and their own desire for power, Sourdéac and Champeron swindled the company out of its substantial profits, and effectively contributed to Perrin's downfall. Sourdéac subsequently designed the machines for Cambert's Les peines et les plaisirs (1672) and was planning the spectacle for a third opera when the Académies were forced to close. From 1673 to 1681 he worked for the Comédiens-Français.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

GroveO (C. Bashford)

L.E. Auld: The Lyric Art of Pierre Perrin, Founder of French Opera (Henryville, PA, 1986), i, 44–7

J. de La Gorce: 'Sourdéac, Alexandre de Rieux, marquis de', Dictionnaire de la musique en France aux XVIIe XVIIIe siècles, ed. M. Benoit (Paris, 1992)

CHRISTINA BASHFORD

Sourdine (i) (Fr.). See MUTE.

Sourdine (ii) (Fr.). See KIT.

Sourdine (iii) (Fr.). See SORDUN.

Šourek, Otakar (b Prague, 1 Oct 1883; d Prague, 15 Feb 1956). Czech musicologist. He was an engineer by profession, and joined the works department of the Prague City Council in 1907, remaining there until his retirement in 1939. A well-trained musician, he took an active part in Prague musical life as choir conductor and répétiteur and especially as a critic, contributing to Hudební revue, Listy Hudební matice, Branberger's Smetana, and Tempo, and writing reviews in the daily Venkov (1918–41). In 1910 Hudební revue entrusted him with the edition of Dvořák's letters to Emil Kozánek, an event which dictated his life-work. His four-volume life and works of Dvořák began to appear in 1916; in 1917 he published the first catalogue of Dvořák's works. In addition he compiled several volumes of Dvořák's letters, notably the selection Dvořák ve vzpomínkách a dopisech ('Dvořák in letters and reminiscences'), which, together with a shortened version of the biography and some volumes of analyses of Dvořák's works, also appeared in English and German. Acknowledged as the leading authority on Dvořák of his day, Šourek wrote articles on him for the third to fifth editions of Grove's Dictionary of Music and for Cobbett's Cyclopedic Survey of Chamber Music (London, 1929–30). From 1945 he took charge of the miniature score section of Hudební Matice, where he also worked on the collected edition of Dvořák's works. Šourek's interests extended to other Czech music. He compiled catalogues of the music of Suk and Novák and wrote detailed introductions to new works, incuding the earliest analysis of Janáček's The Excursions of Mr Brouček.

WRITINGS

'Dopisy Antonína Dvořáka doktoru Emilu Kozánkovi v Kroměříži' [Dvořák's letters to Emil Kozánek in Kroměříž], HR, iii (1910), 298–305, 345–9, 398–403

'Skladby Vítězslava Nováka' [Novák's compositions], HR, iii (1910), 507–16 [annotated list]; further lists in Listy Hudební matice, v (1926), 129–36; Tempo [Prague], x (1930–31), 172–80

'Sukovy melodramatické pohádky: k prvnímu koncertnímu provedení legendy "Pod jabloní"' [Suk's melodramatic fairy tales: on the first concert performance of the legend Under the Apple Tree], HR, v (1912), 312–19

'Skladby Josefa Suka' [Suk's compositions], HR, vii (1913–14), 186–98 [annotated list]; further list in Listy Hudební matice, vi (1927), 5–11

Život a dílo Antonína Dvořáka [The life and works of Dvořák] (Prague, 1916–33; i–ii, 3/1954–5; iii–iv, 2/1956–7)

Dvořáks Werke (Berlin, 1917; Cz. trans., enlarged Prague, 2/1960)

Výlety pana Broučka [The Excursions of Mr Brouček] (Prague, 1920)

Dvořákovy symfonie (Prague, 1922, 3/1948)

'Novákova Lucerna: několik poznámek o povaze díla' [Novák's The Lantern: some remarks on the character of the work], Listy Hudební matice, ii (1923), 189–99

'Dívčí boj v české opeře' [The war of the maidens in Czech opera], Listy Hudební matice, v (1926), 94–6

Antonín Dvořák (Prague, 1929, 3/1947; Eng. trans., 1952)

Dvořákova čítanka [A Dvořák reader] (Prague, 1929)

Dvořák ve vzpomínkách a dopisech [Dvořák in letters and reminiscences] (Prague, 1938, 9/1951; Eng. trans., 1954)

Smetanova Má vlast (Prague, 1940)

Antonín Dvořák, přátelům doma [Dvořák to his friends at home; 395 letters] (Prague, 1941)

Antonín Dvořák a Hans Richter (Prague, 1942); partial Eng. trans. in R. Newmarch: 'The Letters of Dvorák to Hans Richter', MT, lxxiii (1932), 605–7, 698–701, 795–7

Dvořákovy skladby komorní (Prague, 1943, 2/1949; Eng. trans., abridged, 1956/R as The Chamber Music of Antonín Dvořák)

Dvořákovy skladby orchestrální (Prague, 1944–6; Eng. trans., abridged, 1956/R as The Orchestral Works of Antonín Dvořák)

Komorní skladby Bedřicha Smetany [Smetana's chamber works] (Prague, 1945)

Rudolf Karel (Prague, 1947)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ČSHS [incl. further bibliography]

J. Löwenbach: 'Dvořákův životopisec' [Dvořák's biographer], Tempo [Prague], xiii (1933–4), 35–40 [incl. list of writings]

W. Kaupert: 'Eine Dvořák-Biographie', Musica, viii (1954), 308–14

H. Wirth: 'Otakar Šourek: Antonín Dvořák, Werkanalysen I, II', Mf, ix (1956), 371–3

JOHN TYRRELL

Souresby, John. English 15th-century musician, probably identifiable with SOURSBY.

Souris, André (b Marchienne-au-Pont, Hainaut, 10 July 1899; d Paris, 12 Feb 1970). Belgian composer, conductor and musicologist. He studied at the Brussels Conservatory (1911–18), where he won first prizes in music history (1915), harmony (1916), counterpoint and fugue (1917, under Du Bois) and the violin (1918); he later studied composition and orchestration with Gilson. In 1927 he won the Rubens Prize, which enabled him to stay in Paris for a time and make contact with the leaders of the avant garde. Scherchen gave him conducting lessons in 1935, and from 1937 to 1946 Souris was conductor for Belgian radio. As director of the music department of the Brussels Séminaire des Arts (1944–9) he introduced and arranged performances of works unknown in Brussels, especially serial music. He directed the Belgian section of the ISCM (1946–52) and was the editor of the journal Polyphonie (1947–9). Having taught since 1925, he was professor of harmony at the Brussels Conservatory between 1949 and 1964.

Before 1923 Souris composed a great deal, writing songs in a Debussian manner, but when the Pro Arte Concerts revealed other musical styles, he rejected the intimate refinement of Debussy and also his own previous work. Taking instead Satie and Stravinsky as his models, he wrote deliberately banal music; the first product of this new phase was the Choral, marche et galop op.1 for four brass (1925), clearly indebted to The Soldier's Tale. Souris had always shown a concerned interest in new directions in the arts, and in 1925 he joined up with the Belgian surrealists who had formed the 'Correspondance' group around Paul Nougé. With Hooreman, Souris wrote two tracts in 1925, Tombeau de Socrate, a parody of Satie, and Festivals de Venise, dated 20 September 1925, which includes the statement: 'The coming of a new art hardly concerns us. Art has been demobilized elsewhere – one must rather live'. The negation of art is characteristic of Souris' music of the period: it advocates an art of the commonplace. Again with Hooreman, he wrote the score for Les dessous des cartes (1926), a caricature of Les mariés de la tour Eiffel of 'Les Six'. When not concerned with parody, Souris juxtaposed the most banal and diverse elements to create a collage effect, as in his Musique (1928).

But from that year the 'Correspondance' group began to see a political justification for art, and Souris renounced his anti-musical activities to work with found materials. His Quelques airs de Clarisse Juranville (1928) bring together Sprechgesang and lyrical flights, brief melodic ideas and grandiloquent operatic phrases; but such eclecticism was exceptional – more frequently he based a work on one type of pre-existing material. Thus the orchestral Danseries de la renaissance (1932) take several four-part pieces by Gervaise, somewhat reworked in rhythm and melody, and Le marchand d'images, which exists in several versions, is founded on Walloon folksong. The subtle poetry of this piece makes it Souris' finest achievement. Sometimes he invested music in an antique or poular style, as in the Comptines pour enfants sinistres (1942), but in such cases the archetype is easily recognizable. Taken into a new context, the commonplaces acquire an expressive power beyond their original effect, and it was Souris' wish that the objectivity and general comprehensibility of this music would counter artistic egocentricity. Under the influence of Leibowitz, Souris became interested in 12-note serial composition in 1945. However, after completing L'autre voix, his first serial work, he abandoned the technique and devoted himself essentially to film music. Beginning with Le monde de Paul Delvaux (1946), he established himself as a notable composer for the cinema. His scores are distinguished by an economy of means and a careful choice of timbre, and they are truly integral parts of the films for which they were composed.

Souris wrote numerous articles, some of them day-to-day criticism, others deeply concerned with the problems of musical form. This particular preoccupation sprang from his transcriptions of lute tablature, where the problems of reconstructing the original form led him to an examination of the foundations of artistic creation. Gestalt theory had already brought to his attention the insufficiency of conventional analytic methods, and he undertook studies from a phenomenological standpoint. Souris was one of the leaders of Belgian musical life during the first half of the 20th century, and his wide-ranging cultural interests (existentialism, structuralism, linguistics, Lévi-Strauss, Bachelard) benefited a whole generation of musicians.

WORKS
(selective list)

ORCHESTRAL

Scherzo, 1923; Soliloque, str, perc, 1923; 5 chorals figurés [from J.S. Bach], brass band, 1928; Musique (Collage 1928), 1928; Org Conc. no.2, brass band, 1928 [from Handel]; Rêverie, 1931; Danseries de la renaissance [from Gervaise], 1932; Hommage à Babeuf, ww, 1934; Fanfare et scherzo, ww, perc, 1937; Burlesque, 1938; Symphonies, 1939; Suite de danseries no.2, ww, 1943; 3 pièces, small orch, 1944; 4 Fantasies, str, 1961–79 [from Purcell]; Ouverture pour une arlequinade, 1962; 7 pièces, 1963 [from Isaac]

CHAMBER AND SOLO INSTRUMENTAL

Fantasque, str qt, 1916; Fugue, str qt, 1917; 2 petits poèmes, vn, pf, 1917; Improvisation, pf, 1917; Hymne à l'automne, vn, pf, 1919; Sonatine, pf, 1920; Bagatelle, vn, pf, 1923; Berceuse, vn, pf, 1924; Choral, marche et galop, op.1, 2 tpt, 2 trbn, 1925; Tombeau de Socrate, 1925, collab. Hooreman; Burlesque, tpt, pf, 1931; Echos de Spa, pf, 1934; Fatrasie, vn, pf, 1934; Rengaines, ww qnt, 1937; Caprice no.24, vn, pf, 1943 [from Paganini]; Suite de danseries no.3, 2 tpt, hn, trbn, 1944; 5 Fantasies, str sextet, 1952 [from Purcell]; Cadenza for Mozart K503, pf, 1961; Concert flamand, ww qt, 1965; Petite suite de danseries, ww qt, 1965 [from Susato]; 3 pièces anciennes, vn, va, 1965

VOCAL

Choral: Carillon de Noël, 4vv, 1915; Le ménétrier (E. Verhaeren), male chorus, 1919; L'aubespin (P. de Ronsard), male chorus, 1920; En allant vers la ville (H. de Régnier), male chorus, 1920; Les pèlerins (Régnier), male chorus, 1921; En Wallonie, chorus, orch (1940); Comptines pour enfants sinistres (F. Marc), S, Mez, vn, cl, pf, 1942; 8 chansons enfantines, children's chorus, orch, 1943; La légende de St Nicolas, children's chorus, orch, 1943; Chansons rurales, 4vv, orch, 1958; Petit jeu, children's chorus, pf, 1960; Alle psallite, chorus, 2 org, 1963; De Sancto Spiritu, chorus, 1963 [from H. Isaac]; Fêtes d'Hébé, 3 S, T, B, chorus, orch, 1964 [from Rameau]; Le marchand d'images, 2 spkrs, S, A, T, B, chorus, orch, 1954–65

Solo vv, insts: 3 poèmes japonais, S, str qt, pf, 1916; Chanson (F. Viellé-Griffin), 1v, str qt, pf, 1917; Avertissement (P. Nougé), 2/3 spkrs, perc, 1925; Alleluia, 1v, 9 insts, 1928; Je te connais (Nougé), Mez, str qt, pf, 1928; Quelques airs de Clarisse Juranville (Nougé), Mez, str qt, pf, 1928; L'autre voix (R. Guiette), S, fl, cl, va, vc, pf, 1947; 3 Motets, 4 solo vv, insts, 1961; 5 Laude, 4 solo vv, insts, 1961; Triptyque pour un violon (J. Séaux), spkr, Mez, 2 A, 2 Bar, B, org, perc, 1963; 4 Motets, S, Mez, insts, 1963 [from Cypriot polyphony]

Songs: A ceux qui sont morts pour la patrie (A.H.C. van Hasselt), 1915; Attente, 1915: Ballade (P. Fort), 1915; Baptême en automne (Souris), 1915; Amour (A. Rimbaud), 1916; D'aimer (Fort), 1916; Ballade (Fort), 1916; De joie (M. Elskamp), 1917; Prélude à la chanson d'Eve (C. van Lerberghe), 1918; Ton coeur larmoie (Viellé-Griffin), 1918; Comme un chant de cloche (F. Jammes), 1919; Matin d'octobre (T. Klingsor), 1919; Ivresse au printemps (A. de Noailles), 1920; Java (Nougé), 1925; Musiciens en voyage (G. Limbour), 1925

INCIDENTAL MUSIC

Stage: Le dessous des cartes (Nougé, C. Goemans), 1926, collab. Hooreman; Hurrah l'Oural (Aragon), 1934; Le bon vin de Monsieur Nuche (Willems), 1949; Truffaldino (C. Goldoni), 1949; Yolande de Beersel, 1949; Le blason des fêtes (Vaume), 1960

Film scores: L'Ardenne (Sur les routes de l'eté) (dir. H. Storck), 1936; La Belgique nouvelle (dir. Storck), 1937; Un ennemi public (dir. Storck), 1937; Le monde de Paul Delvaux (dir. Storck), 1946; La joie de revivre (dir. Storck), 1947; De Renoir à Picasso (dir. P. Haesaerts), 1948; Le froid (dir. G. De Boe), 1949; Visite à Picasso (dir. Haesaerts), 1950, collab. Froidebise; Masques et visages de James Ensor (dir. Haesaerts), 1950; Perséphone (dir. L. Zangrie), 1951; Le banquet des fraudeurs (dir. Storck), 1951; Bakouba (dir. De Boe), 1952; Limbourg (dir. De Boe), 1952; Peintres bantous (dir. G. Félix and A. Scohy), 1952; Marionnettes de Toone (dir. J. Cleinge), 1953; Helle sera appelée femme (dir. De Boe), 1953; Bruges (dir. De Boe), 1954; L'humanisme (dir. Haesaerts), 1955; Laethem Saint-Martin (dir. Haesaerts), 1955; Calligraphie japonaise (dir. P. Alechinsky), 1957; La déroute (dir. A. Kyrou), 1957; Prisons (dir. O. De Mol), 1958; Beloeil (dir. E. Bernhard), 1958; L'école de la liberté (dir. Haesaerts and Bernhard), 1960; L'imitation du cinéma (dir. M. Marien), 1960; Chimigrammes (dir. P. Cordier), 1963, collab. Mercenier; Encre (dir. J. Cleinge), 1964; De ballade van het diepe water (dir. C. Gabriels), 1964; Babel (dir. Cleinge), 1965; Dulle Griet (dir. Cleinge), 1965

Radio scores: Godefroid de Bouillon (H. Closson), 1939; Le nez (N.V. Gogol), 1939; La chanson de Roland, 1942; Les amours de Lancelot (J. Boulanger), 1962; Pasiphaé (H. de Montherlant), 1962; Léonce et Léna (G. Büchner), 1964; Mes inscriptions (L. Scutenaire), 1965; Point de lendemain (V. Denon)

Other incid scores

MSS in B-Brtb

Principal publishers: CeBeDeM, Schott, Suvini Zerboni

EDITIONS

with J. Jacquot: T. Mace: Musick's Monument (Paris, 1956) with R. de Morcourt: A. Le Roy: Premier livre de tablature de luth (Paris, 1960)
Poèmes de Donne, Herbert et Crashaw mis en musique par leurs contemporains (Paris, 1961) with S. Spycket: Oeuvres de Robert Ballard: Premier livre(1611) (Paris, 1963) with S. Spycket and J. Veyrier: Oeuvres de Robert Ballard: Deuxième livre(1614) et pièces diverses (Paris, 1964) with M. Rollin: Oeuvres du vieux Gautier (Paris, 1966) with M. Rollin: Oeuvres de Chancy Bouvier Belleville Dubuisson Chevalier (Paris, 1967) with M. Rollin: Oeuvres pour luth seul de Jean-Baptiste Besard (Paris, 1969) with M. Rollin: Oeuvres de Nicolas Vallet pour luth seul (Paris, 1970) with M. Rollin: Oeuvres de René Mesangeau (Paris, 1971) with M. Rollin: Oeuvres des Bocquet (Paris, 1972) with M. Rollin and J.-M. Vaccaro: Oeuvres de Vaumesnil, Edinthon, Perrichon, Raël, Montbuysson, La Grotte, Saman, La Barre (Paris, 1974) with R. Vannes: Dictionnaire des musiciens (compositeurs) (Brussels, 1947)

WRITINGS

Conditions de la musique et autres écrits (Brussels and Paris, 1976) [incl. 'Musique d'opéra et musique de film', 'Tablature et syntaxe', 'Debussy et Stravinsky', list of writings and work-list]
Bribes (Paris, 1950)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

CeBeDeM directory
P. Nougé: Histoire de ne pas rire (Brussels, 1956)

R. Wangermée: La musique belge contemporaine (Brussels, 1959)
L. van Deuren: 'Les oeuvres d'André Souris', RBM, xx (1966), 15–20
H. Closson: 'André Souris ou l'intelligence musicale', Revue générale, cvi/3 (1970), 109–14
J. Jacquot: 'Présence d'André Souris', Oeuvres de Nicolas Vallet pour luth seul, ed. A. Souris (Paris, 1970), v–vi
M. Mariën, ed.: Lettres surréalistes 1924–1940 (Brussels, 1973)
M. Mariën: L'activité surréaliste en Belgique (Brussels, 1979)
J.-P. Muller: André Souris (Brussels, 1982)
R. Wangermée: Andre Souris et le complexe d'Orphée: entre surréalisme et musique sérielle (Liége, 1995)

HENRI VANHULST

Soursby [Saursbi, Sorbi] (*fl c*1430–60). English composer. His style of composition is suggestive of a slightly younger contemporary of Dunstaple. He was probably the John Souresby who was master of the choristers at the collegiate church of St Mary, Warwick, by 1432–3 and still held this post in 1448–9, and who was granted a life annuity of £10 p.a. by Richard Beauchamp, Earl of Warwick (d 1439) (GB-EXr Chanter 722, f.8*v*; Lpro E 368/220, rotulets 108–9). This grant may result from an earlier period of service with Beauchamp, whose household chapel in 1422 numbered 18 men and 9 'queresters'. It is possible that Souresby travelled with Beauchamp to the Council of Konstanz in 1416, where the earl was one of the principal English delegates, or to France in the English campaigns of the 1420s and 30s. In view of the 'r' present in all contemporary spellings, it seems unlikely that Soursby was the Henry Soulbe who was clerk of the Royal Household Chapel, 1446–52. He was an excellent composer after the later manner of Dunstaple and is identified as 'anglicanus' in the index of I-TRmp 92.

WORKS

Sanctus, 3vv, I-TRmp 90, 92 (twice), TRmd 93 (no chant), ed. in DTÖ, lxi, Jg.xxxi (1924/R)
Sanctus, 3vv, AO 15 no.179 (no chant, but plainsong incipit resembles Sarum no.4; composer's name partly cut away), ed. Meyer-Eller, ii, 52
Sanctus, 3vv, AO 15 no.180 (Sarum no.5 in iii; ii and iii must be read in augmentation ['error anglorum']; paired scribally with Ag), ed. Meyer-Eller, ii, 42
Agnus Dei, 3vv, AO 15 (anon; paired scribally with San: no musical connection but probably by Soursby; Sarum no.3, chiefly in iii), ed. Meyer-Eller, ii, 60

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M.F. Bukofzer: 'English Church Music of the Fifteenth Century: Dunstaple's Contemporaries and Followers', NOHM, iii (1960/R), 165–213, esp. 196 [faulty transcription of 3rd San, bars 1–181]
B.L. Trowell: Music under the Later Plantagenets (diss., U. of Cambridge, 1960), i, 25, 34, 49, 59, 74; ii, 191–2, 313
D. Styles: Ministers' Accounts of the Collegiate Church of St Mary, Warwick, 1432–85 (Oxford, 1969), 16, 83
A. Wathey: Music in the Royal and Noble Households in Late Medieval England: Studies of Sources and Patronage (New York, 1989), 53, 190–91
G. Curtis and A. Wathey: 'Fifteenth-Century English Liturgical Music: a List of the Surviving Repertory', RMARC, xxvii (1994), 1–69, esp. 46, 49
S. Meyer-Eller: Musikalischer Satz und Überlieferung von Messensätzen des 15. Jahrhunderts: die Ordinariumsvertonungen der Handschriften Aosta 15 und Trient 87/92 (Munich, 1989)

BRIAN TROWELL/ANDREW WATHEY

Sousa, Filipe de (b Lourenço Marques, Mozambique, 15 Feb 1927). Portuguese composer, musicologist and conductor. He took a degree in classical philology at Lisbon University and studied the piano (diploma 1947) with Abreu Mota and composition (diploma 1952) with Jorge Croner de Vasconcelos at the Lisbon Conservatory; he also studied conducting with Fritz Lehmann in Munich (1954–5), Hans Swarowsky in Vienna (1957) and Albert Wolff in Hilversum (1957). He was one of the founders of the Portuguese section of the Jeunesse Musicale and, during his ten years as director of the Portuguese television music department (1959–69), he also taught composition at Lisbon Conservatory (1963–7). Besides some activity as a conductor he has carried out much research, discovering several 18th- and 19th-century Portuguese manuscripts which he has reconstructed and revised. These include As variedades de Proteu (1737) and Guerras do Alecrim e da Mangerona (1737) by António Teixeira (the earliest known operas in Portuguese) and João Pedro de Almeida Mota's Passion. His output as a composer, though refined, was somewhat limited. It shows a distilled and elliptic style with neo-classical influence, as well as a particular concern for the literary quality of the material.

WORKS

Orch: Suite de danças, 1956; Sinfonietta, chbr orch, 1961
Chbr and solo inst: Sonatina, pf, 1951; Wind Qnt, 1957; Sonatina, pf, 1957; Caleidoscópio, vn, 1981; Monologue, vn, 1981; Suite, va, 1985
Songs: 2 Negro Poems (L. Hughes), 1948; 2 sonetos (C. Pessanha), 1950; 5 odes (R. Reis), 1950; Entwürfe aus zwei Winterabenden (R.M. Rilke), 1954; 4 poèmes d'amour (P. Éluard), 1965–70; 3 English Sonnets (F. Pessoa), 1985; 2 poemas de cante Jondo (F. García Lorca)

Principal publishers: Edition Modern (Munich), Musicoteca (Lisbon)

EDITIONS

J. de Sousa Carvalho: L'amore industrioso, PM, ser.B, ii (1960); Penelope, PM, ser.B, xiv (1968) [ov. only]
J.D. Bomtempo: Sinfonia no.1, opus 11, PM, ser.B, viii (1963)
Francisco de Lacerda: Trovas, PM, ser.C, xxiv (1973) with G. Miranda: Jorge Croner de Vasconcelos: Obras para violino e piano (Lisbon, 1994); Obras para piano (Lisbon, 1994); Obras para canto e piano (Lisbon, 1997)
F. Lopes-Graça: 24 prelúdios para piano (Lisbon, 1996)

ASTA-ROSE ALCAIDE/ALEXANDRE DELGADO

Sousa, John Philip (b Washington DC, 6 Nov 1854; d Reading, PA, 6 March 1932). American composer, bandmaster and author. Composer of the official national march of the United States, The Stars and Stripes Forever, Sousa, who was known as the 'March King', was the most important figure in the history of bands and band music.

1. Life. 2. Legacy. 3. Works.

1. Life. Both his parents were immigrants: his father, John Antonio, a trombonist in the US Marine Band, was born in Spain of Portuguese parents; his mother, Marie Elisabeth Trinkaus, was born in Bavaria. The family name was Sousa, despite stories that it was originally 'So', to which 'USA' was appended. John Philip, the third of ten children, was first educated at home because of poor health, and then attended local schools. In the evenings he attended the Esputa Conservatory of Music, where he studied singing, the violin, piano, flute and several brass instruments. At the age of 11 he organized an adult quadrille orchestra. He was about to run off with a circus band when his father had him enlisted as an apprentice musician in the US Marine Band at the age of 13. During the early Marine Band years Sousa performed professionally as a civilian violinist with several Washington theatre orchestras and probably also taught at the Esputa Conservatory. Meanwhile, he tried his hand at composition. He studied with George Felix Benkert, a Washington composer and conductor, and played the violin in Benkert's chamber orchestra.

After leaving the Marine Band at the age of 20 Sousa continued working as a violinist and conductor at Washington theatres, and also performed with a string quartet in informal concerts at the home of William Hunter, Assistant Secretary of State. In 1875 he became conductor for Milton Nobles's travelling theatre troupe, composing incidental music for the play The Phoenix (Bohemians and Detectives). He returned to Washington and soon went on the road again as conductor of Matt Morgan's Living Pictures, a vaudeville show. In 1876 he moved to Philadelphia for the American centenary celebration, playing first violin in the International Exhibition Orchestra. While Offenbach was the orchestra's guest conductor, Sousa composed The International Congress for him. After the centenary, he performed, arranged and composed for several Philadelphia theatres and also corrected proofs for one of his publishers, W.F. Shaw. Among his works at that time were orchestrations of several Gilbert and Sullivan operettas. He composed two versions of an operetta, Katherine, but neither was produced. HMS Pinafore was then the rage in America, and Sousa was chosen to conduct the Philadelphia Church Choir Company's production. He made his own orchestration, which was praised by Gilbert and Sullivan. In 1879 he married a young understudy from the company, Jane van Middlesworth Bellis.

After Pinafore Sousa arranged and conducted a variety show, Our Flirtations, which toured after a run in Philadelphia. His accomplishments impressed the Marine Corps officials, and he was appointed the 14th conductor of the US Marine Band in 1880. During the next 12 years he transformed the band into the finest military band in America. He composed new marches and transcribed classical works to augment the band's limited repertory. His first published operetta, The Smugglers, appeared in 1882, followed by the more successful Désirée in 1883. Sousa also helped to form the Washington Operatic Association and conducted numerous oratorios. His early marches attracted limited attention, but The Gladiator (1886) was widely played and eventually sold over a million copies. As his national and international popularity increased, his publisher, Harry Coleman, made a fortune from sheet music sales of his marches, meanwhile paying Sousa only $25 to $35 for each new march.

During his last two seasons with the Marine Band, two national tours were made under the management of David Blakely, who persuaded Sousa to leave military service and form his own civilian band. The new band, known as Sousa's Band, toured the North American continent each year from 1892 and made four European tours (1900, 1901, 1903, 1905) and one world tour (1910–11). During this period, Sousa had reached his peak as an operetta composer, and El capitan (1895) was particularly successful. The only interruption in the band's concert schedule came during World War I, when Sousa volunteered to serve in the US Navy, organizing fleet bands at the Great Lakes Naval Training Center. World War I marches which have maintained their popularity include Sabre and Spurs, US Field Artillery and Solid Men to the Front.

After the war the Sousa Band tours began again and continued until the Great Depression of 1929, when the number of engagements decreased. The last concerts were held at Atlantic City's Steel Pier in September 1931. Meanwhile the band had begun to give radio concerts, which continued until Sousa's death. During the last decade of his life he was regarded as an American institution. He became increasingly interested in school music, adjudicated at band contests and frequently conducted massed bands. Sousa died of a heart attack after rehearsing the Ringgold Band of Reading, Pennsylvania. Fittingly, the last selection he conducted was The Stars and Stripes Forever.

Sousa has been widely commemorated, both in Washington (the Sousa Bridge, the Sousa Stage at the Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts, Sousa Hall in the Marine Barracks) and further afield. Extensive Sousa archives are on deposit at the Library of Congress, the US Marine Band and the University of Illinois. Perhaps the most touching of all the tributes to him came from former members of Sousa's Band, who formed the Sousa Band Fraternal Society 12 years after his death. Each year, on his birthday, members travelled to New York and held dinners. Chapters eventually were formed in other cities, and a newsletter was issued. It was a 'last man's' organization, never to be reinstated.

2. Legacy. In his era Sousa was a phenomenon of the entertainment world. He and his band had a remarkable impact on the musical tastes of America, and because of their collective artistry they put America's best foot forward in travels abroad. The band was regarded as the foremost ensemble of its kind during an era known as the 'golden age of bands'. The musical organization Sousa created was a phenomenon in itself. It was a large band, ranging from 43 to 73 musicians, was completely self-financing and travelled exclusively by rail and ship. During its 40-year history (1892–1932), it presented over 15,200 concerts. Sousa demonstrated that a major music organization could take music of good quality directly to the people, often performing in two towns per day, and do so profitably.

A student of both classical and popular music, Sousa was one of the most accomplished conductors of the day. He could attract superior musicians by offering elevated pay scales and the prestige of performing for a high-profile composer–conductor before appreciative audiences. The technical excellence of the band can be gauged from the constantly varied programmes, which the musicians frequently played without rehearsals, often using manuscript parts or transposing orchestral parts.

At the turn of the 20th century Sousa was possibly the most widely known name in music. People on both sides of the Atlantic were dancing the two-step to his Washington Post, bands everywhere were playing his marches, and both sheet music and recordings were selling briskly. He initially despised the phonograph, which brought him no financial return. Sales of the sheet music made him wealthy, however, and by the end of the 20th century The Stars and Stripes Forever had probably sold more sheet music and recordings than any other single piece ever written.

Sousa had a passion for perfection, whether presenting a common street melody or a classic, and he did more to diminish artistic snobbery than any other conductor of his era. Soloists always played a prominent part in Sousa Band concerts, and he engaged established artists. Among those were violinist Maud Powell, soprano Estelle Liebling, cornettist Herbert Clarke and trombonist Arthur Pryor. Sousa was also seen in a progressive role, introducing much new music, including excerpts from Parsifal nine years before the opera was performed in New York.

An aspect of Sousa's legacy often overlooked is his patriotism. This is seen in the titles he gave his music, which literally tell the story of America, and even more emphatically in his personal life. He spent a total of over 19 years in military service and volunteered to extend that in times of national crisis. His patriotism began as a small boy, born within sight of the nation's capitol building and exposed to the sights and sounds of the Civil War. It was perhaps most evident in his presentation of the pageant, The Trooping of the Colors, during the Spanish-American War and his enlistment in the US Navy at the age of 62 during World War I.

Sousa's influence was felt in many areas. Aside from his legacy of marches and his huge impact on the band movement, he also made a significant contribution to early American operetta, and had a substantial influence on the recording and sheet music industries. He is credited with introducing ragtime to Europe when his band made its first European tour in 1900. He was also a champion of composers' rights, being one of the charter members of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers and a campaigner for the American copyright law of 1909. Sousa's contribution to the literary field was minimal, but he was the author of seven books and well over 100 pieces for magazines and newspapers.

Sousa's influence on the American music scene continued long after his death. Musicians who played under him, numbering about 1200, went on to hold positions in symphony, opera and ballet orchestras. Some, such as Meredith Willson, became noted composers. Others, including Arthur Pryor, Herbert Clarke and Frank Simon, became prominent conductors, thus carrying the Sousa tradition to a later generation.

3. Works. Although known almost entirely for his marches, Sousa composed music of many types, including operettas, songs and suites. Aside from the operettas and suites, most of the remainder of his works were composed specifically for band.

Of Sousa's marches, 135 stand as independent pieces. Others sometimes classified as marches were derived from songs or belong to larger works. The marches are diverse in character, which is surprising in view of the restrictive framework of the common quickstep march. They are often described as being typically American, perhaps because of their breezy energy. Some have a distinctive swing, particularly in their second sections. Among the finest of the marches are The Stars and Stripes Forever, now the official American march; The Washington Post, which was used internationally for dancing the two-step; and Semper Fidelis, adopted by the US Marine Corps.

The early marches have a definite military bearing, easily adapted to marching, but later ones are more sophisticated. Only one third have military titles. Except for three dirges and one lengthy collection of national tunes, all are of the quickstep variety. Much of their success is due to their straightforward construction. The melodies and harmonies are actually quite simple except for 'break', or episodic, sections, and countermelodies and obbligatos are used sparingly. In general, the marches follow two patterns: AABB–trio–break–trio–break–trio, and AABB–trio–trio–DD. He seldom used da capos and ensured that the last strains made an emphatic final statement. Sections are usually 16 or 32 bars in length, except for the introductions, which are usually four bars, and the break sections, which vary. He did not favour specific keys, writing down what he heard in his 'brain band', as he called it (he did not use an instrument when composing). Flat keys were usually used for band arrangements, and sharp keys for orchestra arrangements. Piano reductions and other arrangements, many of which were created by the publishers, were in whatever keys were convenient for the performers.

It is interesting that Sousa never performed his marches as published, for two reasons. First, the published editions were fully orchestrated and thus suitable for marching, whereas his band was strictly a concert organization. He used variations in voicing, dynamic shading and accents to add variety. Second, he did not want others to play his music exactly as he did. For finales he often had the cornets, trumpets and trombones come to the front of the stage. He did not change tempos during the performance of his marches.

Next in importance to Sousa's marches are his 15 operettas. For much of his professional life he never entirely abandoned his ambition of becoming an operetta composer–conductor, but this ambition was dashed when he was appointed leader of the US Marine Band at the age of 25. Before assuming leadership of the Marine Band, he had composed one operetta and had orchestrated and conducted others. Despite the demands on his energy made by the Marine Band, he found time to compose The Smugglers and Désirée, both of which ran with limited success. He also orchestrated Felix Marie Masse's Paul and Virginia, and possibly other works. These were forerunners of American operetta, and Sousa was one of several composers caught up in the creation of a new market for American musical entertainment.

Several subsequent operettas met with little acceptance. But El capitan, first performed in 1896, played for four years in America and six months in England and turned out to be the most important 19th-century operetta by an American composer. Encouraged by its success, Sousa wrote The Bride Elect, The Charlatan and Chris and the Wonderful Lamp in the span of four years. From 1900 to 1911 his operetta production was curtailed because of overseas touring with his band. The Free Lance was successful in 1906, as was The American Maid in 1913, but these were the last of his operettas to be produced. The Irish Dragoon was completed in 1915, but by this time public interest in this form of musical theatre had waned.

Sousa's style of operetta can be traced to that of Gilbert and Sullivan, and to a lesser extent Offenbach, Suppé and Wagner. Full of spirited march melodies, the operettas had an unmistakable aura of optimism perfect for the time. The marches were quickly modified as quickstep marches and marketed independently, and long outlived the works from which they were drawn. The operettas reflect Sousa's strong sense of propriety with no risqué wording or suggestive action. Their librettos, the best of them by Charles Klein, are deliberately nonsensical make-believe. Some contain innovative production ideas: The American Maid, for example, features glass-blowing artisans on stage. However, Sousa's operettas remain period pieces, and except for El capitan have had little success when revived.

Sousa's 70 songs reveal an unknown side of his musical personality. A few are of a minstrel type, complete with absurd humour, but these are far outnumbered by the serious songs. Characteristically, the songs employ simple melodies, harmony and rhythms, with very little syncopation, and straightforward chordal accompaniments. All are written in the treble clef, with few indications of whether the voice(s) should be female or male. Major keys are predominant, even when the subject matter is sad, although chromaticism is occasionally used to expressive effect. Most are of the stanza and refrain types, sometimes with recitative between verses.

Sousa's fantasies and humoresques for band did not follow the format favoured by most other composers. They were used exclusively as showpieces and are of two basic types. One type is a set of variations on a familiar melody, with fragments of other songs added where appropriate. The other type, used with great effect at his concerts, is a series of songs which have a common subject in their titles and are strung together so as to tell a story. Sousa wished to keep them exclusively for his own band, and few were published.

WORKS

Unless otherwise stated, printed works were published in Philadelphia, and MSS of unpublished works are in US-Wc for a more complete list of works see GroveA (H.W. Hitchcock) operettas unless otherwise stated

STAGE

The Phoenix (Bohemians and Detectives) (incid music, J. Bludso), 1875, lost
Matt Morgan's Living Pictures (incid music), 1876, Washington DC, spr. 1876, lost
Katherine (3, W.J. Vance), 1879
Our Flirtations (incid music, Sousa, Vance, E. Bartlett, others, after J.B. Wilson), 1880
Florine (M.A. Denison), 1881, unfinished
The Smugglers (2, Vance, after F.C. Burnand: The Contrabandista), 1882, Washington DC, 25 March 1882
Désirée (2, E.M. Taber, after J.M. Morton: Our Wife), 1883, Washington DC, 1 May 1884
The Queen of Hearts (1, Taber), 1885, Washington DC, 12 April 1886
The Wolf (3, Sousa), 1888
The Devil's Deputy (J.C. Goodwin), 1893, unfinished
El capitan (3, C. Klein), 1895, Boston, 13 April 1896
The Bride Elect (3, Sousa), 1897, New Haven, CT, 28 Dec 1897
The Charlatan (3, Klein), 1898, Montreal, 29 Aug 1898
Chris and the Wonderful Lamp (3, G. MacDonough), 1899, New Haven, CT, 23 Oct 1899
The Free Lance (2, H.B. Smith), 1905, Springfield, MA, 26 March 1906
The American Maid (3, L. Liebling), 1909, Rochester, NY, 27 Jan 1913
Hip Hip Hooray (incid music), 1915, New York, Sept 1915, Ballet of the States by Sousa, lost
The Irish Dragoon (3, J. Herbert, after C. Lever: Charles O'Malley), 1915
The Victory (E.W. Wilcox), 1915, unfinished
Cheer Up (revue, 3, R.H. Burnside), 1916, New York, aut. 1917, part of Act 2 by Sousa Everything (incid music), 1918, lost

VOCAL

70 Songs, 1874–1931, incl. Ah Me! (E. Swallow), Annabel Lee (E.A. Poe), A Rare Old Fellow (B. Cornwall), Boots (R. Kipling), Crossing the Bar (A. Tennyson), I Wonder (E.M. Taber), In Flanders Fields the Poppies Grow (J.D. McCrae), Star of Light (B. Beach), Sweet Miss Industry (S. Conant Foster), Tally-Ho! (J. Miller), The Love that Lives Forever (G.P. Wallihan), There's a Merry Brown Thrush (L. Larcom)
7 other vocal works, incl. TeD, B♭, 4 solo vv, org, op.12, 1874; The Trooping of the Colors, pageant, solo vv, 4vv, band (Cincinnati, 1898); The Messiah of Nations, patriotic hymn (J.W. Riley), 4vv, band/orch (Cincinnati, 1902); The Last Crusade, ballad (A.H. Spicer), 4 solo vv, 4vv, orch (Cincinnati, 1920)

INSTRUMENTAL

for band, unless otherwise stated

many works also published in versions for piano, orchestra and numerous other instrumentations

135 marches, 1873–1931, incl. El capitan (1896), Golden Jubilee (Cleveland, 1928), Hands Across the Sea (1899), King Cotton (1895), Nobles of the Mystic Shrine (Cleveland, 1923), Sabre and Spurs (Cleveland, 1918), Semper Fidelis (Philadelphia, *c*1888), Solid Men to the Front (New York, 1918), The Fairest of the Fair (1908), The Free Lance (1906), The Gallant Seventh (Cleveland, 1922), The Gladiator (1886), The Glory of the Yankee Navy (1909), The High School Cadets (Philadelphia, *c*1890), The Invincible Eagle (1901), The Liberty Bell (1893), The Pride of the Wolverines (Cleveland, 1926), The Rifle Regiment (New York, *c*1886), The Stars and Stripes Forever (1897), The Thunderer (Philadelphia, *c*1889), The Washington Post (Philadelphia, 1889), US Field Artillery (New York, 1918)
11 waltzes, 12 other dances, band/pf, 1872–1925
11 suites, 1893–1925, incl. At the King's Court, 1904 (1912), Dwellers of the Western World, 1910 (1911), Tales of a Traveler, 1911 (1912–14), Three Quotations, 1895, pf score (1896)
13 humoresques, 1885–1928, incl. Showing Off Before Company, 1919, US-Wc
20 fantasies, band, 1876–1925; 3 fantasies, orch, 1876–8, incl. The International Congress, 1876; 4 fantasies, pf, vn/fl, 1879–80: most unpubd
332 known arrs. and transcriptions for band, orch, solo insts with band/orch/pf

BIBLIOGRAPHY

GroveA (H.W. Hitchcock) [incl. more complete list of works]
J.P. Sousa: Marching Along (Boston, 1928, rev. 2/1994 by P.E. Bierley)
C.F. Church: The Life and Influence of John Philip Sousa (diss., Ohio State U., 1942)
Sousa Band Fraternal Society News (Los Angeles; Anderson, IN; New York; 51 issues, 1945–90)
J.R. Smart: The Sousa Band: a Discography (Washington DC, 1970)
W.B. Stacy: John Philip Sousa and His Band Suites: an Analytical and Cultural Study (diss., U. of Colorado, 1972)
P.E. Bierley: John Philip Sousa, American Phenomenon (New York, 1973, 2/1986)
J.A. Whistler: The Songs of John Philip Sousa (diss., Memphis State U., 1975)
L.J. Bly: The March in American Society (diss., U. of Miami, 1977)
J. Newsom, ed.: Perspectives on John Philip Sousa (Washington DC, 1983)
P.E. Bierley: The Works of John Philip Sousa (Westerville, 1984)
M. Heslip: Nostalgic Happenings in the Three Bands of John Philip Sousa (Westerville, 1992)
M.R. Jorgensen: John Philip Sousa's Operetta El Capitan: a Historical, Analytical and Performance Guide (diss., Ball State U., 1994)
J.N. Korzun: The Orchestral Transcriptions for Band of John Philip Sousa (diss., U. of Illinois, 1994)
M.E. Hester: A Study of the Saxophone Soloists Performing with the John Philip Sousa Band: 1893–1930 (diss., U. of Arizona, 1995)
P.E. Bierley: Sousa Band Fraternal Society News Index (Westerville, 1997)
A set of 85 scrapbooks containing clippings and programmes of the Sousa Band is in the archives of the US Marine Band, Washington DC.

PAUL E. BIERLEY

Sousa, Lourenço da Conceição de. See CONCEIÇÃO, MANOEL LOURENÇO DA.

Sousa Carvalho, João de. See CARVALHO, JOÃO DE SOUSA.

Sousa Dias (de Macedo), António de (b Lisbon, 13 Nov 1959). Portuguese composer. He has a background that includes studies in jazz, electronics, telecommunications, musicology and computer programming, in addition to his studies in composition at the Lisbon Conservatory with Capdeville and at the University of Paris VIII with Horacio Vaggione. He has had close connections with music theatre, as a member of the groups ColecViva and Opus Sic (together with Capdeville). He has written many scores for the cinema. He has been appointed to teach composition and electro-acoustics at the Escola Superior de Música in Lisbon, of which he is also sub-director (1995–2001).

His composition owes much to his involvement with cinema and music theatre even when the works are not theatrical themselves. Aesthetically, he is much influenced by the ideas of Capdeville: his music embraces a wide range of stylistic references and focusses greatly on the dramatic and rhetorical function of the music rather than its grammatical structure.

WORKS
(selective list)

Dramatic (film scores unless otherwise stated): Os abismos da meia-noite, 1984; Os emissários de Khâlom, 1987; Transparências em prata, 1988; A maldição de Marialva, 1989; Estilhaços (incid music), 1989; Chá forte com Limão, 1993; . . . há dois ou . . . (music theatre piece), 1998

Chbr and solo inst: . . . para dois pianos no.1, 2 pf, 1986; O jardim das chuvas de todo o sempre, 9 insts, 1991; . . . para dois pianos no.2, 2 pf, 5 other insts, 1992; 5 circunstâncias, cl, pf, 1995; Komm, tanz mit mir!, 5 insts, 1997; Le blanc souci de notre toile, ob, vc, 1998; . . . uma sombra também, cl, live electronics, 1999

Tape: Mise en page, 1990; Gamanço no.1, 1997; Natureza morta com ruídos de sala, efeitos especiais e claquete, 1997; Estranho movimento para um dia como o de hoje, 2000

CHRISTOPHER BOCHMANN

Sousaphone. A type of bass tuba used mainly in marching bands, named after John Philip Sousa (1854–1932). It is distinguished from the rest of the tuba family by its shape and widely flaring bell (see illustration). Like the HELICON it encircles the player, resting on the left shoulder and passing under the right arm, with the bell pointing forward above the player's head. It is especially popular in America but is also used in some European bands; in the 1920s it sometimes appeared in jazz groups. Like upright band tubas, sousaphones are pitched in E♭ and B♭ and are non-transposing instruments. Most have three valves; some have a fourth valve that lowers the pitch by a 4th. The fundamental notes are E♭′ and B♭″.

The earliest sousaphones, made to Sousa's specifications in the 1890s, had the bell pointed upright and (as described in Sousa's autobiography, Marching Along, Boston, 1928) 'projected the sound upward and mushroomed it over the entire band and audience' (see BRASS BAND, fig.3). This model, nicknamed 'the rain-catcher', never became popular, though Sousa used it in his concert band, usually in combination with upright tubas. At least one manufacturer (H.N. White of Cleveland, Ohio) advertised 'bell-up' sousaphones as late as 1924, although by this time the bell-forward form, first made by the C.G. Conn Co. about 1908, was standard in college and marching bands. From the early 1960s manufacturers such as Conn and the Selmer Co. constructed sousaphones with fibreglass bodies and brass valves and fittings, resulting in an instrument that is lighter and less susceptible to denting.

The question of who built the first sousaphone was for many years part of an intense rivalry between the J.W. Pepper and C.G. Conn companies, both of which claimed credit for the instrument. Sousa himself recalled, in an interview published in the Christian Science Monitor of 30 August 1922, that while he was still conductor of the Marine Corps Band (i.e. before August 1892) he suggested the instrument to J.W. Pepper of Philadelphia, who made and named the first sousaphone. An instrument believed to be the first sousaphone – made by Pepper and dated 1893 – came to light in 1992. An 1896 issue of the Musical Times and Band Journal, which was published by Pepper, names Herman Conrad as 'Sousaphone, Sousa's Band', possibly the first use of this term in print. By 1898 the Conn Co. had built its own sousaphone and had given it, along with other Conn-made instruments, to Sousa for use in his band. The Conn sousaphone subsequently became the more commercially successful instrument.

Bell-forward sousaphone in E♭ by Buescher, from a Grossman Music Co. catalogue, Cleveland, Ohio, 1935

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Musical Times and Band Journal, xiv 159 (1896)
H.I.B.: 'Sousaphone Seen as Possible Substitute for Upright Tuba', Christian Science Monitor (30 August 1922), 4
J.P. Sousa: Marching Along (Boston, 1928)
C. Bevan: The Tuba Family (London, 1978)
P. Bierley: Letter, TUBA Journal, xxi/2 (1993–4), 4–5

CAROLYN BRYANT (with LLOYD P. FARRAR)

Sousedská (Cz.: 'neighbourly'). A slow Czech couple-dance in triple time, one of the constituent dances of the BESEDA. It is believed to be of folk origin, first occurring in the 1830s in the Czech countryside at dance parties known as 'sousedské zábavy' ('neighbourly entertainments'), though it was soon taken into the town dance repertory. It is a type of slow ländler and is known also under a variety of more graphic names such as zdlouha ('slowly'), šoupaná and vláčná (both 'dragging'). Older types of the sousedská had more in common with the minuet, serving the function of a ceremonial wedding dance. The dance is known to many different tunes and texts, including folk texts (e.g. K.J. Erben: Nápěvy prostonárodních písní českých, 1862, nos.33, 380, 393, 527) and was often extended by the insertion of a trio. Stylizations of the sousedská occur relatively frequently in Czech art music. Smetana included a named sousedská in his České tance (1879) and Suk wrote a late Sousedská for small ensemble (1935), but there are many sousedská-type movements elsewhere, for example in Dvořák's Česká suita (1879), Slavonic Dances nos.6 and 16 (1878–86) and in the scherzo of his Ninth Symphony (1893), in J.B. Foerster's operas Debora (1893) and Eva (1899) and in his Wind Quintet (1909), and in works by Křička and Martinů.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

SČHK (H. Laudová, J. Trojan) [incl. further bibliography]
A. Waldau [J. Jarosch]: Böhmische Nationaltänze: eine Culturstudie, i (Prague, 1859), 24–5
C.P.: 'Sousedská', Ottův slovník naučný [Otto's encyclopedia], xxii (Prague, 1905)
Z. Nejedlý: Bedřich Smetana, iv (Prague, 2/1951), 341–2, 356–7

JOHN TYRRELL

Souster, Tim(othy Andrew James) (b Bletchley, Bucks., 29 Jan 1943; d Cambridge, 1 March 1994). English composer. He studied music under Rose, Lumsden, Wellesz and Bennett at Oxford (BA 1964, BMus 1965), but was much more influenced by Stockhausen's courses at Darmstadt in 1964. As a BBC producer (1965–7) he worked with Berio, Feldman, Henze, Stockhausen and others, while beginning to make a name for himself as a composer and trenchant observer of contemporary music. He was then composer-in-residence at King's College, Cambridge (1969–71), and at the beginning of his time there founded the live electronic ensemble Intermodulation with Roger Smalley and others. Many of his works of the next few years were conceived for this group, with which he remained associated while based in Germany: first as Stockhausen's assistant at the Hochschule für Musik, Cologne (1971–3), then in Berlin. In 1975 he took up a research fellowship at Keele University. Intermodulation disbanded the next year, and he briefly formed a new group, 0dB, to pursue connections with rock music. In 1978 he went to California, where he began a work that marked an abrupt shift to non-electronic chamber music and rhapsodic consonance: the Sonata for cello, piano and wind. He returned to England in 1980 and settled again in Cambridge, where he established his own electronic studio to produce concert works and music for TV, in which field he had notable success: his contribution to The Green Man won the British Association of Film and Television award for the best TV music of 1990. Varied as his music is in style, there runs through it a strong feeling for melody (so that Spectral, for instance, is not so far from the Sonata) and an equally strong sense of music as social and political action. Souster wrote extensively on music including the entry 'Great Britain: since 1945' in the Dictionary of Contemporary Music, ed. J. Vinton (New York, 1973).

WORKS
(selective list)

Songs of Three Seasons, S, va, 1965; Poem in Depression at Wei Village, S, fl, va, vc, pf, 1965; Parallels, 2 perc, 1965–6; 2 Choruses, SSATTBB, 1966; Pf Piece no.1, 1966; Study, org, 1966; Metropolitan Games, pf 4 hands, 1967; Kyrie March, children's chorus, perc, pf, 1968; Aubade, 2 perfs, 1969; Titus Groan Music, wind qnt, 1969; Chinese Whispers, 4–8 elec players, 1970; Triple Music II, 3 orch, 1970, rev. 1974; Waste Land Music, s sax, elec org, pf, synth, 1970; Spectral, va, 2–3 elec players, 1972; Break, text for improvisation, 1974; Song of an Average City, small orch, tape, 1974

World Music, 4 elec players, tape, 1974, rev. 8 elec players, tape, 1980; Zorna, s sax, elecs, 3 drummers, 1974; Afghan Amplitudes, 2 elec kbds, perc, 1976; Arcane Artefact, elec kbd, mar/vib, perc, tape, 1976; The Music Room, trbn, tape, 1976; Song, elec kbd, pf, perc, tape, 1977; Arboreal Antecendents, 2 elec kbds, perc, tape, 1977–8; Driftwood Cortège, tape, 1978; Sonata, vc, pf, 7 wind, perc, 1978–9; Equalisation, brass qnt, elecs, 1980; Mareas, 4 amp vv, tape, 1981; The Transistor Radio of St Narcissus, flugelhn, elecs, 1982–3; Curtain of Light, metal perc, tape, 1984; Paws 3D, orch, 1984

Le souvenir de Maurice Ravel, fl, ob, cl, vn, va, vc, pf, 1985; Hambledon Hill, amp str qt, tape, 1985; Work, pf, elecs, 1985; Rabbit Heaven, brass qnt, perc, 1986; Tpt Conc., tpt, orch, elecs, 1988; Mekong Music, fl, gui, 1988; Echoes, brass band, elecs, 1990; Monsoon, nar, fl, vc, kbds, tabla, sitar, tape, 1992; La marche, brass qnt, 1993

Most works are unpubd

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. Thompson: 'Tim Souster's "Titus Groan Music"', Tempo, no.89 (1969), 21–2
P. Britton: 'Tim Souster's "Triple Music II"', Music and Musicians, xviii/12 (1969–70), 22–3
'Tim Souster Writes about his New Compositions for Three Orchestras "Triple Music II"', The Listener, lxxxiv (1970), 222 only
M. Nyman: '"Song of an Average City" – Tim Souster's Answer to Delius', The Listener, xcii (1974), 312

PAUL GRIFFITHS

Souterliedekens (Dut. from souter: 'psalter' and liedekens: 'songs'). Name given to the first complete metrical Dutch translation of the psalms. The text of this translation is traditionally (and probably rightly) ascribed to the Utrecht nobleman Willem van Zuylen van Nyevelt. The souterliedekens were published with melodies for all the psalms (and a few canticles) in 1540 by the Antwerp printer Symon Cock. Because Cock corrected his work during the print run there are differences among the extant copies; these are often erroneously thought to have originated from different editions. The melodies were drawn from various sources, such as Dutch folksongs, French chansons and Gregorian chant. Since the melodies of songs from the first half of the 16th century were rarely notated, the collection is an indispensable source for Dutch folksong of the period. While the rhyming of the psalm texts, which draw heavily on the 'heretical' Bible translations by Jacob van Liesveld (1526) and Willem Vorsterman (1528), may itself be seen as a reformatory act, the whole volume was set up in such a way that it could be acceptable and useful to Catholics as well as to Protestants: the corresponding Vulgate verses were printed in the margin and the edition was provided with a royal privilege. The collection was probably intended for the various religious communities of the Netherlands in the mid-16th century in a non-exclusive way. Subsequent editions of the souterliedekens were issued in Antwerp in 1559, 1564–6 and 1584, times of relative freedom in religious matters.

During the 1550s and 60s the souterliedekens were set polyphonically three times, by Clemens non Papa (four volumes, 1556–7; ed. in CMM, iv, 1953), Gherardus Mes (four volumes, 1561) and Cornelis Buscop (one volume with 50 pieces, 1568; ed. in UVNM, xxii, 1899). Clemens's settings are three-part, in polyphonic style, with the melody in the tenor voice. Mes's settings are four-part, use various homophonic and polyphonic styles and show greater variety in the treatment of the melodies: some settings use them as cantus firmi, others paraphrase them or cite only the incipits and still others do not use them at all. Buscop's settings are in motet style and do not use the traditional melodies. Although difficult to prove, there is evidence of Protestant leanings in all these polyphonic settings: Clemens also set Marot's table prayers, Mes's settings were published by Susato shortly after his move to northern Alkmaar, and Buscop's settings were dedicated to the Protestant Duke Erich of Brunswick-Lüneburg.

During the second half of the 16th century the souterliedekens were increasingly viewed as a Protestant metrical psalter. They were prohibited in the Spanish Netherlands and sung by Calvinist Protestants, especially by the Mennonites in the north. Editions appeared in Kampen (1562), Utrecht (1598–1613) and Amsterdam (1613). Their impact on Dutch song, sacred and secular, was considerable, as can be seen from the many times their melodies were cited for Protestant religious songs in the Low Countries. They were never accepted as the official metrical psalter, however, Petrus Dathenus's translation of the Genevan psalter taking on that role soon after its publication in 1566. The souterliedekens became obsolete everywhere in the Netherlands after about 1620. See also PSALMS, METRICAL, §II, 4.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

D.F. Scheurleer: De Souterliedekens: bijdrage tot de geschiedenis der oudste Nederlandsche psalmberijming (Leiden, 1898/R)

F. van Duyse: Het oude Nederlandsche lied (The Hague, 1903–8)

E. Mincoff-Marriage: Souterliedekens: een Nederlandsch psalmboek van 1540 met de oorspronkelijke volksliederen die bij de melodieën behooren (The Hague, 1922/*R*1939 as Zestiende-eeuwsche Dietsche Volksliedies)

A. Averkamp: 'De Souterliedekens', TVNM, xii/2 (1927), 97–101

K.P. Bernet Kempers: 'Die "Souterliedekens" des Jacobus Clemens non Papa', TVNM, xii/4 (1928), 261–8; xiii/1 (1929), 29–43; xiii/2 (1929), 126–51

H.A. Bruinsma: The 'Souterliedekens' and its Relation to Psalmody in the Netherlands (diss., U. of Michigan, 1949)

S.J. Lenselink: De Nederlandse psalmberijmingen van de Souterliedekens tot Datheen (Assen, 1959, 2/1983)

A.G. Soeting: 'De "Souterliedekens" en hun meerstemmige zettingen: de eerste Nederlandse psalmberijming', Eredienst, xvii (1983), 49–60

J. van Biezen and M. Veldhuyzen, eds.: Introduction to Souterliedekens 1540 (Buren, 1984)

R.A. Leaver: 'Goostly psalmes and spirituall songes': English and Dutch Metrical Psalms from Coverdale to Utenhove 1535–1566 (Oxford, 1991)

L.P. Grijp: 'De fascinatie van de Souterliedekens', Tijdschrift voor Oude Muziek, ix (1994), 7–10

L.P. Grijp: 'The Souterliedekens by Gherardus Mes (1561), an Enigmatic Pupil of Clemens non Papa, and Popular Song of the Mid-Sixteenth Century', From Ciconia to Sweelinck: Donum natalicum Willem Elders, ed. A. Clement and E. Jas (Amsterdam, 1994), 245–54

J.W. Bonda: De meerstemmige Nederlandse liederen van de vijftiende en zestiende eeuw (Hilversum, 1996)

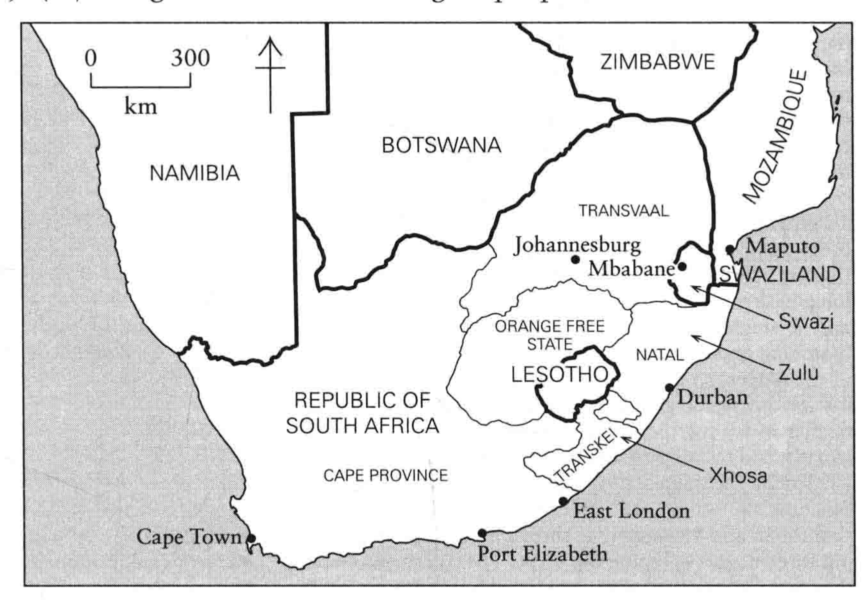
RUDOLF RASCH

South Africa, Republic of. Country in Southern Africa. With an area of 1,224,691 km², it occupies the southernmost tip of the continent, bordered by Namibia, Botswana and Zimbabwe to the north and by Swaziland and Mozambique to the north-east (fig.1). LESOTHO is an independent enclave in the mountains in the east of the country. In the north-west is the vast Kalahani desert, where most of the remaining Bushmen (San) peoples (see BUSHMAN MUSIC), the earliest inhabitants of the region, and the Khoikhoi (Hottentot) peoples live (see KHOIKHOI MUSIC).

South Africa was colonized by the Dutch in 1652 and also by the British in the 19th century; it became a dominion within the British Empire in 1910 and an independent republic in 1961. Although less than 11% of the total population of 46·26 million (2000 estimate) are whites, of European descent, a system of apartheid or segregation, which deprived blacks, Coloureds (mixed race) and Asians of constitutional equality (though they represent 77%, 9% and 3% of the population respectively), became official policy when the 1948 elections swept Afrikaners to political power. Only in 1989 did apartheid restrictions begin to be removed. In 1993 parliament approved a Transitional Constitution, which finally paved the way for a new multi-racial parliament (elected in April 1994).

I. Indigenous music. II. European traditions. III. Popular styles and cultural fusion.

I. Indigenous music



1. Nguni music: (i) General background (ii) Main musical features (iii) Musical instruments (iv) Tonality (v) Music and society (vi) Western influence and modern developments. 2. Sotho/Tswana music: (i) Sotho music (ii) Tswana music. 3. Venda music: (i) Musical concepts (ii) Music and society (iii) Musical structure (iv) Modern developments. 4. Tsonga music: (i) Musical instruments (ii) Vocal music (iii) Modern developments.

1. NGUNI MUSIC. Nguni is the name applied collectively to the Zulu, Swazi and Xhosa peoples of south-eastern Africa, the largest indigenous group in the country. Their languages and cultures are closely related, and their traditional music is more vocal than instrumental, polyphonic dance-songs being particularly important. About 7,000,000 Nguni live in the Republic of South Africa and in Swaziland; offshoots, who emigrated early in the 19th century, are the Ndebele of ZIMBABWE and the Ngoni of Malawi and Zambia (see MALAWI, §1).

(i) General background. People resembling the Xhosa who live in the Eastern Cape province and Transkei were encountered there in the 16th century by shipwrecked Portuguese seamen. Early in the 19th century, the military leader Shaka amalgamated various Nguni clans to form the powerful Zulu nation in Natal and kwaZulu. At about the same time, the Swazi nation became established in Swaziland. Nguni languages belong within the Bantu language family, but they show certain features adopted from the neighbouring Khoikhoi (or Hottentots, now almost extinct), most notably in their use of three 'click' consonants, written as 'c', 'q' and 'x'. As with other Bantu languages, speech-tones influence the shape of vocal melody. A characteristic of the Nguni that is rare elsewhere in Africa (but present in Chinese and German) is the pitch-lowering effect of voiced consonants, which in song often produces rising on-glides.

As with other southern Bantu peoples, the traditional economy of the Nguni is composite; it comprises cattle-rearing, the monopoly of men and boys, and agriculture, which is women's work. Men used also to do a certain amount of hunting. Since the early 19th century, with the advent of missionaries and settlers, the Nguni have increasingly come under Western influence. Indigenous culture survives only sporadically in some of the remoter rural areas.

(ii) Main musical features. Strange as it may seem for an African people, the Nguni have no history of drums or percussion ensembles as a basis for their communal dancing. Dancers always sang their own dance music, and although ankle rattles and hand-clapping were sometimes added, the basis of their collective music-making was the unaccompanied dance-song. War-shields were sometimes used percussively by warriors in earlier days, and oxhides were beaten at Xhosa boys' initiation ceremonies. Drums were not, however, entirely unknown. Medicine men sometimes used them, and a type of friction drum was employed at girls' coming-of-age ceremonies among the Zulu. Improvised drums and wooden clappers are now used in certain neo-traditional art forms, such as modern Zulu ingoma dancing. Essentially, however, it is clear that in the past the Nguni have specialized in developing vocal polyphony rather than instrumental ensembles or rhythmic complexity.

1. Map of South Africa

A striking feature of traditional Nguni choral dance-songs is the principle of non-simultaneous entry of voice parts, and the intricacy of their polyphonic interaction. There are always at least two voice parts with different starting-points; their phrases frequently overlap, but there is usually no common cadence point where the parts achieve a combined resolution. Instead, each voice returns to its starting-point as in a round (though the parts are not identical), and the process is continually repeated. Variations commonly occur in the leading voice part, while the chorus maintains a constant ostinato. A very simple two-part illustration (without variations in the leading voice part) is provided in ex.1; this shows a work-song sung by a trench-digging team in Smith Street, Durban, in 1964. The alignment of the interacting parts is fundamental in such music. This concept is felt so intrinsically that an individual singer, if asked to demonstrate a traditional choral song, will not merely render a single voice part but will always attempt to present the essentials of at least two parts, the leader and the chorus, by jumping from one to the other whenever a new phrase entry is due.

(iii) Musical instruments. The most comprehensive survey of traditional Nguni instruments was conducted by Percival Kirby in 1934. Although instruments played little or no part in the traditional communal music of the Nguni, they were certainly used in individual music-making. Flutes and musical bows of several different types were formerly very common. Gourd-resonated musical bows were used for self-accompaniment in solo singing, where the instrument assumed the role of a chorus by supplying an ostinato against which the singer improvised an offset leading part. Many surviving choral songs are said to have been composed in this way. Individual music-making was conceived chiefly as a form of self-expression, not as entertainment for an audience. This concept still persists among rural migrants who play guitars, concertinas or harmonicas for personal enjoyment while walking in the street. To some extent, traditional Nguni musical principles and stylistic features are effectively expressed through such non-African instruments.

Although not strictly musical in function, side-blown animal horns were used by men, mainly for signalling. The Zulu also occasionally used an end-blown bamboo trumpet with oxhorn bell, yielding two or more notes. Several types of small whistle were used, mainly in hunting and in doctoring. Men and boys played flutes, which were mainly associated with cattle-herding. The Zulu umtshingo, a long, obliquely held flute without finger-holes, was sounded by shaping the tongue to serve as an air channel. The 4th to 12th partials of the harmonic series were produced through overblowing and by alternately stopping and unstopping the end with a finger. The making and playing of these flutes, and of the smaller igemfe, was formerly forbidden among the Zulu until the time of the annual umkhosi, the festival of the first fruits. The igemfe was used for duet playing, two flutes being tuned about a semitone apart.

Several types of mouth-resonated musical bow were used for solo playing, but these are now rarely found. They include the Xhosa inkinge, and the Zulu isithontolo shown in fig.2. The stave is held against the mouth and the string plucked with a finger or plectrum or, in the case of one type of instrument, sounded by means of a friction-stick. To produce a melody, different harmonics, usually the 3rd to 6th partials from two or three fundamentals, are selectively resonated by varying the shape of the mouth as in playing the jew's harp. The commercial jew's harp has in fact become popular as a substitute for the bow. Another variety of mouth bow, the ugwala or unkwindi, was a 'stringed wind' instrument (apparently derived from the GORA of the Khoikhoi), sounded by blowing on a piece of quill that connected the string to the stave.

In earlier days, the classical instrument for self-accompaniment in solo singing was a gourd-resonated bow, the Zulu ugubhu, Swazi ligubhu or Xhosa uhadi (fig.3*a*). This is a large musical bow, about 1·5 metres long, with a gourd-resonator attached near the lower end, and a single undivided string struck with a piece of thatching grass. The instrument is held vertically in front of the player, so that the circular hole in the gourd faces his left breast or shoulder and can be moved closer or farther away for the selective resonation of harmonics, usually 2nd to 5th partials. Besides the fundamental note yielded by the open string, a second note is obtained by pinching the string near its lower end between the left thumbnail and forefinger, as shown in fig.3*a*, the remaining three fingers gripping the stave. The interval between the open and stopped notes produced by Xhosa players is usually roughly a whole tone; the outstanding Zulu musician, Princess Constance Magogo kaDinuzulu, uses a semitone varying from 90 to 150 cents on different occasions; both sizes of interval have been noted among Swazi players. Selectively resonated harmonics from the two fundamentals, though relatively faint, are used melodically as a vocal accompaniment. The resultant hexatonic scales obtained from whole-tone and semitone stopping are shown in ex.2; though the open-string fundamental is shown as C, the tuning is often as much as a 5th lower, and the entire series is transposed accordingly.

2. Zulu isithontolo (mouth-resonated musical bow)

A second type of gourd bow, the Zulu umakhweyana and the Swazi makhweyane, reputedly borrowed from the Tsonga people of Mozambique early in the 19th century, largely displaced the Zulu ugubhu and the Swazi ligubhu but was not adopted by the Xhosa. This instrument, shown in fig.3*b*, differs from the earlier type in that the gourd-resonator is slightly smaller and mounted near the centre of the stave instead of at the bottom. In addition, the string is tied back by a wire loop or brace attached to the resonator, so that two open notes are obtainable, one from each segment of the string. These notes are tuned anything from a whole tone to a minor 3rd apart, and a third fundamental, usually a semitone higher, can be produced by stopping with a knuckle the lower segment of the string below the restraining loop. This stopped note has a duller sound, however, and is not always used. Selectively resonated harmonics are used melodically in the same way as on unbraced gourd bows. The notes available from the braced gourd bow, when the two segments of the string are tuned a whole tone apart, are shown in ex.3. Some players may transpose the entire series as much as a minor 3rd higher.

Ex.1 Southern Zulu work song (♩ = 104–16) (see Rycroft, 1967)

(iv) Tonality. There is considerable diversity in the scale systems used by different Nguni peoples and also within those used by single language communities. Broadly speaking, perfect 4ths and 5ths appear to be important structural intervals. A few ancient Zulu dance-songs have only three notes, in the descending sequence C–G–F, with the octaves of one or more of these notes. But some apparently older Zulu songs use pentatonic and hexatonic modes containing two semitone intervals. In these, the Ex.2 Selectively resonated harmonics on Nguni unbraced gourd bows (see Rycroft, 1969)

(a) Whole-tone stopping on the Xhosa uhadi

(b) Semitone stopping on the Zulu ugubhu

tonality and chord structure appear to be based on two contrasting triads with roots roughly a semitone apart; this is the same interval that occurs between the roots produced on the ugubhu bow. Both in ugubhu bow songs and in many Zulu and Swazi choral songs, descending a b

3. Gourd-resonated musical bows: (a) Zulu ugubhu; (b) Zulu umakhweyana

Ex.3 Notes obtainable on the braced gourd bow: the Zulu umakhweyana and the Swazi makhweyane.

hexatonic modes with the notes A♭–G–F–E–D♭–C are to be found, based on the contrasting triads C–E–G and D♭–F–A♭. The two triads, based on the roots C and D♭, are used in a contrasting manner. In many songs, the middle note of one triad is omitted, resulting in a pentatonic mode with two semitone intervals. The Swazi most commonly omit the E, and the Zulu often omit the F, while sometimes rendering the E as E♭. The resultant A♭–E♭–D♭ structure then resembles the ancient Zulu C–G–F scale.

The Xhosa, and also Zulu-speakers in southern Natal, most frequently use whole-tone root progressions as typified in the C and D roots of the uhadi bow. Descending hexatonic modes comprising notes from the C and D triads are very common, as in A–G–F♯–E–D–C–(A); the F♯ may be omitted, resulting in the common pentatonic. However, in the latter case, root progressions between C and D still function, and Nguni pentatonism therefore differs from the purely melodic use of the pentatonic found in many other parts of the world. Major and minor 3rds and 6ths quite often occur as chordal intervals in Nguni polyphonic songs, in addition to the more common 4ths, 5ths and octaves (or unisons), though the former are more transitory than the perfect intervals. But no functional hierarchy of discords and concords seems to operate consistently. Owing to offset phrasing between the voices, there is usually no collective resolution or cadence; instead, the artistic intention is possibly to maintain an ever-changing balance between the constituents, through chordal contrast as well as by other means.

(v) Music and society. Where traditional ways of life remain relatively intact among the Nguni, music plays an important role for the individual and the community. There are songs for different age-groups, related to different activities and occasions. Many songs are directly functional, either regulating physical actions, as in dancing or a collective task, or being educative by regulating behaviour; they may express group ideas or popular or personal opinion, they may be critical of authority (permissible in song), or they may serve as an essential constituent of a ceremony or social event.

Outstanding composers or performers are admired, but there are no professional musicians. Nearest to being a professional in earlier times was the imbongi, the court praise-poet who recited the praises of the king or chief and his ancestors at important functions. Though izibongo, Zulu praise-poetry, calls for a style of delivery that has melodic features, it is regarded as an art form in its own right and does not fall within the category of vocal music. The traditional Zulu word for singing is ukuhlabelela, from the verb hlabelela, 'to sing'. However, this term does not exactly match the Western concept of singing; besides excluding izibongo, which to Western ears often resembles a form of praise-song, it includes a form of 'choral recitation'. This occurs, for example, in several versions of the Zulu recreational isigekle dance. An exaggerated 'sing-song' rise and fall of pitch, without exact musical notes, is used, but there is a regular metre, and this seems to be a more important criterion for defining ukuhlabelela than the melodic use of fixed pitch values. Vocal phrasing in Nguni songs often flouts a regular metre, rather than expressing it directly, and word-stresses frequently do not coincide with the physical downbeat of the dance-step or other movements. Consequently, it can be entirely misleading to analyse songs without taking accompanying physical movements into account.

In traditional Nguni society, choral dance music provides the essential basis of orderly social interaction at important ceremonies. Rhythm is always given physical expression through simultaneous actions by the singers themselves, in the form of dance-steps, gestures or the wielding of real or symbolic weapons, implements or regalia. These actions are normally considered inseparable from the music; music and movement are blended to produce an ultimate form of expression involving the complete human being interacting with others of his group. The performance may also be felt to be inseparable from the context of a particular ceremony, and the ceremony to be essentially a part of some sacred or seasonal event, like the impressive royal annual incwala ceremony of Swaziland. Certain incwala dance-songs are forbidden at any other time.

The corresponding Zulu royal ceremony of the first fruits, the umkhosi or ukweshwama, has been re-activated, and British and Zulu military history is in the process of being thoroughly revised. The Swazi incwala ceremony appears to be a mass dramatization of national solidarity under their priest-king, the Ingwenyama or Lion, although the participants are grouped separately according to lineage, regiment, age and sex. An onlooker gains the impression of a vast 'real-life' opera or dramatic pageant, for which no audience is intended. The solemn dance-songs are essentially a performer's art form, a means of collective expression, with national and religious motivation. Their full appreciation requires not a passive audience but direct experience that can be gained only through active participation.

In contrast to the overall solidarity demonstrated in national ceremonies, there is often a strong element of rivalry at smaller social gatherings, parties and weddings, reflecting group differentiation on the basis of locality, family, age or sex. The central feature of a wedding, held at the bridegroom's home, is an elaborate programme of dances. As if expressing artistically the essential two-family contractual basis of marriage, the bride's party and that of the groom dance in turn, quite separately, each group seeking to outdo the other and to assert themselves as distinctive and worthy of social recognition.

(vi) Western influence and modern developments. Through European contact during the past century and a half, many Western musical elements and ideas have been adopted by the Nguni. Traditional instruments are almost extinct, surviving only in some of the remoter rural areas. Traditional Nguni folk music survives only where social life retains a traditional basis. For the past century or more, missionaries and teachers have greatly influenced musical taste. A Zulu hymnbook with European tunes was printed in 1862. The first Xhosa songbook, Amaculo aseLovedale ('Songs of Lovedale'), appeared in 1884. The tonic sol-fa system was widely taught, and traditional music was increasingly displaced by Western choral music, sacred and secular. Educated Africans also began composing pieces for four-part choir with vernacular words. Outstanding Xhosa pioneers in this field were the Rev. John Knox Bokwe (1855–1922) and Benjamin John Peter Tyamzashe (b 1890); and among the Zulu, Reuben Tholakele Caluza (b 1895) and Alfred Assegai Kumalo (1879–1966). A well-known Xhosa hymn, Nkosi Sikelel' iAfrika ('God bless Africa'), composed in 1897 by the Rev. Enoch Sontonga, is now the national anthem of South Africa; its tune was also adopted for the national anthems of Tanzania and Zambia.

Several Xhosa composers have excelled in musical comedy. Todd Thozamile Matshikiza (1921–68) composed the music for two stage productions, King Kong (libretto by H. Bloom) and Mkhumbane (libretto by Alan Paton). After a successful tour in South Africa, King Kong was staged in London in 1960–61. Since that time, the production of African musico-dramatic presentations (mostly with English words) has been growing steadily. A notable artist in this field is Gibson Mtutuzeli Kente (b 1932), who combines the roles of playwright, composer, director and producer. His first four musical plays were Lifa, Manana the Jazz Prophet, Sikalo and Zwi.

Nguni experimentation with Western musical forms began in the late 1600s with the first settlement of Europeans in the Cape. By the 1860s, the mining and manufacturing industries in South Africa had begun to draw heavily on a system of migrant labour, absorbing many thousands of men into emerging urban centres. Muff Andersson (p.38) suggests that by 1914 gramophones and records were sold from ox-carts by the MacKay brothers, agents of the London-based company His Master's Voice, along with European instruments such as the guitar, concertina, violin and piano. Hybrid musical styles began to emerge in urban shebeens (illegal drinking houses), migrant worker hostels and on the streets, exhibiting a creative blend of traditional forms and newly adopted instrumentations and styles. The steady movement of people to and from the urban centres led to the dissolution of distinct rural and urban social, economic and cultural characteristics. Musical performances thus reflect networks of production and reproduction spanning town and countryside (Coplan, 372).

Although there is a diversity of Swazi and Zhosa performing practices, researchers and the music industry have documented and recorded Zulu music more than that of any other South African cultural group. Images of Zulu have circulated throughout the world since the British encountered Zulu armies in battle in the 1880s, and this may account for the historical predominance of Zulu-related research and entertainment interest.

Although the guitar was most likely introduced to the KwaZulu Natal region as a trade item by Portuguese or Arab sailors as early as the 16th century (Kaye, 351), it became associated with migrancy and an urban identity in the early 1900s. Zulu guitarists localized their instruments by returning them, transposing onto them a rapid plucking style, cyclical form and contrasting whole-tone progressions of traditional umakhweyana gourd bow performing practice (Rycroft, 1977). The guitar came to be associated with the wandering solo performer known as a MASKANDA, a word derived from the Afrikaans word musikant which means 'musician'. Maskanda also refers to a particular musical structure. The first maskanda musician to record commercially in the 1960s was John Bhengu, a highly skilled Zulu guitarist renowned for his ukupika (plucking) style (Allingham, p.385). Since solo acoustic guitar playing was considered to have limited audience appeal, Bhengu switched from acoustic to electric guitar and recorded with full band and backing vocals. He was marketed under the name Phuzushukela ('sugar drinker'), and his upbeat dance style set the tone for many electric maskanda bands. Although maskanda continues to be associated with a rural Zulu identity, it has also become highly commercial, with radio and television programmes devoted to the genre, nationwide competitions, and the recent development of women professional performers.

ISICATHAMIYA, a male a cappella musical genre developed by Zulu migrant workers at the turn of the 20th century, along with the elaborate network of weekly competitions that helps to define the genre, provides a space within which black South Africans have been able to reflect and act on their fractured world (Erlmann, p.10).

Zulu ingoma dances, once associated with 'tribal' dance competitions on the Witwatersrand gold mines, and linked to the political history and ideology of the apartheid government, are now fostered in the schools, and performed at meetings of independent trade unions and important state functions. Ingoma dance troupes perform at weekends in competitions organized at the hostels and mines, and in staged musicals such as the revived IpNtombi. The post-1994 democratic South Africa has inspired the celebration of ethnic identities and cultural roots and has led to the re-emergence of traditional performing practices, values and beliefs, providing the basis for ethnically based social programmes and political parties (Meintjes, p.9).

2. SOTHO/TSWANA MUSIC. A primary difference between Sotho and Tswana music and that of Nguni peoples of South Africa and Swaziland is the inclusion of elements of praise in vocal music. It has been suggested that the quicker rhythms and tempos of the Sotho and Tswana language groups, when compared to Nguni types (i.e. siSwati and Zulu), contributes to the ease in performance of rapid, recitative-like praise-songs that recount historical events or extol the lives of famous individuals or families. Such praise-singing is sometimes accompanied by choral singing in the background, but more often it interrupts the choral singing (Huskisson, 1982, 374).

(i) Sotho music. Contemporary Sotho music reflects the continuing modernization and development taking place in southern Africa. The co-extensive nature of old and new in musical performance testifies to the legitimacy of studying both traditional and newer musical aspects of Sotho expressive culture.

Sotho vocal music is essentially pentatonic and performed in call-and-response form. The response performed by a group usually remains static, while the call of an individual is flexible; leaders are often selected for the ability to manipulate words. Older styles of vocal performance included Sotho men performing mohobelo songs and mokorotlo songs, which include praising. Men often perform such songs, which are associated with regiments in khaki pants and white shoes, forming a 'long

L-shaped line, stamping their feet in periodic rhythmic emphasis, at the same time bringing the knobkerry sticks, held aloft in the dance, down to the level of the body' (Huskisson, 375).

Praise-singing is also an aspect of Sotho women's songs, such as the mokgibo knee dance-song. Women kneel on the ground in a semicircle during these call-and-response songs and perform an elaborate dance with movements in which the knees are raised and lowered. Ululation and hand-clapping accompany the singing. Another type of song is the male diphotha, a step-dance performed in gumboots that are struck together and slapped with the hands in a synchronized rhythm to a series of 'step' movements. The diphotha is typically accompanied by a concertina.

Sotho girls perform call-and-response lialolo and metjekong dance-songs that accompany simple movements; many of the girls stand and clap, while others dance. Clapping in polyrhythms is a typical feature of the mokokopelo dance-song performance style of Sotho women. Sotho boys perform lengae initiation songs in a style characteristic of Sotho men; the songs rely on the production of a deep bass melodic line (Huskisson, 376).

(ii) Tswana music. The Tswana occupy the region of the eastern Transvaal in South Africa and Botswana. Tswana vocal music (dipina) is classified according to its function within a specific social institution.

Music of Tswana boys' initiation rituals (moama) is one such category. According to Johnston, in bowera circumcision schools, initiates spend a considerable amount of time memorizing songs under the supervision of a musician specialist (nake) (Johnston, 890). Initiates also undergo 'hazing' during dances such as the secho whipping dance. Completion of the circumcision is marked by a ceremonial procession (thalalagae) before the Tswana boys return to their village.

Young Tswana girls participate in a boyale puberty school, where music and dance also play an integral role. One prominent dance is radikgaratlane, in which a women is masked and disguised as a god, wearing clay horns, a symbol of virility. Upon the completion of the all-night thojane, a ceremonial dance, each young girl is received as ready for marriage and greeted upon return to her family with special megolokwane songs of return.

Music is also featured at the traditional wedding feast, where the setapa dance is performed by guests. In addition, exorcists frequently require their audiences to sing and clap during curing ceremonies. Burial ceremonies (magoga) also involve music, as do go rapelela metsi rain rituals. Children's vocal music includes pinapalo counting rhymes, tlhaletso nursery rhymes, tshameko ya pina singing games and tsirimanya jingles. Adult work-songs and beer-drinking songs also contribute to the category of Tswana vocal music.

Tswana communal vocal music is often related to the annual agricultural cycle; the post-harvest season usually involves more musical activity, such as the performances of songs and dances during beer drinking. These seasons are outlined by Johnston as follows:

Letlhafula (autumn): a time for hoeing songs and work-party songs
Mariga (winter): a time for children's fireside story-songs
Dikgakologo (spring): a time when women and children chase birds from crops by singing lustily in the fields
Selemo (summer): a time for beer-brewing, beer-songs and beer-dances (Johnston, 891)

Tswana songs may be referred to as 'folklore of great importance' (mainane a segologolo), or they may be composed by a known composer (motlhami). They may be sung in two or more parts or in unison; in typical call-and-response singing, the response might involve multi-part singing. When singing in two or more parts occurs, the upper part is referred to as sgalodimo and the lower part as segalo. Tswana communal vocal music is primarily pentatonic, with clearly divisive symmetrical metres, relying primarily on the octave, 5th and 4th for harmony. Vocal music is closely associated with the rhythmic movement of the body.

Perhaps the best-known form of Tswana instrumental music is the reed-pipe dance (kubina dithlaka). According to Ballantine, the Tswana do not think of a melody first when they play. Rather, they begin with one or two rhythmic schemes, which are played on the reed-pipes in polyrhythms, 'but their interrelation and points of coincidence are such that, apart from occasional exceptions, the canons of "harmonic" acceptability are not offended' (Ballantine, p.55).

The Tswana moropa drum, Lepapata antelope horn and mathlo leg-rattles often accompany dancing, as do a variety of whistles that are named for their method of construction.

There are four types of musical bows used by the Tswana for accompanimental purposes according to Johnston: lengope, segwana, setinkane and nokukwane (Johnston, pp.891–2). The lengope is a mouth-resonated bow constructed from curved cane and strung with nylon fishing cord. The segwana is larger, with a calabash functioning as resonator. It is struck with a stick and has a cord divided in such a way that two tones a minor 3rd apart are produced. The opening of the calabash may be pressed against the performer's chest to adjust the tone quality. The setinkane is similar to the segwana, however without a resonator. The nokukwane uses a crudely fashioned bow with an arc more pronounced than those of the other bows. It is also struck with a stick and is resonate with a blown up and dried skin milk container (lukuku).

3. Venda music. The Venda, who have lived in and around the Soutpansberg mountains in the Northern province of South Africa for many centuries, have a culture that distinguishes them from other Bantu-speaking people in South Africa and a language that is classed on its own, though it has some affinities with Sotho and Karanga. The Venda were originally shifting cultivators and hunters but later they adopted a more settled economy; they also took to keeping cattle as well as goats. They used to live in large villages that were often on mountain slopes and thus difficult to reach, and every village was administered by a chief or headman and his council. In the first part of the 20th century, people tended to move away from the villages of their rulers and live in homesteads scattered over the hills and mountains, but in the early 21st century in many areas they are now being regrouped into villages.

In the past, the music of the Venda was a part of the oral tradition and emerged only in response to the demands of corporate activity. The evidence of an intensive study of musical activity in the Sibasa district between 1956 and 1958 suggests that all Venda children are able to sing and dance as well and as creatively as they speak their language and that subsequent developments of their musical interests and aptitudes are a consequence more of sociological than of psychological or biological factors.

(i) Musical concepts. The term 'nyimbo dza Vhavenda' ('songs of the Venda-speaking people') includes all tunes that are sung or played on instruments, as well as patterns of words that are recited to a regular metre. It is rhythm, therefore, that distinguishes u imba (singing), from u amba (talking), from u renda (reciting praises) and from u anetshela (narrating). But although it may have no rhythm and is sometimes called u tavha mukosi ('raising the alarm with a long, loud yell'), a single note blown on a stopped pipe or horn comes into the Venda category of music because the performer 'makes the instrument cry'. Musical instruments are thus known as zwilidzo (things that are made to cry).

A soloist 'plants' (-sima) his song, and the chorus 'thunders in response' (-bvumela). A maluselo (dance-leader) shows the step (-sumbedza mulenzhe: 'shows a leg'), and others 'pour it out' (-shela mulenzhe) after him. Great importance is attached to teamwork in dancing, and the verb u tshina (to dance) generally refers to communal dancing, in which all follow the same steps, as distinct from u gaya (to dance a solo). Other more individual styles are u tanga (to dance in a stately fashion), as old women and important people do on special occasions; u pembela (to dance excitedly) especially at the end of an initiation school or the installation of a chief; u thaga (to dance ndayo) at the vhusha girls' initiation school; and u dabela (to dance independently of and often in the opposite direction to members of an initiation school), as a sign that one has graduated. Most Venda communal dances are basically circular and counter-clockwise: the dancers 'go round' (mona) and make 'a cattle kraal' (danga).

Singers can indicate the metric patterns of songs by clapping their hands, and they can sing either the solo or the chorus part alone and know exactly where to come in. They do not isolate patterns, nor do they seem to appreciate that there are repetitions of a pattern. People refer to the correct melody or rhythm of a song as kuimbele (the way in which it is sung) or kulidzele (the way in which it is played). Mistakes in performance are recognized, though critics rarely state precisely what is wrong; they know that it does not sound right and are able to correct the mistake by demonstration and argument. Although there is a distinction between 'hurrying' (-tavhanya) or 'delaying' (-lenga), the tempo during a performance, the tempos of the tshigombela and tshikona dances are not classified respectively as fast or slow: they are 'different' and 'go in opposite directions' (-fhambana). Time signatures and note values are not recognized, though the word -kokodza (to drag, pull) describes a note that is prolonged, especially at the end of a song.

Because music is conceived as repetitions of basic patterns, there can be no concept of rests in performance, since a rest would immediately destroy the special world of time that music is meant to create. Thus in ex.4, a children's song, the metric beat does not fall on the syllables -ḍu-tsha and nga-, which are stressed in performance. If people clap to the song, they clap on the syllables Tshi-, -la, -si and -ḍi, so that there is not a rest on the fourth beat, but a total pattern of four beats. Venda music is not founded on melody or on metre, but on a rhythmical stirring of the whole body, of which singing and metre are extensions. When a rest is heard between two drumbeats, it must be understood that for the player it is not a rest; each drumbeat is part of a total body movement in which the hand or a stick strikes the drumskin.

Ex.4 Children's song; rec. and transcr. J. Blacking (Blacking, 1967)

The words -tuku (small, young) and -hulwane (important, senior) are generally used to refer respectively to tones that are high and low in pitch. The word -hulu (big, visibly large in size) is more often used to describe the number of performers and the corresponding loudness of the sound, probably because intensity of tone is not recognized in musical terms: a performer either plays or sings with confidence, and hence with uniform loudness, or indifferently because of shyness, laziness or ignorance of the music. Thus, assuming that the performers are doing well, loud music is at the same time 'big', and soft music 'small', because of the numbers of people performing it. The sound of the female and male voices are sometimes distinguished by calling the former -sekene (thin) and the latter -denya (thick); pitch within the female and male ranges is further subdivided into high, which 'closes the throat', and low, which 'snores'.

Quality of tone and phrasing, which is invariably legato, is not specifically taken into account: people either 'play well' and 'sing well', or they do not. Great vigour and energy, precision and virtuosity, are expected of the good performer: a person may sing so well that he 'nearly bursts his diaphragm' or dance so that he 'digs a hole in the ground' or 'licks the clouds', or leaps so high that 'three people can crawl underneath him'. People like to see and listen to a dynamic, almost destructive performance, when hand-rattles are 'shaken so that they nearly break'. Quite often a drumskin is torn and a ritual postponed for some hours while it is replaced, or until another drum has been borrowed; leg-rattles disintegrate during a dance, the leather supports of xylophone keys break, and people grow hoarse and lose their voices. Such accidents during a performance do not upset people as they are usually evidence of good, vigorous playing and the intense excitement that goes with it.

The Venda have no word for 'scale'. They have the word 'mutavha', which is used for a complete set of divining dice, metal amulets or stopped pipes, and also for a row of keys on a xylophone or mbila (lamellophone). Thus a mutavha may include more than one octave of a heptatonic or a pentatonic scale, since sets of stopped pipes and lamellophones may be tuned to either of these scales. The Venda recognize the interval of the octave and the fact that heptatonic and pentatonic sets sound different, but they do not express the difference in musical terms, although they name each pipe or key in a mutavha. Traditional Venda melodies have anything from two to seven different tones, but the Venda classify their music on the basis of its social function, which may indirectly affect its structure and especially its rhythmic pattern.

(ii) Music and society. No fewer than 16 different styles of music are distinguished with different rhythms and combinations of singers and instruments; within these styles, there are further subdivisions with many different songs within each subdivision. There are scores of beer-songs, more than 70 initiation songs of one type and 30 of another; new words are always being added to existing songs and entirely new songs are often composed.

The performance of most communal music is regulated by the rules of the social institutions that it accompanies, but solo instrumentalists can perform at any time of the year without special permission. Some who play the xylophone or lamellophone may accompany singers at a beer-party; others become zwilombe, semi-professional musicians (sing. tshilombe), and from time to time compose new songs or variations of old ones, accompanying themselves on a lamellophone or a musical bow. They are expected to amuse their audiences and are admired for their wit, their mastery of technique and handling of words, and for their ability to clown as well as to protest effectively against any injustice that may need attention.

Both the frequency and conditions of performance of Venda communal music depend to a great extent on the cycle of seasons and the existence of an economic surplus. During the period of planting and weeding, for instance, only important ritual music and work-songs are performed regularly. Towards the end of the weeding season, when the first green maize cobs are appearing, girls begin to practise for their dance, the tshigombela (fig.4), which they would find difficult to dance in the mud of the rainy season, even if they were not required at that time to help with the weeding of the crops, the collection of food and other domestic duties. Circumcision schools are held during the winter, and possession dances and boys' communal dances take place chiefly during the period of rest between harvest and planting. Communal music is never performed without some kind of reward, either to the performers or to the organizers, so that in a lean year none but the more important items is played. If the countryside resounds with music, especially at night when it is cool, it is a sign of good times. Venda communal music is not a substitute for happiness but an expression of it.

4. Second part of the girls' dance tshigombela in which soloists dance out from the main group to the accompaniment of thuzwu (ankle rattles) and murumba (alto drums)

Communal dances also introduce young people to patterns of tribal authority: the music is sponsored by rulers, and one ruler sends his dance-teams on expeditions to other rulers, either to confirm his relationship with them or, if he is a chief and they are headmen, to exact tribute. The mabepha (musical expeditions) consolidate both the lineage ties of rulers, who are separated spatially because of their responsibility for district government, and the neighbourhood ties of clansfolk living in different districts, and hence the bonds between these people and their district headmen. The music of the boys' and girls' circumcision schools advertises the power of the doctors who sponsor them, and possession dances enhance the prestige and influence of the families who belong to the different cult groups. Within the traditional music system, ambitious men are able to attract a following and further their interests by means of the music that is performed under their auspices.

Music is therefore an audible and visible sign of social and political groupings in Venda society and the music that a man can command or forbid is a measure of his status. When a ruler holds a domba initiation, all other music in his district is banned, except for his own tshikona (the national dance), beer-songs and personal instrumental music. But nobody is compelled to perform music or to observe these bans, and indeed many Venda Christians ignore them altogether. Diagrams of the relationship between the performance of different styles of Venda music and the passage of the seasons and their political roles are given in Blacking (1973).

Music is an indispensable part of most Venda social institutions, but its transmission depends on their continuity. The Venda assume that every person is capable of musical performance, unless he is deaf; and even then, he ought to be able to dance. In fact people with physical disabilities, such as hunchbacks, seem to excel in music and dancing. Venda dancing consists almost exclusively of rhythmic movement of the lower limbs. When the upper limbs are moved, it is invariably for hand-clapping, drumming or playing a musical instrument; they are also used in dancing, sometimes very vigorously, but chiefly to maintain good balance while the legs are moved.

Dancing is an integral part of Venda communal music. With his body, man creates a special world of time, distinct from the time cycles of natural seasons and cultural events. Just as rhythmical bodily responses to the sounds of music are regarded as the first signs of a child's interest in music, so participation in communal dancing is generally recognized as the first stage in acquiring musical skills. Small girls copy the dance movements before they participate in the tshigombela and sing the choruses of the songs; they master the dance steps before they attempt to lead a song. Girls usually play the different dance rhythms on the alto drums before they try the straightforward beat of the tenor drum because, although it may not seem so, it is more difficult to maintain a steady beat than to play complex rhythms.

In Venda society, musicians are made according to their birth. Exceptional musical ability is expected of people who are born into certain families or social groups in which musical performance is essential for maintaining their group solidarity. Just as musical performance is the chief factor that justifies the continued existence of an orchestra as a social group, so a Venda possession cult or an initiation school would disintegrate if there were no music.

5. Domba initiation dance with murumba (alto drums, left), ngoma (bass drum, centre) and thungwa (tenor drum, right)

However, only a few of those who are born into the right group actually emerge as exceptional musicians, and what sets them apart is not so much their ability to do what others cannot do, but that they do it better because they have devoted more time and energy to it. In applauding the mastery of exceptional musicians, the Venda applaud human effort. In being able to recognize mastery in the musical medium, listeners reveal that their general musical competence is no less than that of the musicians whom they applaud. The development of musical ability is therefore a part of every Venda's experience of growing up, and because the sequence of learning is socially and culturally regulated, music is not necessarily learnt in the order of its musical complexity. Some young people's music may be technically more difficult than adult music; children often learn pentatonic and hexatonic songs before tritonic and tetratonic songs, simply because these songs are more popular or socially more appropriate.

Most Venda children are competent musicians: they sing and dance to traditional melodies, and many can play at least one musical instrument. But they have no formal musical training. They learn music by imitating the performances of adults and other children. If they do not realize when they are making a mistake, they are soon corrected by more experienced musicians. This does not mean that two performances of the same song must be identical, but that Venda music is based on principles that are acquired partly by learning and partly by assimilation, and that people distinguish between what is or is not specifically Venda about a performance, and are able to create new music according to the same principles. Venda women do not relearn the music of their domba initiation dance (fig.5) when they come together every four or five years to assist the novices: they relive a social situation, and the domba music emerges when the experience is shared under certain conditions of individuality in community. Though the music may sound similar to an outside observer on two successive initiations, it is in fact new to the performers because of the new social situation. Every performance of Venda communal music therefore demands re-creation of a special social situation as much as a repetition of learnt skills.

Venda music is performed in a variety of political contexts and often for specific political purposes. It is also political in the sense that it may involve people in a powerful shared experience within the framework of their cultural experience, and thereby make them more aware of themselves and of their responsibilities towards each other. When two iambic rhythms are combined in canon as in ex.5, the players are not merely using a call-and-response model to produce a surface rhythm that could easily be produced by one performer; each player has his own main beat, so he is expressing musically certain concepts of individuality in community, and of temporal and spatial balance, that are found in other areas of Venda culture. The same principle of sharing in the creation of music is applied to many Venda styles,

Ex.5 Rhythms in canon; rec. and transcr. J. Blacking

Ex.6 from tshikona national dance; rec. and transcr. J. Blacking (Blacking, 1973) especially the music of the tshikona shown in ex.6, where each player produces one note of the total pattern.

(transposed down a semitone)

(iii) Musical structure. Differences in the styles of Venda music are much influenced by their social functions. The most important communal rituals are called generically by the same word that is used for the large, pot-shaped bass drum, the ngoma. This instrument is found only in the headquarters of chiefs and headmen and, together with the thungwa (the tenor drum) and the murumba (the alto drum), should be played by women (see fig.5).

Sets of drums are kept with sets of 20 or more nanga (stopped pipes), which are tuned to a heptatonic scale ranging over three octaves; these are used to play the national dance, the tshikona. Each player blows one pipe, so that the different notes are combined in a special pattern. The tshikona is performed in the khoro, the public meeting-place, on all important occasions such as the installation of a new ruler, the commemoration of a ruler's death and the thevhula sacrificial rites at the graves of a ruler's ancestors. It is performed on Sundays in the urban areas by Venda who have organized themselves into dance teams, with managers, musical directors and other officials.

The full set of drums is also used for the music of the pre-marital domba initiation, in which the girls sing a transformation of what the men play on the pipe ensemble, as shown in ex.7. The music of the tshikona incorporates some of the basic tonal and harmonic principles of Venda music and exerts an influence on other styles that are comparable with its social importance. There are 'transcriptions' of the tshikona for most solo instruments, and several children's songs and songs of the girls' vhusha and tshikanda initiation schools are transformations of, or derived from, the tshikona pattern. The two girls' schools are less important than the domba, and so their music is accompanied only by the tenor and alto drums and performed in the tshivhambo, the council hut, or the muta, the courtyard of one of the women in charge. Children's songs are accompanied only by hand-claps or appropriate rhythmic actions.

Ex.7 from khulo sung by girls; rec. and transcr. J. Blacking (Blacking, 1973)

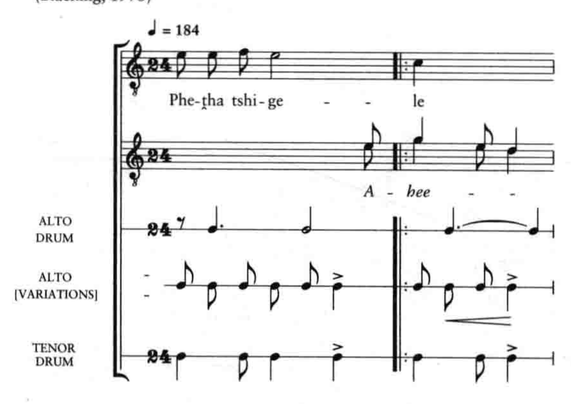
Full sets of drums may be borrowed from rulers by the organizers of ngoma dza midzimu, dances of spirit possession (fig.6), but they are played in a different way. The doctors who run the masungwi girls' initiation schools, which were introduced into Venda towards the end of the 19th century, are allowed to own tenor and alto drums. The tenor and alto drums of rulers are borrowed by girls for rehearsing and performing their tshigombela dance and for accompanying the youths' pipe dances, the tshikanganga, the visa and the givha. These boys' and girls' dances are referred to as mitambo (games); the sets of stopped pipes are tuned to a pentatonic scale and made from the ordinary river reed rather than the sacred bamboo that is used for the heptatonic tshikona sets. It is significant that the 'secular' pentatonic pipe music was adopted by the Venda in comparatively recent times and that it is never played on a selection of the pipes used for the ancient, heptatonic music (Blacking, Cape Town, 1971).

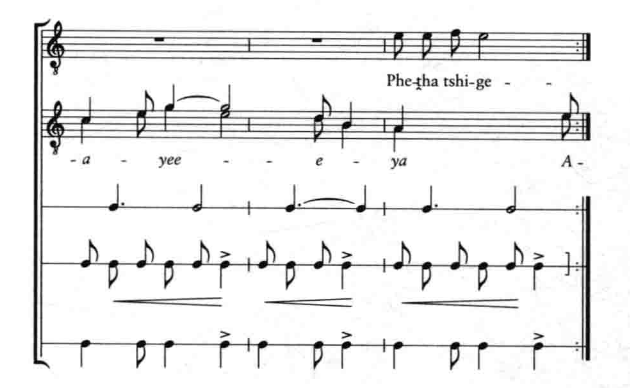
The sacred music of the mission churches is mostly Western in origin. The Salvation Army uses a European-type bass drum, traditional drums being taboo because of their symbolic associations with 'pagan' ritual. Congregations sing hymns in three or four parts, but they often prefer to harmonize in a way that is a novel blend of European and traditional Venda styles. Syncretic styles are a prominent feature of the music of the separatist Christian churches that are run by the Venda themselves. A European-type bass drum, the tshigubu, is used, and the rhythms played are sometimes the same as those of traditional music.

Modern school music is mostly choral and ranges from Western part-songs that are learnt from tonic sol-fa scores for singing competitions, to modern compositions by Venda and other African composers that are sung for pleasure as well as for competitions. The style of this modern Venda music is similar to that of other black composers in South Africa and does not yet betray any special affinity with the unique styles of Venda traditional music. In the late 1950s the guitar and the penny whistle were often used for performing urban jive music.

The circular form of Venda communal dances is well suited to the environment of hills and mountains. The metrical pattern of work-songs is regular and depends on the nature of the work (pounding maize, hoeing fields, clearing weeds etc.), but that of beer-songs may be irregular and emphasized by hand-claps or by the steps of the solo dancers. The irregular metre of many of the ndayo exercises of initiation is played with a stick on the tenor drum and the intervening quavers are filled in on the alto drums, which are played with the hands (ex.8). It is tempting to relate this technique to the vocal call-and-response pattern that characterizes much Venda music; but the alto drums do not complement the tenor's unfinished pattern as does the response to a call, so much as embellish a pattern that is already adequate, as do the embellishments of a response.

Although the chorus of a song can be sung without a soloist to lead, the solo call cannot be sung without the chorus response. The words and melody of the response are complete in themselves, whether or not they overlap the call, and they may be repeated without change, though it is customary to add complementary parts that agree with the underlying harmonic pattern. Moreover if, as is usual, the tonality shifts regularly in the call-and-response sections of the melody, the tonal centre is established in the response, and so a song without a response is a song without a tonal centre. The importance of tonality and of tonal centres is recognized by the Venda, who call the chief note of every 'scale' the phala. The pipe pitched one tone above the phala is called the thakhula (the lifter) because it 'lifts' the melody back to its tonal centre. Just as the predominant direction of Venda melodies is descending, so the 'leading note' leads down a tone.





6. Ngoma dza midzimu (spirit possession dance), with gourd rattles and, from left to right, ngoma (bass drum), thungwa (tenor drum) and murumba (alto drum)

In the tshikona, each note of the melody has two companion pitches, which are, in order of harmonic importance, a 5th and a 4th below it (together with their octaves at the 4th and 5th above it). This principle of harmonic equivalence applies throughout the Venda musical tradition, so that the two alternative melodies of the children's song in ex.9 are regarded as identical. The same principle of harmonic equivalence applies both in improvising additional parts to a choral response (passing notes are also allowed), and in selecting alternative notes when new words of the solo call bring a change in speech-tone patterns that must be reflected in the melody. A soloist is expected both to lead a song confidently and to provide new words for almost every repetition of the basic pattern. Some of these phrases are standard for a particular song or for several songs, and others may be topical improvisations. When women pound maize at night, they may produce a running commentary on local events. There are certain formal rules for adjusting a basic melodic pattern to changes in the speech-tone patterns of the Venda language, and these are learnt at an early age (Blacking, 1967). The more people there are singing a chorus, the more they are expected to 'fill out' the basic melody with additional parts. The concern for free-ranging musical development is reflected, for example, in the development of the tshigombela songs, where vocables such as ee and ahee are substituted for words, so that melodies are not subject to the restrictions of speech-tone patterns.

Apart from the kind of social and musical rules cited, the basic structure of every Venda song and the possible course of its development are further modified by each performing situation. Obvious factors are the age and skill of performers and the amount of rehearsal time that they have had. But most important is the fact that the overall form, the number and extent of rhythmic, melodic, harmonic and contrapuntal variations, all the differences between one complete performance of a piece of music and another, are a consequence of the social interaction of performers. The number of performers and audience present, who they are and how they interact with each other, what happens during a performance, who arrives and who leaves, all these and many other social events affect the development of the basic musical pattern. The vitality of Venda traditional music depends largely on the fact that its models are flexible and reflect the organization and values of Venda society as much as certain specifically musical rules. A preliminary set of rules of Venda music has been drawn up (Blacking, African Studies, 1969, and Blacking, 1970). The rules that apply to vocal and communal music apply also to most instrumental music. Even if a physical relationship between the left and right thumbs and the layout of keys on a lamellophone may suggest a 'walking song', the music as in ex.10 is conceived within the Venda tonal and harmonic system.

Ex.8 Ndayo song and drumming; rec. and transcr. J. Blacking (Blacking, 1973)

Venda musical instruments have been described in detail by Kirby (1934). Apart from the drums and sets of stopped pipes already mentioned, the most common instruments are the mbila dza madeza, a heptatonic lamellophone with about 27 keys; the mbila tshipai, a pentatonic or hexatonic lamellophone with 11 to 18 keys; various types of signal horns and whistles used by herdboys; side-blown antelope horns used to summon people to the ruler's place or to announce important events; a three-hole transverse flute and ocarinas that are often played in duet by boys; a number of types of musical bow played by boys and girls and, in the case of two types of bow, by semi-professional musicians; and a large 21-note xylophone, which is played by two people but is now rarely heard.

(iv) Modern developments. The four decades preceding the coming to power of the African National Congress in 1994 were marked by conflict between supporters of the traditional political order and supporters of democracy. Venda communal music played a role in this conflict by helping to shape new power relations.

Rulers promoted traditional dances that cultivated political loyalty. Their efforts were channelled through government structures such as the Department of Education, which initiated a national dance competition. Refusal to participate in traditional dances elicited fines and accusations of political sabotage. Although coercion played a role, the involvement of adult women in dances formerly not performed by them was a factor of new social responsibilities. Many women took charge of the home economy while men became migrant labourers. Thus, women became a readily available political resource; their new musical roles accelerated change in their social status. This is evident in the changing performing practice of tshikona, a dance known for being a symbol of male social status. Most male residents of the village of Muswodi Tshisimani, for example, had left home in search of work, and so the village became famous for entering a female tshikona team in the national dance competition during the early 1980s. The public shock turned to amazement and eventual acceptance. Most women, however, became involved in tshigombela, a former girls' dance. Tshigombela songs, which originated around independence (1979), promoted national unity under chiefly rule. The nationalistic content of tshigombela songs reflected a degree of spontaneous reaction to colonialism. For several years after independence, many people supported chiefly rule through tshigombela dancing because they believed that their material conditions would improve.

A change in political consciousness marked communal musical performances from the mid-1980s onwards. This change coincided with the repression of the official political opposition (the Venda Independence People's Party) and the establishment of a one-party state, which failed to address the economic and political aspirations of large numbers of poor people. Tshigombela songs increasingly challenged government legality. Feelings against political crimes were particularly strong. Mimes of these crimes were performed in tshigombela dances, and many beer-songs expressed anti-government protest.

The Venda government was overthrown in a bloodless military coup during 1990. Communal dancing subsequently decreased in a number of areas and ceased in others. New tshigombela songs emerged with revolutionary topics that were popular with youth cultural clubs affiliated with the African National Congress. Many people now regard this music as less important since it does not advance their socio-economic goals. They prefer to join bands or choirs. Older musicians who perform traditional music find decreasing social acceptance, and Ex.9 Alternative melodies for a children's song; rec. and transcr. J. Blacking (Blacking, 1967)

Ex.10

(a) Layout and approximate pitches of lamellaphone keys

LEFT THUMB RIGHT THUMB

(b) Lamellaphone music

most traditional instruments have disappeared. The assimilation of Venda musicians into the global musical culture is evident in the increasing number of English songs, the adaptation of traditional music to a commercial idiom and the emulation of pop stars (see §III below). Fewer people are becoming musicians and more are now consumers of music. Music is not regarded as a reliable career, and formal music education in school is virtually non-existent.

4. TSONGA MUSIC. The Tsonga ethnic group occupies the north-eastern part of what was once called the Transvaal. Tsonga are found in the Transvaal from northern Swaziland and Zululand to the Limpopo river. They also inhabit south-eastern Zimbabwe. In Maputo, the Tsonga occupy the area north of kwaZulu up to the banks of the Zambezi.

The Tsonga have not escaped cross-cultural influences at least since historical and anthropological recordings of groups and nations were made by Western scholars. One scholar who has produced an exhaustive cultural study of the Tsonga is Rev. H.A. Junod. His anthropological study of the Tsonga, The Life of a South African Tribe (London, 1927), attempts to record all aspects of the Tsonga-Shangaan group. Junod included a chapter on Tsonga music before it was subjected to external cultural influences. Tsonga music had two major cultural influences: (a) a Nguni influence, when the Zulus subjugated the Tsonga of Mozambique (*c*1840), and (b) an influence of Western music culture after missionaries embarked on converting the Tsonga-Shangaan to Christianity.

(i) Musical instruments. The Tsonga do not have many elaborate musical instruments. Traditional music instruments include: comana, rhonge, xipendani, xitende, xizambi, xitiringo, ndhweva and timbila.

The comana is a small drum made from a hollowed tree trunk or large calabash covered with an animal skin. The skin is first soaked in water and then stretched over one side of the trunk or calabash and secured by wooden pegs. With the advent of Western culture, frames of iron sheets were introduced. Large washing basins are now also used as comana frames. The comana drum is used to accompany dancing during the exorcism ritual.

The rhonge is an ocarina made from a dry sala fruit. One large hole and two smaller holes are cut into the dried fruit. Air is blown through the larger hole with the mouth placed in such a way as to produce a sweet whistling sound. The quality of the sound is controlled by blocking and/or opening the smaller openings with the fingers. The rhonge is played mostly by shepherds. A xipendani is a flattened wooden bow approximately half a metre in length. The middle section of the bow is left in its original round stick size. A string or thin wire is tied on each end and pulled to form a bow. The string is divided into two sections by another string or hook-wire pulled across the bow. It is played by plucking the string with a long thorn or needle. Players place their mouths on one side of the flat bow as a resonator. By changing the configuration of the mouth, different pitches are produced. The Xipendani is primarily played by women.

The xitende, like the xipendani, is a bow-like instrument. The differences are that the xitende bow is approximately a metre to a metre and a half long and the wooden stick is not flattened but left round. Both ends of the stick are tapered. Animal sinew or a soft thin wire is stretched from one end of the stick to the other forming a bow. A half-calabash is secured at the centre of the instrument by a wire or string. The half-calabash serves as a resonator. Different sound qualities are obtained by alternately pressing the calabash against the player's breast and drawing the calabash away from the breast. The instrument is played by tapping on the wire with a small stick approximately 30 cm long. The back of the 3rd and 4th fingers touch the string and produce different pitches and sounds. Tin bottle caps (traditionally sea shells) are attached to the bow to add a rattling sound. The xitende is played by a man who uses it to accompany his singing.

The xizambi is a bow made of a stick, 1·5 cm thick and half a metre or shorter in length. It is bowed with a palm leaf 1 cm wide. The middle of the bow is marked by small regular grooves. It is played with a stick to which is attached two or three dry, hollowed sala fruit into which a few bean seeds or stones are placed. It is played by securing one extreme end of the instrument with one hand, while the other end is placed against the mouth with the mulala palm leaf running across the open mouth. The instrument is played with the right hand moving the stick along the grooves while the seeds in the sala fruit provide a rhythmic accompaniment. Different sounds are obtained by changing the shape of the mouth. The xizambi is played by both men and women.

The xitiringo is made from a piece of bamboo approximately 2·5–3·5 cm in diameter with one small hole on one side and three to four small holes on the other side. Both ends of the xitiringo are stopped. The xitiringo is played by blowing air into the one small hole while the fingers of either the left or right hand are placed on the small holes at the one end. Different pitches and sounds are obtained by lifting the fingers from the holes. The xitiringo is primarily played by shepherds and young adult men.

The ndhweva is a hollowed reed or open-end bone of a goat. It is played by pressing the reed or bone against the tongue and blowing hard, thus producing sound when placed at a certain angle. It is played by shepherds. The timbila is basically a Chopi instrument which the Tsonga have adopted. It is similar to the xylophone and is played with two rubber mallets. Male adults play this instrument accompanied by singing and dancing.

The xigubu (drum) is a modern innovation. The xigubu frame is made from a 44-gallon oil drum covered by two soaked ox skins that are then dried in place. The two skins are secured with wet strips of skin approximately 2 cm wide. The drums accompany the xifasi and xincayincayi group dances.

(ii) Vocal music. Traditional Tsonga vocal music is responsorial. The leader, called musumi, i.e. 'the starter of a song', begins by singing the first note or a few notes of a song. This 'call' is referred to as ku suma. The remaining singers respond to the call of the musumi by singing a song's choral response. The response is ku hlavelela in Tsonga and the choral group is called vahlaveleri.

Tsonga is a bitonal language with high and low tones, and Tsonga vocal music is to a large extent influenced by speech tones and rhythms. However, the effect of such tones and rhythms is limited by certain musical requirements such as the melismatic vocalization of non-lexical syllables. Another characteristic of Tsonga music is the typical descending melodic cadence at the ends of musical phrases. Other characteristics include the elision of vowels, the contraction or prolongation of final vowels and the contraction or the prolongation of final syllables. Tsonga melodies have descending intervallic contours comprising a 4th, 5th or even 6th from the initial peak to a low-pitched note.

Most Tsonga songs are polyphonic. The musumi sings lead melodies, while the vahlaveleri sing choruses. In the majority of songs, the musumi's solo part carries the lexical part of the lyrics, thus conveying a song's message. The lyrics of the response sections are generally non-lexical, onomatopoeic syllables.

Children's songs are interwoven with games and are generally accompanied by hand-clapping, dancing and chanting. Lullabies are sung mainly by mothers while grinding corn or stamping meal with babies on their backs. The mothers' rhythmic movements rock the babies to sleep while singing.

Songs to exorcise spirits (mancomana) are always accompanied by ncomana drums. The singing is energetic and highly rhythmic, and the ncomana drums beaten by two to four women keep a strict rhythm. When the spirits are 'out', the musumi ('patient') dances vigorously while the vahlaveleri sing. Singing usually starts in the late evening, lasting until the early hours of the morning.

Initiation songs for girls (tikhomba) are also generally accompanied by the ncomana drum. The singing and the dancing are not as vigorous, however, when compared to the songs used for exorcism. The drumming patterns synchronize with the stamping of the feet by the initiates who number from two to five. There is usually a large group of women vahlaveleri; males are forbidden. Men and boys are allowed only on the last day of the initiation.

Initiation songs for boys (ngoma or murhundu) are sung at an initiation school in a forest around the fire in the evenings. The presence of women is forbidden during such events. The lyrics are generally unintelligible, usually in a foreign language, such as the Ndau language. The songs are generally rhythmically slow such as war dance songs (muchongolo).

Songs for social occasions include those for work parties (matsima, sing. tsima), marriage (nkhuvo) and supplication to the ancestors (mphahlo). These occasions include beer-drinking and are accompanied by singing, hand-clapping and dancing. The singing on such occasions is lively and the dancing is accompanied by graceful body movements.

Songs for dance groups (xifasi and xincayincayi) are usually performed by young men and women. The dancing is taken in turns; women perform in graceful formations, while men engage in wild antics. Dancing is accompanied by singing, hand-clapping, whistles and shaking of the waist by women who wear colourful uniforms, while drums maintain the rhythm.

War dance songs are usually sung in the Nguni language (Zulu), due to the 19th-century Zulu subjugation of the Tsonga people. These songs have a slow tempo punctuated by foot-stamping and by the hitting of ox-hide shields with spears.

Folktale songs (tinsimu ta mintsheketo) punctuate the rich Tsonga folktales. These songs are also performed in the call-and-response style and function as a means of communication among the dramatis personae in folktales. In Tsonga folktales, animals interact with humans on equal terms.

Themes of Tsonga songs other than in folktales mainly comment on social life. Songs often comment on social relationships, for example on marital problems, problems of co-wives, infidelity, abuse of power, social injustice and witchcraft.

(iii) Modern developments. Tsonga music displays the influence of Western culture, interweaving traditional elements into modern Tsonga music. The call-and-response and polyphonic characteristics remain, as do the descending contours of intervals of a 4th or 5th. Instruments used in contemporary performing ensembles consist of electric guitars and drums, which serve as accompaniment, providing lively rhythms.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

NGUNI MUSIC

E.M. von Hornbostel: 'African Negro Music', Africa, i (1928), 30–62

P.R. Kirby: The Musical Instruments of the Native Races of South Africa (London, 1934, 2/1965)

E.J. Krige: The Social System of the Zulus (Pietermaritzburg, 1936, 4/1962)

H. Kuper: An African Aristocracy (London, 1947/R)

D. Rycroft: 'Friction Chordophones in South-Eastern Africa', GSJ, xix (1966), 84–100

D. Rycroft: 'Nguni Vocal Polyphony', JIFMC, xix (1967), 88–103

D. Rycroft: Swazi Vocal Music (Tervuren, 1968) [with disc]

Y. Huskisson: Bantu Composers of Southern Africa/Die Bantoe-Komponiste van Suider-Afrika (Johannesburg, 1969, suppl. 1992)

D. Rycroft: Zulu, Swazi en Xhosa instrumental en vocale muziek (Tervuren, 1969) [with disc]

D. Rycroft: 'The National Anthem of Swaziland', African Language Studies, xi (1970), 298

D. Rycroft: 'Stylistic Evidence in Nguni Song', Essays on Music and History in Africa, ed. K.P. Wachsmann (Evanston, IL, 1971), 213–42

D. Rycroft: 'A Royal Account of Music in Zulu Life', Bulletin of the School of Oriental and African Studies, xxxviii (1975), 351–402

D. Rycroft: 'The Zulu Ballad of Nomagundwane', African Language Studies, xvi (1975), 61–92

D. Rycroft: 'The Zulu Bow-Songs of Princess Magogo', Afm, v/4 (1975–6), 41–97

D. Rycroft: 'Evidence of Stylistic Continuity in Zulu "Town" Music', Essays for a Humanist: an Offering for Klaus Wachsmann, ed. C. Seeger and B. Wade (New York, 1977), 216–60

M. Andersson: Music in the Mix: the Story of South African Popular Music (Johannesburg, 1981)

D. Coplan: 'The Emergence of an African Working-Class Culture', Industrialisation and Social Change in South Africa: African Class-Formation, Culture and Consciousness 1870–1930, ed. S. Marks and R. Rathbone (London, 1982)

V. Erlmann: African Stars: Studies in Black South African Performance (Chicago, 1991)

R. Allingham: 'Township Jive: from Pennywhistle to Bubblegum, the Music of South Africa', World Music: the Rough Guide, ed. S. Broughton and others (London, 1994)

L. Meintjes: Mediating Difference: Producing Mbaqanga Music in a South African Studio (diss., U. of Texas, 1997)

A. Kaye: 'The Guitar in Africa', The Garland Encyclopedia of World Music (New York, 1998)

SOTHO/TSWANA MUSIC

P.R. Kirby: The Musical Instruments of the Native Races of South Africa (Oxford, 1934, 2/1965)

H. Tracey: 'ILAM Bechuanaland Recording Tour', AfM, ii/2 (1959), 62–8

C. Ballantine: 'The Polyrhythmic Foundation of Tswana Pipe Melody', AfM, iii/4 (1965), 52–68

I. Schapera: Praise Poems of Tswana Chiefs (Oxford, 1965)

T.F. Johnston: 'Aspects of Tswana Music', Anthropos, lviii (1973), 889–96

Y. Huskisson: 'A Note on the Music of the Sotho', South African Music Encyclopedia, ii, ed. J.P. Malan (Cape Town, 1982), 375–6

T.F. Johnston: 'Notes on the Music of the Tswana', South African Music Encyclopedia, ii, ed. J.P. Malan (Cape Town, 1982), 376–81

S. Moitse: The Ethnomusicology of the Basotho (Morija, Lesotho, 1994)
R.E. Wells: An Introduction to the Music of the Basotho (Morija, Lesotho, 1994)

VENDA MUSIC

H.A. Stayt: The Bavenda (London, 1931)
P.R. Kirby: 'The Reed-Flute Ensembles of South Africa', Journal of the Royal Anthropological Institute, lxiii (1933), 313–88
P.R. Kirby: The Musical Instruments of the Native Races of South Africa (London, 1934/*R*1965)
J. Blacking: 'Problems of Pitch, Pattern and Harmony in the Ocarina Music of the Venda', AfM, ii/2 (1959), 15–23
J. Blacking: 'Musical Expeditions of the Venda', AfM, iii/1 (1962), 54–78
J. Blacking: 'The Role of Music in the Culture of the Venda', Studies in Ethnomusicology, ed. M. Kolinski (New York, 1965), 20–53
J. Blacking: Venda Children's Songs: a Study in Ethnomusicological Analysis (Johannesburg, 1967)
J. Blacking: 'Initiation and the Balance of Power – the tshikanda Girls' School of the Venda', Government Ethnological Publications (Pretoria, 1969), no.52, p.21
J. Blacking: 'Songs, Dances, Mimes and Symbolism of Venda Girls' Initiation Schools', African Studies, xxviii (1969), 1–35, 69–118, 149–99, 215–66
J. Blacking: 'Tonal Organization in the Music of Two Venda Initiation Schools', EthM, xiv (1970), 1–56
J. Blacking: 'Music and the Historical Process in Vendaland', Essays on Music and History in Africa, ed. K.P. Wachsmann (Evanston, IL, 1971), 185–212
J. Blacking: 'The Value of Music in Human Experience', YIFMC, i (1971), 33–71
J. Blacking: 'Towards a Theory of Musical Competence', Man: Anthropological Essays in Honour of O.F. Raum (Cape Town, 1971), 19–34
J. Blacking: How Musical is Man? (Seattle, 1973)
C. Burnett-Van Tonder: 'n Choreologiese en danskundige ontleding van Venda-danse met enkele antropologiese perspektiewe (diss., U. of Stellenbosch)
J. Kruger: 'The State of Venda Chordophones: 1983–84', Symposium on Ethnomusicology V: Cape Town 1984, 8–12
C. Burnett-Van Tonder: Sosio-etniese danse van die Venda-vrou (Pretoria, 1987)
J. Kruger: 'Introduction to the Social Context of Two Venda Communal Dances: Tshikona and Tshigombela', Symposium on Ethnomusicology VII: Grahamstown 1988, 28–31
J. Kruger: 'Rediscovering the Venda Ground-Bow', EthM, xxxiii (1989), 391–404
J. Kruger: 'On the Contradictions of Artistic Experience in Venda Musical Culture', Symposium on Ethnomusicology X: Grahamstown 1991
J. Kruger: A Cultural Analysis of Venda Guitar Songs (diss., Rhodes U.)
J. Kruger: 'Music Making: a Ritual of Gender Rebellion', Luvhone, iii/1 (1994)
J. Kruger: 'Wada: a Sacred Venda Drum', South African Journal of Musicology, xvi (1996), 49–57
J. Kruger: 'Mitambo: Venda Traditional Dance Theatre', Symposium on Ethnomusicology XV: 1997
J. Kruger: 'Singing Psalms with Owls: a Venda 20th-century Musical History, Part 1: Tshigombela', Journal of African Music, vii/4 (1999), 122–46

II. European traditions

The first European residents of South Africa were the employees of the Dutch East India Company's 17th-century settlement at the Cape of Good Hope (later called Cape Town). These early Dutch settlers had three sources of music: the Genevan Psalter hymn tunes issued to each, the folk music of their native countries, and music provided by the military on special occasions. During the early years of the settlement, European and particularly Dutch musical traditions remained intact. Because of the traffic around the Cape, the settlers there maintained their contact with contemporary European church and popular music, but those who moved further inland, away from the cultural influence of Cape Town, developed a somewhat more original, though limited, musical tradition, because of their isolation and lack of educational facilities.

1. ART MUSIC. The development of western European art music in South Africa can be divided into two periods: the years of colonial rule (1652–*c*1900), when music was provided mainly by amateur groups, the church and the military, and from 1900 onwards, when South Africa started training its own professional musicians. All the major musical institutions have been founded and have developed since 1900, so that today the musical life of South Africa is flourishing and widespread.

(i) Colonial rule.

(a) Religious music. The influence of the predominantly Calvinist church had a restrictive effect on the cultural development of the earliest Dutch settlers, and secular music was generally discouraged. Musical training consisted mainly of teaching the young to sing their psalms, a practice that was the more important because few churches could afford organs. The first organ in the country was built in 1737 for the Groote Kerk at the Cape. Soon a number of churches acquired organs, but they remained rare.

Religious music was based largely on that of the Reformed churches of the Netherlands and consisted in the singing of chorales, a tradition that has persisted. In the more remote areas, the settlers often set religious texts to their own melodies, known as liederwysies. Not all of these melodies were original; they were often based on popular songs or folksongs (see §2(i) below), or were merely variants of religious songs. They were completely removed from the chorale tradition and were generally sung in a free improvisatory style; the leading singer often introduced melismas at suitable points in the text. Many of these orally transmitted melodies were probably lost during the early 20th century, but they must formerly have been important in the religious life of the isolated communities of early Voortrekkers and pioneers.

During the second half of the 19th century church music, like most other spheres of cultural activity, became increasingly anglicized. The gospel hymns of Sankey and Moody became particularly popular and, in spite of official condemnation by the church authorities, they are still popular, particularly in rural areas and among Coloured communities, which are generally much more extrovert in their religious worship than their white counterparts.

(b) Secular music. During the 18th century the musical activities of the military bands extended to playing for local weddings, and the citizens themselves used slaves to provide music for their dinners and dances. The playing of chamber music was considered a social and educational accomplishment and soon became an important aspect of secular life at the settlement.

It was in the last years of Dutch rule that the first public performance of any sort was staged. In 1781 a visiting group of French mercenary troops gave a performance of Beaumarchais' recent Paris success Le barbier de Séville in the Great Barracks; the success of this enterprise led to the building of the African Theatre in 1801 under the new British rulers of the colony. Here local groups and the occasional visiting company performed plays with incidental music and English and French comic operas; one amateur group succeeded in staging Carl Maria von Weber's Der Freischütz in 1831.

The first public orchestral performance was apparently in 1811, when a concert was given by local amateurs supplemented by members of the regimental bands. During the first half of the 19th century, several music societies were started to provide music for concerts and theatrical performances (as well as for church occasions); the European custom of 'musical evenings' also became popular. In 1826 a short-lived Academy of Music was founded to teach the J. Bernhard Logier method of piano tuition in classes, a method popular in Britain and Germany at the time. The first pianos in the country were built by G.B.S. Darter in the 1840s. Darter soon established a music shop, later providing piano tuning and repair services throughout the colony; the shop closed in 1974.

With the increasing establishment of European centres throughout South Africa, the last 30 years of the 19th century saw the first professional touring companies; these gradually superseded the amateur entertainments. An opera house was built in Cape Town in 1893 to accommodate the frequent visits of overseas opera companies. The currently widespread music examination system started as early as 1894, under the auspices of the former University of the Cape of Good Hope, an examining body.

(ii) Since 1900. The first institution to train professional musicians was founded in 1905 under F.W. Jannasch at Stellenbosch, near Cape Town. Called the South African Conservatorium of Music, it offered practical and academic tuition as well as teacher-training, and in 1907 the first group of eight music teachers qualified. The conservatory was incorporated into the University of Stellenbosch in 1935. The South African College of Music opened in Cape Town in 1910 (W.H. Bell, director); in 1923 it became the music department of the University of Cape Town, with Bell as director.

The first professional orchestra was the Cape Town Municipal Orchestra, which gave its inaugural concert in 1914, conducted by Theophil Wendt. From its original 18 players, it has expanded to some 80 regular members and was renamed the Cape Town SO in 1968. It was privatized in 1996, and in 1997 it merged with the Cape Performing Arts Board (CAPAB) Orchestra as the Cape Town PO. In 1921 the Durban City Council founded its own orchestra; until 1976 it gave regular symphony concerts and accompanied the productions of the Natal and Orange Free State performing arts councils. The Johannesburg City Orchestra was formed in 1946, but in 1954 its members were recruited for the newly formed Symphony Orchestra of the South African Broadcasting Corporation (SABC), by agreement with the city council. With about 80 members, it is the most important and enterprising orchestra in the country; it was renamed the National SO of the SABC in 1971. Most of its public concerts are broadcast live. The orchestra has now been privatized.

Broadcasting was started in 1924 in Cape Town by two amateurs, using mainly homemade apparatus. Stations were established in Durban and Johannesburg in the same year. In 1936 the SABC was founded, appointing one of the amateur originators of the venture, René Caprara, as first director-general. Broadcasting was centralized in Johannesburg in 1954, but smaller regional studios are maintained.

Until recently the SABC played a major role in fostering music, especially that of South Africans; Anton Hartman, head of the music department from 1960 to 1977, was a primary influence. It gave numerous commissions to composers and held competitions for composition and performance; programmes featured young performers and school choirs. It has a large library of recorded South African works and photocopied orchestral scores for distribution abroad. In 1970 a small studio was equipped for electronic music. Henk Badings gave a course on electronic composition and prepared his commissioned cantata Die ballade van die bloeddorstige jagter for soloists, chorus, orchestra and electronic sounds, which won the Prix Italia for the SABC in 1971. Besides its customary broadcasting of serious music, it encouraged the appreciation of modern music in the programmes presented by the National SO of the SABC and by illustrated talks, including those by Stockhausen in 1971. For some years, touring units recorded a great deal of indigenous African music, and in 1965 Alexander Buthelezi's operetta Nokhwezi was entered for the Prix Italia.

In 1963 the Performing Arts Councils were established, one for each province: the Cape (CAPAB), Natal (NAPAC), the Orange Free State (PACOFS) and Transvaal (PACT). Each had a ballet, drama, opera and music section and a technical department. Considerable government and local council subsidies enabled them to tour extensively, giving orchestral and chamber concerts as well as school programmes and youth festivals. CAPAB and PACT maintained their own orchestras. PACT's orchestra has been privatized and that of CAPAB has joined with the former Cape Town SO. PACOFS's chief contribution was its youth orchestra, which was highly successful at the Second International Festival of Youth Orchestras (1970). All the councils collaborated in the exchange of artists, opera productions and in bringing international artists to South Africa. During the years of the cultural boycott of South Africa because of apartheid, these companies relied increasingly on local performers. In the late 1990s the government gradually withdrew funding for local performing arts councils and their activities have been mostly privatized. The National Arts Council now funds the arts on a project basis and also provides scholarships for talented artists.

An important opera and ballet company based in Cape Town is the Eoan Group, founded in 1934; under Joseph Manca, it specialized in the presentation of Italian opera and has contributed considerably to Cape Town's musical life; especially remarkable is the fact that this is a spare-time activity with no financial remuneration for its company members. Since the 1990s its activities have declined.

School education is largely state-controlled; under the apartheid government, music as a matriculation subject was offered mainly in white schools; this is now changing. The Drakensberg Boys' Choir School (founded 1967), Natal, is unique in South Africa; run privately, this primary school concentrates on training choristers, and its four choirs, with an exceptionally wide repertory, give 200 concerts annually, including extensive national tours and visits abroad.

There are numerous training colleges for all races, most offering school music as an optional subject in primary school teaching courses. A number of schools now specialize in music. For about 40 years, only Battswood, Cape Town, offered black primary teachers an advanced music course (discontinued 1971), and graduates have been responsible for many musical activities throughout the country.

Most universities have music departments that offer diploma and degree courses. The largest departments are at the universities of Cape Town, Pretoria, Stellenbosch and Durban. The University of Cape Town had the only independent music faculty, comprising the South African College of Music, Opera and Ballet Schools. Since 1999 the faculty has been incorporated into a large faculty of humanities. It has produced many of South Africa's most prominent musicians. The Opera School, directed for many years by Gregorio Fiasconaro, is unique for a university in the country, offering students a comprehensive training in all aspects of opera. Before the formation of CAPAB in 1963, virtually all opera in Cape Town was presented by the University Opera Company (directly associated with the Opera School) and the Eoan Group.

The major examining body for music is the University of South Africa. Musicology is also emphasized at Rhodes University, Natal, and at Port Elizabeth, where there is also a music school for children from whose ranks a youth orchestra is formed. The departments at Potchefstroom and Stellenbosch maintain institutes for the study of South African music, both Western and indigenous. Programmes in jazz studies are offered at Cape Town and Natal, and Cape Town also specializes in African music and dance. Rhodes University Chamber Choir, which has toured extensively abroad, deserves mention. The Afrikaans-language universities, especially in the Orange Free State, are noted for their promotion of church music and offer special courses in the subject. Church music is further served by the South African branches of the Royal School of Church Music, whose annual summer schools for choristers and choirmasters have been directed by eminent overseas organists.

The South African Society of Music Teachers, in addition to its active concern in promoting music through scholarships, orchestral courses, concerts and lectures, has welfare funds for its members. In 1931 it began publishing the bi-annual South African Music Teacher, the only music periodical to have survived for more than a few years. The African Music Society was instituted in 1947 for the study of the music of African peoples.

Among the large number of composers from South Africa, some have become internationally known. Of the pre-war generation, Arnold van Wyk, John Joubert, Priaulx Rainier, Hubert Du Plessis, Gideon Fagan and Stefans Grové are particularly noteworthy. Blanche Gerstman and Rosa Nepgen have also made considerable contributions. The younger post-war generation includes Graham Newcater, Peter Klatzow, Roelof Temmingh and Carl van Wyk. Among the many young composers can be listed Kevin Volans, Jeanne Zaidel, Hans Roosenschoon, Hendrik Pienaar Hofmeyr, David Kosviner and Johan Cloete. Much of the vocal and instrumental music reflects the essence of the country, although many works, including the choral music of many African composers, are firmly based on Western idioms. Influential composers from abroad have included W.H. Bell, Erik Chisholm, Victor Hely-Hutchinson and Percival Kirby.

The South African Music Rights Organization is the copyright agent for public performance of works of some 40 countries; it also commissions works and awards scholarships to composers and performers.

See also Cape Town and Johannesburg.

2. Traditional music.

(i) Afrikaner folksongs. Afrikaans has been one of the official languages of the Republic of South Africa since 1925: it developed from 17th-century Dutch and by 1970 had been the mother tongue of roughly 4 million inhabitants (whites, Coloureds or mixed race and Cape Malays of the republic and Namibia).

Although the Afrikaans language freely assimilated traits from African languages the settlers had encountered, there is no trace of African music in its folksong, which like South African art music remains firmly in the European tradition: what idiosyncrasies exist arise from performing style only.

The folksong tradition thrives among the Cape Coloureds and Cape Malays, and despite the rise of Afrikaner nationalism, with its concomitant championing of Afrikaans songs and dances, the tradition has never been fully adopted by the white Afrikaners, particularly in urban areas. Ironically, in the 1970s it was still a matter for serious debate whether brown or black Afrikaans-speaking South Africans should be included in 'Afrikanerdom', and many Coloureds were then breaking their cultural links with white Afrikaners because of the state's policy of isolating the Coloured population from other Afrikaners.

Most Afrikaans folksong melodies are borrowed from European and American sources. The early settlers sang mainly Dutch songs. During the 18th century, German and French influence made itself felt, and in the second half of the 19th century English, and to some extent American, influence predominated. As folksong was approached from a literary viewpoint at the end of the 19th century, it mattered to the early champions of the language only that people should sing in Afrikaans.

Afrikaans music has no definitely discernible characteristic idiom. Apart from a small number of original Afrikaans songs – which were in any case European in style – most tunes were borrowed and given Afrikaans texts, often direct translations of part or the whole of the original. Often melodies or texts or both were the conflation of a number of sources. Almost all these songs are in the major key, and the same is true of church music, where most older 'modal' melodies have been displaced. The rhythms of these songs were often simplified, dotted rhythms normally being evened out; duple metre is common and most melodies are syllabic. They invariably end on the tonic, and larger intervals are often filled in. As most songs are very short, they seldom contain modulations other than to the dominant. A large number of so-called folksongs are settings of early Afrikaans texts, often imitations of German and English models.

(ii) Boeremusiek. The traditional Afrikaans dance music, boeremusiek is largely based on 19th-century European dance music, and although these dances are normally given colourful Afrikaans titles, they differ little in essence from their original models. Most are extremely short, with simple melodies and harmonic accompaniments based mainly on the three primary triads. The standard dance band consists of concertina, guitar and violin, which are augmented by whatever other instruments are available. The concertina gives a particular tone-colour to the orchestras and must have been largely responsible for the simple harmonic and melodic basis of these dances. Formerly the musicians were usually untrained amateurs, but although the South African Broadcasting Corporation until recently promoted such groups, most bands now are highly professional and to a large extent Americanized. In the early days of the settlement at the Cape, slaves often performed in dance orchestras and frequently provided music during mealtimes in the more affluent households. By 1800 a large number of freed slaves earned a living by teaching music to other slaves. Their music must have influenced the later boeremusiek.

(iii) Music of the Cape Malays. This group is a racially mixed Afrikaans-speaking Muslim community in and around Cape Town whose ancestors were slaves and political exiles from the Dutch East Indies, some of whom arrived at the Cape as early as 1652. The Cape Malay Choir Board, to which many choirs are affiliated, encourages folksinging and holds competitions. Song texts are Afrikaans or Dutch. The Dutch songs, which have been transmitted orally for several generations, have many local variants. Malay fishermen learnt most of them from sailors, although some originated at the Cape. Du Plessis (1944), writing of such songs, commented: 'However tenuous these songs appear on paper ... the desired effect is achieved by the robust rhythm, polyphonic interpretation and repetition' (p.46). The Cape Malays are also largely responsible for preserving a great number of Afrikaans songs, many of which originated among them.

Their particular contributions to the repertory are the ghommaliedjie and the moppie. The ghommaliedjie is normally sung between verses of a Dutch song; both songs accompany dancing. The words of the ghommaliedjie are often nonsensical and subordinate to the melody and rhythm. It is accompanied by a ghomma, a small single-headed drum made from a cask, which is held under the left arm and struck alternately by the right and left palms. The players usually join in after the singers have completed one bar of the song. Kirby considered that ghomma is derived from 'ngoma', a term ubiquitous in sub-Saharan Africa that is applied to many types of drum and to dances accompanied by drumming. The moppie is a short humorous song; the text is often of a derisive nature. Du Plessis and others have commented on oriental traits in the vocal embellishment of traditional wedding songs, particularly the use of 'glosses' – ornaments that precede the principal note.

The modern guitar is used by the Cape Malays to accompany the more lyrical songs: it replaced the now obsolete instrument known as the RAMKIE or ramkietjie. Other instruments used for accompanying singing are the banjo, mandolin, cello and ghomma.

The Cape Malay chalifa has been described as a sword dance: it is more a manifestation of the power of flesh over steel among 'true believers'. It originally had religious implications but is now performed chiefly as a public spectacle. To insistent rhythms on tambourines, a succession of dancers, while chanting prayers, appear to cut at themselves with swords and pierce their cheeks with steel skewers without drawing blood.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ART MUSIC

J. Bouws: Musiek in Suid-Afrika (Bruges, 1946)
A. Hartman: Oorsig van musiek in Suid-Afrika, 1652–1800 (diss., U. of the Witwatersrand, 1947)
E. Fleischmann: 'Contemporary Music in South Africa', Tempo, no.20 (1951), 23–8
J. Bouws: Suid-Afrikaanse komponiste van vandag en gister (Cape Town, 1957)
F.Z. van der Merwe: Suid-Afrikaanse musiekbibliografie, 1787–1952 (Pretoria, 1958–) [with suppl. to 1972, ed. J. van de Graaf (Cape Town, 1974)]
A.E. Snyman: 'n Ondersoek na individuele musiekonderrig in Suid-Afrika met spesiale verwysing na die onderwys in klavier (diss., U. of Potchefstroom, 1964)
A.J.H. Temmingh: Die ontwikkeling van die musiekpedagogie met spesiale verwysing na die skoolmusiek van vandag (diss., U. of Potchefstroom, 1965)
Y. Huskisson: The Bantu Composers of Southern Africa/Die Bantoe-komponiste van Suider-Afrika (Johannesburg, 1969, suppl. 1992)
E. Rosenthal: 125 Years of Music in South Africa: Darter's Jubilee (Cape Town, 1969)
A.J.J. Troskie: The Musical Life of Port Elizabeth, 1875–1900 (diss., U. of Port Elizabeth, 1969)
Performing Arts in South Africa, ed. South African Department of Information (Pretoria, 1969)
L. Wolpowich: James and Kate Hyde and the Development of Music in Johannesburg up to the First Wold War (Pretoria, 1969)
G.S. Jackson: Music in Durban: an Account of Musical Activities in Durban from 1850 to the Early Years of the Present Century (Johannesburg, 1970)
J. Bouws: 'Music', Standard Encyclopaedia of Southern Africa, ed. D.J. Potgieter, viii (Cape Town, 1970–6)
A.W. Wegelin: 'Musical Education', Standard Encyclopaedia of Southern Africa, ed. D.J. Potgieter, viii (Cape Town, 1970–6)
D.J. Reid: A Systematic Survey of the Musical History of the Transvaal to 1902 (diss., U. of Cape Town, 1971)
L.H. Voorendyk: Die musiekgeskiedenis van Wes-Transvaal, 1838–1960 (diss., U. of Potchefstroom, 1971)
J.J.A. van der Walt: 'Afrikaans Church and Mission Music', South African Music Encyclopedia, ed. J.P. Malan (Cape Town, 1979–86)
P. Klatzow, ed.: Composers in South Africa Today (Cape Town, 1987)
B. Pyper: 'SA's New Composers', Mail and Guardian (24–9 August 1998), 6

TRADITIONAL MUSIC

I.D. du Plessis: Die bydrae van die Kaapse Maleier tot die Afrikaanse volkslied (Cape Town, 1935)
P.R. Kirby: 'Musical Instruments of the Cape Malays', South African Journal of Science, xxxvi (1939), 477
I.D. du Plessis: The Cape Malays (Cape Town, 1944, 3/1972)
J. Bouws: Musiek in Suid-Afrika (Bruges, 1946)
J. Bouws: Woord en wys van die Afrikaanse lied (Cape Town, 1961)
C.M. van den Heever and P. de V. Pienaar, eds.: Kultuurgeskiedenis van die Afrikaner, 3 vols. (Cape Town, 1945–50)
J. Bouws: 'Afrikaanse volksmusiek', Tydskrif vir Wetenskap en Kuns, new ser., xi (1951), 123
S. Grové: 'Probleme van die Suid-Afrikaanse komponis', Standpunte, vii (1951–2), 69
I.D. du Plessis and C.A. Lückhoff: The Malay Quarter and its People (Cape Town, 1953), 43ff
F. van der Merwe: 'Die ontwikkeling van die Afrikaanse lied', South African Music Teacher, no.45 (1953), 8
F. van der Merwe: 'Uit ons vroegste musiek', African Notes and News, x (1953), 64
W. van Warmelo: 'Ou Afrikaanse volkswysies', Lantern, iii (1953–4), 250
J. Bouws: 'In die voetspore van die Afrikaanse volkslied', Tydskrif vir Wetenskap en Kuns, new ser., xvi (1956), 50
J. Bouws: 'Misverstande oor die Transvaalse volkslied', Tydskrif vir Letterkunde, vi/2 (1956), 78
W. van Warmelo: Liederwysies van vanslewe (Cape Town, 1958)
J. Bouws: Die volkslied: weerklank van 'n volk se hartklop (Cape Town, ?1959)
J. Bouws: 'Die Afrikaanse volkslied', Tydskrif vir Letterkunde, x/1 (1960), 16

Cape Malay Choir Board: 'A Tradition Lives On', Alpha, iii/3 (1965), 24
J. Bouws: Die musieklewe van Kaapstad 1800–1850: en sy verhouding tot die musiekkultuur van Wes-Europa (Cape Town, 1966)
J. Bouws: 'Die ontstaansgeskiedenis en agtergrond van die Hollands-Afrikaanse liederbundel van 1907', Tydskrif vir Geesteswetenskappe, ix (1969), 208
P. Jordaan: 'Die Afrikaanse volksang en volkspele aan die werk', Die taalgenoot, xxxviii/4 (1969), 23
J. Bouws: 'Petrus Imker Hoogenhout en die Afrikaanse volksliedjies', Tydskrif vir Geesteswetenskappe, xiii (1973), 209
W. van Warmeloo: 'Cape Malays', South African Music Encyclopedia (Cape Town, 1979–86)

III. Popular styles and cultural fusion

In South Africa, as elsewhere on the continent, popular styles and cultural fusion are by no means recent developments. Cape Town's social history as the 'Tavern of the Seas' and the 'Mother City' of South Africa has given this remote, but great port of call and seat of empire glossy layers of cosmopolitan, hybrid culture. In the late 17th century, slaves from the East Indies, India, Madagascar and the interior of southern Africa (Khoisan and Bantu peoples) who became musicians performed on Westernized versions of traditional instruments, fulfilling the roles of strings, woodwinds, horns, percussion and guitar. In later centuries, taverns, streets and the private orchestras of prominent Dutch Cape residents were soon filled with servants performing their own Euro-Afro-Islamic-Asiatic styles of music on store-bought concertinas, violins, guitars, trumpets and drums.

Even before the spread of European colonial dance forms and such trade store instruments into the African interior, the Nguni and Tswana (Sotho) Bantu-speaking peoples exchanged ritual and mundane performance culture among themselves and with the aboriginal Khoikhoi ('Hottentot') and San ('Bushmen'). As Kirby (1934) demonstrates, a considerable number of instrumental types and designs used among South Africa's originally nomadic Bantu-speaking peoples were borrowed from the San and Khoikhoi. Indeed, a survivor of the frigate HMS Grosvenor that sank off the coast of the Transkei (Eastern Cape) in 1782, who lived for many years among the Cape Nguni, recalled that a common greeting to anyone arriving from afar was the equivalent of 'Good to see you, and have you learnt any new songs or dances?'.

The forms of indigenous popular music associated with 20th-century South Africa have origins in the cultural fusion of European and African forms that accompanied the colonial penetration of the interior and the resulting growth of towns, mining camps and cities. Often first on the scene from the outside were Christian missionaries, who brought European hymnody and in some places the pedal organ or harmonium into an African musical environment in which a cappella choral music was by far the dominant form in both religious and recreational contexts.

The emergence of a distinctively African-European vocal music rooted in South African Bantu tradition was further enhanced by the influences of English music hall, school concert, American minstrel and light operatic traditions of touring performance groups in the latter half of the 19th century. In addition to a powerful, broadly based tradition of hymnography, black South African choirs developed popular genres that remain important in their performance contexts and musical influence. The isicathamiya of Natal's Zulu-speaking migrant workers, thoroughly researched by Erlmann (1991, 1996) and Coplan (1985), is an example of these popular genres. The tours of the Durban-based Ladysmith Black Mambazo that followed their participation in the successful Graceland concert tour, video and album with American popular composer Paul Simon have made this genre familiar to audiences throughout the world.

A much broader and more universally important category is that of African-European choral music in general, makwaya (Coplan, 1985). All such music blends African five- and six-tone scales and multilinear polyphonic organization with adjustments to European vocalization, tempered intervals and four-part harmonization. In the 1920s and 30s, nationally famous composers such as Reuben Caluza and J.P. Mohapeloa began to use tonic sol-fa notation to compose original makwaya and to arrange four-part choral compositions based on African folk melodies. These works were published, enthusiastically adopted by African school and amateur adult choirs and reabsorbed into a wide range of genres featured on the professional musical stage. Indeed, Erlmann's treatment (1996) demonstrates the specific influences of syncretic African vocal music on the wide, rich variety of popular instrumental and vocal styles that have entered the popular field since the 1920s. Among these are an indigenous, Afro-Christian hymnody developed into a formidable tradition of local African gospel and independent church music.

Beginning in the late 19th century and flourishing in the burgeoning African urban neighbourhoods by the 1920s was a range of related styles that blended influences from Afrikaner folk music and American ragtime and jazz with indigenous vocalization and vernacular lyrics. Played with inventiveness and joyfulness on keyboard, brass or store-bought instruments, these new urban 'concert-and-dance' forms crystallized in working-class entertainment venues as the classic form called marabi. Popular until World War II, marabi was initially a keyboard style and only later was elaborated by dance bands (Ballantine, 1993; Coplan, 1985). It set the pattern for a distinctive South African jazz variant, with its ubiquitous three-chord (I–IV–6/4–V7) harmonic pattern and cyclical AABB melodic phrase pattern. Later variants of the adaptation of jazz to local music contexts are most often based on this pattern. An example is the famous kwela penny whistle and guitar bands, of which Spokes Mashiyane and Lemmy Mabaso in the 1950s were perhaps the most artistic exponents.

At the same time, the flow of labour between urban centres and rural areas led to the indigenization of many hybrid urban styles of dance, song and instrumental playing, as well as the use of store-bought instruments in predominantly indigenous music, a category that has been labelled 'neo-traditional' (Coplan, 1985, 1994). A fully developed South African jazz form called mbaqanga ('homemade cornbread') or simply 'African jive' arrived also in the post-war period. Among its most visible exponents were big dance bands such as the Jazz Maniacs, vocal quartets such as the Manhattan Brothers, vocal soloists such as Miriam Makeba and small ensembles such as the Rhythm Kings. While these performers were rooted in the cultural traditions of Johannesburg, similar, mutually influential urban performance types were developing in other centres and finding their way into the musical culture of some of the smallest towns throughout South Africa (Coplan, 1985).

Significantly, the enforced cultural isolation of the apartheid policy and a massive increase in the number of rural Africans arriving in the industrial centres in the 1960s led to a musical reformulation of more clearly indigenous stylizations in a new urban context. African music played to a jive beat in 8/8 time on electric guitars, drum kits and saxophones inherited the name mbaqanga and retained it long after 'African jazz' moved on with other world trends. Among mbaqanga's earliest and greatest 'traditionalized' exponents were Mahlathini and his Queens, who toured Europe and North America to great acclaim in the 1980s and 90s.

In the late 1960s, an ideology of cultural nativism or positive revaluation of African and other local performance traditions aligned itself with the growing political resistance to apartheid policy in the cities. Groups such as guitarist-composer Philip Thabane's Malombo Jazz absorbed many ethnic traditions of instrumental and vocal music found in northern South Africa into the less-constrained format of free jazz improvisation played over a danceable local African percussive bass. Mainstream South African jazz, which had become increasingly American, also took hold of the trend towards indigenization. Abdullah Ibrahim's (Dollar Brand's) reinvention of the older Cape Town style of marabi jazz on the album Mannenburg (later released internationally as Cape Town Fringe) took the South African musical world and sales charts by storm. The heydey of Malombo in the late 1970s coincided with the rise of Juluka, a group featuring Anglo-Jewish Jonathan Clegg and Zulu Sipho Mchunu with an innovative blend of the Zulu-language, neo-traditional mbaqanga, American 'soft rock' and guitar balladry. Clegg's ability to speak, dance, compose, sing and play guitar in the Zulu style caught the imagination of South African youth from all racial backgrounds who were looking for cultural bridges across the destructive political chasm created by the white government then in power.

The cultural isolation of South Africa began to erode as the challenge to apartheid gained momentum in the 1980s. Styles of music, forms of arrangement and a near-revolution in performance and recording technologies occurred between South Africa and the rest of the world of popular music, including exchanges with the English-speaking Caribbean, the USA, the United Kingdom and, importantly, the rest of sub-Saharan Africa.

South African Lucky Dube is currently one of the world's leading exponents of Jamaican reggae. Soukous (also known as kwasa-kwasa in South Africa) from the Democratic Republic of the Congo (formerly Zaire) has achieved its own local expressions and adaptations along with those of the ubiquitous soul and funk of Black America. Pride and resurgent interest in the contemporary possibilities of indigenous traditional music accompanied these influences. Groups such as Harari, led by Sipho Mabuse, a talented composer and player of many instruments, successfully blended Zulu dance-song, soul and rock. Noise Khanyile and his studio group blended Mahlathini's mbaqanga with soukous.

Perhaps most significant of all was the emergence from humble origins of a new style of South African popular dance balladry with a distinctive African urban 'township' beat that re-established local artists as viable competitors with American and British imports in the recording industry. The basis of this style, called 'bubblegum' in the 1970s, or alternatively 'Soweto soul', was the modernized, sophisticated choral jazz of Miriam Makeba and Letta Mbuli, blended with solo popular balladry by vocalists such as Steve Kekana and others. In the 1980s, popular dance vocalists Brenda Fassie, Chicco (Sello Twala), Condry Ziqubu, Sipho Mabuse and, more recently, Rebecca Malope gradually outgrew their shallow, unsophisticated beginnings in 'bubblegum' with the innovation of a fulsome, richly textured new style of popular dance-song that combined a range of some of the most musically interesting local and imported qualities with lyrics that on occasion provide thought-provoking political and social commentary.

A renaissance in South African music that reworks and develops stylistic blends and influences from virtually everywhere into the familiar local framework of popular genres has begun. This can best be seen in recent television programmes featuring new neo-traditional and indigenous popular music, new regulations requiring that 30% of all music played over the radio be performed by South African performers and the proliferation of local-market and community broadcasting. Its exponents are indisputably brilliant in blending rich musical styles with attractive performative traditions. Whatever the other benefits of freedom and democracy in South Africa, it is clearly an encouragement to its peoples' music.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

AND OTHER RESOURCES

P.R. Kirby: The Musical Instruments of the Native Races of South Africa (Oxford, 1934/R, 2/1968)

P.R. Kirby: 'The Effect of Western Civilization on Bantu Music', Western Civilization and the Natives of South Africa: Studies in Culture Contact, ed. I. Schapera (London, 1934), 131–40

D. Rycroft: 'The New "Town" Music of Southern Africa', Recorded Folk Music, no.1 (1958), 54–7

Y. Huskisson: The Bantu Composers of Southern Africa (Johannesburg, 1969)

D. Rycroft: 'Evidence of Stylistic Continuity in Zulu "Town" Music', Essays for a Humanist: an Offering to Klaus Wachsmann, ed. C. Seeger and B. Wade (New York, 1977), 216–60

M. Andersson: Music in the Mix: the Story of South African Popular Music (Johannesburg, 1981)

D. Coplan: In Township Tonight! South Africa's Black City Music and Theatre (Johannesburg, 1985)

P. Larlham: Black Theater, Dance, and Ritual in South Africa (Ann Arbor, 1985)

D. Cockrell: 'Of Gospel Hymns, Minstrel Shows, and Jubilee Singers: toward Some Black South African Musics', American Music, v/4 (1987), 417–32

C. Hamm: Afro-American Music, South Africa, and Apartheid (New York, 1988)

L. Meintjes: 'Paul Simon's Graceland, South Africa, and the Mediation of Musical Meaning', EthM, xxxiv (1990), 37–74

V. Erlmann: African Stars: Studies in Black South African Performance (Chicago, 1991)

C.J. Ballantine: Marabi Nights: Early South African Jazz and Vaudeville (Johannesburg, 1993)

D.B. Coplan: 'A Terrible Commitment: Balancing the Tribes in South African National Culture', Perilous States: Conversations on Culture, Politics and Nation, ed. G.E. Marcus (Chicago, 1993)

D.B. Coplan: In the Time of Cannibals: the Word Music of South Africa's Basotho Migrants (Chicago, 1994)

V. Erlmann: Nightsong: Performance, Power, and Practice in South Africa (Chicago, 1996)

RECORDINGS

Our Kind of Jazz, Zakes Nkosi, EMI/Brigadiers Skyline SK80160 (1964)

Music Sounds of Africa, Gallo SGALP1578 (1969)

Amabutho, Ladysmith Black Mambazo, Gallo/Motella LPBS14 (1973)

Mannenburg is Where it's Happening, Abdullah Ibrahim [Dollar Brand], The Sun (1974)
Rufaro/Happiness, Harari, The Sun GE1874 (1976)
Amandla, ANC Cultural Workers, A-Disk S800718 (1980)
Universal Men, Johnny Clegg and Juluka, MINC1995 (1984)
Graceland, Paul Simon, WB 25447-1 (1986)
Homeland: a Collection of Black South African Music, i and ii, Rounder 5009/5028 (1987)
Indestructible Beat of Soweto, Shanachie SH43033 (1987)
Sounds of Soweto, EMI CLB46698 (1987)
Paris—Soweto, Mahlathini and the Mahotella Queens, CellulOid 66829-4 (1988)
Sangoma, Miriam Makeba, WB 25673 (1988)
The Art of Noise, Noise Khanyile, Globe Style/Shifty ORBO45 (1989)
Siya Hamba, Original Music OMA111C (1989)
House of Exile, Lucky Dube, Shanachie SH-43094 (Gallo) (1991)
South Africa, various pfmrs, CCP4065524 (1991)
Cape Jazz, Mountain Records DEMOCCP74 (1992)

DAVID K. RYCROFT/ANGELA IMPEY (I, 1), GREGORY F. BARZ (I, 2), JOHN BLACKING/JACO KRUGER (I, 3), C.T.D. MARIVATE (I, 4), CAROLINE MEARS/JAMES MAY (II, 1), JAMES MAY (II, 2), DAVID COPLAN (III)

South African Gospel. Hymns brought by European missionaries to southern Africa found a ready reception among indigenous people, though the harmonic scales their performance required were markedly different from those of southern African singing traditions. By the late 19th century, black South African hymn composition was well-established. Enoch Sontonga composed South Africa's most celebrated hymn, Nkosi Sikelel'i Africa, in the early 1900s, and today it is the South African national anthem.

Contemporary South Africa's most distinctive choral gospel music comes from its Protestant (particularly Methodist), Zionist and Pentecostal churches. In keeping with its church's Africanist theology, Zionist gospel has gone further than other churches in its use of traditional African harmony, tonality and dance steps. The result is a unique, compelling mix of mournfulness and celebration, often performed for hours on end, particularly at funeral-night vigils.

South Africa's solo gospel artists hail from its Pentecostal churches and are the country's most popular recording artists. The current gospel queen, Rebecca Malope, is celebrated for her impassioned delivery of rousing anthems. Also popular are the International Pentecostal Church Choir (IPCC) and famed Zulu isicathamiya harmonists Ladysmith Black Mambazo.

GREGORY MTHEMBU-SALTER

South African jazz. Though North American influences on black city culture in South Africa predate the 20th century, they found new conduits during and after the 1920s, for example in gramophone records and films. By the early 1930s, black dance bands started to appear, modelling themselves directly on US prototypes. They played not only US (or US-inspired) swing numbers but also their own MARABI-based pieces in swing style. It is this unique and prodigious genre that by the late 1940s came to be known as African jazz or MBAQANGA.

In a symbiotic relationship with these bands were the vaudeville troupes, companies who usually specialized in a variety of musical and theatrical routines. The troupes and bands participated jointly in a genre of all-night entertainment known as 'Concert and Dance'. Like that of the bands, the troupes' repertory was derived from both foreign and local sources.

During the 1950s, such innovations were followed by kwela, the extraordinary marabi-derived pennywhistle music of the streets, and by a multitude of jazz-based vocal groups. But the apartheid legislation of the 1950s forced the removal of entire black communities, and soon brought the era of the large dance orchestras to an end. Smaller groups, rooted either in bebop or marabi, survived for a while.

The apartheid state unleashed a period of unprecedented state repression in 1960, marking politically and culturally the end of an epoch. The exodus of jazz musicians to Europe and the USA began; most never returned. In exile, musicians such as Abdullah Ibrahim (Dollar Brand), Hugh Masekela, Jonas Gwangwa, Chris McGregor, Dudu Pukwana and Johnny Dyani brought South African jazz to the attention of international audiences. At home, however, jazz entered a benighted era. The state radio, and therefore the commercial recording industry, now favoured a new style of mbaqanga which was strongly neo-traditional. For many jazz musicians, it was the end of the road.

When a virile, oppositional popular musical culture began to reappear, it did so only because of the re-emergence of black working-class and community politics in the mid-1980s. The revival of jazz was symbolically central to this, and its return to its former popular status was accompanied by years of experimentation and integration. Since the country's first non-racial, democratic elections in 1994, the jazz scene has been dominated by younger players, most of whom continue to seek an individual voice through a fusion of international styles with idioms such as marabi that are locally rooted.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

D. Coplan: 'The African Performer and the Johannesburg Entertainment Industry: the Struggle for African Culture on the Witwatersrand', Labour Townships and Protest, ed. B. Bozzoli (Johannesburg, 1979)
M. Andersson: Music in the Mix (Johannesburg, 1981)
D. Coplan: In Township Tonight! South Africa's Black City Music and Theatre (Johannesburg, 1985)
C. Hamm: Afro-American Music, South Africa, and Apartheid (New York, 1988)
C. Ballantine: 'The Jazzmen', Leadership, viii/6 (1989), 40–45
C. Hamm: '"The Constant Companion of Man": Separate Development, Radio Bantu and Music', Popular Music, x/2 (1991), 147–74
L. Allen: Pennywhistle Kwela: a Musical, Historical and Socio-Political Analysis (thesis, U. of Natal, 1993)
C. Ballantine: Marabi Nights: Early South African Jazz and Vaudeville (Johannesburg, 1993)
C. Ballantine: 'Looking to the USA: the Politics of Male Close-Harmony Song Style in South Africa during the 1940s and 1950s', Popular Music, xviii/1 (1999), 1–18

CHRISTOPHER BALLANTINE

South African Music Rights Organisation [SAMRO]. See COPYRIGHT, §VII (under South Africa).

Southam, Ann (b Winnipeg, MB, 4 Feb 1937). Canadian composer. She studied composition with Samuel Dolin at the Royal Conservatory of Music (Toronto) and electronic music with Gustav Ciamaga at the University of Toronto, graduating from the latter in 1963. In 1966 she began a close association with the New Dance Group of Canada (later renamed the Toronto Dance Theatre) that continued into the 1970s. During that time Southam became a pioneer of electronic music in Canada, composing around 30 taped works for dance on a voltage-controlled AKS synthesizer. Her focus shifted to acoustic instruments in the 1980s. She was a founding member of the Association of Canadian Women Composers and served as its president from 1980 to 1988.

Southam often makes use of a 12-note row within a tonal framework, creating an uneasy dialectic between these two compositional techniques. She seems especially drawn to the musical ambiguities and emotional instability created by combing a drone or pedal note that creates tonal expectations with a 12-note row, made up of pitches that sometimes fulfil, sometimes frustrate those expectations. Works such as Alternate Currents (1987), In a Measure of Time (1988) and Full Circles (1996) explore these tensions. A strong kinaesthetic sense also characterizes her music. Her works for acoustic instruments convey a child-like pleasure in the physical act of music-making. The simplicity of her style, marked by the influence of minimalism since the late 1970s, creates an unexpected intensity in her music.

WORKS
(selective list)

TRADITIONAL MEDIA

Orch: Divertimento, str orch, 1966 [withdrawn]; Webster's Spin, str orch, 1993

Chbr: Towards Green, fl, cl, vn, va, 1976; Networks, fl, trbn, va, vc, pf, perc, 1978; Qnt, str qt, pf, 1986; Throughways: Improvising Music, fl, cl, bn, sax qt, tpt, trbn, perc, vib, mar, pf, elec gui, elec bass, vn, vc, db, 1988; Song of the Varied Thrush, str qt, 1991; The Music So Far, cl, pf, 1992; This Time, fl, vc, pf, 1992; Full Circles, tpt, vn, vib, pf, 1996

Pf: Suite, 1960 [withdrawn]; 4 Bagatelles, 1961; Sea Flea, for young pfmrs, 1962; Altitude Lake, 1963; Three in Blue: Jazz Preludes, for young pfmrs, 1965; Five Shades of Blue, 1970; Fifteen, 1977; Patterns of Nine, 1979; Rivers: Sets 1–2, 1979; Slow Music I–III, 1979–81; Soundspinning, for young pfmrs, 1979; Soundstill, 1979, first movt rev. 1996; Red Hot, Cool Blue, 1980; Four in Hand, 2 pf, 1981; Rivers: Set 3, 1981; Sounding for a New Pf, 1986; Spatial View of Pond 'After a Painting by Aiko Suzuki', 1986; In a Measure of Time, 2 pf, 1988; Given Time, 1993; Remembering Schubert, 1993

Other solo inst: Rhapsodic Interlude, vn, 1963; Alternate Currents, perc, 1987

ELECTRO-ACOUSTIC

Music for dance (tape, unless otherwise stated): The Recitation, 1968; Against Sleep, 1969; Encounter, 1969; Voyage for 4 Male Dancers, 1970; Prospect Park, 1971; Boat, River, Moon, 1972; Harold Morgan's Delicate Balance (S. O'Huigin), 1973; L'assassin menace, 1974; Walls and Passageways, 1974; Arrival of All Time, 1975; Night Hawks, 1975; The Reprieve, 1975; Seastill, 1979; Emerging Ground, 1983; Rewind, 1984; Ces plaisirs, 1985; Goblin Market, 1986; Broken symmetry, live elec, 1987; Greening (E. Carr) [withdrawn]

Tape and insts: Integrities (G. Arbour, M. Thompson), nar, pf, tape, 1975; Interviews (Arbour, Thompson), nar, pf, tape, 1976; Glass Houses, pf, tape (opt.), 1981; Tuning, va, tape, 1982; Re-tuning, va, tape, 1985

Other works for tape: Sky Sails (S. O'Huigin), tape, 1973; Eliptosonics, nar, pf, tape, slides, 1979, collab. D. McIntosh, V. Sturdee; Light Lines, Sound Lines, tape, slides, 1979, collab. V. Sturdee; Natural Resources (What to Do Till the Power Comes On), musique concrète, 1981; Music for Slow Dancing, tape, 1985; Fluke Sound, tape, 1989

TAMARA BERNSTEIN

South America. See LATIN AMERICA and under names of individual countries.

South Asia. See BANGLADESH; INDIA; PAKISTAN; and SRI LANKA.

South Bank Centre. London arts complex built after World War II with three concert halls: the Royal Festival Hall, the Queen Elizabeth Hall and the Purcell Room. See LONDON (i), §VII, 3.

South-east Asia. This diverse cultural region encompasses the peoples living south of China, east of India, north of Australia and west of Papua New Guinea. Mainland South-east Asia consists of the nations of Myanmar (Burma), Laos, Cambodia (Kampuchea), Vietnam, Thailand, peninsular Malaysia and Singapore. Insular South-east Asia consists of the vast archipelagos of Indonesia and the Philippines, along with Brunei and two states of eastern Malaysia in western and northern Borneo (the remainder of Borneo, called Kalimantan, is part of Indonesia). This region is home to over 350 million people, roughly 200 million of whom live in Indonesia, the most populous South-east Asian nation and the fourth most populous in the world. Many hundreds of languages are spoken in South-east Asia, some by as few as several hundred people, others (such as Javanese and Vietnamese) by 60 or 70 million people. For more detailed information, see individual country articles.

1. BACKGROUND. Despite the extraordinary diversity among the peoples of this region and the long history of cultural influence from more remote major powers, the music and related performing arts that have developed share some broad characteristics that set the region off from neighbouring East Asia, South Asia and Oceania. Vietnam is the exception; its ethnic majority supports musical practices more closely resembling Han and other Chinese music than the musics of, for example, Malaysia and Indonesia. Foremost among the South-east Asian shared characteristics is the pervasive use of knobbed gongs, which produce fixed pitch, in contrast to the flat gongs of neighbouring East Asia. These are frequently arranged in sets (gong-chimes) and are used in ensembles, ranging from a few instruments to the large GAMELAN ensembles of Java and Bali, PĪ PHĀT ensembles of Thailand and similar ensembles in Laos, Cambodia and Myanmar. Also found throughout the region are ensembles dominated by drums, usually double-headed and played in combination with a double-reed aerophone. Ensemble music frequently serves as a core component in performances of theatre and dance. When music is performed without theatre or dance, it is most often in the context of community or family ritual and only rarely in a secular 'concert' situation.

Vocal music tends to be highly ornamented and, when sung in conjunction with instruments, to exhibit a heterophonic relationship between melodic instrumental parts and the vocal line. Scholars have debated the appropriate way to characterize the textures of multi-part ensemble music indigenous to the region, some (especially Hood and Morton) describing Javanese and Thai music, respectively, as polyphonic, or more specifically 'stratified polyphony'. Others (including Sutton and Brinner) suggest that even the most complex ensemble music, such as that of Central Javanese court-derived gamelan music, is best understood as heterophonic, as the pitched parts heard simultaneously are constructed as variations of a single melodic entity, either sounded explicitly in one or more voices or held in the performers' minds as a basis for their varied realizations.

This region is home to a variety of unique tuning and scale systems, most of them either pentatonic or emphasizing a pentatonic core with several (usually two) auxiliary tones. One finds nearly equidistant pentatonic (e.g. sléndro in Java) and heptatonic (e.g. Thailand) tuning systems and gapped pentatonic ones (e.g. Sundanese pélog degung, Balinese saih lima). While some music is in free rhythm, with no fixed pulse, most music of the region is pulsed and organized into cyclical binary groupings with further binary subdivisions. Triple and additive metres, though they occur occasionally in some indigenous musical practice, are atypical of the region.

This article will elaborate on these and other elements found in many of the musical traditions of South-east Asia, though it should be stressed that musicians and their audiences in South-east Asia are likely to emphasize the differences rather than the similarities between styles that can be shown analytically to resemble one another structurally.

The global flow of Euro-American popular music, through commercial recordings (primarily cassettes) and radio and television broadcasts, has had a profound impact in nearly all areas of South-east Asia in recent years, resulting not only in a widespread familiarity with pop styles and stars of the West, but also in burgeoning indigenous popular music cultures. Many South-east Asian popular musicians have adopted the instruments, harmonies and vocal styles of Western popular music to create songs in South-east Asian languages. New South-east Asian musical styles have also developed, some combining diverse external influences (such as Indonesian dangdut; see INDONESIA, §VIII, 1(v)), and others combining Western popular musical elements with indigenous ones (such as the Filipino combinations of Western guitars and vocal harmonies with indigenous percussion instruments in Pinoy folk; see PHILIPPINES, §III, 3(ii)).

Relatively few primary sources exist for the indigenous musical traditions of South-east Asia. Although writing has been known in both mainland and insular South-east Asia for over 1000 years, few early writings deal directly with music or related performing arts other than to mention and occasionally describe performances. Music has largely been transmitted orally; even the court and court-derived musical traditions have remained predominantly oral, despite efforts over the last century or so (often attributable to the impetus of Western colonial powers) to notate indigenous musical repertories. Notation of core melodic lines, often with indications for interpretation by various instruments, has been developed in Java, Bali and Thailand (among others), preserved in manuscripts and, more recently, in published collections. These serve primarily as records for reference by musicians and scholars, rather than as sources to be used in performance.

The musics of South-east Asia have been subjected to widely varying degrees of scholarly inquiry by both indigenous and foreign scholars. Central Javanese gamelan music (karawitan) has been the subject of many major book-length studies, providing considerable historical depth and theoretical sophistication both on traditional musicological topics (e.g. mode, performance practice, creative process etc.) and those related to cultural studies (e.g. music in relation to nationalist and post-colonial discourses). These exist in various European languages, as well as Javanese and the national language, Indonesian. In contrast, very little has been written by either indigenous or foreign scholars concerning music in Myanmar or Laos, for example, despite the variety of unique musical traditions in both. Aside from a few brief studies on instruments, repertory, performance styles and mode by Lustig, Zaw, Becker, Williamson and Garfias, publications on music in Myanmar have been focused on the dissemination of classical song texts. Even less has been written about music in Singapore, a city-state whose population consists largely of peoples of Chinese descent (with sizeable Malay and Indian minorities), or about music in Brunei, which shares much with the eastern Malaysian states of Sarawak to its south and Sabah to its north. Music in Thailand, the only country of South-east Asia never to be colonised by a European power, drew scholarly interest in the late 19th century due to its equidistant heptatonic scale. Thai scholars have written about Thai music from at least the 1930s, followed by American scholars from the 1970s.

Work on music in the Philippines has consisted mostly of in-depth studies of music of the South (Mindanao and the Sulu Archipelago), stressing kulintang music. This has been complemented by a few studies of upland peoples; little, however, has been written on the music of the Christian majority. Scholarly interest in the musics and related performing arts of Malaysia has been somewhat greater, including studies of popular and mass-media musics, although focus on the music of eastern Malaysia has been rare.

Musicological study of the other countries of mainland South-east Asia has been sporadic. Recent scholarship has turned to Vietnamese, Cambodian and Laotian (especially Hmông) communities overseas, particularly in the USA. (For detailed discussion of research, see individual country entries.)

2. INSTRUMENTS AND ENSEMBLES. Among the great variety of musical instruments indigenous to the peoples of South-east Asia, one can identify several instrument types whose prominence helps to define South-east Asia as a musical area. Foremost among these is the knobbed or bossed GONG, a metal idiophone that is usually sounded by a padded beater. These range in size from the gong ageng (large gong) of Java, which in some instances measures over a metre in diameter, to the small kettle-gongs used in the kulintang music of the southern Philippines, the engkromong of Sabah, the talempong of West Sumatra, the khọng wong of Thailand and the kyì-waìng of Myanmar. The raised knob produces a focused pitch and allows the gongs to be used in sets (gong-chimes) to play melodies, as well as to mark periodicity in ensemble compositions (see §4 below). Flat gongs (i.e. without raised knobs) are also used in South-east Asia, primarily in isolated upland communities such as those in central Luzon (Philippines) and the highlands of Vietnam.

The preferred metal for knobbed gongs throughout South-east Asia is bronze, although brass and iron are also used, sometimes as less costly substitutes for bronze. In many South-east Asian societies, metal instruments, particularly gongs made from bronze, are imbued with spiritual power. Individual instruments or even whole ensembles of these instruments may be sacred heirlooms and are given offerings of incense, water, flowers and food in order to bring favour upon the community or the individuals who own the instruments. In Java, large bronze gongs or whole gamelan sets (consisting mostly of bronze percussion instruments) are often given names with the prefix kyahi, an honorific term for venerated Islamic teacher.

Also widespread (and often played in combination with gong instruments) are various kinds of double-headed membranophones, either cylindrical or barrel-shaped, played horizontally with both hands or sometimes with a stick beater in one hand. The heads are usually of unequal size, one providing lower-pitched sounds than the other. Several gong and drum ensembles feature drum-chimes: the pat-waìng (in the HSAÌNG-WAÌNG ensemble of Myanmar) and the taganing (in the gondang ensemble of North Sumatra, Indonesia). These are sets of small, single-headed drums of graduated size and pitch, on which are played relatively rapid melodic passages, comparable to those of the gong-chimes in many other South-east Asian ensembles.

A great many ensembles that consist primarily of gongs and drums also incorporate one or more melodic instruments capable of producing a sustained pitch: usually either a reed aerophone (e.g. the hnè in the Burmese hsaìng waìng and the puik-puik in the *ganrang*ensemble music of south Sulawesi) or a bowed lute (several varieties of sǭ in Thai pī phāt and MAHŌRĪ, rebab in Malaysian ma'yong theatre music and various kinds of gamelan ensembles in Java, Bali and Lombok). Flutes, while widespread throughout South-east Asia, generally play a less prominent role in ensemble music than reed aerophones, with the notable exception of the core of large end-blown bamboo flutes in the Balinese gamelan gambuh.

Slab percussion instruments are predominant in some of the large ensembles of South-east Asia, the slabs (or keys) made of metal (bronze is preferred), wood or bamboo. In many of the gamelan ensembles of Sunda, Central and East Java, Bali and Lombok, instruments consisting of from as few as four to as many as 22 metal keys of graduated size and pitch serve as the core melodic instruments. Several medium and large ensemble-types (such as the pī phāt of Thailand, similar ensembles in Cambodia and Laos, and gamelan ensembles of Indonesia and Malaysia) also include a wooden xylophone (Ranāt in Thai, GAMBANG in Indonesian languages). Bamboo xylophones are also used, as in the gamelan gambang of Bali, the calung ensemble of western Central Java and the ANGKLUNG ensemble of Banyuwangi, East Java.

Small ensemble combinations of musical instruments are found throughout South-east Asia and are heard in a wide variety of contexts. These range from the loud and exuberant sounds of oboe and drum ensembles, found from Myanmar to eastern Indonesia, to the soft and intimate sounds of plucked chordophones (most often lutes, sometimes zithers), which are played in the upland Philippines, the cities of Vietnam, the forests of East Kalimantan (Indonesian Borneo), rural North Sumatra, the homes of Thai aristocracy, and at Islamic gatherings in Sulawesi, among countless others. While it is difficult to generalize about either the structure or the function of these musical ensembles, several broad patterns emerge. Firstly, small ensembles are more likely than large ones to be used in secular (non-ceremonial) contexts. Ample exceptions to this pattern could be listed, but in general, South-east Asian societies tend to use their larger ensembles for important rituals. Secondly, small ensembles are less likely than larger ones to be used for the accompaniment of theatre or dance. Instead, small ensembles accompany vocal music that may either convey a story or consist of the singing of improvised or semi-improvised texts on a range of subjects, including love and courtship. Furthermore, small ensembles tend not to be structured around recurring cycles marked explicitly by the sounding of gongs or other time-marking instruments, although repetition and strophic form are common. Finally, in small ensembles with more than one type of instrument, one often finds contrastive layers of musical activity: one layer of melody (if not from a vocalist, then from a double-reed, fiddle or in some instances a gong-chime or plucked chordophone), a second layer of dense percussion (sometimes melodic, sometimes more timbral and rhythmic, but constantly active) and a third layer of sparser rhythmic activity, articulating the phrases.

Music employing only a single instrument, either by itself or accompanying singing, is not uncommon in isolated societies living far from urban centres, but it is relatively rare in South-east Asia generally, at least in comparison to other major world regions. Upland peoples throughout much of South-east Asia maintain a number of solo instrumental traditions, playing jew's harp, bamboo flute, polychordal tube zither, mouth organ and various other bamboo instruments. Some of these kinds of instruments are also played in small ensemble configurations as well.

In lowland areas, especially in and around urban centres, one also finds solo instrumental genres, usually involving a chordophone and as an accompaniment to singing. Among these are the sinrilik of South Sulawesi, in which a male singer accompanies himself on a two-string fiddle (késok-késok), as well as innumerable varieties of boat lute or zither known in Indonesia as kecapi (or cognate terms; see KACAPI (i) and KACAPI (ii)), kudyapiq in the Philippines, čhakhē (jakhē) in Thailand, and so forth. Among the countries of South-east Asia, however, a solo-instrument focus is most prominent in Vietnam, where the instruments and genres bear close relationships to those of Vietnam's East Asian neighbours (especially China). Here we find an extensive repertory of art music compositions for monochord (ĐÀN BẦU, also known as đàn độc huyen) and large board zither (ĐÀN TRANH), among others.

3. TUNING, SCALES AND MODES. The musical traditions indigenous to South-east Asia employ an enormous variety of tuning, scale and modal systems. Even within the musical practice of a single ethnolinguistic group (e.g. the Burmese of Myanmar, the Sundanese of Indonesia), one finds a multiplicity of these systems even within one genre (e.g. tembang Sunda, with kecapi (zither) and suling (vertical bamboo flute) accompanying song; see INDONESIA, §V, 1). The musical traditions nurtured by courts and other official institutions are those that tend to have the most elaborated theoretical systems; nevertheless, a keen sense of pitch and concern with pitch and intervals, and evidence of modal practice (contrasting sets of hierarchically ordered tones and/or melodic gestures), are by no means limited to the court traditions. In this overview article, it will suffice to consider several representative traditions and to indicate patterns of similarity and contrast.

At the outset it is necessary to distinguish between a 'tuning' system and a 'scale' system. The former refers to the set of tones available within a particular genre, or on a particular instrument. One tuning system is differentiated from another by the intervals separating these tones and, in some instances, by the absolute pitch of the tones. A scale system consists of the tones used within a given musical piece or passage and may involve fewer tones than those available.

(i) Tuning. An inventory of even the more prominent tuning systems in South-east Asia would require a lengthy exposition. Yet several characteristics seem widespread. The first of these is a tendency toward tuning systems of either five or seven tones per octave. The five-tone systems vary in intervallic structure from near equidistance, as in the case of Javanese sléndro (in which intervals are generally larger than a tempered whole-tone, 200 cents, but smaller than a tempered minor 3rd, 300 cents), to a gapped tuning that combines small and large intervals, as in the Sundanese pélog degung or Balinese saih lima (in which intervals range from close to a tempered semitone, 100 cents, to a major 3rd, 400 cents). The seven-tone tuning systems vary from the near equidistance of Thai classical music (played by the pī phāt, mahōrī, and khrụ̄ang, saī ensembles) to gapped tunings consisting of small and large intervals, as in Javanese pélog.

It is important to note that the concept of a tuning system in South-east Asia generally does not carry with it an absolute standard, either of absolute pitch or of exact intervallic structure. In Java, for example, the 'same' tuning (e.g. sléndro or pélog) often differs from one set of instruments to another, both in intervallic structure and in absolute pitch, in some instances only very slightly but in others quite markedly. Musicians and listeners have no trouble identifying all the sléndro tunings as such, but the more discerning among them readily distinguish emotive nuances associated with particular intervallic configuration, as well as the overall pitch (high, medium, low) of one ensemble relative to others.

Although moderately flexible five- and seven-tone tunings are predominant in South-east Asia, one finds others, such as the Balinese saih angklung, the tuning used for the gamelan angklung, which consists of only four tones per octave and is interpreted by some to be derived (or derivable) from Balinese seven-tone saih pitu and by others to derive from the Balinese equivalent of Javanese sléndro, omitting the fifth degree of the scale. Regardless of its origins (which would be next to impossible to prove with any degree of certainty) the saih angklung tuning consists of one large interval (close to a 4th, 500 cents), and three medium intervals (each somewhere between a major 2nd and a minor 3rd).

In many parts of contemporary South-east Asia, whether as a result of extended contact during the colonial era or of more recent influence from Western music through the mass media, some ensembles have been created with Western equal-tempered or diatonic tuning; other 'older' ensembles have also undergone a process of alteration that has included retuning to these Western tunings. For example, in West Sumatra, Indonesia, where a great variety of pentatonic tunings can be found for the local drum and knobbed-gong ensembles known as talempong, teachers at the government-sponsored high school for the arts (SMKI, Sekolah Menengah Karawitan Indonesia) and the college-level academy (ASKI, Akademi Seni Karawitan Indonesia) developed a new talempong ensemble consisting of the same kinds of instruments, but tuned to the Western seven-tone diatonic scale and known as talempong diatonik. In Vietnam, government-sponsored troupes, affiliated with the National Conservatory in Hanoi, routinely use indigenous bamboo idiophones and aerophones derived from Vietnam's many minority groups, but retuned to Western equal-tempered tuning. The ensembles comprised of these modified instruments play melodies supported by Western diatonic harmony. Outside formal arts institutions, similar kinds of modification have been made in many instances throughout South-east Asia. Other indigenous ensembles, such as the KULINTANG ensembles of North Sulawesi, Indonesia, and the RONDALLA ensemble of the Christianized areas of the Philippines, exist only in Western tuning.

(ii) Scales. Those derived from the various tunings found in South-east Asia are nearly always either pentatonic, or heptatonic with a pentatonic core. In many cases the scale may simply consist of all of the available tones in the tuning. For example, most pieces employing Javanese sléndro tuning use all five degrees despite greater emphasis on some tones than on others (often related to the pathet system; see §(iii) below). Where seven tones are available in the tuning system, musical passages or whole pieces often employ only five tones, or emphasize five tones, with an occasional substitution of one or both of the other tones. The Javanese pélog tuning system yields two basic scales, named bem and barang. *Pélog*tones are generally referred to by ciphers (from 1 to 7); the bem scale consists of tones 1, 2, 3, 5 and 6, while the barang scale consists of tones 2, 3, 5, 6 and 7. In actual practice, tone 4 may replace tone 3 in bem and replace tone 5 in barang. Tone 1 occasionally appears as a substitute for 7 in barang pieces and tone 7 as a substitute for 1 in bem pieces, although these are the defining tones of their respective scales (i.e. tone 1 in pélog is sometimes referred to as bem and tone 7 as barang).

In addition to the occasional appearance of substitute tones from outside the pentatonic core, some South-east Asian music may be pentatonically based but may modulate between two or more pentatonic scales. For example, the music most commonly played on the pī phāt ensembles of Thailand emphasizes five of the available seven tones per octave, at least within a given phrase or section. Often there can be a kind of tonal transition that David Morton has referred to as 'metabole', a term from Brailoiu (1955) and applied by Trần Văn Khê to Vietnamese music (1962) to indicate a change in pitch level, as distinct from the Western practice of modulation between harmonic or key areas. The practice of metabole involves the introduction of an auxiliary tone near the end of a pentatonic melodic phrase, serving as a pivot into the next phrase, which now uses a different pentatonic scale with the substitute or auxiliary tone becoming core, and one of the former core tones becoming auxiliary.

(iii) Modes. Much of the scholarship on the music of South-east Asia has been devoted to the issues of modal classification systems and modal practice. One finds terms relating to what can be loosely called 'mode' in the practice of the SAÙNG-GAUK (harp) and hsaìng-waìng (tuned-drum and gong ensemble) of Myanmar, the KHAEN (mouth organ) music of Laos and north-eastern Thailand, many of the solo and small instrumental ensembles of lowland Vietnam, and the various gamelan and some other small ensemble musics of West, Central and East Java (among others). Determining criteria for modal classification in these systems include hierarchical weight of individual tones within a particular scale, melodic contour (especially at cadential points), pitch level of melodic contours, accompanying drones, tone clusters and final tones, as well as associative criteria such as mood, appropriate time of performance and place or culture of origin. Other musical traditions, such as the pī phāt and other ensembles of Thailand and the various gamelan genres of Bali, appear to operate under similar kinds of constraints and have been interpreted by analysts to exemplify 'modal practice' despite the fact that indigenous musicians and theorists do not identify particular modes or comparable categories explicitly (both Thai and Balinese musicians do, however, employ terms relating to scales).

Consideration of the scholarship on the Javanese modal concept pathet, for example, reveals a complex entity: one widely applied and discussed by indigenous practitioners, and one whose determining criteria are largely, but not entirely, agreed upon (see also MODE, §V, 4(i) and (ii)). Javanese generally identify three pathet for each of the two tuning systems and order them as they occur in the music accompanying all-night shadow puppet performances (wayang kulit). Regardless of time of day, outside the context of all-night shadow puppet performances, pieces in sléndro pathet nem or pélog pathet lima, mostly calm and subdued in mood, are usually played early in a performance, those in sléndro pathet sanga and pélog pathet nem are played afterward, and those in sléndro pathet manyura and pélog pathet barang are reserved for the final portion.

Scholars have mostly attempted to define pathet with reference to the melodies of gamelan pieces, particularly the main instrumental melody known as balungan, which is conceived of as multi-octave but played in single-octave form by several of the slab percussion instruments known as saron and slenthem (Kunst, 1934, Hood, 1954, and Becker, Traditional music in Modern Java, 1980). Javanese often emphasize register or pitch level in relation to pathet, equating this concept in some ways to the Western concept of 'key'. Some Javanese pieces can be played in several pathet, 'transposed' from one pitch level to another; yet in the Javanese case, the exact intervals are not maintained. Singers and instrumentalists employ flexible melodic patterns, which they can perform (with modifications) at different pitch levels depending in part on the pathet of the piece or, on a smaller level, the *pathet*of the phrase. Sléndro pathet nem stands in a more complicated or ambiguous relationship to the other sléndro pathet. In some passages, the register of the multi-octave parts is indeed lower than is normally found in the pathet sanga or manyura, but in others it is felt to combine or modulate between phrases that feel like the other two sléndro pathet.

The concept of pathet in pélog tuning operates somewhat differently, for instead of one scale with five tones per octave, *pélog*has two basic five-tone scales, each with two alternate tones. There is little debate over pathet barang, which is easily recognized by the presence of tone 7 and the avoidance of tone 1. Yet pathet lima and pathet nem are often difficult to distinguish based on tonal criteria alone, since both avoid tone 7, employ five other pélog tones (sometimes with tone 4 substituting for tone 3) and are not simply one or more tones above or below each other. Many of the pieces most often categorized as pathet lima have passages in extremely low register and emphasize tones 1 and 5; otherwise, it is the perceived mood of the piece, including the playing style in which it is most often performed, that is often the major factor in determining the assignment of pathet classification when differentiating these two (calmer pieces as pathet lima, livelier ones as nem).

Lao-speaking players of the khāen (khene) in north-eastern Thailand and Laos distinguish five modal categories called lai in performance. These are based on a combination of tonal features: pentatonic core scale, chosen from an available seven tones per octave; two drone tones; characteristic final tone; and in most cases, special tone clusters. For instance, lai po sai employs a scale comprised of tones 1, 2, 4, 5 and 6 from what is the equivalent of a seven-tone Western diatonic major scale (the tuning of the khāen, from which this and several other five-tone scales are derived, is almost certainly not a result of Western influence); two drone tones (1 and 5, sounded by closing the finger holes on the appropriate pipes with wax); two tone clusters of open 4ths and 5ths (built on tone 6 and tone 1); and tone 1 as the final. Lai noi employs the same pentatonic scale but with different drones, tone clusters and final. The other three lai (sutsanaen, soi and nyai) can be distinguished on tonal criteria alone.

Javanese pathet and Lao lai are generally glossed as 'mode' in English; while they share some principles in common, the contrasts between them are striking and attest to the diversity of South-east Asia's musical traditions.

4. RHYTHMIC STRUCTURES AND STRATIFICATION. Attempts to generalize about rhythmic structures for such a vast area as South-east Asia run the risk of gross omissions and distortions. But aside from the prevalence in this region – and this region alone – of knobbed gong instruments, the other factors most widely shared by the musical traditions of South-east Asia are the binary, cyclical structures of many ensemble musics (repeating duple rhythms, marked consistently by one or more instruments) and the layering of musical activity in distinct strata.

(i) Metre and form. Most fundamental is a pervasive duple or binary approach to rhythm, such that not only is the organization of pulse and subdivision in most indigenous music duple, but the phrasing at nearly every level is rigorously binary as well. The lengthy gamelan pieces of Central Java almost appear a majestic celebration of duple time: some have large phrases of 256 beats, which consist of four secondary phrases of 64 beats, these in turn consisting of eight groupings of eight beats, and each beat subdivided by 2, 4 or 8 beats, for example. The spirited asymmetrical rhythms of the interlocking kotekan in Bali's flashy gamelan gong kebyar, with the exception of some recent compositions, combine rhythmic cells that form units of even length (e.g. 8, 16). Even those genres typified by asymmetrical rhythm, such as the 5 + 3 of Balinese gamelan gambang, find their uniqueness in oppositional contrast with the prevailing binary norm.

In the music of mainland South-east Asia, such as the *saùng-gauk*and hsaìng-waìng of Myanmar, the pī phāt, mahōrī and khrư̄ang saī of Thailand, and related ensembles in Cambodia (pin peat) and Laos (piphat), the duple rhythm is marked by the sound of a small set of hand cymbals (Myanmar: sì, yagwìn; Thailand: ching, etc.), sometimes in alternation with a second hand-held percussion instrument of different size (the larger Thai cymbal chāp), or timbre (the Burmese wooden wà). It is the open, long-duration sound that marks the weaker beats and the closed, short-duration sound that marks the stronger ones. In the gamelan and related knobbed-gong ensembles of Malaysia and Indonesia, other instruments perform a similar function, although the role of punctuation is in some cases greatly elaborated.

Not all ensemble music in South-east Asia incorporates this same kind of explicit marking of binary time. The kulintang music of the southern Philippines, for instance, often involves repeating interlocking ostinatos played on one or more varieties of large gongs, with an evolving melody played on the lead instrument (the kulintang gong-chime). Yet this music is predominantly duple as well. Some of the ensemble music of South Sulawesi, such as the accompaniment for the mancak martial arts of the Makassarese, employs interlocking drumming in triple metre, albeit with duple subdivision.

Alongside the predominance of a binary orientation to rhythm is the prevalence of cyclical musical form. While not all South-east Asian music is cyclical, much of it is, particularly instrumental or predominantly instrumental ensemble music. Phrases are often repeated many times, with or without significant variation, and only end or proceed to a subsequent phrase when an aural signal is given by the ensemble director (usually a drummer). Many pieces consist of a group of phrases (e.g. ABCD), each with its own distinct melody filling one rhythmic cycle. As the music proceeds from A to B, the percussion patterns that mark rhythm are repeated while the melody changes, but at the conclusion of D, the piece usually returns to A, and the entire larger cycle (ABCD) is played through a number of times, until an ending is signalled.

(ii) Tempo. Another prominent feature pertaining to the organization of time in some musical genres of South-east Asia is the performance of cycles at different tempi, which can also involve different densities of figuration. Judith Becker has pointed out important similarities between the Thai variation practice known as thao (thaw) and the Javanese practice of irama ('A Southeast Asian Musical Process', 1980). Said to have developed as a courtly game, some cyclical pieces can be performed at one-half of the original tempo or at twice or even four times the tempo of the original. The acute listener recognizes the piece in these altered rhythmic forms, with many melody tones interpolated in the expanded version and only the pillar tones retained in the compressed version. In performance, one often hears the expanded version followed by the original, which is followed by the compressed version. In similar fashion, many Javanese cyclical pieces are heard at several levels of expansion or irama level, measured by the ratio between the balungan (skeletal melody) beat and the parts that evenly subdivide it. The major difference is that in Thai performances the musicians simply jump from one level of expansion to the next, maintaining a steady tempo at each level, while the Javanese pieces move from one irama level to another through gradual slackening or quickening of the tempo, with the subdividing instruments adjusting their level of subdivision as the tempo demands.

(iii) Texture. The texture of much ensemble music of South-east Asia is 'stratified', consisting of multiple layers of contrasting melodic and rhythmic density. Allowing for great variation from one instance to another, one can nevertheless propose a general typography for the layers that constitute the various ensemble traditions of the region. This includes the presence of a melody, either sung or performed on an instrument with sustained tones, such as double reed or fiddle, but sometimes played on an idiophone or plucked lute; a pattern of punctuation, almost always played on tuned idiophones (most often knobbed gongs) and often symmetrical and interlocking, so that most of these punctuating instruments are heard in alteration rather than simultaneously; a repeating asymmetrical rhythmic pattern or series of patterns played by one or more drums; and dense percussive activity that may or may not relate heterophonically to a melody. Despite the widely different sound of a full Javanese or large Balinese gamelan, a Thai mahōrī, a Minangkabau talempong (west Sumatra, Indonesia), a Malaysian wayang kulit Kelantan ensemble, and a small Karo Batak gendang keteng-keteng quartet (north Sumatra, Indonesia), each has three or all four of these kinds of activity heard simultaneously. In some cases, such as the Makassarese ganrang ensemble, the asymmetrical rhythmic patterns and dense percussive activity cannot be readily separated, since the pair of interlocking drums fulfill both criteria.

In the large ensemble traditions with two or more melodic parts, often an underlying basic melody is said to be present, whether sounded explicitly by one or more voice or instruments or merely underlying the parts actually sounded. In these cases, the relation between melodic parts is most often heterophonic, each part deriving from the basic melody as a variation (elaboration, abstraction or some transformation), though the high degree of contrast in both rhythmic density and melodic contour between points of convergence has led some scholars to identify some South-east Asian ensemble music (such as Javanese gamelan and Thai pī phāt) as polyphonic.

Completely different approaches to rhythm and texture are evident in some indigenous musical genres, particularly in the areas where percussion-dominated ensembles are not emphasized. At an even more general level than that outlined above, Maceda (see Osman, 1969) has suggested that widely divergent South-east Asian musics employ 'drones' (as this includes not only constantly sounded tones, but reiterated single tones) and ostinati (repeating rhythmic patterns) that either combine to form melody or underlie a separate melody.

5. Performance flexibility. Much of the music of South-east Asia consists of flexible items of repertory, which will differ at least in some aspects of rhythm and melody from one instance of performance to the next and often even in successive repetitions of a single phrase. Variation, sometimes cultivated or even pre-composed and sometimes spontaneously realized at the moment of performance, is a widespread characteristic of musical presentation. This may be evident not only in the details of a flute melody, a drum pattern or the interlocking between two metallophones, but also in the texts that are sung. Some genres, such as the Malay pantun and Lao mo lam, may require some degree of spontaneous originality on the part of the singers. Others, such as central Javanese gamelan, involve singers who often read the texts they sing; but multiple versions of the same text can be found, varied through the intertwining of oral and written transmission.

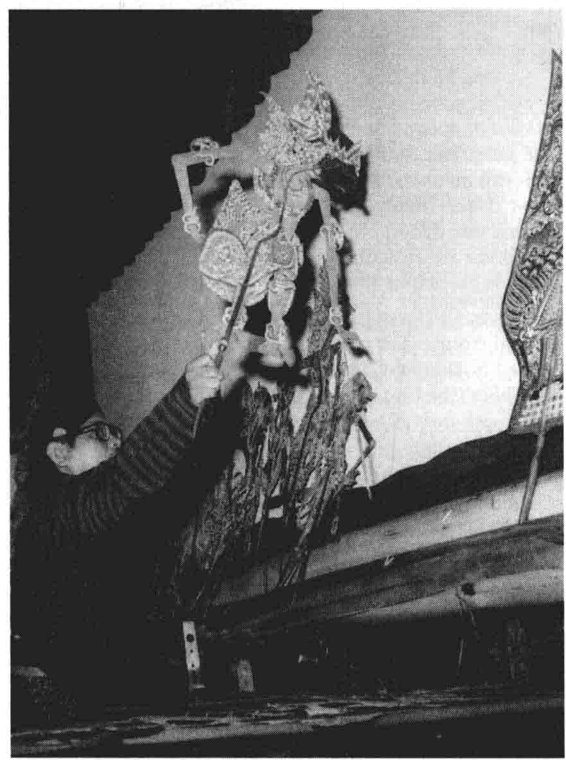
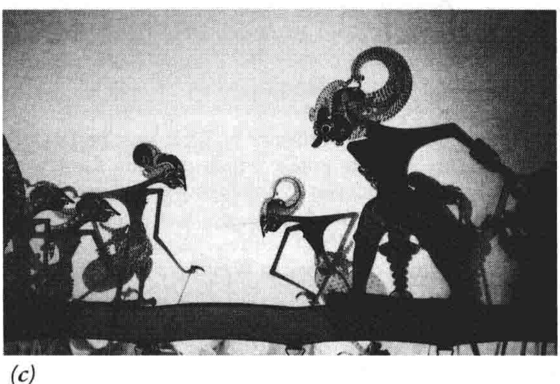
At least a moderate amount of flexibility is found in the large ensemble musics, with the performers making decisions about several aspects of the parts they perform, some before performance, others (particularly ornamental details) only as the performance unfolds (and often in response to decisions made by other musicians). This kind of flexibility is constrained by conventions that a competent musician must understand and that, depending on the genre and the particular instrumental or vocal part, may range from simple choices between two or three alternatives to a much greater opportunity for individuality and originality that can be called improvisation. Yet even in the most seemingly unconstrained playing and singing, a complex set of conventions is almost always operating, with responses that often involve the use of formulaic units, moulded in subtle ways to facilitate the development of individual styles. Nevertheless, for some ensemble music, such as that of the Balinese gamelan gong kebyar, a composer determines all (or nearly all) the details of rhythmic pattern, tempo, melody and even dynamics, such that the resultant piece is a fixed entity.

In the instances of flexibility, however, many factors contribute to the final shape of a performance, not just the spontaneous whims of the performers. Most of the large ensembles have within their ranks a designated leader or two, usually a drummer or player of a lead melodic instrument. Aural signals from the lead musician(s) indicate whether to speed up, slow down, change dynamics, proceed to a different phrase or section of the piece etc. In many instances, the choices made by the leaders will, in turn, be determined by the requirements of the context in which they are performing. This might be nothing more than ending a piece at the moment a host at a reception indicates he is ready to make a speech, or it can involve the constant coordination between music and movement throughout a dance or theatrical performance, in which music serves a central role.

6. Dance and theatre. South-east Asia is home to a truly extraordinary number of dance and theatrical genres. Aside from 'modern drama' (Western plays or indigenous ones inspired by the Western theatrical tradition), nearly all South-east Asian theatre incorporates musical accompaniment and often dance. Numerous traditions of dance-drama are found from Myanmar to Indonesia; in a number of instances, the actor-dancers may sing all or some of their dialogue. Masked plays are found in many parts of South-east Asia, as are puppet plays that utilize marionettes, wooden stick-puppets or leather shadow-puppets. In addition to local stories, the Hindu epics Ramayana and Mahabharata from India serve as the basis for many theatre genres throughout much of South-east Asia, as do Buddhist Jataka tales in most of mainland South-east Asia, Panji (Inao) stories in Myanmar, Thailand, Java and Bali, and Arab stories in the Islamic areas. Performances are generally characterized by a high degree of stylization and some degree of spontaneity in gesture and dialogue, and present a mixture of comedy with a non-humorous plot. Dance movements emphasize maximum flexing of the fingers and toes, manipulation of costume parts (such as a scarf) and independence of body parts. Movement and costume often represent codified aspects of a character's identity (king, warrior, ogre types etc.) and personality (e.g. humble, impetuous, refined, coarse). Many dance genres incorporate elements of martial arts, and some martial arts (such as Malay and Indonesian silat) are performed (as quasi-dance) with musical accompaniment.



The music used in theatre and dance performances is seldom unique to a particular play or dance, but rather consists of pieces that are part of a larger repertory that may be used for a number of plays, dances, or even a variety of genres within the culture area. Similar kinds of ensembles (and, in some cases, even the same musical pieces) may be used for different theatrical genres within a single area; however, the music that accompanies masked dance-drama in Thailand, for example, is quite different from that which accompanies masked dance-drama in Bali. The coverage below, therefore, proceeds by country, with elements of cross-cultural similarity pointed out where appropriate (further information on the theatre genres of South-east Asian countries can be found under their respective names).



(i) Cambodia. Representing the sources of the classical genres of Thailand are lkhaon kbach boran, in which a mostly female cast presents stories from the Ramayana (Khmer: Reamker), the Panji legend or local stories; and lkhaon khaol, in which masked male dancers present Rāmāyaṇa stories. For lakon kbach boran, musical accompaniment consists of the pin peat and a small female chorus, with the addition of a fiddle for Panji stories. As in Thai lakhọn nai, the singing is accompanied by hand cymbals and drum. For the almost extinct lkhaon khaol, two narrators provide the dialogue for the masked actor-dancers; in addition to the narration a *pin peat*accompanies entrances, exits and battles. The popular commercial genre, lkhaon basak, also employs a pin peat ensemble, along with several Chinese-derived instruments and Western keyboard, drums, trumpet and violin. Chinese and Vietnamese stories are featured in addition to local ones, over a period of up to six nights. Shadow puppetry in Cambodia has involved large puppets, each held by a dancing puppeteer and presenting Ramker stories derived from the lkhaon khaol dance-drama.

(ii) Indonesia. Dance has played a central role in the ritual life of numerous Indonesian communities. Dances may depict human activities (hunting, planting, weaving), represent animals (birds, horses, monkeys, even frogs), or provide an opportunity for courtship and flirtation. Much dance activity, particularly in Java and Bali, is in the context of dance-dramas presenting stories involving interaction between a cast of characters. These range from the highly abstract, refined, and subtle female court dances of central Java (bedhaya and srimpi) and Bali (legong kraton) to spontaneous and humorous popular theatre genres (e.g. Javanese ludruk and Balinese arja). For the most part, dance-dramas have proliferated in Java and Bali, with only a few genres (e.g. Minangkabau randai, Makassarese kondo bulèng) found on other Indonesian islands prior to the national government incentives, beginning in the 1970s, to develop dance-dramas for national contests and festivals. Doll and shadow puppetry are also mostly found in Java and Bali (with some derivatives in South Kalimantan and Lombok).

In Central and East Java, wayang kulit purwa, featuring stories derived from the Mahabharata and Ramayana, is considered by many to be the supreme Javanese performing art (fig.1). Still closely associated with family and community rituals (weddings, circumcisions, harvests),

(a)

(c)

(b)

1: Wayan kulit (shadow-puppet theatre): (a) view behind the screen at Ismail Marzuki Cultural Centre, Jakarta, 1974, showing the ḍalang (puppeteer, centre back) and instruments of the accompanying gamelan ensemble including bonang (gong-chimes, front left), gambang (xylophone, back left), saron and gĕnder (metallophones, centre), kĕtipung (drum, front right), with kĕnong (inverted gongs) behind, three pĕsinden (female singers, back right) and gerong (male chorus, extreme right); (b) ḍalang (puppeteer) manipulating his puppets behind the screen; (c) puppets seen from in front of the screen: the Panḍawa brothers (left to right) Nakula, Sadewa, Yudishira, Arjuna and Bima

wayang kulit purwa is performed by a single puppeteer who narrates, carries on all dialogue, manipulates leather shadow puppets by means of buffalo-horn sticks attached to the puppet body and its moveable arms, sings mood songs (sulukan) and directs the gamelan musicians through a combination of verbal cues and rhythmic knocking on the wooden puppet chest (kothak) and metal plaques (kecrèk) suspended from it. Closely related, but now rarely performed, is the wayang kulit gedhog, which presents Panji stories and employs a repertory of pélog-gamelan pieces and sulukan, in contrast to the music for wayang kulit purwa, which was formerly entirely in sléndro and remains primarily so today.

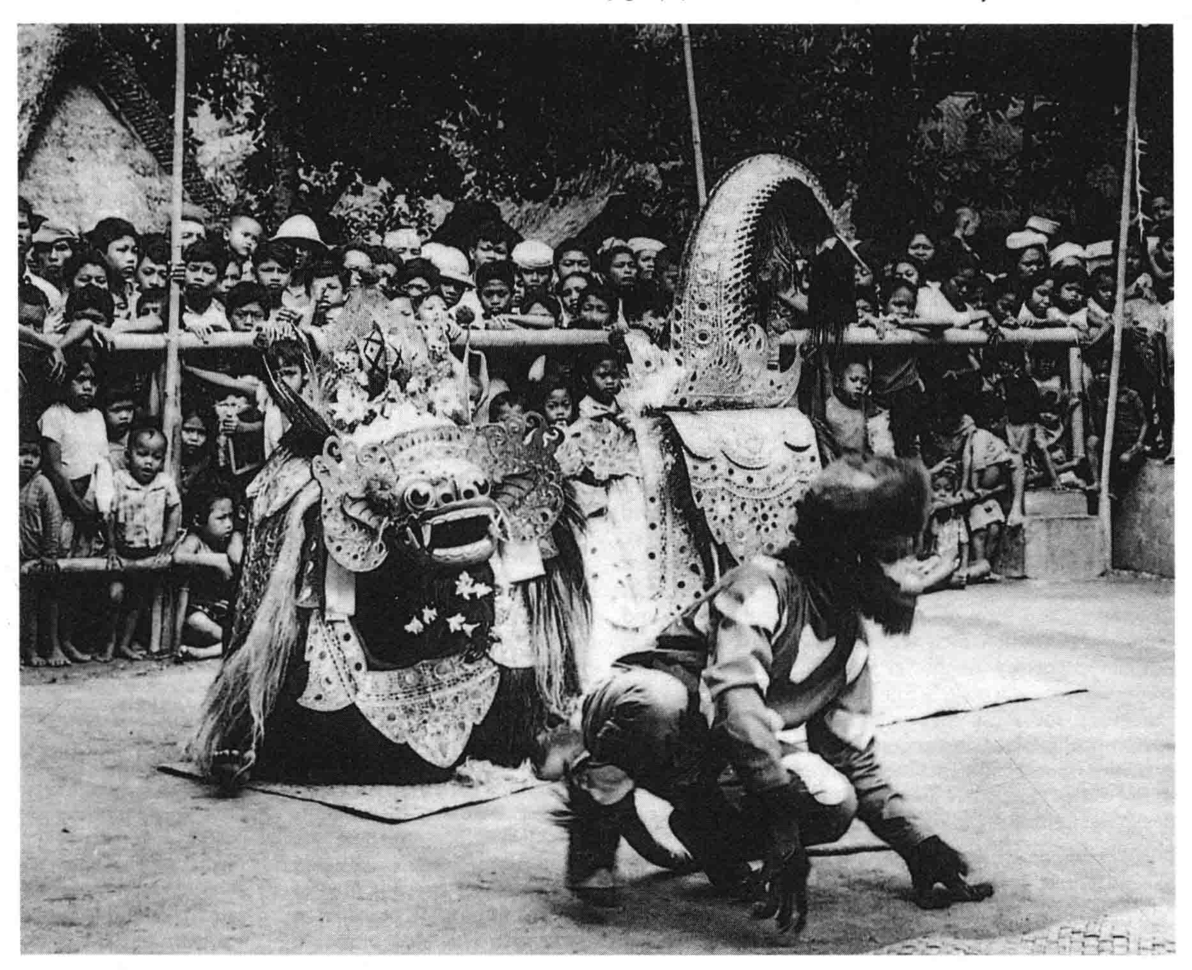
Several varieties of dance-drama have developed over the last two centuries that translate the stories and many of the conventions of wayang kulit purwa to human dancer-actors performing in a Javanese pavilion (pendhapa) or, in the commercial version, on a proscenium stage. The dancer-actors speak their own lines and, with the exception of clown-servants, perform all action as dance. In the early 1960s, a related genre, sendratari (from seni, drama, tari: art, drama, dance), was developed without verbal dialogue. Rarer genres include the langen mandra wanara and langen driyan, in which characters sing all the dialogue in indigenous verse forms (macapat). All of these dance-drama forms are accompanied by full gamelan, with pieces mostly in sléndro tuning. More popular both in commercial theatres and on television is kethoprak, in which actors present stories of Javanese history with incidental gamelan accompaniment. Most dialogue is spoken (though some is sung, with little or no dancing. The East Javanese ludruk intersperses comic routines and songs between acts of the plays, which most often concern contemporary life. Formerly accompanied by a small oboe and percussion ensemble, ludruk is now accompanied by gamelan.

A prominent form of theatre in West Java is the doll-puppet genre wayang golèk, which presents Ramayana and Mahabharata stories to Sundanese gamelan saléndro accompaniment. Masked dance-dramas (topèng) depict characters from the Panji stories. The widely popular jaipongan, which developed in West Java from the earlier singer-dancer genre ketuk tilu, is a social dance and music form with a small, eclectic ensemble featuring spectacular drumming and a female singer-dancer who may perform on stage in front of an audience or while dancing with male partners in a social dance.

Balinese dance and drama, for the most part, have their origins in religious ritual and continue to serve ritual functions. Some genres involve trance possession, such as the barong and sanghyang. The barong, accompanied by a relatively large Balinese gamelan (gong kebyar or a derivative), depicts the struggle between the forces of an evil witch (Rangda) and a benign lion-like figure (Barong), whose faithful defenders fall into trance as they attack and are repelled by the powerful Rangda (fig.2). A variety of sanghyang forms are known, some involving trance possession by animal spirits. Best known is the sanghyang dedari, in which young girls without formal dance training, accompanied not by gamelan but by a vocal chorus, go into a trance and perform movements resembling those of the complex legong (court-derived) dance, each dancer balanced on a man's shoulders.

Legong as performed by trained dancers is accompanied by a large gamelan pelegongan (closely resembling gamelan semar pagulingan) and enacts legends from East Java. While not involving trance, legong is often performed for temple ceremonies, as are many Balinese dance and dramatic forms. Gambuh, said to be Bali's oldest courtly dance-drama form, presents Panji stories accompanied by the unique, flute-dominated gamelan gambuh. Gamelan gong kebyar, or derivatives, accompanies the various kinds of masked dance and dance-drama in Bali: jauk, telek, wayang topeng and wayang wong.

Other genres include the often comic arja drama, the martial *baris*dance (performed either by ranks of lance-bearing dancers or as a solo dance, without lance), and cak (kecak, in which a chorus of men sitting cross-legged in concentric circles shout rapid interlocking syllables and sing in imitation of Balinese gamelan sounds). The cak chorus now usually accompanies dance scenes from the Rāmāyaṇa, with the chorus likened to the monkey army that aids Rama in his efforts to save his wife Sita and defeat her abductor, the lustful and impulsive ogre-king Rawana. The addition of the dance was inspired by German artist and musician Walter Spies in the 1930s.



Like its Javanese counterpart, Balinese shadow puppetry is also called wayang kulit and is largely devoted to Mahabharata and Ramayana stories, but it contrasts with the Javanese wayang kulit purwa in lasting less than eight hours and in utilizing a smaller ensemble: a quartet of four gender for Mahabharata stories, which is augmented by a few gongs and drum (batel) for Ramayana stories.

Many Balinese dance and dramatic forms are performed for tourists; the barong and cak, for instance, can be seen daily in tourist performances but are also performed at ritually appropriate times in temple courtyards for the Balinese.

Dance-drama and other forms of theatre are rare elsewhere in Indonesia, but varieties of dance abound. These range from the virtuosic body-slapping saman and seudati dances of Aceh, Sumatra, to the stately Makassarese pakarena and Buginese pajaga female group dances of South Sulawesi and various warrior and social dances. Most dance involves instrumental accompaniment with at least one drum, but some rely only on dancers' singing and body percussion. In Muslim areas, including rural Java, frame drums (REBANA) and terbang are widely used.

(iii) Laos. Prior to the turbulent 1970s, Laos supported a royal troupe that performed court dance-drama closely related to that of Cambodia and Thailand, accompanied by piphat (the Lao version of the pī phāt). More prevalent is the mǭ lam lüang, a commercial theatre genre with roots in the likē plays of Thailand but utilizing mǭ lam singing and accompanied by one or more khāen. Mǭ lam lüang is also performed in north-eastern Thailand among the Lao speaking population.

(iv) Malaysia. Malaysian theatrical genres reflect cultural influences from neighbouring cultures, especially Thailand and Indonesia, as well as India, China, the Middle East and Europe. Ma'yong dance-drama, with roots in village shamanic practices and briefly supported as a court art in Kelantan in the early 20th century, relates Arab and local stories and legends. Music is central to the genre, with actors and chorus singing in a vocal style suggesting Arab derivation, accompanied by two interlocking drums (gendang), a pair of gongs (tetawak) and a three-string fiddle (rebab). Found mostly in areas near the Thai border and closely resembling the Thai equivalent genre (lakhōn jatri), menora is a ritual dance-drama, with men and women enacting the story of the menora bird. The dancers, with a chorus, sing to the musical accompaniment of a small ensemble that includes Malaysian and Thai instruments (see MALAYSIA, §I, 3 for further discussion).

2. Barong (trance dance-drama), Bali, showing Hanuman (the Monkey God) and the Barong (lion figure)

Malaysia has supported a variety of shadow play genres, some nearly extinct. Wayang kulit purwa is performed in Johore by people of Javanese descent and utilizes puppets and conventions directly borrowed from Central Javanese tradition. Wayang kulit Melayu (which is almost extinct) mixes Malay dialect with Old Javanese, presenting Panji stories as well as those from the purwa repertory. Wayang gedek, derived from the Thai nāng talung, is still found in the northern states of peninsular Malaysia, and mixes Malay with some Thai words and performance conventions. Wayang kulit Kelantan (wayang Siam) is the most popular form. Musical accompaniment varies somewhat from region to region, but generally incorporates two double-reed aerophones and some percussion instruments.

The major genre of popular, commercial theatre is the Malay bangsawan, improvised musical plays featuring Arabic stories and local Malay history. Songs from a variety of origins are incorporated into these performances, many of them inspired by Western popular music. The accompaniment now emphasizes Western band instruments. Despite the international nature of its origins, bangsawan is promoted by Malaysian officials as a national art. Other forms of both popular and ritual drama and dance are supported by the large Chinese and Indian communities.

(v) Myanmar. Probably best-known of the theatrical genres of Myanmar is the nat-pwè, a shamanistic ritual in which one or more of the 37 spirits (nat) are invoked to the accompaniment of hsaìng-waìng. The main performer is a shamanic medium who dances, falls into trance and communicates spirit messages through an assistant. Non-ritual performances of nat-pwè present the dances without the element of trance or spirit-contact. In contrast, the popular entertainment known as zat-pwè enacts the Jataka stories (the lives of the Buddha). This genre involves a combination of juxtaposed elements, including two contrastive music ensembles: a hsaìng-waìng stage left and a Western dance band stage right. These ensembles perform separately to provide music before the play and to accompany songs and dances during the play, but they may sound together at exciting moments in the play itself. Some of the music and dance found in zat-pwè is derived from a court dance-drama form known as zat-kyì, which flourished during the decades following the sacking of the Thai kingdom of Ayudhya in 1767, at which time Thai musicians and dancers were brought to the Burmese court. The zat-kyì presented stories from the Indian Rāmāyaṇa epic, as well as the Javanese Panji (Inao) stories. Other Burmese forms include the yok-thei-pwè, a distinctive marionette puppet theatre, now rarely performed. The characteristic movements of this genre have had a clear influence on some Burmese dance, in which the dancer's limbs appear to be suspended by strings, often seeming to go temporarily limp. Musical accompaniment involves a small hsaing-waing ensemble.

(vi) Philippines. Theatre in the Philippines has been closely related to the Catholic church. The sinakulo (cenaculo), which can last a full week, enacts the Passion of Christ and incorporates some singing. The Passion story can also be sung as pasyon, which involves performers who sing, usually in alternation, from a printed text in vernacular language. The komedya (comedia) features melodramatic plays in which romantic intrigues often lead to confrontations between Christian and Muslim kingdoms, with the Muslims invariably converting to Christianity. The komedya is also known as moro-moro ('Muslim') and was formerly accompanied by guitar and percussion (for entrances, exits and battles), but now Western brass band instruments are preferred. The sarsuwela (zarzuela), is a music theatre genre brought from Spain as a form of entertainment for the upper and middle classes, in which was developed an indigenous Filipino repertory of plays, usually with new music composed for each play. While instrumentation may vary, the music for these theatrical forms is Western- and harmonically-based. Indigenous kulintang (knobbed gong ensemble) music of the southern Philippines and ensembles of flat-gongs (gangsa), bamboo idiophones and aerophones in the upland areas accompany various dance genres.

(vii) Singapore. Like Malaysia, Singapore also is home to substantial Malay, Indian and Chinese communities, although here the overwhelming majority is Chinese. Aside from contemporary drama in Western style, one can find performances of Chinese opera, called wayang, with standard Chinese instrumentation. In addition, popular and ritual drama and dance of other communities may occasionally be performed.

(viii) Thailand. Among Thailand's many theatrical and dance genres, the lakhǭn chātrī is generally thought to be the oldest and is certainly the lengthiest (lasting as many as 12 nights). Lakhǭn chātrī originated as part of an animist (non-Buddhist) ritual, with an all-male cast. The Jataka story of the menora bird is now enacted, with the three major roles taken by female dancer-actors. The musical accompaniment consists of khǭng khū (a set of two gongs), two thōn chātrī (single-headed drums), klǭng (barrel drum, resting on a tripod), ching (hand cymbals) and pī (oboe), sometimes with a sǭ ū (two-string fiddle) added.

Lakhǭn nai and khōn, often referred to as Thai classical dance-dramas, both developed from court genres introduced from Cambodia in the 15th century. All roles in the lakhǭn nai are performed by females, who speak their own lines and sing and dance as they act (fig.3). Their songs, and those of a female chorus, are accompanied by only the ching and soft-sounding drum. A larger pī phāt ensemble plays for their stage entrances and exits and accompanies the dances. Khōn is a masked dance-drama, predominantly male (formerly exclusively so, though now the female roles are often played by women), portraying episodes from the Rāmāyaṇa (Thai: Ramakien) through gesture but without speech. Formerly accompanied by a small pī phāt ensemble, recent versions employ a large pī phāt and a chorus.

More popular than any of these Thai dance-dramas is the likē, a popular theatre deriving some elements from lakhǭn nai but with a wide range of subject-matter, including stories of contemporary life. The accompanying pī phāt ensemble plays some court pieces for entrances and exits as well as newer compositions, including those sung by the actors.

Several forms of shadow puppetry are known in Thailand, though neither is as popular or as pervasive as the wayang kulit of peninsular Malaysia, Java and Bali. Nang yai is a Thai shadow play utilizing large puppets, portraying characters set in a tableau, without moveable limbs. The nāng talung features Rāmāyaṇa episodes as well as some local stories to the accompaniment of a pī, a fiddle (either sǭ ū or sǭ duang) and various percussion instruments.

(ix) Vietnam. The major forms of theatre in Vietnam incorporate musical accompaniment and many performative elements from Chinese theatrical traditions. Hát bội (also known as hát tuong) is a cultivated, classical musical drama, employing Chinese-derived costumes, staging and make-up and accompanied by a large variety of Chinese-derived instruments: spike fiddles (đàn cò and đàn gáo), moon-shaped lute (đàn nguyệt), oboe (kèn tiêu), wooden clappers (song lang), flat gongs (đồng la), cymbals (châp choa), small drum (trống chiến), 16-string zither (dàn tranh) and transverse flute (ông sáo). Actors sing extended songs, often in falsetto and accompanied by the softer melodic instruments; action (entrances, exits, battles) is accompanied by the percussion instruments and oboe. Songs in the hát bội repertory are classified either as hát khéch (Chinese) or hát nam(Vietnamese).

A comparable genre from southern Vietnam is tuong tầu, also a classical music drama but without the falsetto and Chinese songs of hát bội. In the 20th century it has been superseded by the commercial operetta form cải lương, which is performed in commercial theatres and widely distributed on video tapes. Cải lương is usually accompanied by a mix of Vietnamese instruments (moon-shaped lute, spike fiddle, woodblock and zither) and Western band instruments (including electric guitar, bass and drum set). Of the many songs performed in cải lương, the best known is the genre vọng cổ ('Remembering the past'), which may be performed 10 to 15 times within a single evening.

The other major theatrical genre of Vietnam is hát chèo, a less elaborate form than either hát bội or Cải lương, with less obvious ties to Chinese traditions. Songs are performed for a variety of scenes, accompanied by an ensemble that formerly consisted of flute, fiddle and drum but is now somewhat expanded.

7. Mass media and popular music. The introduction into South-east Asia of early forms of recording in the first years of the 20th century, followed by radio (1920s–30s), television (1950s–60s), commercial cassettes (1970s) and video (1980s), together with various forms of Euro-American popular music, have stimulated development of numerous popular music genres, indigenous media production (even in some of the more isolated communities) and the spread of international popular culture that has been eagerly consumed by some and disdained and censored by others. The acoustic and electric guitar is played throughout South-east Asia, accompanying songs introduced from the West and those in local languages that have been created combining aspects of international and local musical styles.

Practically every cultural group with access to cassette reproducing equipment has made and disseminated music. Local radio and television stations often broadcast recorded (or, occasionally, live) performances of popular music and may also present some older, indigenous genres identified as 'traditional' (for example, lakhǭn nai can be seen occasionally on Thai television, and regular broadcasts of wayang kulit heard on Indonesian radio). Chinese and Indian music (mostly popular, but some traditional) is also widely distributed in South-east Asia, mostly within the Chinese and Indian communities.

In the music identified as 'popular', rock influences have been the most widespread; rock music exists in all the national languages and some of the local ones. Influence from other parts of Asia can be found in genres such as Indonesia's dangdut, which has origins in Indian film music and North Sumatran styles. Much popular music in South-east Asia bears the stamp of East Asian influence, particularly that of Japanese enka and various regional Chinese popular styles. Older genres can also be found, such as the Portuguese-inspired keroncong (non-electrified, string-dominated ensemble) of Indonesia, which developed long before the introduction of mass media and even an occasional genre that enjoys wide popularity in the mass media, but relies entirely on indigenous instrumentation and singing and playing styles (such as jaipongan of West Java, Indonesia; see also INDONESIA, §VIII, 1).

For further bibliography see BRUNEI, CAMBODIA, INDONESIA, LAOS, MALAYSIA, MYANMAR, PHILIPPINES, SINGAPORE, THAILAND and VIETNAM.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

GENERAL

HDM3 (M.F. Hatch)

A.J. Ellis: 'Tonometrical Observations on Some Existing Nonharmonic Musical Scales', Proceedings of the Royal Society, xxxvii (1884), 368–85

A.J. Ellis: 'On the Musical Scales of Various Nations', Journal of the Society of Arts, xxxiii (1885), 485–527, 1102

G. Knosp: 'Histoire de la musique dans l'Indo-chine', EMDC, I/v (1922), 3100–46

G. de Gironcourt: 'Recherches de géographie musicale au Cambodge et à Java', Bulletin de la Société des études indochinoises, xix (1944), 49–81

J. Cuisinier: La danse sacrée en Indochine et en Indonésie (Paris, 1951)

C. Brailoiu: 'Un problème de tonalité', Mélanges d'histoire et d'esthétique musicales, i (Paris, 1955), 63–75

A. Daniélou: La musique du Cambodge et du Laos (Pondochery, 1957)

J.R. Brandon: Theatre in Southeast Asia (Cambridge, MA, 1967)

J. Becker: 'Percussive Patterns in the Music of Mainland Southeast Asia', EthM, xii (1968), 173–91

M.T. Osman, ed.: Traditional Music and Drama of Southeast Asia: Kuala Lumpur 1969 [incl. J. Maceda: 'Drone and Melody in Philippine Musical Instruments', 246–73]

M. Hood: 'The Effect of Medieval Technology on Musical Styles in the Orient', Selected Reports, i/3 (1970), 148–70

M. Hood: 'Improvisation in the Stratified Ensembles of Southeast Asia', Selected Reports in Ethnomusicology, ii/2 (1975), 25–33

D. Morton: 'Instruments and Instrumental Functions in the Ensembles of Southeast Asia: a Cross-Cultural Comparison', Selected Reports in Ethnomusicology, ii/2 (1975), 7–14

J. Becker: 'A Southeast Asian Musical Process: Thai thaw and Javanese irama', EthM, xxiv (1980), 453–64

J. Maceda: 'A Concept of Time in a Music of Southeast Asia: a Preliminary Account', EthM, xxx (1986), 11–53

P. Manuel: Popular Musics of the Non-Western World (New York, 1988)

M. Kartomi: On Concepts and Classifications of Musical Instruments (Chicago, 1990)

R. Lysloff and D.Wong: 'Threshold to the Sacred: the Overture in Thai and Javanese Ritual Performance', EthM, xxxv (1991), 315–48

A. Catlin, ed.: Selected Reports in Ethnomusicology, ix: Text, Context and Performance in Cambodia, Laos and Vietnam (Los Angeles, 1992) [incl. A. Catlin: 'Homo cantens: Why Hmong Sing During Interactive Courtship Rituals', 43–60; S. Addis: 'Text and Context in Vietnamese Sung Poetry: the Art of hat a đao', 203–24

J.O. Miettinen: Classical Dance and Theatre in South-East Asia (Oxford, 1992)

J. Becker: 'Southeast Asia', Ethnomusicology: Historical and Regional Studies, ed. H. Myers (New York, 1993), 377–91

G.S. Yousof: Dictionary of Traditional South-east Asian Theatre (Kuala Lumpur, 1994)

T. Day: 'In Search of Southeast Asian Performance', Review of Indonesian and Malaysian Affairs, xxix (1995), 125–40

M. Kartomi: ' "Traditional Music Weeps" and Other Themes in the Discourse on Music, Dance and Theatre of Indonesia, Malaysia and Thailand', Journal of Southeast Asian Studies, xxvi (1995), 366–400

C. Lockard: Dance of Life: Popular Music and Politics in Southeast Asia (Honolulu, 1998)

CAMBODIA, LAOS AND THAILAND

F. Verney: Notes on Siamese Musical Instruments (London, 1885)

P. Lefèvre-Pontalis: Chansons et fêtes du Laos, Collection de contes et chansons populaires, xxii (Paris, 1896)

G. Groslier: Danseuses cambodgiennes, anciennes et modernes (Paris, 1913)

A. Leclère: Cambodge: fêtes civiles et réligieuses (Paris, 1916)

Damrong Rajanubhab: Tamnan khruang mahori piphat [Siamese musical instruments] (Bangkok, 1930, 2/1969)

Phra Chen Duriyanga: Siamese Music (Bangkok, 1948, 4/1956 as Thai Music)

Dhanit Yupho: Atibaiyanat sipla Thai [On Thai theatre] (Bangkok, 1952, 2/1954)

Dhanit Yupho: Khruang dontri Thai (Bangkok, 1957, 3/1967; Eng. trans., 1960, 2/1967, as Thai Musical Instruments)

J. Brunet: Nang Sbek: théâtre d'ombres dansés du Cambodge (Berlin,1969)

D. Morton: The Traditional Music of Thailand (Berkeley, 1976)

S. Virulrak: Likay: a Popular Theatre in Thailand (diss., U. of Hawaii, 1980)

A. Catlin: 'Speech Surrogate Systems of the Hmong: From Singing Voices to Talking Reeds', The Hmong in the West: Observations and Reports, ed. B.T. Downing and D.P. Olney (Minneapolis, 1982), 170–97

A. Catlin: 'The Hmong and their Music…a Critique of Pure Speech', Hmong Art: Tradition and Change, John Michael Kohler Arts Center (Sheboygan, WI,1985), 10–19

P. Cravath: Earth in Flower: an Historical and Descriptive Study of the Classical Dance Drama of Cambodia (diss., U. of Hawaii, 1985)

T. Miller: Traditional Music of the Lao: Kaen Playing and Mawlum Singing in Northeast Thailand (Westport, CT, 1985)

Sam-Ang Sam and Chan Moly Sam: Khmer Folk Dance (Newington, CT, 1987)

Sam-Ang Sam: The Pin Peat Ensemble: its History, Music and Context (diss., Wesleyan U., 1988)

Sam-Ang Sam and P.S. Campbell: Silent Temples, Songful Hearts: Traditional Music of Cambodia (Danbury, CT, 1991)

D. Wong: The Empowered Teacher: Ritual, Performance and Epistemology in Contemporary Bangkok (diss., U. of Michigan, 1991)

P. Myers-Moro: Thai Music and Musicians in Contemporary Bangkok (Berkeley, 1993)

T. Miller and J.Chonpairot: 'A History of Siamese Music Reconstructed from the Western Documents, 1505–1932', Crossroads: an Interdisciplinary Journal of Southeast Asian Studies, viii/2 (1994), 1–192

T.E. Miller and Sam-Ang Sam: 'The Classical Musics of Cambodia and Thailand: a Study of Distinctions', EthM, xxxix (1995), 229–43

INDONESIA

J. Groneman: De gamelan te Jogjakarta (Amsterdam, 1890)
J. Kunst and C.J.A.Kunst-van Wely: De toonkunst van Bali (Weltevreden, 1925)
W. Kaudern: Musical Instruments in Celebes, Ethnographical Studies in Celebes, iii (Göteborg, 1927)
J. Kunst: Hindoe-javaansche muziek-instrumenten, speciaal die van Oost-Java (Weltevreden, 1927; Eng. trans., enlarged, 1968, as Hindu-Javanese Musical Instruments)
J. Kunst: De toonkunst van Java (The Hague, 1934; Eng. trans., 1949, enlarged 3/1973 as Music in Java)
M. Hood: The Nuclear Theme as a Determinant of Patet in Javanese Music (Groningen, 1954)
C. McPhee: Music in Bali (New Haven, 1966)
R.L. Martopangrawit: Titilaras kendangan [Drum notation] (Surakarta, 1972)
S. Mloyowidodo: Gending-gending Jawa, gaya Surakarta [Javanese gamelan pieces, Surakarta style] (Surakarta,1976)
J. Becker: Traditional Music in Modern Java: Gamelan in a Changing Society (Honolulu, 1980)
R. Schumacher: Die Suluk-Gesänge des Dalang im Schattenspiel Zentraljavas (Munich, 1980)
J. Becker and A.Feinstein, eds.: Karawitan: Source Readings in Javanese Gamelan and Vocal Music, i (Ann Arbor, 1984) [incl. trans. of R.L. Martopangrawit: Pengetahuan Karawitan, i (Knowledge of Gamelan Music), 1–121; trans. of R.L. Martopangrawit: Pengetahuan Karawitan, ii (Knowledge of Gamelan Music), 123–244; Sumarsam: 'Inner Melody in Javanese Gamelan', 245–304]
J. Lindsay: Klasik Kitsch or Contemporary: a Study of the Javanese Performing Arts (diss., U. of Sydney, 1985)
R.A. Sutton: 'Commercial Cassette Recordings of Traditional Music in Java: Implications for Performers and Scholars', World of Music, xxvii/3 (1985), 23–45
W. van Zanten: Sundanese Music in the Cianjuran Style: Anthropological and Musicological Aspects of Tembang Sunda (Dordrecht, 1989)
S. Williams: The Urbanization of Tembang Sunda, an Aristocratic Musical Genre from West Java, Indonesia (diss., U. of Washington, 1990)
R.A. Sutton: Traditions of Gamelan Music in Java: Musical Pluralism and Regional Identity (Cambridge, 1991)
M. Tenzer: Balinese Music (Berkeley, 1991)
B. Arps: Tembang in Two Traditions: Performance and Interpretation of Javanese Literature (London, 1992)
J. Becker: Gamelan Stories: Tantrism, Islam, and Aesthetics in Central Java (Tempe, AZ, 1992)
M. Perlman: Unplayed Melodies: Music Theory in Post-Colonial Java (diss., Wesleyan U., 1993)
R.A. Sutton: Variation in Central Javanese Gamelan Music (DeKalb, IL, 1993)
J. Kunst, E.L. Heins, E. den Otter and F. van Lamsweerde: Indonesian Music and Dance: Traditional Music and its Interaction with the West (Amsterdam, 1994)
B. Brinner: Knowing Music, Making Music: Javanese Gamelan Music and the Theory of Musical Competence and Interaction (Chicago, 1995)
Sumarsam: Gamelan: Cultural Interaction and Musical Development in Central Java (Chicago, 1995)

MALAYSIA AND SINGAPORE

J. Cuisinier: Danses magiques de Kelantan (Paris, 1936)
J. Cuisinier: Le théâtre d'ombres à Kelantan (Paris, 1957)
W.P. Malm: 'Music in Kelantan, Malaysia and Some of its Cultural Implications', Studies in Malaysian Oral and Musical Traditions (Ann Arbor, 1974), 1–46
I. Vente: Wayang: Chinese Street Opera in Singapore (Singapore, 1984)
C. Lockard: 'Reflections of Change: Sociopolitical Commentary and Criticism in Malaysian Popular Music Since 1950', Crossroads: an Interdisciplinary Journal of Southeast Asian Studies, vi/1 (1991), 1–111
M. Roseman: Healing Sounds from the Malaysian Rainforest: Temiar Music and Medicine (Berkeley,1991)
P. Matusky: Malaysian Shadow Play and Music: Continuity of an Oral Tradition (Kuala Lumpur, 1993)
Tan Sooi Beng: Bangsawan: a Social and Stylistic History of Popular Malay Opera (Singapore, 1993)
H.A. Deraman and W.R.W.Mohamad: Muzik dan nyanyian tradisi Melayu (Kuala Lumpur, 1994)
V.K. Gorlinski: Songs of Honor, Words of Respect: Social Contours of Kenyah Lepo' Tau Versification, Sarawak, Malaysia (diss., U. of Wisconsin-Madison, 1995)

MYANMAR

Maung Maung Lat, ed.: Gi-tá wí-thàw-dani kyàn (Rangoon, 1923)
Pyon Cho, ed.: Maha gi-tá baùng-gyok-kyì (Rangoon, 1931)
Khin Zaw: 'Burmese Music: a Preliminary Enquiry', Journal of the Burma Research Society, xxx (1940), 387–466
F.W.A. Lustig, ed.: Classical Burmese Music (Rangoon, 1952) [prepared for piano]
J. Becker: 'The Anatomy of a Mode', EthM, xiii (1969), 267–79
M. Williamson: 'Aspects of Traditional Style Maintained in Burma's First 13 Kyo Songs', Selected Reports in Ethnomusicology, ii/2 (1975), 117–63
R. Garfias: 'The Development of the Modern Burmese Hsaing Ensemble', AsM, xvi/1 (1985), 1–28

PHILIPPINES

I. Leaño: The Ibaloi Sings for the Dead (diss., Philippine Women's U., Manila, 1960)
J. Maceda: The Music of the Magindanao in the Philippines (diss., U. of California, Los Angeles, 1963)
R. Trimillos: Tradition and Repertoire in the Cultivated Music of the Tausug of Sulu, Philippines (diss., UCLA, 1972)
U. Cadar and R.Garfias: 'Some Principles of Formal Variation in the Kolintang Music of the Maranao', EthM, xviii (1974), 43–55
W.R. Pfeiffer: Filipino Music: Indigenous, Folk, Modern (Dumaguete City, 1976)
S.W. Otto: The Muranao Kakolintang: an Approach to the Repertoire (Illigan City, 1985)

VIETNAM

G. Dumoutier: Les chants et les traditions populaires des annamites (Paris, 1890)
Hoàng Yen: 'La musique à Huê: dàn nguyệt et dàn tranh', Bulletin des amis du vieux Huê, vi (1919), 233–381
Trần Văn Khê: La musique vietnamienne traditionelle (Paris, 1962)
Trần Văn Khê: Viet-Nam, Les traditions musicales (Berlin, 1967)
Pham Duy: Musics of Vietnam (Carbondale, IL, 1975)
Thuyet Nguyen Phong and P.S. Campbell: From Rice Paddies and Temple Yards: Traditional Music of Vietnam (Danbury, CT, 1990)
Thuyet Nguyen Phong, ed.: New Perspectives on Vietnamese Music: Six Essays (New Haven, CT, 1991)

R. ANDERSON SUTTON

Southern, Eileen (b Minneapolis, 19 Feb 1920). Black American musicologist. She attended the Chicago Musical College, studying the piano, and the University of Chicago, where she took the BA in 1940 and the MA in 1941. She then taught at Southern University (1943–5; 1949–51) and was active as a concert pianist (1940–55). She continued her graduate studies under Gustave Reese at New York University, where in 1961 she took the PhD. In 1960 she was appointed to the faculty at Brooklyn College; in 1969 she became associated with York College of the City University of New York, where she was appointed professor of music in 1972. She was made professor of music at Harvard University in 1976 and she served on the AMS board of directors (1974–6) and the editorial boards of the Journal of the American Musicological Society (1975–7) and American Music (1980–86). She retired from Harvard in 1989.

Southern specializes in 15th-century music and the music of black Americans. She has published inventories and descriptions of several important 15th-century manuscript sources of instrumental music. More recently, her studies of black music have resulted in The Music of Black Americans (1971), a chronological survey from African backgrounds to the present day, and a companion volume, Readings in Black American Music (1971), in which she has assembled documented accounts from the 17th century onwards. From its inception in 1973 until its final issue in 1990, she was editor of The Black Perspective in Music to which she contributed many articles and interviews.

WRITINGS

The Buxheim Organ Book (diss., New York U., 1961; abridged, Brooklyn, NY, 1963)
'Some Keyboard Basse Dances of the Fifteenth Century', AcM, xxxv (1963), 114–24
'Basse-Dance Music in some German Manuscripts of the 15th Century', Aspects of Medieval and Renaissance Music: a Birthday Offering to Gustave Reese, ed. J. LaRue and others (New York, 1966/R), 738–55
'Foreign Music in German Manuscripts of the 15th Century', JAMS, xxi (1968), 258–85
'El Escorial, Monastery Library, Ms. IV.a.24', MD, xxiii (1969), 41–79
The Music of Black Americans: a History (New York, 1971, 3/1997)
ed.: Readings in Black American Music (New York, 1971, 2/1983)
'African Retentions in Afro-American Music in the 19th Century', IMSCR XII: Berkeley 1977, 88–98
'Musical Practices in Black Churches of Philadelphia and New York, ca. 1800–1844', JAMS, xxx (1977), 296–312
Biographical Dictionary of Afro-American and African Musicians (Westport, CT, 1981)
'The Origin and Development of the Black Musical Theater: a Preliminary Report', Black Music Research Journal, i (1981–2), 1–14
'A Prima Ballerina of the Fifteenth Century', Music and Context: Essays for John M. Ward, ed. A.D. Shapiro and P. Benjamin (Cambridge, MA, 1985), 183–97
'The Georgia Minstrels: the Early Years', Inter-American Music Review, x (1989), 157–68
'An Early Black Concert Company: the Hyers Sisters Combination', A Celebration of American Music: Words and Music in Honor of H. Wiley Hitchcock, ed. R.A. Crawford, R.A. Lott and C.J. Oja (Ann Arbor, 1990), 17–35 with J. Wright: African-American Traditions in Song, Sermon, Tale, and Dance, 1600s–1920: an Annotated Bibliography (New York, 1990)
'A Camp-Meeting Spiritual', Themes and Variations: Writing on Music in Honor of Rulan Chao Pian, ed. B. Yung and J.S.C. Lam (Cambridge, MA, 1994), 59–81
ed.: African American Theater (New York, 1994) with J. Wright: African-American Traditions in Song, Sermon, Tale, and Dance: the Images (forthcoming)

EDITIONS

Anonymous Pieces in the MS el Escorial IV.a.24, CMM, lxxxviii (1981)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Wright and S.A. Floyd, eds.: New Perspectives on Music: Essays in Honor of Eileen Southern (Warren, MI, 1992) [incl. S.A. Floyd: 'Eileen Jackson Southern: Quiet Revolutionary', 3–15 and list of pubns, 517–28]

PAULA MORGAN

Southern California, University of, School of Music. See under LOS ANGELES.

Southern Cathedrals Festival. An annual event founded in 1904, involving the choirs of Chichester, SALISBURY and WINCHESTER cathedrals.

Southern Music Publishing. See PEER-SOUTHERN.

Southgate, Sir William (David) (b Waipukurau, 4 Aug 1941). New Zealand conductor and composer. Following the BMus and MA at the University of Otago, he won the conductor's prize at the GSM, London, in 1969. He returned to New Zealand to become musical director of the Christchurch SO (1974), the Royal New Zealand Ballet (1976–93), the Wellington Youth Orchestra (1979–90), and guest conductor of the New Zealand SO. 1993 marked the beginning of regular engagements with all the Australian orchestras, and of acclaim in Britain for seasons with the Hallé, the Royal Scottish National Orchestra and the RPO. Also active as a composer, arranger and broadcaster, he is significant in New Zealand for having brought music to a wide public. He received an honorary doctorate from the University of Otago in 1994, and in 1995 became the first New Zealand conductor/composer to be knighted. Southgate's music is accessible to listener and performer alike, and is judiciously eclectic. He is an original orchestrator, without sacrificing line for colouristic effect. A strong vein of counterpoint runs through his work.

WORKS
(selective list)

Orch: Brandenburg Conc. no.7, 1978; Trbn Conc., 1980; To the Man in the Hat, jazz orch, 1983; Capital variations, 1983; Sym. no.1, 1984; Lady Beattie Serenade, str, 1985; Sym. no.2 'From the Old World', 1988; Fanfare, 1990 [arr. of Fanfare, fanfare tpts]; Maytime Flourish, 1990; Vc Conc., 1991; Psalmody, str qt, orch, 1992; Hamlet Suite, perc, gui, str, 1993; Ov.: Réjouissance, 1994
Vocal: Cant no.1, SATB, orch, 1979; Sermon from a Commination, SATB, 1979; Cant no.2, S, vn, cl, vc, pf, 1983; Cant no.3, Birds of the Levels, girls' chorus, orch, 1991; 2 Faery Songs, girls' vv, 1992; Bubble Trouble, SATB, 1994
Chbr and solo inst: Toccata, 4 tpt, 4 hn, 3 trbn, tuba, timp, 1969; Friends, fl, b cl, tpt, trbn, vn, vc, 1974; Aftermath, brass band, perc, 1975; Occam's Razor, pf duet, 1975; Openers, 4 hn, 1975; Sonatina, pf, 1976; Cana, brass band, 1977; Sonatina, pf, 1979; Diabelli Variations, pf 8 hands, 1981; Cassation, cl, pf, perc, 1982; Rara, solo perc, 1982; Trio Sonata, perc trio, 1982; Vaudeville, 2 cl, tpt, trbn, 1982; Square Bash, 2 tpt, hn, trbn, 1983; 2 str qts, 1984, 1985; Excursion, cl, va, pf, 1985; Sonatina, cl pf, 1985; Sonatina, tpt, pf, 1986; Canzone, 4 trbn, 1988; Erewhon, wind qnt, 1989; Fanfare, fanfare tpts, 1990, arr. org, 1990, arr. orch, 1990; Epithalamium, org, 1995

BIBLIOGRAPHY

D. Hamilton: 'William Southgate's Symphony no.2', Canzona, no.30 (1988), 45
J.M. Thomson: 'Southgate, William David', Biographical Dictionary of New Zealand Composers (Wellington, 1990), 132–4
J. Button: 'William Southgate: Conductor, Composer and Musical Ambassador', Music in New Zealand, xvi/aut. (1992), 12–15
G. Wilby: 'William Southgate: Citation for Services to New Zealand Music', Canzona, no.37 (1994), 42–5

GREER GARDEN

South Place Concerts Society. London series of chamber music concerts held from 1887. See LONDON (i), §VI, 2(ii).

Southwell, William (b ?Dublin, 1756; d Rathmines, 1842). Irish maker of pianos, harpsichords and harps. He was apprenticed in 1772 to Ferdinand Weber in Dublin, where he himself opened a shop in 1782. He worked mostly in Dublin, but patented his important improvements to the piano from London. His 1794 patent (no.2017) solved the problem of extending the compass of the square piano without upsetting the overall scaling, by fitting 'additional notes' in the treble. The hammers for these struck upwards from a separate compartment under the soundboard through a slot at the back, with the pin block let into the back of the case, avoiding encroachment on the soundboard. This major innovation was adopted by all makers for square pianos with a compass of over five octaves. The patent also introduced a new damper, screwed into a wooden button glued through a thin strip of leather to the back end of the key. His 1798 patent, which also included a keyed harp (harp-piano) placed the square piano on its side to make a small upright on a stand. The simple sticker action had the hammers striking at the top of the instrument; wooden rods or 'leaders' connected them to the key-levers. The hammer was regulated by a button screwed into the key. The 1807 patent (no.3029) extended this process with the cabinet piano; its special significance was that the action worked outside the soundboard, obviating the need to cut through it to allow hammers or dampers access to the strings. This made for a stronger and more stable instrument. A patent of 1811 included a revised type of upright piano with the soundboard and strings sloping away from the player.

In spite of his seminal influence on the development of the piano, few of Southwell's instruments survive, although the National Museum of Ireland possesses one (1790), as does the Alexander Simpson collection of the City Museum, Dundee (1798). The pianos built in the form of semi-elliptical side-tables are particularly beautiful. They have Viennese action (Prellmechanik) and a Venetian swell operated by a knee-lever; one is preserved at the Cobbe Foundation, Hatchlands Park, Surrey. William's son, John Southwell, took an active part in the business from 1800.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ClinkscaleMP
P. James: Early Keyboard Instruments from their Beginnings to the Year 1820 (London, 1930/R), 139
R.E.M. Harding: The Piano-Forte: its History Traced to the Great Exhibition of 1851 (Cambridge, 1933/R, 2/1978/R)
T. de Valera: 'Two 18th-Century Dublin Musical Instrument Makers', Dublin Historical Record, xxxvi/4 (1982–3), 122–31
A. Cobbe: 'Beethoven, Haydn and an Irish Genius: William Southwell of Dublin', Irish Arts Review Yearbook, xiii (1997), 71–7
M. Cole: The Pianoforte in the Classical Era (Oxford, 1998)

MARGARET CRANMER

Sousa, Lourenço de. See CONCEIÇÃO, MANOEL LOURENÇO DA.

Souza, Rodolfo Coelho de (b São Paulo, 8 Aug 1952). Brazilian composer. He studied composition with Olivier Toni at the University of São Paulo (1968–70) and with Santoro (1978–9), and electro-acoustic music with Conrado Silva (1976–7). He earned his master's degree in 1994 from the University of São Paulo and in 1996 started working towards a doctoral degree in composition (electro-acoustic and computer music) at the University of Texas at Austin (1996–8).

Coelho de Souza received several prizes and grants, for example, the National Sarney Prize (1988) for his Galáxias, the Vitae Foundation grant (1990) for the composition Tristes trópicos, and a United States information service grant (1988) to visit 12 computer music centres in American universities. In 1989 he was music curator for the 20th São Paulo Arts Biennial and, from 1984 to 1993, co-director of the Santos and São Paulo New Music Festival. In 1988, 1989 and 1993 he directed the symposium of contemporary music of the Winter Festival of Campos do Jordão, and in 1992 he was selected to represent Brazilian composers at Sound Celebration II, an international festival promoted by the Louisville Orchestra. He participated in the Festival Sonidos de las Américas, dedicated to Brazil (1996) and sponsored by the American Composers Orchestra, where his work Chiaroscuro, for two percussionists, piano, and tape, was given its world première.

WORKS
(selective list)

Orch: Variações sobre um tema de Cláudio Santoro, 1979; Carnavalia, 1983; Chroma, synth, orch, 1986; Galáxias, pf, orch, 1987–8; Tristes trópicos, cptr controlled synth, 1990–91; Luminosidades, 1993
Chbr: Durações, fl, hn, vn, vc, pf, tape, 1977; Phantasiestück, str qt, 1982; Diálogos, mar, vib, 1988; Oblique Rain, tpt, tvoln, a sax, cl, perc, pf, synth controlled by computer, 1992; Fractal Landscapes, fl, cl, vn, vc, pf, perc, 1993; Chiaroscuro, pf, 2 perc, tape, 1995; Invariants, wind qnt, pf, 1995
Pf: Episódios, 1974; Page d'album, 1985; Rébus, 1985; Estudo em Si, B, 1989
El-ac, multimedia: Automóvel, multimedia, 1971; Electronic Construction no.1, el-ac, 1989; What Happens Beneath the City While Janis Sleeps?, el-ac, 1997
Songs, choral works

GERARD BÉHAGUE

Souza Lima, João de (b São Paulo, 21 March 1898; d São Paulo, 28 Nov 1982). Brazilian pianist, composer and conductor. He won a scholarship to study at the Paris Conservatoire (1919–26), where his teachers included Isidore Philipp, Marguerite Long, Egon Petri and Alexander Brailowsky (piano), Camille Chevillard and Paul Paray (conducting) and Eugène Cools (composition). He also studied Debussy's piano works with Debussy's widow Emma Bardac and Ravel's piano works with the composer. He performed at the halls in Paris, championing the piano music of Villa-Lobos, and toured throughout Europe and South America. He became one of the leading musical figures in São Paulo, as a virtuoso pianist, a conductor and a teacher.

Souza Lima turned to composition on a regular basis in the late 1940s, but already in 1937 the tone poem O rei mameluco earned him a prize in São Paulo. Whether in his opera Andrea del Sarto, ballets (Lendas brasileiras, 1941; Brasil moderno, 1960), his piano works (such as Valsa brasileira; Dança no campo, 1959; Noturno, 1968), or art songs and choral pieces (Lenda, 1958; Divagação, 1959; Canto do matuto, 1936; Contos infantis brasileiros, 1973), he cultivated a refined and sincere nationalistic style.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L.H. Corrêa de Azevedo: 150 anos de música no Brasil (1800–1950) (Rio de Janeiro, 1956)
M. Marcondes, ed.: Enciclopédia da música brasileira: erudita, folclórica, popular (São Paulo, 1977, 2/1998)
V. Mariz: História da música no Brasil (Rio de Janeiro, 1981, rev. 4/1994)

GERARD BÉHAGUE

Souzay (Tisserand), Gérard (Marcel) (b Angers, 8 Dec 1918). French baritone. He learnt the tenets of mélodie interpretation from his principal teachers, Bernac and Croiza, and studied opera with Vanni Marcoux. He entered the Paris Conservatoire and gave his first recital in 1945. After the war he quickly gained international recognition as a recitalist before he made his opera début in 1960, singing Purcell's Aeneas at the Aix-en-Provence Festival, followed immediately by Monteverdi's Orfeo at the New York City Opera. Among his most notable subsequent operatic appearances were Golaud at Rome (1962), the Opéra-Comique (1963), Florence (1966) and Wiesbaden (1976); Don Giovanni at the Paris Opéra (1963), Munich (1965) and Lausanne (1967); and Count Almaviva at the Metropolitan and Glyndebourne (1965), where he had to withdraw owing to illness after one performance. He sang in the British première (concert performance) of Roussel's Padmâvatî. His operatic recordings include Rameau's Pollux, Berlioz's Méphistophélès, Albert (Werther), both Lescaut and the Count des Grieux in Manon, Alaouddin (Padmâvatî) and in particular Golaud, his finest role.

Gérard Souzay and Dalton Baldwin

In mélodies he was the heir of Bernac, but he devoted almost as much time to lieder and was acclaimed in Germany as elsewhere for his idiomatic interpretations of Schubert, Schumann and Wolf, among others. His voice was a warmly expressive high baritone, slender but firm and flexible, an ideal instrument for a singer of such highly developed sensibility; but that very quality sometimes led to a note of preciosity in his interpretations. His recordings of Die schöne Müllerin and Dichterliebe, and his earlier discs (now on CD) of mélodies by Duparc, Fauré, Debussy, Ravel and Poulenc, disclose the best of his art.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J.B. Steane: The Grand Tradition (London, 1974/R), 487–90
A. Blyth, ed.: Song on Record 2 (London, 1988)

MARTIN COOPER/ALAN BLYTH

Soveral, Isabel (Maria Machado Abranches de) (b Oporto, 25 Dec 1961). Portuguese composer. She studied with Peixinho (from 1983), and later attended piano and composition courses at the Lisbon Conservatory, where her composition teacher was Joly Braga Santos. In 1988 she attended the New York State University, Stony Brook, with grants from the Fulbright Foundation, the Luso-American Foundation for Development and the Ministry of Culture, obtaining a PhD in composition under the supervision of Arel and Semegen. On her return to Portugal she was appointed to the staff of the University of Aveiro, where she now lectures.

Soveral's earlier compositions are clearly influenced by Peixinho's strong personality. Her music contains a feminine lyricism that prefers an oneiric atmosphere to a more solid constructivism. The composer has denounced her early music, among which are several electronic works, for their dryness and their superficial adherence to avant-garde academicism. In her more recent works, notably the incomplete cycle Anamorphoses (1993–7), she has returned to a more intense lyricism.

WORKS
(selective list)

Vocal: Pensando, enredando sombras. . ., 1v, orch, 1991; Le navigateur du soleil incandescent, Bar, SATB, orch, tape, 1998; Un soir, j'ai assis la beauté sur mes genoux, et je l'ai trouvée amère, Bar, b cl, pf, 2 perc, 1998

Inst: 4 variações, fl, 1983; Contornos, 2 cl, 1987; Contornos II, ob, bn, 1987; Contornos III, 4 cl, 1990; Quadramorphosis, 4 perc, tape, 1993; Anamorphoses: I, cl, tape, 1993, II, mar, vib, tape, 1994, III, vn, tape, 1995, IV, vc, 1997, V, str qt, 1997

Principal publisher: Musicoteca

SÉRGIO AZEVEDO

Sowande, Fela (b Oyo, 29 May 1905; d Ravenna, OH, March 1987). Nigerian composer and organist. After receiving early musical training from his father and from Ekundayo Phillips, he went to London in 1934, where he studied the organ privately with George Oldroyd, G.D. Cunningham and Rubbra; he subsequently became a fellow of the Royal College of Organists and Trinity College of Music. Sowande studied at the University of London (BMus 1941), then became organist and choirmaster of the West London Mission of the Methodist Church. His lecture-demonstration series for the BBC's Africa service, West African Music and the Possibilities of its Development, in which he focussed on his own works, aided the growth of his compositional career from about 1940. His profound interest in the indigenous and popular music of Nigeria as resources of intellectual and compositional importance was the motivation behind his collection of this music. The influence of indigenous material is evident in Six Sketches (1953), while in the well-known African Suite (1955) this is combined with the influence of popular music, particularly highlife.

Sowande became music director of the colonial film unit of the British ministry of information and then in 1953 of the Nigerian Broadcasting Corporation. He was commissioned in 1960 to compose a national anthem to mark Nigeria's independence; the resulting Folk Symphony, which did not in fact become the anthem, was performed in 1962 by the New York PO in Carnegie Hall. Organ works, occupying much of his total output, are the most complex in terms of harmonic, motivic and contrapuntal organization. His dual Yoruba and church backgrounds are evident in the titles and texts of his choral works, in which indigenous elements such as call-and-response, heterophony, pentatonicism and complex rhythmic constructions are emphasized; some, for instance De Angels are Watchin', Roll de Ol' Chariot, also derive partially from black American spirituals and gospel music. Among his awards are an honorary doctorate from the University of Ife (1972) and grants from the Ford and Rockefeller foundations. Sowande held professorships at the University of Ibadan, where many of his manuscripts are deposited, and in the USA at Howard University, Washington, DC, and the University of Pittsburgh.

WORKS
(selective list)

Org: Jesu Olugbala, 1955; Joshua Fit de Battle of Jericho, trad., 1955; Kyrie, 1955; Yoruba Lament, 1955; Gloria, 1958; Oyigiyigi, 1958; Prayer, 1958; Responses, A, 1959

Vocal: 3 Songs of Contemplation, T, pf, 1950; Because of You, 1v, pf, 1950; 3 Yoruba Songs, 1v, pf, 1954; Roll de Ol' Chariot, trad., SATBB, pf, rhythm combo, 1955; Steal Away, trad., SATBB, 1955; De Angels are Watchin', trad., SATB, 1958; Oh Render Thanks, SATB, org, 1960

Orch: 6 Sketches, 1953; African Suite, str, 1955; Folk Sym., 1960

BIBLIOGRAPHY

E. Southern: 'Conversation with Fela Sowande, the High Priest of Music', The Black Perspective in Music, iv (1976), 90–104

H. Roach: Black American Music: Past and Present (Malabar, FL, 2/1992)

B. Omojola: Nigerian Art Music (Ibadan, 1995)

B. Omojola: 'Style in Modern Nigerian Art Music: the Pioneering Works of Fela Sowande', Africa, lxviii (1998), 455–83

DANIEL AVORGBEDOR

Sowerby, Leo (b Grand Rapids, MI, 1 May 1895; d Port Clinton, OH, 7 July 1968). American composer and church musician. He was taken in 1909 to Chicago, where he studied the piano with Calvin Lampert and theory with Arthur Olaf Andersen; in 1910 his interest in the organ music of Franck prompted him to begin studying the organ. During World War I he served in the army and was a bandmaster. In 1918 he received an MM from the American Conservatory, Chicago, and in 1921 he was the first recipient of the Rome Prize, which enabled him to spend three years in Italy. He returned to Chicago to teach composition at the American Conservatory (1925–62), and he was also organist and choirmaster at the Episcopal Cathedral of St James (1927–62). In 1935 he was elected to the National Institute of Arts and Letters, and he was the first American to be made a Fellow of the Royal School of Church Music, London. He was also founding director of the College of Church Musicians at the National Cathedral, Washington DC (1962–8).

The first mark of recognition for Sowerby as a composer came in 1913, when the Chicago SO played his Violin Concerto. Although his practical activities were largely confined to church music, he wrote in all genres except for the stage. He drew on a wide range of sources, including American folk music, blues and jazz, besides the Western traditions of concert and sacred music. Many of his works, particularly the numerous organ pieces, are based on the passacaglia, chaconne, canon, or fugue. In 1946 Sowerby received a Pulitzer Prize for his cantata Canticle of the Sun. He is the author of Ideals in Church Music (1956).

WORKS
(selective list)

ORCHESTRAL

Vn Conc., G, 1913, rev. 1925; Vc Conc., A, 1914–16; Pf Conc. no.1, 1916, rev. 1919; Sym. no.1, 1921; Ballad of King Estmere, 2 pf, orch, 1922; From the Northland, suite, 1923; Synconata, jazz orch, 1924; Monotony, jazz orch, 1925; Medieval Poem, org, orch, 1926; Sym. no.2, 1927; Prairie, sym. poem, 1929; Vc Conc., e, 1929–34; Passacaglia, Interlude and Fugue, 1931–2; Pf Conc. no.2, 1932; Org Conc. no.1, 1937; Theme in Yellow, 1937; Sym. no.3, 1939–40; Classic Conc., org, str, 1944; Sym. no.4, 1944–7; Concert Piece, org, orch, 1951; All on a Summer's Day, 1954; Sym. no.5, 1964; Concert Piece, org, orch, 1968; *c*30 others, incl. 8 for band

VOCAL

Choral: A Liturgy of Hope, cant., S, male chorus, 1917; untitled cant. (Pss), 1924; The Vision of Sir Launfal (J. Lowell), vv, orch, 1925; Great is the Lord (Ps xlviii), cant., chorus, orch, org, 1933; Forsaken of Man (Bible, E. Borgers), cant., vv, org, 1939; Canticle of the Sun (St Francis, trans. Arnold), cant., vv, orch, 1944; Christ Reborn (Borgers), cant., vv, org, 1950; The Throne of God (Bible: Revelation), vv, orch, 1956; The Ark of the Covenant (Chronicles), cant., vv, org, 1961; Solomon's Garden (Song of Solomon), vv, orch, 1964; La corona (J. Donne), vv, orch; *c*120 anthems, several communion services, many canticle settings

Over 300 songs (1v, pf), incl. The Edge of Dreams (M. Turbyfill), cycle, 1920

OTHER INSTRUMENTAL

Chbr: Serenade, str qt, 1916; Wind Qnt, 1916; Trio, fl, va, pf, 1919; Sonata, vc, pf, 1920; Sonata, B♭, vn, pf, 1922; Sonata, tpt, pf, 1945; Pf Trio, 1953; *c*40 others, incl. 5 qts

Org with insts: Elevation, vn, org, 1912; Poem, va/vn, org, 1942; Ballade, eng hn, org, 1949; Festival Musick, 2 tpt, 2 trbn, timp, org, 1953; Fantasy, tpt, org, 1962; Triptych of Diversions, 2 vn, db, ob, perc, org, 1963; Dialog, pf, org, 1967

Org: Comes Autumn Time, 1916; Requiescat in pace, 1920; Sym., G, 1930; Suite, 1937; Toccata, 1940; Canon, Chacony and Fugue, 1949; Whimsical Variations, 1950; Bright, Blithe and Brisk, 1967; Sinfonia brevis, 1965; Passacaglia, 1967; *c*45 other works

Pf: From the Northland, suite, 1923; Florida Suite, 1929; Sonata, D, 1948, rev. 1964; *c*50 others

23 folksong arrs. in C. Sandburg: American Songbag (New York, 1927); 12 other arrs.

Principal publishers: Gray, OUP, Society for the Publication of American Music

MSS of pubd works in US-Wc; unpubd MSS in private collection of Ronald Stalford, Worcester, MA

BIBLIOGRAPHY

EwenD

B.C. Tuthill: 'Leo Sowerby', MQ, xxiv (1938), 249–64

J.M. Huntington: A Study of the Musical Contributions of Leo Sowerby (diss., U. of Southern California, 1957) [incl. full list of church music]

'Leo Sowerby: a Symposium of Tribute', Music: the A.G.O. and R.C.C.O. Magazine, ii/10 (1968), 25–7, 64

R. Rayfield: 'Leo Sowerby', Music: the A.G.O. and R.C.C.O. Magazine, x/11 (1976) [incl. list of solo org works]

M.P. Guiltinan: The Absolute Music for Piano Solo by Leo Sowerby (DMA diss., Eastman School of Music, 1977)

Leo Sowerby: a Short Biography and a Complete List of his Compositions (Chicago, 1979) [pamphlet]

F.J. Crociata: 'Leo Sowerby: the 100th Anniversary of an American Original', American Organist, xxix/5 (1995), 50–55

RONALD STALFORD/MICHAEL MECKNA

Sowiński, Wojciech [Albert] (b Łukaszówka, Podolia, 1805 [?1803]; d Paris, 5 [?2] March 1880). Polish writer on music, pianist, composer and teacher. He was first taught music by his father, Sebastian Sowiński, an army musician, and later studied in Vienna with Czerny (piano), and Gyrowetz, Leidesdorf and Seyfried (composition). He made his début as a pianist in 1828 in Vienna, and later appeared in Italy (where he lived from 1828 to 1830), France and England. In 1830 he settled in Paris, where he was active mainly as a music and piano teacher.

Sowiński's most important work was the dictionary of Polish musicians, first issued in Paris in French, which was intended to propagate interest in the subject as well as to recapitulate and systematize all the available information on Polish music history. The dictionary contains, as an introduction, a short outline of the history of Polish music, illustrated with music examples; it has a musical supplement and contains about 1000 biographies of composers, performers, theorists and others connected with Polish music from the earliest times to Sowiński's contemporaries. Based on the scant material then available, collected mainly in the first half of the 19th century, it has many gaps and inaccuracies and is today of only historical significance. Sowiński's compositions (about 120 works, predominantly for piano and typical of 19th-century salon music) are now almost completely forgotten.

WORKS
printed works published in Paris unless otherwise stated
location of MSS unknown

Ops: Lénore, ou Les morts vont vite (lyric drama, 2, E. d'Anglemont); Le modèle (comic op, 1, P. de Saint-Georges); Une scène sous la ligne (comic op, 1); Złote gody [Golden Wedding] (2, K. Ostrowski)

Choral: La varsovienne, ou La polonaise (cant., K. Delavigne) (1831); Missa solemnis, B♭ (1844); St Adalbert martyr (orat, K. Ostrowski), vs (1845); Chants religieux de la Pologne, 30 songs, 2, 3vv, org (1859); Missa brevis, C (1870); Cantate (M. Margerin) (1876); Dieu le vent (cant., Countess of Saint-Légier) (1878); Air des légions polonaises, fantasia on Dąbrowski mazurka, chorus, orch (n.d.); Le sacrifice d'Abraham (orat, d'Anglemont); Sąd Salomona [The Judgment of Solomon], motet, 3 solo vv, chorus, orch; 6 motets à 2, 3, et 4 voix et orgue (n.d.); 12 other motets and liturgical settings, most pubd in Paris (n.d.); 2 [?3] other masses; 3 other large works

Orch: Sym., e (n.d.); 3 ovs., Królowa Jadwiga [Queen Jadwiga], Mazepa (n.d.), Jan Sobieski, czyli Uwolnienie Wiednia [Jan Sobieski, or The Liberation of Vienna]; 2 pf concs.; Grande polonaise brillante, pf, orch (n.d.)

Chbr: Grand rondeau précédé d'une introduction sur un motif du Maçon, pf, str qt (n.d.); Trio, b (n.d.); Duo brillant sur la prière d'Othello, vn, pf (n.d.); Pf Qnt, E; Nonet, f♯

Other works: *c*75 pf pieces, most pubd in Paris (n.d.), incl. 7 sets of variations, 12 fantasias on operatic and other themes, rondos, marches, waltzes, studies; 15 songs, all pubd in Paris; numerous edns/arrs. of Polish folksongs, pubd in Paris, Mainz, Leipzig, Milan

WRITINGS

'Théâtre polonais', La Pologne historique, littéraire, monumentale et illustrée, ed. L. Chodźko (Paris, 1839–41, 5/1844)

Les musiciens polonais et slaves anciens et modernes: dictionnaire biographique (Paris, 1857/R; Pol. trans., 1874/R, as Słownik muzyków polskich dawnych i nowoczesnych)

Histoire de la vie et de l'oeuvre de Ludwig van Beethoven (Paris, 1864, 4/1871/R) [trans. of A. Schindler: Biographie von Ludwig van Beethoven, Münster, 1840, 3/1860]

Histoire de W.A. Mozart, sa vie, son oeuvre (Paris, 1869) [trans. of G.N. von Nissen: Biographie W.A. Mozart's, Leipzig, 1828/R]

Musiciana (Paris, 1878) [Pol. trans. of J.-B. Weckerlin: Musiciana, Paris, 1877]

BIBLIOGRAPHY

SMP

K.D.: 'Albert (Wojciech) Sowiński: fortepianista i kompozytor', Opiekun domowy, vii/13 (1871), 100–02

W. Mazurkiewicz: 'Sowiński', Słownik muzyków polskich dawnych i nowoczesnych[Dictionary of Polish musicians past and present], ed. A. Sowiński (Paris, 1874/R), 346–61

E.: 'Sowiński Albert: Słownik muzyków polskich dawnych i nowszych', Przegląd krytyczny, ix/7 (1875), 206–9

W. Chodźkiewicz: 'Wojciech Sowiński', Tygodnik ilustrowany, ix (1880), no.224, p.235

S. Duchińska: 'Wojciech Sowiński', Kłosy, no.774 (1880), 274–5; no.775 (1880), 301–2

L. Sowiński: 'Wojciech Sowiński', Tygodnik powszechny, iv (1880), no.17, p.257–8; no.18, p.278–9

K. Morawska: 'Badania nad muzyką dawną w Polsce w XIX wieku' [19th-century research on early music in Poland], Szkice o kulturze muzycznej XIX wieku: studia i materiały, ed. Z. Chechlińska, iii (Warsaw, 1976), 31–3, 36

KATARZYNA MORAWSKA

Soyé [Soyer], Charles-Joseph-Balthazar. See SOHIER, CHARLES-JOSEPH-BALTHAZAR.

Soyer, Mathieu. See SOHIER, MATHIEU.

Soyka, Matěj. See SOJKA, MATĚJ.

SOZA [Slovensky Ochranny Zvaz Autorsky]. See COPYRIGHT, §VI (under Czech Republic and Slovakia).

SPA [Sociedade Portuguesa de Autores]. See COPYRIGHT, §VI (under Portugal).

Spacing. The arrangement of the notes of a chord with respect to the intervals separating them. In four-part harmony, the spacing is called 'close position' or 'close harmony' if the three upper parts lie as close together as possible, that is, if their range is less than an octave or if the total range of the four parts is not greater than a 12th (ex.1*a*). If the spacing is wider, it is called 'open position' or 'open harmony' (ex.1*b*). The term 'close harmony' is

Ex.1 Spacing in four-part harmony

(a) close position (b) open position

also sometime used for the particular blend of chords with added 6ths and 7ths, all set within a relatively narrow range, which characterizes much BARBERSHOP quartet singing.

JULIAN RUSHTON

Spada, Vincenzo (b Faenza; fl 1589–92). Italian composer. Documentary evidence suggests that he spent his career in Reggio nell'Emilia, where he was evidently connected with the small musical academy gathered around Gaspero Pratoneri. Individual pieces in his Primo libro della villanelle (Venice, 1589, inc.) are dedicated to members of this circle, some of whom are also the dedicatees of Pratoneri's own Madrigali ariosi ... a quattro voci con un dialogo a otto (Venice, 1587). Spada's Primo libro delle canzoni a sei voci (Venice, 1592) is dedicated to the 'Virtuosissimi Signori del Ridutto del Sgr. Spirito Pratoneri, Canonico di Reggio', and the final piece is addressed to Pratoneri himself, described here as 'musico eccellentissimo'. Despite the apparent slightness of the contents of these volumes, which are filled with pieces celebrating the social life of the gentry of Reggio, two pieces from the six-voice book were selected for inclusion in a popular anthology of madrigals by Italian composers (RISM 1604[12]).

IAIN FENLON

Spadario, Giovanni. See SPATARO, GIOVANNI.

Spagna. A bassadanza tune. One of the few surviving from 15th-century Italy, it was used widely as a cantus firmus in the 16th and early 17th centuries, particularly in instrumental music and didactic exercises. (For the dance form of the tune, see Crane, no.17.) It is also known by many other names, including Re di Spagna, Alta, Lo bas despagno, La baixa de Castilla, El bayli de Spagna, Le bail despaigne, La basse dance de Spayn, Casulle le novelle and Spanier Tantz.

The earliest source of the Spagna melody is Antonio Cornazano's dance treatise Libro dell'arte del danzare (1455), where it is used to illustrate the application of various misure, or metres, to dance tenors (see SALTARELLO). It also appears in dance treatises from northern Europe, for example as the tenor for the basse danse Casulle la nouele in Michel de Toulouse's L'art et instruction de bien dancer (Paris, *c*1488). It is thus one of the very few dance tenors or tunes known to have been in both the bassadanza and basse danse repertories. A two-part setting of the Spagna tune in a Perugian manuscript, published by Bukofzer, is the earliest surviving polyphonic elaboration of the tune, and has formed the cornerstone of the widely accepted practice among early dance musicians of improvisation on basse danse tenors. Crane listed eight other polyphonic settings from before 1520, including one printed later by Hans Ott (Novum et insigne opus musicum, 1537) and Adam Berg (Secunda pars magni operis musici, 1559) as a motet by Josquin (Propter peccata quae peccastis; see H. Osthoff, Josquin Desprez, 1962–5, ii, 397ff), and suggested that these may have retained at least an association with actual dance accompaniment. Isaac used the tune as the cantus firmus for his Missa 'La Spagna' (printed by Petrucci, 1506), and it continued to be a common cantus prius factus throughout the 16th century, sometimes identifiable only by the solmization syllables of its incipit, la–mi–re–fa–mi–re. Instrumental settings include variations by Spinacino, Kotter, Kleber, Capirola, Ortiz and Cabezón (see HAM, no.102).

It is not certain when the Spagna tune came to be a frequent cantus firmus for counterpoint training, nor when it was first associated with the 16th-century composer Costanzo Festa. Ludovico Zacconi's note to printed counterpoints on 'La bascia di Costanzo Festa' in Prattica di musica seconda parte (1622, p.199) seems representative of 17th-century knowledge of the pedagogical tradition: 'Note that the above cantus firmus made of breves is called "Bascia". I have not been able to investigate why it is so called and designated; one day while I was talking with a professor of music he told me that it must be the cantus firmus on which the same Costanzo Festa once made 120 counterpoints'. Zacconi's unnamed professor of music is thus the source for the still unchallenged ascription of 120 lost settings of the Spagna to Festa. Zacconi drew his example from Scipione Cerreto's Della prattica musica vocale et strumentale (1601); Cerreto did not, however, choose to speculate on the tune's origins or title, but instead drew his readers' attention to the challenges the tune presented for writing counterpoints invertible at the 10th, especially in resolving mi-contra-fa cross-relations (p.293). Cerreto did not, in his turn, name the source of his example, but the tune had apparently been identified with Festa for some time. 157 counterpoints and canons by the Roman composer and pedagogue G.M. Nanino are extant in various manuscripts thought to represent notes from his counterpoint instruction; 28 of them were published in his Motecta (1586). A number of early 17th-century composers, notably Neapolitans such as Rocco Rodio, G.M. Trabaci and Ascanio Mayone, used the Spagna tune, with its pedagogical name, as the basis for works variously entitled 'ricercare', 'canzona' and 'capriccio'. In all there are known to be some 280 polyphonic settings of the tune. Significantly, settings of the tune described as 'sopra il canto fermo di Costanzo Festa' (or some such phrase) do not retain the rhythmic structure of the original dance tenor, a structure almost invariably found in the settings using one of the many dance-related titles.

The 16th- and 17th-century ostinato pattern known as 'La Spagnoletta' is unrelated to the Spagna melody.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

BrownI

M.F. Bukofzer: 'A Polyphonic Basse Dance of the Renaissance', Studies in Medieval & Renaissance Music (New York, 1950), 190–216

O. Gombosi, ed.: Compositione di Meser Vincenzo Capirola: Lute-Book (circa 1517) (Neuilly-sur-Seine, 1955) [pp.xxxvi–lxiii present a basic historical survey]; review in Mf, xi (1958), 251–2

O. Kinkeldey: 'Dance Tunes of the Fifteenth Century', Instrumental Music: Cambridge, MA, 1957, 3–30, 89–152

F. Crane: Materials for the Study of the Fifteenth Century Basse Danse (New York, 1968)

I. Brainard: The Art of Courtly Dancing in the Early Renaissance (West Newton, MA, 1981) [esp. pt II]

W. Marrocco: Inventory of 15th Century Bassedanze, Balli & Balletti in Italian Dance Manuals (New York, 1981)

G. Ebreo da Pesaro: De practica seu arte tripudii/On the Practice or Art of Dancing (MS, 1463), ed. and trans. B. Sparti (Oxford, 1993)

SUZANNE G. CUSICK

Spagna, Arcangelo (b Viterbo, 1632; d Rome, 3 May 1726). Italian librettist. He was a priest and served three cardinals in Rome, Francesco Barberini, Carlo Ciceri and, from 1689 until 1726, Pietro Ottoboni. In the Poesie de'signori Accademici Infecondi di Roma (Venice, 1684) he is identified as 'Abbate Arcangelo Spagna, detto Resoluto', and on his tombstone he is called 'the promoter' of this academy. In his two volumes of Oratorii overo melodrammi sacri (Rome, 1706; facs. Lucca, 1993) his title is 'canon'.

Each volume of his Oratorii contains twelve works in Italian, which are revised versions of those produced at the Chiesa Nuova and S Girolamo della Carità. Spagna gave 1656 as the date of the first work in volume i, and this may well be his earliest oratorio. Discourses on Italian and Latin oratorios respectively head the two volumes. Each essay provides eminently pragmatic advice for librettists, mainly because Spagna clearly understood that the purpose of oratorios was to draw listeners to a spiritual drama, then to keep them entranced until the very end, often by means of tales concerning the conversion, persecution and death of saints. To this end he advocated doing away with the narrator, or testo, of earlier oratorio. Volume ii ends with a 'model' oratorio in Latin, and a handwritten annotation credits him with another Latin oratorio, set by Filippo Amadei in 1699. A manuscript score credits him with another work, I due Luminari del Tebro, set by Nicola Francesco Haym in 1700. He published his last six Italian oratorios between 1711 and 1716; their librettos are numbered 25–30, and all but one of them were set by Antonio Berti.

Spagna's other collective publications were a set of six melodrammi scenici (1709) and three sets of four comedie in prosa (1711–17). The comedie are spoken plays, written for performance by students at the Collegio Salviati. The melodramas are rustic comedies, usually for only a few characters and therefore suitable for chamber performance. According to Spagna's preface, they – like his spoken plays – were 'written mainly in my juvenile years'. The fourth melodrama, La gelosa di se stessa, was printed separately in 1689; newsletters date its première at the Palazzo Barberini on 17 February, and an anonymous score (I-Rvat Barb.lat.4213–15) and partbooks (private archive of the Borromeo family, Isola Bella, Stresa, Italy) survive. A seventh melodrama was printed separately in 1713. Unfortunately, no composer's name is known for any of Spagna's melodramas.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

SartoriL; SmitherHO, i

A. Schering: 'Neue Beiträge zur Geschichte des italienischen Oratoriums im 17. Jahrhundert', SIMG, viii (1906–7), 43–69

A. Morelli: 'Il "Theatro Spirituale" ed altre raccolte di testi per oratorio romani del Seicento', RIM, xxi (1986), 61–143, esp. 80, 88

S. Franchi: Drammaturgia romana, i–ii (Rome, 1988–97)

M.L. Volpicelli: 'Il teatro del cardinale Ottoboni al Palazzo della Cancelleria', Il teatro a Roma nel Settecento, ed. Istituto della Enciclopedia Italiana (Rome, 1989), 681–782, esp. 692–3, 719

S. La Via: 'Il cardinale Ottoboni e la musica: nuovi documenti (1700–1740), nuove letture e ipotesi', Intorno a Locatelli: studi in occasione del tricentenario della nascita di Pietro Antonio Locatelli (1695–1764), ed. A. Dunning (Lucca, 1995), 319–526, esp. 372

LOWELL LINDGREN

Ex.1 Spagnoletta for keyboard, I-Fn Magl.XIX 138

Spagnoletta [spagnoletto] (It.; Sp. españoleta). A dance, first appearing in Italy in the late 16th century, whose musical scheme was used in the 17th century for dances, songs and instrumental variations. The scheme has a fixed harmonic plan (ex.1), the first two sections of which are related to one of the main chordal schemes of the Renaissance dance style (see GROUND, ex.1*c*); the concluding section is apparently a double RIPRESA, which is sometimes omitted (for example in the espanyoleta in E-Bbc, no.78 in Pedrell's Catàlech, i, 99–100). The spagnoletta is usually in triple metre (but sometimes duple), and the first three bars of the discant melody almost always have the same pitches (ex.2 shows a portion of a duple spagnoletto, for melodic and harmonic comparison with ex.1).

Ex.2 Spagnoletto for keyboard, opening phrase transposed from G minor, US-LAum 18 (formerly 51/1)

The music first occurs in Caroso's Il ballarino (1581), where choreography is given for a spagnoletta and a spagnoletta nuova for lute. Later examples for lute are in printed sources by Caroso (1600) and Cesare Negri (1602) and in manuscripts (I-Fn Magl.XIX 105, 179; I-Lg 774; US-SFsc, Bentivoglio Manuscript). Frescobaldi (1624), Bernardo Storace (1664) and Speth (1693) wrote sets of keyboard variations on the spagnoletta; single keyboard statements appear in a number of manuscripts (e.g. I-Fn Magl.XIX 115; E-Mn 815; Chigi manuscripts (I-Rvat), ed. in CEKM, xxxii/2, 1968). Other examples include those for instrumental ensemble by Michael Praetorius (1612), Gasparo Zanetti (1645), Giamberti (1657) and Cristoforo Caresana (1693), one for violin (HR-Zaa Ia.44) and a set of two vocal partite for three voices by P.A. Giramo. The instruction 'parole sopra la spagnoletta' accompanies a text in an Italian manuscript (I-Fn Magl.XIX 143), and Coferati (Corona di sacre canzoni ... seconda impressione, 1689) gave the discant melody with a sacred text.

Many single statements of the spagnoletta music occur in numerous Italian tablatures for the five-course guitar, from Montesardo (1606) to G.P. Ricci (1677). The españoleta appears in Spanish sources for the guitar in works of Briçeño (1626), Sanz (1674), Ruiz de Ribayaz (1677) and Guerau (1694). There are two versions by Giles Farnaby in the Fitzwilliam Virginal Book, one called The Old Spagnoletta based on the music of ex.1, the other, with different music, entitled simply Spagnoletta.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

MGG2 (M.E. Lutz)

D. Plamenac: 'An Unknown Violin Tablature of the Early 17th Century', PAMS 1941, 144–57

M. Dolmetsch: Dances of Spain and Italy from 1400 to 1600 (London, 1954/R), 74–82

R. Petschauer: 'Three Spagnolettas from the Bentivoglio Manuscript', The Guitar Review, xxxii (1969), 4–11

G. Reese: 'An Early Seventeenth-Century Italian Lute Manuscript at San Francisco', Essays in Musicology in Honor of Dragan Plamenac, ed. G. Reese and R.J. Snow (Pittsburgh, 1969/R), 253–80

R. Hudson: 'The Concept of Mode in Italian Guitar Music during the First Half of the 17th Century', AcM, xlii (1970), 163–83

R. Hudson: 'The Music in Italian Tablatures for the Five-Course Spanish Guitar', JLSA, i (1971), 21–42

R. Hudson: 'The Folia Melodies', AcM, xlv (1973), 98–119, esp. 102

J. Sutton and F.M. Walker, eds.: Fabritio Caroso: Nobiltà di Dame (Oxford, 1986), 44; Eng. trans. as Courtly Dance of the Renaissance (New York, 1995), 44, 193–5, 279–80

RICHARD HUDSON

Spagnoletti [della Diana], Paolo (Ludovico) (b Cremona, 24 May 1773; d London, 23 Sept 1834). Italian violinist active in England. At the age of 12 he entered one of the Naples conservatories. As a young man he was a court violinist in Spain, and, slightly resenting having an Italian in this post, the locals nicknamed him 'Espagnoletto' ('the little Spaniard'); the name stuck, and when the tenor Vagnoni (who had heard him play in Milan) brought him to London in about 1802, he was firmly established as 'Spagnoletti'. He was engaged as second violin in the King's Theatre orchestra, where by 1804–5 he was sometimes acting as leader; he was appointed to this position in 1815, achieving an acknowledged pre-eminence as an orchestral leader rather than as a virtuoso. In 1812 he led the Pantheon orchestra, which gave performances of Italian opera. The following year, with the establishment of the Philharmonic Society, Spagnoletti became one of its first 38 associates and played at one of the first concerts (19 April 1813). He invariably led the orchestra for the Lenten Oratorios at the King's Theatre, the Antient Concerts, the Philharmonic, the RAM concerts in the Hanover Square Rooms and at numerous benefit concerts during the season; in addition, he frequently led quartets at the Philharmonic and gave a benefit concert in the Argyll Rooms each year. Frequent notices of his performances, 'which were characterized by an excellent and spirited attack', appeared in the Harmonicon between 1823 and 1833. Paganini, in his London visit of 1831, expressly asked that Spagnoletti be engaged as leader for all his performances. On 28 March 1834, in one of his last appearances, he led the British première of Cherubini's Requiem. He composed violin pieces and songs.

E. HERON-ALLEN/R

Spagnoletto, Lo. See GARCÍA FAJER, FRANCISCO JAVIER.

Spahlinger, Mathias (b Frankfurt, 15 Oct 1944). German composer. He was intensely interested in jazz as a teenager before studying music education and composition with Konrad Lechner and Erhard Karkoschka. During the period 1978–81 he was a guest lecturer in music theory at the Hochschule der Künst, Berlin; he moved to the Staatliche Hochschule für Musik in Karlsruhe in 1982 as a lecturer in composition and music theory, becoming professor in 1983. He later succeeded Klaus Huber as professor of composition at the Staatliche Hochschule für Musik in Freiburg (1990). His awards include a fellowship from the Heinrich Strobel Foundation of South-West German Radio and several Boswil Foundation prizes.

Spahlinger associates his compositional thinking with a tradition stretching from Hegel, via Adorno, to more recent critical theorists such as Bruno Liebrucks. The continuation of the avant garde belonging to this tradition is central to his conception of artistic progress. He views musical organization as intrinsically linked to theoretical and socio-political thought. During the 1970s he was primarily concerned with exploring the material terms of composition: the relationship of the individual to the group and questions of context and detail. These interests constitute the compositional theme of the orchestral piece morendo (1974). In éphémère (1977) the dependence of the sound-material on its context is examined. Saucepans, beer-bottles, kitchen-timers etc. are used as 'veritable instruments'. Spahlinger's next step was to examine organization or order itself. His three-part cycle (on the 'subversion of order by its own rules') demonstrates how inappropriate traditional genre models are in the attempt to describe the greater contexts of Spahlinger's work: Extension (1979–80) for violin and piano is an experiment in structural chain-reactions; inter-mezzo, concertato non concertabile tra pianoforte e orchestra (1986) explores how apparently similar phenomena can originate in totally different organizational principles; and Passage/Paysage creates a large-scale symphonic form through absolute transitions from one organizational principle to the next.

WORKS

(selective list)

morendo, orch, 1974; 4 Stücke, v, cl, vn, vc, pf, 1975; 128 erfüllte Augenblicke – systematisch geordnet, variabel zu spielen, v, cl, vc, 1976; éphémère, perc, pf, 1977; Extension, vn, pf, 1979–80; Απὸ δω [From Here], str qt, 1982; inter-mezzo, pf, orch, 1986; Passage/Paysage, orch, 1990; presentimientos, variationen, str trio, 1992–3; und als wir, 54 str, 1993; gegen unendlich, b cl, trbn, vc, pf, 1995; Akt, eine Treppe herabsteigend, trbn, b cl, orch, 1997–8

Principal publishers: Breitkopf & Härtel, Peer, Universal Edition

BIBLIOGRAPHY

KG(P.N. Wilson)

M. Spahlinger and R.Oehlschlägel: '"Alles aus allem entwickeln": Mathias Spahlinger im Gespräch über "Passage/Paysage" für großes Orchester', MusikTexte, xxxix (1991), 23–39

C. Häcker: '"Furioso" für Ensemble: Zur Kompositionstechnik Mathias Spahlingers', Positionen, xvii (1993), 46–9

M. Spahlinger and A.Köhler: '". . . das Theater selbst sichtbar machen": Armin Köhler im Gespräch mit Mathias Spahlinger', Positionen, xxii (1995), 5–9

DÖRTE SCHMIDT

Spain (Sp. Reino de España). Country in Europe. Its territory covers an area of 504,750 km², comprising most of the Iberian peninsula, the Canary and Balearic Islands and the towns of Ceuta and Melilla on the North African coast. It shares borders with Portugal to the west, and France and Andorra to the north. Its population of approximately 39·8 million (2000 estimate) is distributed among 17 autonomous regions, many of which preserve a strong sense of regional identity. Although Castilian is the official language of Spain, other languages are also recognized in some of the regions, for example, Catalan in Catalonia (Catalunya), Valencia and the Balearic Islands, and Gallego in Galicia. In addition, the Basque language is spoken in the Basque country (Euskadi) and parts of Navarre. (For a discussion of the musical traditions of the Basque people see BASQUE MUSIC.)

Christianity was introduced to the Iberian peninsula during the 3rd century and Catholicism officially accepted by the Visigothic rulers at the end of the 6th (see MOZARABIC CHANT). However, in 711 the invasion by Muslims from North Africa led to the establishment of Islam throughout almost the entire peninsula. During the following centuries the Christians gradually reconquered Spain, and the last Muslim territory, Granada, was finally conquered by the Catholic Monarchs Ferdinand of Aragon and Isabella of Castile in 1492. (For further discussion of the music of Muslim Spain see ARAB MUSIC.) Under Muslim rule, the Jews of Spain (known as Sephardim) flourished, being relieved of the persecution they suffered under the Catholics, but when Granada was reconquered they were expelled from the peninsula or forced to convert to Christianity. (For an account of their distinct musical traditions see JEWISH MUSIC, §III, 4 and §IV, 2(ii).)

With the accession in 1516 of Charles I, also Holy Roman Emperor, Spain was ruled by a branch of the Habsburg family, a dynasty that remained in power throughout the Renaissance and Baroque periods. Charles's son, Philip II, established the capital at Madrid in 1561. In 1700 the accession of Philip V led to the establishment of the Bourbon dynasty, whose descendants reign today. Spain briefly became a republic in 1874–5 and again between 1931 and 1936. The Spanish Civil War (1936–9) led to the regime of General Franco, which ended with his death in 1975 and the formal restoration of the monarchy.

1. Map of the regions of Spain

I. Art music. II. Traditional and popular music.

I. Art music

1. Early history. 2. Renaissance. 3. Late 16th century to mid-18th: (i) Genres and practices (ii) Sacred music (iii) Secular song (iv) Theatre music: (a) Opera (b) Zarzuela (v) Cantatas (vi) Instrumental music: (a) Sources (b) Organ music (c) Other instrumental music (vii) Influences. 4. Later 18th century: (i) The church (ii) Music for the stage (iii) Instrumental music. 5. 19th century: (i) Historico-political background (ii) Regenerative developments (iii) Orchestral music (iv) Piano music (v) Song and the lyric theatre. 6. 20th century.

1. Early history. The writings of Isidore of Seville (*c*559–636) are the chief source of information on the music of the early Spanish Church; his Etymologiae and De officiis ecclesiasticis contain descriptions of the Mass and Office that are similar to those found in the later service books of the Spanish Church. The former work also contains a chapter on the discipline of music, based largely on the work of Cassiodorus, that subsequently became one of the most important and widely disseminated texts on music theory during the early Middle Ages.

As Archbishop of Seville, Isidore presided over the Fourth Council of Toledo in 633 which established a single order of prayer and singing throughout the Visigothic kingdom. Although no notation survives from this period, the earliest extant neumes being an Aquitanian source from the 11th century, the body of chant used by the Visigothic Church was no less extensive than that of the Gregorian. At least seven bishops are supposed to have contributed chants to the repertory of the Visigothic Church: Isidore's elder brother Leander (d 599) of Seville; Eugenius (d 657), Ildephonsus (d 667) and Julian (d 690) of Toledo; Conantius (d 639) of Palencia; and Johannes (d 631) and Braulio (d 651) of Zaragoza, the latter Isidore's favourite pupil. This rite continued to be observed by Spanish Christians until Toledo was reconquered from the Muslims in the late 11th century; its music is generally known as Mozarabic chant. In 1080 the Council of Burgos imposed the Roman rite on the Spanish Church as a whole (it had been introduced into Catalonia three centuries earlier), although a few parishes in Toledo continued in their ancient observance.

The Muslim invasion of 711 brought a host of new instruments to the peninsula such as the duff (Sp. adufe: a square tambourine), shabbāba (Sp. ajabeba, exabeba: a transverse flute), būq (Sp. albogón: a cylindrical instrument made of metal with reed mouthpiece and seven finger-holes), nafīr (Sp. añafil: a straight trumpet 120 cm or more in length), tabl (Sp. atabal: drum), qānūn (Sp. canón: a psaltery), bandair (Sp. panderete: tambourine) and sunuj al-sufr (Sp. sonajas de azófar: metal castanets). The naqqāra (nakers, a small kettledrum of wood or metal), 'ūd (lute) and rabāb (rebec) spread throughout Europe. Just as Córdoba was the Spanish seat of Arabic learning, Seville became the centre of Moorish instrument making. Zaragoza was another centre of activity, even after the fall of Granada in 1492. In 1502 Mahoma Mofferriz was still supplying exquisite keyboard instruments to high-born Christian clients as far away as Plasencia. (See also ARAB MUSIC, §I, 4(ii).)

The Christian courts of Sancho IV of Castile (ruled 1284–95), Pedro III of Aragon (1276–85) and Alfonso IV (1327–36) occasionally engaged Moorish players of the añafil, exabeba, psaltery and rebec, together with dancers. From Xátiva, a centre of Moorish minstrelsy, Pedro IV of Aragon (1336–87) summoned Ali Eziqua and Çahat Mascum, his favourite players of the rebec and exabeba in 1337–8. The Valladolid Council of 1322 forbade further hiring of Moorish musicians to enliven Christian vigils or any more tumult caused by their presence at Christian feasts. This edict is the more interesting because (as Don Quixote well knew when reproving Master Peter for his bells) the mosques did not allow music.

The Muslims not only introduced instruments whose names still bear traces of their Arab origin, but also brought with them musical treatises which were translated from Arabic into Latin at Toledo and thence disseminated northwards (see ARAB MUSIC, §I, 3(iv)). Al-Fārābī (d 950) in particular came to be quoted by numerous theorists from Vincent de Beauvais, Hieronymus de Moravia and Magister Lambertus in the 13th century, to Gregor Reisch and Juan Bermudo. Some scholars have seen a relationship between a form of Moorish poetry, the zajal, and the 15th-century Spanish villancico. Literary evidence also suggests that the Moors of Granada (conquered in 1492) were the first to use letters of the alphabet to denote finger-position on the guitar. Because a sole miniature at El Escorial (E-E B.I.2) depicts a Moorish player in the train of Alfonso el Sabio (Alfonso X; 1252–84) of Castile and because it was at his court (1252–85) that the principal surviving collection of medieval Spanish monody was compiled (see CANTIGA), it has been supposed that some of the cantigas of Alfonso echo lost Moorish songs – a highly improbable hypothesis.

2. Salome dances before Herod: detail from the altarpiece of 'St John the Baptist and St John the Evangelist' by Juan de Tarragona, c1365 (Museu d'Art de Catalunya, Barcelona); the lute and tambourine are of the type brought by the Moorish invaders

Three principal sources of medieval polyphony survive in Spain. The 12th-century Calixtine Manuscript (E-SC) contains 21 conductus with Latin text; the early 14th-century Las Huelgas Manuscript (in BUlh) includes 195 compositions, of which 140 are polyphonic. Neither manuscript represents a specifically Spanish repertory, although the latter is still at its place of origin, a convent for Cistercian nuns founded about 1180. The 14th-century Llibre Vermell (in MO) includes four monophonic songs as well as six pieces of polyphony. At least four of these are dance-songs.

2. Renaissance. The major forms of Spanish Renaissance secular composition are the Romance and the Villancico. The Renaissance romance was primarily a literary type. It always told some story, often drawn from the legends of border wars with the Moors. In the chief secular song collection gathered during the epoch of Columbus, the Cancionero Musical de Palacio (E-Mp 1335), the original indexer (*c*1525) classed 44 items as romances, 393 as villancicos (of the secular type) and 29 as sacred villancicos (villançicos omnium sanctorum). This pioneer indexer called everything in Spanish with a prefatory refrain a villançico; he also gave this name to a Spanish song if any individual section in it, not necessarily the first, was repeated, and, in some cases, even to songs that lacked internal repetition. As used in the 16th century about 1525, villançico therefore meant any Spanish song that was not a romance.

Juan del Encina, the most frequently represented composer in the collection, came naturally by his gift for the folk elements in his phrases and melodies. The son of a Salamancan cobbler, Encina served Don Fadrique de Toledo, Duke of Alva, from 1492 to 1498, and his song output during this period forms the core of the secular repertory surviving from the reigns of Ferdinand and Isabella. He entertained the ducal family during at least five of these years with poetic compliments, amorous accompanied solo songs and eglogas (short plays) into which he invariably introduced partsongs for three and four voices. Whether designed for characters to sing in one of his eglogas or for independent performance, the Encina villancico comments on an existing dramatic situation that has already been defined by the dialogue. Much of the charm of Encina's villancicos is due to their immediacy: the scene having already been set, the song need be no more than a purely emotional outburst. Much as one may regret his ceasing to compose his bold and lusty villancicos after leaving the Duke of Alva, they belong in the quiver of a hot-blooded youth but not in that of the staid ecclesiastic that he was to become.

The Cancionero Musical de Palacio also includes works by Anchieta, Peñalosa, Francisco de la Torre, Alonso Perez de Alba, Millán, Mena and Juan Ponce. Several earlier composers in this manuscript, such as Cornago (fl 1466), Triana (fl 1478), Juan Fernández de Madrid (fl 1479), Juan Pérez de Gijón (fl 1480) and Juan de León (fl 1480), contributed also to the Cancionero de la Colombina (E-Sc 7-1-28).

The most influential foreign-born composer whose works are in both these sources was Johannes Urreda of Bruges, who served as maestro de capilla to Ferdinand V. Other foreigners who left their mark on Spanish music were Ockeghem (visited Spain in 1469), Agricola and La Rue (1506). In 1501 Josquin was recruited by Philip the Fair for a journey to Spain; and although he did not go, he nevertheless became one of the most influential, admired, imitated and transcribed foreign composers in 16th-century Spain. The influence of Netherlandish polyphony is clearly reflected in the masterful masses and motets of Anchieta and particularly of Peñalosa, the most important Spanish composer after Encina and before Morales. The same contrast between the learning of Peñalosa, who held a post at the papal court, and the simplicity of Anchieta, who stayed mostly in Spain, can be seen between the erudition of the most famous Spanish theorists of the Renaissance, Ramis de Pareia and Salinas (both wrote in Latin and lived for a time in Italy), and the more modest teachings of the many Spanish theorists who wrote in their own tongue and never went abroad. Blindness made Salinas's achievement all the more remarkable, as it did the works of Antonio de Cabezón, the greatest Spanish Renaissance organist, and the works of the consummate vihuelist and composer Miguel de Fuenllana.

The vihuela inspired a considerable group of publications in tablature in the mid-16th century. Although Diego Pisador's Libro de música de vihuela (Salamanca, 1552) betrays the hand of an amateur, the others, from Luys Milán's El maestro (Valencia, 1536) to Esteban Daza's El Parnasso (Valladolid, 1576), testify to the artistry of their compilers. Luys de Narváez (1538), Alonso Mudarra (1546) and Enríquez de Valderrábano (1547) also published tablatures at Valladolid and Seville.

Milán's El maestro, like the six other vihuela tablatures published later, purports to be a self-instructing manual; easy pieces come in the first book, harder pieces in the second. But his notation system, unlike that used in later vihuela tablatures, places the top course on the top line of the six horizontal lines, the bottom course on the bottom line. Dedicated to King John III of Portugal, his is the only vihuela book to contain any Portuguese songs. Among other novelties not found in any other vihuela tablature are the ornamented versions printed for each of the six Spanish villancicos. In each of the four Spanish romances, he interspersed elaborate virtuoso runs for the accompanying vihuelist between lines of the verse. To prove his exquisite literary taste, he set three of his six Italian sonetos to poetry by Petrarch. These songs in Spanish, Portuguese and Italian are the precursors of the equally sensuous accompanied monodies in Fuenllana's Orphénica lyra (Seville, 1554). In the purely instrumental pieces that dominate El maestro, Milán established the practice of always indicating the tempo of each piece. His 40 fantasías are free, but each is classified in one or two of the eight church tones. His four tentos are homophonic pieces, with fast runs between phrases, but the best-known works in El maestro are the six pavanas. His insistence on classifying everything polyphonic according to a scheme of eight church tones is a peculiarly Spanish aspect of El maestro, borne out even more emphatically by his concluding essay on the eight tones.

The greatest Spanish Renaissance composers of church music were Morales, Francisco Guerrero and Victoria. As early as 1539, when Morales was not yet 40, he enjoyed the reputation in Spain of being 'the pope's maestro de capilla' (he served in the pope's choir from 1535 to 1545). His second book of masses (Rome, 1544) opens with a woodcut of Pope Paul III on his throne accepting the dedicated volume from the kneeling composer. A similar woodcut, with a change of facial features to show the more youthful Palestrina, prefaces the first book of Palestrina's masses (Rome, 1554); the open book of music that Palestrina offers Pope Julius III is that shown in the earlier woodcut. Symbolically as well as musically, Morales stands midway between the Flemings and Palestrina. Although Morales knew Josquin to perfection, his music lacks many of the traits that characterize his greatest predecessor. All voices enter into imitation without delay, he writes no long 'Pleni' duos, he banishes verbal canons from his one mass parodying Josquin's chanson Mille regretz (even though they occur in the primitive version that Morales never published). Although his melodic writing was not as constrained as that of Palestrina he avoided melodic intervals larger than an octave (which he used as an expressive, poignant interval) and avoided to some extent the use of the melodic 6th. Victoria also avoided the melodic 6th, and Samuel Rubio, who studied Morales's technique in detail, remarked that prejudice against melodic 6ths of any sort should therefore be accounted a Spanish trait. To cite further evidence, Morales's immediate predecessors in Seville Cathedral where he grew up, Escobar, Alva and Peñalosa, set a pattern of avoiding 6ths.

Much more than his Flemish predecessors, Morales overlapped beginnings and ends of phrases. His music exhibits subtle techniques, particularly in form, distribution of voices, and use of dissonance; long melismas are uncharacteristic and it has been claimed that Morales was the first to observe the rules of Latin prosody in giving accented syllables longer aggregate values.

How well Palestrina knew Morales's music is proved by his parody mass on a Morales motet, O sacrum convivium, and the extra parts he wrote for six verses of Morales's Magnificat settings. Victoria's indebtedness to Palestrina can be no less well documented. No feature of Palestrina's detailed technique escaped Victoria's eye. His individuality asserted itself in a much greater reliance on the equivalent of modern functional harmony, a predilection for melodic phrases that ascend and descend in the equivalent of modern melodic minor scale movement, a fondness for diminished 4ths and a heightened expressiveness in the use of melodic leaps such as the descending 5th. Both Morales and Palestrina wrote only a few secular works, Victoria none at all.

Francisco Guerrero studied with Morales and composed a similarly serious and extensive sacred repertory. In the New World he exceeded even Morales and Victoria in widespread and lasting popularity. As late as 1774 his works were expensively recopied on vellum for use in Mexico City Cathedral. In 1864 his Liber vesperarum (Rome, 1584) was rebound for constant use at Lima Cathedral. Unlike Morales and Victoria, he, as well as Morales's other chief pupil, Juan Navarro (i), made important contributions to the secular repertory. Several of Navarro's secular songs are contained in a predominantly Andalusian collection of madrigals, villancicos and romances (formerly E-Mmc 13230), the so-called Cancionero di Medinaceli, which also includes works by the Seville-born brothers Pedro and Francisco Guerrero, Ginés de Morata (mestre de capela to the dukes of Braganza in Portugal) and Rodrigo de Ceballos (active at Seville, Córdoba and Granada).

A printed collection of Villancicos de diversos autores (Venice, 1556), called the 'Cancionero de Uppsala' because the partbooks were discovered there, has works by Gombert as well as by Spanish composers such as Encina, Cárceres, Mateo Flecha (i) and Morales. Although it is the sacred music of 16th-century Spain that has received most attention, a number of composers published collections of secular music, among them Vasquez (1551, 1560), Pere Alberch i Ferrament alias Vila and Mateo Flecha (i), whose ensaladas were published in 1581 by his nephew Mateo Flecha (ii) in a collection that includes also ensaladas by Vila, Cárceres, Chacón, and the nephew. The younger Flecha and Brudieu also published madrigals (1568, 1585 and 1614).

The Toledo-born Diego Ortiz spent his mature years at Naples, where he became director of the Spanish viceroy's choir; his Glose sopra le cadenze (Rome, 1553), which appeared simultaneously in Italian and Spanish, provides thorough instruction in ornamentation for players of string instruments. Tomás de Santa María's Arte de tañer fantasía (Valladolid, 1565) gives similar help to the keyboard player and is also one of the first manuals to give fingering and instruction for interpretation. The most important Spanish treatise of the period, however, is Juan Bermudo's Declaración de instrumentos musicales (Osuna, 1555), which goes beyond fingering and interpretation to investigate a wide variety of musical problems. Something of the didactic spirit is also found in the anthology published by Luis Venegas de Henestrosa, Libro de cifra nueva (Alcalá de Henares, 1557) for keyboard, harp and vihuela. Even the great Antonio de Cabezón, whose Obras de música appeared a dozen years after his death, left a body of intabulated pieces for keyboard, harp and vihuela that he had taught his pupils, rather than the virtuoso repertory with which he entertained Philip II during 40 years of peripatetic court service. Nonetheless, these 'crumbs from his table' establish him as perhaps the greatest Spanish organ composer in history, and demonstrate at every turn his mastery of variation technique, his sense of structural balance in the tiento, and his ability to create an inimitable flow of gracious melody.

3. Late 16th century to mid-18th.

(i) Genres and practices. Many genres and musical techniques of the late Renaissance continued to be useful to Spanish composers and musicians throughout the 17th and 18th centuries, although Spanish society was especially desirous of novelty, invention, enigma, artifice and magnificent spectacle. For example, the association between imitative contrapuntal polyphony and sacred texts was maintained even into the 18th century, especially for settings of the Mass, though new textures and techniques were developed in a style that is easily identified as pertaining to the Baroque era, with sections of homophony and solo song added to the mix. Great formal flexibility, bold contrasts, clear harmonic organization, sensitive text expression, and careful attention to text declamation are notable characteristics of Spanish music in this period, whether in large-scale sacred pieces for one or more choirs, romances for two or three voices, solo settings of romances, or clever theatrical songs with continuo.

Among the musical practices that characterized Hispanic music in the 17th and 18th centuries, the all-important traditions of improvisation, variation and recomposition shaped the sound and transmission of music in this period as they had in the 16th century. The practice of glosas and diferencias, partly explained by Luys Milán (1536), Juan Bermudo (1555) and Tomás de Santa María (1565), is demonstrated in the six printed 16th-century vihuela books, and further elaborated in the collections for keyboard, harp and vihuela by Luis Venegas de Henestrosa and Cabezón, mentioned above, and Francisco Correa de Arauxo (1626). It grew in importance during the 17th century, especially because the preferred continuo instruments for Spanish vocal music were harps and guitars. Of course, the art of poetic glosas was essential in poetry by the 16th- and 17th-century masters, so it is no surprise that improvisation continued to be a mainstay of musical performance and recomposition. Spanish composers had perfected the art of writing sets of variations in both instrumental and vocal music of the 16th century, and their inventiveness enlivened multi-strophic romances, villancicos based on traditional harmonic patterns, simple polyphonic settings of courtly poetry based on well-known tunes, and improvised continuo accompaniments for all kinds of music in the 17th century.

(ii) Sacred music. Hispanic Baroque music presents an intriguing variety of musical sources. The repertory of Latin-texted sacred music includes masses and other liturgical compositions primarily in imitative counterpoint, for one or more choirs. Motets were composed to a very limited extent, to judge by the contents of the musical archives of cathedrals, convents, monasteries and parish churches throughout the Iberian peninsula and in Mexico and Central and Latin America (in addition to numerous libraries in Europe and the Americas), which are replete with sacred villancicos. Although some of them seem to be no more than accompanied solo songs with religious reworkings of formerly profane texts 'a lo divino', villancicos are settings of vernacular sacred texts to honour all manner of religious festivities, especially Corpus Christi, Christmas, Epiphany and Easter. They were composed in a variety of musical textures, and normally include sections of strophic coplas and elaborate refrains known as estribillos. More prolifically cultivated even than large-scale psalm settings for multiple choirs, these often festive pieces bring us the brilliant sound of concerted music in the Hispanic Baroque. There are villancicos with or without instruments – harps and sometimes organ, violón or guitars, usually chirimías and bajoncillos, but later also violins, oboes and clarino trumpets – for many voices or for few, and a largely unstudied body of solo villancicos (some of which are indistinguishable from sacred cantatas, while others seem to be religious arias in 18th-century style). Among the most important repositories of Baroque sacred villancicos are the cathedral archives of Burgos, Salamanca, Segovia, Valencia and Valladolid, the music archive of the royal monastery at El Escorial and major libraries such as the Biblioteca Nacional, Madrid, and the Biblioteca de Cataluña, Barcelona.

The importance of the vernacular and Counter-Reformation genre of the villancico in Hispanic culture cannot be overestimated. Pietro Cerone (Naples, 1613) recognized the pervasive influence of the villancico in its early 17th-century manifestation when he wrote: 'I don't wish to say that the practice of the villancicos is bad, because it is accepted in all the churches of Spain, and to such an extent, that it seems as if no solemn occasion can be celebrated without them'. Cerone had lived in Spain and served in the court chapel for nine years beginning in 1592. Admittedly a critic at some distance from his subject by the time he wrote El melopeo y maestro, Cerone criticized the villancico especially for the characteristics that made it so popular and so effective as religious propaganda, namely its obvious conceptism, its 'diversity of languages' (with sections in dialect or pseudo-dialect for Asturianos, Gallegos, Portugueses, Vizcaínos, Gitanos, Negros or Indios, for example), its quotation from theatrical songs and profane, popular bailes, and its use of comic dialogue. For Cerone, these elements 'turn God's church into a public theatre or recreation room'. Sensitive to the power of the genre, which remained vigorous through the first half of the 18th century, the chapters of many cathedrals agreed time and again to clean up the villancicos, given the sometimes scandalous conduct of the faithful on hearing them. Virtually all Spanish composers cultivated the villancico, from the most distinguished of court musicians to the masters of cathedral music and those who composed or arranged music for parish churches.

As the correspondence between maestros de capilla such as Miguel Gómez Camargo and Miguel de Irízar y Domenzain makes clear, villancicos (music and texts) circulated widely and rapidly in manuscript copies. The publication of Pedro Rimonte's Parnaso español de madrigales y villancicos for four to six voices (Antwerp, 1614) was exceptional. Rimonte was maestro de música de la cámara to the Archduchess Isabella and Archduke Albert in Prague. His printed collection offers secular villancicos and madrigals with Spanish texts, whereas the typical 17th-century villancico has little in common with the italianate madrigal and survived almost exclusively in manuscript. Villancico texts, on the other hand, were often collected and published in small booklets, including those sung in many cathedrals and in the royal chapels in Madrid. Among the best representatives of the genre are pieces by Miguel de Ambiela, Jerónimo de Carrión, Joan Cererols, Juan Bautista Comes, Sebastián Durón, Cristóbal Galán, Miguel Gómez Camargo, Juan Hidalgo, Miguel de Irízar, José Martínez de Arce, Tomás Miciezes, José de Orejón y Aparicio, Tomás de Torrejón y Velasco, José de Vaquedano, Matías Juan de Veana and Antonio Yanguas.

(iii) Secular song. If the sacred songs of the period survive in great quantity and were cultivated with a rich variety of forms, styles and textures, the secular repertories are less plentiful but equally inventive. The secular songs of the first half of the 17th century are almost exclusively romances whose poetic content is now less heroic and more amorous, pastoral, pseudo-popular and courtly in nature. They are preserved largely in manuscript cancioneros: bound anthologies of polyphonic songs in partbooks or in choirbook format, dating from the first half of the 17th century and dominated by the court composers. They are the musical sources for the romance nuevo and for the well-known or pre-existing songs used in many plays in the genre of the comedia nueva.

The cancioneros include (listed in roughly chronological order): P-La 47-VI-10/13, 'Cancionero de Ajuda'; I-Tn Ris.mus.1-14, 'Cancionero de Turín'; E-Mn M1370–72, 'Romances y letras a tres vozes'; I-Rc 5437, 'Cancionero Casanatense'; Palma de Mallorca, Biblioteca Particular de Bartolomé March, Medinaceli 13231, 'Cancionero de

3. 'Sagrada Forma' ('Charles II and his Court Adoring the Eucharist'): painting by Claudio Coello, 1685–90 (Monasterio de S Lorenzo, El Escorial); the royal family is shown surrounded by members of the court, with the choir of the royal monastery of the Escorial and a small organ

Medinaceli – B' or 'Tonos Castellanos – B'; D-Mbs Mus.ms.E200, 'Cancionero de La Sablonara'; B. Ferriol's private collection, 'Cancionero de Onteniente'; Olot (Gerona), Biblioteca Pública I-VIII, 'Cancionero de Olot'; E-Mn M1262, 'Libro de Tonos Humanos'.

Many of the songs are presented without attribution, but a number of recognized composers are represented as well: Mateo Romero, maestro of the royal chapel to his retirement in 1633; Carlos Patiño (the last great master of contrapuntal polyphony and the first Spaniard to direct the chapel, maestro until 1675), along with other court musicians serving Philip III and Philip IV: Miguel de Arizo, Juan Blas de Castro, Gabriel Díaz Bessón (maestro in Lerma and later at the royal chapel of the Monasterio de la Encarnación), Diego Gómez de la Cruz, Manuel Machado, Juan de Palomares and Alvaro de los Ríos. Juan Arañés (who accompanied the Duke of Pastrana to Rome in 1623–4), the justly famous Juan Bautista Comes of Valencia, and Joan Pau Pujol, maestro in Barcelona and Zaragoza, contributed to this repertory, as did a number of composers or arrangers about whom little is known at present – Borly, Company (Compañí), Cruz, del Rey, Días, Felipe, Figuerola, Galán (perhaps the very young Cristóbal), García, Garzón, Gramatge, Gutiérrez, Herrera, Martínez, Mesa, Morales, Muñoz, Mur, Murillo, Navarro, Peralta, Peres, Pesa, Rubio, Santiago, Sebastián, Segarra, Settimio, Tapia, Tavares, Torres, Vicente, Viera and Vives.

To this central group of sources with polyphonic settings of Spanish romances for two to four voices it is important to add those settings preserved in poetic manuscripts with alfabeto notation for guitar, such as

I-Fr 2774, 2793, 2804, 2951 and 2973; GB-Lbl Add.36877, 'Villanelle . . . per sonare, et cantare su la chitarra alla Spagnola'; I-MOe 2 (P.6.22), 3333 (R.6.4.) and 115 (Q.8.21); I-Nn XVII.30; F-Pn espagnol 390 (Corbie 55), 'Libro di villanelle spagnuol'e italiane et sonate spagnuole'; I-Rvat Chigi L.VI.200 (1599).

Two printed sources, the Libro segundo de tonos y villancicos a una dos tres y quatro voces: con la zifra de la guitarra española a la usanza romana of Juan Arañés (Rome, 1624; copy in I-Bc), which contains settings of 31 Spanish songs with alfabeto and mensural notation, and the Método mui facilíssimo para aprender a tañer la guitarra a lo español by Luis de Briceño (Paris, 1626; copy in F-Pn), attest the popularity of the Spanish guitar among cultivated amateurs outside Spain. The alfabeto notation facilitated the spread of the romances and bailes (Hispanic dances of a non-courtly nature based on repeated patterns and characteristic rhythms) such as the canario, the chacona, the folía, the seguidilla and the zarabanda. Some of the bailes originated in the Americas – for example the chacona and the zarabanda were brought from 16th-century Peru to the Iberian peninsula and thus to Europe.

The consistency of the sources and the early 17th-century repertory speak of a musical practice both dependent on well-known popular and courtly poetry and steeped in the culture of recomposition and improvisation. Rarely do two settings of the same song text show exact musical concordance, though settings of the same text often reveal that these polyphonic songs were based on well-known tunes or standard harmonic or rhythmic patterns. The art of exquisite counterpoint graced the settings for two to four voices, while solo performances of the same songs were tempered by the 'sweetness' of the well-known tunes in improvised and mostly chordal accompaniments for guitar or harp. Secular and theatrical songs from the later 17th century are preserved in an entirely different array of sources, although the Libro de Tonos Humanos (1655–6) preserves music from at least one court play of 1653, and manuscripts from the monastery of Santa Cruz in Coimbra contain both early romances and slightly later theatrical songs, as well as sacred villancicos and sketches for these (P-Cug M50, M51, M227, M229, M232–40, M242 and M243; notated in score and probably dated 1630–70; the romances are mostly in M227, M229 and M236).

Musical sources for this central period of the Spanish Baroque contain mostly solo songs (secular and theatrical) known as tonos humanos and tonadas, many of which have texts by the best poets of the epoch, including Pedro Calderón de la Barca, Agustín de Salazar y Torres, Antonio Solís, Juan Bautista Diamante, Antonio de Zamora and José de Cañizares. There are also theatrical 'cuatros', ensemble songs in four parts. These 'composed' songs were probably intended in the first place for performance at court or for élite patrons; many of them were composed for musical plays performed at the Madrid court in the later 17th century.

Once popularized through public performance in Madrid and elsewhere, theatrical songs circulated in both performing parts and manuscript anthologies throughout the Iberian peninsula and the Spanish colonies in Italy and the New World. Spanish theatrical songs were also known and appreciated at the French court and at the Habsburg court in Vienna, thanks to the close contact propitiated by the marriages of the Spanish infantas and the travels of Spanish aristocrats and diplomats throughout continental Europe. The principal composers represented include the court composers Juan Hidalgo, Cristóbal Galán, Juan del Vado y Gómez, Juan Francisco de Navas, Sebastián Durón and the enigmatic José Marín, along with composers who worked in other major musical centres, such as Barcelona, Segovia, Valencia and Valladolid. Many songs are by the best theatrical musicians who worked in both the courtly and public spheres, such as José Peyró, Juan de Serqueira and Manuel de Villaflor, employed by the acting companies.

Most characteristic of the second half of the 17th century are the collections of loose scores and performing parts (some with alfabeto notation or tablature) in E-Bbc (especially music legajos 691, 698, 701, 737–8, 741, 743–4, 746–7, 749, 753–4, 759, 762–3, 765–7, 769, 774–5, and 888); E-Mn M3880 and M3881 (erroneously dubbed 'Cancionero de Madrid' or 'de la Biblioteca Nacional'); E-SE Leg.39, 41–2, 44–5, 52, 56; E-VAc legs.10–11, 37–40, 42–3, 54, 83; E-V legs.21, 39, 40, 51, 62, 68, 80, and 70–71, 84–5 (among sketches of villancicos); D-Mbs Mus.ms.2872–938; Lima, Biblioteca Nacional de Perú, solo songs with tablature for guitar; and US-NYhsa HC:380/824*a*.

Large anthologies of Spanish secular songs and theatrical music from the later 17th and early 18th centuries are preserved in: E-Bc 3660; GB-Cfm MU.4-1958 (32-F-42): 51 songs in guitar tablature with vocal melody, composed or arranged by José Marín; E-Mn M2478, 'Libro de tonos puestos en cifra de arpa': songs in harp tablature, most from court plays 1660–1700; I-Vnm it.Cl.IV 470: anonymous songs with continuo, many attributed to Hidalgo or Marín; E-Mn 13622, 'Tomo de música vocal antigua', *c*1705, which belonged to Barbieri (in Mn since 1894); Almagro (Spain), Museo del Teatro, 'MS Novena' (formerly in E-Mcns), undated, *c*1710: songs by Peyró and Hidalgo exclusively for comedias and autos sacramentales; US-SFs SMMS M1: 134 songs (largely from the Madrid theatres) for soprano and continuo, by Serqueira, Villaflor, Hidalgo, Marín, Navas and others; E-SCu 265: 100 secular and theatrical songs mostly for solo voice and continuo (copied by J.M. Guerra, scribe of the royal chapel, *c*1680).

While the repertory of Spanish Baroque secular and theatrical songs is incomplete, owing to the loss of many of the flimsy loose scores and performing parts over time, and to the disastrous fire in the Alcázar palace, Madrid, in 1734, the repertory is a large one, still in great part unedited and rarely performed. The smallest group of musical sources is that of the bound complete scores for individual semi-operas, operas and musical plays. Thanks to the royal family's habit of sharing news of its theatre presentations (descriptions of plays, texts of plays, drawings of scenery, and copies of music) with courts to which it was connected by blood ties or dynastic marriage, and thanks also to the travels of Hispanic opera's aristocratic patrons, several bound manuscript scores for individual stage works have been preserved: US-CA Houghton Library Typ 258H, ff.105*v*–150: vocal music probably by Hidalgo for Calderón, Fortunas de Andrómeda y Perseo (prologue and three acts), 1653; Madrid, Palacio de Líria, Biblioteca del Duque de Alba, Caja 174, num.21: 'Musica de la Comedia Zelos aun del Ayre matan. / Primera jornada / Del / M.o Juan Hidalgo'; P-EVp CL 1/2-1: 'Zelos aun del Ayre matan / Comedia de D. Pedro Calderon / Muzica de Juan Hidalgo', opera ('fiesta cantada') in three acts; Lima, Biblioteca Nacional de Perú C-1469: 'La púrpura de la rosa, representación música, fiesta . . . Compuesta en Música por D. Thomas Torrejón de Velasco', 1701. These carefully copied complete sources help us to understand the conventions of Hispanic Baroque musical theatre and to appreciate the rare musical beauty and true historical significance of major works such as the operas La púrpura de la rosa and Celos aun del aire matan.

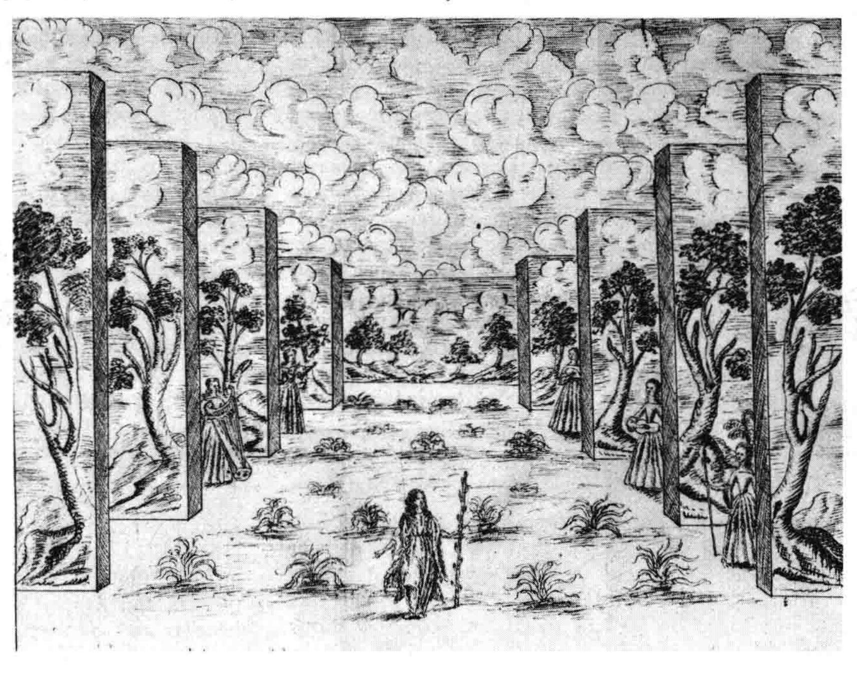
(iv) Theatre music.



(a) Opera. The early history of opera and related genres in the Hispanic dominions followed its own path, with limited reference to operatic developments elsewhere in Europe. The first opera performed in Spain was La selva sin amor (1627), with libretto in Spanish by the prolific poet and dramatist Lope de Vega, almost entirely in Italian poetic metre (only the brief coros are in Spanish octosyllables). The music (apparently lost) was by Filippo Piccinini, a Bolognese lute and theorbo player who was among Philip IV's favourite musicians and who accepted the commission under pressure from the Florentine diplomats assigned to Madrid. The production of this tiny opera followed the model of the Florentine pastorals, but was given only twice for the royal family. It was designed above all to display the talents of Cosimo Lotti, the stage designer brought to Philip IV from the Tuscan court. While Lope de Vega was 'enraptured' to hear his entire text performed in song (which we assume to have been recitative composed by the none-too-eager Piccinini), the production did not persuade the Spaniards to cultivate opera.

The next operas composed and performed in Spain were created without recourse to foreign models, well before a national, non-Italian genre of fully sung opera was developed elsewhere in Europe. A decade before Lully and Quinault's tragédie lyrique, two Hispanic operas were created for the Madrid court by the dramatist Calderón and the principal composer of secular and theatrical songs for Philip IV (and later Charles II), Juan Hidalgo. The first of these, La púrpura de la rosa, was written and rehearsed in 1659, but first performed on 17 January 1660. The second, Celos aun del aire matan, was performed on 5 December 1660. Opera was an extraordinary genre in the Hispanic Baroque, and these operas are full of extraordinarily lyrical, beautiful music. They were composed to celebrate momentous events – the treaty between Spain and France known as the Peace of the Pyrenees, and the marriage of the Spanish Infanta María Teresa to the young Louis XIV of France. Both operas were revived a number of times at court before the end of the Habsburg era. Another setting of La púrpura de la rosa was produced in 1701 at the viceregal court in Lima (Peru) to celebrate the accession of Philip V, the first Bourbon to reign as King of Spain. The score carries an attribution to Tomás de Torrejón y Velasco, maestro de capilla of Lima Cathedral and among the most influential composers in the New World.

Polymetric and mostly tragicomic plays known as comedias (many of them with songs drawn from the repertory of the cancioneros) dominated the Spanish stage in the 17th century. Partly sung masques, festival plays and spectacle plays were performed at court and at country houses and estates beyond Madrid in the early 17th century. Just after 1650, Calderón – probably working with Hidalgo together with the Roman stage engineer and scenic artist Baccio del Bianco – invented a new genre of serious dramatic court mythological play with operatic scenes. In this kind of semi-opera the mortals sing only well-known songs, whereas the gods converse in the heavens in recitative and use newly composed tonadas (declamatory, strophic solo songs) to influence, persuade or seduce the mortal characters. These musical-theatrical conventions were based in contemporary socio-political theory and Neoplatonic philosophy. Examples of the Spanish semi-opera include La fiera, el rayo y la piedra (1652), Fortunas de Andrómeda y Perseo (1653) and La estatua de Prometeo (?1674).

(b) Zarzuela. A second genre invented by Calderón and shaped by Hidalgo's music in the 1650s and beyond (to his death in 1685) is the zarzuela, a genre first exemplified in the court production of Calderón's El laurel de Apolo (1657). As demonstrated in this work, the zarzuela was a lighter, increasingly burlesque genre of mythological pastoral in which only the deities sing elaborate newly composed songs, and recitative (Sp. recitado) is used sparingly, if at all. Zarzuelas dominated the court stages in the later 17th and early 18th centuries, and all the major court dramatists provided texts. Almost all the songs are extant for Los celos hacen estrellas (Juan Vélez de Guevara and Hidalgo, 1672), and much of the music survives for Los juegos olímpicos (Salazar y Torres and Hidalgo, 1675). After Hidalgo's death the zarzuela became the preserve of the court composers Navas, Durón and, slightly later, Antonio Literes, although music was contributed as well by composers who worked for the acting companies. In the zarzuelas and semi-operas, the partly sung roles for the classical gods and goddesses alike were played by women (with ranges we would identify today as belonging to sopranos, mezzo-sopranos and, less commonly, contraltos). Special 'old man' (barbas) roles, such as Morpheus or Father Time, were taken by male baritones and/or female contraltos, as far as can be discerned. Some comic gracioso roles were sung by actresses, while others were sung (however badly) by actors. The musical styles and conventions developed by Hidalgo over a period of three decades continued to characterize zarzuelas into the 18th century.

Many musical plays outside the genre of the zarzuela were also popular, including Ulloa's Pico y Canente (1656; music by Hidalgo), with its famous lament 'Crédito es de mi decoro', and Calderón's Eco y Narciso (1661) and Ni amor se libra de amor (1662), source of the celebrated four-voice 'Quedito, pasito'. Exceptional for the repertory of zarzuelas and other partly musical plays are the printed scores for Destinos vencen finezas by Navas to a zarzuela text by the Peruvian dramatist Lorenzo de las Llamosas (Madrid, 1699), and for Los desagravios de Troya by Joaquín Martínez de la Roca to a text by J. Escuder (Madrid, 1712). While the first of these is a musical gem, revealing the richness, melodic grace, variety and textural fullness of the Spanish Baroque zarzuela around 1700 (the score has parts for violins, clarino trumpets and oboes and gives the full scoring of the ensembles), the music for Los desagravios de Troya is less interesting. Performed privately in Zaragoza for the Count of Montemar, the work is rich in political references and cultural significance, quite apart from its importance as a complete printed score.

4. Scene from Calderón's fiesta 'La fiera, el rayo y la piedra', 1652, with musicians playing harp, violin, guitar and small mandolin/guitar (E-Mn MS 14.614, p.40)

In the first two decades of the 18th century, the zarzuelas of Durón and Literes, written for the court and for the public theatres (corrales) of Madrid, provide not only delightful music (to uneven and somewhat insipid dramatic texts) but a more varied layer of Hispanic Baroque music, full of innovation and striking contrasts. This is certainly the best Spanish music surviving from the early 18th century, and the charm of Durón's zarzuelas helped the genre to become wildly successful with the public in the years 1710–20. Although it has been claimed that Durón invented a kind of 'operatic zarzuela', his zarzuelas follow the conventions developed by Hidalgo quite closely, and their music is no more 'operatic' than that of earlier works in the genre.

The theatre scores of Literes (performed 1708–11) are highly original and present the traditional Hispanic musical forms (tonos, tonadas, coplas, estribillos, recitados) alongside italianate arias and recitatives, within a basic framework that preserves the conventions of Hidalgo (essential as well to the zarzuelas of Navas and Durón). Literes also composed for noble patrons, which may be why he composed so few works for the royal court and the public theatres. His zarzuela Accis and Galatea (1708) was a great success at court and subsequently became the rage in the public theatres. Its combination of native Hispanic forms with italianate arias was especially characteristic for this period of political and cultural change that accompanied the arrival of Philip V on the Spanish throne in the midst of the War of the Spanish Succession.

The taste of Spain's new French king and his wives tended toward the contemporary, pan-European genres of opera and serenata, so that the zarzuela was transformed from a genre designed to delight princes into one aimed at the mixed public of the corrales in the early 18th century. The theatre administrators discovered (through the production of works such as Literes's Accis y Galatea) that musical plays brought in substantial revenue. Many 18th-century ones (some based on older texts but revised with new music) called for violins and oboes, and the harpsichord now presided over the continuo band, so that the kind of small theatre orchestra (*c*1718–20) used elsewhere in Europe joined together with and ultimately replaced the traditional large continuo band of harps, guitars and viols. Actress-singers were still required for musical plays, even for Spanish versions of opera seria (with spoken dialogue), because castrato singers were unwelcome on Madrid's public stages.

Apart from the works of Durón and Literes, few zarzuelas survive from the early 18th century, although their performance history is known. The character of the full-blown 18th-century zarzuela, with its absorption of the mainstream pan-European operatic style (principally in da capo arias and italianate recitatives) and conservation of traditionally Spanish numbers (e.g. coplas, seguidillas, frequent four-voice coros), characters (the graciosos) and conventions, is exemplified in José Nebra's Viento es la dicha de Amor (1743; revised 1748 and 1752). Nebra's score preserves Zamora's older libretto, but replaces all the song texts for the principal serious characters with new texts appropriate for recitative and da capo arias. The work demonstrates the flexible, hybrid character of the zarzuela.

(v) Cantatas. The cantata (Sp. cantada) was also cultivated by Spanish composers of this period, though to a very limited extent. Probably the first piece to be so called was Corazón, que en prisión de respetos (text by Salazar y Torres), which exists in a number of musical settings and is ascribed in one source to Marín (d 1699). The designation 'cantada' appears in a poetic manuscript that includes this text as well as many others by Salazar y Torres, Calderón and others. The setting is entirely strophic with music for long series of coplas, such that this first use of 'cantada' may well have been an extrapolation of the term 'tonada', which was customarily used to describe this kind of long, declamatory, strophic air. Likewise, other pieces in traditional Spanish forms are included in late 17th- or early 18th-century musical sources designated as containing cantatas (the earliest of which may be E-Mn M2618), alongside or in alternation with selfconsciously italianate arias, recitatives and graves. The Hispanic recitado is to be distinguished, however, from recitativo. The composers who cultivated the cantada in the genre's early period include Durón, Literes, Navas, Rabassa, Serqueira de Lima and (chief among them) Torres. A few of the first 'cantadas' are nothing more than scenes extracted from Spanish theatrical scores. Others demonstrate that the very late 17th-century Neapolitan multi-sectional cantata with alternation of arias and recitatives (exemplified in the works of Alessandro Scarlatti) was first cultivated in Spain, by composers who served or worked in the ambitus of the royal court in Madrid.

(vi) Instrumental music.

(a) Sources. With copious musical sources for sacred and secular vocal music, and the relatively full surviving documentation concerning the functions and social use of vocal music, the paucity of musical sources for strictly instrumental music in this period is striking. In part this can be blamed on the low social and economic status accorded to musicians, especially instrumentalists, in Hispanic society. The lack of a vigorous music-printing industry made itself felt in a scarcity of printed music of all kinds. Manuscript sources, with few exceptions, do not contain notated music for instrumental ensemble, athough solo compositions for organ, harp and guitar are preserved in both manuscript and printed sources (largely instruction books). The only early 17th-century exceptions are three manuscripts for ministriles – players of shawms (chirimías), cornetts and bajoncillos – containing music for the royal wind band in the time of Philip III and his prime minister, the Duke of Lerma. Rather than original compositions, the three books contain instrumental versions of vocal polyphony by both Spanish and Franco-Flemish masters: the same kinds of pieces that were performed in this period by the chapel under the direction of Mateo Romero.

The Canzoni, fantasie et correnti (Venice, 1638) by Bartolomé de Selma y Salaverde is a printed collection of instrumental music by a Spanish composer working abroad. Selma y Salaverde (son of Bartolomé de Selma, instrument maker to the royal court in Madrid) was a virtuoso player of the bassoon and other wind instruments who served the archducal court at Innsbruck (and perhaps others in the hierarchy of the Habsburg empire) and the collection contains difficult and beautiful music both for solo instruments and for small wind ensemble.

(b) Organ music. The Spanish organ music repertory was among the first to exhibit the virtuoso character of Spanish Baroque music, independently of vocal models. The tiento (cultivated in the 16th century, and explained first in Milán and Mudarra) after Cabezón became increasingly brilliant and exuberant in the hands of such composers as Sebastián Aguilera de Heredia and most especially Francisco Correa de Arauxo. The latter built extravagant embellishment into the tiento's traditional contrast between fast passages with sometimes dissonant figuration, and consonant, chordal progressions, between redobles and consonancias. Correa's tientos, substantial in length and both mono- and polythematic, preserve an underlying structure of correct counterpoint, yet the elaborate and highly coloured figuration (whether performed on organ, harpsichord or arpa doble) impresses us with its improvisatory character, perhaps due to diverse rhythmic patterns filled with syncopation and hemiola. The Spanish predilection for contrasts of colour and texture is demonstrated in these tientos, with their exploitation of the divided single keyboard of the Spanish organ – the medios registros, or registros partidos – and timbral contrasts between registers: the very high tiples against the low registro bajo. Correa published 69 of his own pieces (mostly tientos but also canciones, glosas, diferencias and cantus firmus settings) in his treatise on organ playing, Facultad organica (1626), an indispensable source for early 17th-century performing practice.

Many organist-composers flourished in the 17th and early 18th centuries (Antonio Brocarte, Pablo Bruna, Bernardo Clavijo del Castillo, José Elias, José Ximénez, Gabriel Menalt, Andrés de Sola and Diego Xaraba, to name only a handful), but none was as prolific as the great Valencian composer Juan Bautista José Cabanilles (1644–1712), whose more than 1000 works (preserved in more than 15 manuscripts) include religious pieces (versets and hymns) and some 200 tientos (including batallas and clarines), along with tocatas and sets of variations or diferencias (gallardas, corrente italiana, passacalles, paseos, folías and jácaras). Cabanilles's music was known beyond Spain, especially in France, and the composer himself knew something of French and Italian instrumental music.

In addition to the virtuoso exuberance we associate with Cabanilles's music, his works embody the free interchange of musical forms, figures and genres that characterized Hispanic instrumental music in the later Baroque, as do the keyboard pieces contained in the four Flores de música anthologies of Antonio Martín y Coll (MS, 1706–9, E-Mn). These contain many kinds of piece, both Hispanic and imported, and are extremely valuable for the cross-sectional view they provide of the tastes and practices of instrumental music, especially in Madrid (where Martín y Coll served as organist in the monastery of San Francisco after 1707).

(c) Other instrumental music. While variations for organ barely surface in the 17th century, there are many such works, along with character-pieces and those based on contemporary songs, in the Martín y Coll manuscripts (compared to only a dozen or so within the works of Cabanilles). Of course, variations on popular bailes, court dances, well-known tunes and bass or harmonic patterns were the mainstay of the guitar and harp repertories, from the earliest printed guitar collections (Amat, Briceño, Doizi de Velasco). Later 17th-century collections such as the Instrucción de música sobre la guitarra española (1674–5) of Gaspar Sanz (in Zaragoza after his Italian training), the Poema harmónico (1694) by the Mallorcan Francisco Guerau, and several manuscripts notated for five-course guitar, including the Libro donde se veran pazacalles de los ocho tonos by Antonio de Santa Cruz (E-Mn M2209; 1675–1700), tell us a great deal about the character of the bailes and danzas and the techniques needed to play them. One of the most accessible sources is the instruction book and collection of Lucas Ruiz de Ribayaz, Luz y norte musical para caminar por las cifras de la guitarra española y arpa (Madrid, 1677), with music for guitar and for harp. The section devoted to the Baroque harp – the most consistently used instrument for the accompaniment of Hispanic music of all kinds, sacred and profane, before about 1750 – is, together with the Compendio numeroso de zifras armónicas (Madrid, 1702–4) by Diego Fernández de Huete, our most important testimony concerning its repertory, performing practice and the technique of improvised basso continuo. These printed books, along with several more manuscript sources, bring us the core repertory of Hispanic Baroque instrumental music.

The 18th-century collections – especially the Resumen de acompañar la parte con la guitarra (Madrid, 1717) by Santiago de Murcia, and his later Passacalles y obras de guitarra (MS, 1732, GB-Lbl) and the Mexican Saldívar Codex 4 – not only enrich the repertory with longer and more daring passacalles and diferencias, but show the all-important co-existence of Hispanic with French and Italian pieces and musical genres that was so characteristic of musical life in 18th-century Spain. Although an independent repertory of instrumental ensemble music does not survive from this period, there is no reason to suppose that it would differ fundamentally from the music preserved with consistency of form, genre and technique in the keyboard, guitar and harp sources.

(vii) Influences. While the early 18th-century sources show that the music of famous contemporaries such as Lully and Corelli was known and performed in Spain, there is little musical evidence for earlier foreign influence in Hispanic Baroque instrumental music. Two important points of contact between Spanish instrumental practice and the canzonas and sonatas cultivated so prolifically in Italy in the mid-17th century are the compositions of Andrea Falconieri, who spent some time in Madrid and served the Spanish court at Naples, and of Henry Butler, a viol player and violinist who worked at the Madrid court from 1623 to 1652. The form of a multi-sectional sonata with sections based on successive points of imitation may well have been known and cultivated by Spanish musicians, if the pieces by Falconieri and Butler may be taken as representative. One undated manuscript trio sonata by José de Vaquedano (d 1711), maestro at the cathedral of Santiago de Compostela, is preserved in the music archive there. Composed for two treble and one bass instruments, with a separate bass line for the 'acompañamiento' or basso continuo, the piece may reflect a particularly Hispanic practice of providing a separate continuo bass for the harp, labelled simply 'accompaniment', in addition to a bass line that is integrated into the imitative treatment of successive motifs (to be played on tenor viol or by a wind instrument in the tenor/baritone range). This scoring is also used for the instrumental parts of many villancicos and some chamber songs.

Francisco José de Castro published four books of Trattenimenti armonici da camera a tre for two violins with cello or keyboard instrument (Bologna, 1695), with sonatas in the contemporary form and style, but, as he makes clear in his preface, his musical training and orientation were wholly Italian. From about 1680 archival documents increasingly demonstrate the presence of many newly arrived Italian and French musicians at the Madrid court. Many of these were singers, destined for the royal chapel, and violinists. They came directly from similar posts at the courts that ruled Spain's Italian possessions in Milan, Naples and Sicily. Contemporary Italian and French styles were probably introduced by these new employees in the 1680s and 90s.

Around 1700 a separate Hispanic practice still existed for instrumental music and for the accompaniment of Hispanic vocal music, although the nature of both was to change during the next few decades. While it is true that the presence later of Domenico Scarlatti at the Spanish royal court (*c*1728–57) furthered the cause of Italian music and musicians, his employment was a very private matter. His sonatas were hardly published in his lifetime, and certainly not in Spain. They were copied and collected into elegantly bound manuscript volumes for the queen, Barbara de Braganza. The degree to which Scarlatti's sonatas were known by his Spanish colleagues is questionable, yet the keyboard sonata was also developed among Iberian composers (José Elías, Carlos de Seixas, Antonio Soler, Sebastián Ramón de Albero y Añaños and Vicente Rodríguez Monllor). The independence of Hispanic accompaniment practice is made clear in the all-important Reglas generales de acompañar, en órgano, clavicordio, y harpa (Madrid, 1702, 2/1736) by Joseph de Torres y Martínez Bravo, organist in the royal chapel and maestro from 1718, and in other sources (the earlier publications by Sanz and Ruiz de Ribayaz, for example). The first edition of the Reglas instructs continuo players in the estilo español, whereas the second edition includes an additional new section that explains and 'demonstrates the modern style of accompaniment for Italian pieces'.

Torres y Martínez Bravo (1665–1738) was a distinguished musician and composer who was involved in virtually every aspect of early 18th-century musical life in Spain. Between the second quarter of the 17th century and the early 19th he was not only the first but the only one to issue printed music systematically (beginning with Juan Francisco de Navas's Destinos vencen finezas of 1699), and the many pamphlets and scores issued as musical pliegos by his Imprenta de Música in Madrid are extremely important. From an early age Torres was employed by the chapel of the royal court (as organist, as director of the choir school, and then as maestro de capilla), though he also composed secular works and (*c*1710–16) collaborated to supply music by other composers for zarzuelas performed in the public theatres. Above all, he was the principal composer of sacred music at court during his three decades of service, and he was responsible for the renovation of its sacred music (together with Literes, and then Nebra, his former pupil), following the disastrous fire that destroyed the music archive of the royal Alcázar de Madrid in 1734.

Torres's statement about the 'modernity' of Italian music is key to understanding the new taste for Italian opera that characterized the musical life of Madrid (and of Barcelona and Valencia). While it is certainly incorrect to describe the Italian presence as an 'invasion' or 'conquest' (both musical and non-musical documents speak of the co-existence and plurality of musical genres and styles), there is no doubt that in élitist social circles Italian music and performers were all the rage, beginning before 1720. Among the distinguished visitors, undoubtedly the most illustrious was Farinelli, who first sang for Philip V at his palace in La Granja in August 1737. Farinelli's performance won him a very special private position; Philip V appointed him 'my servant, who answers only to me or to the queen, my very beloved wife, for his unique talent and skill in the art of singing', with a generous salary and all perquisites. Farinelli used his unique position at court to further the cause of Italian opera seria and to better the standing of fellow musicians. An ambitious series of operas was planned for the Coliseo theatre of the Buen Retiro, which was completely remodelled and transformed into one of the best opera theatres in Europe. Whereas the first opere serie were performed in Madrid in 1738 and depended on the talents of both Spanish and Italian composers and performers, Farinelli's direction of the Coliseo (and his management of court entertainments at other royal palaces, for example, at La Granja and Aranjuez) as a venue exclusively for Italian operas and Italian singers, with performances for only a small invited audience, was limited to the years 1746–59. A number of other Italian musicians worked in Madrid – at the royal court, for the public theatres, and for aristocratic patrons – including Nicola Conforto, Francisco Corradini, Francesco Courcelle, Giacomo Facco, Philipo Falconi and Giovanni Battista Mele. The orchestras put together by Farinelli included a number of Italian players, but also talented Spaniards such as the violinist-composer Joseph de Herrando, the virtuoso violinist Francisco Manalt, the oboist-composer Luis Misón, and the justly celebrated José Nebra. By 1756, the lists of players for both the orchestra of the royal chapel and that of the Coliseo included many more foreign than Hispanic names.

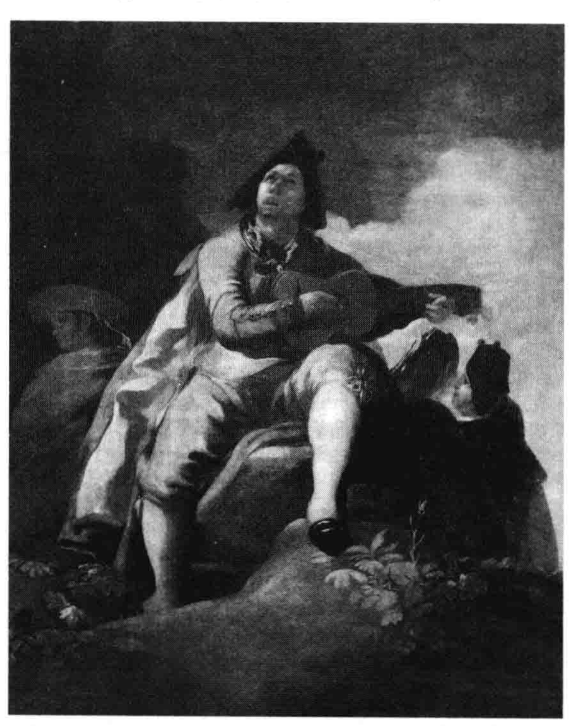
The 18th-century plurality of styles and the dialectic between Spanish and foreign styles were also a point of contention still for church composers during and following the 20-year controversy sparked by the use of an accented unprepared dissonance in the famous Missa 'Scala aretina' (1702) by the Catalan Francesc Valls. Most Spanish composers defended the aptness of the stile antico for sacred texts. With this pamphlet war as a backdrop, the royal chapels were hospitable to forms from opera seria (e.g. da capo arias replete with luxuriant melismas), and the vernacular villancico, which had gradually absorbed the 'modern' forms and mannerisms, was banished with the suppression of all vernacular sacred music in 1765.



4. Later 18th century.

(i) The church. In the age of Enlightenment, the increasingly powerful middle classes joined the traditional list of music patrons – church, court and theatre. The church continued to be the most important centre of musical production in Enlightenment Spain. The music chapels around the court were the most reputable in the land for both the economic benefits and the prestige they provided. Composers of high repute held posts in the royal chapels of Madrid: José Mir y Llusá, Antonio Ripa, Antonio Rodríguez de Hita, José Lidón and Jaime Balius y Vila. Towards mid-century a drastic reorganization of the royal chapel was carried out at the instigation of Nebra, its vicemaestro from 1751. The music chapels attached to the cathedrals, collegiate churches, parish churches and monasteries competed for the best musicians. Throughout the 18th century the mobility of Spanish musicians increased progressively. The phenomenon of the flow of Catalan composers to important positions at the court of Castile, such as the cathedrals of Toledo (Jaime Casellas, Joan Rosell, Francesc Juncá) and Seville (Pedro Rabassa, Domingo Arquimbau), was particularly significant for contributing to the assimilation of the Italian style into the peninsula's sacred music. Other coveted posts were those at Santiago de Compostela (dominated by Italian musicians), Salamanca (which gave access to the chair in music at the university), Zaragoza (the cathedral and El Pilar), Valencia and Barcelona. Of all the genres of the second half of the 18th century, church music was the most conservative. The liturgical output in Spain continued to make use of stile antico procedures. In the Mass Ordinary settings, for instance, the polyphonic texture alternates with homophonic sections (usually in the Gloria and the Credo), which allow the text to be intelligible. Polychoral writing, generally for two SATB choirs, survived. From the mid-18th century, old instruments such as the cornett, bass horn, key bugle and Russian bassoon began to be replaced in the church by the oboe, bassoon and trumpet. The style of Neapolitan opera and modern instrumental techniques had evidently penetrated not only Office pieces such as responses, lamentations and vesper psalms, but, most particularly, paraliturgical religious compositions such as villancicos and oratorios. Up to the beginning of the 19th century the religious villancico remained popular in Spanish chapels, except at court, where its performance was abolished in 1750. The villancico assimilated the formal structure of the Italian cantata, with its preponderance of recitatives and arias, without totally renouncing the traditional sections (introduction, estribillo). The convention of including characters of popular origin (pilgrim, shepherd, blind man) or belonging to national, regional or ethnic groups (Indian, Asturian, Galician, Gypsy) continued at this time. Its prototypical presentation was marked in particular by colloquial language and traditional music. The debasement of the textual content led some ecclesiastic authorities to ban villancicos in the last third of the century, reinstating the singing of liturgical responses in Latin, in accordance with the exhortations of Pope Benedict XIV's encyclical Annus qui (1749) and with enlightened ideology. Francisco Javier García Fajer, maestro de capilla at Zaragoza Cathedral, was highly influential in this reform of sacred music, assisted by his nephew Juan Antonio García de Carrasquedo and by Pedro Aranaz y Vides, maestros at the cathedrals of Santander and Cuenca respectively. In the second half of the century, the polemics regarding the adoption of the Italian operatic style in sacred music continued. Treatises by progressive composers and theorists such as Antonio Rodríguez de Hita (Diapasón instructivo, 1757) and Antonio Soler (Llave de la modulación y antigüedades de la música, 1762), drawing on the liberal ideas expressed by the Benedictine monk Benito Jerónimo Feijóo y Montenegro (1676–1764) in his Cartas eruditas y curiosas (1742–60), which were a long way from the reactionary stance of the famous lecture 'Música de los templos' from Theatro crítico universal (i, 1726), unleashed a barrage of attacks by conservatives. In 1796, the translation into Spanish of Dell'origine e delle regole della musica by the expelled Spanish Jesuit Antonio Eximeno also incited inflamed polemics in the capital's newspapers. Underlying this controversy is the confrontation between the supporters of the old rationalist aesthetic, which advocates that music is directed at reason, and the adherents of sensationalism, who accepted innovations in music so long as they provided auditory pleasure.

(ii) Music for the stage. For splendour of court music, the reign of Charles III (1759–88) cannot be compared with that of his predecessors. The monarch's lack of inclination for music led to the cessation of Farinelli's employment and to the progressive dwindling of operatic performances at court. When the Count of Aranda, president of the Council of Castile (1766–73), promoted theatres at the king's country residences, French tragédies and Italian opere buffe, some with text by Goldoni, were the preferred fare. From the beginning of the reign of Charles III, Italian opera spread rapidly through all the important Spanish cities. Italian opera companies, directed by impresarios like Nicolà Setaro, Alfonso Nicolini, Petronio Setti, Francisco Creus and José Lladó, established themselves in the commercial theatres of La Coruña, Zaragoza, Valencia, Seville and, especially, Cádiz – buoyant thanks to commerce with America – and Barcelona, among others. The predominant entertainment was dramma giocoso. Some of the companies of Spanish actors, like those at the municipal theatres of Madrid, found themselves obliged to compete by offering Spanish versions of comic operas. The pieces were adapted to zarzuelas: they were reduced to two acts, the recitatives were eliminated and replaced by spoken dialogue and, in many cases, the characters and the action were also modified. A local composer was commissioned to add a few numbers to the original score, usually by Piccinni, Traetta, Galuppi or Scolari. The central figure in this process of assimilation was the playwright Ramón de la Cruz (1731–94). Thus, for instance, one of the greatest successes in Europe at the time, La Cecchina, ossia La buona figliola, a comic opera in three acts by Niccolò Piccinni with libretto by Goldoni (1760, Rome), was performed as early as 1761 in Barcelona, the following year in Seville and Cádiz, in 1767 at the La Granja palace and, finally, in Aranjuez and Valencia (1769). In 1765 De la Cruz rewrote it into a zarzuela for the Madrid public under the title La buena muchacha, while Antonio Bazo did the same for the company of Carlos Vallés, who took it to Barcelona (1770) and Valladolid (1772). The overwhelming success of adapted comic operas such as Pescar sin caña ni red (Le pescatrici) and Los cazadores (Gli uccellatori) contributed to the creation, towards the end of the 1760s, of the 'costumbrista' zarzuela (centred on local customs), by De la Cruz and the composer Rodríguez de Hita. Their two 'burlesque' zarzuelas, Las segadoras de Vallecas (1768) and Las labradoras de Murcia (1769), set the foundations of the genre: division into two acts, comic costumbrista theme, a mixture of noble and popular characters, use of vernacular and regional language, folktunes, patter, arias in two tempos, etc. These costumbrista works prepared the way for the 19th-century zarzuela. De la Cruz continued to exploit the vein of rural or bourgeois subjects in the zarzuelas En casa de nadie no se meta nadie o El buen marido (1770), with music by Fabián García Pacheco; Las Foncarraleras (1772), by Ventura Galván; and El licenciado Farfulla (1776), by Antonio Rosales. The comic zarzuela also attracted Luigi Boccherini, whose Clementina, with libretto by De la Cruz, was first performed in 1786 in the private theatre of María Josefa, Countess-Duchess of Benavente. The serious subject matter characteristic of the zarzuela after Calderón was not completely abandoned in the second half of the century, even though heroic story lines were preferred to mythological ones. De la Cruz himself, in his first period, had written zarzuelas with plots taken from classical antiquity: Quien complace a la deidad (1757), with music by Manuel Pla; Briseida (1768), by Rodríguez de Hita; and Jasón (1768), by an Italian resident in Spain, Gaetano Brunetti, all follow neo-classical lines to a greater or lesser degree. Both the expansion of Italian opera and the revitalization of existing zarzuelas coincided with the Count of Aranda's reformist government. The measures in support of the theatre which followed the uprising of 1766 ('Esquilache mutiny') reflected the wish to extend royal authority in the face of the Catholic Church's claims. In 1787 the Caños del Peral theatre reopened in Madrid with a prestigious company directed by Domenico Rossi, and operas by Sarti, Cimarosa, Paisiello, Guglielmi and others were performed until the end of the century. During the same period in Barcelona, Italian operas by such Spanish composers as Carles Baguer, Fernando Sor and Vicente Martín y Soler (whose international renown had taken him as far as Russia) were offered alongside the Italian repertory. Finally, in December 1799, Charles IV banned performances with foreign actors and in languages other than Spanish. One of the products of the competition with Italian opera was the stage tonadilla, the most characteristic phenomenon of musical theatre during the reigns of Charles III and Charles IV. Like the sainete (a comic sketch or one-act farce), this independent piece would be inserted in the second interval of a play or zarzuela; between one and four singers would take part (tonadilla general). The musico-literary style is simple, rooted in the popular tradition. The tonadillas, which became small musical dramas, portray working-class and bourgeois characters (together with the typical fops, lovers, clergy and gallants) with critical irony and excessive conventionalism. The picturesque qualities of the tonadilla are reflected in the painting of the period, particularly in the works of Goya. The main proponents of the genre, which reached its zenith between 1770 and 1790, were Antonio Guerrero, Pablo Esteve y Grimau, Antonio Palomino, Mariano Bustos, Jacinto Valledor y la Calle and Pablo del Moral. In 1778 it was established that the 'company composers' of Madrid's municipal theatres were obliged to provide 60 tonadillas each year. The most prominent librettists were Luis Moncín, Manuel del Pozo, Gaspar Zavala y Zamora (1762–1824) and Vicente Rodríguez de Arellano (1750–?1806), although the Catalan Luciano Francisco Comella (1751–1812), the most prolific of the end-of-century dramatists, also undoubtedly stands out. The success of the tonadilla lies in the fact that it was intended essentially for the urban working classes. Owing to the methods used by the authors in order to please the audience, the tonadilla, like the sainete, was severely criticized by the neo-classicists. The melólogo (melodrama) was one of the most widely cultivated musical genres in the 1790s. The first adapter in Spain was the dramatist Tomás de Iriarte (1750–91), author of the well-known didactic poem La música (1779), who wrote the lyrics and orchestral commentary of Guzmán el bueno (1790, Cádiz). The authors of the texts, whose plot was usually mythological, legendary or historical, were most often Rodríguez de Arellano and Comella.

(iii) Instrumental music. Despite having little inclination for music himself, Charles III, who had been taught by the violinist Giacomo Facco, took pains over his children's musical education. Prince Charles (the future Charles IV) was trained by the Italian violinists Felipe Sabbatini and Gaetano Brunetti, whom he was to appoint violinist of the royal chamber on his accession to the throne. José Nebra and the Hieronymite Antonio Soler were the Infante Gabriel's clavichord teachers. A large proportion of Soler's instrumental works, most prominently the quintets of 1776, were composed for the musical academies patronized by the Infante Gabriel at his El Escorial palace. Another promoter of chamber music at court was the king's brother, the Infante Luis Antonio, who was Boccherini's patron from 1768. In imitation of court circles, the nobility organized musical academies in their salons. Among the foremost noble houses were those of Osuna, Conquista and Arcos. The 12th Duke of Alba (1714–76) and his son, the Duke of Huéscar (1733–70), held a pre-eminent position, with Luis Misón and Manuel Canales, the first Spanish composer of string quartets, in their service. Another patron who stands out is María Josefa (1752–1834), Countess-Duchess of Benavente, who kept an excellent orchestra and took the trouble to maintain an extensive musical archive up to date. In 1783 she obtained, through her representative in Vienna, a contract with Joseph Haydn which committed him to sending her every six months copies of any new music he composed. In 1786, following the death of the Infante Luis Antonio, Boccherini passed into María Josefa's service as composer and director of her orchestra.

5. 'Guitarist' by Francisco de Goya, cartoon for the tapestry series at the Palacio del Pardo, 1780 (Museo del Prado, Madrid)

The favourable political-economic choices of the reformist governments helped the consolidation of the high bourgeoisie and the middle class, which constituted the new audience for music in the second half of the century. Musical gatherings proliferated in salons, private houses and cafés, turning into soirées which would end in music and dance, especially the fandango, the seguidilla and the bolero. Musical academies became common, and the participation of amateurs increased. For instance, music came to occupy an important place in the Sociedades Económicas de Amigos del País, one of the Spanish intelligentsia's achievements. At the Caños del Peral theatre 'concerts spirituels' were organized for the first time, staged by the opera company to compensate for the interruption of performances over Lent. The success of these subscription concerts led to similar ones being held in the last years of the century in Barcelona and Valladolid. The pre-Classical and Classical central European composers, until then heard only at court and the aristocratic salons, now reached a wider audience. As in the rest of Europe, musical education became one of the main preoccupations of the educated in Spain as well. For the first time, the possibility of offering musical training through lay institutions was raised. However, the requests of the poet Iriarte and of Rodríguez de Hita for the creation of a music academy were ignored. Because the monarchy did not favour the establishment of music publishers, the requirements of the new amateur market could not be satisfied, nor could Spanish music be propagated abroad. Despite these unfavourable conditions, a number of books on instruments and dances appeared, directed at aficionados. In particular, there was a resurgence of treatises on learning to play the guitar, like those by Andrés de Sotos (Arte para aprender con facilidad y sin maestro a templar y tañer, 1764), Fernando Ferandiere (Arte de tocar la guitarra española por música, 1799), or Antonio Abreu and Víctor Prieto (Escuela para tocar con perfección la guitarra, 1799).

5. 19TH CENTURY.

(i) Historico-political background. Turbulent and politically unstable, the 19th century in Spain was not propitious for major musical creation. Until about 1830 the Napoleonic Wars, civil wars, revolutions, coups d'états and the reactionary government of Ferdinand VII – anti-liberal and hence 'anti-Romantic' – caused many composers and artists to leave Spain (thus consolidating Spanish music in Europe through composers such as Fernando Sor and Manuel García). This situation prevented the development of major symphonic trends and of a more substantial indigenous creativity, while causing an economic and intellectual crisis among musicians, an absence of musical organizations and a deficiency in the state of musical education. However, the negative image that has weighed upon this century is being dispelled as the result of events that were decisive for the subsequent development of Spanish music, from mid-century onwards. Mention must be made of the consequences of the Mendizábal sale of church lands, which began in 1835 and reduced by half the proportion of revenue destined for music. As a result, many musicians were forced to leave their positions in churches and cathedrals to perform in flamenco bars and cafés, where a number of pianists also ended up. Their repertory included fashionable dances and arrangements of operas and zarzuelas as well as more serious chamber music. Granados and Albéniz first performed several of their works in these circumstances. Compared to the exaltation of composers in the rest of 19th-century Europe, in Spain only a few composers and certain virtuosos escaped the general degradation of the music profession. As for sacred music, a few composers such as Hilarión Eslava, Mariano Rodríguez de Ledesma, Francisco Andreví y Castellar, Nicolás Ledesma and Enrique Barrera Gómez stand out despite the disastrous situation.

(ii) Regenerative developments. The low standing of musicians and their craft, and the impression abroad that Spain was a musically backward nation, were not ameliorated until the arrival of the composers of the 'Generación del 27'. From then on, thanks to the efforts of Baltasar Saldoni, Eslava (director of the religious publications series Lira Sacro-Hispana), Mariano Soriano Fuertes, Francisco Asenjo Barbieri, Antonio Peña y Goñi, Felipe Pedrell (a key figure through his teaching and his support of national music) and others, the beginnings of musicological research can be seen. Music criticism reached a peak of brilliance, especially following the death of Ferdinand VII, through such publications as La ilustración. The outstanding figures in this field are Fargas y Soler, Manuel Manrique de Lara, Cecilio de Roda, Peña y Goñi, and Luis Carmena y Millán. Finally, the century witnessed the birth of conservatories (first in Madrid, financed by the initiative of Queen María Cristina in 1830), the first musical societies (Sociedad de Cuartetos, 1863; Sociedad de Conciertos, 1866), the beginning of concert life and the rise of symphonic writing.

(iii) Orchestral music. In the first third of the century, the lack of both an interested audience and an adequate infrastructure prompted the production of music intended to introduce shows or pageants, whether on stage, at court or in church; hence the predominance of overtures in the Italian style. The names that stand out are those of Juan Baladó, Manuel García – who worked abroad – and Juan Crisóstomo de Arriaga, with his symphonies in the Classical style. From the 1830s onwards, the work of José Melchor Gomis, Ramón Carnicer – famous for his italianate overtures – and Baltasar Saldoni, all of whom composed mainly for the theatre, should be singled out. More substantial orchestral music began to be properly valued in the 1840s, and various initiatives to found orchestras emerged. The creation of the Sociedad de Conciertos in 1866 indicates the stabilization of instrumental music. Directed by Barbieri, Gaztambide, Monasterio, Bretón and Giménez among others, it was born from the musicians' initiative with the aim of giving concerts of classical and modern music, and it provided the necessary stimulus to symphonic creation in Spain. The Spanish repertory performed by this society included the symphonies of Pedro Miguel Marqués y García, Bretón and Ruperto Chapí; overtures; nationalist pieces such as Monasterio's Fantasía característica española; and programme pieces and symphonic poems, such as Los gnomos de la Alhambra by Chapí. The concerto was one of the least performed genres; the only one of significance is Monasterio's B minor Violin Concerto.

The War of Independence interrupted the establishment of a true school of chamber music. One isolated case is Arriaga, whose premature death cut short an oeuvre in which the quartets stand out. The Sociedad de Cuartetos, under Monasterio's direction, would later revivify this genre.

(iv) Piano music. The piano, a typically Romantic instrument, gained a foothold in Spain following the visits of Liszt (1844), Thalberg (1847) and Gottschalk (1851–2), and gave rise to a market of modest artistic pretensions. Especially before 1830, when the first conservatory was established, the piano's main venue was the salon, not the concert hall, with a wide range of easy pieces: dances, fantasies and variations based on operatic themes, arrangements for voice and piano, etc. Two periods can be distinguished: the first defined by European genres (waltzes, variations, scherzos, sonatas, mazurkas) and the virtuosity adopted by pianists in imitation of the great performers; and the second, starting in the 1850s, in which Spanish and central European dances would predominate. In any case, the most prominent compositions were small works – which reflected the influence of both the great European masters and nationalism – free forms, of rhapsodic or programmatic type. The foremost composers of piano music were Pedro Albéniz y Basanta, Santiago de Masarnau, José Miró, Pedro Tintorer, Juan María Guelbenzu, Marcial del Adalid y Gurrea, Adolfo de Quesada, Eduardo Ocón, Teobaldo Power, José Tragó, Isaac Albéniz and Enrique Granados.

These last two are particularly notable. Albéniz (1860–1909), a child prodigy and a pianist of polished technique, studied with Pedrell, who guided him towards composing. He was a tireless traveller: for a time he followed Liszt, and he had contacts with musical fin-de-siècle Paris, especially Debussy. A connection can be established between his pianistic language and that of Chopin, in that both endeavoured to create a nationalist musical expression and to renew pianistic technique. Until La vega, the main criterion that propelled his work was improvisation. Suite española and Chant d'Espagne stand out from this early period. His greatest work is Iberia. Granados (1867–1916) was, like Albéniz, Catalan and a piano virtuoso. He exhibits a purely Romantic tendency which is also nourished by the folklore of various regions. Prominent among his piano works, which also owe some of their character to Pedrell's teaching, are Danzas españolas and Goyescas (the latter was also to become an opera). Among his vocal works, the tonadillas and the zarzuela María del Carmen are noteworthy. His orchestral music is more limited, although the intermezzo of Goyescas stands out. As concerns other solo instruments, the majority of creative activity was focussed on the guitar. Some of the eminent figures in this field were Fernando Sor, Dionisio Aguado – author of a well-known method – and Julián Arcas, who may be considered the founders of the modern guitar school.

(v) Song and the lyric theatre. The salon, the main centre for piano music, was also – together with the café – the venue for song, which would only later pass on to the theatre. There is a marked Andalusist and populist component, as well as a strong relation with the 18th-century tonadilla, which shows up in the use of seguidillas, boleros and polos. Manuel García was one of the main song composers. In the second half of the century the influence of the Italian romanza and the French mélodie was more evident. Choral activity reached its peak towards the end of the century, building on the groundwork of Anselmo Clavé and his choirs composed of manual workers. Clavé's music, expressive and popular in character, was widely imitated.

The theatre was one of the chief musical centres in the 19th century. A large number were built, among them the Teatro Real and the Teatro de la Zarzuela in Madrid, the Arriaga in Bilbao and the Liceo in Barcelona. The two main genres performed at these centres were zarzuela – aimed, in principle, at the middle class – and opera, aimed at the aristocracy (these differences were to disappear with the arrival of the género chico). Apart from an influence of French operetta at the start, the first 30 years of the century were marked by a veritable delirium for Italian music, especially Rossini's works. In this ambience, so unfavourable for vernacular production, the work that stands out is that of José Melchor Gomis, a passionate liberal who was forced to flee to France, where several of his operas were performed. Ramón Carnicer was another noteworthy dramatic composer; he, however, could not avoid the Italian influence.

In the 1840s, with nationalism at its peak, there was a reaction to the invasion by Italian opera, and the first attempts to create a national opera took place. Generally, these failed owing to the audiences' rapture with the Italian style, the agents' interests, the composers' scepticism and a lack of public funds; all of this added fuel to the Teatro Real's boycott of Spanish opera and zarzuelas. Opera was the great unfinished business and one of the major subjects of discussion of the 19th century. While for Peña y Goñi Spanish opera had never existed, for Barbieri Spanish opera was the zarzuela. The subject provoked the great manifestation of nationalism reflected in Pedrell's treatise Por nuestra música (Barcelona, 1891). All the same, it is worth mentioning some Spanish operas such as Tomás Bretón's Los amantes de Teruel, Chapí's La bruja, Granados's María del Carmen, Pedrell's Els Pirineus, Arrieta's Marina and Albéniz's Pepita Jiménez.

On the other hand, the nationalist resurgence prompted the appearance of the 'new zarzuela', which continued the national lyrical theatre's tradition of alternating spoken dialogue with songs. Though characterized by classical harmony and Andalusist effects such as the use of the augmented 2nd and the Andalusian scale, it nevertheless does not escape Italian influence and the typology of French operetta. However, it also shows a relation to the tonadilla. The Sociedad de Artistas, formed in 1851 and consisting of Salas, Joaquín Gaztambide, José Inzanga, Barbieri, Cristóbal Oudrid and Rafael Hernando, among others, succeeded in obtaining the financial aid needed to build the Teatro de la Zarzuela and establish the new theatrical genre. Among first examples of the latter were Los enredos de un curioso (1832) – a collaboration between Carnicer, Saldoni, Piermarini and P. Albéniz y Basanta – and the one-act Jeroma la castañera (1842) by Soriano Fuertes. The 'restoration' of the zarzuela was later consolidated with Colegiales y soldados (1849) and El duende (1849), by Hernando (both in two acts); La mensajera (1849; two acts), by Gaztambide; El dominó azul (1853; three acts), by Arrieta; and, above all, the works of Barbieri: El barberillo de Lavapiés (1874; three acts), Gloria y peluca (1850; one act), Jugar con fuego (1851; three acts) and Pan y toros (1864; three acts). Two types of zarzuela can be distinguished at this time: the zarzuela grande and the one-act zarzuela. The zarzuela grande, in two or three acts, with 15 or 16 multi-sectional numbers, generally used historic subjects. Sung text predominates, and it tends to begin with a prelude followed by a large choral section. It continues with the first scene, in which the main character appears, and then goes on with the acts and concertantes. The one-act zarzuela, Hispanic in nature and with popular subject matter, was written for a small number of characters. Recited dialogue predominates, with reduced vocal demands. The use of strophic songs and the presence of dances are two of its characteristics. This genre prefigures the one developed later as the género chico.

Another form of lyric theatre up to the 1880s was the 'género bufo', whose name comes from the Compañía de los Bufos Madrileños founded by Francisco Arderíus in 1866. Modelled on Offenbach's Bouffes-Parisiens, these works were comic-burlesque in character and their aim was financial success. Among them are El jóven Telémaco, by Rogel; Un sarao y una soirée, La trompa de Eustaquio and Sópleme usted ese ojo, by Arrieta; Los sobrinos del capitán Grant, by M.F. Caballero; and Robinsón Crusoe, by F.A. Barbieri. The librettists worthiest of note were López de Ayala and Eusebio Blasco. The influence of the género bufo gave rise to competition that turns the spotlight on to the sainete, in which the music is progressively simplified and strophic form is gradually imposed. But the ultimate victory belongs to the cuplé (variety song) and the género chico, which originated with the hourly performances that theatres began to offer in the last third of the century in an effort to solve the theatre crisis. Its birth is usually set at 1880, the composition date of La canción de la Lola by Federico Chueca. The roots of this genre are in the stage tonadilla and the sainete with their popular Madrid setting. The main author was Chueca, who, despite his great lyrical ease, required collaborators in the majority of his works. The most important of these was Joaquín Valverde (i).

The development, from the 1860s onwards, of 'theatre by the hour' finds its culmination in the famous 'cuarta de Apolo'. The works destined for this market came to be produced in a mechanical manner, thus becoming a focal point of criticism for the writers of the 'Generación del 98'. One kind of programme that stands out within the repertorio chico is the revue, which originally had a political content, and which ended up giving way to a sort of 'current affairs' revue. All the current news and topics of discussion would be included in these. Among its characteristics were the preponderance of spectacle over plot, the dramatic possibilities of combining isolated scenes, and political satire. Its musical raw material would be in folk tradition or urban folklore, and its form would come from the fashionable rhythms. One of the most popular was La gran vía (1886), subtitled 'comic-lyric-fantastic street revue', by Chueca and Valverde. The majority of dramatic composers cultivated these genres. Among the most famous at the end of the century were Manuel Fernández Caballero, Tomás Bretón (with his masterly La verbena de la paloma), Jerónimo Giménez, and especially Ruperto Chapí, who, with works like La tempestad and La bruja, revitalized the zarzuela. In the years that followed, the dramatic composers who stood out were Vicente Lleó, Amadeo Vives, José Serrano, Pablo Luna, Francisco Alonso, Federico Moreno Torroba, Pablo Sorozábal and Jacinto Guerrero.

6. 20TH CENTURY. Cultural development in 20th-century Spain is largely marked by the Civil War (1936–9) and by the subsequent fascist government which held power for nearly 40 years. In the first part of the century, up to the establishment of the Republic, the output of Spanish composers leant towards a kind of neo-romanticism with popular connotations. The zarzuela continued to enjoy great success through the work of authors such as Vives and Usandizaga. Manuel de Falla (1876–1946) himself, who exerted a decisive influence on the careers of all the other composers, began his career in composition while living in Madrid surrounded by zarzuela, a genre for which he demonstrated his admiration and to which he contributed five works, two in collaboration with Vives. Of these, only the lyrical sainete Los amores de la Inés was to be performed. The teaching of Pedrell acquainted Falla with the music of the Spanish polyphonists and with the musical movements in Europe. This period of training culminated with the prize won by his stage work La vida breve from the San Fernando Academy of Fine Arts. Later, Falla travelled to Paris (1907–14), where he came into contact with Albéniz, Debussy, Ravel and Dukas, who gave him guidance in orchestration. His return to Spain signalled the beginning of a third stage. His style evolved from the Impressionism of works such as Noches en los jardines de España, through the 'Andalusist' phase of El amor brujo and El sombrero de tres picos, to the neo-classicism of El retablo del maese Pedro (1923), influenced by Stravinskian language, and the Harpsichord Concerto (1923–6). From 1927 onwards he worked on Atlántida. Falla's last period centred on Argentina, where he lived from 1939 until his death.

6. Title-page of the vocal score of Federico Chueca and Joaquín Valverde's zarzuela 'La Gran Vía' (Madrid: Martin, 1886)

In the second decade of the 20th century an alternative line developed in Spain, headed by the composers of the 'Generación de la República' or 'Generación del 27', the latter name originating from the celebration in 1927 of the tricentenary of the death of Luis de Góngora by musicians and writers with similar aesthetic concerns. In addition to Impressionist and neo-classicist tendencies evident in a process of expressive refinement and the restriction of sound media, the work of these composers was profoundly marked by the nationalist language of Falla. Among them – within what might be called the 'Madrid group' – were Julián Bautista, Gustavo Pittaluga, Fernando Remacha, Salvador Bacarisse, Jesús Bal y Gay, Rosa García Ascot, Rodolfo Halffter and Juan José Mantecón, as well as the musicologist Adolfo Salazar. Among Catalan composers may be mentioned Eduardo Toldrá, violinist, conductor and composer of works such as the comic opera El giravolt de maig and the quartet Vistas al mar; Frederic Mompou, Baltasar Samper and Manuel Blancafort. Mompou (1893–1987), trained in Paris and influenced by Debussy, is the author of a piano oeuvre from which the series Cançons i danses and Impresiones íntimas stand out. Other noteworthy composers from this period are Jaime Pahissa, Nemesio Otaño, Joaquín Nin, the Valencian Joaquín Rodrigo and the Alicantino Oscar Esplá (1886–1976). The musical language of Expressionism went practically unnoticed, except by the Catalan Roberto Gerhard (1896–1970). Through Gerhard, a pupil of Pedrell's, serial techniques entered Spain via Schoenberg himself, who taught Gerhard in Vienna.

After this time, as a result of the Civil War and Spain's subsequent isolation from the rest of Europe, Spanish music suffered a setback in the progression of compositional activity from which it did not recover for some years. A number of composers were obliged to leave Spanish soil because of their rejection of the fascist regime. Among those forced into exile were Pittaluga, Bacarisse, Salazar, Bal y Gay, Rosa García Ascot and Rodolfo Halffter. Gerhard established himself in England until his death, while Falla remained in Argentina. The majority of the Generación del 27 ended up settling in various parts of Europe and, particularly, Latin America. Those who stayed in Spain included the composers Jesús Guridi, Conrado del Campo and Joaquín Turina. The work of the last-named at the helm of the Comisaría Nacional de la Música resulted in the creation of the Orquesta Nacional de España, which gave its first concert in 1942. Its most distinguished regular conductor was Ataulfo Argenta. Turina also held its directorship, along with Conrado del Campo and Julio Gómez. The works of these composers and of Falla, Esplá, Blancafort, Mompou and Toldrá, as well as those of Ernesto Halffter, Jesús García Leoz, Muñoz Molleda and Xavier Montsalvatge, made up Spanish production at the time, with prominence given to works of a nationalist character. Alongside these was the work of Joaquín Rodrigo, whose Concierto de Aranjuez is probably the most performed guitar concerto of the century. Also during this time the national dramatic genre went into decline, being replaced by revues and variety shows.

The younger composers attempted to reject all trace of nationalism and to join European currents such as dodecaphonism which, as already observed, had scarcely been taken up in Spain. Among these were Cristóbal Halffter, Narcís Bonet, Josep Cercós, Xavier Benguerel, Alberto Blancafort and others. The musical panorama was nevertheless desolate; there were hardly any scores or recordings of works in which new composition techniques had been assimilated. Bibliography in Spanish regarding contemporary composition was practically non-existent in Spain in the 1950s. The improvement in international relations and the increasing ease in communication were to have consequences. In the 1950s a veritable rupture with the predominant language of contemporary Spanish composition took place, the result of an awareness of opportunities missed during the years of autocracy and a consequent need to link up with the European currents. In Madrid, the main incentive towards renovation was provided by Nueva Música, founded in 1958 under the patronage of the Ateneo de Madrid. The group played an essential role in the emancipation of 'new composition' in Spain by organizing various concerts, conferences and seminars. Among its members were Luis de Pablo, Antón García Abril, Antonio Ruiz-Pipó, Ramón Barce and Manuel Moreno-Buendía, as well as the critic Enrique Franco. The group's heterogeneity was reflected in a subsequent compositional path of a very different character. In addition to the Ateneo, contemporary music was disseminated at that time through the concerts of Sonda, Juventudes Musicales, the French and German institutes and Tiempo y Música, founded in 1961 and directed by Luis de Pablo during the two years of its existence. From 1965 until 1973 the development of Spanish contemporary composition received a strong impetus from Alea. This was another organization directed by Pablo, created mainly through his concerts and his Laboratorio de Música Electrónica, which channelled the interest of new composers in concrete and electro-acoustic music. The Zaj group, which counted Walter Marchetti and Juan Hidalgo among its members, commenced its notorious activities in 1964.

In Catalonia, Roberto Gerhard had caused an upheaval in musical language by promulgating 12-note techniques and bringing about various musical events, among them the première in 1936 of Berg's Violin Concerto in the setting of the 14th ISCM Festival and Schoenberg's stay in Barcelona. Traditionally Wagnerian, Catalonia became confirmed at the beginning of the century as a champion of the Germanic style in music. In the years before the Civil War, the musical ambience in Catalonia had created the perfect climate for the development of new ideas, but the war truncated the promise of a generation of young musicians. Fortunately, the younger composers – among them Josep Cercós, Josep Soler Sardà, Xavier Benguerel and Josep M. Mestres Quadreny – had the advantage of the guidance of a Catalan musician trained elsewhere in Europe: Cristòfor Taltabull (1888–1964), who was acquainted with Max Reger. Traditionally, Spanish musicians had leant towards the French influence – take Falla or the majority of the Generación del 27 – but Taltabull brought in addition a German influence, also present in musicians like Conrado del Campo, which had a bearing on the structure and logic of musical discourse.

The formation of the Círculo Manuel de Falla in 1947, under the sponsorship of the Instituto Francés in Barcelona, brought together a number of composers with different perspectives. The first members of the circle were Joan Comellas, Alberto Blancafort Paris, Josep Cercós, Angel Cerdá and Manuel Valls. Josep Casanovas, Jordi Giró and Mestres Quadreny joined later, and the singer Anna Ricci also took part. The Círculo Manuel de Falla ceased its activities during the 1954–5 season. Other factors that contributed to the dynamism of the period's musical life were the work of Juventades Musicales and the concerts and activities of Musica Abierta organized by Club 49 between about 1960 and 1970. In retrospect, a certain uniformity of style becomes evident in Catalonia, where serialist techniques matured and persisted, unlike in the Madrid area, where they were generally employed over a shorter period of time. In the 1970s the foundations of a democratic government were laid in Spain. At the same time – and probably even before – there was, musically, a clear move towards the establishment of personal languages, as well as a degree of backing away from the most radical avant-garde trends. On the other hand, interest in non-Western cultures and in the development of non-academic musical creativity also reached a climax in the early years of the decade, as manifested in the 1972 Encuentros de Pamplona, in effect a coda to the period. Groups such as Canon, which assimilated the theatrical experiences of Artaud, Brecht and Grotowsky and at the same time attempted to renew the relation between the piece and the actors on the one hand and the spectators on the other, and in which the singer Esperanza Abad began her work in contemporary music, developed their creative work in the 70s. Among the representatives of this anti-academic tendency is Llorenç Barber, founder of groups such as the collective Actum (1973) – which concentrated on the conceptual, on improvisation, musical actions and minimalism – and the Taller Música Mundana (1978). The Catalan musician Carles Santos and the singer Fátima Miranda followed the same line.

A series of 'generations' of composers in Spanish music can be identified in the second half of the century. One is the Generación del 51, including those born between 1924 and 1938. Among these are Luis de Pablo (one of those who have carried post-Webernian experimentation the furthest, in his most recent phase interested in opera), Cristóbal Halffter (who has gone from serialism to the communicative potential of his music for choir or full orchestra through textural procedures), Ramón Barce, Amando Blanquer, Agustín Bertomeu, Miguel Alonso, Agustín González Acilu (whose work stresses the relation between music and phonetics), Manuel Castillo, Carmelo Alonso Bernaola, Antón García Abril, Juan José Falcón Sanabria, Miguel Angel Coria Varela, Angel Oliver, Francisco Calés, Juan Hidalgo, Angel Arteaga and Claudio Prieto. In the Catalan region, the works of Soler Sardà – whose serialist language has frequently been put to use in dramatic music – Mestres Quadreny, Benguerel, Joan Guinjoan and Jordi Cervelló stand out. Gerardo Gombau, though older, is linked to these through his interest in renewal. Other composers, whose careers had a greater degree of independence due to their more or less prolonged residence abroad, are Gonzalo de Olavide, José Luis Delás and Leonardo Balada. The following 'generation' would include those born between about 1939 and 1953. The names that figure here are those of Tomás Marco (although the path of this musician, critic and music administrator converged temporarily with that of the Generación del 51), Félix Ibarrondo, Jesús Villa Rojo, Carlos Cruz de Castro, José García Román, Javier Darias, Llorenç Barber, Carles Santos, Marisa Manchado, Francisco Guerrero, José Ramón Encinar and José Luis Turina, as well as the Catalans Albert Sardà and Jep Nuix. A mellowing of the language becomes most evident at the end of the 1970s and beginning of the 80s, particularly in the composers of the Generación del 51. From that time on, a large number of authors began to accept the use of a more or less open tonality. The variety of aesthetic options has also had its effect on the younger generation, including Seco de Arpe, Manuel Hidalgo, Adolfo Núñez, Zulema de la Cruz, Agustín Charles, Benet Casablancas, José Manuel López, Alfredo Aracil, Manuel Balboa, David del Puerto, Jesús Torres, Jesús Rueda and Carlos Galán.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A General. B Medieval and Renaissance. C 17th and 18th centuries. D 19th century. E 20th century.

A: GENERAL

StevensonSCM; StevensonSM; SubiráHME

R. Mitjana y Gordón: 'La musique en Espagne', EMDC, I/iv (1920), 1913–2351; Sp. trans. (Madrid, 1993)

G. Chase: The Music of Spain (New York, 1941, 2/1959)

H. Anglès: La música española desde la edad media hasta nuestros días (Barcelona, 1941)

A. Araiz Martinez: Historia de la música religiosa en España (Barcelona, 1942)

W. Starkie: Spain: a Musician's Journey through Time and Space (Geneva, 1958)

A. Peña y Goñi: España desde la ópera a la zarzuela (Madrid, 1967)

M. Valls i Gorina: Història de la música catalana (Barcelona, 1969)

L. Powell: A History of Spanish Piano Music (Bloomington, IN, 1980)

España en la música de occidente: Salamanca 1985 [incl. E. Casares: 'La música española hasta 1939, o la restauración musical', ii, 261–322]

E. Huertas: Teatro musical español en el Madrid ilustrado (Madrid, 1989)

La zarzuela en España e Hispanoamérica: Madrid 1995 [Cuadernos de música iberoamericana, nos.2–3 (1996); incl. R. Barce: 'La revista: aproximación a una definición formal', 119–47; R. Sobrino: 'La crisis del género lírico español en la primera década del siglo XX: una revisión de las fuentes hemerográficas', 213–33; S. Salaün: 'La zarzuela, híbrida y castiza', 235–55; B. Lolo: 'La zarzuela en el pensamiento de Felipe Pedrell: historia de una controversia', 319–25]

M. Cortés: Pasado y presente de la música andalusí (Seville, 1996)

B: MEDIEVAL AND RENAISSANCE

H. Collet: Le mysticisme musical espagnol au XVIe siècle (Paris, 1913/R)

J. Ribera: La música de las cantigas (Madrid, 1922; Eng. trans., abridged, 1929/R, as Music in Ancient Arabia and Spain)

J.B. Trend: Luis Milán and the Vihuelistas (London, 1925)

J.B. Trend: The Music of Spanish History to 1600 (London, 1926/R)

H. Anglès: La música a Catalunya fins al segle XIII (Barcelona, 1935/R)

H. Anglès: 'Hispanic Musical Culture from the 6th to the 14th Century', MQ, xxvi (1940), 494–528

H. Anglés: La música en la corte de Carlos V (Barcelona, 1944/R)

R. Mitjana, J. Bal y Gay and I. Pope, ed.: Cancionero de Upsala (Mexico, 1944)

Juan Vásquez: Recopilación de sonetos y villancicos (Barcelona, 1946)

M. Dolmetsch: Dances of Spain and Italy from 1400 to 1600 (London, 1954/R)

S. Rubio: La polifonía clásica (El Escorial, 1956, 3/1983)

R.B. Donovan: The Liturgical Drama in Medieval Spain (Toronto, 1958)

J. Romeu Figueras: 'Mateo Flecha el viejo, la corte literariosical del duque debria y el Cancionero Ilamado de Upsala', AnM, xiii (1958), 25–101

C. Jacobs: La interpretación de la música española del siglo XVI para instrumentos de teclado (Madrid, 1959)

R. Stevenson: Juan Bermudo (The Hague, 1960)

H. Anglès: 'Die Instrumentalmusik bis zum 16. Jahrhundert in Spanien', Natalicia musicologica Knud Jeppesen septuagenario collegis oblata, ed. B. Hjelmborg and S. Sørensen (Copenhagen, 1962), 143–60

J. León-Tello: Estudios de historia de la teoría musical (Madrid, 1962/R)

C. Jacobs: Tempo Notation in Renaissance Spain (New York, 1964)

J. López-Calo: La música en la Catedral de Granada en el siglo XVI (Granada, 1964)

P. Becquart: Musiciens néerlandais á la cour de Madrid – Philippe Rogier et son école (1560–1647) (Brussels, (1967)

W. Elders: 'The Lerma Codex: a Newly-Discovered Choirbook from Seventeenth-Century Spain', TVNM, xx/4 (1967), 187–205

C.W. Brockett: Antiphons, Responsories, and Other Chants of the Mozarabic Rite (Brooklyn, NY, 1968), 158ff

D.M. Randel: The Responsorial Psalm Tones for the Mozarabic Office (Princeton, NJ, 1969), 296ff

H. Anglès: Historia de la música medieval en Navarra (Pamplona, 1970)

J.M. Lamaña: 'Los instrumentos musicales en la España medieval', Miscellanea barcinonensa, xxxiii (1972), 59–85; xxxv (1973), 41–7

D.M. Randel: 'Sixteenth-Century Spanish Polyphony and the etry of Garcilaso', MQ, lx (1974), 61–79

Juan del Encina: Poesía lírica y Cancionero musical (Madrid, 1975)

R. Perales de la Cal, ed.: Cancionero de la Ctedral de Segovia (Segovia, 1977) [facsimile]

J.J. Rey: Danzas cantadas en el renacimiento español (Madrid, 1978)

M.C. Gómez: La música en la casa real catalano-aragonesa durante los años 1336–1432 (Barcelona, 1979)

Juan de Anchieta: Opera Omnia (1980)

J. Etzion: 'The Spanish Polyphonic Ballad in Sixteenth-Century Vihuela Publications', MD, xxxv (1981), 179–97

M. Querol Gavaldá, ed.: Madrigales españoles inéditos del siglo XVI, MME, xl (Barcelona, 1981)

I. Fernández de la Cuesta: Historia de la música española, i: Desde los orígines hasta el 'ars nova' (Madrid, 1983)

S. Rubio: Historia de la música española, ii: Desde el 'ars nova' hasta 1600 (Madrid, 1983)

R.L. Gerber, ed.: Johannes Cornago: Complete Works (Madison, 1984)

R. Fernández: De las melodías del reino nazaride Granada a las estructuras musicales cristianas (Granada, 1985)

M.C. Gómez, ed.: Mateo Flecha [ii]: Il primo libro de madrigali (Madrid, 1985)

M. Morais, ed.: Vilancetes, Cantigas e Romances do século XVI (Lisbon, 1986)

J. Reif: 'Music and Grammar: Imitation and Analogy in Morales and the Spanish Humanists', EMH, vi (1986), 227–43

D. Preciado, ed.: Francisco de Peñalosa opera omnia (Madrid, 1986–91)

M.C. Goméz, ed.: Mateo Flecha [ii]: La feria; La cañas (Madrid, 1987)

T. Knighton: 'Northern Influence on Cultural Developmnts in the Iberian Peninsula during the Fifteenth Century', Rolling Stone, i (1987), 221–37

P. Becquart and H. Vanhulst, eds.: Musique des Pays-Bas ancien – Musique espagnole ancienne (Louvain, 1988)

L. Robledo: 'Sobre la capilla real de Felipe II', Nassarre, iv (1988), 245–48

C. Villanueva and others, eds.: El pórtico de la gloria: música, arte y pensamiento (Santiago de Compostela, 1988)

T. Knighton: 'The Spanish Court of Ferdinand and Isabella', The Renaissance from the 1470s to the End of the Sixteenth Century, ed. I. Felon (Englewood Cliffs, NJ, 1989)

E. Castro: Tropos y troparios hispánicos (Santiago de Compostela, 1991)

M.C. Gómez, ed.: Mateo Flecha [i]: La viuda (Barcelona, 1992)

K. Kreitner: 'Minstrels in Spanish Churches, 1400–1600', EMc, xx (1922), 533–46

O. Rees: 'Guerrero's L'Homme armé Masses and their Models', EMH, xii (1993), 19–54

M. Christoforidis and J. Ruiz Jiménez: 'Manuscrito 975 de la Biblioteca de Manuel de Falla: Una nueva fuente polifónica del siglo XVI', RdMc, xvii (1994), 205–36

M.C. Gómez: 'The Ensalada and the Origins of the Lyric Theatre in Spain', Comparative Drama, xxviii (1994), 367–93

J.M. Hardie, ed.: Fransico de Peñalosa: Twenty Four Motets (Ottawa, 1994)

T. Binkley and M.Frenk: Spanish Romances of the Sixteenth Century (Bloomington, IN, 1995)

K. Kreitner: 'Music in the Corpus Christi Procession of Barcelona', EMH, xiv (1995), 183–91

R.J. Snow, ed.: Rodrigo de Ceballos: Obras completas (Granada, 1995–7)

C. Poché: La musique arabo-andalouse (Arles, 1995)

L. Robledo: 'Felipe II y Felipe III como patronos musicales', AnM, liii (1998), 95–110

L. Robledo: 'La música en la corte de Felipe II', Felipe II y su época, Actas del Simposium: San Lorenzo del Escorial 1998, ed. F.J. Campos (Madrid, 1999), i, 139–67

M.C. Gómez: La música medieval en España (forthcoming)

See also MOZARABIC CHANT.

C: 17TH AND 18TH CENTURIES

E. Cotarelo y Mori: Historia de la zarzuela o sea del drama lírico en España desde sus orígenes a fines del siglo XIX (Madrid, 1924)
J. Subirá: La tonadilla escénica (Madrid, 1927)
E. Cotarelo y Mori: 'Ensayo histórico sobre la zarzuela, o sea el drama lírico español desde su origen a fines del siglo XIX', Boletín de la Real Academia Española (Madrid, 1934)
J. Subirá: 'La música de cámara en la corte madrileña durante el siglo XVIII y principios del XIX', AnM, i (1946), 181–94
N.D. Shergold and J.E.Varey: Los autos sacramentales en Madrid en le época de Calderón, 1637–1681 (Madrid, 1961)
R. Andioc: Teatro y sociedad en el Madrid del siglo XVIII (Madrid, 1976, 2/1987)
A. Martín Moreno: El padre Feijóo y las ideologías musicales del siglo XVIII en España (Orense, 1976)
A. Martín Moreno: 'La música teatral del siglo XVII español', La música en el Barrocco, ed. E. Casares (Oviedo, 1977), 125–46
R. Goldberg, ed.: Tonos a lo divino y a lo humano (London, 1981)
M.Querol Gavalda, ed.: Teatro musical de Calderón (Barcelona, 1981)
M. Querol: La música en el teatro de Calderón (Barcelona, 1981)
L.K. Stein: 'Música existente para comedias de Calderón de la Barca', Calderón y el teatro español del siglo de oro: Madrid 1981, ii, 1161–72
W.M. Bussey: French and Italian Influence on the Zarzuela 1700–1770 (Ann Arbor, 1982)
F. Civil i Castellví, ed.: Cançoner de la Garrotxa (Girona, 1982)
M.Q. Gavalda: Música barroca español (Barcelona, 1982)
L.K. Stein: 'Un manuscrito de música teatral reaparecido: Veneno es de amor la envidia', RdMc, v (1982), 225–33
J.J. Carreras López: La música en las catedrales en el siglo XVIII: Francisco J. García 'El Españoleto' (1730–1809) (Zaragoza, 1983)
J. Griffiths: The Vihuela Fantasia: a Comparative Study of Forms and Styles (diss., Monash U., 1983)
J. López-Calo: Historia de la música española, iii: Siglo XVII (Madrid, 1983)
T. Taylor: 'The Spanish High Baroque Motet and Villancico: Style and Performance', EMc, xii (1984), 64–73
J.H. Baron, ed.: Spanish Art Song in the Seventeenth Century (Madison, WI, 1985)
E. Bermudez: 'Música e ideología: Domenico Scarlatti y España, 1719–1757', Texto y contexto, vi (1985), 21–34
A. Martín Moreno: Historia de la música española, iv: Siglo XVIII (Madrid, 1985)
L. Robledo: 'Vihuelas de arco y violones en la corte de Felipe III', España en la música de occidente: Salamanca 1985, ii, 63–76
L.K. Stein: 'Accompaniment and Continuo in Spanish Baroque Music', España en la musica de occidente: Salamanca 1985, i, 157–70
J.J. Carreras: La música sacra española en el siglo XVIII (Zaragoza, 1986)
N.D. Shergold and J.E.Varey: Teatros y comedias en Madrid, 1699–1719: estudio y documentos (London, 1986)
L.K. Stein: 'La plática de los dioses: Music and the Calderonian Court Play, with a Transcription of the Songs from La estatua de Prometeo', P. Calderón de la Barca: La estatua de Prometeo, ed. M.R. Greer (Kassel, 1986), 13–92
A. Martín Moreno: La música en la corte española del siglo XVIII (Madrid, 1987)
L.K. Stein: Music in the Seventeenth-Century Spanish Secular Theater, 1598–1690 (diss., U. of Chicago, 1987)
A. Gallego Gallego: La música en tiempos de Carlos III: ensayo sobre el pensamiento musical ilustrado (Madrid, 1998)
B. Lolo: La música en la Real Capilla de Madrid: José de Torres y Martínez Bravo (Madrid, 1988)
L. Jambou: Evolución del órgano español, siglos XVI–XVIII (Oviedo, 1988)
F. Bonastre: 'El barroc musical a Catalunya', El barroc català (1989), 447–75
A. Martín Moreno: 'La música en la corte española del siglo XVIII', A tempo, no.3 (1989), 19–27
L. Robledo: Juan Blas de Castro (ca. 1561–1631) Vida y obra musical (Zaragoza, 1989)
X.M. Carreira: 'El teatro de ópera en la Península Ibérica ca. 1750–1775: Nicolà Setaro', De musica hispana et aliis: miscelánea en honor al Prof. Dr. José López-Calo, ed. E. Casares and C. Villanueva (Santiago de Compostela, 1990), ii, 27–117
L.K. Stein: 'Opera and the Spanish Political Agenda', AcM, lxiii (1991), 125–66
M. Esses: Dance and Instrumental Diferencias in Spain During the 17th and early 18th Centuries (Stuyvesant, NY, 1992)
L.K. Stein: 'Convenciones musicales en el legado de Juan Hidalgo: el aria declamatoria como tonada persuasiva', F. Bances Candamo y el teatro musical de su tiempo: Oviedo 1992, 177–217
L.A. González Marín: 'El teatro musical español del siglo XVII y sus posibilidades de restauración', AnM, xlviii (1993), 63–101
L.K. Stein: 'The Iberian Peninsula', Man & Music: The Late Baroque Era: from the 1680s to 1740, ed. G. Buelow (London, 1993), 411–34
L.K. Stein: Songs of Mortals, Dialogues of the Gods: Music and Theatre in Seventeenth-Century Spain (Oxford, 1993)
L.K. Stein: 'Spain', Man & Music: The Early Baroque Era, ed. C. Price (London, 1993), 327–48
L. Robledo: 'Questions of Performance Practice in Philip III's Chapel', EMc, xxii (1994), 199–218
L.K. Stein: 'Tomás de Torrejón y Velasco's La púrpura de la rosa in the Early History of Opera', Inter-American Music Review, xiv (1994–5), 79–82
J.J. Carreras: "Conducir a Madrid estos moldes': Producción, dramaturgia y recepción de la fiesta teatral Destinos vencen finezas (1698/99)', RdMc, xviii (1995), 113–43
L. Jambou: 'Cantatas solísticas de Valls y compositores anónimos', RdMc, xviii (1995), 291–325
D. Kirk: 'Instrumental Music in Lerma, *c*1608', EMc, xxiii (1995), 393–408
C.H. Russell: Santiago de Murcia's "Códice Saldivar No.4" – a Treasury of Secular Guitar Music from Baroque Mexico (Urbana and Chicago, 1995)
J. Etzion, ed.: The Cancionero de la Sablonara (London, 1996)
R. Kleinertz, ed.: Teatro y música en España (siglo XVIII) (Berlin, 1996)
A. de Vicente: 'Un mecenas musical en los comienzos del Barroco: Francisco Gómez de Sandoval y Rojas, duque de Lerma', El órgano de la Colegiata de Lerma (Valladolid, 1996), 9–34
J.J. Carreras and J.M. Leza, eds.: 'La circulación de música y músicos en la Europa mediterránea (siglos XVI–XVIII)', Artigrama, (1996–7), 9–312
P.-L. Rodríguez: "Sólo Madrid es corte': Villancicos de las capillas reales de Carlos II en la catedral de Segovia', Artigrama, xii (1996–7), 237–56
A. Torrente: 'Cuestiones en torno a la circulación de los músicos catedralicios en la España moderna', Artigrama, xii (1996–7), 217–36
C. Caballero: Tonos humanos del barroco en la península ibérica (Valladolid, 1997)
J.J. Carreras: 'La cantata de cámara española de principios del siglo XVIII: El manuscrito M 2618 de la Biblioteca Nacional de Madrid y sus concordancias', Música y literatura en la península ibérica 1600-1750 (Valladolid, 1997), 65–126
A. Lázaro, ed: José Martin (1619–1699): Tonos para voz y guitarra (Columbus, OH, 1997)
J. Suárez Pajares: La música en la catedral de Sigüenza (1600-1750) (Madrid, 1997)
L.K. Stein: 'De erotische harmonie van La púrpura de la rosa: de eerste opera uit de Nieuwe Wereld herleeft', Tijdschrift voor oude muziek, xii (1997), 13–16
L.K. Stein: '"Este nada dichoso género": la zarzuela y sus convenciones', Música y literatura en la península ibérica 1600–1750 (Valladolid, 1997), 185–217
M. Boyd and J.J. Carreras, eds.: Music in Spain in the 18th Century (Cambridge, 1998)
L.K. Stein: '"Al seducir el oído . . .": delicias y convenciones del teatro musical cortesano', El teatro cortesano en la España de los Austrias, ed. J.M. Díez Borque (Madrid, 1998)
L.K. Stein: 'Eros, Erato, Terpsíchore and the Hearing of Music in Early Modern Spain', MQ, lxxxii (1998), 654–77
A. Torrente and P.-L. Rodríguez: 'The 'Guerra Manuscript' (*c*1680) and the Rise of Solo Song in Spain', JRMA, cxxiii (1998), 147–89
J. Koegel: 'New Sources of Music from Spain and Colonial Mexico at the Sutro Library', Notes, lv (1998–9), 583–612
L.K. Stein: 'Zarzuela', Diccionario de la música española e hispanoamericana, ed. E. Casares Rodicio (Madrid, 2000)
J.J. Carreras: 'From Literes to Nebra: Spanish Dramatic Music between Tradition and Modernity', Music in Eighteenth-Century Spain (forthcoming)

D: 19TH CENTURY

B. Saldoni: Efemérides de músicos españoles (Madrid, 1860, 2/1880–90 as Diccionario biográfico-bibliográfico de efemérides de músicos españoles)

Almanaque de los Bufos Madrileños para 1868 (Madrid, 1868)

A. Peña y Goñi: L'ópera española y la música dramática en España en el siglo XIX: apuntes históricos (Madrid, 1881)

T. Bretón: 'Barbieri: la Opera Nacional', Discursos leídos ante la Real Academia de Bellas Artes de San Fernando en la recepción pública . . . el día 14 de mayo de 1896 (Madrid, 1896)

J.M. Esperanza y Sola: Treinta años de crítica musical en España (Madrid, 1906)

L. Villalba Muñoz: Ultimos músicos españoles del siglo XIX (Madrid, 1914)

M. Zurita: Historia del género chico (Madrid, 1920)

J. Borrel: Sesenta años de música (1876–1936): impresiones y comentarios de un aficionado (Madrid, 1945)

M. Muñoz: Historia de la zarzuela y el género chico (Madrid, 1946)

J. Deleito y Piñuela: Origen y apogeo del género chico (Madrid, 1949)

V. Ruiz Albéniz (Chispero): Teatro Apolo: historial, anecdotario y estampas madrileñas de su tiempo (1873–1929) (Madrid, 1953)

C. Gómez Amat: Historia de la música española, v: Siglo XIX (Madrid, 1984)

R. Barce: 'La ópera y la zarzuela en el siglo XIX'España en la música de occidente: Salamanca 1985, ii, 145–53

E. Casares, ed.: Francisco Asenjo Barbieri: Biografías y documentos sobre música y músicos españoles (Legado Barbieri) (Madrid, 1986)

E. Casares Rodicio: 'El teatro de los Bufos o una crisis en el teatro lírico del XIX español', AnM, xlviii (1993), 217–28

E. Casares Rodicio and C.Alonso González, eds.: La música española en el siglo XIX (Oviedo, 1995) [incl. E. Casares Rodicio: 'La música del siglo XIX español: conceptos fundamentales', 13–122; M.E. Cortizo: 'La zarzuela del siglo XIX: estado de la cuestíon (1832–1856)', 161–94; R. Barce: 'El sainete lírico (1880–1915)', 195–244; C. Alonso: 'La canció española desde la monarquía fernandina a la restauración alfonsina', 245–78; R. Sobrino: 'La música sinfonico en el siglo XIX', 279–324; J. Suárez-Pajares: 'Las generaciones guitarrísticas españolas del siglo XIX', 325–74; M.A. Virgili Blanquet: 'La música religiosa en el siglo XIX español', 375–406; M. Nagore: 'La música coral en España en el siglo XIX', 425–62; E. Casares Rodicio: 'La crítica musical en el XIX español: panorama general', 463–91]

M.P. Espín Templado: El teatro por horas en Madrid (1870–1910) (Guerrero, 1995)

C.J. Gosálvez Lara: La edición musical española hasta 1936 (Madrid, 1995)

C. Alonso: La canción lírica española en el siglo XIX (Madrid, 1998)

E: 20TH CENTURY

A. Salazar: La música contemporánea en España (Madrid, 1930/R)

J. Borrel: Sesenta años de música (1876–1936): impresiones y comentarios de un aficionado (Madrid, 1945)

A. Salazar: La música en España (Buenos Aires, 1953, 2/1972)

J. Pahissa: Sendas y cumbres de la música española (Buenos Aires, 1955)

F. Sopeña: Historia de la música española contemporánea (Madrid, 1958, 2/1976)

M. Valls Gorina: La música catalana contemporània (Barcelona, 1960)

M. Valls Gorina: 'La música española después de Falla', Revista de occidente (Madrid, 1962)

A. Fernández-Cid: La música y los músicos españoles en el siglo XX (Madrid, 1963)

A. Custer: 'Contemporary Music in Spain', MQ, li (1965), 44–60

T. Marco: La música de la España contemporánea (Madrid, 1970)

T. Marco: Música española de vanguardia (Madrid, 1970)

A. Fernández-Cid: La música española en el siglo XX (Madrid, 1973)

J. Ruiz and F.Huici: La comedia del arte (Madrid, 1974)

C. Santos: Dossier música y política (Barcelona, 1974)

A. Fernández-Cid: Cien años de teatro musical en España (1875–1975) (Madrid, 1975)

F. Sopeña: Historia de la música española contemporánea (Madrid, 2/1976)

R. Barce: 'La musica contemporanea spagnola e i suoi condizionamenti', Musica/Realtá, no.1 (1980), 119–32

J. Maderuelo: Una música para los 80 (Madrid, 1981)

E. Casares Rodicio, ed.: 14 compositores españoles de hoy (Oviedo, 1982)

España en la música de occidente: Salamanca 1985 [incl. A. Medina: 'Primeras oleadas vanguardistas en el área de Madrid', ii, 369–97; T. Marco: 'Los años cuarenta', ii, 399–411; B. Casablancas: 'Dodecafonismo y serialismo en España', ii, 413–32; A. Medina: 'Crisis o reafirmación en la música española actual', ii, 433–41]

R. Barce: Las fronteras de la música (Madrid, 2/1985)

E. Casares: La música en la Generación del 27 (Madrid, 1986)

Catálogo de obras de la Asociación de compositores sinfónicos españoles (Madrid, 1987)

J. Ruvira: Compositores contemporáneos valencianos (Valencia, 1987)

Composición musical I: Valencia 1988

Associació Catalan de Compositores, ed.: 68 compositors catalans (Barcelona, 1989)

T. Marco: Historia de la música española, vi: Siglo XX (Madrid, 2/1989; Eng. trans., 1993, as Spanish Music in the Twentieth Century)

S. Salaün: El cuplé (1900–1936) (Madrid, 1990)

R. Barce: Tiempo de tinieblas y algunas sonrisas (Madrid, 1992)

R. Barce, ed.: Actualidad y futuro de la zarzuela:.Madrid 1991 (Madrid, 1993)

A. García Zurro and L. Martín: Nuevas músicas en España (Madrid, 1994)

II. Traditional and popular music

1. Ethnomusicological research. 2. General features: (i) Historical background (ii) Musical characteristics (a) Metre and rhythm (b) Melodic features (c) Harmony (d) Other characteristics (iii) Socio-cultural context (iv) Popular music. 3. Song. 4. Dance and instrumental music. 5. Organology. 6. Contemporary developments.

1. ETHNOMUSICOLOGICAL RESEARCH. Research into the traditional music of Spain began only in the 19th century, although earlier folksong collections, known as cancioneros, exist (see §II below; for a bibliography of early cancioneros see also CANCIONERO). During this period an increasing interest in traditional life and the study of folklore led to the collecting of folksongs. In 1799 a collection of seguidillas by J.A. Iza Zamácola appeared (under the pseudonym of Don Preciso), and in the 19th century a major interest in folklore emerged among small groups of intellectuals, particularly in Spanish territories with incipient regionalism, such as the Basque country, Catalonia and Galicia. As early as 1826, for instance, J.I. de Iztueta published a collection of Basque dances with musical transcriptions (see BASQUE MUSIC for a bibliography of further collections). Despite this, 19th-century interest focussed on folksong; the greatest number of collectors were from a literary background or were folklorists. As a result most collections were restricted to literary texts: for example, those of Serafín Estébanez Calderón, Manuel Murguía and Marià Aguiló. Those of Manuel Milà i Fontanals and Antonio Machado y Alvarez deserve special attention. The first, influenced by Herder and German philology, carried out important research on balladry with a methodological rigour at that time unusual in Spain. His Romancerillo catalán also included some melodies published as an appendix. Machado y Alvarez's clear positivistic approach, with an interest in folk literature, particularly in the area of Andalusia, included several studies on flamenco song. In 1881 Machado y Alvarez founded the society El Folk-Lore Español, which encouraged research on traditional Spanish folksong.

At the end of the 19th century the publication of songs with their melodies became more frequent, often as a small appendix, as in the Cancionero vasco of José de Manterola and the Cantos populares españoles of Francisco Rodríguez Marín. More importance was given to musical transcription in the collections of Pau Bertran y Bros, F.P. Briz, José Inzenga and Eduardo Ocón. Towards the close of the 19th century R.M. de Azkue assembled the material for his monumental Cancionero vasco and Casto Sampedro y Folgar his Cancionero gallego, works that would not be published until many years later. Also part of the musicological production of the 19th century was the work of Mariano Soriano Fuertes, whose Historia de la música española desde la venida de los fenicios hasta el año 1850, a speculative study, was seemingly based on previous work of Josep Teixidor. This book considers musical aspects, which today are considered to belong to the modern field of ethnomusicology, describing the music of old colonizers from Spain; it also includes some Spanish folktunes as an appendix.

A number of publications from the end of the 19th century attest an increased interest in folksong. These were largely the initiatives of isolated people with non-existent or at best weak support from academic or other public institutions. Many such works were of nationalistic character and for general public consumption, resulting in materials edited according to the literary and musical aesthetic objectives of the time.

By the beginning of the 20th century, the study of traditional music was increasingly influenced by incipient Spanish musicology, most prominently the theoretical work of the musicologist and composer Felipe Pedrell. A survey of his substantial work concerning musical folklore appears in the four-volume Cancionero musical popular español (1918–22), which contains theoretical reflections as well as numerous melodies from all corners of Spain. His teaching on musical nationalism strongly influenced not only Spanish musicologists such as Higini Anglès and J.A. de Donostia but also some of the most important Spanish composers of the 20th century (e.g. Albéniz, Falla, Granados, Turina).

In the first third of the 20th century, important cancioneros were collected and edited, focussing often on musical aspects, sometimes to the detriment of literary ones. Noteworthy folksong collections of the period include those of Federico Olmeda on Burgos, Dámaso Ledesma on Salamanca, Donostia on the Basque country, M.F. Núñez on León, Bonifacio Gil García on Extremadura, Miguel Arnaudas Lorrodé on Teruel and Eduardo Martínez Torner on Asturias. Of particular interest is the work of Martínez Torner, who was also concerned with systematization and theoretical reflection and who organized his cancionero according to a strictly musicological classification based on the tonal system and rhythmic-melodic elements. The work of Kurt Schindler in several Spanish provinces between 1929 and 1933 was also important as he was one of the first to make phonograph recordings.

L'Obra del Cançoner Popular de Catalunya (1921–39) is regarded as the first major attempt to systematize research in Spain. This was a well-planned enterprise with ambitious aims and many collaborators, including musicologists and folklorists such as Anglès, Francesc Pujol, Joan Tomàs i Pares, Joan Amades, Joan Llongueras and Pere Bohigas. The project involved the systematic gathering of folksongs in the Catalan-speaking area of Spain (Catalonia, Valencia and the Balearic Islands) and the comparative study and later publication of materials. Ethnographic data were used as an important complement to the collected musical materials, while the published fieldwork reports show the innovatory spirit and methodological rigour that inspired the project. Although the initiative was cut short by the upheaval of the Spanish Civil War, a great amount of material was collected, mostly transcribed in the field. Phonograph recordings were made in only a few cases and only a small part has been published. After many years hidden in Barcelona and Switzerland to avoid any reprisals by the Franco regime against Catalan culture, the collection is now conserved in the library of the Monastery of Montserrat near Barcelona.

The development in the first third of the 20th century of what was known at the time in Spanish as 'folklore musical' was reflected in the celebration of the third congress of the IMS, held in Barcelona in April 1936, when the section on traditional music played a relevant role. But the promising evolution of Spanish musical folklore was cut short by the Spanish Civil War. The victory of General Franco had disastrous consequences for the intellectual development of Spain, including musicological research. In the four decades following the Civil War, Spanish folk music studies were characterized by the undeniable marginalization of international research trends. Analysis of published works from this period reveals considerable conservatism in methodological and conceptual framework, with emphasis placed on achievements in early Spanish musical folklore. Research interest centred almost exclusively on the musical product, disregarding both musical processes and the dynamic of music as a cultural phenomenon. Interest was focussed in rural areas, where musical materials pertaining to pre-industrial traditions were sought. As a result the cancionero constituted the closest paradigmatic study of ethnomusicology in Spain during this era. This conservative approach to the collection of folksong moved Spanish research away from the different perspectives of ethnomusicology that were developing in other countries from the 1950s onwards.

In the 1940s and 50s, the Sección Femenina de la Falange (the women's section of the Falange party) undertook the important task of collecting and disseminating traditional song and dance. Their work was strongly marked by the nationalism of Franco's political regime. Ethnomusicological research in Spain was led during this period by the Instituto Español de Musicología (IEM; later renamed the Departamento de Musicología), founded in 1943 at the Consejo Superior d'Investigaciones Científicas in Barcelona. The distinguished specialists working in its musical folklore section included Marius Schneider, J.A. de Donostia, Arcadio de Larrea, Bonifacio Gil García and Manuel García Matos. Taking as their model the previous initiative of L'Obra del Cançoner Popular de Catalunya, following closely its methodological and conceptual framework yet working within the new political reality of the state, the IEM carried out a broad collecting task in most Spanish provinces until the 1960s. As a result, in its first 20 years of existence the institute created an archive of ethnomusicographical material; phonograms, however, are unfortunately rare.

During his tenure at the IEM Schneider developed an important part of his theories on musical symbolism. One of the most important researchers within the old line of Spanish musical folklore was García Matos, who collected phonographic material in several regions of the country, leaving behind a rich ethnomusicological legacy at his premature death in 1974. The ethnomusicologist Josep Crivillé also carried out important research for several years. Since the 1960s interest in folk music research at the IEM has progressively declined and the subject in Spain generally has relied on the initiative of individuals with little support from academic institutions: these include the folksong collections of Salvador Seguí, Miguel Manzano, Joaquín Díaz and Dorothé Schubarth. During the 1990s relatively new research perspectives with a more culturalist view have been introduced by specialists such as Ramón Pelinski, Josep Martí, Jaume Aiats and Joaquina Labajo.

The concentration of research into cancioneros has resulted in the remarkable underdevelopment of other aspects of ethnomusicology. Little theoretical work has been undertaken, culturalist or sociological approaches are quite unusual and research fields such as popular music are still incipient. The academic base of ethnomusicology in Spain has always been weak, with most folksong collectors self-taught. Such collectors have as their principal reference point the achievements of folk music from several decades ago.

Political transition following the death of Franco has provided an important catalyst for ethnomusicological research. When Spain became a state composed of autonomous regions, initiatives in folk music found the public administration a generous sponsor, encouraging the collection and publication of materials as people recovered, reinforced and reinvented the ethnic identity of their communities. The result has been the appearance of social groups concerned with regional musical traditions from which in turn has evolved an interest in ethnomusicology and folklorism. Study has tended towards the descriptive, with post-Romantic tendencies. This has led to the emergence of institutes of regional studies focussing on folk music, often dependent on public administration and frequently subject to economic and political change. Such centres encourage ethnomusicological research, promote publications and phonograph archives and include the Centro de Cultura Tradicional de Salamanca, Centro Etnográfico de Documentación (Valladolid; now in Urueña), Centro de Documentación Musical de Andalucía (Granada), and the sound archives of the autonomous governments of Valencia and Catalonia in Valencia and Barcelona respectively. The need for furthering developments in Spanish ethnomusicology led to the creation of the Sociedad Ibérica de Etnomusicología, which held its first congress in Barcelona in 1995. Ethnomusicology in universities at the end of the 20th century was still weak because of its recent adoption into the curriculum. Nevertheless, it shows indubitable progress and consolidation.

2. General features.

(i) Historical background. Spain is remarkable for the abundance of its folk music and for the tenacity with which, until recently, song and dance traditions have been preserved. This may be attributed to the close association of many genres with the tasks and recreations of daily life and with a firmly established cycle of annual festivities, and to the survival in Spain longer than in other European countries of a way of life in which such tasks and festivities played an important part. By the 1990s few villages had not been influenced by mass entertainment, agricultural mechanization, mobility of population and other factors which stimulate musical change (Larrea Palacín, A1968; Pelinski, E1996). Nevertheless, traditional practices of music, song and dance are still alive, although often in the form of revivals or reinventions (Martí, A1995).

Spanish folk music also displays a wealth of regional diversity, which can be partly explained by geographical factors. The Iberian peninsula is divided by mountain chains that have proved effective cultural barriers and have accentuated the individuality of particular regions. The main cause of its diversity is undoubtedly the many invasions of peoples and cultures that have affected different parts of the peninsula. But the extent to which Iberian, Celtic, Carthaginian and, in particular, Jewish and Arabic influences underlie modern regional differences is a matter for conjecture; there is not sufficient evidence from early times to trace any particular modern trait to an ancient source. Even the presence of Celtic elements in modern Galician folksong, though frequently assumed, remains to be conclusively demonstrated. Evidence for music in the pre-Roman period is chiefly literary; Greek and Latin authors refer to ritual war dances and burial dances, songs relating deeds of war, nocturnal dance-feasts accompanied by flute and cornet and circle-dances performed by groups holding hands. More tangible evidence of Roman and liturgical influence has been sought in the modal characteristics of modern folksong (see §3). Visigothic elements may perhaps survive in the music of Asturias. Eastern influence may be traced to Byzantines and Jews in some areas (Anglès, B(ii)1958); the precise role of Arab influence continues to arouse discussion (see Cantiga), and Schneider (A1948) drew parallels between Spanish and Berber (and other more remote) non-Arab types of melody. French troubadour music was probably known to the populace principally through the cantigas, but also through liturgical drama. Other cultural contacts have been numerous, though their effect is also difficult to pinpoint: Frankish, via the Pyrenees; European, via the route to Santiago de Compostela; Italian, via the Mediterranean coastline; English and German, via the Cantabrian ports. Peninsular music was taken by Sephardi Jews expelled at the end of the 15th century (see Jewish music, §III, 4 and §IV, 2(ii)) to other Mediterranean lands, in particular Morocco, Libya and Tunisia, where it still survives. Spanish colonists carried their music to the New World, where it partly survived and partly mingled with Amerindian and African elements to produce new forms. The arrival of Gypsies (Gitanos) in Spain in the 15th century was important for the development of cante jondo (see Flamenco and 'Gypsy' music); other cultural contacts occurred during the Italian wars and later during the wars of Succession (1701–12) and Independence (1808–14). Cultural ties with South America from the 18th century onwards led to the introduction into Spain of new genres in the theatre (e.g. zorongo) and in Andalusian (guajira, rumba) and Catalan (havaneras, rumba) popular music. Since the globalization of mass media, the most potent influences are African and American styles and, in general, the commercial pop music circulated by radio and television.

Since the Middle Ages a close relationship has existed between traditional music and art music (Anglès, Pedrell; see also Grove5, 'Folk Music: Spanish'); hence early records of art music give valuable information about the history of folksong. The most important medieval types are refrain songs related in form to the virelai (see Villancico, §1); the earliest musical collection is the Cantigas de Santa María of Alfonso el Sabio (Alfonso X; d 1284), which in addition to probable French influence display popular Spanish elements. Refrain songs have retained their importance up to the present day. The Siete canciones de amor of the Galician jongleur Martin Codax (fl 1240–70) are in a parallelistic form which perhaps derives from the oldest traceable lyric tradition in the peninsula (see COSAUTE); melodically, these songs are similar to modern Galician alalás. Medieval pilgrims' songs from Montserrat, some with dance elements, reveal a popular origin. Another medieval form is the romance (ballad), which in some cases derived from fragments of epic that remained in the popular tradition, and in other cases from stories based on legendary topics or contemporary events (see ROMANCE, §1). Many ballads are documented over a period of centuries, and some have survived into the 20th century in Spain and elsewhere; this is also true of many songs used by Salinas in his De musica libri septem (1577) to explain aspects of ancient Greek rhythm. From the late 15th century to the 17th, some of the most notable Spanish poets, including Juan del Encina (Anglès, B(ii)1941), Lope de Vega (Gavaldá, B(ii)1986) and Góngora (Gavaldá, B(ii)1975), frequently introduced popular refrains, themes and forms into their works (see SEGUIDILLA). Settings of villancicos based on popular refrains, as well as romances and other traditional songs, are found in cancioneros of the same period (Bal y Gay, B(ii)1944; Haberkamp, B(ii)1968; Pelinski, B(ii)1971) and in the partsongs of Antxieta, Flecha (B(i)1581), Juan Vásquez, Cristóbal de Morales and others. Traditional tunes are also found among the vihuelistas (Milán, B(i)1536; Narváez, B(i)1538; Mudarra, B(i)1546; Valderrábano, B(i)1547; Pisador, B(i)1552; Fuenllana, B(i)1554; Daza, B(i)1576), and in the treatise on ornamentation by Diego Ortiz (B(i)1553).

Folk influence, mainly through the characteristic alternation of binary and ternary metres and the use of traditional melodies, also pervades many sacred villancicos (cantatas) of the 17th and 18th centuries. While these villancicos may be forgotten, some of the melodies upon which they drew are still alive in Spain and in the Hispanic New World (Crivillé, A1983). Despite the increasing influence of Italian music in the 18th century, composers such as Scarlatti and Boccherini drew on traditional Spanish styles. There is also a relationship between some 'popular' (i.e. essentially urban and non-traditional) genres and theatre music, notably the 18th-century tonadilla and the 19th-century zarzuela. The 'Spanish idiom' of such music was adopted not only by Spanish art-music composers (e.g. Falla, Granada, Albéniz, Turina), but also by composers of other nationalities (e.g. Glinka, Rimsky-Korsakov, Debussy, Ravel). In the late 19th and the early 20th centuries there was a vogue for arrangements of popular and traditional melodies, either in keyboard versions or as songs with vocal harmonizations or piano accompaniment; such arrangements were made by students of folk music (Pedrell, Torner) as well as by well-known composers (Falla, Granados, Turina, Albéniz). Analogous interest in folk style was shown by poets such as García Lorca and Machado.

(ii) Musical characteristics.

(a) Metre and rhythm. Four types of metric-rhythmic arrangements can be distinguished: unmeasured, 'giusto syllabic', so-called children's rhythm and dance rhythms. 'Unmeasured' refers to a sung phrase (although there are exceptional instrumental versions, such as certain flamenco guitar styles) that employs a flexible succession of tempos and a certain amount of melodic freedom, while maintaining fixed points of tonal reference. In between these points, the phrases are mostly melismatic and greatly ornamented in form, and timing is flexible (ex.1). These are individually sung pieces (occasionally with musical accompaniment, as in the cant d'estil of Valencia or some cantes flamencos) which are typical of work songs (see §3 below). The melodies are based on scales of varying types; these are rarely tonal and are often chromatic or made up of intervals which are close to an augmented 2nd.

Ex.1 Work song, Majorca (Pujol and others, 1926–9)

Brăiloiu's term 'giusto syllabic' describes a sung metric-rhythmic device over an established base of a syllabic pattern, with stable accentuation that combines short and long rhythmic values in measured succession. This pattern is typical of a great number of ballads and romances (see §3). Among the variations of this device are found melodies in strict tempo giusto and others with some flexibility. The possibilities inherent in giusto syllabic allow for the combination of rhythmic patterns known throughout Europe with more unusual arrangements such as the asymmetrical metre, aksak or binary-ternary combinations (see C. Brăilou: 'Le rythme aksak', RdM, xxx, 1951, pp.71–108). It is common in both individual and collective, monodic or heterophonic songs and can employ diverse tonal or modal structures. In addition to its use in ballads, it is often found in sacred repertory (such as goigs, see §3) and in some sung dances. Giusto syllabic is only rarely interpreted instrumentally.

Children's rhythm may be observed in group songs and more specifically during certain children's games. In this case the number of syllables is combined with the duration of the musical period. In a way, this is the reverse procedure to that of giusto syllabic, in that it works with a variable number of syllables which can be fitted into a musical period of fixed duration. Similar procedures are found in various cases of collective expression, including games or children's challenges, charivaris, protest or demonstration slogans, sports-fans' chants, and group participation at large-scale concerts. These are collective chants that are rhythmically similar, but with diverse melodic patterns: from slogans with a barely defined and structurally irrelevant melody to two- or three-level patterns and, finally, strictly tonal melodies. Any musical accompaniment to these collective forms of expression is incidental.

The rhythmic patterns of dances present considerable and variable characteristics and offer a large number of possibilities. These are found principally in collective dances but also in parades (processions, pasacalles, cavalcades, ronda serenades, collections, carnivals etc.), at other ritual moments and in various song types (e.g. ballads, cuartetas, tonadillas, seguidillas). These can be purely instrumental, vocal with instrumental accompaniment, sung by a group or by a soloist. The melodies are mostly tonal and anacrusic, frequently multi-part and of harmonic arrangement, although they can also include other types of scale patterns (e.g. modal, chromatic). They show three basic rhythmic structures. First, some coincide with the models of Western musical theory. Secondly, some structures exhibit polyrhythms similar to hemiola: these consist in playing with the accentuation on a ternary metric base (the percussive base of dance steps) and with a melody in double time or combined double-triple time, over a minimum period of 12 beats (as found in the danses of southern Valencia, a number of boleros, jotas, fandangos and some flamenco styles common in Andalusian dances). Finally, the melodies of dances using the aksak form, more common than most collections imply, have developed into a more regular rhythmic structure working within rules of written music. There are well-known examples of quintuple metre, found in the rueda of Castile or the Basque zortziko (see BASQUE MUSIC) and also observed in Extremadura, Aragon, Valencia and Catalonia with different melodic forms (Torrent, A1994). Dances in metres of seven, ten or 11 were observed in Castellón de la Plana (Torrent, A1994), in Castile and Extremadura (García Matos, 1982: see D1944). Ex.2

Ex.2 Charrada rhythms (García Matos, 1960–61)

shows the rhythmic patterns of the charrada of Salamanca with its two variants: aksak in (a) and the polyrhythm between shawm and percussion in (b).

The four categories used as metric-rhythmic models may coincide and overlap and are therefore useful only as general points of reference to demonstrate the potential panorama of possible patterns.

(b) Melodic features. Melodic configuration, a privileged parameter in Western music theory, has often been the only element considered in collections of traditional Spanish music. The great variety and complexity of melodic patterns and possible scale models offered by the oral tradition, as indicated by García Matos (D1944), has given rise to broad speculation on historical origin and melodic types. Apart from a large proportion of melodies in major and minor keys, there are many others that do not conform to these systems of tonal organization: these are not easily classifiable. In 1931 Torner commented on the tonal and modal ambiguity of many melodies but, so far, research has not offered descriptions of these beyond using basic techniques of comparative musicology. Many publications continue to provide oversimplified explanations that make unverifiable links between a given type of melodic element and certain historical periods and contexts. Thus it has been argued that simplified notations of oral melodies are related to plainchant or to ecclesiastical modes. In other cases these same melodies have been related to ancient Roman or Greek modes. Arab influences or the use of Persian modes have been assumed in melodic notations including augmented 2nds or changing chromatic elements. The rich expressiveness of cante jondo and flamenco dance has been attributed to a variety of origins, which inextricably link the genre to its performer, the Gypsy, tracing back to Byzantine or North African beginnings. These relations between periods, models, origins and cultures are rarely based on verifiable criteria, and almost always refer to a written version of a musical form, ignoring the performance context, possible variants and the whole host of elements which may coincide in the melodic configuration (e.g. sonority, vocal or instrumental timbre, attack, intensity).

Within the context of simple melodic features, children's or collective melodies have already been mentioned that can sometimes be limited to two or three degrees and which do not always have stable pitches. A rare example of anhemitonic pentatonic music was pointed out by García Matos (C1954) in a sonada de xeremies (double clarinet) from the island of Ibiza.

Melodies using four to seven pitches can be divided into two large groups, one tonal, the other presenting a great diversity of modal variation. The latter is distinguished by melodies on a descending A–E tetrachord, which Donostia classified as E-mode (i.e. melodies that end on E). Ex.3 shows a number of E-mode types (only the lower part of the scale is given, though the range of actual melodies may vary between a 4th and over an octave; for more examples see Donostia). The first (ex.3*a*, which contains a leap of an augmented 2nd, has been attributed unquestioningly to Arab influence, even though it occurs not only in Andalusia (where Arab culture was implanted for several centuries) but as far away as Catalonia (where the Arabs exercised less influence). More common is an E mode whose third degree can be either natural or raised (ex.3*c*) the melodic contour of songs in this mode frequently shows a terraced descent (as in ex.4), centring successively on A, G, F and cadencing on E; apart from this formula the natural and sharpened third degrees are used in complementary distribution throughout the rest of the melody. This E mode is found in accompanied song, where the cadential formula outlined in ex.3*e* occurs; this, with its parallel triads, serves to dissociate the mode definitively from the tonality of modern European art music. Torner (A1931) pointed to this mode as the most obvious defining feature of Andalusian music; it, too, has generally been regarded as Arabic, but for García Matos (D1944) the natural third degree was a Spanish introduction, resulting from the fusion of the 'Arabic' mode (ex.3*a*) with the diatonic mode on E (ex.3*b*).

Ex.3 E mode types

Ex.4 Olmeda, 1903

Another variety of E mode, found in Andalusia, Extremadura, Castile and León, includes the alternative of a sharpened or natural second degree (ex.3*d*). This scale probably resulted from the introduction of modern tonal elements into the Andalusian E mode (ex.3*c*), but it should be observed that ex.5, which uses the mode of

Ex.5 Ballad, Extremadura (Gil García 1931–56), vol.ii

[Andante]

El ca - za - dor va___ de___ ca - za, De ca - za co-mo so - lí - a, De ca - za co-mo so - lí - a; Ye - va___ loh pe-rroh can - sa - doh, La ca - za no pa-re - ci - a, La ca - za no pa-re - ci - a.

['The hunter went hunting, went hunting as he was used; his dogs, they were tired, and the game, it didn't appear.'] ex.3*d*, never alludes to the major or minor scale. The central and central northern areas (Castile and León), in addition to possessing examples of all the modes so far discussed, also have other hybrid types, as when a terraced descent ends in A minor. Fusion of the E mode with elements of major and minor in some melodies is thus a distinctive feature of this area.

Ornaments are important in performance, and grace notes (as in ex.5 and ex.1 above) are included spontaneously even when a group of singers perform together.

(c) Harmony. Unaccompanied songs have been habitually described as monodic, the result of collections compiled by individuals with preconceived ideas about the simplicity of popular songs. Recent research has uncovered a variety of heterophonic and polyphonic practices that are not, as previously thought, exclusive to the religious repertory, but are found in the music of ballads and dances of certain areas. The most common arrangement is a single rhythm for two voices in parallel 3rds over a melody in major key. In some religious repertories the same model can be found over a minor-key melody. This formula is present unevenly in virtually all areas of Spain. It shows a marked presence within the territories of the old Kingdom of Aragon (Aragon, Catalonia, Valencia and the Balearic Islands): a large part of the tonal repertory uses this heterophony, whether in religious or ballad repertories or jotas and other types of dance. The 3rds can be completed with parallel 6ths (realized in contrary movement to the 3rds) and with a brief harmonic bass motif (as a dominant–tonic movement on the cadence). In some instances three voices in parallel 3rds and 5ths can appear. One example of this is the use of ornamented motifs in progressively superimposed 3rds found in the Misteri d'Elx, an exceptional example of religious theatre combining religious and oral traditions. In the jotas aragonesas the voice imitates the arpeggiated chords played by the string instruments. In Mallorca the use of parallel 5ths between male and female singers has been observed. Murcia has the most complex polyphony: the Auroros (a religious brotherhood) sing in parallel 3rds contained by lines above and below the dominant note; during the performance a sudden change is made to the minor mode or to the dominant key, to follow the same pattern. In Castile, the Cantabrian coast and Galicia parallel 3rds are strict and are of less importance. Towards the south in Extremadura and Andalusia the verified incidence of parallel 3rds is rare. In the Basque country there is a great tradition of songs for more than one voice (see BASQUE MUSIC). Instrumental music is divided into music where the melody is strictly monodic (restricted to a single wind instrument with percussion), and that which follows patterns similar to those for song, often transformed and used in the modern wind band. The guitar uses a simple chord repertory often rigidly prescribed by the genre (in flamenco, however, discords typical of the guitar are used). The repertory of the Catalan cobla (see §4) betrays its 19th-century origins in more complex harmony, including frequent chromatic passages.

(d) Other characteristics. The remaining formal elements of Spanish traditional music have rarely been studied. The timbre, modulation of intensity and of attack, changes in voice register and the particular sonority of each expressive situation are all essential elements of musical communication of obvious importance to styles such as the cante jondo. However, they have rarely attracted the interest of researchers and await future study.

(iii) Socio-cultural context. In Spain the prevalence of music conventionally known as 'traditional' has declined. 20th-century changes in Spanish society have resulted in the disappearance of many musical practices: remaining practices have become part of passive repertories recycled or revived within the phenomena of folkloric performance or, more exceptionally, assimilated into urban popular music as in the case of flamenco.

When talking about musical cultures, we may define the word 'moment' as the actualization of a musical product for a given time and place with specific agents, meanings and objectives. Moments related to the performance of traditional music are varied and, in Spain, are closely linked to traditional life and custom. Some musical moments belong to everyday life and periods of leisure; these are governed by less precise determinants and it is difficult to find musical genres that are specific or exclusive to these occasions.

Everyday life is the context for a great portion of songs belonging to the rich tradition of Spanish balladry. Until the beginning of the 20th century this genre still fulfilled its functions of entertainment and the communication of news. Often including texts with obvious enculturation functions coinciding directly with the social values of the time, these songs were disseminated by itinerant singers and in printed form by vendors of popular printed sheets.

The children's song repertory, which has a more specific context, is very varied within Spanish folk music. Simple in form, these songs have both a playful and didactic character. In the late 20th century the repertory of children's songs became heavily influenced by the media. Songs for children, including lullabies sung by adults, have much more varied formal patterns. Within the framework of everyday life, work songs form another important category. Songs sung traditionally to accompany work such as ploughing, harvesting and grape-picking were of great interest to early researchers for their archaic features and formal and specific characteristics. Traditionally the tasks of the home, factory and workshop were also accompanied by song. Today, owing to the disappearance or mechanization of traditional working methods, such musical genres have declined. In many working environments, radio and recorded music provide background musical accompaniment at work.

In addition to the examples mentioned above, musical products, in all cultures, happen at specific moments determined by time and space and produced by people with meanings and objectives laid down by tradition. These are festive moments, religious or secular, associated with traditional life-cycle and calendrical customs. The importance of religion in traditional Spanish life gives rise to many well-defined moments which engender a characteristic musical repertory: the Christmas repertory is an especially rich example. Within the sacred repertory songs for Lent and music for Easter week are particularly noteworthy. These range from the most traditional to more modern manifestations, such as the playing of drums during Holy Week in several localities of lower Aragon. But these are not the only moments marked by religious feeling. In addition to pilgrimage and processional chants there are liturgical and paraliturgical repertories. Hymns for the saints, which differ in name and kind from region to region, have an important place in the Spanish musical tradition. Also important are the sung rogations dedicated to the Virgin or to the patron saints of towns and villages, through which requests related to the health of the community, especially in the past during epidemics, are made. Sung rogations with regard to work in the fields and requests for rain also exist. These songs are less and less common owing to the modernizing reforms adopted by the church and the increasingly secular character of Spanish society as a whole.

Youthful songs related to courtship and marriage make an important contribution to Spanish repertories related to the life cycle. Funeral repertories are not common in Spain, although they did exist once. The cançó de mort in Mallorca was performed when one partner of an engaged couple died; a song would be composed by or for the surviving partner (by a glossador) to sing as a lament. Among the more secular calendar festivals, the most important, without a doubt, are the Carnival celebrations. During Franco's dictatorship (1939–75) these were forbidden; this resulted in a break with tradition for the towns and villages that had always celebrated Carnival. With the return to democracy many of these festivals have been recovered. With the exception of some cases that date back to ancient times, such as the Laza carnival in Galicia, the great majority of these festivals are now markedly urban in character, although on occasion they can still be of undoubted ethnological and musicological interest, as is the case of the Cádiz, Huelva, Canaries or Murcia carnivals, in which groups called comparsas perform typical carnival repertories. Another especially interesting festive context for musical manifestations is the fiesta mayor, dedicated to patron saints and celebrated over several days in many Spanish towns and villages. Although these fiestas are of religious origin, today they have been largely secularized. They give rise to specific song repertories as well as ceremonial or entertainment dances.

Apart from the entertainment or ceremonial objectives of the traditional Spanish musical repertory, music also has other functions worth noting. Petitionary songs were widespread in Spain and could be found in various contexts. The most common of these were begging songs asking for gifts at Christmas time, and also religious romances or cuartetas sung during Lent and alluding to the Passion (Guadalajara), Easter songs such as the Catalan caramelles or the canciones de ánimas which were sung in Asturias for All Saints. Certain children's songs, songs of quintos (young people who have to join the army) and wedding songs were also often used for this purpose. More unusually, some dances were sometimes also performed as supplicants' dances, as in Mallorca and Málaga.

Traditional music has also served as a vehicle for social criticism. The clearest example of this is the cencerrada (or cowbell serenade), which in many cases could include musical elements providing a symbolic inversion of love serenades. Social criticism was thus expressed by means of a cacophonous serenade in which censuring lyrics were combined with the noise of zambombas, cowbells, pots and pans and other rudimentary percussion instruments. Social criticism expressed through satirical and biting texts at times took on a more concrete form, as in the case of the cançons de picat of Mallorca, el cantalet of southern Catalonia or the Visclabat of the Catalan region of El Maresme.

Music may also have a therapeutic function in Spain, for example as part of the treatment for tarantism. The sufferer was made to perform different dances but always of fast tempo. This practice was common in Spain in the areas of La Mancha and Aragon, surviving in the latter until the 1940s.

Studies of gender within traditional Spanish music are still virtually non-existent. Songs specifically for either men or women exist, especially among children and the young. Ceremonial dances are performed mainly by men, and the traditional musician figure is also, generally speaking, male. Apart from the contributions of the tambourine or the castanets, female traditional musical activities were limited largely to singing, although in some cultures, such as the Galician, women took a more prominent role. Since the late 20th century (see §6 below) the traditional division of roles between men and women in folk music has changed radically. It is common for women to play instruments, such as bagpipes, oboes or drums, that previously had been reserved for men.

(iv) Popular music. The musical scene in post-Civil War Spain concentrated on the over-exploitation of patriotic folk clichés, and the singers of these melodies were the Spanish equivalent of the great crooners. The backward state of the country and lack of communications with the outside world provided a poor environment for the development of cultural and musical activities, which were closely controlled by Franco's censors.

During the 1960s, television broadcasting and the rapid growth of tourism led to the relaxation of the musical scene. Foreign melodies began to make their mark and the so-called yé-yé (yeah-yeah) songs became popular, while romantic songs gave rise to the phenomenon of the fan club.

Parallel to these developments but for different reasons an important and significant movement of singer-songwriters and interpreters emerged, many of whom still enjoy widespread popularity. The songs of Paco Ibáñez, José Antonio Labordeta and Víctor Manuel, among many others, challenged the status quo. Members of the Catalan nova cançο movement, such as Lluís Llach, María del Mar Bonet and Raímon (and other members of a cultural group called Els Setze Jutges), used poetic metaphor to serenade their country and their values, the lives, experiences and desire for freedom of their people, implicitly denouncing the misery, repression and violence of the regime, using the Catalan language, which had been hit hard by Franco's repressive policies. Their performances were subject to censorship and in Llach's case resulted in a period of exile in France.

By the beginning of the 1970s, records by English-speaking rock stars were already in circulation and inspired the first rock groups, including Miguel Ríos and Los Bravos, the progressive proto-rock of Los Canarios, Máquina and Música Dispersa, who were pioneers of the musical underground. During these years the first radio programmes, music magazines, festivals and recording labels began to develop their infrastructures. The pre-history of rock was being written in Madrid, where groups such as Burning, Mermelada and Indiana were vindicated by future generations of rockers, including Loquillo, Los Ronaldos, Los Rebeldes and Desperados.

The 1980s saw the recording of the first 'new wave' records. It was a time of explosive creativity in all artistic environments which served as a catalyst for the general euphoria experienced after the end of years of dictatorship. In Madrid groups such as Mamá, Los Secretos, Kaka de Luxe and Radio Futura, together with the most unbridled punk rock (Ramoncín and WC), found institutional support from the socialist administration. Events and developments in the capital had repercussions in many other areas of the country: Vigo (Siniestro Total, Golpes Bajos, Os Resentidos), Barcelona (Loquillo, Los Rebeldes, Los Futuros, El Ultimo de la Fila) and Seville (Kiko Veneno, Martirio) among others. A particularly hard rock movement that called itself rock radikal basko arose in the Basque country and was fuelled by the example of hard rock groups such as Coz (later called Baron Rojo), Leño and Ñu. A handful of groups produced sounds that ranged from hard rock to punk and ska (Barricada, La Polla Records, Eskorbuto, Kortatu). Meanwhile, commercial pop produced groups of considerable stature, such as La Unión and Mecano, who sold their music successfully at home and abroad.

From the end of the 1980s with the establishment of autonomous regions music was often employed by local athorities to emphasize their own regional or national identity. An example is the case of Catalonia, where institutions gave firm backing to specifically Catalan rock groups which until then had managed to survive without any kind of official help.

In the 1990s the alternative scene was consolidated with the advent of very young groups from provincial capitals who sang mostly in English. These groups, influenced by Sonic Youth, Lemonheads, the Pixies and others, have created everything from pop (La Buena Vida, Los Planetas) to punk rock and the 'noise' of the Getxo groups (Los Clavos, El Inquilino Communista, Cancer Moon), or the so-called Xixon Sound (Australian Blonde, Penelope Trip). Other noteworthy phenomena of the 1990s were the jóvenes flamencos. Groups such as Pata Negra and Ketama have produced a musical hybrid based on Gypsy tradition which combines flamenco with rock or Caribbean rhythms, following the example of innovatory musicians such as El Camarón de la Isla and Paco de Lucía while echoing the caño roto sound developed by Gypsy musicians in Madrid in the 1970s.

3. Song. The classification established below, in which songs are grouped according to function, cuts across that based on melody types, outlined in §2(ii) above; this dual perspective will give some idea of the complexity of Spanish folk music.

Work songs accompany labour in the fields and household chores. Some work songs are measured; in regions where the jota is sung it is sometimes used as an occupational song. More often (and characteristically among the agricultural songs) they are in free rhythm (see ex.1 above), even though the task for which they are used may be rhythmic and collective. Such songs are sung during ploughing, sowing, weeding, reaping, threshing and the picking of olives and fruits. Their texts are often amatory, and sometimes refer to the task in hand. Women usually sing when they meet to sew or embroider. Texts are arranged in octosyllabic quatrains with abba rhymes or rhyming even lines. Unmeasured work songs often begin with insignificant syllables, such as 'Ay, ay, ay'. Work songs are traditional to all of Spain but enjoyed a greater presence in the Mediterranean areas and in León, Asturias (with the special trillo vibrato) and Galicia (with special reference here to the alalá). The texts are in Spanish, Catalan or Gallego, depending on the areas and traditions. The unmeasured and ornamented style of work song can also be found in other situations, such as the ronda de enamorados in Asturias.

The narrative ballad, of great popularity and diversity, has been generally referred to as a romance, although, strictly speaking, this term should be used only for a specific type of heroic or historical ballad with formal literary rules that are not found in all Spanish ballads. This poetic form of ballad is made up of an indefinite succession of long verses divided into two phrases, with assonance or rhyme in the second phrase. The melody can span one or, more frequently, two verses, with or without refrain. The refrain may be placed between the phrases (internal) or after each pair of verses (external). In some romances and ballads of ancient origin, the assonance or rhyme may change between episodes of the song's story. Romances are made up of octosyllabic phrase lines (occasionally hexasyllabic), like most other ballads, although they may have other patterns. Ballads in the Spanish language allow the accent to fall on the ultimate and penultimate syllable in the first phrase (with the relevant melodic results), and except for the linguistic accent at the end of the phrase, linguistic and musical accents do not always coincide. Ballads in Catalan have strict alternation of accents on the ultimate and penultimate syllables between the two phrases of the verse; likewise, in this language, linguistic and melodic accents often coincide. Catalan syllabic patterns are more diverse: lines of eight, seven, six and even five syllables, with alternating possibilities in a verse such as eight or five. Ballads have giusto syllabic rhythms (see §2(ii) above) as well as dance rhythms and commonly exploit all possibilities between these two. They very rarely have unmeasured rhythms. In melodic terms, they employ the whole range of characteristics described above, including heterophonic song.

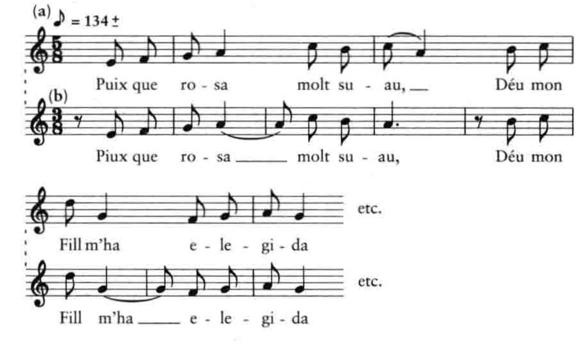
The function of the romance (ballad) has been largely superseded by newspapers and mass entertainment. Formerly it had a dual role: it recounted heroic deeds of the past and more recent newsworthy events. Both functions survived into the 20th century in ballads that were often performed by itinerant blind singers. These singers have disappeared, however, and the ballads now sung are rarely historical, being mostly based on legends and stories, and in all but a few regions serving as children's songs and women's work songs. The ballad was a highly mobile genre, and of those recorded in the 20th century many occur in widely separated localities and in textually and musically variant forms; some examples of romances can be traced in literary compilations as far back as the 16th century; ballad melodies of that period, however, are distinct from modern ones. There is no rigid dividing-line between dance genres and song genres, since many dances are accompanied vocally. Moreover, some genres are executed sometimes as a sung dance, and at other times simply as a song; they are referred to in Spanish as canción bailable ('danceable' song), and in the present article as 'dance-songs'.

In all regions there are lullabies based on and named after the repetition of certain syllables: in Basque country, lo-lo; in Andalusia and on the Mediterranean coast, nana; in northern and western Spain and the Canary Islands, arroró or arrolo; in Mallorca, vou-veri-vou; and in Catalonia, non-non. In addition to these special songs mothers often use whatever comes to mind: a romance with its repeated stanzas or religious songs. Other songs invoke legends or superstitions. It was generally believed that singing children to sleep drove away evil spirits.



There are numerous songs by adults for children with educational or entertainment objectives. The so-called children's rhythm is often used in melodic arrangement of this type of song. These same forms appear in a great variety of sequential songs or in children's games, although melodies of various origins are also used, from ancient ballads or fashionable songs. Skipping songs are common, as are counting-out songs: one begins Uni, doli, treli, catroli ('Eeny meeny miney mo'). Children are advised to sing when they are afraid, in the dark or alone, a practice also followed by many adults. Ritual singing is sometimes associated with children; it is common to have a child's hair or nails cut for the first time by one who can sing well and does so while cutting. In Andalusia rites used to be performed to give newborn children the ability to sing and dance well.

Unlike cognate words that refer to a dance in other languages, the Spanish ronda is a custom, in which a group of young men visit the houses of young ladies during the evening to serenade them. Song texts are generally amatory, sometimes satirical or religious; accompanying instruments are described below (see §5). The songs are those typical of the region, for example, ballads, the jota etc. The men also sing pasacalles (from pasar: 'to walk', calle: 'street') while walking from house to house. The ronda just described, the ronda de enamorados (lovers' ronda), which is sung in country districts, has been institutionalized by the tuna, a rondalla composed of university students who dress in 16th-century student garb to perform their serenades and pasacalles. Even in large cities the local university, and perhaps each faculty, will have its tuna. The repertory of the tuna tends away from traditional material towards popular song. Variants of the ronda de enamorados include the ronda de quintos, sung by young men as a farewell to a comrade going off to military service; a collection may be made during such a ronda to provide a party for the conscript. Other rondas include those sung at dawn on Sundays (again by young men to their girlfriends), called in different regions alboradas (though this name can also refer to an instrumental genre), albades or albas. On some occasions young people of both sexes may sing in a ronda, as on the eves of certain feasts, and during a romería (pilgrimage). Among festival songs, the generalized use in Mallorca of a ximbomba (friction drum) accompaniment is worthy of note.

Religious songs are important expressions of popular devotion. Foremost among the songs of the liturgical year are villancicos (in the broad modern sense of Christmas carols), whose usual structure is an octosyllabic quatrain with or without a refrain. During Lent and particularly Holy Week, Passions are sung, either in simple narrative ballad form or as a baraja (using playing-cards as an aide-mémoire to tell the Passion story), a reloj ('clock', a narration of the events of the Passion in chronological order), the Siete palabras (Seven Last Words) or the Viacrucis (Way of the Cross). Such Passions are sung in church or in outdoor processions (see also SAETA). The Passion story is also found as a text for aradas (ploughing songs), in which the parts of the plough are used as an aide-mémoire. The goigs (in Catalan) or gozos, which praise life, the miracles and celestial ascension of the Virgin Mary or of the local patron saint (ex.6), are perhaps better known. These are invocations sung by the entire community congregated in a sanctuary or chapel on the feast day of the Virgin or the patron saint. They are sung in the area of the old Kingdom of Aragon (including the island of Sardinia) and contribute to maintaining a sense of community. The melodies generally use the giusto syllabic metric-rhythmic pattern (except in new compositions) and are often sung in a heterophony of parallel 3rds.

Other religious genres are similar to the ronda. The aurora is performed at dawn by a small group (usually members of a religious confraternity) to call people to the Rosario de la aurora (Dawn Rosary, a devotional practice dating from the 17th century). Some auroras are related to specific feasts; others are general devotional exhortations. Singers are known as auroros (dawn singers), despertadores (awakers), rosarieros (rosary tellers) or campanilleros (bellringers). Aguinaldos are a seasonal ronda (usually for Christmas but sometimes for Epiphany or Easter) usually performed by children, asking sometimes for food or sweets for themselves. At Easter, the Ses Panades in Mallorca and the caramelles in Catalonia are exceptional examples. These are processions which combine the celebration of Easter with ancient celebrations of spring, alternating goigs to the Virgin with amatory songs, balls de bastons (stick dances) and with corrandes (quatrains improvised by a soloist, either satirical or on the theme of love). In Catalonia, the textual improvisations of the cançons de pandero (tambourine songs) are sung by women. In some villages the confraternity of Animas (Holy Souls) sings similar songs (cantares de

Ex.6 Two variant openings of a goig, Catalan religious song (Baldelló, 1932)

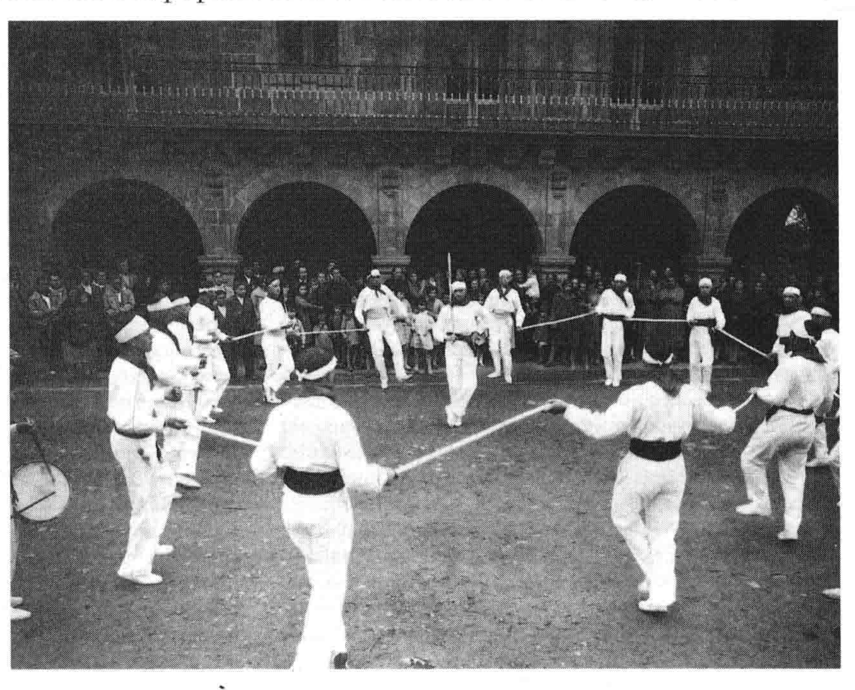
Animas) on November evenings when collecting alms; cantares de ayuda are sung to raise funds for church functions.

Ritual songs include endechas (laments), which have a long history in Spain (see ENDECHAS). Some are still performed by the Sephardi Jews (see JEWISH MUSIC, §IV, 2(ii)); but despite the survival into the 20th century of the plañideras (women mourners), no modern occurrence has been written down, either of the endecha or of the songs that were once performed during velatorios, wakes with song and dance held at the death of a child in parts of Andalusia, Valencia and New Castile. Marriage songs are still in use, however, and consist of a morning ronda or alborada to greet the bride on her wedding day. The subject of such songs is generally Christian, but the Gypsy alborá celebrates the bride's virginity. Various regional festivals include the marzo (1 March) and mayo (night of 30 April), probably remnants of pre-Christian spring fertility rites. The ronda de quintos may perhaps be considered also a ritual farewell. Other annual events such as St John's and St Peter's days, kept in certain areas as ostensibly Christian feasts, have an atmosphere of Carnival festivity. All these festivals have their appropriate songs.

Solo renditions of a more or less improvised text appropriate to the occasion are often encountered at local festive occasions. These songs may arise during the rondas, in the form of a copla (octosyllabic quatrain with assonance or rhyme between the second and fourth verses) or a seguidilla (a quatrain with a 7 + 5 + 7 + 5 syllabic distribution with rhymes on even lines; and sometimes consisting of three verses, 5 + 7 + 5), or in the previously mentioned corrandes de caramelles in Catalonia. But these improvisations become more important in the Basque bertsulari (see BASQUE MUSIC), in the troveros of Murcia and in the gloses of Mallorca: in these three cases, encounters and competitions take place between singers who are required to give a demonstration of wit and inventiveness. The structure of the text becomes much more complicated: for example, the gloses can have between four and six verses and as many as 15 in exceptional cases.

The cançó pagesa or redoblades of Ibiza deserve a special mention. They include a guttural sound effect unique to the Mediterranean. These songs are sung at Christmas or at weddings by a soloist. The text is syllabic with notes of equal length and stress; drum beats which may accompany the performance are sporadic, with no apparent metre. At the beginning of the phrase the singer ascends to the highest note and gradually descends often using intervals of imprecise magnitude. At the end of the stanza there is a redoble, a stammer or yodel of imprecise pitch. The genre has no known parallel.

At the very limits of what is commonly held as music is the modulated shout, such as the typical ajijido of the Canary Islands. This stylized shout, which is used over an extended geographical area, is a shrill vocal emission rather like a high trill or a cascading forced laugh; one of its names means 'neigh'. It is used as a cry of defiance (as to competing serenaders in a ronda) or simply as a shout of joy at the end of a song or dance.



4. DANCE AND INSTRUMENTAL MUSIC. Spain probably has over 1000 choreographically different dances (over 200 were known in the 19th century in Catalonia alone). What follows is a schematic account of various categories of dance practised in different regions of Spain; singled out with detailed examination of their musical characteristics are the jota, fandango and seguidillas, whose diffusion covers practically all of the Spanish territory. Two broad classes can be conveniently distinguished: danza ritual (ritual dance) and non-ritual dance. The Spanish terms 'danza' and 'baile', sometimes used with these senses respectively, are now used indiscriminately for both.

Ritual dances are performed by a fixed number of specially rehearsed performers; they were evidently once symbolic or commemorative, though their meanings have been changing under the pressures of modernization and secularization. This is also true for the specific occasions with which most dances were originally connected. Indeed, the phenomenon of folklorism includes a delegation of traditional community practices into formally constituted dance groups; these conjuntos (ensembles) are integrated usually by young people in their twenties or thirties; the realm of action of these groups often transcends the limits of the village; their repertory regularly includes a selection of the traditional musical practices of the village and the region, privileging those which are considered to be emblematic of the identity of a community.

The main categories of traditional dance have connotations of war, religious ceremonies and courtship. A frequent feature of all types is the use of aparatos ('props' or 'paraphernalia'); there are many handkerchief and hoop-arch dances in northern Spain, and some involving caballitos (hobby horses) in Mallorca and parts of Catalonia. Sticks and swords are often used, and are sometimes held between adjacent performers in a chain-dance (fig.7). Both are common in war dances; sticks may be beaten on the ground or used in stylized combat, often with vaulting. Swords are brandished to simulate combat, and the free hand in some dances carries a shield, stick or dagger. In some cases the texts of accompanying songs can be traced to specific wars or campaigns between the 16th and 19th centuries.

A flourishing medieval tradition of ritual dance performed in cathedrals during Mass lapsed in the 17th century; only the danza de los seises ('dance of the sixes') survives, still performed by boys in Seville Cathedral for Corpus Christi. Other ritual dances associated with the processions of Corpus Christi were the danza de águilas (eagles' dance) which used to be popular in the Catalonian-speaking area; and the Tarasca, a woman-mime dancing on a monstrous animal during Corpus Christi processions in such cities as Madrid, Toledo, Granada, Seville and Valencia. Other expressions of popular devotion are the dances simulating fights of Christians and Moors, as are dances representing giants and big-headed figures, biblical characters and evangelists or theological 'forces' (vices, virtues, demons), and scenes from the Passion. Mime is present in some of these dances. In spite of past prohibitions (the strongest was by Charles III in 1780), some are performed in close association with the liturgy, after or even during Mass, and in processions.

The old sword and stick dances (danzas de espadas, danzas de bastones) also have a ritual character. They are among the oldest and most widespread dances in Spain, where their practice has been documented since the 15th century; variants of these dances are found all over the world. They are often performed by eight men accompanied by a dulzaina or gaita (shawm) and a tambor or tabalet (drum), and a characteristic figure of some variants can be seen in the Danza guerrera of Todolella (Castellón province) when the symbolic beheading (degollada) of the main dancer is followed by his being lifted on the shoulders of the other dancers (Covarrubias Orozco, B(i)1611). In Aragon, sword and stick dances and the villano are often integrated into religious representations called dances, some of which were performed in church. In León the baile de la rosca is danced on solemn occasions; a rosca (curled loaf of bread) and wine are present on a table, giving the dance liturgical, even eucharistic overtones. The Maragatos, an isolated mountain community, preserve many old customs and ceremonial dances such as the peregrina, a wedding dance in which each man takes two partners. In Morella (Castellón), another isolated mountain community, ritual dances such as Els torners and Els llauradors are performed every six years in honour of the Virgin María of Vallivana. Catalonia possesses numerous ritual dances of interest: on Maundy Thursday, a Dansa de la mort is still performed at Verges (Gerona), and the moixiganga, associated particularly with Sitges (Barcelona), is an acrobatic dance with elements of pantomine which stops periodically in a number of tableaux symbolizing scenes of the Passion. In Tarragona the jota foguejada ('fiery jota') is a seemingly non-ritual dance which has acquired ritual connotations; fireworks are thrown by the male dancers who are expected to perform energetic feats. The dance takes place around a tree, real or artificial, to which phallic significance may be attributed.

7. Baile de Ibio (stick dance) in Ibio village, Cantabria, Old Castile, with drum and conch-shell accompaniment

Courtship dances are rarer and may involve a greater number of women than men. The men are expected to perform energetic and acrobatic feats. Examples of such dances are the pericote and corri-corri of Asturias. The pericote is performed by four men and eight women; in the corri-corri a single man performing agile feats courts six to eight women who carry olive branches (a symbol of fertility); the dance ends when he chooses one of them. Another example of courtship dance is the zángano; in its Andalusian variant as a fandango, a man is supposed to keep dancing in front of two women who try to turn their back to him (Berlanga, A1997). Sometimes courtship dances appear curiously mingled with devotional elements, as is the case of damas y galanes (ladies and courtiers); when danced at the village of Santa Cristina de Lavadores (Galicia) it involves four women and eight men who, after Mass on the feast of the Assumption, walk backwards out of the church to perform their dance.

Non-ritual dances are generally known over a wide area and, having no symbolic meaning, are danced on any festive occasion. Non-ritual dances are for participation rather than spectacle; their steps are simple and repetitive and can be danced by untrained performers. In contrast to the usually complicated choreography of ritual dances, the non-ritual present a repeated series of relatively simple steps. Circle-, line- and couple-dances are the most common. Circle-dances (rueda or corro) are widespread and vary greatly, from those performed with solemn regard for the correct execution of the steps (e.g. the Catalan sardana) to others which are freer (the resbalosa and other Castilian forms). Children's games are usually based on a circle-dance, as are a number of balancing-dances for drinkers (mampullé, escoba, gayata). Line-dances, performed by two parallel rows (sometimes one of men, the other of women) may be regarded as a variant of circle-dances; among them the VILLANO, mentioned in literary sources of the 16th and 17th centuries, may still be seen in some villages. Important also are the couple-dances. A form which fits none of these categories is the amusing jerigonza (or jeringonza, jeringosa), which goes back to the 16th century (Fuenllana, B(i)1554); with many local variants, it used to be very popular throughout Spain and in Latin America at family and public festivities until the 1970s (Gil García, A1958). The jerigonza is performed to a song which alludes to a friar's exploits; the text is delivered at a fast patter to a repetitive melody in major tonality and ternary rhythm; meanwhile, members of the company are brought in turn into the dance (or perhaps rather the game), each at first following the one before, then dancing alone, then leading a successor.

The jota, fandango and seguidillas are all widely known and transcend regional classification. All are dance-songs (see §3); dancers are grouped in pairs, though sometimes in competition and festival performance elements of formation dancing are introduced. These dances are usually accompanied by guitars, bandurrias, laúdes (lutes), castanets, panderetas and, sometimes, violins.

The jota, regarded as primarily Aragonese, is nevertheless common in Navarre, Old and New Castile, Murcia and in Valencia (where the local variant is sufficiently differentiated to merit the name jota valenciana); it also occurs in local versions in most of the other Spanish regions (Manzano, A1995). The jota is invariably in rapid triple time, with four-bar phrases. Its core section called copla, whose text is an octosyllabic quatrain; this is accommodated to the seven musical phrases of the copla by singing the lines in the order babcdda (see COPLA). Only two chords are used in the accompaniment: the even-numbered phrases have tonic harmony cadencing on the dominant, and the odd-numbered phrases have dominant harmony cadencing on the tonic. The copla is preceded by an instrumental introduction in which this harmonic pattern is reversed. Several coplas are generally performed in succession, and the last may be a despedida (farewell) with a suitable closing text, sometimes involving a pious dedication. The jota may also include other sections among which the coplas may be interspersed: these are estribillos, which are musically and sometimes textually distinct, and instrumental interludes known as variaciones. Where coplas are outnumbered by such additions, the estribillos and variaciones may be danced even if the coplas are not, and this may be an older manner of performance.

The fandango, performed in Andalusia, the Balearic Islands, the Canary Islands and adjacent regions, is known from the beginning of the 18th century. In its basic form it is similar to the jota; the essential difference lies in the length of the text, the number of musical phrases in the copla, and the fandango's special modal characteristics and greater harmonic diversity. After the fandango's instrumental introduction comes the copla, whose text is mostly four (usually five in the fandango flamenco) octosyllabic lines, sung to six musical phrases in the order abcdea or babcde. The fandango follows a rigid harmonic pattern: the introduction cadences in the E mode (an expansion of the formula given in ex.3*e* above), after which the first phrase of the copla cadences on a major chord a major 3rd lower than the final chord of the E mode. This new chord is the harmonic centre for the duration of the copla; within this new harmonic centre the second phrase cadences on the fourth degree, the third on the harmonic centre, the fourth on the fifth degree, the fifth again on the harmonic centre; the sixth phrase leads back to the original E mode, where the copla ends. The fandango incorporates some of the same modifications that affect the jota, in particular the insertion between coplas of instrumental passages, which in the fandango flamenco are called falsetas. As with the jota and seguidilla, the fandango has different names depending on the places in which it is practised: these include the rondeña (from Ronda), malagueña (Málaga), granadina (Granada), fandangos alosneros (after the small town of Alosno) and the fandangos de verdiales (typical of the hills of Málaga; Berlanga, A1997).

The dance-song seguidillas (always plural in this sense) is typical of New Castile where it occurs notably as seguidillas manchegas (from La Mancha); it also occurs in other regional variants such as seguidillas murcianas (Murcia) and sevillanas (Seville) (see FLAMENCO). (For the seguiriya gitana, 'gypsy seguidillas', see FLAMENCO, Table 1.) The literary metric form seguidilla (7–5a–7–5a), used in the homonymous dance-song, occurs also in many other popular songs (nanas, harvesting songs, estribillos etc.). Seguidillas are in moderately fast triple time and tonality is usually major. Typical features are four introductory strummed chords, melodic phrases beginning on the second or fourth quaver of a 3/4 bar and melismas often sung to a weak syllable at the ends of phrases. An initial section (not repeated during the performance) consists of a brief instrumental introduction followed by the salida, a 'false' entry for the vocalist, who sings a short portion of the text. The main section (repeated ad libitum) consists of a further brief instrumental passage (called falseta, estribillo or interludio) followed by the copla, the vocal section proper. Each copla normally accommodates five lines of the text, which consists of a series of seguidilla quatrains and sometimes tercets (see §3). The deployment of the text may follow many patterns, but constant features are the frequent repetition of lines and inversion of their order, and transition from one stanza to the next in the middle of a musical copla. In performance a second singer may 'jump in' with a new stanza in the middle of a copla section, thus obliging a further repetition of the whole main section to accommodate the text. A stricter variety of seguidillas (seen chiefly in the sevillanas) permits only three repetitions of the main section; the text in this case is a seguidilla quatrain (abcd) followed by a tercet (efg, sometimes referred to as the estribillo); a, c and f are long lines. A typical deployment of the text in sevillanas is as follows: bb (salida); babab (first copla); bcdce (second copla); efefg (third copla). After fandango, seguidilla and jota, the bolero deserves special mention. Already known in the 18th century, it is still present in folk music, although sometimes under other names, particularly in the Levante and in the south. Besides these song-dances, there are numerous regional and local non-ritual dances whose use is often associated with the construction and celebration of collective identities.

Galician dances are characterized by a lively 6/8 rhythm (at times 2/4 with the occasional triplet), a persistent and unvaried rhythmic support on a percussion instrument, and regular phrase lengths with repetition of at least the first pair of phrases. The most popular dance is the muiñeira (from muiño: 'mill'); sometimes accompanied by a gaita gallega (Galician bagpipe) and tambor, sometimes by songs (which may also be performed without dancing) whose text is an unusual decasyllabic quatrain with an anapaestic rhythm, referred to as ritmo de gaita gallega (Galician bagpipe rhythm). Another popular song-dance is the Pandeirada, in which a solo voice alternates with a choir of women playing the pandero (tambourine). Among Galician dances which have crossed regional borders the Farruca is the best-known (Crivillé, 1983, pp.226–8). Purely instrumental pieces for sanfona, pito y tambor (short vertical flute, flute and drum), chirimía and gaita include the alborada (dawn song) and preludes to dances and processional marches.

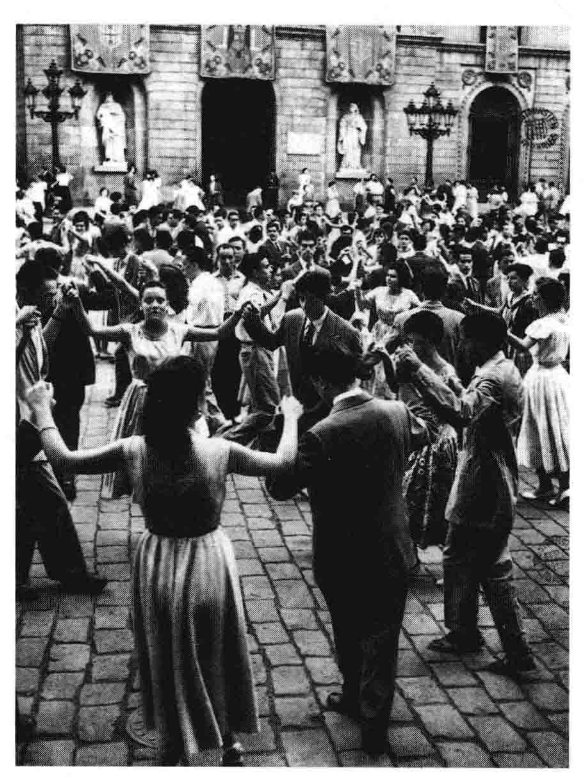
Popular in Asturias is the giraldilla (from girar: 'to turn round'), which means to turn around rhythmically; it is also known in neighbouring León; the danza prima is a communal circle-dance whose origins may be Celtic; it alternates verses of a romance (ballad) with religious exclamations such as '¡Viva la Virgen del Carmen!' (Crivillé, A1983, pp.229–31).



Non-ritual dances of Castile and León include the fandango, the jota and the formerly more popular bolero, as well as those referred to simply as a lo llano or asentao. The charrada, associated particularly with Salamanca, is one of the most rhythmically interesting of all Spanish dances. The first form of the dance, transcribed by early collectors (Ledesma, Sánchez Fraile) in 6/8, 9/8 or 3/4 time, has been shown (García Matos, E1960–61) to be in compound quintuple time (some typical rhythms are shown in ex.2*a* above). Quintuple metre in forms related to the charrada is found in neighbouring areas of Extremadura and Old Castile. The second form of charrada is in 2/4 time, but has a polyrhythmic percussion accompaniment (played on the tambor): while the melody (played on the shawm) keeps regular 2/4 time, the percussion pattern is 3 + 2 + 3 quavers (which also defied early collectors). The combination of this rhythm with a melodic pattern in 2/4 time is shown in ex.2*b*. Very popular in the Castilian region of La Mancha is the bolero manchego, an art of seguidilla manchega which is usually danced at slower pace by eight couples, accompanied by a rondalla (ensemble of plucked instruments).

Extremadura shares the musical characteristics of its neighbours (León and Castile in the north and Andalusia in the south). Here the jota is the most widespread dance; the so-called fandango, performed in some areas of Extremadura, is really a jota; typical dances are the son or son brincao (leaping dance), and the quita y pon ('take and put'), both sung and danced at a lively pace. Some ceremonial dances are performed by men with blackened faces wearing white smocks.

The repertory of Navarre, situated between Aragon and Basque country, reflects its geographical situation. In the mountainous areas folksong is musically and linguistically Basque. The lower regions show affinity with Aragon; for instance, the popular Navarrese jota differs from the Aragonese only in its greater use of melisma and instrumental virtuosity (see BASQUE MUSIC for a discussion of dances in Navarre).

In Aragon, the jota is the most important and widely used form. In spite of its simple structure, it is an adaptable form which can suit moods, and with simple harmonies lends itself to improvisation. Although there are many minor local variants, a broad division may be made between the jota of upper Aragon which is more lively, the dancers touching the ground only with the toes, and that of lower Aragon which is slower and has fewer leaps. The jota sometimes invades the domain of other genres (e.g. agricultural work songs). Ceremonial dances include the señoríos y reiñados (lordships and those who reign) and the contradanza, noted for its complexity. In the province of Teruel the baile de las gitanillas ('ball of the Gypsies'), performed by women holding ribbons around a pole carried by a man, is popular. In the province of Huesca, the dance is a favourite sword dance which may also include dialogue and theatrical representations through stereotypical figures (Christian and Moorish generals, the mayoral, the gracioso, four flying children, etc.). Huesca has musical affinities with Catalonia, as does Teruel with neighbouring Valencia.

The cultural separateness of Catalonia is based mainly on language; the Catalan language is closer to Provençal than to Castilian and for many centuries Catalan culture was influenced from the north rather than from the south. The ball pla is popular in Catalonia and in the Valencian province of Castellón. Although it is performed on ceremonial occasions, it is an open dance in which everybody can participate. Guitars, lutes, bandurrias and castanets provide the accompaniment. It has three parts: an 'invitation to the ball', in which the dancers walk to the rhythm of a jota or a pasodoble, the jota with at least three different figures, and the bolero danced in a circle with joined hands. This last figure is similar to the basic sardana, the national dance of the Catalans (Crivillé, A1983; Martí, E1994 and A1995). It is a circle-dance for alternate men and women holding hands (fig.8). Although not an ancient form (the modern sardana owes much to the 19th-century enthusiast Pep Ventura), it derives from the medieval ball rodó (round dance). Despite the strictness with which the steps are executed, few Catalans do not dance it and in city and village alike the sardana has become the symbol of Catalan identity. The dance is accompanied by the cobla, usually with 11 musicians (see fig.14 below). The opening 'introit' on the flabiol serves to announce that the dance is about to begin. The curts (short steps), each four beats long, occupy the first section, followed by the llargs (long steps), each eight beats long; meanwhile, the music becomes louder and more energetic until the final section in which the llargs are adorned amb

8. Dancing the sardana (circle-dance) in Barcelona salts (with leaps). Popular at feasts in various villages and cities of Catalonia is the acrobatic building of a human tower or pyramid some six ranks high; although it is a game rather than a dance, its construction is accompanied by a toc (toccata) played on the gralles (shawms).

Some of the dances of the Balearic Islands are evidently importations, such as the jota and, particularly in Mallorca, the bolero; more typical are two dances called sa mateixa and copeo. The mateixa (meaning 'same' for no obvious reason) is similar to the jota but has the gentler style of Mallorca; the copeo is another couple-dance, in which the woman dictates the movements (which are very fast) and the man imitates them to the best of his ability (fig.9). An old wedding custom in Mallorca was the auctioning of dances with the bride, the object being to raise funds to pay for the feast; it was, of course, arranged for the groom to win the first bid. The chief dances of Ibiza are sa llarga and sa curta (the long and the short), which differ only in speed; particularly large castanets are used, and while the woman dances coyly, the man leaps about and demonstrates his agility, never turning his back on his partner.

Valencia possesses a great richness of local dance traditions which include ritual (like those performed around a fire on St Anthony's day), processional and pantomimic dances representing different occupations etc. Particularly important are the local variants of the fandango and the jota. The Valencian jota accompaniment has the structure and harmonic simplicity of the Aragonese jota, but its melodic characteristics are often surprisingly free. Tending towards syncopation and ornament, its tonality is frequently ambiguous, so that if the melody were sung alone it would scarcely suggest the well-defined harmonic pattern typical of the jota. Other dances of the region include el u i el dos (the one and the two) and el u i el dotze (the one and the twelve), a double circle-dance with the men forming the inner circle. Popular in the eastern regions of Valencia, as well as in Catalonia, is the ball pla: an open dance with a variable number of participants and performed on the plaça (square) of the village during its main festivities. In some villages of Castellón the ball rodat (round dance) is still performed; it consists of a 'walking dance' through the festive space until the dancers find a broad space in which they can dance a jota in a double circle. Castellón is also known by the relative frequence of aksak (or asymmetric) rhythms in its dances and songs, although this trait can also be found in other regions of Spain (León, Catalonia, Basque country).

9. Copeo dancer in Majorca, with castañuelas (castanets) and guitar accompaniment

Murcia has lively and fast dances similar to those of Andalusia. Most popular are the fandango, known usually as the malagueña, the jota, danced at a lively pace, and the seguidillas in its local variant forms of parrandas, gandulas or paradicas.

Andalusia has the richest treasury of folk dances in Spain. Its chief dances are fandangos and sevillanas (usually composed in the metric form of the seguidillas) and variants. The fandangos in particular appear in many variants according to local traditions. One of these variants is the verdiales of the Montes de Málaga, which are danced by the pandas (bands); these dancers are called tontos (fools) and collect money for the celebration of religious feasts. They wear hats decorated with ribbons and pieces of mirror and are accompanied by violin, tambourine and miniature cymbals (see VERDIALES). The style of the fandangos verdiales is seen along the Mediterranean coast from Tarifa to Valencia (Berlanga, A1997). Sevillanas are the seguidillas of Seville; whether they speak of love or extol the beauty of Seville they are often praised for their high literary merit. Some examples, bearing a 17th-century imprint and locally called antiguas (old) or bíblicas (biblical), take their subjects from history, mythology or the Bible. Sevillanas are not fossilized: new ones began to be recorded in the 1960s and are still composed in abundance for fiestas and romerías (pilgrimages undertaken in a spirit of profane festivity). Purely popular dances are sometimes put to functional use: the jotilla (little jota) is danced in the province of Córdoba to celebrate the end of the olive harvest, just as the fandangos verdiales are used in eastern Andalusia after grapes have been harvested. Collection for the All Souls is made using verdiales by groups from Málaga to Murcia; in Andalusia they may dance as well as sing.

A common dance on the larger of the Canary Islands is the isa; musically it is similar to the Aragonese jota, to which it is probably related (although the name isa and the steps of the dance are probably of the pre-Spanish guanche origin). The folía is a very important sung dance, a curious mixture of the idyllic and the passionate, accompanied by a group resembling the rondalla. The tango, performed on the island of Hierro, is a ritual dance whose limited melodic range and often forced underlay of Spanish texts suggest non-peninsular origin. Seguidillas and malagueñas, and also polkas and mazurkas, are popular too. Two instruments deserve special mention:

the timple, a small guitar used in the folía, and the transverse flute used in the tango.

Dances are the best-kept domain of Spanish traditional music. From the 1980s, their practice has been promoted by autonomous administrations who saw in the support of dance a way of strengthening regional cultural identity.

See also FANDANGO and SEGUIDILLA.

5. ORGANOLOGY. Foremost among struck idiophones are castanets (castañuelas, see fig.9 above; also palillos, postizas), the most common being those with both parts tied to the thumb. A very small type, pulgaretas (from pulgar: 'thumb'), is found in Aragon. A large type, fastened to the wrist, is found in Jaca (province of Huesca), Ibiza and in Gomera (Canary Islands) where they are called chácaras. Platillos are cymbals, of which a miniature type, chinchines, is found in Málaga and Almería, and parts of Andalusia and New Castile. Other struck idiophones include the hierrillo ('little iron' or triangle) and campanas (bells) of various sizes, sometimes mounted on frames of different designs (a wheel, a cross) for use in religious contexts; cencerros (animal bells), known sometimes as esquilas, are also common.

Shaken idiophones include cascabeles (small spherical bells, worn by dancers or tied to the end of a stick which is shaken); the carraca (cog rattle or 'corncrake'); the matraca (various types of clapper or castanet on a handle) and other types of sonajero (rattle); and the aro de sonajas (like a tambourine with jingles, but without a membrane; it may be beaten or shaken). Finally, scraped idiophones include the carrañaca or raspadero (a notched piece of wood rubbed with a stick; there are also some hollowed-out, gourd-like varieties called güiro, of Cuban provenance) and conchas or conchas de peregrino (pilgrim shells), used in Galicia, the knurled surfaces of two shells being rubbed together.

Besides these instruments, percussion is frequently improvised on household objects; a mortar (almírez) may serve as a bell; a frying pan (sartén), spoons (cucharas, usually wooden), a grater (rallador) or a key and a bottle may be used to keep rhythm. Other percussion instruments may be tools, such as a hammer and anvil, yoke, or tejoleta (piece of tile, which may also be used as a tradesman's or other signal); even the rhythmic creaking of a farm cart may be used to mark time.

The most important membranophone is the pandereta (tambourine with jingles; fig.10). A larger tambourine, the pandero (usually without jingles), has a square variety sometimes called adufe or alduf, among other names; both are often used by women in dances. The nomenclature of drums is complicated, since different sizes are known by the same names. The generic term is tambor, with large types known as tamboril (about 50 cm in both height and diameter) and caja (larger in diameter but not as deep), both built like side drums. Smaller instruments may also be referred to as tamboril; a very small drum, called tamboret in Catalan, is used in the cobla. Ritual processions sometimes demand the use of timbales (kettledrums). The zambomba, used above all in Christmas festivities, is a friction drum, the membrane being pierced with a stick which the player rubs up and down. The groups of drummers have become emblematic of lower Aragon. One of the most important celebrations is the tamborinada, during which a multitude of drums are played continuously.

10. Basque musicians with alboka (double-reed hornpipe) and pandereta (tambourine with jingles)

The guitar, commonly called guitarra, is the most important chordophone and is popular in all regions. In ensembles smaller varieties are used, including the requinto and tiple or timple, which have fewer strings and are only strummed. The guitarro is a type with 12 strings. Two instruments are used with a plectrum (púa) to pick out a melody: the laúd (lute) and bandurria (a large instrument of the mandolin family). The bowed violin appears sometimes (mainly in Valencia and Murcia); the rabel, a rebec with only one string, is rarer. The sanfona (hurdy-gurdy; also chanfona, zanfona among other names) is used in Galicia. The salterio is beaten like a drum: a type of dulcimer consisting of a number of thick strings stretched over a box resonator; it is used in ritual dances in some localities in the Huesca province (Aragon).

A common name among aerophones is 'gaita', which is used for a confusing array of instruments. Although the name usually means bagpipe (fig.11), in some areas of the country the gaita is a conical wind instrument with a double reed, known also by the names of dolçaina or gralla. The most important pipe is the one with three holes and given various names: chiflo in Aragon, pito in Castile, txistu in Basque country, where it has become an emblem of Basque nationalism. In Basque country a bass flute, silbote, is also used (in Basque, txistu aundi). Catalonia has the flabiol, a small seven-hole flute, and in the Canary Islands a transverse flute is used. A double-reed instrument, called variously gaita, dulzaina or chirimía (shawm) is played in most areas of Spain; gralla is the Catalan name, and in this region two varieties, tenora and tiple (tenor and treble shawm), are used in the cobla. The xeremía and gaita (or gaita serrana) are pastoral instruments from Ibiza and Castile respectively,

11. Galician ensemble with two gaiteros (bagpipe players) and two drummers though both are now rare; the former is a double clarinet made from a single piece of wood, and is sometimes pentatonic; the latter is a capped single-reed hornpipe (see WIND-CAP INSTRUMENTS), with an animal-horn bell. The large class of instruments made by children includes some similar ones such as the double-reed Basque alboka (Sp. albogue, fig.12; see also fig.10 above). In most of Spain, gaita or gaita de fuelle are generally understood to mean an instrument of the bagpipe family found in Asturias, León, Aragon, Catalonia (where it goes by the name sac de gemecs: 'bag of groans'), Mallorca (xeremies) and particularly in Galicia, where it is now considered a symbol of regional identity.

12. Alboka (double-reed hornpipe) (Horniman Museum, London)

The flauta de Pan (panpipes) is used to warn of the approach of tradesmen such as knife grinders and pig gelders (hence the instrument's vulgar name of castrapuercas). Various types of shell or horn, all with extremely narrow range, are also used for giving warning signals. Among the brass instruments traditionally used are the corneta and trompeta, used to attract attention particularly by pregoneros (town criers). Brass instruments of several sizes are used in the modern cobla in Catalonia. The guimbarda or birimbao (jew's harp) is a shepherd's instrument.

The most usual combinations of instruments are flute and drum, played by the same player (fig.13), and gaita (either bagpipes or shawm) with drum or tambourine(s), played by different players. Such groups commonly accompany dancing. The rondalla is a street band which performs for the ronda (see §3), comprising some or all of the following: guitars of various sizes, laúd, bandurria, triangle, tambourine or aro de sonajas, and perhaps a cántaro (a large jug which may be either struck or rhythmically blown into). Similar to the rondalla, the banda is a group composed of various combinations of aerophones. These groups are very popular throughout the country particularly in the area of Valencia. In Catalonia an ensemble comprising three gralles and drum is no longer found, but the cobla persists. The standard instrumentation dating from the beginning of the 20th century is composed of flabiol and tambori, two tenores

13. Pito y tambor (three-hole flute and drum) player, Salamanca, León and two tiples (instruments derived from the old tarota), two cornets (now replaced by trumpets), a trombone, two fisicornos (flugelhorns) and one berra (a three-string double bass; fig.14).

6. CONTEMPORARY DEVELOPMENTS. Despite the fact that in many parts of Europe traditional folk music began rapidly disappearing at the end of the 19th century, giving way to a new model of society marked by urban culture, in Spain awareness of the progressive disappearance of traditional culture, coupled with the importance people have placed on the maintenance of a collective identity, particularly as a result of the development of autonomous regions, has produced a generalized interest in folklore – hence the discovery, preservation and popularization of traditional music, often through its involvement with political and economic objectives. In this way, many of the diverse manifestations of traditional culture, originally an integral part of a concrete way of life, has become part of urban society. As people have assigned it aesthetic, commercial and ideological value, folklore has become folklorism.

At the end of the 19th century and beginning of the 20th, folklorism attained certain social relevance within Spanish society. Interest in what was then a fading tradition was not confined to those intellectuals who had begun collecting some decades earlier, but included people from diverse sections of society. Traditional song repertories had been embraced by choral societies by the end of the 19th century, with the first choreographic groups for traditional dances, such as the Esbart de Dansaires de Vic in Catalonia, appearing in 1902. All such groups were engaged in the task of recuperating and disseminating the traditional dances of the country.

By the beginning of the 20th century a well-configured series of narratives could be found around particular musical and choreographic genres, which through folklorism became markers of regional identity: the jota for Aragon, the zortziko for Basque country, the muiñeira for Galicia, the sardana for Catalonia, etc. Each of these dances contributed to the emergence of similar mythologies, which by emphasizing their rural origin and claiming ancient precedence (often back to unprovable Greek or Roman times) aim to establish them as quintessentially ethnic.

The Franco dictatorship, in common with other European totalitarian political regimes, found the exploitation of folklore one way of promoting state nationalism. For ideological reasons the women's section of the Falange party assumed the task of collecting and disseminating folk music and dance throughout Spain. As a result, during the dictatorship such folklorism became (because of its opportunistic use by the government) socially discredited, particularly among sectors of the population most opposed to the political regime. However with the restoration of democracy folklorism regained its value. Spain became a state constituted by autonomous communities, many of them with strong regionalist traditions, others with artificial ones, but each with a need to recover or invent regional identities. Flags and official anthems appeared, and people sought in folklore, especially in music, ethnic justification for the newly shaped administrative boundaries. In contrast with the period of Franco's dictatorship, new democracy led to a revaluation of folklore not only by the public administration but also by the broadest sectors of society. The result has been not only the proliferation of festivals and competitions for folk music and dance throughout the country but also the creation of numerous groups and associations with the objective of recovering and popularizing local traditional music and dance. At the end of the 20th century, expressions of local folklore, rare in previous decades, were seldom missing from festivities of big cities such as Madrid and Barcelona to Zaragoza and Valencia. In urban areas, the associations called the casas regionales, important focal points for immigrants from many Spanish provinces, maintain the ties of immigrants with their home region, thus acting as an important focus for musical folklorism.

14. Cobla band in Catalonia, with (front row, left to right) flabiol and tamboret (flute, and small drum attached to player's arm), two tiples (treble shawms), two tenores (tenor shawms) and (back row, left to right) two trumpets, trombó de vares (trombone), two fisicornos (flugelhorns) and double bass

The presence of folklorism on Spanish streets has never been as strong as it is at the beginning of the 21st century. But this should be understood as much for political reasons as for the positive values tradition implies for society. The importance of tourism for Spain fosters such music not only in areas of touristic affluence such as the east and south coasts but also in the interior regions of Spain, which appreciate cultural tourism as an important economical resource. Typical festivities associated with the colourful processions of Holy Week, particularly in south and central Spain in cities such as Seville, Toledo or Zamora, have been strongly revitalized despite the steady decrease in religious feelings throughout Spanish society; in addition new festivities have been fashioned from the re-elaboration of traditional elements, as in the case of the ruta del tambor y bombo (route of drum and bass drum) in lower Aragon, an economically depressed zone which has made Holy Week its main festivity and an important tourist attraction. Another reason for the significance of folklorism in Spain is the relative delay in the incorporation of many Spanish regions into post-industrial society, which has ensured the greater survival of cultural elements of a pre-industrial nature. Many folkloric events have not lost the thread of history, as with many ceremonial dances seen at local festivities. At the same time these dances have become objects of folklorism experiencing important modifications, particularly in both semantics and function. In earlier periods it was not necessary to stress any ethnic connotations or to appeal to a sense of local heritage, but at the end of the 20th century such dances were being performed outside traditional spatial and temporal frames, although their forms have remained more or less constant because of a modern, aesthetic stress on purism and ethnic fidelity. As a result people have recuperated archaic rhythms such as those of aksak type, which had been replaced by more regular rhythms; band instruments have been supplanted by more traditional instruments such as bagpipes or dulzainas (shawms); and dancers often use regional dress belonging to the 19th century.

The reiteration of particular versions by the mass media, coupled with the social prestige implied by commercial diffusion, has influenced bearers of traditional culture to alter what they have learnt through oral transmission. This is easy to observe in balladry and traditional children's repertory. Although these songs have been passed down from one generation to another, modern modification is influenced by particular variants which circulate in the mass media. In this way traditional repertories, apart from the problems they have to overcome to survive in the modern world, undeniably undergo a process of qualitative and quantitative impoverishment because of restrictive and selective modifications by their interpreters. Thus a tourist flamenco has emerged, modifying the traditional relationship between song and dance, with more importance given to dance for reasons of spectacle. The flourishing situation of the Catalan havanera, including the encouragement of new compositions according to traditional patterns, has led to a much broader diffusion than was enjoyed in earlier decades of the 20th century.

At the end of the 20th century a preoccupation with ripproposta became evident, in which different levels are distinguished. One level implies the simple task of restoration with absolute fidelity to tradition; another considers the traditional as raw material or a source of inspiration for musical creation. Besides numerous groups playing traditional music, modern bands consciously incorporate elements of tradition, most of all melodic and timbric features, creating music known as etno-pop, jazz-folk, folk-rock and folk eléctrico.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

AND OTHER RESOURCES

A General studies and collections. B Historical background. C Organology. D Regional collections. E Regional studies. F Popular music. G Recordings.

A: GENERAL STUDIES AND COLLECTIONS

M. Soriano Fuertes: Historia de la música española desde la venida de los Fenicos hasta el año de 1850 (Madrid, 1855–9)

E. Ocón: Cantos españoles: colección de aires nacionales y populares (Malaga, 1874, 2/1906)

Demófilo [A. Machado y Alvarez]: Cantes flamencos: colección escogida (Madrid, 1886, 2/1947)

J. Inzenga: Cantos y bailes populares de España (Madrid, 1888)

E. López-Chávarri: Música popular española (Barcelona, 1927, 3/1958)

E.M. Torner: 'La canción tradicional española', Folklore y costumbres de España, ed. F. Carreras y Candi, ii (Barcelona, 1931), 7–166

A. Capmany: 'El baile y la danza', ibid., 169–418

E.M. Torner: Temas folklóricos: música y poesía (Madrid, 1935) [incl. bibliography]

H. Anglès: 'Das spanische Volkslied', AMf, iii (1938), 331–62

G. Chase: The Music of Spain (New York, 1941, 2/1959) [incl. bibliography]

K. Schindler: Folk Music and Poetry of Spain and Portugal (New York, 1941)

Revista de dialectología y tradiciones populares (1944–) [incl. bibliography]

J.A. de Donostia: 'El modo de mi la canción popular española', AnM, i (1946), 153–79

Marius Schneider: La danza de espadas y la tarantela (Barcelona, 1948)
Marius Schneider: 'Tipología musical y literaria de la canción de cuna en España', AnM, iii (1948), 3–58
B. Gil García: 'La jeringonza en la actual tradición', AnM, xiii (1958), 129–58
W. Starkie: Spain: a Musician's Journey through Time and Space (Geneva, 1958)
A. de Larrea Palacín: 'Canción popular', Enciclopedia de la cultura española, ed. F. Pérez-Embid (Madrid, 1962–8)
J. Amades: 'Etnología musical', Revista de dialectología y tradiciones populares, xx (1964), 113–200
J. Tomás: 'Canciones populares de trabajo', AnM, xix (1964), 225–39
A. de Larrea Palacín: 'Aspectos de la música popular española', El folklore español, ed. J.M. Gómez-Tabanera (Madrid, 1968), 297–318
T. Martínez de la Peña: 'Aspectos particulares de las danzas populares españolas', ibid., 319–38
I.J. Katz: 'The Traditional Folk Music of Spain: Explorations and Perspectives', YIFMC, vi (1974), 64–85
Marius Schneider: 'Die arabische Komponente im spanischen Volksgesang', ÖMz, xxx (1975), 175–85
J. Diaz: Canciones tradicionales (Madrid, 1978–83)
J. Crivillé: Historia de la música española, vii: El folklore musical (Madrid, 1983)
V. Torrent: La música popular (Valencia, 1990)
V. Torrent: 'Ritmes amalgamats en la tradició valenciana', Actes del Col.loqui sobre cançó tradicional: Reus 1990, ed. S. Rebés (Barcelona, 1994), 111–17
J. Aiats: 'El ritme g.s.1212: un cas notable de giusto sil.làbic en les cançons baladístiques de la comarca d'Osona', ibid., 93–109
E. Rey: Bibliografia de folklore musical español (Madrid, 1994)
J. Martí: El folklorismo: uso y abuso de la tradición (Barcelona, 1995)
M. Manzano: La jota como género musical (Madrid, 1995)
M.A. Berlanga: El fandango (diss., U. of Granada, 1997)
J. Martí: 'Folk Music Studies and Ethnomusicology in Spain', YTM, xxviii (1997), 107–40

B: HISTORICAL BACKGROUND

(i) Sources

L. Milán: Libro de musica de vihuela de mano intitulado El maestro (Valencia, 1536/R); ed. R. Chiesa (Milan, 1965) and C. Jacobs (University Park, PA, 1971)
L. de Narváez: Los seys libros del delphín de música de cifra para tañer vihuela (Valladolid, 1538/R); ed. in MME, iii (1945/R)
A. Mudarra: Tres libros de música en cifras para vihuela (Seville, 1546); ed. in MME, vii (1949)
E. de Valderrábano: Libro de musica de vihuela intitulado Silva de sirenas (Valladolid, 1547/R); i–ii ed. in MME, xxii–xxiii (1965)
D. Pisador: Libro de música de vihuela (Salamanca, 1552/R)
D. Ortiz: Trattado de glosas sobre clausulas y otros generos de puntos en la musica de violones (Rome, 1553); ed. Max Schneider (Berlin, 1913; Kassel, 1936/R, 3/1961)
M. de Fuenllana: Libro de música para vihuela intitulado Orphénica lyra (Seville, 1554/R); ed. C. Jacobs (Oxford, 1978/R)
E. Daza: Libro de musica en cifras para vihuela intitulado El Parnasso (Valladolid, 1576/R); ed. R. de Zayas (Madrid, 1983)
F. de Salinas: De musica libri septem (Salamanca, 1577/R; Sp. trans., 1983)
M. Flecha: Las ensaladas (Prague, 1581); ed. in PBC, xvi (1955)
S. de Covarrubias Orozco: Tesoro de la lengua castellana o española (Madrid, 1611/R)

(ii) Studies

J. Bal y Gay: Cancionero de Upsala (Mexico City, 1944)
H. Anglés: La música en la corte de los reyes católicos, ii: Polifonía profana (Barcelona, 1941)
H. Anglès: La música de las cantigas de Santa Maria, iii: Estudio critico (Barcelona, 1958)
G. Haberkamp: Die weltliche Vokalmusik in Spanien um 1500 (Tutzing, 1968)
R.A. Pelinski: Die weltliche Vokalmusik Spaniens am Anfang des 17. Jahrhunderts (Tutzing, 1971)
M.Q. Gavaldá: Cancionero musical de Góngora (Barcelona, 1975)
M.Q. Gavaldá: Cancionero musical de Lope de Vega (Barcelona, 1986)

C: ORGANOLOGY

J.A. de Donostia and J. Tomás: 'Instromentos de música popular española', AnM, ii (1947), 105–50 [incl. bibliography]
R. Violant y Simorra: 'Instrumentos músicos de construcción infantil y pastoril en Cataluña', Revista de dialectología y tradiciones populares, x (1954), 331–99, 548–90
M. García Matos: 'Instrumentos musicales folklóricos de España', AnM, ix (1954), 161–78; xi (1956), 123–63; xiv (1959), 77
A. de Larrea Palacín: 'Instrumentos musicales populares', Enciclopedia de la cultura español, ed. F. Pérez-Embid (Madrid, 1962–8)
G. Ferré i Puig: 'La flauta i el tambor a la música ètnica catalana', Recerca musicològica, vi (1986), 173–233
T. Noda Gómez and L. Siemens Hernández: 'Los idiófonos tradicionales en la Isla de La Palma', RdMc, ix (1986), 169–204
A. Jambrina Leal and J.R. Cid Cebrián: La gaita y el tamboril (Salamanca, 1989)
J. Morey and A. Artigues: Repertori i construcció dels instruments de la colla de xeremiers catalans a Mallorca (Palma, 1989)
E.M. Zamora: Instrumentos musicales en la tradición asturiana (Oviedo, 1989)

D: REGIONAL COLLECTIONS

J. de Zamácola: Colección de las mejores coplas de seguidillas, tranas y polos (Madrid, 1799, enlarged 3/1805/R)
J.I. de Iztueta: Gispuzkoa'ko dantzak/Dantzas de Guipúzcoa (San Sebastián, 1826, 3/1929)
A. Durán: Colección de romances castellanos anteriores al siglo XVIII (Madrid, 1828–32) [texts only]
F. Pelay Briz: Cançons de la terra (Barcelona, 1866–77)
J. Manterola: Cancionero vasco (San Sebastián, 1877–80)
M. Milá y Fontanals: Romancerillo catalán: canciones tradicionales (Barcelona, 1882)
F. Rodríguez Marín: Cantos populares españoles (Seville, 1882–3, 3/1981)
P. Bertrán y Bros: Cançons i follies populars recullides al peu de Montserrat (Barcelona, 1885)
J. Pérez Ballesteros: Cancionero popular gallego (Madrid, 1886) [texts only]
A. Noguera: Memoria sobre los cantos, bailes y tocatas populares de la isla de Mallorca (Palma de Mallorca, 1893)
A. Capmany: Cançoner popular (Barcelona, 1901–13)
F. Olmeda: Cancionero popular de Burgos (Seville, 1903)
J. Verdú: Cantos populares de Murcia (Madrid, 1906)
D. Ledesma: Cancionero salamantino (Madrid, 1907)
A. Carrera: Cançons populars catalanes (Barcelona, 1910–16)
F. Echevarría: Cantos y bailes populares de Valencia (Valencia, 1912)
N. Otaño: El canto popular montañés (Santander, 1915)
F. Camps y Mercadal: Folklore menorquí (Mahón, 1918)
N. Otaño: Canciones montañesas (Valencia, 1918)
F. Pedrell: Cancionero musical popular español (Valls, 1918–22, 3/1958)
E.M. Torner: Cancionero musical de la lírica popular asturiana (Madrid, 1920)
J.A. de Donostia: Euskel eres-sorta (cancionero vasco) (Madrid, 1921)
R.M. de Azkue: Cancionero popular vasco (Barcelona, 1923)
R.M. de Azkue: Las mil y una canciones populares vascas (Barcelona, ?1923)
M. Arnaudas Larrodé: Colección de cantos populares de la provincia de Teruel (Zaragoza, 1927)
B. Gil García: Cancionero popular de Extremadura, i (Valls, 1931, 2/1961); ii (Badajoz, 1956)
M. Fernández y Fernández Núñez: Folk-lore leonés: canciones, romances y leyendas (Madrid, 1931)
S. Llorens de Serra: El cançoñer de Pineda (Barcelona, 1931)
C. Sampedro y Folgar and J. Filgueria Valverde, eds.: Cancionero musical de Galicia (Madrid, 1942)
K. Schindler: Folk Music and Poetry of Spain and Portugal (New York, 1941)
A. Sánchez Fraile: Nuevo cancionero salamantino: colección de canciones y temas folklóricos inéditos (Salamanca, 1943)
M. Arnaudas: Colección de cantos populares de la Provincio de Teruel (Teruel, 1982)
M. García Matos: Lírica popular de la Alta Extremadura, i (Madrid, 1944); ii (Barcelona, 1982)
S. Córdova y Oña: Cancionero popular de la provincia de Santander (Santander, 1948–55)

A. Galmés: Mallorca, Menorca, Ibiza: folklore: danzas, costumbres, canciones (Palma de Mallorca, 1950)
A. Mingote: Cancionero musical de la provincia de Zaragoza (Zaragoza, 1950, 3/1981)
J. Amades: Folklore de Catalunya: cançoner (Barcelona, 1951, 2/1982)
P. Echevarría Bravo: Cancionero musical popular manchego (Madrid, 1951)
M. García Matos: Cancionero popular de la provincia de Madrid (Barcelona and Madrid, 1951–60)
J. Menéndez de Estébanand P.M. Flamarique: Colección de jotas navarras (Pamplona, 1967)
A. Mingote: Cancionero musical de la provincia de Zaragoza (Zaragoza, 1967)
A. Capdevielle: Cancionero de Cáceres y su provincia (Cáceres, 1969)
A. Aragonés Subero: Danzas, rondas y música popular de Guadalajara (Guadalajara, 1973)
E.M. Torner and J. Bal y Gay: Cancionero gallego (La Coruña, 1973)
S. Seguí: Cancionero musical de la provincia de Alicante (Alicante, 1974)
B. Gil: Cancionero popular de la Rioja (Barcelona, 1987)
M. Manzano: Cancionero leonés (Madrid, 1988)
M. García Matos and others: Páginas inéditas del cancionero de Salamanca (Salamanca, 1995)

E: REGIONAL STUDIES

J. Ribera: 'De música y métrica gallegas', Homenaje ofrecido a Ramón Menéndez Pidal (Madrid, 1925), iii, 7–35
F. Pujol and others, eds.: Obra del cançoner popular de Catalunya: materials (Barcelona, 1926–9)
J. Ribera y Tarragó: La música de la jota aragonesa (Madrid, 1928)
F. Baldelló: Cançoner popular religiós de Catalunya (Barcelona, 1932)
A. de Larrea Palacín: 'Preliminares al estudio de la jota aragonesa', AnM, ii (1947), 175–90
M. Palau i Boix: Cuadernos de música popular valenciana (Valencia, 1950)
J. Amades: 'Las danzas de espadas y de palos en Cataluña, Baleares y Valencia, AnM, x (1955), 163–90
M. García Matos: 'Sobre algunos ritmos de nuestro folklore musical', AnM, xv (1960), 101–31; xvi (1961), 27–54
B. Gil García: 'Panorama de la canción popular burgalesa', AnM, xviii (1963), 85–102
J. Mainar, A. Jane and J. Miracle: La sardana (Barcelona, 1970, 2/1972)
J. Benito and A. Buylla: La canción asturiana (Gijón, 1977)
J. Crivillé: 'Ethnomusicologie d'un village catalan: Tivissa', AnM, xxxiii–xxxv (1978–80), 171–254
D. Schubarth and A. Santamarina: Cántigas populares (Vigo, 1983)
S. Schmitt: Arbeitslieder auf Mallorca (Tutzing, 1984)
H. Schmidt: Die Sardana: Tanz der Katalanen (diss., U. of Hamburg, 1985)
M.A. Juan: 'Folk Music Research and the Development of Ethnomusicology in Catalonia since 1850', European Studies in Ethnomusicology: Historical Development and Recent Trends, ed. M.P. Baumann, A. Simon and U. Wegner (Wilhelmshaven, 1992), 42–51
J. Martí: 'The Sardana as a Socio-Cultural Phenomenon in Contemporary Catalonia', YTM, xxvi (1994), 39–46
R. Pelinski: Presencia del pasado: reestudio de un cancionero castellonense (Castellón de la Plana, 1996)

F: POPULAR MUSIC

D.A. Manrique: De qué va el rock macarra (Madrid, 1977)
C. López: La edad de oro del pop español (Madrid, 1992)
M. Muniesa: 'El heavy metal en España', Historia del heavy metal (Madrid, 1993), 85–100
P. Calvo and J.M. Gamboa: Historia-guía del nuevo flamenco (Madrid, 1994)
M. Román: Canciones de nuestra vida: de Antonio Machín a Julio Iglesias (Madrid, 1994)
I. Julià: Grunge, noise, rock alternativo (Madrid, 1996)

G: RECORDINGS

Magna antología del folklore musical de España, Hispavox S-66171 (1977) [incl. notes by M. García Matos]
Magna antología del cante flamenco, Hispavox S-66201 (1982) [incl. notes by J.B. Vega]
Fonoteca de materials: tallers de música popular, Conselleria de cultura, Generalitat Valenciana, Discos CBS LP TMP1–24 (1985–) [incl. notes ed. V. Torrent]
Madrid tradicional: antología, Tecnosaga, series issued outside numbered sequence (1985–98) [incl. notes by J.M. Fraile Gil] Fonoteca de música tradicional catalana, Centre de Documentació i Recerca de la Cultura Tradicional i Popular, Tecno CD DT001–9 (1991–) [incl. notes ed. J. Crivillé]
Romancero panhispánico: antología sonora, Centro de Cultura Tradicional de Salamanca, Tecnosaga 5LP AD(5) 10–9004 (1991) [incl. notes by J.M. Fraile]
Antología de la música tradicional salmantina, Centro de Cultura Tradicional de Salamanca, Sonopress-Ibermemory KPD-(5) 10/9005 (1996) [incl. notes by A. Carril]

ROBERT STEVENSON/MARICARMEN GÓMEZ(I, 1–2), LOUISE STEIN (I, 3), ALBERT RECASENS (I, 4), BELEN PEREZ CASTILLO (I, 5–6), JOSEP I MARTÍ I PEREZ (II, 1, 2(iii), 6), MARTIN CUNNINGHAM/ RAMÓN PELINSKI (II, 2(i)), MARTIN CUNNINGHAM/ JAUME AIATS (II, 2(ii)), SÍLVIA MARTÍNEZ GARCÍA (II, 2(iv)), ARCADIO DE LARREA PALACÍN/ JAUME AIATS (II, 3), ARCADIO DE LARREA PALACÍN, MARTIN CUNNINGHAM,/ RAMÓN PELINSKI (II, 4), ARCADIO DE LARREA PALACÍN/SÍLVIA MARTÍNEZ GARCÍA (II, 5)

Spalato (It.). See Split.

Spalding, Albert (b Chicago, 15 Aug 1888; d New York, 26 May 1953). American violinist and composer. He studied the violin with Ulpiano Chiti in Florence and Juan Buitrago in New York, and at 14 entered the Bologna Conservatory; later he studied the violin for two years with Augustin Lefort at the Paris Conservatoire and composition with Antonio Scontrino in Florence. He made his début in Paris in 1905, and soon after played privately for Saint-Saëns, who recommended him to Hans Richter and Walter Damrosch; he made his New York début on 8 November 1908 with Damrosch conducting. Between 1910 and 1917 he toured Russia, Sweden, Norway, Egypt and the USA, then served in the Army Aviation Corps during World War I. In 1920 he performed with the New York SO on the first European tour ever made by an American orchestra; in 1922 he was the first American violinist to play at the concerts of the Société des Concerts du Conservatoire in Paris. He performed extensively until his final New York concert in 1950 and gave the American premières of many works, including the violin concertos of Dohnányi, Elgar and Barber. Spalding was one of the first American violinists to gain international prominence; rejecting virtuoso showmanship, he concentrated on a refined and sensitive musical interpretation, to which his many recordings bear witness. He also composed over 120 works, including two unpublished violin concertos, a violin sonata and several short violin pieces, a string quartet and an orchestral suite, and made numerous transcriptions. A two-volume set of his recordings ('Albert Spalding Centennial Historic Recordings') was released in 1988. He wrote an autobiography, Rise to Follow (New York, 1943/R), and a biographical novel about Tartini, A Fiddler, a Sword and a Lady (New York, 1953).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

SchwarzGM
R. Sabin: 'Albert Spalding ... American Violinist', Musical America, lxx/3 (1950), 108–9, 232
S. and S. Applebaum: The Way they Play, i (Neptune City, NJ, 1972)
W.S. Timblin: 'Albert Spalding as a Teacher and Composer', School Musician, xlix/6 (Feb 1978), 43, 45
H. Roth: 'Modest Master', The Strad, xcix (1988), 634–40

BEN ARNOLD

Spalenza, Hortensio. Italian composer, possibly related to PIETR'ANTONIO SPALENZA.

Spalenza, Pietr'Antonio (b Brescia, *c*1545; d Treviso, before 27 May 1577). Italian composer. He was maestro di cappella at Treviso Cathedral from 24 April 1573 until his death. An episode in his career at Treviso casts an interesting light on contemporary performing practice: on 6 May 1576 he directed a choral mass, with instrumental accompaniment including trumpets, trombones and cornetts, in the church of the Augustinian nuns at Treviso; he was reprimanded for this because the organ was the only instrument allowed in closed convents. A document dated 26 November 1576 records a payment made to Spalenza for a polyphonic Mass for the Dead. On 27 May 1577 his heirs petitioned the chapter for financial assistance. His four-voice Primo libro di madrigali (Venice, 1574[9]; one ed. in Balsano) contains 25 compositions including two each by Adam Barbet and Giovanni Francesco Maffon; a number of sacred works for four to 12 voices and falsi bordoni for four voices survive in manuscript (in I-Bc, TVd). There is no evidence to suggest that he was related to Hortensio Spalenza, known only as the composer of three three-voice canzoni spirituali (in RISM 1599[6]).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

GaspariC
O. Rossi: Elogi historici di bresciani illustri (Brescia, 1620), 494
A. Valentini: I musicisti bresciani ed il Teatro Grande (Brescia, 1894)
G. d'Alessi: La cappella musicale del duomo di Treviso (1300–1633) (Vedelago, 1954), 123ff, 217
O. Mischiati: 'Un'antologia manoscritta in partitura del secolo XVI: il MS Bourdeney della Bibliothèque Nationale di Parigi', RIM, x (1975), 265–328
M.A. Balsano: 'I madrigali di Ludovico Ariosto messi in musica a tre, quattro, cinque e sei voci', Ariosto: la musica, i musicisti, ed. M.A. Balsano (Florence, 1981)

PIER PAOLO SCATTOLIN

SPAM. See SOCIETY FOR THE PUBLICATION OF AMERICAN MUSIC.

Spangenberg. German family of music theorists.

(1) Johann Spangenberg (b Hardegsen, Hanover, 29 March 1484; d Eisleben, 13 June 1550). German Lutheran theologian and composer as well as theorist. After studies in philosophy, theology and music in Göttingen (1501) and Einbeck (1502) he matriculated at the University of Erfurt in 1508. There he became a member of Eobanus Hessius's circle of humanists and received the bachelor and master's degrees. In 1521 he became the first evangelical pastor in his native town, but he moved in 1524 to Nordhausen, where he remained for 22 years. He established a new Lateinschule there and as its first rector brought courses in music into the curriculum. Spangenberg was a devoted follower of Luther, and on the latter's recommendation he was made pastor of Eisleben in 1546 and superintendent for the duchy of Mansfeld.

In addition to numerous theological tracts, Spangenberg published a highly important liturgical songbook, Cantiones ecclesiasticae (Magdeburg, 1545). Part i contains Latin plainsong compositions (facs. of p.1 in BlumeEK, plate III); part ii is devoted to German religious songs. The work is the most complete collection of religious music in use in the Lutheran liturgy at that time. Its twofold division made it a practical and useful book for German cathedrals and larger churches as well as for services in smaller towns and villages. The Quaestiones musicae (Nuremberg, 1536) is a compendium devoted to the elements of music and plainsong (polyphony was excluded). Its conciseness and clarity made it a favourite textbook: it had 25 editions, the last in 1592. The edition of 1563 contained a section on the art of singing (De arte canendi) by Girolamo Cardano, the noted mathematician and philosopher, taken from his De subtilitate, one of the most popular Renaissance books on science and philosophy. For the instruction of his young students at Nordhausen, Spangenberg wrote the Prosodia (Wittenberg, 1533), in which he gave rules of prosody and illustrated them with four-voice songs. His humanistic bent is shown in the Grammaticae latinae partes (Nuremberg, 1546), which contains four-voice compositions in the more common poetic metres.

(2) Cyriac [Cyriacus] Spangenberg (b Nordhausen, 7 June 1528; d Strasbourg, 7 Feb 1604). German Lutheran theologian, historian and hymnodist, son of (1) Johann Spangenberg. Because of his excellent primary education at the Lateinschule in Nordhausen, where his father was rector, he was able to enter the University of Wittenberg at the age of 16. There he studied theology, philosophy and history, attending lectures by Melanchthon and Luther, and living in Luther's home until 1546. In that year he was given a teaching position in the Lateinschule of Eisleben, where his father had become pastor. He was awarded the master's degree from Wittenberg in 1550. In 1559 he became dean of the duchy of Mansfeld, but theological controversies forced him to leave in 1574, and after holding posts in Sangerhausen and Schlitz he finally settled in Strasbourg in 1595.

Spangenberg continued the work of his father. In 1568 he published the Christliches Gesangbüchlein, which contained music for the principal feasts of the church year. Of its 130 hymns six were by him and 18 by his father. The Cithera Lutheri (Erfurt, 1569) was a collection of 76 sermons which interpreted the texts of Lutheran songbooks. Der gantze Psalter Davids (Frankfurt, 1582) contained his own psalm arrangements as well as the melodies of other composers. His Von der edlen und hochberühmbten Kunst der Musica (1598; burnt in 1870 but see von Keller) was a significant historical source for the Meistersinger movement.

(3) Wolfhart Spangenberg. See ANDROPEDIACUS, LYCOSTHENES PSELLIONOROS.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

BlumeEK; MGG1 (F. Onkelbach)
P. Wackernagel: Bibliographie zur Geschichte des deutschen Kirchenliedes im XVI. Jahrhundert (Frankfurt, 1854–5/R), 631, 653
A. von Keller, ed.: Von der Musica und den Meistersängern, Bibliothek des literarischen Verein in Stuttgart (Stuttgart, 1861)
I. Ludolphy: 'Spangenberg, Father and Son', Encyclopedia of the Lutheran Church (Minneapolis, 1965)
G. Pietzsch: Zur Pflege der Musik an den deutschen Universitäten bis zur Mitte des 16. Jahrhunderts (Hildesheim, 1971), 165
K. Ameln: 'Die "Silberweise" von Hans Sachs: Vorlage evangelischer Kirchenlieder?', Jb für Liturgik und Hymnologie, xxi (1977), 132–7
K. Gudewill: 'Vom Lobe Gottes oder der Musica: zu Lorenz Schröders Kopenhagener Traktat von 1639', Ars musica, musica scientia: Festschrift Heinrich Hüschen, ed. D. Altenburg (Cologne, 1980), 190–97
J. Hohenemser: 'The Jew in German Musical Thought before the Nineteenth Century', Musica Judaica, iii (1980–81), 63–73

K. Ameln: 'All Ehr und Lob soll Gottes sein: ein deutsches Gloria – von Martin Luther?', Jb für Liturgik und Hymnologie, xxxi (1988), 38–52

CLEMENT A. MILLER/CLYTUS GOTTWALD

Spangler. Austrian family of musicians.

(1) Johann Michael Spangler (b c1721; d Vienna, 4 June 1794). Tenor and regens chori. About 1749 he was a tenor and Choralist at the Michaelerkirche, Vienna. Ignace Pleyel reported that Spangler offered lodging to the young Haydn after his expulsion from the cathedral choir school. In 1764 he also became a choir member at the court theatre, and in 1775 regens chori at the Michaelerkirche; in the same year he was made an Assessor in the Tonkünstler-Sozietät, to which he had belonged since 1771, and from 1783 he served the society as its auditor. By virtue of his office at the Michaelerkirche he must have composed as well, but no works ascribed to him have been discovered.

(2) Maria Magdalena (Rosalie) Spangler (b Vienna, 4 Sept 1750; d Vienna, 29 Aug 1794). Soprano, daughter of (1) Johann Michael Spangler. Like her father she was a member of the choir at the court theatre from 1764. In 1768 Haydn engaged her as third soprano at Eszterháza, where she took part in the first performances of many of his operas. In 1769 she married the Eszterháza tenor CARL FRIBERTH in Weigelsdorf. As the marriage took place without the previous consent of the prince, both were threatened with dismissal, but, probably as a result of Haydn's intercession, they remained in service until 1776, when they moved to Vienna.

(3) Johann Georg (Joseph) Spangler (b Vienna, 22 March 1752; d Vienna, 2 Nov 1802). Tenor and composer, son of (1) Johann Michael Spangler. He began his career as a tenor and Choralist at the Michaelerkirche. By 1783 he had become tenor at three Viennese churches – the chapels at the Kölner Hof (where Carl Friberth was regens chori), the Savoy Ritterakademie and the Minoritenkirche (in that year, by command of Joseph II, the music programmes of the first two were discontinued and their personnel released). The next year he became an Assessor in the Tonkünstler-Sozietät, to which he had belonged since 1777, and in 1784–5 he was accepted into the masonic lodge 'Zur wahren Eintracht', of which Haydn was also a member. From 1793 he was a tenor in the Hofkapelle, and the following year he succeeded his father as regens chori at the Michaelerkirche. He was made archivist of the Hofkapelle in 1796, and at that time provided instruction and board to eight of the court's choirboys. In 1798, still retaining his post as regens chori, he was appointed titular substitute Kapellmeister.

Spangler was a productive composer of church music (including at least one mass, a requiem and some dozen shorter works in A-Wn, Wgm and D-Bsb, some of these in autograph copies), and must be regarded as one of the more important Viennese church musicians of his time. His works, which have yet to be studied and catalogued, were performed as late as the mid-19th century, and contemporary manuscript copies circulated to monasteries and parish churches throughout Austria, Bohemia, Moravia and Hungary (some of them, however, may be his father's). They are in the high Classical style, but fall short of the invention of his apparent model, Haydn. No secular music by him is known.

A Barbara Spangler, perhaps Johann Georg Spangler's wife, was a soprano active at the Minoritenkirche and the chapel at the Kölner Hof in 1783.

(4) Ignaz Spangler (b Vienna, 31 Oct 1757; d Vienna, 7 Dec 1811). Tenor and composer, son of (1) Johann Michael Spangler. He was a tenor with the Hofkapelle from 21 December 1781 until his death, and in 1783 also sang in the music ensembles of the Universitätskirche, the Maria Schnee chapel of the Minoritenkirche, the chapels at the Trattnerhof and Kölner Hof, and St Ivo Church (he was released from the last four in this year when their music programmes were discontinued). In 1793 he joined the Tonkünstler-Sozietät. Some sacred works by him are in the archives of the Schottenkirche, Vienna.

The Spangler family was related (by an as yet unclear connection) to the Viennese musical family Flamm: Franz Xaver, the organist and composer, and Margarethe and Antonie, both singers.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

EitnerQ; GerberNL; KöchelKHM; MGG1 (R. Federhofer-Königs)
J.F. von Schönfeld, ed.: Jb der Tonkunst von Wien und Prag (Vienna, 1796/R), 58 only
C.F. Pohl: Denkschrift aus Anlass des hundertjährigen Bestehens der Tonkünstler-Societät (Vienna, 1871), 58, 97, 100, 103, 106–7
C.F. Pohl: Joseph Haydn, i (Berlin, 1875, 2/1878/R), 117ff, 122; ii (Leipzig, 1882/R), 68, 219
C.M. Brand: Die Messen von Joseph Haydn (Würzburg, 1941/R), 202, 208–9, 321–2, 464
F.J. Grobauer and C. Krauss: Die Nachtigallen aus der Wiener Burgkapelle (Horn, 1954), 71ff, 81, 84, 196
J. Harich: Esterházy-Musikgeschichte im Spiegel der zeitgenössischen Textbücher (Eisenstadt, 1959), 32ff
D. Bartha and L. Somfai: Haydn als Opernkapellmeister (Budapest, 1960), 63, 168, 383, 386, 389
A. Valkó: 'Haydn magyarországi müködése a levéltári akták tükrében' [Haydn's activity in Hungary in the light of the Esterházy archives], ZT, viii (1960), 527–668
O. Biba: 'Die Wiener Kirchenmusik um 1783', Jb für österreichische Kulturgeschichte, i/2 (1971), 7–79
T. Straková, J. Sehnal and S. Přibáňová, eds.: Průvodce po archívních fondech Ústavu dějin hudby Moravského musea v Brně (Brno, 1971)
B.S. Brook: Thematic Catalogues in Music (Hillsdale, NY, 1972), 75, 119, 139–40, 154, 198ff, 301

OTTO BIBA

Spani, Hina [Tuñón, Higinia] (b Puán, Buenos Aires, 15 Feb 1896; d Buenos Aires, 11 July 1969). Argentine soprano. She studied in Buenos Aires and in Italy, where in 1915 she made her début at La Scala as Anna in Catalani's Loreley. Returning to Argentina, she performed at the Teatro Colón, notably as Nedda (Pagliacci) with Caruso and Ruffo. After World War I she gained prominence among the lyric sopranos in Italy, while adding to her repertory Wagner's Elsa, Elisabeth and Sieglinde and such dramatic roles in Verdi as Aida and Amelia (Ballo in maschera). She reappeared at La Scala as Margherita in Mefistofele (1924), sang in France and Spain and toured Australia with Melba and the J.C. Williamson company (1928). In the 1930s she performed in Monteverdi's L'incoronazione di Poppea and Orfeo, Rameau's Castor et Pollux and (at the Colón) Verdi's Oberto.

Spani was also a distinguished concert artist and recitalist, with a large and wide-ranging repertory of songs. Her voice had a finely concentrated dramatic power with an exquisite pianissimo, and she was among the most stylish singers of her time.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

W. Moran and R. Turró: 'Hina Spani', Record Collector, ix (1954), 81–99 [incl. discography]

J.B. STEANE

Spanish pavan. See PAVANIGLIA.

Spanke, Hans (b Meschede, 13 May 1884; d Duisburg, 30 Nov 1944). German philologist. After receiving the doctorate in Romance languages at the University of Strasbourg in 1907 and the teaching certificate for French, Latin and Greek in 1908, Spanke served as a schoolteacher in Rietburg and from 1911 in Duisburg until his death; at the same time he published numerous studies concerning medieval monophonic song. His primary interest seems to have been in searching for the origins of medieval lyric poetry in general and of certain poetic genres in particular. Although his theories in this specific area became somewhat outdated even during his lifetime, his contribution to present knowledge of medieval poetry and its sources is considerable. Probably more than anybody else he clarified in his studies on contrafacta the interdependence of lyric poetry in various western European languages. His greatest and probably longest-lasting legacy, however, is his revision of Gaston Raynaud's bibliography of Old French songs, published posthumously by Heinrich Husmann.

Spanke's research concerning other aspects of medieval song was somewhat hampered by his almost unquestioning acceptance of certain theories developed by scholars of a previous generation such as Gustav Gröber, Gaston Paris and Alfred Jeanroy, theories which were rejected or modified by many of his contemporaries. Similarly, Spanke's observations concerning the meter of the songs, both text and melody, are limited in value because of his conviction that practically all melodies of medieval monophonic song were originally performed in modal rhythm.

WRITINGS

Zwei altfranzösische Minnesanger (diss., U. of Strasbourg, 1907; extracts in Zeitschrift für französische Sprache und Literatur, xxxii (1908), 157–218, as 'Jehan's de Renti und Oede's de la Couroierie Gedichte')

Eine altfranzösische Liedersammlung: der anonyme Teil der Liederhandschriften KNPX (Halle, 1925)

'Das öftere Auftreten von Strophenformen und Melodien in der altfranzösische Lyrik', Zeitschrift für französische Sprache und Literatur, li (1927), 73–117

'Das Corpus der ältesten französischen Tanzlyrik', Zeitschrift für romanische Philologie, xlix (1929), 287–309

'Das lateinische Rondeau', Zeitschrift für französische Sprache und Literatur, liii (1929), 113–48

'Romanische und mittellateinische Formen in der Metrik von Minnesangs Frühling', Zeitschrift für romanische Philologie, xlix (1929), 191–235; repr. with notes by U. Aarburg and H. Fromm in Der deutsche Minnesang: Aufsätze zu seiner Erforschung, ed. H. Fromm, i (Darmstadt, 1961/R), 255–329

'Das Mosburger Graduale', Zeitschrift für romanische Philologie, l (1930), 582–95

'Tanzmusik in der Kirche des Mittelalters', Neuphilologische Mitteilungen, xxxi (1930), 143–70

'Der Codex Buranus als Liedbuch', ZMw, xiii (1930–31), 241–51

'St. Martial-Studien: ein Beitrag zur frühromanischen Metrik', Zeitschrift für französische Sprache und Literatur, liv (1930–31), 282–317, 385–422

'Rhythmen- und Sequenzstudien', Studi medievali, new ser., iv (1931), 286–320

'Über das Fortleben des Sequenzenform in den romanischen Sprachen', Zeitschrift für romanische Philologie, li (1931), 309–34

'Zur Geschichte der lateinischen nichtliturgischen Sequenz', Speculum, vii (1932), 367–82

'St. Martial-studien II', Zeitschrift für französische Sprache und Literatur, lvi (1932–3), 450–78

Beziehungen zwischen romanischer und mittellateinischer Lyrik mit besonderer Berücksichtigung der Metrik und Musik, Abhandlungen der Gesellschaft der Wissenschaften zu Göttingen, 3rd ser., xviii (Berlin, 1936/R)

'Zu den musikalischen Einlagen im Fauvelroman', Neuphilologische Mitteilungen, xxxvii (1936), 188–226

'Sequenz und Lai', Studi medievali, new ser., xi (1938), 12–68

'Die Kompositionskunst der Sequenzen Adams von St. Victor', Studi medievali, new ser., xiv (1941), 1–29

'Die älteste lateinische Pastorelle', Romanische Forschungen, lvi (1942), 257–65

'Ein lateinisches Liederbuch des 11. Jahrhunderts', Studi medievali, new ser., xv (1942), 111–42

ed.: G. Raynauds Bibliographie des altfranzösischen Liedes (Leiden, 1955)

'Die Metrik der Cantigas', La música de las Cantigas de Santa María del Rey Alfonso el Sabio, iii/1, ed. H. Anglès (Barcelona, 1958), 189–238

Studien zu Sequenz, Lai und Leich (Darmstadt, 1977)

HENDRIK VAN DER WERF

Spano, Donato Antonio (b ?Naples, ?*c*1585–90; d after 1609). Italian composer. He was a pupil of Macque in Naples. On 5 May 1607 he dedicated his Primo libro di madrigaletti ariosi & villanelle a quattro voci to Federico Metio, Bishop of Termoli. The book differs from Macque's similarly titled works in that Spano clearly distinguished between the two kinds of pieces: the strophic villanellas have two sections, each repeated, and the madrigaletti are non-strophic and generally repeat only the last two or three phrases of text. On 1 September 1608 in Naples Spano dedicated his Primo libro de madrigali a cinque voci to G.B. Coppola, who had been his patron for some time. These works are conservative in style, showing square rhythmic declamation and little chromaticism. One further piece was printed in an anthology (RISM 1609[16]).

KEITH A. LARSON

Spañon, Alonso (fl late 15th century and early 16th). Spanish, possibly Andalusian, theorist. His Introducción muy útil e breve de canto llano (Seville, 1504/R) is a brief, practical training manual for singers, although there is some theoretical speculation based closely on Pythagorean principles, with a more personal interpretation of the genera of scales available. It contains an effective study of solmization and is a useful source for the explanation of the various forms of notes and ligatures found in plainsong of the period, as well as of notation on a one-line staff.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

StevensonSM

F.J. León Tello: Estudios de historia de la teoria musical (Madrid,1962/R)

I. Fernández de la Cuesta: Los tratados de canto llano de Spañon, Martínez de Bizcargui y Molina (Madrid, 1978)

I. Serrano Velasco and others: Estudios sobre los teóricos españoles de canto gregoriano de los siglos XV al XVIII (Madrid, 1980)

F.J. LEÓN TELLO

Sparacciari, Giovanni Giorgio (b Macerata, early 17th century; d in or after 1630). Italian composer. In 1625 he was organist and singing teacher at S Nicola, Ravenna. In 1628 and 1630 he was organist at S Eufemia, Verona. His extant works consist of two books of psalms, Davidici concentus, for five voices and continuo (Venice, 1625), and Lyra sacrorum Davidis concentuum, for three voices and continuo, op.2 (Venice, 1628), and a book of motets, Breve corso di concetti musicali, for one to four voices and organ, op.3 (Venice, 1630). They are good examples of the monodic and concertato styles, and have copious markings indicating dynamics and tempo, which suggest a lively performance style.

□

Spark, William (b Exeter, 28 Oct 1823; d Leeds, 16 June 1897). English organist and writer. His father William Spark (1797–1865) was a lay vicar of Exeter Cathedral; two brothers were also musicians. He was a chorister at Exeter Cathedral and was articled to S.S. Wesley for five years in 1840. When Wesley moved to Leeds parish church in 1842, Spark went with him, and was soon appointed organist successively at Chapeltown and St Paul's, Leeds. Appointments at Tiverton, Daventry, and St George's, Leeds (1850), followed. From his return to Leeds he was extremely active in local music, founding the Leeds Madrigal and Motet Society, the People's Concerts, and other organizations. With Henry Smart he designed the large organ for the new town hall, opened in 1858, and was elected borough organist, a post which he held until his death. His views on organ building, tending to promote the French school, were influential. He played an organ sonata at the first Leeds Festival (1858) and played the organ at every festival from 1874 to 1886. In 1880, by way of experiment, he was asked to give two afternoon recitals during the festival. He also gave regular recitals in the town hall, with eclectic programmes. Spark took the degree of DMus at Dublin in 1861.

Spark's compositions are numerous but unimportant; his oratorio Immanuel was performed at the Leeds Festival on 17 May 1887. Of greater value today are his many writings, on a wide variety of musical topics, which give an amusing but largely accurate picture of the musical life of his time. Of special value are A Lecture on Church Music (Leeds and London, 1851), a detailed description of and apologia for the choral parish-church service of the type established at Leeds parish church in 1841; Choirs and Organs (London, 1852); A Few Words to Musical Conductors (London, 1853); Life of Henry Smart (London, 1881); Musical Memories (London, 1888), with anecdotal portraits of leading musicians; and Musical Reminiscences (London, 1892). He founded and edited the Organists' Quarterly Journal in 1869, and contributed articles to the Yorkshire Post and many other newspapers.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

F.R. Spark and J.Bennett: History of the Leeds Musical Festivals 1858–1889 (Leeds, 1892)
J.D. Brown and S.S. Stratton: British Musical Biography (Birmingham, 1897/R)
P.A. Scholes, ed.: The Mirror of Music 1844–1944: a Century of Musical Life in Britain as Reflected in the Pages of the 'Musical Times' (London, 1947/R), 588–9
N. Thistlethwaite: The Making of the Victorian Organ (Cambridge, 1990), 290–91, 387–8

NICHOLAS TEMPERLEY

Sparks. American rock group. Formed in 1972 by brothers Ron Mael (b Culver City, CA, 1948; keyboard) and Russell Mael (b Santa Monica, CA, 1953; vocals), the band broke into the pop mainstream with their single This town ain't big enough for the both of us, which reached number two in the UK charts in 1974. Musically, Sparks were one of the most distinctive bands of the day, with lead singer Russell delivering his near-soprano vocals against a driving rock guitar beat and Ron's quirky keyboard runs. Albums such as Kimono My House (Island, 1974) and Propoganda (Island, 1975) were UK top ten hits, and a string of successful singles included the sublime Amateur Hour and Never turn your back on Mother Earth. In the late 1970s they dropped their traditional rock backing and recorded the disco-influenced Number 1 Song in Heaven with producer Giorgio Moroder. More success followed with the Euro-disco of the French number one, When I'm With You (1980). Since the mid-1980s Sparks have been a cult attraction, particularly lauded in the UK. The mid-90s saw a minor commercial revival with the success in Germany of their single When do I get to sing my way.

Quirky, eccentric and camp, Sparks have proved to be one of the longest-lasting bands to emerge from glam rock. Although the line-up of the band has varied, the Mael brothers have remained at its core, pioneering synthesizer pop in the 1970s. A largely unacknowledged influence on many British pop acts, Sparks opened up the way for commercially more successful artists such as the Pet Shop Boys, Erasure, Eurythmics and Soft Cell.

DAVID BUCKLEY

Sparks, Edgar H(erndon) (b Lincoln, CA, 12 Dec 1908; d Berkeley, CA, 1 Dec 1996). American musicologist. He studied and later taught piano and theory (1932–50) at the San Francisco Conservatory of Music. Meanwhile he pursued academic studies at the University of California, Berkeley (AB 1939) and Harvard (MA 1942), returning to Berkeley to complete the doctorate with a dissertation on cantus-firmus treatment in 15th-century music under Bukofzer in 1950. From 1949 until his retirement in 1974 he taught at Berkeley (full professor 1960), concentrating on 19th-century music as well as that of the 15th and 16th centuries on which he wrote so perceptively. His main contributions to scholarship were his dissertation, published in much expanded form in 1963, and his book on Bauldeweyn. In this, and in an important paper delivered to the 1971 Josquin Festival Conference, he argued authoritatively on questions of authenticity in the Josquin canon.

WRITINGS

Cantus-Firmus Treatment in Fifteenth Century Music (diss., U. of California, Berkeley, 1950)
'The Motets of Antoine Busnois', JAMS, vi (1953), 216–26
Cantus Firmus in Mass and Motet, 1420–1530 (Berkeley, 1963/R)
'Problems of Authenticity in Josquin's Motets', Josquin des Prez: New York 1971, 345–59
The Music of Noel Bauldeweyn (New York, 1972)

PHILIP BRETT

Sparry, Franz (b Graz, 28 April 1715; d Kremsmünster, 7 April 1767). Austrian composer. After serving as a choirboy at the monastery of Admont, he studied philosophy at Salzburg University. He entered the Benedictine house of Kremsmünster in 1735, but later returned to Salzburg to study theology. While there he met and may have studied with J.E. Eberlin, the court organist, and his first compositions date from his second period there, in 1736. He finally left Salzburg in 1739 and returned to the monastery, but in 1740 the abbot, who wished to encourage his musical talent, allowed him to go to Italy to study. He went first to Naples, where he was a pupil of Leo, and heard and copied much music by other leading Neapolitans, such as Jommelli and Alessandro Scarlatti. In 1741 he left for Rome to study the a cappella style with Chiti. In 1742 he returned to Kremsmünster, after a disastrous journey complicated by the War of Austrian Succession (northern Italy was overrun with Spanish troops), during which he lost most of his transcriptions of Italian music in a violent storm in the Adriatic. He spent the rest of his life in the monastery, where he was director of music from 1747 until his death.

The bulk of Sparry's output consists of Latin oratorios and incidental music for the annual school plays at Kremsmünster and Lambach, but he also wrote many German sacred arias and a good deal of liturgical music (now in A-KR, LA). His attempts to imitate the current Italian style in his Latin oratorios are rather colourless, for he lacked the appropriate melodic gift. But his Italian training stood him in good stead in German arias, of which he wrote about 50; they often have a lyrical quality, rhythmic flexibility and harmonic variety not to be found in similar works by his more thoroughly Teutonic contemporaries. (A. Kellner: Musikgeschichte des Stiftes Kremsmünster, Kassel, 1956)

ELIZABETH ROCHE

Spasm band. An ensemble similar to a WASHBOARD BAND, formed by African Americans around New Orleans in the early 20th century. Its music was a model for jug bands and skiffle bands during the folksong revival in the 1950s and 60s.

Spasov, Bozhidar [Bojidar] (b Sofia, 13 Aug 1949). Bulgarian composer and musicologist. At the Moscow Conservatory, from 1970 to 1976, he studied with Sidel'nikov (composition), Denisov (orchestration) and Kholopov (musicology). Thereafter he taught at the Sofia Academy of Music and at the Institute for Music Education in Plovdiv, while also holding a research post at the Institute of Musicology in Sofia. In 1990 he moved to Germany, where he has since worked as a freelance composer and as a lecturer at the Folkwang Hochschule in Essen. His works have been performed at numerous European festivals, including the Dresden and Penderecki festivals, the Wittener Tage für neue Kammermusik, the 1995 ISCM World Music Days in Essen and at the Darmstadt summer school. He won third prize in the Concours international de musique sacrée in Fribourg in 1987, and the Rome Valentino Bucchi prize (for the Violin Concerto) in 1988.

At the centre of his output are instrumental and vocal-instrumental works which emphasize solo performance. The music is characterized by unusual sound-combinations and playing techniques, producing a fine texture of varied melodic lines which become intertwined. His works of the 1970s are serially organized, while his composition from the 1980s bears a modal stamp. During the 1990s Spasov developed a mobile, flowing manner of structural organization, which rests on the simultaneity of different rhythmic layers. This received wider expression in the electronic compositions of the late 1990s.

WORKS
(selective list)

Stage: Omagyosaniyat [The Bewitched] (chbr op, 1, Spasov, after Malleus maleficarum, Carmina burana, Des Knaben Wunderhorn and S. Brant: Das Narren Schyff), 1975, Moscow Conservatory, June 1975; Printsesata i svinaryat [The Princess and the Swineherd] (chbr op, Spasov, after H.C. Andersen), 1980, unperf.

Inst: Conc., fl, cel, 13 str, 1976; Sinfonie, large orch, 1978; 3 x 3, vc, perc, pf, hpd, org, 1980; Konzertmusik, wind, 2 pf, perc, 1982; Weite (Dialog I), 2 inst ens, 1983; Choralfantasie über Herzlich tut mich verlangen, org, 1986; De profundis (Dialog II), chbr ens, 1988; Vn Conc., 1988; 3 Stücke, org, 1991; Wasserfälle, pf, 1991; Parabel 12, chbr ens, 1992; Kreisel-Lauf I and II, perc, org, 1993; Parabel 8, chbr ens, 1993; Ob Conc. 'Feux follets', ob, chbr ens, 1994–5

Vocal: Romantični pesni, S, pf, 1981; Glagolicheski [Romantic songs] kontsert [Glagolitic Conc.] (13th century), Mez, hpd, 13 str, 1984; The Beginning, Mez, chbr ens, 1987; J.D. Songs, Mez, vc, 1989; Calliope, Mez, chit, 1995; Otletela peperuda [The Flight of the Butterfly], Mez, fl, hpd, 1997

El-ac: Sandglass II–XX, trbn, kbd, live elecs, 1995–6; Asylphonia II, ein Spiel für Computerklänge und -bilder, 1994–5

Principal publishers: Peters, Tonus, Dohr

Principal recording companies: Aulos, Signum, Gega New

BIBLIOGRAPHY

E. Schmidt: 'Vielfalt der Formen und Sujets', Oper heute, iv (1981), 141–78

A. Petrova: 'Postmoderni tendentsii v Bozhidar Spasov i Stefan Dragostinov v kraya na 70–te godini' [Postmodern tendencies in the works of Spasov and Dragostinov at the end of the 1970s], Balgarsko muzikoznaniye, xvii/2 (1993), 67–80

MARIYA KOSTAKEVA

Spasov, Ivan (b Sofia, 17 Jan 1934; d Plovdiv, 22 Dec 1996). Bulgarian composer and conductor. He was born into a family of professional musicians. After graduating from the composition and conducting classes of Pancho Vladigerov at the Bulgarian State Music Academy, Spasov continued his studies in Warsaw as a student of Kazimierz Sikorski and Stanisław Wisłocki. At the end of his studies Spasov conducted the Warsaw National PO in the premières of his own works.

On his return to Bulgaria in 1962 Spasov was appointed conductor of the Plovdiv State PO and began actively to promote modern music. He occupied this position for six seasons before being dismissed for introducing modernist ideas and for 'not acknowledging the authority of the Party'. In 1964 he founded the Plovdivska Musikalna Mladezh ('Plodiv musical youth') society, at whose concerts the works of Lutosławski, Penderecki, Baird, Milhaud and others were performed in Bulgaria for the first time. In the same year he became a member of the Union of Bulgarian Composers and was appointed professor of conducting and score reading at the National Academy for Music and Dance, Plovdiv. From 1970 to 1991 Spasov conducted the symphony orchestra in the neighbouring town of Pazardzhik. From November 1989 until his untimely death he was director of the Plovdiv Academy.

In 1964 Spasov composed music for the film Kasche nebe za trima ('Morsel of the Sky for Three'). This film score was the first experiment in aleatory music in Bulgaria and the first to employ graphic notation; it formed the basis of his Epizodi za chetiri grupi tembri ('Episodes for Four Timbral Groups'), which was heard in the West for the first time at Darmstadt in 1968. Spasov also experimented with instrumental theatre. Dvizheniya ('Movements', 1967) for 12 string instruments was the first experiment with musical theatre in Bulgaria. In the last episode, for example, the performers leave the stage one by one, as in Haydn's 'Farewell' Symphony.

At a time when most European composers were following other trends in music, Spasov turned to folk music. His professed aim was to unite folk elements with the modern idiom, believing that aleatory techniques found their ideal counterpart in the Bulgarian bezmenzurni or unmeasured folksongs. This experimentation began with Dvizheniya, where in the third episode 'Improvisation' each performer improvises on a given model, one of which is an asymmetrical rhythm derived from traditional folk dance.

In the early 1970s Spasov emerged as Bulgaria's foremost composer of choral music. (He considered the human voice the ultimate instrument for musical expression.) The term neo-folk was coined to describe his choral style which incorporated folk elements such as the use of ison, bourdon (a feature that became the hallmark of his style), diaphonia, tremolo effects, measureless musical phrasing and other types of vocal ornamentation. His development and application of folk techniques was not limited to choral music; his Cello Concerto (1974), for example, calls upon the soloist and orchestra to imitate a folk-derived vocal style. Simultaneously, Spasov developed a parallel line of compositional thought, one of deep spiritual and transcendental reflection in which folk elements are conspicuously absent, as evidenced in Canti lamentosi (1979), Canti dei morti (1983), Pieta for 12 cellos (1991), Pesni na edna dusha, otlitashta kam Raia ('Songs of a Soul Flying to Paradise', 1991) and the Mass of 1993. This aspect of his musical personality was further heightened by the personal tragedy of the death of his only daughter in 1991.

WORKS
(selective list)

Orch: Sym no.1, 1962; Epizodi za 4 grupi tembri [Episodes for 4 Timbral Groups], 1965; Sabor [Gathering], 22 wind, 1969; Vc Conc. no.1, 1974; Sym. no.2, 1975; Pf Conc., 1976; Sym. no.3, 1978; Vn Conc., 1980; Vc Conc. no.2, 1984; Adagietto, 1989; Conc. for Orch 'In memory of Konstantin Iliev', 1989; Osveshtavane ha nebesniya dom [Dedication of the Heavenly House], chbr orch, 1994

Choral: Chovechestvoto-20 vek [20th Century Mankind] (orat, G. Apollinaire, I. Galchinsky, P. Neruda, C. Sandburg, G. Strumsky), S, B, chorus, orch, 1987; Balgarski Pasion, S, Bar, evangelist, chorus, orch, 1990; Sveta balgarska liturgiya [Bulgarian Divine Liturgy], female chorus, 1991; Mass, chorus, 1993; Velikdenska muzika za stradaniyata, smartta i vazkresenieto na Isus [Paschal Music for the Passion, Death and Resurrection of Jesus], S, Bar, evangelist, female chorus, org, 1994; Miserere, solo vv, female chorus, orch, 1994; Otche Nash [Our Father], chorus, orch, 1995

Other vocal: Mekhmtiu, female vv, 1972; Monolozi za edna samotna zhena [Monologues for a Lonely Woman] (G. Mistral), S, 12 female vv, tape, chbr orch, 1975; Rado, biala Rado [Rado, White Rado], female vv, 1977; Zhena razdel nitsa [The Dividing Woman], female vv, 1977; Canti lamentosi (O. Khayyam), 2S, chbr orch, 1979; Sym. no.4 (I. Pejcev), Bar, orch, 1981; Canti dei morti (ancient Egyptian funeral texts), S, orch, 1983; 23 strofi po Emili Dikinsan, S, chbr ens, 1989; Pesni na edna dusha, otlitashta kam Raia [Songs of a Soul Flying to Paradise] (E. Dickinson), S, tape, orch, 1991

Chbr: Sonata, cl, pf, 1959; Sonata, va, pf, 1960; Dvizheniya [Movements], 12 str, 1967; Music for Friends, str qt, jazz qt, 1967; Str Qt, 1972; Ww Qnt no.1, 1977; Koordinati na zvuka i dvizhenieto [Coordinates of Sound and Motion], perc, 1978; Sonata quazi variazione, vc, pf, 1979; Pf Trio, 1981; Pieta, 12 vc, 1991; Fragmenti, fl, gui, vc, 1995–6; Malka piesa vav folkloren stil [Little Pieces in Folk Style], 1995–6; Boris i Klod [Boris and Claude], sentimental games, ob, pf, 1997

Kbd: Izkustvoto na seriyata [The Art of Series], 3 vols., pf/2 pf, 1970; Pf Sonata no.1, 1985; Pf Sonata no.2, 1987; Pf Sonata no.3, 1987; 24 Studies, pf, 1990–91; Satvorenie, smart i premirenie versia [Creation, Death and Resignation], 2 pf/2 org, 1992; 24 Bagatelles, pf, 1995; 6 Portreta na edin obraz [6 Portraits of 1 Image], org/pf, 1995

Principal publisher: Muzika

WRITINGS

Nebesnosinyo utro, pladne i pat sled pladne [Sky blue morning, noon and the path after noon] (Sofia, 1989)

Zhivotat mi: opit za rekonstuktsiya na edna pazpilyana mozayka [My life: an attempt at a reconstruction of a scattered mosaic] (Plovdiv, 1993)

Simfoniite na Konstantin Iliev [The symphonies of Iliev] (Sofia, 1995)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Angelov: Ivan Spasov: 60 stapki po patia kam khrama [Spasov: 60 steps on the way to the temple] (Plovdiv, 1994)

ANNA LEVY, GREGORY MYERS

Spătărelu, Vasile (b Tâmna, Mehedinţi district, 21 April 1938). Romanian composer. After attending the Music Lyceum in Timişoara (1955–7) he studied composition with Vieru at the Bucharest Academy, graduating in 1963. In 1964 he became a teacher at the Academy of Arts in Iaşi. Changes in stylistic fashion have not greatly affected Spătărelu's compositional style. His music, often polyphonic and with a basis in modality, makes restrained use of the forms of Romanian popular song. Though instrumental music is his preferred genre, his vocal music is notable for its wide expressive range.

WORKS
(selective list)

Op: Preţioasele ridicole (Les Précieuses ridicles) (1, after J.B.P. Molière), 1984

Inst: Sonată-Baladă, pf, 1960; Simfonieta, orch, 1963; Sonata, vn, 1963; 4 contraste, vn, pf, 1969; Dumbrava minunată [The Enchanted Forest], 7 scenes, orch, 1973; Str Qt no.2, 1974; Meditaţii la Enescu, pf, 1981; Str Qt no.3, 1982; Sonanţe, cl, chbr orch, 1984; Sonanţe, 3 pieces, cl, 1984

Vocal: Inscripţie (T. Arghezi), Mez, female chorus, hp, 4 trbn, 1969; Românie, ţară de vis [Romania, Land of Dreams] (cant.), Bar, chorus, orch, 1974; Jertfa [The Sacrifice] (cant., C. Sturzu), 1983; 3 lieduri (M. Dragomir, Arghezi, A. Blandiana), 1987; Poema finală (G. Bacovia), 1992

BIBLIOGRAPHY

V. Cosma: Muzicieni români (Bucharest, 1970)
G.W. Berger: Muzica simfonică contemporană, v (Bucharest, 1977)

OCTAVIAN COSMA

Spataro [Spadario], Giovanni [Spatarius, Joannes] (b Bologna, ?26 Oct 1458; d Bologna, 17 Jan 1541). Italian theorist, composer and choirmaster. His name comes from his family's occupation: his grandfather was a merchant who dealt in swords. He mentions his age in two letters, which yield a birth year of 1458 or 1459; since he is not listed in the baptismal records, which go back to 1 January 1459, the year is probably 1458, and the day possibly 26 October, the date of two of his wills. Spataro never attended university and did not take holy orders; he may have continued his family's profession until late in his life (he bequeathed a forge to his 'compare').

During the 1490s Spataro was on friendly terms with younger members of the Bentivoglio family: Antongaleazzo received the dedication of his Honesta defensio, one of his lost treatises was written for Hermes, as well as two masses on pears (a pear appears on Hermes's arms). Only in 1505 did Spataro become a singer at S Petronio, where he served sporadically until appointed 'maestro de canto' in 1512, a post he retained until his death. He was buried in a side chapel, but his tomb (designed by himself) no longer survives.

Spataro owes his musical formation to his revered teacher Bartolomeus Ramis de Pareia, whose disciple he became in the 1470s, continuing to 1484, when Ramis left Bologna. He carried on not only his master's teachings but his pugnacious attitude, crossing figurative swords in print with Nicolò Burzio and Franchinus Gaffurius for their criticism of Ramis. Though Gaffurius called Spataro 'illiterate' since he did not write in Latin, he conceded that his musical understanding was acute.

With the exception of the treatise on sesquialtera, published with Pietro Aaron's help, Spataro went into print only when responding to published works: Nicolò Burzio's Musices opusculum (1487) attacking Ramis, Gaffurius's Apologia ... adversus Joannem Spatarium (1520), Epistula prima in solutiones obiectorum Io. Vaginarii Bononien. (1521) and Epistula secunda apologetica (1521). Spataro and Gaffurius also corresponded privately over a period of at least 26 years; all these letters (including 18 criticizing Gaffurius's De harmonia musicorum instrumentorum opus of 1518) are lost, but were partially incorporated in the Dilucide et probatissime demonstratione and Errori de Franchino Gafurio. Also lost are a treatise responding to Gaffurius's annotations of Ramis's Musica practica, treatises on mensural music, proportions, counterpoint and a 200-page critique of Aaron's treatise on modes, which Spataro deemed 'without order and truth'. 53 letters, mainly to Aaron and Giovanni Del Lago, survive (ed. in Blackburn, Lowinsky and Miller).

Spataro valued reason above authority in support of his new ideas. He distinguished sharply between rules for beginners and theory for learned and speculative musicians; he claimed that while the rules of composition could be taught, gifted musicians were born, not made. His investigations of the tonal system led him to contemplate notes such as E♯ and B♯ and his discussion of Adrian Willaert's famous 'duo' is our main source of knowledge of contemporary thought about this enigmatic composition. Although recognizing that Willaert intended Aristoxenean temperament, Spataro criticized it in Pythagorean terms. These and similar musical problems were avidly discussed by Spataro's group of 'musici bolognesi' and their opinions are reported in various letters.

Spataro also had a keen interest in puzzles of mensural notation, obscure canons and chromatic music. One complete composition and fragments of others survive in his correspondence, but many others, referred to in his letters, are lost. Some motets (identified through his letters) are preserved in the choirbooks belonging to S Petronio, partly copied by him; an unknown number of the anonymous compositions are probably his as well. Except for certain experimental pieces, his music is competent but not very interesting; some of the more adventurous passages were eliminated when he copied the pieces into his choirbooks. He and Aaron frequently exchanged compositions, which they criticized in detail. Aaron found fault with Spataro's dissonance treatment, which allowed augmented octaves and diminished 5ths; Spataro appealed to the judgment of the ear, claiming that the 'silence' between beats (i.e. suspensions) mitigated the dissonance. Another idiosyncratic theory was his insistence that notes under sesquialtera are perfect, without regard to the underlying mensuration. His Tractato di musica expounds this theory at length but suffers from repetition and lack of focus. A related theory, accepted by a small number of theorists, is that breves are equal in perfect and imperfect time; mensuration signs can therefore be used to indicate proportions.

Spataro used a 'cartella' as an aid to composition; he described two sizes but not the material, nor how he wrote the music down; he may have used score format, but it is more likely that the voices were approximately aligned or even in separate fields. When he criticized Aaron's compositions for their contrapuntal infelicities (such as parallel 5ths), he did not score them but compared pairs of voices; the faults were noted without regard to the contrapuntal context, and thus were more stringently censured than warranted.

Spataro's sometimes irascible temperament led to breaks in relations with his correspondents, but he was always ready to resume discussion for the sake of furthering 'our delectable harmonic science ... first to learn, second to teach, and third to correct my faults, if I have erred in any way in my works' (letter to Aaron, 1532). The questions he raised and his probing answers reveal him to be one of the most interesting figures in Italian theory of the 16th century.

WORKS

Ave gratia plena, 4vv, I-Rvat, ed. Blackburn, Lowinsky and Miller; Bsp
Gaude Maria virgo, 4vv, Bsp A.45
Hec virgo est preclarum vas, 4vv and 5vv, Bsp, ed. K. Jeppesen, Italia sacra musica (Copenhagen, 1962)
In illo tempore missus est angelus Gabriel, 4vv, Md (2266), ed. in AMI, i (1897)
Nativitas tua, 5vv and 6vv, Bsp A.45
Tenebre facte sunt, 1508[3], ed. Jeppesen 1935
Virgo prudentissima, 4vv, Bsp, ed. K. Jeppesen, Italia sacra musica (Copenhagen, 1962)

Lost: Ave Maria, 6vv; Cardinei cetus (for Leo X, probably composed 1515), Deprecor te; Magnificats (one sent to Ercole d'Este in 1482); Missa Da pacem; Missa de la pera (for Hermes Bentivoglio); Missa de la tradictora; Missa O salutaris hostia (composed 1533); Missa Pera pera (for Hermes Bentivoglio); Missa de Sancta Maria Magdalena; Missa Tue voluntatis; Nativitas gloriose; Pater noster, 5vv (composed 1529); Salve regina (composed *c*1493); Ubi opus est facto

MSS copied by Spataro: I-Bsp A.XXIX; A.XXXI; A.XXXVIII; A.LXV; A.LXVI; portions of Bc Q18

WRITINGS

Honesta defensio in Nicolai Burtii parmensis opusculum (Bologna, 1491/*R*1967 in AntMI, Monumenta bononiensia, ii/1)
Utile e breve regule di canto (Cod. Lond., British Museum, Add.4920), MS dated 1510/*R*1962 in AntMI, Monumenta bononiensia, ii/2; also ed. G. Vecchi, Quadrivium, v (1962)
Dilucide et probatissime demonstratione de Maestro Zoanne Spatario musico bolognese, contra certe frivole et vane excusatione, da Franchino Gafurio (maestro de li errori) in luce aducte (Bologna, 1521/*R*1925 with Ger. trans.)
Errori de Franchino Gafurio da Lodi, da Maestro Ioanne Spatario, musico bolognese, in sua deffensione, et del suo preceptore maestro Bartolomeo Ramis hispano subtilemente demonstrati (Bologna, 1521)
Tractato di musica di Gioanni Spataro musico bolognese nel quale si tracta de la perfectione da la sesqualtera producta in la musica mensurata exercitate (Venice, 1531/*R*1970 in BMB, section 2, xiv)
53 letters in A-Wn S.m.4380; F-Pn Ital.1110, I-Bc Lettere di Spataro, Rvat Vat.Lat.5318 (ed. in Blackburn, Lowinsky and Miller)

LOST WRITINGS

Appostille (response to Gaffurius's criticisms of Ramis)
Epistole (correspondence with Gaffurius)
Tractato de canto mensurato
Tractato de contrapuncto
Tractato delle proportioni
200-page critique of Aaron's Trattato della natura et cognitione di tutti gli tuoni

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. Frati: 'Per la storia della musica in Bologna dal secolo XV al XVI', RMI, xxiv (1917), 449–78
K. Jeppesen: Introductionto Die mehrstimmige italienische Laude um 1500 (Copenhagen and Leipzig, 1935/R)
K. Jeppesen: 'Eine musiktheoretische Korrespondenz des früheren Cinquecento', AcM, xiii (1941), 3–39

E.E. Lowinsky: 'Adrian Willaert's Chromatic "Duo" Re-Examined', TVNM, xviii (1956–9), 1–36; repr. in Music in the Culture of the Renaissance, ed. B.J. Blackburn (Chicago, 1989), 541–64
G. Vecchi: 'Le Utile e brevi regule di canto di Giovanni Spataro', Quadrivium, v (1962), 5–68
O. Mischiati: 'Un'inedita testimonianza su Bartolomeo Ramis de Pareia', FAM, xiii (1966), 64–6
G. Gaspari: Musica e musicisti a Bologna (Bologna, 1969) [repr. of collected writings]
F. Tirro: Giovanni Spataro's Choirbooks in the Archive of San Petronio in Bologna (diss., U. of Chicago, 1974)
F. Tirro: 'La stesura del testo nei manoscritti di Giovanni Spataro', RIM, xv (1980), 31–70
C.V. Palisca: Humanism in Italian Renaissance Musical Thought (New Haven, CT, 1985), esp. 232–5
F. Tirro: Renaissance Musical Sources in the Archive of San Petronio in Bologna, i: Giovanni Spataro's Choirbooks (Neuhausen, 1986)
O. Gambassi: La cappella musicale di S. Petronio: maestri, organisti, cantori e strumentisti dal 1436 al 1920 (Florence, 1987)
S.F. Weiss: 'Bologna Q 18: Some Reflections on Content and Context', JAMS, xli (1988), 63–101
B.J. Blackburn, E.E. Lowinsky and C.A. Miller, eds.: A Correspondence of Renaissance Musicians (Oxford, 1991)
A.M. Busse Berger: Mensuration and Proportion Signs: Origins and Evolution (Oxford, 1993)
J.A. Owens: Composers at Work: The Craft of Musical Composition, 1450–1600 (New York, 1996)

BONNIE J. BLACKBURN

Späth. See FREIBURGER ORGELBAU.

Späth, Franz Jakob (b Regensburg, 1714; d Regensburg, 23 July 1786). German organ builder and piano manufacturer. He was the son of the Regensburg organ builder Johann Jakob Späth (1672–1760), who in 1727 provided an organ for the new parish church there. Franz Jakob Späth built an organ in 1750 for the Oswaldkirche, Regensburg, and one in 1758 for the Dreieinigheitskirche; but he became best known as an outstanding piano manufacturer (being referred to as such by Mozart in 1777, by J.N. Forkel in 1782, and by C.F.D. Schubart in 1784). He was particularly well known for his invention of the TANGENT PIANO, although all surviving signed and dated Tangent pianos seem to have been built after Späth's death by his son-in-law, C.F. Schmahl. One instrument, in the Shrine to Music Museum, Vermillion, South Dakota, bears the inscription 'Späth und Schmahl, Regensburg 178[4]'. In partnership with Schmahl, Späth had a firm with a considerable reputation.

For a list of surviving instruments, see SCHMAHL.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

BoalchM; ClinkscaleMP; MGG1 ('Späth und Schmahl', A. Scharnagl; also 'Schubart', R. Hammerstein)
H. Herrmann: Die Regensburger Klavierbauer Späth und Schmahl und ihr Tangentenflügel (Erlangen, 1928)

HANS KLOTZ/SABINE K. KLAUS

Spazier, Johann Gottlieb Karl (b Berlin, 20 April 1761; d Leipzig, 19 Jan 1805). German writer and composer. As a boy soprano in Berlin he appeared frequently as a soloist in churches and concerts, although he had no formal music training. Later he spent one season as singer and accompanist at the French opera house of Prince Heinrich of Prussia in Rheinsberg, where he composed his first lied collection (1781). He entered Halle University, where he studied philosophy and theology, before teaching briefly in Dessau. Accompanying a nobleman pupil he went to Göttingen (1785) and again Halle (1786) before taking up a position in the philosophy faculty of Giessen University. Ideological conflicts with his colleagues soon compelled his resignation, however, and he shortly thereafter became court councillor and professor in Neuwied am Rhein (about 1790). By 1792 he had returned to Berlin, where he contributed articles to music periodicals and edited the short-lived Berlinische musikalische Zeitung (1793–4). In 1796 he returned to Dessau to teach, but moved to Leipzig in 1800 and devoted himself to writing. In 1801 he founded the cultural journal Zeitung für die elegante Welt in which he championed the cause of the lied (considered by many of his contemporaries to be a musical genre of little value).

In music Spazier is probably more important as a writer than as a composer, although his lieder seem to have been quite popular during his lifetime. His first collection was in a style similar to that of J.A.P. Schulz, with whom he came in contact in Rheinsberg; the galant melodies were praised by Friedlaender for their expressive powers. Several other lied collections and a cantata by him are extant. He edited Dittersdorf's autobiography and wrote commentaries on the music of Gluck and Grétry.

WORKS

Collections: Lieder und Gesänge am Klavier (Halle, 1781); 20 vierstimmige Chöre im philanthropinischen Betsale gesungen (Leipzig, 1785) [no.20 by Gluck]; Lieder einsamer und gesellschaftlicher Freude (Vienna, 1786); Einfacher Clavierlieder, i–ii (Berlin, 1790–94); Lieder und andere Gesänge für Freunde einfacher Natur (Neuwied and Leipzig, 1792, 2/1797); Lieder am Klavier (Leipzig, 1799); Lieder und Oden von Voss (Düsseldorf, 1851)
Other works: Rosaliens Klagen (cant.) (Hamburg and Leipzig, 1785); Melodien zu Hartungs Liedersammlung, ed. Spazier (Berlin, 1794), ?lost [incl. 47 by Spazier]; many lieder and pf pieces in contemporary anthologies and periodicals Lost works incl. cants. stage music and pf sonatas listed in GerberNL

WRITINGS

Freymüthige Gedanken über die Gottesverehrung der Protestanten (Gotha, 1788)
Einige Gedanken, Wünsche und Vorschläge zur Einführung eines musikalischen Gesangbuches (Neuwied, 1790)
Carl Pilger's Roman seines Lebens von ihm selbst geschrieben: ein Beitrag zur Erziehung und Kultur des Menschen (Berlin, 1792–6)
Etwas über Gluckische Musik und die Oper Iphigenia in Tauris auf dem Berlinischen Nationaltheater (Berlin, 1795)
Abhandlung über die Wasserorgeln der Alten (Berlin, 1795) [trans. of A.L.F. Meister's unpubd Latin diss., *c*1750–80]
Gretry's Versuche über die Musik: im Auszuge und mit kritischen und historischen Zusätzen (Leipzig, 1800) [trans. of A.-E.-M. Grétry: Mémoires, ou Essais sur la musique, Paris, 1789, 2/1797/R] ed.: Karl von Dittersdorfs Lebensbeschreibung, seinem Sohne in die Feder diktirt (Leipzig, 1801) Articles and reviews in Deutsches Museum, Musikalisches Wochenblatt, Berlinische musikalische Zeitung, AMZ

BIBLIOGRAPHY

GerberL; GerberNL
C. von Ledebur: Tonkünstler-Lexicon Berlin's (Berlin, 1861/R)
M. Friedlaender: Das deutsche Lied im 18. Jahrhundert (Stuttgart and Berlin, 1902/R)
E. Wege: 'Der Liederkomponist und Musikschriftsteller Johann Gottlieb Karl Spazier', BMw, v (1963), 113–17

RAYMOND A. BARR

Speach, Bernadette (b Syracuse, NY, 1 Jan 1948). American composer. She was a nun of the sisters of St Joseph of Corondelet from 1966 to 1977. After graduating from the College of St Rose, she taught music at parochial schools. She later studied at Columbia University with Roussakis and in Siena with Donatoni (1976). After leaving holy orders she studied with Morton Feldman and Lejaren Hiller at SUNY, Buffalo (DMA 1983). In 1984 she married Jeffrey Schanzer, a composer and jazz musician, and moved to New York. She has served as an arts administrator at both the Composers Forum (director, 1988–90; president of the board, 1990–94) and the Kitchen (director, 1995–).

Speach's music can be described as a smooth fusion of two disparate influences, Feldman and jazz. From the former she inherited a tendency towards sensitively balanced, non-contrasting sonorities; from the latter she took a frequent use of improvisation, often limited to specific pitch fields and quietly hidden, but sometimes overt and based in the vernacular. Telepathy Suite (1988) and Baobab 4 (1994) are grounded in a subdued but rhythmic jazz idiom. Her string quartet, Les ondes pour quatre (1988), relies on musical images that recur without literal repetition. Two of Speach's finest works are the piano concertos Within (1990) and Parallel Windows – Unframed (1995).

WORKS

Vocal († - collab. T. Davis): Telepathy Suite, spkr, chbr ens, 1988†; A Set of Five, chbr ens, 1989†; It Came to me in a Dream (T.S. Eliot: Ash Wednesday), Bar, 2 fl, gui, pf, 1990; Baobab 4, spkr, 3 female vv, fl, cl, a sax, trbn, balafon, 2 pf, gui, elec gui, db, 1994†; Woman Without Adornment, spkr, pf, 1994†, rev. chbr ens, 1995

Improvisations (pf, gui): Two in the Morning, 1986; Phill's Phault, 1988; Blue, 1989; 3 1/2, 1990; It's Your Turn, 1990; Sound Crowds, 1990; at the same time, 1993

Other inst: Shattered Glass, perc, 1986; Spero, gui, 1986; Les ondes pour quatre, str qt, 1988; Boppin' Again, chbr jazz ens, 1989, rev. 1991; Bone, Burned, Abandon/Creak (dance score), gui, pf, 1990; Within, pf, orch, 1990; Almost Tadzio/Overbite Alarm (dance score), gui, pf, 1991; Chosen Voices, prep gui, toy pf, 1991; Trio des trois: I, vn, perc, pf, 1991; II, fl, va, hp, 1991; III, va, vc, pf, 1992; Avanzando, b cl, mar, vib, glock, pf, 1993; Complaints, spkr, fl, db, vib, perc, 1993; Walking Again, fl, db, perc, pf, 1993; Parallel Windows – Unframed, pf, orch, 1995

Pf: Inside Out, 1987; a page upon which . . . , 1989; and so it is . . . 1990; Resoundings, 4 hands, 1990; Walking Again, 1992; Angels in the Snow, 1993; When it Rains, Llueve, 1995

El-ac: 9/8/89, digital sampler, tape, 1990

KYLE GANN

Speaker key [register key]. A key controlling a very small hole in the tube wall of a woodwind instrument which, when opened, assists the player to sound the second and higher registers. In a reed-energized instrument under satisfactory playing conditions there exists a state of vibrational cooperation between the reed and the resonating air column. The air flow through the vibrating reed contains a set of harmonically related frequency components, and normally several of these are close in frequency to the natural vibration modes of the air column. When the performer plays in the first register, the reed vibration frequency is near that of the first air column mode. Opening a speaker key inhibits this regime of cooperation by changing the frequency of the first mode and reducing its strength; it is then more favourable for the reed to vibrate at a frequency close to that of the second mode. In the oboe and saxophone two, sometimes three, 'speakers' are provided, each used with a particular group of tone holes; since the second mode frequency of these conical-bore instruments is twice the first mode frequency, the second register notes are an otave above those obtained in the first register with the same fingering. The 'half-hole' mechanism of the oboe may also be regarded as a 'speaker'. In the clarinet a single register key is usually found sufficient; in this case, the second mode of the cylindrical air column has a frequency three times that of the first and the fingering repeats at the interval of a 12th.

See also OVERBLOWING.

PHILIP BATE/MURRAY CAMPBELL

Speaking length. The nominal length of the resonating AIR COLUMN in a wind instrument. In the case of an open organ flue pipe, the speaking length is commonly taken to be the distance between the centre of the mouth and the upper open end. In the simplest acoustical view of such a pipe, each of these points is taken to be a pressure node; if this were indeed the case, the speaking length would be equal to half the wavelength of the sounded note. In reality, the sounded note has a lower pitch and a longer wavelength than predicted by this simplified model. The 'effective length' of the pipe is defined as half the wavelength of the sound actually generated in the pipe, and is thus greater than the speaking length.

Similar considerations apply to the flute, and to conical-bore instruments such as the oboe; in these cases, the speaking length is taken from the centre of the embouchure hole or the reed tip to the centre of the highest open finger-hole. For stopped organ flue pipes, and for the clarinet and other cylindrical reed instruments, the simplified theory predicts that the speaking length of the tube should equal a quarter of the wavelength of the note sounded without overblowing, so the effective length is defined as a quarter of the wavelength of the note actually sounded. In all cases the effective length is longer than the speaking length.

The discrepancy between speaking and effective lengths in the relatively simple case of the organ flue pipe can be explained in terms of an END CORRECTION at each open end. In the more complex cases of woodwind instruments many other factors influence the effective length, including the size and positioning of open and closed finger-holes, irregularities in the bore, the mechanical properties of reeds, and the degree of lip cover in flutes. Some authors define speaking length to include end corrections; it is then synonymous with effective length.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

N.H. Fletcher and T.D. Rossing: The Physics of Musical Instruments (New York, 1991, 2/1998)

C.J. Nederveen: Acoustical Aspects of Woodwind Instruments (Amsterdam, 1969/R)

MURRAY CAMPBELL

Speaking stop. In conventional modern organ terminology (since at least Audsley's The Art of Organ Building, 1905), speaking stops are those that produce a musical sound when operated, as opposed to the stop-knobs, levers, pedals etc. which operate couplers (see COUPLER), wind-valves, ventils, registration aids, tremulants or semi-musical effects ('toy stops') such as bells (Zimbelsternen), imitations of birdsong (Vogelgesang) or drum effects (see ORGAN STOP). The term 'speaking pipes' was used in 1728 in an advertisement for the organ at St Mary Redcliffe, Bristol; early 19th-century English sources are careful to account for all the speaking pipes in an organ, and they ignore non-speaking 'dummy' pipes in case fronts. Hopkins and Rimbault (The Organ, 1855) distinguished between 'sounding stops' and 'accessory stops'.

PETER WILLIAMS, MARTIN RENSHAW

Speaks, Oley (b Canal Winchester, nr Columbus, OH, 28 June 1874; d New York, 27 Aug 1948). American composer and baritone. His father died when Speaks was ten, and the family moved shortly afterwards to Columbus. Speaks learnt piano as a boy, and as early as 1891 his fine baritone singing attracted attention in the Columbus Dispatch. During the 1890s he held positions as soloist at various churches, and also began writing songs, which were soon published. In 1898 he moved to New York and became a soloist first at the Universalist Church of the Divine Paternity and then at St Thomas's Episcopal Church. In 1906 he returned to Columbus, but his growing success as a songwriter enabled him to return after several years to New York. His songs (of which 119 were published by G. Schirmer and 31 by the John Church Company, Cincinnati) are almost all settings for voice and piano of sacred or sentimental texts. Well crafted for the voice, melodious, rhythmically uncomplicated and simply harmonized, they continue the tradition of the 19th-century parlour ballad. Intended for amateurs, their audience was chiefly among the middle-class population of small towns. Speaks achieved enormous success with his songs, of which the most famous was On the Road to Mandalay (1907); several sold well over a million copies.

WORKS

Over 250 songs, incl. On the Road to Mandalay (R. Kipling) (1907); Morning (F.L. Stanton) (1910); To you (M.B. Gannon) (1910); When the Boys Come Home (J. Hay) (1911); Sylvia (C. Scollard) (1914); Hark, Hark, my Soul (F.W. Faber) (1923); The Prayer Perfect (J.W. Riley) (1930); partsongs and anthems

BIBLIOGRAPHY

DAB (V. Gotwals); GroveA
The Oley Speaks Music Library (Canal Winchester, OH, 1949) [pamphlet listing pubd songs]
D. Ewen: Popular American Composers (New York, 1962)

PAUL C. ECHOLS

Spech, János (b Pozsony [now Bratislava], 18 Dec 1767; d Oberlimbach, 24 Nov 1836). Hungarian composer. He studied first in Pozsony, a lively centre of music, where operas were staged at a theatre which opened in 1776; weekly performances were given by Count Erdödy's company from 1787 – including works by Haydn, Mozart and Paisiello. These surroundings must have encouraged Spech's musical development, although in 1792 he became a clerk in Buda. He continued his music studies, however, completing them with Haydn in Vienna in 1800. After leaving Vienna (1804) he was a piano teacher in Buda and from 1809 a composer to Baron Podmaniczky. He was conductor at the German Town Theatre of Pest from 1812 to 1815 and during that period his first opera, Ines és Pedro (2, after S. Kisfaludy: Tátika; MS score in A-Wgm), was performed there as Ines und Pedro, oder Die Johannisnacht (30 March 1814). From 1816 to 1818 he lived in Paris, and his style must have been influenced by the French and Italian music there. He returned to Pest, where his light opera Der Vogel des Bruder Philipp was performed in the Town Theatre (11 June 1821). His other works for the theatre were the 'romantic fairytale' Felizie and an overture to Schink's Der verlorene Sohn. From 1824 he lived in Vienna.

Some of Spech's early works were published in Vienna (1799–1803) and he wrote many Hungarian songs which were published in Pest (1805–23). His other works remained in manuscript, including an oratorio, Die Befreiung von Jerusalem, seven cantatas, a mass, nine string quartets and six sonatas. Spech's musical style is essentially Germanic, and his melodic writing owes much to late Mozart and to Schubert. These influences, as well as French and Italian elements, are combined with rhythmic features of Hungarian music.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Spech: 'A muzsikának mai állapotjáról s abbeli izléséről Párizsban' [On the present state of music and taste in Paris], Tudományos gyüjtemény, no.4 (Pest, 1822), 50–64 [Ger. version in Allgemeine musikalische Zeitung mit besonderer Rücksicht auf den österreichischen Kaiserstadt, vi (1822), 169–72, 177–9, 185–8, 193–5]
I. Bartalus: Magyar Orpheus (Pest, 1869)

DEZSÖ LEGÁNY

Specht, Richard (b Vienna, 7 Dec 1870; d Vienna, 18 March 1932). Austrian writer on music and music critic. After studying architecture for a short time he turned to music, studying the piano with Ignaz Brüll and theory with Zemlinsky and Schreker. He became the music critic of various daily newspapers (Arbeiterzeitung, Die Zeit, Illustriertes Wiener Extrablatt) and a correspondent for foreign periodicals (Die Musik of Berlin). In 1909 he founded the periodical Der Merker, which he directed until 1919. He wrote many introductions to operas and symphonic works (including most of Mahler's symphonies) which he usually provided with thematic charts; he also wrote a large number of books, principally concerned with aesthetic assessment, some of which went into many editions. His chief work was the Bildnis Beethovens. Specht also had an active career as a lecturer, mainly in Germany. Apart from his musical writings, he wrote monographs on Arthur Schnitzler and Franz Werfel.

WRITINGS

Johann Strauss (Berlin, 1909, 2/1922)
Gustav Mahler (Berlin, 1913)
Das Wiener Operntheater (Vienna, 1919)
Julius Bittner (Munich, 1921)
Richard Strauss und sein Werk (Leipzig, 1921)
Wilhelm Furtwängler (Vienna, 1922)
Emil Nikolaus von Reznicek (Leipzig, 1923)
Johannes Brahms (Hellerau, 1928; Eng. trans., 1930)
Bildnis Beethovens (Hellerau, 1931; Eng. trans., 1933 as Beethoven as he Lived)
Giacomo Puccini (Berlin, 1931; Eng. trans., 1933)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

E. Decsey: 'Andante funebre für Richard Specht', Die Musik, xxiv (1931–2), 594–8

RUDOLF KLEIN

Spechtshart, Hugo [Hugo of Reutlingen] (b Reutlingen, *c*1285; d 1359 or 1360). German theorist. He apparently served as a parish priest and schoolmaster in Reutlingen besides holding a chaplaincy at the Marienkirche. He is named as a priest in 1329. Two years later he purchased a patronage in Unterhausen. In 1338, as a result of the strife between Ludwig of Bavaria and the pope, he was banned from celebrating Mass for ten years. In May 1359 he made a grant for the support of the St Nikolaus-Kapelle in Reutlingen. His death must have occurred sometime during the next year, for in April 1360 his nephew sold his patronage.

Spechtshart is best known for the pedagogical work Flores musicae omnis cantus Gregoriani, which he wrote in 1332. Of lasting influence, it was revised in 1342, and published for the first time in 1488. The treatise, partly in verse, is divided into four large chapters covering solmization, the monochord, intervals and the ecclesiastical modes; the division of the monochord is the first complete determination of the chromatic scale on that instrument.

A second musical work, the Chronicon Hugonis sacerdotis de Rutelinga ad annum MCCCXLIX, is the chief source of music and information of the mid-14th-century German flagellants (see GEISSLER LIEDER). The melodies included by Spechtshart are typical of earlier pilgrim songs, and, although they show influences of the verse forms of the Italian laude, their litany-based structure is rather primitive when compared with the varied forms of their Italian counterparts. In addition, he wrote two non-musical works: the Forma discendi, an introduction to logic and dialectic, and the Speculum grammaticae.

WRITINGS

Flores musicae omnis cantus Gregoriani (Strasbourg, 1488): ed. C. Beck, Bibliothek des Litterarischen Vereins in Stuttgart, lxxxix (Stuttgart, 1868) [with parallel Ger. trans.]; 1332 and 1342 manuscript originals ed. K.-W. Gümpel (Wiesbaden, 1958)

Chronicon Hugonis sacerdotis de Rutelinga ad annum MCCCXLIX, RUS-SPsc O XIV, 6; ed. K. Gillert, Königliche Akademie der wissenschaftlichen Forschungen, xxi (Munich, 1881) [edns. of musical portions only: P. Runge, ed.: Die Lieder und Melodien der Geissler des Jahres 1349 (Leipzig, 1900/R), 23–42; A. Hübner: Die deutschen Geisslerlieder (Leipzig, 1931)]

BIBLIOGRAPHY

F.G. Gayler: Historische Denkwürdigkeiten der ehemaligen freien Reichstadt ... Reutlingen vom Ursprung an bis zu Ende der Reformation 1577 (Reutlingen, 1840), 22–3, 39, 162–3, 616

R. Eitner: 'Hugo von Reutlingen', MMg, ii (1870), 57–60

K. Bihlmeyer: 'Hugo Spechtshart von Reutlingen, ein Geschichtsschreiber und Schulmann des 14. Jahrhunderts', Historisch-politische Blätter für das katholische Deutschland, clx (1917), 257, 281

H.J. Moser: Geschichte der deutschen Musik, i (Stuttgart, 1920, 5/1930), 103, 116, 120–21

CECIL ADKINS

Specials [Special AKA], the. English pop group. Formed in Coventry in 1978 as the Special AKA, its original members were Terry Hall (b Coventry, 15 March 1959; lead vocals), Neville Staples (vocals and percussion), Lynvall Goulding (b Coventry, 24 July 1951; electric guitar and vocals), John Bradbury (drums), Jerry Dammers (Gerald Dankin; b India, 22 May 1954; keyboards), Roddy Radiation (Rodney Byers; electric guitar) and Horace Gentleman (Horace Panter; bass guitar). They became the Specials in 1979. In the late 1970s post-punk diaspora, the Specials were pivotal in developing a miscegenation of musical styles, begun by such groups as the Clash and the Slits, in which punk and reggae had effected an alliance.

Along with groups such as the Beat and Selecter, the Specials were signed to Dammers's multi-racial label 2-Tone Records. Their 'Coventry sound' was a speeded-up version of late 1960s ska imbued with a punky freneticism, a heavier, less subtle, more insistent rhythm section, and a more declamatory tone to the vocals. The social-realist politics of much of the new wave also made its mark on 2-Tone, and the Specials were an eloquent example of this new spirit of reportage. Their first UK number one, Too Much, Too Young, a good-time ska song with a precautionary lyric about the hazards of teenage pregnancy, brought sexual politics on to the agenda, while their final hit, the chilling Ghost Town, which was released in the wake of the Bristol, Birmingham and Toxteth riots of 1981, eerily captured the prevalent sense of youth disillusionment. The Specials also successfully covered ska classics such as Guns of Navarone by the Skatelites and The Liquidator by Harry J. All Stars. Hall, Goulding and Staples left in 1981 to form the Fun Boy Three, but Dammers continued the band under the original name the Special AKA. The Boiler, recorded with Rhoda Daker, was one of the most harrowing singles ever released, detailing the horrors of rape, while the rousing anti-apartheid single, Nelson Mandela, became an anthem of hope for many. The Special AKA broke up in late 1984. For further information see D. Hebdige: Cut 'n' Mix: Culture, Identity and Caribbean Music (London, 1987).

DAVID BUCKLEY

Specialty. American record company. During the 1950s it was a leading company in the fields of gospel, rhythm and blues and rock and roll music. The company was founded by Art Rupe (Arthur Goldberg) in Los Angeles in 1946. Rupe's label (originally Juke Box) had sought to create 'a big band sound, expressed in a churchy way', and had its first successes with Roy Milton and his Solid Senders. Joe Liggins and Percy Mayfield provided further rhythm and blues hits. Rupe next expanded into the gospel field. Among the gospel groups recorded by Bumps Blackwell, the company's musical director, were the Soul Stirrers, featuring the young Sam Cooke. In 1952 Rupe went to New Orleans where he discovered Lloyd Price (Lawdy Miss Clawdy, 1952) and Guitar Slim (The Things I used to Do, 1954). But the company's most important signing proved to be Little Richard; produced by Blackwell, he had several international hits including Tutti Frutti, Long Tall Sally and Good Golly Miss Molly. In the late 1950s Little Richard underwent a religious conversion and temporarily left the music industry. At the same time, Blackwell left Specialty when Rupe refused to jeopardize his gospel audiences by permitting Sam Cooke to record secular music. Harold Battiste in New Orleans and Sonny Bono in Los Angeles were the new musical directors. The label continued to issue rock and roll records by Larry Williams, Don & Dewey and Jerry Byrne. Although Williams made several hit records, Rupe began to phase out the label in 1959. However, from the late 1960s he inaugurated a programme of reissues of the gospel and rock and roll material.

DAVE LAING

Species counterpoint. An approach to STRICT COUNTERPOINT that proceeds methodically from note-against-note settings of the cantus firmus to more complex combinations of parts. The five commonly distinguished 'species', or types of settings, were formulated by Fux in the Gradus ad Parnassum (1725). They are: (1) note against note; (2) two notes against each note in the cantus firmus (in triple time, three against one); (3) four notes against each note in the cantus firmus; (4) equal-length notes consistently syncopated; and (5) a florid line against the cantus firmus, consisting of a combination of the other species with occasional use of notes of smaller value. It is possible to apply different species vertically; in ex.1 a second-species counterpoint above the cantus firmus is combined with a third-species counterpoint below.

Ex.1

The division of counterpoint into species goes back at least to Lanfranco's Scintille di musica of 1532, and is one of the principles underlying Zarlino's discussion of counterpoint in Le istitutioni harmoniche (1558). The second volume of Zacconi's Prattica di musica (1619) includes a discussion of the five species, but then goes on to define fugato, INVERTIBLE COUNTERPOINT and other contrapuntal designs also as 'species'; the term has since lost this extended meaning.

See COUNTERPOINT.

□

Specification. Term currently used by organ theorists to denote a list of the speaking stops, accessories and compass of an organ. To a builder, however, 'specification' would include technical information on the bellows, action, pressure, chests, case, façade, placement etc., as well as the pipes and stops. The term was used by Hopkins (Hopkins and Rimbault, The Organ, 1855) as an occasional alternative to such phrases as 'a list of the contents' or 'the distribution of stops'. Previous English writers used only such phrases as 'list of stops' (J.A. Hamilton: Catechism of the Organ, London, 1842), 'Catalogue of the Stops' (Burney), 'Schedule' (Father Smith at the Temple Church, 1688), and 'The Name and number of the stoppes' (Dallam's contract at York, 1632).

The term 'disposition' (see DISPOSITION (i)), which is sometimes used synonymously with 'specification', properly refers to the arrangement of different stops among the keyboards or divisions of a harpsichord or organ, whereas REGISTRATION is the art of combining stops. Stop-lists are often displayed in 'specification tables'; for examples of these, see ORGAN.

PETER WILLIAMS/MARTIN RENSHAW

Spector, Phil(ip Harvey) (b Bronx, NY, 26 Dec 1940). American record producer and songwriter. He became involved in music at the age of 13 when his family moved to Los Angeles. He sang in a trio, the Teddy Bears, whose To know him is to love him (Dore, 1958) was both his first recording and first hit record. Subsequent releases were less successful, but by this time he had been commended to Leiber and Stoller; with Leiber he co-wrote Spanish Harlem, a hit for Ben E. King. His early record production for the Dune label was uneven and undistinguished, and it was not until he controlled his own label that his distinctive sound appeared, alongside the characteristic girl groups. Although preoccupied with singles, his 1963 concept album A Christmas Gift to You (Philles, 1963), on which various of his regular artists covered old and new festive songs, has become a classic.

The most autocratic of producers, he took personal charge of all aspects of his records; the results were released on his own Philles Records and, in an era when major record companies would release dozens of recordings each month in the hope of one hit, Spector released records one at a time, intending that each should succeed. The combination of a large rhythm section, large studio orchestra, multi-tracking and echo created his 'wall of sound'. He described his records as 'symphonies for the kids' and, between 1961 and 1967, many such recordings became classics: Then he kissed me (recorded by the Crystals, 1963), Be my baby (the Ronettes, 1963), You've lost that lovin' feelin' (the Righteous Brothers, 1965), and most famously River Deep, Mountain High (Ike and Tina Turner, 1966).

When River Deep, Mountain High failed to enjoy the success that Spector felt it deserved, his behaviour, always unconventional, became increasingly erratic, more so following the break up of his marriage to Ronnie Spector, and the Philles label was closed down. His projects since have been sporadic and controversial; his production work on the Beatles' Let it be (Apple, 1969) infuriated McCartney. Spector remained, however, at the Apple label, working on albums with Harrison and Lennon, finally breaking with the latter during their fourth collaboration, Rock 'n' Roll (1974). Increasingly reclusive, Spector re-emerged to produce Leonard Cohen's Death of a Ladies' Man (Col., 1977), and also worked with the Ramones and Yoko Ono.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

T. Wolfe: 'The First Tycoon of Teen', repr. in The Age of Rock, ed. J. Eisen (New York, 1969), 326–36

J.S. Wenner: 'Phil Spector', Rolling Stone (1 Nov 1969); repr. in The Rolling Stone Interviews 1967–1980, ed. P. Herbst (New York, 1981), 60–75

R. Williams: Out of His Head; the Sound of Phil Spector (New York, 1972) [incl. discography]

M. Ribowsky: He's a Rebel: the Truth about Phil Spector (New York, 1989)

R. Spector with V. Waldron: Be My Baby (New York, 1990)

LIZ THOMSON

Spectral music (Fr.: musique spectrale). A term referring to music composed mainly in Europe since the 1970s which uses the acoustic properties of sound itself (or sound spectra) as the basis of its compositional material. It has come to be associated particularly with the composers of the French Groupe de l'Itinéraire (especially Grisey and Murail), and the German Feedback group, with its principal members Fritsch, Maiguashca, Eötvös, Vivier and Barlow. The term 'spectral music', coined by Dufourt in an article of 1979, emphasizes the importance of the sound spectra themselves to the music and its techniques. However, the tendency has also had important ramifications in the fields of form and musical time.

Among the most influential techniques of spectral music has been what Grisey termed 'instrumental synthesis'. In Grisey's Périodes (1974) for seven instruments the final chord is derived from a sonogram analysis of the spectrum of a trombone's low E, so that the timbre of the trombone is artificially re-synthesized by the rest of the ensemble. Another technique, used by Grisey in Partiels and Murail in Gondwana, involves the instrumental simulation of ring modulation techniques to modulate the music away from and back to pure harmonic spectra. This involves taking pairs of frequencies, calculating their summation and difference tones (as well as the sums and differences of their harmonics, etc.) and using the resultant complex of pitches for the instrumental harmony. The more consonant the relationship between the two generating frequencies (and hence the simpler the numerical relationship of their frequencies) the more consonant and harmonious will be the resultant complex. Ex.1 shows the first frequency modulation complex together with its orchestration at the start of Gondwana. There are two generative frequencies, called carrier and modulator respectively, marked A and B in the example; their respective frequencies are shown in the list below, together with a list of their sum and difference tones which generate all the other pitches in the example. (The microtones used approximate these resultant frequencies to the nearest quarter of a tone.) The refinement and sophistication of the orchestration ensures that this large complex blends into a single, unified timbre of great complexity, and as the relationship between the two generative frequencies is highly dissonant, the resultant complex is correspondingly inharmonic. Over the first part of this piece, the ratio between the pairs of generative frequencies is gradually made more consonant and the resultant spectra modulate towards the stability of the harmonic series. These constant swings between harmonicity and inharmonicity are often mirrored by movements between moments of maximum rhythmic regularity (or 'periodicity') and maximum irregularity (or 'aperiodicity'). Indeed, the first major theoretical article on spectral music, Grisey's Tempus ex machina was a treatise not on spectra themselves, but rather on musical time and its compositional deployment.

Ex.1 Opening spectral of Murail's Gondwana (1980)

Notes in brackets are not played here (A + B = 599.65 Hz [tpt 3] A - B = 184.35 Hz [hn] A + 2B = 807.3 Hz [tpt 1] A - 2B = 23.3 Hz [not played] A + 3B = 1014.95 Hz [cl 3] A - 3B = 230.95 HzA - B = 184.35 Hz [hn] [hn 3] etc)

The work of the Feedback group, made up largely of ex-students of Stockhausen, shares with that of Grisey and Murail a concern for the reassessment of consonance and the exploration, within an instrumental context, of techniques derived from the analogue electronic studio, notably that of ring modulation. Unlike in the earlier work of Grisey and Murail, however, the result is often strikingly melodic and linear as well as harmonic in content. Typical examples of this style include FMelodies (1981) and Monodias e interludios (1984) by Maiguashca, whose melodic and harmonic material is entirely derived from a large collection of spectra whose frequencies are related to each other by sum and difference, ranging from the extremely dissonant and enharmonic to the entirely consonant and harmonic. Similar procedures are used to generate the pitch material for Eötvös's A Chinese Opera (1986), while Vivier's Lonely Child (1980), Bouchara (1981) and Prologue pour un Marco Polo (1981), combine a melodic style of disarming, even childlike simplicity, with non-tempered spectra (modelled on ring modulation) of extraordinary richness and complexity.

In parallel with the two main schools of spectral thought, analogous techniques and aesthetics have appeared elsewhere. An independent type of spectral composition sprang up in Romania in the 1970s, both in the work of Niculescu and Ioachimescu, in which spectral concerns are linked to diatonicism and folk-influenced modality, and in the work of more experimental composers such as Dumitrescu and Radulescu. Radulescu's personal theory of composition, evolved in the early 1970s, focusses on the status of 'sound plasmas' – frequency complexes generated either from ring modulation or from large pitch collections which are harmonics of some very low theoretical fundamental sound. Aspects of this theory have touched such younger European composers as Dillon and Tanguy.

A number of composers have been influenced by the techniques and aesthetics of spectral music without being drawn to them exclusively: these include Saariaho, Jonathan Harvey and pupils of Grisey and Murail, such as Lindberg, Dalbavie and Hurel. Other members of L'Itinéraire, such as Dufourt and Levinas, have shown greater freedom in their interpretation of the aesthetic; Dufourt has even attempted a highly personal fusion of serial and spectral techniques, with questions of harmony determined by the former techniques and questions of spacing, orchestration and pacing more determined by the latter. Indeed, beginning in the late 1980s, many of the originators of spectral music began to move away from the strictest application of its techniques, evolving more ambiguous musical syntaxes as a result. Grisey and Murail especially, in their works of the late 1980s and early 90s, avoided the smooth processes characteristic of their earliest mature work, focussing instead on discontinuity and unpredictable forms, with a new emphasis on linear, polyphonic writing. It is perhaps no coincidence that both turned during this period to writing for the voice, Murail in Les sept paroles du Christ en croix (1989) and Grisey's in his Quatre chants pour franchir le seuil (1998).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

H. Radulescu: Sound Plasma: Music of the Future Sign: or, My D High: Op.19 [Symbol for Infinity] (Munich, 1975)

G. Grisey: 'Tempus ex machina: a Composer's Reflections on Musical Time', CMR, ii/1 (1987), 238–75

Entretemps, no.8 (1989) [spectral music issue]

R. Rose: 'Introduction to the Pitch Organization in French Spectral Music', PNM, xxxiv/2 (1996), 6–39

J. Fineberg, ed.: 'Spectral Music I–II', CMR, xix/2–3 (2000) [2 complete issues]

JULIAN ANDERSON

Speculum Musicae. American chamber ensemble. Founded in 1971 by the percussionist Richard Fitz, pianist Ursula Oppens and cellist Fred Sherry, the group took its name from a treatise by the medieval music theorist Jacques de Liège. The title – 'a mirror of music' – reveals the group's intent to mirror the composer's wishes. Speculum Musicae has given frequent performances of music by Schoenberg, Stravinsky and Wolpe as well as of established East Coast composers including Babbitt, Chou Wen-chung, Carter, Davidovsky, Martino and Wuorinen; it also performs music by newer composers such as Jon Deak, Lee Hyla, James Primosch, David Rakowski and David Sanford. The group has commissioned over 45 works, nearly all of them from Americans. The titles of two of these allude to the name of the ensemble: Wuorinen's Speculum speculi (1972) and Carter's A Mirror on which to Dwell (1975). The ensemble has always maintained a nucleus of from seven to ten players who choose and conduct their own programmes. Former members include Paul Dunkel, Gerard Schwarz and Robert Black. Its most recent personnel consists of Eric Bartlett, cello, Allen Blustine, clarinet, David Druckman, percussion, Maureen Gallagher, viola, Aleck Karis, piano, Curtis Macomber, violin, Donald MacCourt, bassoon, Susan Palma Nidel, flute, Donald Palma, double bass, William Purvis, horn, David Starobin, guitar, and Stephen Taylor, oboe. In 1982 the group took up residence at the School of the Arts, Columbia University, New York.

SEVERINE NEFF

Spee, Friedrich [Fridericus] von (Langenfeld) [Incertus Theologus Orthodoxus, Incertus Theologus Romanus] (b Kaiserswerth, nr Düsseldorf, 25 Feb 1591; d Trier, 7 Aug 1635). German poet and priest. He was educated at the Jesuit Dreikönigs-Gymnasium in Cologne, entered the Jesuit order in 1610 and was ordained in 1622. It seems likely that even before 1620 he began to write lieder and catechetical and religious texts which were later incorporated into his Güldenes Tugend-Buch (Cologne, 1649, 7/1709). He served the order enthusiastically in the Counter-Reformation, first in Paderborn, and then in Peine, where an assassin nearly ended his life on 19 April 1629. It is believed that during the long weeks of convalescence in Falkenhagen, near Corvey, Spee wrote many of the lieder which later formed the core of his collection of mystical lyrics, Trutznachtigall (Cologne, 1649/*R*1981). In 1630 he resumed work in Paderborn until the Jesuit college there had to be moved to Cologne before the advance of Swedish troops. During this time Spee's Cautio criminalis (1631), a treatise condemning witch trials, appeared anonymously at Rinteln. Spee died of the plague in Trier, where he had completed a final manuscript version of Trutznachtigall in 1633.

Spee modelled the title of his Trutznachtigall on one of Conrad Vetter's hymnals. Spee's collection, published 14 years after his death, consists of 52 songs, 24 of them from his earlier Güldenes Tugend-Buch. Individual songs first appeared in the Geistlicher Psalter (Cologne, 1638). The musical settings for the Trutznachtigall, for solo voice and figured bass, have been attributed to Jacob Grippenbusch. Several manuscripts of Spee's work were in circulation, the two most important to survive being the so-called Paris and Strasbourg (1634) manuscripts. Spee has rightly been criticized for not always observing the poetic reforms of Martin Opitz, but he usually strove for a congruence of natural word accent and metrical stress which resulted in a smooth, natural flow in his lyrics. His nature imagery, the emotions of rapture and longing which suffuse his songs and their combination of the spiritual pastoral with the religious symbolism of the nightingale all influenced poets of the German Baroque and Romantic eras (e.g. Friedrich Schlegel and Clemens Brentano, who published editions of his lyrics in 1806 and 1817 respectively). Spee was the author of about 60 hymns, which he probably wrote between 1616 and 1623 and which appeared in collections published in Cologne and Würzburg. Modern editions of the Trutznachtigall have been published (ed. G.O. Arlt, Halle, 1936/R; ed. T.G.M. van Oorschot, Berne, 1985); some early poems are in M. Harting and T.G.M. van Oorschot: Friedrich von Spee: die anonymen geistlichen Lieder vor 1623 (Berlin, 1979).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Arens: Friedrich Spee von Langenfeld: zur Wiederauffindung seines Grabes im Jahre 1980 (Trier, 1981)
M. Sievernich, ed.: Friedrich von Spee: Priester–Poet–Prophet (Frankfurt, 1986)
G. Dünnkaupf: 'Spee, Friedrich', Personalbibliographien zu den Drucken des Barock, v (1991), 3928–37
E. Grunewald and N. Gussone, eds.: Von Spee zu Eichendorff: zur Wirkungsgeschichte eines rhenischen Barockdichters (Berlin, 1991)
T.G.M. van Oorschot, ed.: Friedrich von Spee (1591–1635): Düsseldorfer Symposium zum 400. Geburtstag (Bielefeld, 1993)

MARA R. WADE

Speed metal. See THRASH METAL.

Speer, Daniel (b Breslau [now Wrocław], 2 July 1636; d Göppingen, 5 Oct 1707). German composer and music theorist. He entered the Maria-Magdalenen-Gymnasium, Breslau, in 1644, only a few months before his parents died. No further official record of him exists until about 1664, but his three autobiographical novels, published anonymously, describe his wandering life in south-east Europe, in the course of which he accumulated much practical musical experience. His own writings and the Stuttgart records establish that he was a town and church musician there between 1664 and 1666; he then moved to Tübingen for a year before taking up an appointment at Göppingen. The coincidence between this chronology and that of another Stuttgart town musician, Daniel Rutge, led Burckhardt (1974) to suggest that Rutge was a pseudonym used by Speer at this period. At the end of November 1667 Speer was appointed a schoolteacher and church musician at Göppingen; if he held these posts at all it was for only a short time, since in August 1668 Duke Eberhard III refused to ratify his appointment, and Speer moved to Gross Bottwar (where he married in 1669) and then to Leonberg, near Stuttgart. During his period at Leonberg he prepared his first musical works for publication, and the Musicalisches ABC was published at Schwäbisch Hall in 1671. In 1673 he returned to Göppingen to take up the post he had lost in 1668 as a teacher at the Lateinschule.

During the 1680s Speer enjoyed a period of great musical and literary activity: between 1681 and 1689 he published 14 works – church music, quodlibet collections, novels, political commentaries and the first version of his Grund-richtiger . . . Unterricht der musicalischen Kunst. He took a keen interest in local politics, and a pamphlet he published in 1689, criticizing the inactivity of the Württemberg authorities in the face of a French invasion in 1688, led to his arrest and imprisonment in the fortress of Hohenneuffen. A testimonial from the council and people of Göppingen secured his release, and he was sent to Waiblingen, near Stuttgart. In 1694 he returned to Göppingen to fill the post of Kollaborator and later Kantor at the Lateinschule. In the early 1700s his hearing and sight began to fail; early in 1707 a stroke incapacitated him, and he died later that year.

Speer's most important work is his textbook on practical music, Grund-richtiger . . . Unterricht der musicalischen Kunst. In addition to the text, it contains a considerable amount of instrumental music by way of exercises and examples for keyboard, wind and string instruments; according to Aschmann the two capriccios for three violins are the earliest known examples of their type. The treatise is based on Speer's wide practical experience of music and provides a valuable source of information concerning contemporary musical conditions and practices. It includes an interesting proposal for the subsidized instrumental tuition of talented children. He evidently lacked a sound grounding in music theory, since his discussion of theoretical matters is either closely derived from other authors or unreliable. The treatise is in four sections: advice to Kantors on the direction of church music (including an interesting reference to the role of the conductor, altering the tempo according to the emotion to be expressed), a keyboard tutor, a section on other instruments and a tutor for the composition of vocal and instrumental music. The last is based substantially on J.A. Herbst's Musica poetica (1643) and Arte prattica & poetica (1653) but with the discussion of the modes updated to cover major and minor tonality. The longest section of the Vierfaches musicalisches Kleeblatt is the keyboard tutor, expanded from ten pages in the first edition to over 150 pages. The text is fragmentary, and most of the chapter is devoted to exercises – dances, preludes, toccatas and fugues – composed in a recurring sequence of 13 major and minor keys. The section on keyboard playing ends with instructions to the continuo player; here Speer followed the Viennese tradition of Alessandro Poglietti, Wolfgang Ebner and J.J. Prinner, but he made an important distinction between the old and new practices as exemplified in the realization of unfigured and figured basses. In the first edition of the treatise the keyboard tutor has an appendix entitled 'Leichte Information des Claviers vor das Frauen-Zimmer', which is one of the earliest systematic teaching plans for amateur musicians learning to play for their own pleasure. After a short discussion of string instruments the greater part of the third chapter is devoted to wind instruments, reflecting Speer's experience as a town musician; in the 1697 edition he replaced the original verbal description of fingerings with charts, and increased the number of music examples.

In his sacred music Speer led a trend towards simpler and more practicable works; this is particularly evident in his book of chorales arranged for two voices and continuo, which was the first of its kind. His quodlibet collections are both important in the development of the type and informative concerning instrumental practice of the late 17th century.

WORKS

SACRED VOCAL

Musicalisches ABC, oder Auserlesene Sprüche der Heiligen Schrift (Schwäbisch Hall, 1671), lost (cited in Frankfurt book fair catalogue, New Year 1671)

Evangelische Seelengedanken . . . [erster Theil], 7vv, bc (Stuttgart, 1681)

Evangelische Seelengedanken . . . [ander Theil], 7vv, bc (Ulm, 1682)

Philomela angelica cantionum sacrarum, 5vv, bc (?Venice, 1688) [pubd under pseud. Res Plena Dei; probably not pubd in Venice]

Süsse Jesus-Freud, oder Jubilum S Bernhardi (Stuttgart, ?1688), lost (cited in Frankfurt book fair catalogue, New Year 1688, also announced in Vierfaches musicalisches Kleeblatt, 1697)

Neuvermehrtes Würtembergisches Gesangbuch (Stuttgart, 1691)

Choral Gesang-Buch auff das Clavir oder Orgel, 2vv, kbd (Stuttgart, 1692)

Jubilum coeleste, oder Himmlischer Jubel-Schall . . . in lateinischen und teutschen Texten, 6vv, bc (Stuttgart, 1692)

Echo coelestis; Die ersten 50 Psalmen; Geistreiche Lehr-, Buss- und Danklieder; Aeternum Allelujah; Aeternum Amen; Musikalisches dreifaches Kleeblatt zu Freud-, Zeit- und Leidbegebnissen; masses, Vespers, Passion: announced as ready for publication in Vierfaches musicalisches Kleeblatt but possibly never published

QUODLIBETS

Recens Fabricatus Labor, oder Neu-gebachene Taffel-Schnitz, a 7 (n.p., 1685) [pubd under pseud. Asne de Rilpe]; 1 ed. in Moser (1933); 7 ed. in EDM, 1st ser., xiv (1941); ed. K. Brown (New York, 1966, rev. 1983); 1 ed. G.P. Smith (London, 1979); 3 ed. G. Balassa (Monteux, 1981)

Musicalischer Leuthe-Spiegel, a 6 (n.p., 1687) [pubd under pseud. Deutscher Spaniol in Griechenland]

Musicalisch Türckischer Eulen-Spiegel, a 6 (n.p., 1688) [pubd under pseud. Dacianischer Simplicissimus zu Güntz]; some ed. in Eitner; ed. J. Albrecht and L. Ballova (Bratislava, 1971–80); ed. G. Balassa (Monteux, 1981); ed. M. Harras (Zürich, 1982)

For lost works see Moser (1960)

THEORETICAL WORKS

Grund-richtiger . . . Unterricht der Musicalischen Kunst (Ulm, 1687) [incl. vocal and inst works; 7 ed. H. Fischer and F. Oberdörffer as 'Sechs [recte 7] kleine stücke für Anfänger' in Deutsche Klavier-Musik des 17. und 18. Jahrhunderts, i (Berlin, 1935/R)]

Grunde-richtiger . . . Unterricht der musicalischen Kunst, oder Vierfaches musicalisches Kleblatt (Ulm, 1697, extensively altered and expanded version of 1687 edn; Eng. trans. in Howey) [incl. vocal and inst works; 4 ed. J. Albrecht (Bratislava, 1982); 2 ed. R.P. Block and H. Howey (London, 1983)]; facs. (Leipzig, 1974) [incl. afterword by I. Ahlgrimm and biographical notes and worklist by F. Burckhardt]

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. Eitner: 'Volksmusik im 17. Jahrhundert', MMg, xiv (1882), 1–8

H.J. Moser: Corydon, das ist Geschichte des mehrstimmigen Generalbassliedes und des Quodlibets im deutschen Barock (Brunswick, 1933, 2/1960)

K. Kirschner: Geschichte der Stadt Göppingen (Göppingen, 1953), i, 190; ii, 180

H.J. Moser: 'Daniel Speer als Dichter und Musiker', Musik in Zeit und Raum (Berlin, 1960), 119–44

R. Aschmann: Das deutsche polyphone Violinspiel im 17. Jahrhundert (diss., U. of Zürich, 1962)

F. Burckhardt: 'Daniel Speer, Schulmeister, Musiker und Dichter, 1636–1707', Lebensbilder aus Schwaben und Franken, xi (1969), 48–68

P. Gulke: 'Musikalisch Türckischer Eulenspiegel', Beiträge zur Musikwissenschaft, xiv (1972), 342–3

M.N. Sirman: The Wind Sonatas in Daniel Speer's 'Musikalisch-türkischer Eulen-Spiegel' of 1688 (diss., U. of Wisconsin, 1972)

A. Mozi: 'Daniel Speers Werke: Ungarischer Simplicissimus und Musicalisch-Türckischer Eulen-Spiegel', Studia musicologica Academiae Scientiarum Hungaricae, xvii (1975), 167–213

K.W. Niemoller: 'Die Bedeutung der Music für Grimmelshausens Simplicissimus', Daphnis, v (1976), 567–94

K. Gajek: Daniel Speers romanhefte und publizistische Schriften (Wrocław, 1988)

L. Ballova: 'Svedectvo a posolsivo Daniela Georga Speera' [Testimony and message of Daniel Georg Speer], Hudobnyarchiv, xi (1990), 118–22

Z. Falvy: 'Historical Music Sociology: the Simplicissimus phenomenon', Musica pannonica, i (1991), 69–73

H. Howey: 'The Lives of Hoftrompeter and Stadtpfeifer as portrayed in Three Novels of Daniel Speer', Historic Brass Society Journal, iii (1991), 65–78

B. Uets: 'Daniel Speer: ein Trompeter im 17. Jahrhundert', Das Orchester, xli/1 (1993), 2–7

J. Butt: Music Education and the Art of Performance in the German Baroque (Cambridge, 1994)

ROSEMARY ROBERTS/JOHN BUTT

Spehr, Johann Peter (b c1770; d after 1859). German music publisher. He was the proprietor of the Musik- und Kunsthandlung auf der Höhe (from 1794, Musikalisches Magazin auf der Höhe), which he founded at Brunswick in 1791. Through trading contacts with London, France, the Netherlands and elsewhere, the firm expanded until by 1816 it could announce a catalogue containing 1500 works. Among its most enterprising early publications was Collection complette de tous les oeuvres pour le fortepiano de Mozart, which was offered for subscription 'up to Easter 1797' and appeared in six parts (five numbers in each) early in 1798; their contents are listed in the sixth edition of Köchel's catalogue. No complete copy is known (an imperfect one is in GB-Lbl). This collection seems to have caused Breitkopf & Härtel to hasten their own plans for the much larger, complete edition of Mozart which was brought out from 1798. Besides editions of the classics, Spehr published mainly popular music, fashionable dances, operatic extracts and educational works. In 1860 he sold the business to the Brunswick music publisher Carl Weinholz, whose business was taken over in 1872 by Julius Bauer and Julius Pahlmann. From 1873, under Bauer's name alone, the firm continued until the destruction of its premises in 1944.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. von Köchel: Chronologisch-thematisches Verzeichnis sämtlicher Tonwerke W.A. Mozarts (Leipzig, 1862, rev. 6/1964 by F. Giegling, A. Weinmann and G. Sievers), 915

ALEC HYATT KING

Speier, Wilhelm. See SPEYER, WILHELM.

Speight, John A(nthony) (b Plymouth, 27 Feb 1945). Icelandic composer and singer of British birth. He studied singing and composition (with Buxton Orr) at the GSM in London (1964–72) and at the same time privately with Richard Rodney Bennett. In 1972 he moved to Iceland, where he has been active as a teacher, singer and composer. His organizational roles include the presidencies of the Icelandic Composers' Society from 1992 to 1995, and the Nordic Composers' Council from 1994 to 1995. Between 1994 and 1996 he was president of the Icelandic Music Council.

His early works composed show the influence of serialism, but since the early 1990s his music has become more focussed around tonal centres. A strong, individual temperament is apparent in his music, though the influences of Lutosławski and Messiaen can also be heard. He has used his music as an emotional outlet for his feelings about both war (Symphony no.2) and death (Sam's Mass).

WORKS
(selective list)

Op: Abraham and Isaac (chbr op), 1990;
Orch: Concertino, pf, orch, 1977; Cl Conc., 1980; Sym. no.1, 1984; Melodius Birds Sing Madrigals, cl, orch; Gui Conc., 1988; The Emperor and the Nightingale, chbr orch, 1988; Sym. no.2 (J. Milton: Paradise Lost), S, orch, 1991; Sym. no.3, 1997
Choral: Missa brevis, 1975; Locus iste, 1985; Ave Maria, 1985; I had hope (J. Milton), 1986; Ave verum corpus, 1994; Sam's Mass (W. Blake), S, ob, SATB, 1997
Chbr and solo inst: Str Qt no.1, 1969; Str Qt no.2, 1974; 2 hommages, pf, 1978; Aubade, cl, 1982; Echoes of Orpheus, gui, 1986; Proud Music of the Storm, fl, cl, str qt, 1994; Manhattan Moments, pf, 1997; Pf Sonata, 1998
Solo vocal: The Jasper Terrace (Jap. haiku), 1v, pf, 1970; 3 Shakespeare Songs, Ct, hpd, 1991; The Lady in White (E. Dickinson), 1v, pf, 1997; Haustmyndir [Autumn Pictures] (S. Hjartarson), 1v, pf, 1998

BIBLIOGRAPHY

G. Bergendal: New Music in Iceland (Reykjavík, 1991)
M. Podhajski: Dictionary of Icelandic Composers (Warsaw, 1997)

ÁRNI HEIMIR INGÓLFSSON

Spelman, Timothy (Mather) (b Brooklyn, NY, 21 Jan 1891; d Florence, 21 Aug 1970). American composer. He studied with Shelley in New York (1908), with Spalding and Hill at Harvard University (1909–13) and with Courvoisier at the Munich Conservatory (1913–15). On his return to the USA in 1915 he became assistant director of band musicians' training in the War Department. In 1918 he went back to Europe with his wife, the poet Leolyn Louise Everett, and settled in Florence, where he remained for the rest of his life, with the exception of the period 1935–47, which he spent in New York. Spelman's music, most of it programmatic, blends elements of Italian Romanticism and French Impressionism. In 1920 he wrote his first opera, La magnifica. Set to a libretto by his wife, it is a tale of intrigue set in South America. The Spelmans collaborated on many songs and at least two other dramatic works: The Sea Rovers, a three-act opera strikingly reminiscent of the Boito-Verdi Otello, and Babakan, a one-act lyric comedy with an Arabian setting. Among his most significant works are Pervigilium veneris and the tone poem Assisi: the Great Pardon of St Francis from Saints' Days.

WORKS
(selective list)

Stage: Snowdrop (pantomime, 4), 1911; The Romance of the Rose (wordless fantasy), 1913, rev., 1915; La magnifica (music drama, 1, L.L. Everett), 1920; The Sea Rovers (op, 3, Everett), 1924; Lizzie Hexam (op, 4, Spelman), 1927–9; The Sunken City (op, 3, Spelman), 1930; Babakan (fantastic comedy, 1, Everett), 1933; The Courtship of Miles Standish (op, 3, after H.W. Longfellow), 1941; Jamboree (pocket ballet), 1945
Vocal: Litany of the Middle Ages, S, female vv, orch, 1928; Pervigilium veneris, S, Bar, chorus, orch, 1929; I Love the Jocund Dance (W. Blake), female vv, pf, 1938; songs, choruses
Orch: Christ and the Blind Man, sym. poem, 1918; Barbaresques, suite, 1923; Saints' Days, suite, 4 movts incl. Assisi, the Great Pardon of St Francis, 1925; The Outcasts of Poker Flat, sym. poem after B. Hart, 1928; Sym., g, 1935; Dawn in the Woods, vn, orch, 1937; Homesick Yankee in North Africa, rhapsody, 1944; Sunday Paper, suite, 1946; Ob Conc., 1954; In the Princess's Garden, str
Chbr: 5 Whimsical Serenades, str qt, 1924; Le pavillon sur l'eau, fl, hp, str trio, 1925; Eclogue, 10 insts, 1926; Str Qt, 1953
Pf: Barbaresques, 1922; Sonata, d, 1929

MSS in US-BApi

Principal publisher: Chester

PEGGY GLANVILLE-HICKS/HARRY HASKELL

Spencer, Robert (b Ilford, 9 May 1932; d Woodford Green, London, 8 Aug 1997). English lutenist, guitarist and singer. One of the most influential figures in the modern lute revival, he began his lute studies in 1955 with Walter Gerwig and Julian Bream, studied singing with Fabian Smith, and attended Dartington School of Music from 1957 to 1960. He joined the Julian Bream Consort at its inception in 1961, and the Deller Consort in 1974. In the late 1960s and early 1970s he was also a member of David Munrow's Early Music Consort. An indefatigable teacher, he was professor of lute at the RAM from 1974, and taught at the RCM and many other conservatories and summer schools. He was a founder member of the Lute Society, and succeeded Diana Poulton as president of the society in 1997.

Although Spencer's knowledge of the lute repertory was encyclopedic, his speciality was the English lute-song; he sang to his own accompaniment on many Apollo Society LP recordings, as well as working with such distinguished singers as Alfred Deller and James Bowman. With his wife, the actress and singer Jill Nott-Bower, he devised and performed programmes which combined readings and music. Alan Ridout's As Large as Alone (four songs with guitar, 1969) and Lute Suite (1970) are dedicated to him. His library, acquired by the RAM in 1998, contains some of the most important English lute manuscripts and original editions of many of Dowland's books; the RAM also has his instrument collection, which includes a Venere lute of 1584 and a guitar which is believed to be one of the earliest extant. Spencer attached great importance to the study of original sources, and arranged for several of his manuscripts to be published in facsimile. He wrote introductions and concordances to these and other facsimile editions.

WRITINGS

'The Weld Lute Manuscript', LSJ, i (1959), 48–57
'How to Hold a Lute: Historical Evidence from Paintings', EMc, iii (1975), 352–4
'Chitarrone, Theorbo and Archlute', EMc, iv (1976), 407–23
'Lute and Guitar', How Music Works, ed. K. Spence and others (London, 1981), 79–91
'Performance Style of the English Lute Ayre c.1600', LSJ, xxiv (1984), 55–68
'Making and Using Facsimiles', Proceedings of the International Lute Symposium: Utrecht 1986, 92–7
'Singing English Lute Songs', Lute Society of America Quarterly, xxviii/2–3 (1993), 15–21, 38
'Dowland's Dance Songs', Concert des voix et des instruments (Paris, 1995), 587–99
'19th-Century Guitar Music: the Type of Edition we should Play from', Guitar Journal: European Guitar Teachers' Association, vi (1995), 15–18

'Singing Purcell's Songs', Singing: Journal of the Association of Teachers of Singing, no.31 (1996), 12–22; no.32 (1997); no.33 (1997)

STEPHEN HAYNES

Spendiaryan [Spendiarov], Aleksandr Afanasy (b Kakhovka, Crimea, 1 Nov 1871; d Yerevan, 7 May 1928). Armenian composer and conductor. Together with Komitas he was one of the founders of the 20th-century Armenian national school; like The Five, and in particular Rimsky-Korsakov, he drew on a wide range of east European and Near Eastern folk music. His early years were spent in the Crimea, first at Kakhovka, then at Simferopol′ (1882–90), where he studied at the Gymnasium. In 1895 he graduated from the law faculty of Moscow University; there he had played the violin in the student orchestra conducted by Klenovsky, who recommended him to move to St Petersburg to study with Rimsky-Korsakov (1896–1900). Spendiaryan returned to the Crimea and carried out important work in developing music education. From 1908 he directed the Society of Amateurs of Music and Dramatic Art, and he was involved in the management of the Yalta section of the Russian Music Society (RMO); he also conducted in Moscow, St Petersburg, various south Russian towns and abroad. In 1916 he met Hovhannes T'umanyan in Tbilisi, and it was on T'umanyan's poem T'mkabert'i aṙumē ('The capture of T'mkabert') that he wrote the opera Almast, which was performed first in Moscow (1930), then in Odessa and Tbilisi; in 1933 the Yerevan State Opera Theatre opened with it. Spendiaryan lived in Yerevan from 1924 until his death. In 1925 he was made a People's Artist of the Armenian SSR, in 1939 the Opera Theatre was named after him, and in 1967 his house became a museum.

Spendiaryan's music shows a considerable evolution which bore fruit in Almast, a work for which his important orchestral works prepared the way. In form, orchestration, variation structure and programmatic nature, these remained close to the principles of the Russian national school. The symphonic picture Tri pal'mï ('Three Palm Trees') after Lermontov is characteristic; Shahverdyan compared its orientalism with that of Rimsky-Korsakov's Antar and Balakirev's Tamara. The work was staged as Sem′ docherey korolya dzhinov ('The Seven Daughters of the King of the Djinns') at the Kroll Theatre, Berlin, in 1913, with choreography by Fokine and with Pavlova in the principal role. In the two series of Krïmskiye ėskizï Spendiaryan used Crimean Tatar and Ukrainian melodies, retaining their rhythms and ornamentation, and scoring them richly for an orchestra with a large percussion section. The Etyud na yevreyskiye temï ('Study on Jewish Themes') and the Yerivanskiye ėtyudï continued the direction of the Krïmskiye ėskizï, with a particular abundance of polyphonic, harmonic and orchestral detail in the Yerivanskiye ėtyudï. Enzeli, the first of these studies, uses the song Dun en glkhen by the ashugh (folk minstrel) Sayat'-Nova.

If in these works Spendiaryan laid the foundations for Armenian orchestral music, his Almast signalled a development in national opera. The work takes certain features from the Russian operatic tradition, but the musical material (Armenian and Persian folk music), the nature of the plot (the struggle of the Armenians against the Persians in the 18th century) and the psychological treatment, centring on the character of Almast, set it apart. Conflict is the basis of the construction, for which the use of a complex system of leitmotifs creates a definite symphonic style. Spendiaryan took Armenian folksongs and dances and Persian mugamat from the collections of Nikoghayos Tigranyan, and he attempted to reconstruct the timbres of folk instruments, introducing some oriental percussion (dayra, dhol and dimplipito) into the orchestra. Various thematic sources come to bear on the style of Almast, and each of these receives its own individual form of dramatic development. The role of Almast, like her famous dance in act 3, is the epicentre of the conflict.

WORKS
(selective list)

Edition: A.A. Spendiaryan: Polnoye sobraniye sochineniy (Yerevan, 1943–71)

Opera: Almast (S. Parnok, after T'umanyan; rev. T. Akhumyan), *c*1918–28, Bol′shoy, Moscow, 1930

Orch: Krïmskiye ėskizï, 2 series, 1903, 1912; Tri pal′mï [3 Palm Trees], 1905; Kontsertnïy val′s [Concert Valse], 1907; Traurnaya melodiya [Funeral Melody], 1908 [in memory of Rimsky-Korsakov]; Etyud na yevreyskiye temï [Etude on Jewish Themes], 1921; 2 suites from Almast, 1923, 1924; Yerivanskiye ėtyudï [Yerevan Etudes], 1925

Vocal: Neszhataya polosa [Unreaping belt] (N. Nekrasov), chorus, orch., 1902; Rïbak i feya [The Fisherman and the Fairy] (M. Gor′ky), B, orch, 1902; Beda-propovednik [Beda-preacher] (Ya. Polonsky), A, orch, 1907; Mï otdokhnem [We are Resting] (A. Chekhov), spkr, orch, 1910; Edel′veys (Gor′ky), spkr, orch, 1911; Tuda, tuda, na pole chesti [There, There in the Field of Honour] (Abovyan), T, orch, 1914; K Armenii [To Armenia] (I. Ionnissyan), Bar, orch, 1915; Ukrainskaya syuita, chorus, orch, 1921; Gharib blbul [concert version of song by Sayat'-Nova], n.d.; other solo and choral folksong arrs.

Inst: Romans, vn, pf, 1892; Fantaisie espagnole, pf 4 hands, 1894; Kantsonetta, vn, pf, 1896; Pesnya, plyaska i Khaytarma, pf, 1917; Krïmskiy ėtyud, pf, 1917

Incidental music: Tantsovshchitsa i soldatik [The Dancer and the Soldier], children's piece, 1919; Otello (W. Shakespeare), 1925

WRITINGS

K. Grigoryan, ed.: A. Spendiarov: Pis′ma [Letters] (Yerevan, 1962)

V. Bal′yan, ed.: A. Spendiarov: o muzïke [About music] (Yerevan, 1971)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. Saryan: 'Vospominaniya ob A. Spendiarove' [Reminiscences of Spendiaryan], SovM (1939), nos.9–10, p.17
A. Shahverdyan: A. Spendiarov (Moscow, 1939/*R*1971)
A. Barsamyan: Opera 'Almast' A. Spendiarova (Moscow, 1958)
B. Asaf′yev: Ocherki ob Armenii (Moscow, 1958), 13ff
G. Tigranov: Aleksandr Spendiarov (Moscow, 1959, 2/1971)
A. Tatevosyan, ed.: Sovremenniki s Spendiarove [Contemporaries of Spendiaryan] (Yerevan, 1960)
M. Spendiarova: A. Spendiarov (Moscow, 1964)
G. Geodakyan, ed.: Aleksandr Spendiarov: stat′i i isledovaniya [Alexander Spendiaryan: articles and studies], ed. G. Geodakyan (Yerevan, 1973)
M. Spendiarova: Letopis′ zhizni i tvorchestva Spendiarova [A chronicle of the life and work of Spendiaryan] (Yerevan, 1975)
A. Grigoryan: Armyanskaya Kamerno-vokal′naya muzika [Armenian small-scale vocal music] (Yerevan, 1982) 97–119
N. Tahmizian: Important observations on the life and work of A. Spendiaryan (Passadena, 1996)

SVETLANA SARKISYAN

Spener, Philipp Jakob (b Rappoltsweiler, Alsace, 13 Jan 1635; d Berlin, 5 Feb 1705). German theologian. His upbringing in a very religious legal family and his early extensive reading of puritanical and other devotional books, especially those of J. Arndt, the most significant pre-Pietist author, laid the groundwork for his later development as a religious reformer. He studied theology at the University of Strasbourg (1651–9) and then undertook an academic journey through southern Germany and Switzerland (1659–62) where he experienced the worship and psalmody of Calvinism. On his return he became a deputy clergyman at Strasbourg Cathedral and received the doctorate in 1664. Trained for an academic career, he nevertheless accepted the call to be Superintendent and senior pastor in Frankfurt, where he remained from 1666 to 1686. In 1686 he was appointed senior Saxon court chaplain in Dresden, the most important and influential position in Lutheran Germany at that time. He left five years later because of personal differences and became senior pastor at the Nicolaikirche in Berlin, where he stayed until his death.

In close collaboration with his clerical colleagues at Frankfurt, Spener wrote the Pia desideria, published in 1675 (ed. K. Aland (Berlin, 1964); Eng. trans., T.G. Tappert (Philadelphia, 1964)). In it he called for spiritual reform and advocated private devotional meetings (collegia pietatis) for prayer and bible study, a greater rôle for the laity in the life of the church, the elimination of religious polemics, and sermons that were primarily edifying rather than overtly scholarly. Spener's book became the theological and practical manifesto of Lutheran Pietism that developed during the final quarter of the 17th century. Although Spener provided the foundation for the movement, he was not its leader or oganizer. These functions were assumed, in Halle, by the younger A.H. Francke, who went further than his mentor in calling for a completion of the Reformation that Luther had begun. Although Pietism stressed spiritual rebirth and an individualistic piety, it developed an ecclesiological agenda that included the reform of worship. Church music should be confined almost exclusively to simple hymns, so elaborate forms and the use of a wide range of instruments were to be eliminated.

Spener, through his prolific writings, correspondence and many disciples, exerted an enormous influence, particularly among the nobility. Not all his writings promoted Pietism; some were similar to the writings of Lutheran orthodoxy, such as his volumes of catechism and Reformation-day sermons. He was also less radical than his successors, though was frequently blamed for their excesses.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

P. Grünberg: Philipp Jakob Spener (Göttingen, 1893–1906) [vol.iii contains a list of works]
M. Schmidt: 'Spener, Philipp Jakob', Die Religion in Geschichte und Gegenwart, ed. K. Galling (Tübingen, 3/1957–65)
M. Geck: 'Ph.J. Spener und die Kirchenmusik', Musik und Kirche, xxxi (1961), 97–106, 172–84
M. Geck: Die Vokalmusik Dietrich Buxtehudes und der frühe Pietismus (Kassel, 1965), chaps. 4–5
M. Brecht: Die Anfänge des Pietismus (Göttingen, 1979)
C. Bunners: 'Philipp Jakob Spener und Johann Crüger: ein Beitrag zur Hymnologie des Pietismus', Theologische Versuche, xiv (1985), 105–30
M. Brecht: Philipp Jakob Spener (Göttingen, 1986)
J. Wallmann: Philipp Jakob Spener und die Anfänge des Pietismus (Tübingen, 1970, 2/1986)
M. Brecht: 'Philipp Jakob Spener, sein Programm und dessen Auswirkung', Geschichte des Pietismus, i (Göttingen, 1993), 279–389
H.-E. Chi: Philipp Jakob Spener und seine Pia desideria (Frankfurt, 1997)

TRAUTE MAASS MARSHALL/ROBIN A. LEAVER

Speranza, Alessandro (b Palma Campania, nr Nola, *c*1728; d Naples, 17 Nov 1797). Italian composer. According to Villarosa and Florimo he attended the conservatory of S Maria di Loreto in Naples, and according to Fétis that of S Onofrio. Speranza was a favourite pupil of Francesco Durante, who read and corrected his Principi di contrappunto and Studii, both written during this period. He became a priest and developed a good reputation as a teacher of singing and counterpoint; Selvaggi and Zingarelli were among his many pupils. According to Carpani, Speranza required his students to compose in quick succession 30 settings of a single aria text, varying key and tempo with each setting but without departing from the character of the text; this manner of training gave his pupils, particularly Zingarelli, a notable facility. Speranza also served as maestro di cappella at several Neapolitan churches, particularly that of the Franciscans of S Luigi di Palazzo. Speranza left a small amount of church music and several keyboard pieces of which Dagnino singled out a toccata and fugue as being 'of greater than usual value, gracious in design, sound in form, bursting with originality'.

WORKS

4 masses, 2–3vv (1 with insts), I-Mc; Credo, 2vv, MC; Benedictus, Nc, Nf (2 versions); Christe eleison, Recordare, 4vv, insts, Mc; Litany, 3vv, insts, Mc
Lamentations for Holy Thursday and Holy Saturday, S, org, Mc, Nc, Nf; Lamentations, Oratio Jeremiae prophetae, S, org, Mc; turbe for Palm Sunday and Good Friday, 3vv, org, Mc, Nc; St Matthew Passion, Mc, Nc
3 Christus–Miserere, Mc, MC, Nc; Miserere, 2 choruses, org, vc, Mc, MC, Nc, Nf; Miserere, MC; Christus, S, chorus, str, Mc; Regina caeli, 3vv, Mc; Salve regina, inc., Nc; Tenebrae antiphons, 2vv, Nf
Secular: Care puer, aria, S, org, Mc; In quegli occhi o bricconcella, duet, from I due Figaro, Mc; S'adori il sol nascente, duet, MC; Solfeggi, S, bc, Nc
Kbd: 6 divertimentos, hpd, MC; Sonata con pastorale, MC; Toccata e fuga, org, MC

WRITINGS

Principi di contrappunto ... emendati dal Sig. Durante (MS, Nc)
Studii ... sotto la correzione di D. Franco Durante (MS, Nc)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FétisB; FlorimoN; RosaM
G. Carpani: Le Haydine, ovvero Lettere su la vita e le opere del celebre maestro Giuseppe Haydn (Milan, 1812, 2/1823/R; Eng. trans., 1839 as The Life of Haydn in Letters), 42–3
E. Dagnino: 'L'archivio musicale di Montecassino', Casinensia, i, (1929), 273–96

SIEGFRIED GMEINWIESER

Speranza, Giovanni Antonio (b Mantua, 1811; d Milan, 1850). Italian composer. He studied at the Naples Conservatory with Zingarelli, and his first operas were produced there. Speranza composed with considerable regularity but, with the exception of the widely produced I due Figaro (1839), success eluded him. He belongs to a large group of his generation who retained the conventions of Rossini's time without succeeding in revitalizing them. He led a rather disorderly life and died insane.

WORKS
(selective list)

OPERAS

La tragedia buffa (dg, 2, G.F. Schmidt), Naples, Nuovo, aut. 1833
Gianni di Parigi (dg, 2, F. Romani), Naples, Nuovo, spr. 1836
I due Figaro, ossia Il soggetto d'una commedia (melodramma giocoso, 2, Romani), Turin, Carignano, 30 Oct 1839
Egli è di moda ovvero I begli usi di città (ob, 2, A. Anelli), Lucca, Pantera, carn. 1840
L'Aretino (melodramma giocoso, 2, G. Giachetti), Turin, Carignano, 17 Oct 1840
Il postiglione di Longjumeau (melodramma, 3, A. P.), Lucca, Pantera, 26 Dec 1841
Saul (tragedia lirica biblica, 2, Romani), Florence, Pergola, 8 April 1844
Il mantello, ovvero Lo sposo statua (ob, 2, F. Rubino), Turin, Sutera, carn. 1845

Amore a suon di tamburo (ob, Rubino), Naples, Nuovo, sum. 1845
Scherzo melodrammatico (ob), Florence, Feb 1847
Yava [Java] (commedia, 2, G. di Giurdignano), Naples, Fondo, 2 April 1847
La figlia di Domenico, ossia Quattro prove per una recita (farsa, 1), Florence, Pergola, carn. 1848; rev. as Il padre dell'esordiente, Livorno, Rossini, Jan 1848
L'alloggio militare (ob, Torrignini), unperf.

WILLIAM ASHBROOK

Speratus [Spreth], Paul (b Rötlen bei Ellwangen, 13 Dec 1484; d Marienwerder [now Kwidzyn], 12 Aug 1551). German hymnographer and theologian. He studied philosophy, law and theology in Vienna, Paris and Italy, and was ordained priest after earning his doctorate. In 1516 he was elected preacher at Salzburg Cathedral and obtained the same position at Würzburg Cathedral in 1519. Owing to his support of Luther, he was dismissed the following year, excommunicated by the theological faculty of Vienna in 1522, summoned to Olmütz (now Olomouc) and imprisoned without trial in 1523 and sentenced to burn. He was released through the intervention of Bohemian nobility and took refuge with the Bohemian Brethren. In October 1523 he went with Michael Weisse to Wittenberg, where he translated into German many of Luther's Latin writings, including the Formula missae (Wittenberg, 1523; trans. 1524). Upon Luther's recommendation, he became court preacher for Prince Albrecht of Prussia and moved to Königsberg (now Kaliningrad) in 1524. In Prussia he was instrumental in establishing the liturgy of the newly founded Protestant church; in 1530 he became Lutheran Bishop of Pomerania in Marienwerder.

For Speratus, hymns were of great importance to the church service, and he encouraged their development both through his own compositions and his editions of new collections. His first hymn, Es ist das Heil, composed in prison in 1523, was included in Luther's Achtliederbuch (1524/R). Once settled in Königsberg, Speratus introduced the Geystliches Gesangk Buchleyn of Johann Walther (i) to the court in 1524 and edited two collections, Etlich gesang dadurch Got ... gelobt wirt and Etliche newe verdeutschte ... Hymnus vn. geseng (both Königsberg, 1527, repr. in J. Müller-Blattau, ed., Die zwei ältesten Königsberger Gesangbücher von 1527, Kassel, 1933), which include his own texts and melodies. He also encouraged other composers to write hymns and helped compile Kugelmann's Concentus novi (Augsburg, 1540, ed. in EDM, Sonderreihe, ii, 1955). As a poet he was influenced by the Meistergesang, and of his 49 hymn texts, seven are set to hymn melodies that he composed.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

EitnerQ; MGG1 (S. Fornaçon); ZahnM
C. Cosack: Paulus Speratus, Leben und Lieder (Brunswick, 1861)
P. Tschackart: Paul Speratus von Rötlen, evangelischer Bischof von Pomesanien in Marienwerder (Halle, 1891)

Sperger, Johannes (?Matthias) (b Feldsberg [now Valtice, Czech Republic], 23 March 1750; d Ludwigslust, 13 May 1812). German double bass player and composer. He apparently received his earliest musical training from the Feldsberg organist Franz Anton Becker. Several copies in Sperger's hand of theoretical works survive, and contrapuntal exercises in the Schwerin Wissenschaftliche Allgemeinbibliothek testify to his studies under Albrechtsberger in Vienna. He is said to have made his début as a composer there at the age of 18, and a symphony and a double bass concerto of his were performed by the Tonkünstler-Societät in 1778.

As one of the leading double bass players of the day, Sperger saw service in several important court musical establishments, first in that of Cardinal von Batthyani at Pressburg (1777–83), then (1783–6) with the Counts von Erdődy at Fidisch (near Ebebrau), Burgenland. A supposed period in the service of Prince Esterhazy under Haydn is not documented. Following the death of Count Ladislav Erdődy, Sperger returned to Vienna, but apparently without employment, and he had to make a living as a copyist. In the search for a position Sperger undertook several extended journeys (between December 1787 and June 1788 he went to Prague, Berlin, Ludwigslust, Ansbach and Passau, and from March to June 1789 to Parma, Trieste and Bologna). In July 1789 he took up an appointment to the Duke of Mecklenburg at Ludwigslust, where he remained for the rest of his life, though he made several journeys and guest appearances as a player and composer in Lübeck, Berlin, Leipzig and Vienna. An important biographical source is Sperger's Catalog über verschückte Musicalien (D-SWl Mus.3065), containing details of many of his major compositions – many of them sent to members of the nobility from whom he sought employment.

Sperger's reputation as a leading double bass player is generously acknowledged by critical writing of the time; his achievements as an executant were generally accorded more significance than his prolific output as a composer. The obituary notice in the Allgemeine musikalische Zeitung (xiv, 1812, col.432) is typical:

> The orchestra loses in him one of its most distinguished members in that he displayed a rare mastery and purpose on his instrument, knowing how to impart character to the performance as a whole. Apart from these distinctions as an outstanding ripienist, Sperger also performed concertos on the double bass, composed by himself, as well as a number of symphonies, all of which, being in an attractive style and imposing no burdens for their performance, should be suitable for amateur concerts.

The Schwerin manuscripts of Sperger's symphonies and parthias often reveal exceptional skill and delight in instrumentation, especially in the extensive use of obbligato and concertante soloists and of groups of wind instruments. In this respect several of the symphonies may be said to belong to the popular sinfonia concertante literature of the period. His concertos for double bass were both innovatory and technically demanding for the soloist. Sperger's authority was felt for several generations after his death, influencing particularly Capuzzi and Dragonetti.

WORKS

Catalogue: Thematisches Werkverzeichnis der Kompositionen von Johannes Sperger (1750–1812), ed. A. Meier and E. Thom (Michaelstein, nr Blankenburg, 1990)

Orch: 45 syms., A-Wn, B-Bc, CH-Bu, D-Bsb, Dl, SWl, incl. 1 ed. H. Förster (Vienna and Munich, *c*1996); 18 db concs., incl. 1 ed. in Pro musica (Leipzig, 1956), no.174, 1. ed. R. Malarić (Vienna and Munich, 1983), 1 ed. P. Mucke (Vienna and Munich, 1984); concs. for hn (2), 1 ed. E. Leloir (Paris, 1975), tpt (2), 1 ed. L. Güttler (Leipzig, 1994), 1 ed. H.M. Stamm (Leverkusen, *c*1996), fl, bn, va, vc, SWl; Sinfonia concertante, fl, va, db, SWl, ed. R. Malarić (Vienna, 1988); Adagio, va, str, SWl; Romance, db, str, SWl, ed. R. Malarić (Vienna, 1988); 2 Adagios, db, insts, SWl, ed. R. Malarić (Vienna, 1988); numerous parthias, divertimentos, cassations, incl. 2 ed. R. Malarić (Vienna, 1980), DO, SWl, H-Bn

Chbr: 2 nonets, octet, septet, 2 sextets, 2 qnts, D-SWl; 9 str qts, A-Sca, D-SWl, incl. 3 as op.1 (Berlin, 1792); 14 fl qts incl. 1 ed. K. Trumpf (Hofheim am Taunus, 1975), 2 ob qts, other qts, fl duets incl. 1 ed. in Mw, xlvi (1972), 6 divertimentos, vc, hpd, SWl; sonatas, va, db, SWl, incl. 1 ed. in Diletto musicale, no.272 (Vienna, 1967), 1 ed. D. Walter (Cincinnati, OH, 1981); 6 pf qts, SWl, Dl; Rondo, fl, 2 hn, vn, va, db, ed. in Diletto musicale (Vienna, 1971), no.371; 2 terzettos, fl, str (n.p., n.d.), 1 ed. R. Malarić (Vienna and Munich, 1988); 11 str trios, SWl, SK-TR, 6 ed. D. Múdra (Bratislava, 1982); other works

Kbd: Divertimento, 2 sonatas, transcriptions, pf, D-SWl; Praeambulas, Praeludien, org, SWl

Various festive cants., masonic music, other choral music, some doubtful

BIBLIOGRAPHY

GerberNL

H. Federhofer: 'Musiktheoretische Schriften aus Johannes Matthias Spergers Besitz', SPFFBU, F9 (1965), 71–7

A.D. McCredie: 'Investigations into the Symphony of the Haydn-Mozart Era: the North German Manuscripts, an Interim Survey', MMA, ii (1967), 75–158

A. Meier: Konzertante Musik für Kontrabass in der Wiener Klassik (Prien, 1969, 2/1973)

A. Planyavsky: Geschichte des Kontrabasses (Tutzing, 1970, enlarged 2/1987 with H. Seifert)

K. Trumpf: 'Johann Matthias Sperger: ein bedeutender Kontrabassist und Komponist des 18. Jahrhunderts', Die Saiteninstrumente in der ersten Hälfte des 18. Jahrhunderts: Blankenburg, Harz 1978, 103–19

Sperger-Kolloquium: Blankenburg, Harz, 1987

ANDREW D. McCREDIE

Sperling, Johann Peter Gabriel (b 1671; d Bautzen, nr Dresden, bur. 6 March 1720). German theorist and composer. In 1705 he was appointed choirmaster at the cathedral of St Peter in Bautzen, and in 1708 he became secretary to the cathedral as well. He was also secretary to the local magistrates.

Sperling's two theoretical works, Principia musicae and Porta musica, both set out to teach singers the basic principles of solmization and notation. Principia is one of the most comprehensive books of its kind, containing an unusually large number of musical examples in which difficult points are carefully explained. The material is presented with great clarity, using the question and answer method, and advancing in very easy stages. Frequent tests ensure that the pupil has a sure grasp of what he has learned. Sperling deals not only with solmization (which he bases on an old-fashioned six-line staff) but also with modern notation and with ornaments. These, he said, could greatly improve a melody, if used with knowledge and taste. He explained many foreign musical terms and gave singers instructions on breathing and on the correct declamation of words. Among the composers he quoted are J.J. Walther, J.H. Schmelzer and J.C.F. Fischer. The treatise also includes four psalm settings, for one voice and continuo, and six exercises for two violins, by Sperling himself. Sperling's other book, Porta musica, presents much the same material as Principia, but in a considerably compressed form.

Sperling's only extant composition, the Concentus vespertinus seu psalmi minores per annum (Bautzen, 1700), is typical of the small amount of church music published in south Germany in the first two decades of the 18th century, especially in its scoring, with two violins and continuo and with three violas or trombones doubling the three lower voices.

WRITINGS

Principia musicae, das ist: Gründliche Anweisung zur Music, wie ein Music-Scholar vom Anfang instruiret und nach der Ordnung zur Kunst oder Wissenschaft der Figurai-Music soll geführet … werden (Bautzen, 1705)

Porta musica, das ist: Eingang zur Music oder Nothwendigste Gründe, Welche einem Music-liebenden Discipul vor aller andern zur Music erfordeten Lehre beygebracht … werden müssen (Bautzen, 1708)

ELIZABETH ROCHE

Sperontes [Scholze, Johann Sigismund] (b Lobendau bei Liegnitz, Silesia, 20 March 1705; d Leipzig, 28 Sept 1750). German poet and musical anthologist. After receiving his schooling in Liegnitz, Sperontes apparently settled in Leipzig some time during the mid-1720s to take up the study of law. There is, however, no official record of his matriculation at the University of Leipzig. His career as a poet and amateur musician had its roots in his association with university student groups and later with a number of Leipzig's musical and literary 'societies'. Sperontes, in fact, may well have written his Singspiel Der Frühling (1749, the music, now lost, by one Johann Gottlieb August Fritzsch) and perhaps also the anonymous Der Winter for one of the collegia musica of Leipzig. Similarly, his pastoral plays, Das Kätzgen (1746), Die Kirms (1746) and Das Strumpfband (1748), could have originated in the circle surrounding the leading Leipzig poet of the time, Johann Christoph Gottsched, to which Sperontes evidently belonged.

Sperontes's most significant work is the Singende Muse an der Pleisse, a collection of poems set as strophic songs to adaptations of the 'newest and best music compositions' (see illustration). The initial publication of 1736, containing 100 poems (and 68 compositions), proved to be so popular that it was followed by three further sets with 50 numbers each (ii, 1742; iii, 1743; iv, 1745; ed. in DDT, xxxv–xxxvi, 1909/R). Since a number of the items no doubt date from Sperontes's student days in the 1720s, while a complete edition of the four parts, presumably prepared under the poet's supervision, appeared in 1751 (shortly after his death), the Singende Muse represents a lifelong occupation. In its final form the collection contains 250 poems with 248 different musical settings. Individual songs from the Singende Muse also circulated in manuscripts and broadsides well into the second half of the 18th century throughout the German-speaking world as far as Vienna and even in Russia. Some assumed the status of folksongs.

The Singende Muse clearly fulfilled a need among the emerging German middle classes. The deliberately unpretentious poetry affirmed their values and sympathetically depicted their everyday activities. The texts extol variously the virtues of patience, constancy, love, friendship, moderation and hope, and recount the delights of country and city life, the seasons, billiards, keyboard and card playing, tobacco, coffee and tea. In the third edition of part i (1747) Sperontes completely re-ordered the first 75 songs to form a continuous narrative, perhaps creating thereby the earliest secular song cycle. The naturalistic and personal tone of Sperontes's poetry reflects the influence of his compatriot Johann Christian Günther, 15 of whose poems were in fact included in the first edition of part i. Other verifiable poetic influences include German folksong and the works of C.F. Hunold ('Menantes'), Erdmann Neumeister, C.F. Henrici ('Picander'), S.G. Corvinus, Christian Hofmann von Hofmannswaldau and Weise.

The music of the Singende Muse consists overwhelmingly of popular pre-existing instrumental and vocal compositions to which Sperontes invented his verses. The practice specifically of texting (or 'parodying') instrumental pieces originated in France in the late 17th century and had since been adopted in Germany, mainly by university students whose efforts, surviving in several manuscript collections, served as direct models for Sperontes. For the most part Sperontes seems to have drawn on French, but also on English, German and Italian, musical sources. Because the compositions were evidently modified or distorted considerably in their transmission – probably the work of local composers engaged by Sperontes – it has not been possible to identify more than a handful of pieces; this free treatment of borrowed material is reminiscent of Voigtländer's Oden unnd Lieder (1642). 18th-century documents ascribe two pieces to J.S. Bach: 'Ich bin nun, wie ich bin' and 'Dir zu Liebe, wertes Herze' (BWV Anh. 40 and 41). Basso continuo accompaniments dominate the early volumes, while later volumes contain many written-out accompaniments.

Title-page of Sperontes's 'Singende Muse an der Pleisse' (Leipzig, 1736); engraving by Christian Friedrich Boëtius

Sperontes preferred the latest instrumental forms: polonaises, minuets, murkies and marches, over such older types as the sarabande, bourrée and gavotte. With their emphasis on modern instrumental dance forms, the lieder of the Singende Muse manifest the direct rhythms, clear phrasing and sectionalism, simple textures and harmonies of the progressive galant style. And, by avoiding the ornate vocal writing of the Italian opera, Sperontes established a precedent for differentiating lied and aria styles. But the adaptation of instrumental music often resulted, particularly in the early volumes of the collection, in wide ranges and large leaps that were distinctly unvocal and in an unnatural declamation of the text. Such abuses, often called 'Sperontisms' at the time, prompted contemporary critics like J.A. Scheibe to reflect on the proper construction of a song. Thus the Singende Muse helped also to stimulate a theoretical foundation for the emerging lied.

The appearance in print of the first part of the Singende Muse marked the end of the so-called 'Liederlose Zeit' (songless era), the first three decades of the 18th century, during which the popularity of the imported Italian opera brought the cultivation and publication of German song to a virtual standstill; its direct predecessor, Musicalische Rüstkammer (Leipzig, 1719), also helped to stem the italianate tide. In addition, the remarkable success of Sperontes's anthology initiated almost immediately a powerful resurgence of song production which was to continue throughout the century, forming the matrix for the lieder masterpieces of the 19th-century Romantics.

See LIED, §II, 3.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

KretzschmarG

P. Spitta: 'Sperontes "Singende Muse an der Pleisse": zur Geschichte des deutschen Hausgesanges im 18. Jahrhundert', VMw, i (1885), 35–126; repr. with revisions in Spitta: Musikgeschichtliche Aufsätze (Berlin, 1894/R), 175–295

A. Kopp: 'Gedichte von Günther und Sperontes im Volksgesang', Zeitschrift für deutsche Philologie, xxvii (1895), 351–64

H. Abert: 'Sperontes, Singende Muse an der Pleisse', ZIMG, xii (1910), 70–72
H. von Hase: 'Sperontes, Singende Muse an der Pleisse', ZIMG, xiv (1912–13), 93–104
A. Schering: 'Zwei Singspiele des Sperontes', ZMw, vii (1924–5), 214–20
M. Seiffert: 'Die Sperontes-Lieder: Ich bin nun wie ich bin – Ihr Schönen höret an und Seb. Bach', Festschrift Fritz Stein zum 60. Geburtstag, ed. H. Hoffmann and F. Rühlmann (Brunswick, 1939), 66–70
R.W. Brednich: 'Die Rastatter Liederhandschrift von 1769', Jb für Volksliedforschung, xiii (1968), 26–58
J.W. Smeed: German Song and its Poetry, 1740–1900 (London, 1987)
S. Kross: Geschichte des deutschen Liedes (Darmstadt, 1989)

ROBERT L. MARSHALL/DIANNE M. McMULLEN

Sperrventil (Ger.). The 'blocking valve' on an organ for preventing wind reaching a chest, saving it for other chests or keeping it from sounding a ciphering note. It is useful to the player as a registration aid, as it allows the fast addition of manual reeds or heavy pedal stops while playing. See ORGAN STOP.

Spervogel (Ger.: 'sparrow'). A name applied to three German poets of the 12th and 13th centuries. All three wrote Sprüche (see SPRUCH), and in the absence of documentary evidence it is difficult to attribute securely the poems ascribed to them in manuscripts that have ascriptions of dubious validity.

(1) Älterer Spervogel [Herger, Heriger, Kerling, Spervogel I, Spervogel Anonymus] (*fl c*1150–80). An itinerant poet of the Bavarian Danube region and the central Rhineland to whom an early collection of 28 formally identical Sprüche under the name 'Spervogel' has now been attributed. No music survives. In terms of his formal technique and his strong religious conviction he belongs among the early pioneers of Spruch poetry.

(2) Spervogel [Spervogel II] (fl before or ?shortly after 1200). He was perhaps a contemporary of Reinmar (der Alte) von Hagenau and Walther von der Vogelweide. 23 formally identical Spruch stanzas survive, one of them (Swâ ein vriunt dem andern vriunde) with a melody (in D-Ju El.f.101, f.29) which must serve for them all and which is apparently one of the few remaining examples of direct musical evidence from the era of classical Minnesang. His poems are somewhat similar to those of (1) Älterer Spervogel, but they lack the religious viewpoint.

(3) Der junge Spervogel (fl early or mid-13th century). There are ascriptions to him (perhaps erroneous) of five Sprüche in the Kleine Heidelberger Liederhandschrift and in the Manessesche Liederhandschrift in the so-called Ton III; two of these also appear among a group of 16 Spruch stanzas in the Colmar Liederhandschrift with an incomplete melody and an ascription to 'der junge Stolle' (who, Kohnle has suggested, might be identified with REINMAR VON ZWETER).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

K. Lachmann and M. Haupt, eds.: Des Minnesangs Frühling (Leipzig, 1857, rev. 38/1988 by H. Moser and H. Tervooren) [text edn of all three poets]
P. Runge, ed.: Die Sangesweisen der Colmarer Handschrift und die Liederhandschrift Donaueschingen (Leipzig, 1896/R)
H. Spanke: 'Romanische und mittellateinische Formen in der Metrik von Minnesangs Frühling', Zeitschrift für romanische Philologie, xlix (1929), 191–235
E.H. Kohnle: Studien zu den Ordnungsgrundsätzen mittelhochdeutscher Liederhandschriften (Stuttgart, 1934), 142ff
R.J. Taylor, ed.: The Art of the Minnesinger (Cardiff, 1968)
K. Ruh: 'Mittelhochdeutsche Spruchdichtung als gattungsgeschichtliches Problem', Mittelhochdeutsche Spruchdichtung, ed. H. Moser (Darmstadt, 1972), 205–26
V. Honeman: 'Herger', Die deutsche Literatur des Mittelalters: Verfasserlexikon, ed. K. Ruh and others (Berlin, 2/1977–)
V. Mertens and B. Wachinger: 'Der Junge Stolle', ibid.
H. Tervooren: 'Spervogel', ibid.
B. Wachinger: 'Der junge Spervogel', ibid.
H. Brunner, B. Wachinger and others, eds.: Repertorium der Sangsprüche und Meisterlieder, v (Tübingen, 1991), 377–89

For further bibliography see MINNESANG.

BURKHARD KIPPENBERG/LORENZ WELKER

Speth, Johannes (b Speinshart, Upper Palatinate, 9 Nov 1664; d Augsburg, *c*1720). German organist and composer. He received his first musical education from Dominikus Lieblein, abbot of the Premonstratensian monastery at Speinshart. On 4 November 1692 he was appointed organist of Augsburg Cathedral; he resigned in 1694 but lived in Augsburg until his death.

The pieces in the three parts of Speth's Ars magna were intended primarily for the organ, although according to the preface they could be played on the clavichord. Walther (1732) said that Speth collected these pieces and was not their composer; this seems unlikely, although he may have composed some of the pieces as early as 1680.

WORKS

Ars magna Consoni et Dissoni in vireto hoc Organico-Instrumentali Musico, vere et practice ab Oculos posita. Das ist: Organisch-Instrumentalischer Kunst-, Zier- und Lust-Garten: in welchem Erstens: Zehen Lehren-reiche, ausserlesene Toccaten, oder Musicalische Blumen-Felder: Zweytens: 8 Magnificat, samt denen darzu gehörigen Praeambulis, Versen, Clausulen &c auf die acht Chor-oder Choral-Thon eingericht: und so dann Drittens: unterschiedliche Arien, mit vielen schönen Variationen, und anderen Galanterien vorgestellt werden (Augsburg, 1693); ed. T. Fedtke (Kassel, 1973)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ApelG; WaltherML
G. Beechey: 'A 17th-Century German Organ Tutor', MT, cxiii (1972), 86–9

GWILYM BEECHEY

Spetrino, Francesco (b Palermo, 2 July 1857; d Rome, 27 July 1948). Italian conductor and composer. Schmidl gives his birthdate as 2 June 1857. While still a student of Pietro Platania at the Palermo Conservatory, he produced his first opera, Filippo II (1876). Most of his life was spent conducting theatre orchestras throughout Europe and in North America. From 1876 to 1892 he conducted in the major Italian theatres to great acclaim, and after that abroad: he went to Warsaw in 1894, where he conducted at the Wielki Theatre for five years. In 1901 in Lemberg he conducted Paderewski's opera Manrù with great success. From 1903 to 1908 he was conductor for the Italian repertory at the Hofoper in Vienna, under the direction of Mahler, giving the first Madama Butterfly outside Italy (1907). On Mahler's recommendation he conducted at the Metropolitan Opera in the 1908–9 season, but without success. During World War I he returned to Italy, but was forced to abandon his career for family reasons. Spetrino composed very little: two operas, two ballets, some songs and chamber pieces. He also translated Parsifal into Italian for the publisher Sonzogno.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

SchmidlD
F. Caburi: 'L'Italia a Vienna con Francesco Spetrino', Giornale d'Italia (25 Nov 1953)

H.-L. de La Grange: Mahler (New York, 1973–; Fr. trans., rev., 1980–)

MARVIN TARTAK

Speuy, Henderick [Hendrick, Hendrik] (Joostzoon) [Joosten] (b Brielle, *c*1575; d Dordrecht, 1 Oct 1625). Dutch composer and organist. He became organist of the Grote Kerk and the Augustijnen Kerk, Dordrecht, in 1595. From 22 July of that year his annual salary was 150 pounds (his predecessor had received only 18), and the city paid him an additional 250 pounds a year. His duties were outlined by the church council in a document dated 1598: immediately after the sermon he was to begin playing five or six psalms one after the other and might then, if he wished, play other pieces, provided that they were 'grave [and] devotional' and that he avoided motets and frivolous pieces. He must have fulfilled these requirements well, for he kept his position as a highly respected organist until the end of his life. In 1621 the burgomaster was petitioned to allow him to play on Sunday afternoons in addition to the usual times before and after the morning sermon. Speuy must also have played the harpsichord, since in 1604 the civic authorities bought a harpsichord that was to be placed in the care of 'Master Hendrick' and used to the honour of the city. He published De psalmen Davids, gestelt op het tabulatuer van het orghel ende clavecymmel met 2. partijen (Dordrecht, 1610; ed. F. Noske, Amsterdam, 1962; Ps xlii wrongly attributed to Sweelinck and published in his Werken voor orgel en clavecimbel, i, Amsterdam, 1943, p.199). This volume of bicinia for organ or harpsichord is the only print of Dutch keyboard music before Anthoni van Noordt's Tabulatuurboeck of 1659 and the only extant contribution to this genre by a Dutch contemporary of Sweelinck. His music is similar in style to Sweelinck's but generally shows less imagination and unity, as can be seen from a comparison of their settings of Psalm cxvi. He often alternated the psalm melody between the upper and lower voices, while Sweelinck kept it in the same voice. Speuy also published Certains pseaumes de David (1621), but it is lost.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

H. Bol: 'Hendrik Joosten Speuy, een tijdgenoot van Sweelinck', Het orgel, liv (1958), 97–100, 129–32

A. Curtis: 'Henderick Speuy and the Earliest Printed Dutch Keyboard Music', TVNM, xix/3–4 (1963), 143–62

ALAN CURTIS (with PIETER DIRKSEN)

Speyer, Eduard. German musician, son of WILHELM SPEYER.

Speyer [Speier], Wilhelm (b Offenbach, 21 June 1790; d Offenbach, 5 April 1878). German violinist and composer. He studied law at Heidelberg and the violin with Baillot in Paris (1811–13). In 1818 he went to Italy but on his father's death the next year took over the family banking business. Nevertheless, he remained musically active and, especially after 1830, became a prominent force in Frankfurt. Liszt, Mendelssohn and Spohr knew him. He composed a great deal and wrote criticism locally and for the Allgemeine musikalische Zeitung. In 1838 he helped establish the first German choral singing festival. His violin duets and songs, including Der Trompeter op.31, Die drei Liebchen op.33 and Rheinsehnsucht op.42, were particularly well known, though he also wrote choral and chamber pieces in a polished and attractive style.

Speyer's son Eduard (b Frankfurt, 14 May 1839; d Shenley, Herts., 8 Jan 1934) moved to England in 1859 and became successful in business. He organized concerts in London and was a founder and chairman of the Classical Concert Society. He owned a considerable collection of musical autographs and early editions. The soprano Antonia Kufferath became his second wife in 1885, and their many musical friends included Clara Schumann, Brahms and Elgar.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

E. Speyer: Wilhelm Speyer der Liederkomponist (Munich, 1925)

E. Speyer: My Life and Friends (London, 1937)

A.H. King: Some British Collectors of Music c.1600–1960 (Cambridge, 1963)

C. Suttoni: 'Liszt's Letters, V', American Liszt Society Journal, vi (1979), 34–6

M. Saffle: Liszt in Germany 1840–1845 (Stuyvesant, NY, 1994)

DAVID CHARLTON

Sphärophon. The generic name for a group of monophonic electronic instruments developed primarily for use in microtonal music by JÖRG MAGER in Berlin between 1921 and 1928.

Spialek, Hans (b Vienna, 17 April 1894; d New York, 20 Nov 1983). American orchestrator, arranger and composer of Austrian birth. His early studies included composing and conducting at the Vienna Conservatory. Captured by the Russians during World War I, he led a prisoners' orchestra, later studying with Glier in Moscow. Spialek emigrated to New York in 1924 with his wife, the singer Dora Boshoer. Nearly three decades were spent at Chappell as arranger and copyist, including orchestrations for around 150 Broadway musicals. He shared an office with Robert Russell Bennett, with whom he collaborated on arrangements for dozens of shows. The period 1936–40 was his zenith in the theatre; he worked extensively with Porter (You Never Know, Du Barry was a Lady, Panama Hattie, Something for the Boys) and Rodgers and Hart (including Babes in Arms, I Married an Angel, and The Boys from Syracuse). His theatre orchestrations are distinguished by their wittiness, frequent text-painting and masterful use of minimum resources.

Many of his early compositions were published in Europe, while later ones often incorporated the rhythms and harmonies of American popular music. NBC commissioned The Tall City (1933), which was performed by several American orchestras, as were his Sinfonietta (1936) and Demon Variations (1939). Manhattan Watercolors (1937), with narration and ersatz commercial announcements, is among those works composed specifically for radio.

Less active in the theatre after 1940, Spialek wrote and conducted for radio, civic pageants and trade shows. He worked frequently for showman Billy Rose, including expositions in Cleveland and Fort Worth and the 1939–40 New York World's Fair. Occasional theatre assignments continued as late as 1967's Mata Hari. The early 1980s brought renewed interest in the restoration and recording of America's pre-war musicals, and Spialek earned the adulation of a new generation of theatre scholars and enthusiasts by reconstructing his 1930s scoring for Rodgers's On Your Toes and Porter's Anything Goes. The manuscripts of his papers and compositions are held in the Library of Congress.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. Stuart: 'Behind the Scenes', New York World-Telegram (15 June 1943)

'The Boys that Make the Noise', Time (5 July 1943)

J. Pareles: 'What is the Sound of Broadway? Hans Spialek Knows', New York Times (17 April 1983)

GEORGE J. FERENCZ

Spianato (It.: 'level', 'smooth', 'even'; past participle of spianare, 'to smooth out'). A word used by Chopin in the Andante that precedes the Polonaise in E♭ op.22 to denote a smooth, even style of performance with little dynamic variety.

FRANKLIN TAYLOR/R

Spiccato (It.). In modern string playing, a short, off-the-string bow stroke. The term is sometimes synonymous with the bouncing stroke SAUTILLÉ. Before 1750, however, 'spiccato' and 'staccato' were regarded as equivalent terms (in, for example, Brossard's Dictionaire, 1703, and Corrette's L'École d'Orphée, 1738) meaning simply detached or separated as opposed to legato.

See BOW, §II, 2(vii) and 3(viii).

DAVID D. BOYDEN/PETER WALLS

Spiegando (It.: 'spreading', 'unfolding'; gerund of spiegare). A direction occasionally used to indicate an increase, especially in volume. The past participle spiegato ('spread', 'unfolded') is also occasionally found.

Spiegel, Laurie (b Chicago, 20 Sept 1945). American composer. She studied classical guitar, theory and composition with John Duarte at Oxford University, and composition with Jacob Druckman at the Juilliard School (1969–72) and Brooklyn College, CUNY (MA 1975). She began to compose computer music at Bell Laboratories with Ghent and Mathews (1973–9, 1984). Her teaching appointments have included positions at New York University, where she founded the computer music studio (1982–3), the Aspen Music Festival (1971–3) and Cooper Union for the Advancement of Science and Art, New York (1980–81). She has also served as artist-in-residence at the WNET Experimental Television Laboratory (1976). Her honours include awards from the Institute for Studies in American Music (1973–4), Meet the Composer (1975–7, 1979–80) and the New York Foundation for the Arts (1991–2). Her numerous articles appear in such publications as Computer Music Journal and Electronic Musician Magazine.

As a software designer and computer programmer, Spiegel has worked as a consultant for firms involved in signal processing and information technology. She helped to design the AlphaSyntauri and McLeyvier synthesizers and is widely known for her interactive music programme Music Mouse – An Intelligent Instrument (1985). Written for Macintosh computers, the programme enhances a user's ability to automate selected aspects of composition, increasing the number of musical dimensions that can be controlled in real time and thus creating more spontaneous performances. Her works compiled as Unseen Worlds (1987–90) use this technology. Although her later compositions embody a complex intensity not present earlier, they often expose an understated sense of humour and an interest in a variety of American music traditions. Many of her works highlight the expressive capabilities of texture and timbre. Known primarily for her computer and electronic music, Spiegel has also written for acoustic instruments.

WORKS
(selective list)

TRADITIONAL MEDIA

Inst: A Deploration, fl, gui, 1971; An Earlier Time, gui, 1972; A Prelude and a Ponderous Passacaglia, gui, 1972; A Tablature Study, gui, 1974; After Dowland, gui, 1979; Song Without Words, theremin, gui, 1979; Hearing Things, chbr orch, 1983; A Stream, mand, 1984; Fantasy on a Theme from Duarte's English Suite, gui, 1990

Kbd (pf, unless otherwise stated): a la recherche du temps perdu, 1976; An Isorhythmic Double Canon, pf/str, 1979; A History of Music in One Movt, 1980; Winter Energy, 1981; A Modal Retrograde, 1982; A Twelve Tone Blues, 1982; 3 Movts on Descending Scales, 1982; A Cyclic Score, pf/2 solo insts, 1984; A Prelude and a Counterpoint, 1985; Returning East and After the Mountains, 1988; A Musette, 1990; 3 Movts, hpd, 1990

Vocal: 3 Motets in Sixteenth Century Style, 1971

ELECTRO-ACOUSTIC AND MULTIMEDIA

Dance Scores: Music for Dance, 1975; Waves, 1975; East River, 1976; Escalante, 1977; Nomads, 1981; Over Time, 1984; Gravity's Joke, 1985; Rain Pieces, 1985; Signals, 1986

Film and video scores: Cathode Ray Theater, 1974; Studies for Philharmonia, 1974, collab. T. DeWitt, P. Edelstein; War Mime, 1974; War Walls, 1974; Zierrot the Fool, 1974; Emma, 1975; Just a Day in the Life, 1975; Raster's Muse, 1975; Das Ring, 1975, collab. B. Etra; Narcissicon, 1976; Evolutions, 1977; Guadalcanal Requiem, 1977; Voyages, 1978; Zierrot in Outta Space, 1978; The Avenue of the Just, 1979; The Phantom Wolf, 1980; Precious Metals Variations, 1983; Point, 1984; Dissipative Fantasies, 1986; Dryads, 1988; Continuous Transformations, 1990; Stacked Julia Set, 1990

El-ac: Appalachian Grove I, 1974; The Expanding Universe, compilation, 1974–6; The Orient Express, 1974; Patchwork, 1974; Pentachrome, 1974; The Unquestioned Answer, 1974 [arr. pf/hp, cptr graphics, 1981]; Drums, 1976; Harmonia mundi, 1977; Improvisation on a Cptr, 1977; Realization of Kepler's Harmony of the Planets, 1977; Voices Within, requiem, 1979; Modes, 1980; Cavis muris, 1986; Unseen Worlds, compilation, 1987–90

Recorded interviews in US-NHoh

BIBLIOGRAPHY

E. Brubaker and P. Wetzler: 'Laurie Spiegel: Technofolk', Ear, xvi/2 (1991), 16–18 [interview]
C. Gagne: Soundpieces 2: Interviews with American Composers (New York, 1993), 295–332 [incl. work-list, discography, bibliography]
J. Chadabe: Electronic Sound (Upper Saddle River, NJ, 1997)
J. Bosse: 'Creating Options, Creating Music', CMR, xvi (1997), 81–7 [interview]

JOANNA BOSSE

Spiegler, Matthias (b Markdorf, Baden, *c*1595; d after 1631). German composer and organist. He was a priest and came from a middle-class family of good standing. It is not clear where he obtained his musical education, but it can be assumed that under the auspices of the Prince-Bishop of Konstanz, Jakob Fugger (1567–1626), he was a pupil of Hieronymus Bildstein both at Konstanz and at the episcopal residence at Meersburg on Lake Constance. In his Sancta Maria cantiones (Ravensburg, 1624) he is called 'Choro atque Organo Constantiae Praefectus'. After 1626 he succeeded Bildstein as head of the church and court music to the prince-bishop, and he still held the post in 1631. He presumably wrote his compositions for performance by the Konstanz and Meersburg musicians, and they are thus scored for a variety of forces. Two publications by him are known. The aforementioned Sancta Maria cantiones comprises 22 motets for three voices and continuo, the initial letters of whose titles form the acrostic 'Sancta Maria, ora pro nobis'. His other publication is Olor Solymaeus nascenti Jesu (Ravensburg, 1631). Of the 56 vocal pieces it contains, 11 are sacred concertos for solo voice and continuo, two of which have obbligato instrumental parts; the rest are motets for two to four voices with continuo. The volume also includes four instrumental pieces – a capriccio and three canzonas (two ed. in EDM, 1st ser., xiv, 1941).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

EitnerQ; MGG1 (E. Stiefel); WaltherML

E. Bohn: Bibliographie der Musik-Druckwerke bis 1700, welche . . . zu Breslau aufbewahrt werden (Berlin, 1883/R)

R. Mitjana y Gordón: Catalogue critique et descriptif des imprimés de musique des XVI et XVII siècles conservés à la Bibliothèque royale d'Upsala, i (Uppsala, 1911)

H. Schultz: Introduction and critical commentary to EDM, 1st ser., xiv (1941)

EBERHARD STIEFEL

Spielart (Ger.). See ACTION, (3).

Spieldose (Ger.). See MUSICAL BOX.

Spiele (Ger.). A term applied to free reeds, as in a HARMONIUM.

Spieloper (Ger.). A type of German 19th-century Comic opera with spoken dialogue between set musical numbers; there is no clear distinction between Spielopera and Singspiel (see SINGSPIEL, §2). Examples include Kreutzer's Das Nachtlager von Granada (1834), Lortzing's Zar und Zimmermann (1839) and Der Wildschütz (1842), Flotow's Martha (1847), Nicolai's Die lustigen Weibern von Windsor (1849) and Cornelius's Der Barbier von Bagdad (1858). It has also been used for non-German works such as Berlioz's Béatrice et Bénédict (1862) and Smetana's The Bartered Bride (1866).

The term has also been used for an all-sung opera as opposed to one with spoken dialogue (a Sprechoper).

Spies, Claudio (b Santiago, 26 March 1925). American composer of Chilean birth. He went to the USA in 1942 and studied at the New England Conservatory and with Boulanger; he also studied with Fine and Piston at Harvard University (BA 1950, MA 1954). He was instructor at Harvard (1953–7), lecturer at Vassar College (1957–8), and professor at Swarthmore College (1958–70) and at Princeton University (1970–95). In 1968 he directed a seminar in contemporary music at the Harvard summer school and conducted there the world première of the four preliminary versions of Stravinsky's The Wedding. He was a faculty member at the Salzburg Seminar in American Studies in 1976 and composer-in-residence at the University of Southern Florida in 1990. Among the honours he has received are the Lili Boulanger Memorial Award (1956), an award from the National Institute of Arts and Letters (1969) and an NEA fellowship grant (1975). He is the author of several essays on the music of Berg, Brahms, Mendelssohn, Schoenberg and Stravinsky.

His early compositions show affiliation with Stravinsky's pre-serial works. In 1959 Spies began to develop his own serial technique, which has imbued his music ever since. In his instrumental works he has often written for unusual combinations of instruments. Through his vocal writing he has explored the qualities of language and sought to create musical equivalents of the verbal and sonic relations contained in the text. Setting English, Spanish, German, Italian, Latin and Hebrew, he occasionally employs more than one language per work; Seven Sonnets/Sieben Sonette, in particular, combines Shakespeare's original with Paul Celan's German renderings of the same sonnets, and in one instance, in Sonnet 71, the two languages are set simultaneously. His musical style is characterized by a sense of economy; a terseness of expression yielding music of considerable intensity; rich and varied textures; detailed articulation and unceasing motion.

WORKS
(selective list)

VOCAL

Choral: In paradisum, SSATB, 1950; Verses from the Book of Ruth, SSAA, pf, 1959; Anima vagula, blandula (Hadrian), SATB, 1964; Proverbs on Wisdom, TTBB, org, pf, 1964; Facing the Music (P. Auster), solo vv, chbr chorus, pf 4 hands, 1996

Other vocal: Descanso el jardín (J. Guillén), T, Bar, 4 wind, 1957; Il cantico de frate sole (St Francis), Bar, orch, 1958; 7 Canons (A. Tibullus), S, T, fl, bn, pf, 1959; 5 Psalms, S, T, 6 insts, 1959; 3 Songs (M. Swenson), S, pf, 1969; 7 Enzensberger-Lieder, Bar, cl + b cl, hn, va, perc, 1972

Shirim le Hathunatham [Songs for their Wedding] (Y. Halevy), S, fl, cl, vn, vc, pf, 1975; 5 Sonnet Settings (W. Shakespeare), 4 solo vv, pf, 1976–7; Rilke: Rühmen, S, cl, tpt, pf, 1981; Tagyr (N. de Arce, R. Herrick), Bar, fl, cl, bn, hn, va, 1983; 7 Sonnets/7 Sonette (Shakespeare, Eng. with Ger. trans. P. Celan) S, B, cl + b cl, str trio, 1989; Dylan Thomas's 'Lament' and a Complementary 'Envoi', B, pf, 1990; 2 epigrammi ed 1 iscrizione (G. Strozzi, M. Buonarotto, It. with Ger. trans. by R.M. Rilke), S, Mez, mar, vib, va, 1997

INSTRUMENTAL

Orch: Music for a Ballet, 1955; Tempi, 14 insts, 1962; LXXXV, Eights and Fives, str, cls, 1967

Chbr and solo inst: 3 intermezzi, pf, 1950–53; Canon, 4 fl, 1959; Canon, vas, 1961; Impromptu, pf, 1963; Viopiacem, va, pf + hpd, 1965; Times Two, 2 hn, 1968; Bagatelle, pf, 1970; 5 Dádivas, pf, 1977–81; Halftime, cl, tpt, 1981; 3 Bassoons for Babbitt at 75, 1991; Dreimal sieben . . ., ob, pf, 1991; Insieme, fl, vn, 1994; Beisammen, 2ob/eng hn, 1995; Bis, ob, pf, 1996; Coniunctim, ob, vn, 1996; A la vez, ob/eng hn, E♭ cl/B♭ cl/b cl, 1997

Principal publishers: Boelke-Bomart, Boosey & Hawkes, Elkan-Vogel, Presser

BIBLIOGRAPHY

D. Martino: 'Claudio Spies: Tempi', PNM, ii/2 (1963–4), 112–24

Compositores de América/Composers of the Americas, ed. Pan American Union, xv (Washington DC, 1969), 214

P. Lansky: 'The Music of Claudio Spies', Tempo, no.103 (1972–3), 38–44

S. Peles: 'A Conversation with Claudio Spies', PNM, xxxii/1 (1994), 292–325

ROBERT POLLOCK

Spies, Leo (b Moscow, 4 June 1899; d Ahrenshoop, Darss, 1 May 1965). German composer and conductor. He attended the German Gymnasium in Moscow and from the age of seven received instruction in composition, the piano and the violin. Private composition studies were continued with Oskar von Riesemann (1913–15) and Spies was deeply impressed by the works of Skryabin, Prokofiev and others that he heard in the Russian capital. He went to Dresden to study with Schreyer, whom he later acknowledged as his most influential teacher, and took further composition lessons with Kahn and Humperdinck at the Berlin Musikhochschule (1916–17). From 1920 he was active as a coach and Kapellmeister at various German theatres and with the Universum Film AG. After a period at the Rostock Stadttheater (1924–8) he was conductor and music director of the ballet at the Berlin Staatsoper (1928–35) and at the Deutsche Opernhaus, Berlin (1935–44). He took part in the reconstruction of the Städtische Oper, Berlin (1945–7), and was director of studies and conductor of modern music-theatre at the Komische Oper (1947–54). Thereafter he directed a masterclass in composition at the German Academy of Arts, East Berlin, where he was secretary of the music department (1953–65). He received the Berlin Goethe Prize (1954) and the National Prize of the GDR (1956).

In the 1920s he joined the circle around Eisler and was active as conductor and composer with the workers' choral movement; the first creative result of this association was the cantata Turksib. After 1945 he expanded this side of his work in a passionate involvement with music for young people. Spies's music has a fine, lyrical melodic foundation; it also has great energy and a cheerful spirit, present not only in the ballets but also in the concertante and chamber music. His conventionally formed symphonies and fastidious string quartets are cast in an accessible, romantic language. Throughout his work he shunned novelty, convinced that the tonal system was inexhaustible.

WORKS
(selective list)

Ballets: Apollo und Daphne, 1936; Der Stralauer Fischzug, 1936; Seefahrt, 1937; Die Sonne lacht, 1942; Pastorale, 1943; Die Liebenden von Verona, 1944; Don Quijote, 1944

Orch: Saltabile, str, 1929; Vc Conc., 1940; Divertimento notturno, pf, orch, 1941; Fröhliche Ouvertüre, 1951; Trauermusik, 1951; Vn Conc., 1953; Orchesterfantasie 'Friedrich Engels', 1955; Sym., D, 1957; Sym., c, 1961; Va Conc., 1961; Musik für Schulorchester, 1963; Festmusik, 1964; more than 40 incid scores

Vocal: Turksib (cant., J.R. Becher), double chorus, 1932; 3 Chöre (F. Hölderlin), 1945; Die Sonette der Louise Labé, S, pf, 1946; 5 Lieder (W. Shakespeare), Bar, pf, 1952; Kinder der Welt (cant., E. Engel), 1954; Rosenberg-Kantate (H. Fast, P. Wiens), 1955; Der Rote Platz (cant., V.V. Mayakovsky), Bar, chorus, orch, 1957; Georgi Dimitroff (cant., H. Grabner), 4 solo vv, children's chorus, orch, 1962; other lieder, numerous children's and mass songs

Chbr: 2 str qts, 1939, 1963; Divertimento goldoniano, 9 insts, 1939; Serenade, 6 wind, hp, perc, db, 1946; 4 Präludien, str qt, 1953; Sonata, 3 vn, 1958; Trio, 2 vc, pf, 1959; 2 sonatas, wind qnt, 1959, 1963; Rustikale Fantasien, 9 insts, 1962

Pf: 3 sonatas, 1917, 1938, 1963; 3 Balladen, 1938; 5 Stücke, 1938; 2 suites, 1940, 1941; Das Köpenicker Klavierbuch, 1958; Sonatine, D, 1958; Capriccio Ulenspiegelei, 1960; Lieder des Waldes, 1961; 13 Bagatellen, 1962; 3 Charakterstücke, 1962

Pieces for amateurs

Principal publishers: Hofmeister, Internationale Musikbibliothek, Neue Musik, Peters

BIBLIOGRAPHY

H. Seeger: 'Die "Rosenberg-Kantate" von Leo Spies', MG, vi (1956), 324–6

D. Brennecke: 'Sprache des Lebens: Blick auf das Kammermusikschaffen von Leo Spies', MG, ix (1959), 328–32

L. Berg: 'Leo Spies zum 65. Geburtstag', MG, xiv (1964), 416–18

D. Sandberg: 'Leo Spies', Musiker in unserer Zeit: Mitglieder der Sektion Musik der Akademie der Künste der DDR, ed. D. Brennecke, H. Gerlach and M. Hansen (Leipzig, 1979), 100–09

A. Töpfer: 'Leo Spies 80: "Das Einfachste auszusprechen", Kompositionen für die Jugend', MG, xxix (1979), 334–7

F. Schneider: Das Streichquartettschaffen in der DDR bis 1970 (Leipzig, 1980)

ECKART SCHWINGER

Spiess, Lincoln Bunce (b Hartford, CT, 14 Nov 1913; d St Louis, 5 July 1997). American musicologist. He was educated at Harvard, receiving the BA in 1935, the MA in 1937 and the PhD in 1948 with a dissertation on early polyphony. He taught at UCLA (1947–8) and at Miami University, Ohio (1948–51). In 1951 he joined the music department of Washington University, St Louis, where he later became professor (1968–76). He specialized in the study of medieval music and the music of the Spanish colonial period in the western hemisphere, particularly Mexico and the American Southwest. His investigation of church archives in Mexico and New Mexico produced evidence of composers, repertory and performing practice there during the 17th century. Spiess was also the author of Historical Musicology (1963), a student guide to research techniques.

WRITINGS

Polyphony in Theory and Practice from the Ninth Century to the Close of the Thirteenth Century (diss., Harvard U., 1948)

'An Introduction to the Pre-History of Polyphony', Essays on Music in Honor of Archibald Thompson Davison (Cambridge, MA, 1957), 11–15

'The Diatonic "Chromaticism" of the Enchiriadis Treatises', JAMS, xii (1959), 1–6

Historical Musicology (Brooklyn, NY, 1963/R)

'Benavides and Church Music in New Mexico in the Early 17th Century', JAMS, xvii (1964), 144–56

'Church Music in 17th-Century New Mexico', New Mexico Historical Review, xl (1965), 5–25

A Mercedarian Antiphonary (Santa Fe, 1965)

'Inconsistency of Meaning in Certain Medieval and Renaissance Terms', Cantors at the Crossroads: Essays on Church Music in Honor of Walter E. Buszin, ed. J. Riedel (St Louis, 1967), 25–32

'Church Music and its Practice in the 16th Century: a Humanistic Introduction', Church Music, ii (1968), 10–20

'Instruments in the Missions of New Mexico', Essays in Musicology: a Birthday Offering for Willi Apel, ed. H. Tischler (Bloomington, IN, 1968), 131–6 with E.T. Stanford: An Introduction to Certain Mexican Musical Archives (Detroit, 1969)

PAULA MORGAN

Spiess, Meinrad [Matthäus] (b Honsolgen, Swabia, 24 Aug 1683; d Irsee, nr Kaufbeuren, 12 June 1761). German composer and theorist. He entered the Benedictine Abbey of Irsee in 1701 and was ordained priest in 1708. For the next four years he studied music with Giuseppe Antonio Bernabei in Munich. In 1712 he returned as music director to the abbey at Irsee, where he remained for the rest of his life. Although Spiess apparently had little personal contact with the cultural centres of Germany, he became (in 1743) the seventh member of Mizler's Societät der Musikalischen Wissenschaften in Leipzig, a corresponding society of music scholars and composers including J.S. Bach, Telemann, Carl Graun and Handel. Spiess wrote music almost solely for church services, and his output consists largely of masses, motets and other occasional sacred works. Much of it is lost.

Like several better known 18th-century writers on music, Spiess had an intimate knowledge of the extensive literature on the theory and aesthetics of music. In the foreword to his important Tractatus musicus compositorio-practicus (1745), he cited as sources of his ideas M. Vogt, J.G. Neidhardt, L. Euler, F.X. Murschhauser, J.H. Buttstedt, J.A. Scheibe, J.D. Heinichen, J.J. Fux, J. Mattheson, L. Mizler, G. Zarlino, A. Kircher, S. Calvisius, G.P. Telemann, G.P. Harsdörffer, G.M. Bononcini (i) and J.G. Walther. From this distinguished company of authors (especially Mattheson and Heinichen) Spiess drew large portions of his treatise; but the treatise contains much that is original. His main intention was to produce a guide for writing church music. Music to him was 'a sounding mathematics'. From a rather antiquated viewpoint, he insisted that church modes should be preferred to the major–minor keys. This old-fashioned concept seems to conflict with the considerable weight Spiess gave to music as an affective art, in keeping with the contemporary early 18th-century aesthetic doctrine. He derived the emotional and expressive qualities of music from rhetorical principles, such as the formal characteristics of spoken oration, exactly as proposed by Mattheson in his Vollkommene Capellmeister, and by Heinichen's well-known use of the rhetorical loci topici. Spiess also defined a number of musical-rhetorical figures. He was an advocate of a pseudo-Palestrina style of church music, and suggested that the so-called a cappella style could be retained with a second or 'mixed' style of sacred music (in which the contrapuntal style was joined to concerted instrumental writing and more arioso melodic style), so that, however, 'one does not exceed the bounds or limits of sacred gravity and modesty'. The Tractatus immediately appeared in a second edition (1746) and had a wide circulation and important influence throughout the second half of the 18th century.

WORKS

op.

1 Antiphonarium marianum [26 Marian antiphons], S, A, org (Kempten, 1713), some with 2 vn, vc, org; 4 ed. A. Goldmann (Augsburg, 1950)

2 Cithara Davidis noviter animata, h.e. psalmi vespertini, 4vv, 2 vn, 2 va, vle, org (Constance, 1717)

3 Philomela ecclesiastici, h.e. Cantiones sacrae, 1v, 2 vn, org (Augsburg, 1718), lost

4 Cultus latreutico-musicus, h.e. 6 missae festiv. unà cum 2 misses de requiem, 4vv, 2 vn, 2 va, vle, org (Constance, 1719)

5 Laus Dei in sancti ejus, h.e. [20] Offertoria, 4vv, 2 vn, 2 va, vle, org (Mindelheim, 1723)

6 Hyperdulia musica, h.e. Lytaniae lauretanae de B.M.V., 4vv, 2 vn, 2 va, vle, org (Augsburg, 1726)

7 Sonaten XII, 2 vn, vc, org (Augsburg, 1734)

Fugue, 5 str insts, and Precatus est Moyses, offertory, 4vv: both in Tractatus musicus compositorio-practicus (Augsburg, 1745)

In D-OB: Missa quadragesimalis, e, SATB, hpd, vle, ed. A. Goldmann (Augsburg, 1953); Missa quadragesimalis 6ta, c, SATB, hpd, vle, ed. A. Goldmann (Münster, 1955); Beatus vir, S, A, T, vn, va, vc, vle, org, ?1749; Miserere mei Deus, cantata, S, A, T, B, 4vv, 2 vn, 2 va, vc, vle, bc, 1749

Concerto, vn, str, hpd, S-Uu

Doubtful works: 27 Responsorien für die Karwoche, 4vv, org, D-Mbs; Mass, C, 4vv, CH-E

Lost works: 8 masses, ?pubd; music to Das alte und neue Teutschland (Jesuit school play), Kaufbeuren, 1719

The Stabat mater, 1v, 4vv, 2 vn, 2 va, vc, vle, org, 1747, D-OB, often attrib. Spiess is probably by P. Raphael Weiss.

THEORETICAL WORKS

Tractatus musicus compositorio-practicus, das ist Musicalischer Tractat, in welchem alle gute und sichere Fundamenta zur musicalischen Composition aus denen alt- und neuesten besten Autoribus herausgezogen, zusammen getragen, gegen einander gehalten, erkläret, und mit untersetzten Exemplen dermassen klar und deutlich erläutert werden (Augsburg, 1745)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

EitnerQ; GerberL,NL; RiemannL 12; WaltherML

L.C. Mizler: Neu eröffnete musikalische Bibliothek (Leipzig, 1739–54/R)

A. Goldmann: 'M. Spiess', Lebensbilder aus dem bayerischen Schwaben, iii, ed. G.F. Pölnitz and others (Munich, 1954), 285ff

G.J. Buelow: 'The Loci Topici and Affect in Late Baroque Music: Heinichen's Practical Demonstration', MR, xxvii (1966), 161–76

E. Federl: 'Der Tractatus Musicus des Pater Meinrad Spiess (1683–1761)', Festschrift Bruno Stäblein, ed. M. Ruhnke (Kassel, 1967), 39–46

A. Goldmann: 'Verzeihen Sie mir meine Freyheit': Leopold Mozart und Meinrad Spiess',Acta mozartiana, xxxiv (1987), 54–63

H.-J. Irmen: 'Meinrad Spiess und sein Begriff der musica und musica sacra',Musica sacra, vi (1970), 234–42

D. Bartel: Handbuch der musikalischen Figurenlehre (Regensburg, 1985; Eng. trans., enlarged, 1997, as Musica Poetica: Musical-Rhetorical Figures in German Baroque Music)

A. Goldmann: Meinrad Spiess, der Musikerprior von Irsee (Weissenhorn, 1987)

GEORGE J. BUELOW

Spiessgeige (Ger.). See SPIKE FIDDLE.

Spighi, Bartolomeo (b Prato, nr Florence; d after 16 Nov 1641). Italian composer. In 1641 he was choirmaster to the Grand Duke of Tuscany at Livorno Cathedral. His sole surviving publication, Musical concerto d'arie, e canzonette à una, dua, e tre voci per cantare nel gravicembalo, ò chitarrone op.4 (Florence, 1641), consists mainly of strophic canzonettas and ariettas, though it also contains a sonnet setting in four sections, Ardo, ma l'ardor mio, for bass solo, and a ciaccona for two altos, O piaggia felice, which employs a descending tetrachord ostinato rather than the usual chaconne bass. The sensual bel canto ariettas for solo voice, some of them employing melodic and harmonic chromaticism, reveal Spighi as a melodist of some merit.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Whenham: Duet and Dialogue in the Age of Monteverdi (Ann Arbor, 1982), i, 175, 248; ii, 148

S. Leopold: Al modo d'Orfeo: Dichtung und Musik im italienischen Sologesang des frühen 17. Jahrhunderts, AnMc, no.29 (1995), 175–387

JOHN WHENHAM

Spike fiddle (Fr. vièle à pique; Ger. Spiessgeige). A bowed spike lute; see CHORDOPHONE for the Hornbostel-Sachs classification. Its distinguishing characteristic is that the neck of the lute passes diametrically through the sound chest to protrude as a spike or stub at the lower end, to which the strings are attached (for illustration see LUTE, fig.3). Notable examples are the Middle Eastern RABĀB and KAMĀNCHEH, the Javanese rebab, various types of Mongolian HUUR, the Chinese HUQIN and the Karakalpak qopïz.

See also LUTE, §1; MAHŌRĪ; SĀRINDĀ; RĀVAṆHATTHĀ; and HAEGŬM.

□

Spike harp. A class of harp found in West Africa in which the neck passes entirely through the resonator and protrudes a little at the lower end (in this aspect the construction is similar to that of the SPIKE LUTE and SPIKE FIDDLE. It is a sub-category of the class of 'harps with vertical string-holders or bridges' identified by Sue Carole DeVale ('African Harps: Construction, Decoration and Sound', Sounding Forms: African Musical Instruments, ed. M.-T. Brincard, New York, 1989, 53–62). Included in the sub-category of spike harps is a further sub-class, the BRIDGE HARP, of which the most well-known example is the KORA. For details and illustration of the organology of this group of instruments, see HARP, §III.

□

Spike lute. A plucked CHORDOPHONE. For structural features see LUTE, §1 and SPIKE FIDDLE.

Špiler, Miroslav (b Crikvenica, 19 Dec 1906; d Sarajevo, 1 Dec 1984). Bosnian-Hercegovinan composer and pianist of Croatian birth. After graduating from Bersa's composition class at the Zagreb Academy of Music (1926), he studied under Schoenberg, Herman Kluge (piano) and Weingartner (conducting). He then went to Paris to be coached by d'Indy. From 1924 until 1931 Špiler and his brother Ljerko, a violinist, gave recitals in Zagreb and throughout Europe. In 1943 Miroslav joined the partisans and became active in underground musical activity. At the end of the war he was appointed professor of composition and theory at the Sarajevo Music Academy. He was a recipient of the City of Sarajevo '6 April' and the Bosnian '27 July' prizes (1962, 1976). His symphonic works, beautifully and expertly orchestrated, are Romantic in style, though the chamber and vocal pieces, apart from the revolutionary songs, tend towards Expressionism. Certain works quote from folk sources. He is the author of a textbook on orchestration and of songs that have become national hymns.

WORKS

(selective list)

Orch: Praznična skica [Festive Sketch], 1955; Introdukcija i largo, 1957; Opsesija [Obsession], 1965

Vocal: Adoramus te, SATB, 1929; Majka pravoslavna [The Orthodox Mother] (V. Nazor), SATB, 1944; Drug Tito [Comrade Tito] (Nazor), SATB, 1952; Dijalog, S, vn, 1971; Trijalog, A, pf, vn, 1972

Chbr: Sjetni trenutak [Melancholic Moment], fl, ob, bl, pf, 1955; Samotni trenutak [Solitary Moment], fl, cl, eng hn, pf, 1955; Nad Konjuh planinom [Over Mount Konjuh], ob, pf, 1982

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. Spiler: Orkestracija [Orchestration] (Sarajevo, 1973)
I. Čavlović: 'Miroslav Špiler: nacrt za životopis', Muzika, no.2 (1997), 7

IVAN ČAVLOVIĆ

Spillflöte (Ger.). See under ORGAN STOP.

Spina, Carl Anton. Austrian music publisher. See under DIABELLI, ANTON .

Spinacino, Francesco (b Fossombrone, fl 1507). Italian lutenist and composer. A dedicatory poem by Cristoforo Pierio Gigante in Spinacino's Libro primo describes him as an emulator of Orpheus, and Philippo Oriolo da Bassano's poem Monte Parnaso (*c*1520) includes Spinacino in a list of eminent late 15th-century lutenists. His two publications, Intabulatura de lauto libro primo (Venice, 1507/R) and Intabulatura de lauto libro secondo (Venice, 1507/R) are the very first printed books dedicated to the lute. Both volumes begin with a rudimentary introduction to tablature notation in Latin and Italian, which was reprinted in all Petrucci's publications for lute and (with some modification) as late as 1546. A few pieces were copied from these prints into manuscripts as far away as the British Isles. Like those of his compatriots Dalza and Capirola, his 81 compositions were primarily intabulations (46) for solo lute and ricercares (27). There are also two bassadans and six pieces for two lutes. These duets are among the most interesting of his output as they give us a glimpse of a performance practice of the 15th century, notably the style of Pietrobono and his 'tenorista' (see LockwoodMRF). For the most part the tenor plays an intabulation of the original tenor and bassus of the chanson. The other lute plays a freely invented counterpoint in improvisatory style, not based on the original cantus, traversing the entire range of the instrument.

Spinacino's ricercares are among the most elaborate of the period. Intended to serve as preludes to other pieces, they are free in form and often change direction and style abruptly, from virtuosic running passages to imitative sections. The Ricercare De tous biens and Recercare a Juli amours seem to have parody fragments from the original chansons. These were perhaps meant to be preludes to the duets of the same name in the Libro primo. Another, Recercare de tutti li toni, rambles through all of the modes. The intabulations run the gamut from fairly direct intabulations (like Malor me bat) to very elaborately ornamented ones, such as the almost fantasia-like setting of Josquin's Ave Maria. Judging from the virtuosic nature of many of these compositions, Spinacino must have been among the finest lute players of his time.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

BrownI
E.E. Lowinsky: 'The Goddess Fortuna in Music', MQ, xxix (1943), 45–77
H.C. Slim: The Keyboard Ricercar and Fantasia in Italy c.1500–1550 (diss., Harvard U., 1960)
J.M. Ward: 'Parody Technique in 16th-century Instrumental Music', The Commonwealth of Music, in Honor of Curt Sachs, ed. G. Reese and R. Brandel (New York, 1965), 208–28
H.C. Slim: 'Musicians on Parnassus', Studies in the Renaissance, xii (1965), 134–63 [incl. trans. of Bassano's poem]
L. Nordstrom: 'Ornamentation of Flemish Chansons as found in the Lute Duets of Francesco Spinacino', JLSA, ii (1969), 1–5
H.L. Schmidt: The First Printed Lute Books: Francesco Spinacino's 'Intabulatura de Lauto, Libro primo' and 'Libro secondo' (Venice: Petrucci, 1507) (diss., U. of North Carolina, 1969)
P. O'Dette: disc notes, Early Venetian Lute Music, Arabesque 8131 (1982)
L. Lockwood: Music in Renaissance Ferrara 1400–1505 (Cambridge, MA, 1984)

LYLE NORDSTROM

Spinazzari, Alessandro (fl 1672–5). Italian composer. The published librettos of three operas by him survive: L'Alcatrasso geloso (C.A. Marchesini; 1672, Vicenza, US-Wc); Agripina minore (Marchesini; 15 Oct 1673, Verona, I-Mb); and La più giusta vendetta contro i più crudi tiranni (P.A. Bettanini; Dec 1674, Vicenza, Mb). He contributed music to a setting of Nicolò Minato's libretto Iphide Greca which also had music by Freschi, Partenio and Gasparo Sartorio and was performed in Verona on 22 October 1675. According to the Minato libretto he was maestro di cappella at Vicenza in 1674.

□

Spindler, Franz Stanislaus [Franz (Sales); Franz Xaver (Stanislaus); Stanislaus; Stanislaus Franz (Xaver)] [Meister] (b Steingaden, 4 May 1763; d Strasbourg, 8 Sept 1819). German composer and singer. Although baptized Stanislaus, he took the additional name Franz, often using it in place of his baptismal name. Some compositions that he signed 'Franz' have erroneously been ascribed to his brother Franz Xaver (1758–1822), a priest. Another brother, Felix Mathias (b 1756), was active as a singer in Augsburg. Spindler was probably educated first as a choirboy in the Premonstratensian abbey of Steingaden and later in Augsburg. According to Reichard, his career began in 1782. His Singspiel Die Reue vor der Tat had its première in Frankfurt in 1783; he was in Innsbruck in 1785–6, and in summer 1786 appeared with Emanuel Schikaneder's troupe in Augsburg, where his Singspiel Balders Tod was performed. According to his obituary (AMZ), he was a pupil of Dittersdorf, and he was probably a member of the Prince-Bishop of Breslau's Kapelle at Johannisberg (Jánský Vrch), near Jayernig (Javorník), in Silesia, which Dittersdorf directed. In 1796–7 Spindler sang Tamino, Count Almaviva and Don Giovanni in Breslau (now Wrocław). His Singspiel Der Wundermann was staged in Vienna in 1799, and in the same year his offertory In Deo speravit was performed in Baden, near Vienna, in the presence of Emperor Franz II. As a theatrical director, Spindler travelled around Germany for several years before going to Strasbourg in 1807. He became maître de chapelle of Strasbourg Cathedral in 1808, and there wrote further sacred works, including the motet Domine salvum fac imperatorem nostrum Napoleonem, which was performed on the visits of the empresses Marie Josephine and Marie Louise. Latterly he gained a high reputation as a teacher.

Contemporary reviews emphasize Spindler's skill in tone-painting, commenting that his style of sacred music approached Haydn's (see e.g. AMZ, xvi, 1814, col.839). Spohr, who met him in 1816, describes him as an excellent and modest artist and adds his own voice to the general praise for the Requiem and Das Waisenhaus. Spindler's compositions were believed lost until 1997, when a large number of manuscripts, including nine autographs, were discovered by Robert Münster; the extent, diversity and contemporary popularity of his output may now perhaps encourage a revival. A portrait of Spindler is preserved in the manuscripts department of the Bayerische Staatsbibliothek, Munich (cgm. 5265/2).

WORKS

STAGE

lost unless otherwise stated

Die Reue vor der Tat (Spl, 1, G.F.W. Grossmann, after M. Monvel), Frankfurt, ?24 ?Oct 1783
Pyramus und Thisbe (melodrama, after G.L. Fabri the younger), Innsbruck, 1785
Balders Tod (Spl, J. Ewald), Augsburg, 1786
Kain und Abel (melodrama), Innsbruck, 1786, A-Wgm (as Kains Tod)
Die Liebe in der Ukräine, oder Hier gehen die Mädchen auf die Freierei aus (Spl, 4, H.C. Fleissner), Innsbruck, 1786
Philemon und Baucis (melodrama, 1, Pfeffer), Innsbruck, 1788
Kilian Freitags Reise nach der Ukräine, oder Das Mädchen auf der Freierei (Spl, 3, Spindler), Vienna, Leopoldstädter, 9 Oct 1788
Der Wundermann (Spl, 1, Spindler), Innsbruck, 1788
Freitags Reisen (Spl, 1), Brno, 1790
Der Liebhaber im Schlafrock, oder Was sein soll, schickt sich wohl (komische Oper, 2), Brno, 1791
Amor und graue Haare, oder Der Verlobungstag (komisches Spl, 2), Brno, 1791
Die vier Vormünder (komisches Spl, 2, C.A. Herbst, after Mistress Centlivre), Brno, 1792
Reinald, oder Viel Lärmen um einen Schlafrock (komisches Spl, 2), Nuremberg, 1794
Achmed und Zenaide (Schauspiel mit Gesang), Breslau, 1796
Ritter Don Quixotte, oder Ein Abenteuer am Hofe (romantisch-komische Oper, 2), Breslau, 1797
Der Alte Überall und Nirgends (Schauspiel mit Gesang, 4, W. Vogel), Frankfurt, 7 Dec 1806, D-F
Das Fest der Weihe (Festspiel), Karlsruhe, 1 Oct 1808
Der Triumph mütterlicher Treue (Spl), Karlsruhe, 1 Oct 1808
Das Waisenhaus (Oper, 2, F. Moll), Karlsruhe, 10 Oct 1808
Das Puppenkabinett, oder Der betrogene Mechanikus (pantomime), Vienna, Leopoldstädter, 23 Sept 1809
Das Loch in der Mauer (Oper, 2), Strasbourg, 1810
Signor Garambolino, der reisende Kapellmeister (int), Nuremberg, 22 Sept 1816

Other Sple, formerly PL-WRu, lost

OTHER WORKS

for fuller list see Münster (1997)

Die Hirten bei der Krippe zu Bethlehem (orat, after K.W. Ramler), perf. Strasbourg, 25 Dec 1818, lost
Other sacred (unless otherwise stated, with orch, MSS, some autograph, in Strasbourg, Union de Sainte Cécile): In Deo speravit, off, 1799, A-Wn, M; Requiem, E♭, 1808–16; Messe solenne aux fauxbourdon, 4vv, org, 1808–19; 2 TeD, C, 1808–14; E♭, 1814; Domine salvum fac imperatorem nostrum Napoleonem, motet, 1808–15; Missa brevis in coena Domini, 1810; 6 other pieces
Secular vocal (all printed works pubd in Offenbach): Die Serenade, STTBB, pf ad lib (1805–6); 2 Gesellschaftslieder (A. von Kotzebue), TTB, pf ad lib (1808–9); Notturno, vv, pf ad lib (1808–9); Die Orakelglocke (C.A. Tiedge), B, str, A-Wst, D-DO, I-BGi, for 1v, pf/gui (1808–9); Der Bruder Graurock und die Pilgerin, 2vv, choir, pf ad lib (1810–11); Robert und Klärchen, 1v, str (1810–11); other pieces, lost
Instrumental: Parthia, 2 cl, 2 hn, bn, PL-WRu

BIBLIOGRAPHY

EitnerQ; FétisB; GerberL; GerberNL; GroveO (K. Rönnau); LipowskyBL; LoewenbergA; SchillingE
H.O. Reichard: Taschenbuch für die Schaubühne auf das Jahr 1794 (Gotha, 1793), 159, 218
AMZ, xxi (1819), 698–9 [obituary]
L. Spohr: Selbstbiographie, i (Kassel, 1860/R), 243–4
F. Krautwurst and W. Zorn: Bibliographie des Schrifttums zur Musikgeschichte der Stadt Augsburg (Tutzing, 1989)
H. Ullrich: Johann Chrysostomus Drexel (1758–1801): Leben und Werk, zugleich ein Beitrag zur Geschichte der Augsburger Dommusik (Augsburg, 1992), 48, 64, 129
R. Münster: 'Der Komponist Stanislaus Spindler aus Steingaden', Lech-Isar-Land 1997 (Weilheim, 1997), 213–28

HERMANN ULLRICH

Spinelli, Nicola (b Turin, 29 July 1865; d Rome, 17 Oct 1909). Italian composer, pianist and conductor. On his mother's side he was related to the composers Bonifazio Asioli and Isidoro Rossi. His teachers included Ernesto Becucci and Luigi Mancinelli in Florence and Trouvé-Castellani and Giovanni Sgambati in Rome; he completed his studies with Costantino Palumbo and Paolo Serrao in Naples. His graduation piece, the comedy I guanti gialli, was performed at the conservatory in 1881. His first publicly performed work was Labilia. This was placed second to Mascagni's Cavalleria rusticana in a competition for one-act operas organized by the publisher Edoardo Sonzogno in 1888. It was performed on 7 May 1890 at the Teatro Costanzi in Rome, its success owing much to the conductor Leopoldo Mugnone and the singers Gemma Bellincioni (Labilia) and Roberto Stagno (Volello), the same artists who appeared in Cavalleria ten days later. In his review in L'opinione (11 May 1890) D'Arcais remarked that Spinelli, although as yet lacking a musical personality of his own, had achieved the rapidity of movement required by 'modern melodrama', and possessed the ability to link scenes together and to distribute tone colour.

Between 1889 and 1894 Spinelli made several successful tours as a pianist and conductor. He returned to the theatre with A basso porto, a verismo low-life tragedy, which received international acclaim, although critics drew attention to the difficulty, implicit in the libretto, of reconciling the squalor of the ambience and characters and their rough speech with their expression in verse. Spinelli started work on setting Luigi Illica's La trilogia di Dorina, but a serious illness impaired his mind and led to his early death.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

GroveO (F. Bussi)
R. Celletti: 'Gli ultimi cent'anni', Storia dell'opera, ed. G. Barblan and A. Basso (Turin, 1977), iii/1, 282–98
V. Frajese: Dal Costanzi all'Opera, i: Cronache, recensioni e documenti (Rome, 1978), 111, 135–6

FRANCESCO BUSSI

Spinet (Fr. épinette; Ger. Spinett, Querflügel; It. spinetta, spinettone, spinettina, cembalo traverso). A small keyboard instrument with a plucking mechanism, a smaller variety of harpsichord, almost invariably with one keyboard and a single set of strings and jacks. The precise application of the term is as much debated as that of VIRGINAL and for many of the same reasons. 'Spinetta' was the original 15th- and 16th-century Italian term for the square virginal, possibly derived from the name of its inventor, Giovanni Spinetti, whose instrument of 1503, 'tal forma longa quadrata' with the inscription 'Iones Spinetus Venetus Fecit AD 1503', was seen by Banchieri (1609). However, a contemporary author, Giulio Cesare Scaligero (1484–1558), attributed the origin of the same term to the 'spine' (from Lat. spina: 'thorn') used for the jacks. 'Spinetta' is the modern Italian equivalent of 'spinet'. In France 'épinette' was used for all quilled instruments well into the 17th century, much as 'virginal' was used in England. Furthermore, Claas Douwes (1699) used 'spinett' to distinguish those virginals which have their keyboards at the left from the centre-plucking 'muselaar' (muselar), which has its keyboard at the right; Quirinus van Blankenburg (1739) implied a similar understanding of the term in naming the close-plucking lute stop of his four-register harpsichord 'spinetta'. The difficulty lies in the fact that although virtually the same word has been used in English, French, German, Italian and Dutch, the instruments designated are not identical. In preferred current usage, 'spinet' refers to an instrument whose strings run diagonally from left to right instead of directly away from the player as in a harpsichord or transversely as in a virginal; however, some writers use 'spinet' to mean a pentagonal or polygonal instrument, regardless of the direction of stringing, and reserve 'virginal' for rectangular instruments. During the 1930s in the USA, the term 'spinet' was also applied to miniature upright pianos (see PIANOFORTE, §I, 10).

1. Octave spinet (compass C/E–c‴), Italian, c1600 (Victoria and Albert Museum, London)

2. Diagram to show the side-by-side placement of jacks found in the spinet

The oblique stringing of a spinet produces a trapezoid in the smaller instruments and a wing shape in the larger ones, whose bass strings are longer than the keyboard. The longest strings of a spinet are at the back (those of a virginal are at the front), and the tuning pins are set in a pinblock directly over the keys instead of at the right-hand end of the case. One of the bridges over which the strings of a spinet pass is attached to the pinblock instead of resting on a free soundboard. For this reason the sound of a spinet more closely resembles that of a harpsichord of similar size than that of a virginal.

Apart from a small number of tiny rectangular instruments, made in Germany in the late 16th century and often equipped with a pin-barrel mechanism, the earliest surviving spinets are early 17th-century Italian. They have two straight sides set perpendicular to the keyboard, the left one shorter than the right. The back of the case thus slants away from the keyboard and runs parallel to the strings (fig.1). These small compact instruments, designed to sound at 4′ pitch, were, according to Burney, used to accompany singing.

The keyboard of the earliest spinets occupies virtually the entire case, leaving little room for internal structure. The sides and back of the case overlap the edges of the bottom; the pinblock is supported by a block at each end, and these blocks are attached to the bottom and to the shorter sides of the case. The single set of jacks runs in a line in pairs, the members of which face in opposite directions, immediately behind the pinblock (fig.2). There is only one string per note, and no buff stop or other means of changing tone-colour.

The wing-shaped 'bentside' or 'leg-of-mutton' spinet which was to become the normal English domestic keyboard instrument in the late 17th century appears to have been invented by a widely travelled Italian, Girolamo Zenti, whom Giovanni Bontempi praised in 1695 for having created the 'most modern harpsichord ... in the form of a nonequilateral triangle'. Bontempi went on to speak of these instruments as having two keyboards and three registers, leaving this interpretation open to doubt; however, the earliest known example of a bentside spinet, dated 1637, bears Zenti's signature (fig.3). A few other Italian bentside spinets survive, together with an even smaller number of French or German examples. The instrument had its greatest popularity in England, where it began to replace the rectangular virginal in the last decades of the 17th century. Early examples (by Haward, Keene and others) are made from oak or walnut and usually have a marquetry-decorated nameboard, which is removable. Many have the compass G'/B' (short or broken octave) to d‴ with ebony naturals and either solid ivory or skunktail sharps. Later examples (e.g. by Longman & Broderip) are usually veneered in panels of mahogany and have a removable namebatten, the nameboard being an integral part of the case. They have either a G'–g‴ or F'G'–f‴ compass, with ivory naturals and either ebony or skunktail sharps (fig.4). Although the general layout of these instruments is relatively standard, the precise shape is highly variable and characteristic of the individual maker. English spinets were sometimes exported to America, and at least one maker, John Harris, emigrated to that country. Consequently, the surviving 18th-century American spinets are closely modelled on the English type.

Many English spinets were designed for brass strings: some (c″ about 28·5 cm) were intended to be tuned to normal pitch, others (c″ about 25 cm) were intended to be tuned about one whole tone above normal pitch (see O'Brien, 1994). A number of spinets, however, with longer c″ lengths of 33–5 cm, were intended to be tuned to normal pitch, but were designed for treble strings of iron rather than of brass.

The keyboard of a bentside spinet, like that of the earlier trapezoidal examples, occupies most of the case. There is usually a brace from the front of the case to the back at each end of the keyboard, and the Italian examples, as well as some 17th-century English ones, may have a few triangular knees between the sides and bottom of the case in the unobstructed space to the right of the keyboard. Although some later English spinets continue to display Italianate features (use of boxslides, case sides built around the bottom) others display north European characteristics (case sides built on the bottom, jacks guided by upper and lower registers). Most 18th-century English bentside spinets employ two series of braces, one just under the soundboard and the other in the lower part of the case, a plan similar to that of north European harpsichords. There are usually only two lower braces, one at each end of the keyboard; sometimes a third brace (the lower belly rail) runs transversely behind the keyboard. The pinblock rests on a raised section of the braces at the ends of the keyboard; the bottom of the instrument is fastened to the lower edge of the braces after the construction of the case has been completed and the soundboard installed. The upper braces, usually three in number, pass from the bentside to the spine; they are attached to the lower edges of the liners which support the soundboard, and braced to the face of the liners with small triangular blocks. The many such spinets still in playable condition prove the efficiency of this simple design.

The bentside spinet is a compact instrument. Whereas the harpsichord must always be at least a foot longer than its longest string, the spinet need be only a few inches longer; the performer sits in front of the instrument instead of at the end. The oblique stringing of the spinet produces an instrument which is neither as wide nor as long as a harpsichord of equal compass. It is, however, not only the compactness of the design which leads to the small size of spinets. Many English spinets descend only to G' rather than to F', and have relatively short strings of brass. Furthermore, the bass strings below F are usually more severely foreshortened than those of contemporary harpsichords.

Neither the spinet nor the virginal is normally capable of variation in tone-colour or volume. Since the jacks are placed obliquely in the jack guide and face alternately in opposite directions, any movement advances half the

3. Bentside spinet by Girolamo Zenti, Italian, 1637 (Brussels Conservatory)

4. Bentside spinet by John Harrison, London, 1757 (Russell Collection, University of Edinburgh) jacks but withdraws the other half; uniform lateral movement with respect to the strings is not possible. Similarly, because both strings of each pair form part of the spinet's single register, it is not possible to employ the type of buff stop found on harpsichords. Both these problems are solved on certain modern spinets in which the strings are not arranged in pairs and all the jacks face in the same direction; such instruments can have both a buff stop and a half-hitch or 'piano' position which permits the jacks to be partly withdrawn from the strings. The 1610 'arcispineta' made by Celestini has all the jacks facing in the same direction, although there is no buff or other stop.

In the rare double-strung spinets, such as the two-manual octave spinet by Israel Gellinger and the 'cembalo traverso' or 'spinettone' with 8′ and 4′ strings by Cristofori (both in the Musikinstrumenten-Museum, University of Leipzig), change in tone-colour or volume may be obtained by moving the keyboard in or out so that both or only one set of jacks will be lifted when the keys are depressed. Such elaboration is, however, exceptional and essentially foreign to the nature of the spinet, which is basically a simple, single-strung instrument.

More affordable than a harpsichord (in the 1770s Ferdinand Weber of Dublin charged about £22–36 for a harpsichord, £11 for a spinet), the spinet is essentially a domestic instrument, which cannot be said to have a repertory of its own distinct from that of the harpsichord. However, much of the music printed in such collections as Musick's Handmaid (1663, 1689), The Harpsichord Miscellany (2 vols., *c*1763) and The Harpsichord Master (1697–1734) was doubtless intended for use by the amateur performer who had no larger instrument at his disposal.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Boalch M

R. Russell: The Harpsichord and Clavichord (London, 1959, rev. 2/1973 by H. Schott)

F. Hubbard: Three Centuries of Harpsichord Making (Cambridge, MA, 1965, 2/1967)

J.H. van der Meer: 'Beiträge zum Cembalo-Bau der Familie Ruckers', JbSIM 1971, pp.100–53

E.M. Ripin: 'The Surviving Oeuvre of Girolamo Zenti', Metropolitan Museum Journal, vii (1973), 71–87
J.H. van der Meer: 'Studien zum Cembalobau in Italien', Festschrift to Ernst Emsheimer, ed. G. Hilleström (Stockholm, 1974), 131–48, 275 only
N. Meeùs: 'The Nomenclature of Plucked Keyboard Instruments', FoMRHI Quarterly, no.25 (1981), 18–20
J. Barnes: Making a Spinet by Traditional Methods (Welwyn, Herts., 1985)
L.F. Tagliavini and J.H. van der Meer, ed.: Clavicembali e spinette dal XVI al XIX secolo (Bologna, 1986)
G.G. O'Brien: 'The Double-Manual Harpsichord by Francis Coston, London, c.1725', GSJ, xlvii (1994), 2–32
L.E. Whitehead: The Clavichords of Hieronymus and Johann Hass (diss., Edinburgh U., 1994)
For further bibliography see HARPSICHORD.

EDWIN M. RIPIN/LANCE WHITEHEAD

Spinett (i). Term used by C. Douwes (Grondig ondersoek van de toonen der musijk, 1699) and revived by modern writers to distinguish those Flemish rectangular virginals which have their keyboards to the left of centre from the more common variety which have their keyboards to the right: these latter Douwes termed MUSELAR. With its keyboard at the left, the jacks of a spinett are closer to the left bridge and the strings are therefore not plucked centrally. This produces a brighter, more harpsichord-like tone than that of the centrally plucked muselar, and the foremost and brightest-toned register of a harpsichord (whether a LUTE STOP or merely the front unison) was also occasionally designated 'spinett' or 'spinetta' in the Low Countries and Germany.

EDWIN M. RIPIN

Spinett (ii) (Ger.). See SPINET.

Spinetta (i) [spinetto] (It.). (1) Term used in the second half of the 16th century, and widely thereafter, for the rectangular VIRGINAL. The diminutive 'spinettina' ('spinettino',also 'spinetta ottavina') denotes an instrument at 4′ pitch.

(2) In the 17th century the term also came to denote any plucked keyboard instrument smaller than a harpsichord.

□

Spinetta (ii) (It). The modern Italian equivalent of SPINET.

Spinettone (It.). A large SPINET. The term is used in some sources to refer specially to instruments by BARTOLOMEO CRISTOFORI; this instrument has been described elsewhere as a CEMBALO TRAVERSO.

Spingere (It.). Up-bow. See BOW, §II, 2(i).

Spink, Ian (Walter Alfred) (b London, 29 March 1932). English musicologist. After attending the Mercers' School (1942–9) he studied at Trinity College of Music, London (BMus 1952). He was awarded a G.D. Cunningham postgraduate scholarship to study at Birmingham University (1956–7; MA 1958) where his research into sources of English 17th-century song was supervised by Anthony Lewis. From 1958 to 1960 he was an overseas examiner for Trinity College of Music, and was lecturer (1962–4) and later senior lecturer (1965–8) in music at the University of Sydney. He returned to England in 1969 and established the music department of Royal Holloway College, London University; he was the Foundation Head of the Music Department from 1969 to 1993. He was also appointed reader there in 1972 and professor of music in 1974. The most important products of Spink's research are his anthology of 17th-century English songs, well chosen to represent the period and judiciously edited, and his complementary book, the first detailed study of its topic.

WRITINGS

'English Seventeenth-Century Dialogues', ML, xxxviii (1957), 155–63
The English Declamatory Ayre c.1620–60 (diss., U. of Birmingham, 1957–8)
'Lanier in Italy', ML, xl (1959), 242–52
'English Cavalier Songs, 1620–1660', PRMA, lxxxvi (1959–60), 61–78
'The Musicians of Queen Henrietta-Maria: some Notes and References in the English State Papers', AcM, xxxvi (1964), 177–82
'Sources of English Song, 1620–1660: a Survey', MMA, i (1966), 117–36
An Historical Approach to Musical Form (London, 1967)
English Song: Dowland to Purcell (London, 1974, repr. 1986 with corrections)
'Solo Song and Vocal Duet: England', NOHM, vi (1985), 134–54
Introduction to facsimile of John Playford: Choice Ayres, Songs and Dialogues, MLE, A5 (1989)
ed.: Music in Britain: the Seventeenth Century (Oxford, 1992) [incl. 'Church Music II: from 1660', 97–137; 'Vocal Music II: from 1660', 175–96]
'Purcell's Odes: Propaganda and Panegyric', Purcell Studies, ed. C. Price (Cambridge, 1995), 145–71
Restoration Cathedral Music, 1660–1714 (Oxford, 1995)
Henry Lawes (forthcoming)

EDITIONS

Robert Johnson: Ayres, Songs and Dialogues, EL, xvii (1961, enlarged 2/1974)
Greaves, Mason, Earsden: Songs (1604) and Ayres (1618), EL, xviii (1963)
Alfonso Ferrabosco (ii): Manuscript Songs, EL, xix (1966)
English Songs, 1625–1660, MB, xxxiii (1971/R)
Thomas Augustine Arne: The Judgment of Paris, MB, xlii (1978)
The Works of Henry Purcell, ii: Timon of Athens (London, 1994); iv: A Song for the Duke of Gloucester's Birthday, 1695 (London, 1990); xx: Dramatic Music, Part II (London, 1998)

DAVID SCOTT/R

Spinner, Leopold (b Lemberg [now L′viv], 26 April 1906; d London, 12 Aug 1980). British composer of Austrian birth. He studied theory and composition privately with Pisk (1926–30) and later (1935–8) with Webern. A number of his compositions from the 1930s, including the Symphony for Small Orchestra (awarded the Emil Hertzga Prize in 1933) and the Passacaglia for 11 Instruments (awarded the Henri Le Boeuf Prize in 1936), were performed at ISCM festivals and elsewhere, but Spinner included only one of them, the Violin Sonata op.1 (1936, rev. 1939–40 and later), in his list of works (though he did not actually repudiate the others). In 1939 he emigrated to England from Vienna. He worked for Boosey & Hawkes as a copyist and arranger from 1947 and in 1958 succeeded Erwin Stein as editor; he later became chief editor.

Webern was the decisive influence on Spinner's mature compositions. All of his surviving music (with the exception of the Irish folksong settings) uses the 12-note technique, often deploying several versions of a note row in counterpoint. In both his music and his theoretical writings Spinner celebrated the primacy of the rhythmically-characterized motif, built up polyphonically into the traditionally homophonic units of periods, sentences and larger forms. Distinctive features of his music are a craggy, dramatic use of dynamics and timbres, a use of intervallically differentiated, though rhythmically similar, motifs to create unexpectedly asymmetrical structures, and a both unifying and rhetorical stressing of repeated notes and note-groups derived from different row forms. From around op.19, he also began to use strictly related tempos, cyclic permutations of small rhythmic cells (later of similar cells of different dynamics) and began to construct whole works out of blocks containing a fixed number of bars. His manipulation of rhythmic and dynamic cells, however, unlike the serial procedures of the Darmstadt composers, is a clearly audible systematisation of his continual preoccupation with motivic integrity.

WORKS

INSTRUMENTAL

Orch: Sym., small orch, *c*1933; Passacaglia, ww, 2 hn, tpt, vn, vc, pf, *c*1934; [Untitled], 1938; Moderato, 1940; Ov., 1944; Pf Conc., op.4, 1947, rev. 1948, version with chbr orch, 1948, rev. 1968; Ov., op.5, 1948–9; Conc. for Orch, op.12, 1956–7; Inventions for Orchestra, I, 1960; Präludium und Variationen, op.18, 1960–62; Interlude II, chbr orch, 1964; Ricercata, op.21, str, wind, cel, hp, 1964–5; Chbr Sym., 1975–9

Chbr: Sonata, vn, pf, *c*1931, lost; Str Qt, before 1931, lost; Str Trio, 1931, lost; Sonata, cl, pf, *c*1933, lost; Str Sextet, *c*1933, lost; 2 kleine Stücke, vn, pf, 1934; Kleines Qt, str qt, 1934, ?lost; Str Qt, *c*1934–5; Trio, cl, vc, pf, 1935; Sonata, vn, pf, 1936, rev. 1939–40, later; Pf Qnt, 1937; 2 Movts, str qt, *c*1940–41; Trio, cl, va, vc, 1940; Str Qt, op.2, 1941; Pf Trio, op.6, 1950; Str Qt no.2, op.7, 1952; Suite, op.10, cl, pf, 1955–6; Qnt, op.14, cl, hn, bn, gui, db, 1959–63; Sonata, op.17, cl, pf, 1961; Variations, op.19, vn, pf, 1962; Sonatina, op.23, Cl(D), ob, bn, hn, 1971; Sonatina, op.26, vc, pf, 1972–3

Pf: Sonata, *c*1933, lost; Romanze, 1934, lost; Variations, ?1935, lost; 2 Stücke, 1938; Sonata, op.3, 1942–5; Fantasie, op.9, 1953–4; Inventionen, op.13, 1958; Sonatina, op.22, 1966–9

Transcrs.: Schubert: Pf Sonata, op.120, str orch [Andante and Allegro only]; Webern: Orch Variations, op.30, pf

VOCAL

Choral: Ich lieb' eine Blume (H. Heine), SATB, 1936; Cant. [untitled] (F. Nietzsche), S, SATB, fl, ob, cl, hn, vn, va, vc, pf, 1952; Cant. (F. Hölderin), op.11, S, SATB, orch, 1955–7; 6 Kanons über Irische Volkslieder (trad.), SATB, 1960–61; [4 Irish Folksongs], SATB, str/pf, 1960–61; [nos. 1 and 2 arrs. of 6 Kanons, nos. 4 and 2]; The Lover's Curse (trad.), SATB, 1961; Cant. (Ger. Folksong texts), op.20, Mez, SATB, ww, brass, perc, hp, str, 1963–4; Schilflieder (N. Lenau), op.27, SATB, 1974–5

Songs: Du und Sie, 1v, pf, 1926, lost; 2 Lieder (Li Tai Po, trans. Klabund, Wang Chang Li, trans. Klabund), 1v, pf, *c*1935–6; 3 Lieder (Des Knaben Wunderhorn), 1v, cl, vn, vc, *c*1936; Zu Abend mein Herz (G. Trakl), 1v, pf, 1939–41; 3 Lieder (Trakl, C.M. Brentano), S, pf, 1941; 5 Lieder (Nietzsche), op.8, 1v, pf, 1953; 3 Lieder (W. Blake, W.B. Yeats, R. Lovelace), op.15, T, pf, 1959; 3 Lieder (R.M. Rilke), op.16, S, pf, 1960; 2 Lieder (Nietzsche, Rilke), op.24, S, fl, ob, a sax, va, gui, cel, 1970–71; 5 Lieder (trad., E. Mörike, J.F. von Eichendorff, B. Wigand), op.25, Mez, pf, 1973

MSS, sketches, documents and correspondence in A-Wgm, Wn; US-CAh, LAs, SYkrasner, Wc

WRITINGS

A Short Introduction to the Technique of Twelve-tone Composition (London, 1960)

'The Abolition of Thematicism and the Structural Meaning of the Method of Twelve-Tone Composition', Tempo, no.146 (1983), 2–9; repr. in R. Busch: Leopold Spinner (Bonn, 1987), 192–201

BIBLIOGRAPHY

D. Drew: 'Twelve Questions for Leopold Spinner', Tempo, no.99 (1972), 14–17

M. Graubart: 'The Music of Leopold Spinner', Tempo, no.109 (1974), 2–14; continued as 'Leopold Spinner's Later Music', Tempo, no.110 (1974), 14–29 and 'Leopold Spinner: the last phase', Tempo, no.138 (1981), 2–18

R. Busch: Leopold Spinner (Bonn, 1987) [incl. complete list of compositions and writings]

R. Busch: 'The Identity of Leopold Spinner', Tempo, no.165 (1988), 24–36

MICHAEL GRAUBART

Spinto (It.: 'pushed'). A genuinely lyric voice (usually soprano or tenor) that is nevertheless large enough to sound powerful and incisive in dramatic climaxes. It is not, as it might appear from its meaning of 'pushed', a negative term; its full expression is 'lirico spinto'. The term is used also to describe operatic roles that require voices of this character, for example Mimì in Puccini's La bohème and Alfredo in Verdi's La traviata. See SOPRANO and TENOR.

OWEN JANDER/ELLEN T. HARRIS

Spiridion [Pater a Monte Carmelo; Nenning, Johann] (b Neustadt an der Saale, Bavaria, 16 July 1615; d Bamberg, 21 Nov 1685). German composer and organist. He entered the Carmelite order at the age of 17 and in 1643 was organist of the Seminario Germanico, Rome. He then spent a few years in Belgium, returning to Germany in 1650. In 1658 he was vicar of the convent at Neustadt an der Saale. In 1660 he was a preacher and 'adiutor musicorum' in Prague and in 1664 was transferred to Bamberg. He carried out duties for his order at Fährbrück, near Würzburg, in 1667 and then at Obergriesheim, near Heilbronn, before returning to the monastery at Bamberg in 1670. In his Nova instructio he stated that he had received his musical education from Abbot Francesco of Spezia. His Musica romana is a product of this Italian influence; it is a collective volume including 13 works by Carissimi, Francesco Foggia and Bonifatio Gratiani and a Salve regina of his own. His masses of 1668 are in the concertato style. The Nova instructio pro pulsandis organis, spinettis, manuchordiis (vols.i and ii, Bamberg, 1669–71; vol.iv, Gerbstedt, 1675) is a manual offering important evidence about performing and composing techniques in the second half of the 17th century.

WORKS

Musica romana, 3vv, 2 vn ad lib, 1665[3]

Musica theo-liturgica ... complectens 4 missas, 5vv, 2 vn ad lib (Würzburg, 1668)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

GöhlerV

F.W. Riedel: Quellenkundliche Beiträge zur Geschichte der Musik für Tasteninstrumente in der zweiten Hälfte des 17. Jahrhunderts (vornehmlich in Deutschland) (Kassel, 1960, 2/1990), esp. 23, 60, 63

B.A. Lamott: Keyboard Improvisation according to "Nova instructio pro pulsandis organis", 1670–ca. 1675 by Spiridion a Monte Carmelo (Ann Arbor, 1981)

AUGUST SCHARNAGL/RAYMOND DITTRICH

Spirito da Reggio. See PRATONERI, GASPERO.

Spiritoso (It.: 'vivacious', 'ingenious'). Spirited, lively. As a tempo mark and as a qualification it has several forms, including spirituoso, con spirito ('with vivacity'), the adverb spiritosamente and the French adverb spirituellement. Two meanings have been current. The first is the slower one described by Brossard (1703): 'Spiritoso or spirituosò; one also says con spirito or con spirto. It means with spirit [esprit], with soul, with judgment and discretion. It is also rather like affettuoso'. Similar definitions appear in Rousseau (1768) and Escudier (1844), both of whom placed it in the hierarchy between adagio and andante; and several early 18th-century uses (largo spiritoso, adagio spiritoso) suggest this same meaning.

The second meaning is most clearly expressed by Mozart, who in a letter of 7 August 1782 wrote of the allegro con spirito opening to his 'Haffner' Symphony:

'Das erste Allegro muss recht feurig gehen' ('The first allegro must go with real fire'). That meaning, which is the one most commonly used today, stretches back well into the 18th century: there are several movements in Domenico Scarlatti and Rameau, for instance, that are so marked and must be fast. Alessandro Scarlatti's Genuinda (1694) includes the tempo mark allegrissimo e spiritoso.

For bibliography see TEMPO AND EXPRESSION MARKS.

DAVID FALLOWS

Spiritual. A type of folksong that originated in American revivalist activity between 1740 and the close of the 19th century. The term is derived from the biblical 'spiritual songs', a designation used in early publications to distinguish the texts from metrical psalms and hymns of traditional church usage.

I. White spiritual. II. African-American spiritual.

I. White spiritual

The category 'white spiritual' includes the folk hymn, the religious ballad and the camp-meeting spiritual, which is the counterpart of the black spiritual and shares with it certain musical elements, symbolism and probably (in part, at least) a common origin. This extensive genre was unnoticed in the USA until George Pullen Jackson, a professor of German at Vanderbilt University in Nashville, Tennessee, published White Spirituals in the Southern Uplands (1933), the first of a series of studies that documented its existence both in oral tradition and in published form in the shape-note tune books of rural communities (see SHAPE-NOTE HYMNODY). The existence of the spirituals among English Primitive Methodists was described by Anne Gilchrist (1927).

1. The folk hymn and the religious ballad. 2. The camp-meeting spiritual.

1. THE FOLK HYMN AND THE RELIGIOUS BALLAD. The folk hymn was defined by Lowens (introduction to Wyeth, 1813) as 'basically a secular folktune which happens to be sung to a religious text'. The religious ballad, with a narrative text, may be similarly described. Folk hymns were the first spirituals to appear in print in the USA. Following the religious revival in the early 18th century called the Great Awakening, which was led by George Whitefield, Jonathan Edwards, James Davenport and others, converts from Congregationalist and Presbyterian churches formed 'new light' and 'new side' churches while remaining within the organized denominations. Their musical expression was confined principally to settings of Isaac Watts's hymn and psalm texts. A more radical group of converts called 'Separatists' formed independent congregations. In New England they eventually merged with another disenfranchised sect, the Baptists, and it was in this religious tradition that the earliest folk-hymn texts and music originated (see BAPTIST CHURCH MUSIC, §2).

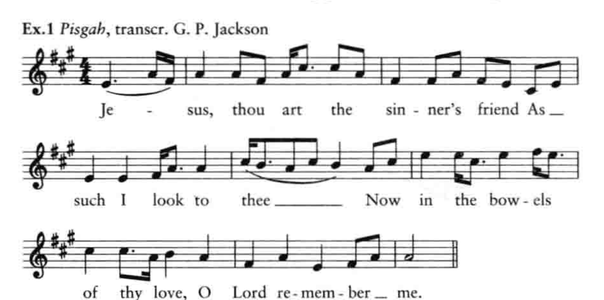
Separatist Baptists believed that their musical texts, like their religious expression, should be intensely personal, exuberant, experiential and free from literary and doctrinal restraints. James Davenport, an early Separatist evangelist, published a text in 1742 that was a prototype:

> Then should my soul with angels feast
> On joys that always last
> Blest be my God, the God of Joy
> Who gives me here a taste.

John Leland (1754–1841), a Baptist minister, wrote (1799):

> Come and taste along with me
> Consolation running free
> From my Father's wealthy throne
> Sweeter than the honeycomb.

Publications containing texts of Separatist Baptist hymns began to appear in the 1780s in the frontier areas of New England. The most popular was Joshua Smith's Divine Hymns or Spiritual Songs for the Use of Religious Assemblies and Private Christians (*c*1784, 2/1793), which contains hymns by Watts and the English evangelicals but also includes texts of American folk origin. Some have added refrains and tag lines, the principal characteristics of the camp-meeting spiritual of the early 19th century.



The tunes used for the early texts are much more difficult to document. The first reliable source is The Christian Harmony (1805) by Jeremiah Ingalls, a singing master and composer in the style of William Billings and Andrew Law. He included among his fuging-tunes and set-pieces a number of melodies that were popular among his Baptist neighbours, harmonized in the style of the New England composers. The principal feature of the melodies of Ingalls and the many compilers who followed him is their relationship to secular folktunes of the British Isles (see Klocko, 1978). Some can be identified as appropriations of entire melodies, while others are clearly related in contour, intervallic motifs, ornamentation and musical form. The tunes are based on scales other than the conventional heptatonic major and minor, and 'gapped scales' are frequently found (ex.1). They exist in both oral and printed forms.

Revivalist converts were encouraged to 'testify' or 'witness' in their singing to the joy that religion had brought them. Some recounted their experiences in narrative, giving rise to a related form called the 'religious ballad'. Examples are Wayfaring Stranger, Romish Lady and Wicked Polly. These ballads became a means of witnessing to and teaching the young. Printed examples of the genre first appeared in Anna Beeman's Hymns on Various Subjects (1792) and in John Peak's compilation A New Collection of Hymns and Spiritual Songs ... Some Entirely New (1793). The following example from Peak is typical:

> I hear the gospel's joyful sound
> An organ I shall be
> To sound aloud redeeming love
> And sinner's misery.

The religious ballads are the white spirituals most closely related to secular folktunes. Jackson transcribed many of the ballads found in oral tradition for Spiritual Folk-Songs of Early America (1937), Down-East Spirituals, and Others (1943) and Another Sheaf of White Spirituals (1952), and related them to specific secular tune families. Ingalls and John Wyeth, whose Repository of Sacred Music, Part Second appeared in 1813, provided

Ex.1 Pisgah, transcr. G. P. Jackson conclusive evidence that the early converts drew on their knowledge of folk and popular tunes to give musical expression to their new religious feeling. An example from The Christian Harmony of secular music appropriated for a religious text is Christ the Appletree set to Handel's Quick March, a popular fife tune of the 18th century (ex.2). The practice of borrowing from the secular tradition was not unknown in previous religious movements, and it continued in the USA as the principal characteristic of the music heard in later camp meetings and in the urban revivals of the 19th and 20th centuries.

2. THE CAMP-MEETING SPIRITUAL. The camp-meeting spiritual is closely related to the folk hymn but is characterized by simplicity, frequent repetition, refrains and tag lines. Its music is related to existing folktunes, but is not entirely derivative. It resulted from a new wave of revivalistic activity beginning in 1800 in the areas of pioneer settlement (the Great Revival).

The camp meeting, an open-air religious service lasting several days, brought together thousands of settlers of all denominations. At similar Baptist services as early as 1770 hymns with added refrains were sung, although James McGready was credited with organizing the first camp meeting in 1800 in Logan County, Kentucky. Diversity of belief and practice was secondary to the religious fervour that permeated the preaching, singing, baptisms and Communion rites. The event was primarily social, giving settlers a release from the isolation and hardship that characterized their daily lives; it provided occasions for religious frenzy, fed by evangelists of all persuasions and by the constant singing in the encampment. Out of this came the camp-meeting spiritual, directly prompted by the emotional fervour of the participants, and as varied in texts and tunes as the diverse religious practices represented in the meeting.

Within the camp, particularly in the southern states, blacks, both slaves and freemen, mingled with whites, but conducted their religious meetings separately. The similarity of texts and tunes between white and black spirituals indicates a free exchange of musical elements and influences.

In the camp meetings texts by Watts and texts from the collections of Joseph Hart and John Rippon, as well as from Smith's Divine Hymns, were fragmented and supplied with tag lines and refrains. Tunes of the simplest order were improvised by the congregations. Participants drew on the musical resources of their denomination but the religious expression of the Separatists, now institutionalized among Baptists, prevailed. Methodists, who were newcomers to the frontier, readily adopted the practice. The musical characteristics of the camp-meeting spiritual were those that made it amenable to improvisation, extension and variation, and to rapid assimilation by large bodies of people limited in reading ability, musical performance and cultural experience. Repetition of text was one characteristic:

> Where, O where are the Hebrew Children?
> Where, O where are the Hebrew Children?
> Where, O where are the Hebrew Children?
> Safe in the promised land.

Refrains were often added to existing texts:

> Whither goest thou, pilgrim stranger
> Passing through this darksome vale
> Knowest thou not 'tis full of danger
> And will not thy courage fail
> I am bound for the kingdom
> Will you go to glory with me
> Halleluiah, praise the Lord.

Tag lines were frequently inserted into a couplet:

> I know that my Redeemer lives,
> Glory hallelujah!
> What comfort this sweet sentence gives,
> Glory hallelujah!

A couplet was sometimes followed by a refrain:

> O when shall I see Jesus
> And dwell with him above
> And shall hear the trumpet sound
> In that morning
>
> And from the flowing fountain
> Drink everlasting love
> And shall hear the trumpet sound
> In that morning

The repetition, tag lines, and refrains provided for participation in 'call-and-response' performances between evangelist and people. The most popular forms were four-line arrangements of AAAB, and the couplet with tag line, A (tag) B (tag). Refrains followed similar arrangements, and often used the melody of the verse or a new tune with a higher range.

The texts of the camp-meeting spiritual appeared first in pocket 'songsters' without music, compiled by ministers and enterprising laymen and sold on the site. Camp meetings became a community tradition in the 19th century and still occur in isolated areas of the southern states. After the Civil War (1861–5) there were only two significant publications for camp meetings: the Revival and Camp Meeting Minstrel (1867), popularly known as 'The Perkinpine Songster', and Joseph Hillman's The Revivalist (*c*1868).

The tunes of the folk hymns, religious ballads and spirituals persist in the rich oral tradition of the southern states (described by Jackson, Cecil Sharp and others in the early 20th century) and they retain much of the modal character of the original secular melodies. Printed sources of the folk hymns and spirituals are the shape-note tune books of the rural singing-school choral tradition. Wyeth's Repository of Sacred Music, Part Second appears to be a link between the music of the New England Separatists and the shape-note singers. The Repository was the first in a series of tune books used by itinerant music teachers who composed works in the style of Billings and others, and in imitation of their models added treble, alto and bass parts to the melodies they transcribed from common usage (ex.3, taken from the Original Sacred Harp, Denson Revision, where the tune is in the tenor part and is in the 'natural minor' or A mode; the harmonization – even the

Ex.2

(a) Christ the appletree (Downey, 1968)

The tree of life my soul hath seen, la - den with

(b) Handel's Quick March fruit and _ al - ways green.

Ex.3 Kedron (Denson, 1936) alto part added in the early 20th century – stays within this modal scheme, and emphasizes two-note rather than triadic harmony, particularly open 5ths and octaves).

Eskew (1966) traced the history of these publications, identified the folk hymns and spirituals in each, and described their movement into the southern states. In particular, he documented the work of Ananias Davisson, who published the Kentucky Harmony (1816, suppl. 1820). William Walker's The Southern Harmony and Musical Companion (1835) and Benjamin F. White and E.J. King's The Sacred Harp (1844) are especially rich in folk hymns and spirituals. Levi C. Myers's Manual of Sacred Music (1853) shows a strong preference for camp-meeting songs.

An attempt to publish camp-meeting songs and other music for revivals in the cities of the northern states was made by Joshua Leavitt with The Christian Lyre (1830), but white spirituals never became popular in urban areas. From 1875 the main impetus of the revival movement was provided by the urban crusades of Dwight L. Moody and Ira Sankey and, later, the work of Billy Sunday and Homer Rodeheaver. The musical products of this era of revivalism, gospel hymns and other songs (see GOSPEL MUSIC, §I), were popular in style, and, in many instances, their music was taken directly from contemporary theatre and parlour songs.

A revival of interest in folk hymns and spirituals among choral directors and composers in the mid-20th century is evident in the increased number of choral arrangements and orchestral works in which the tunes are used; and compilers of hymnals, particularly those of the Baptist and Methodist denominations, have made use of many of the tunes and texts in their publications.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

COLLECTIONS

All reproduced on microcard in C. Skipton, ed.: Early American Imprints (Worcester, MA, 1966)

J. Davenport: Rev'd. Mr. Davenport's Song (Boston, 1942)
S. Occom: A Choice Collection of Hymns and Spiritual Songs Intended for the Edification of Sincere Christians of all Denominations (New London, CT, 1774, 3/1787/R1792 with addns)
A. Beeman: Hymns on Different Spiritual Subjects (Norwich, CT, 1792)
J. Peak: A New Collection of Hymns and Spiritual Songs … some Entirely New (Windsor, VT, 1793)
J. Smith and others: Divine Hymns, or Spiritual Songs for the Use of Religious Assemblies and Private Christians (Exeter, NH, 1793, enlarged 9/1799 by W. Northup)
J. Ingalls: The Christian Harmony (Exeter, NH, 1805/R)
J. Wyeth: Repository of Sacred Music, Part Second (Harrisburg, PA, 1813, 2/1820/*R*1964 with introduction by I. Lowens)
A. Davisson: Kentucky Harmony (Harrisonburg, VA, 1816/R)
A. Davisson: A Supplement to the Kentucky Harmony (Harrisonburg, VA, 1820, 3/1825)
J. Leavitt: The Christian Lyre (New York 1830)
W. Walker: The Southern Harmony and Musical Companion (New Haven, 1835, 3/1854/R)
B.F. White and E.J. King: The Sacred Harp (Hamilton, GA, 1844, 3/1859/R, 4/1869); ed. T.J. Denson and P. Denson as Original Sacred Harp, Denson Revision (Haleyville, AL, 1936, 4/1971)
L.C. Myers: Manual of Sacred Music (Harrisonburg, VA, 1853)
J.G. McCurry: The Social Harp (Philadelphia, 1855); ed. D.W. Patterson and J.F. Guest (Athens, GA, 1973)
Revival and Camp Meeting Minstrel (Philadelphia, 1867)
J. Hillman: The Revivalist (Troy, NY, 1868, enlarged 1872)
R.E. Crawford, ed.: The Core Repertory of Early American Psalmody, RRAM, xi–xii (1984)

STUDIES

J. Warrington: Short Titles of Books Relating to or Illustrating the History and Practice of Psalmody in the United States, 1620–1820 (Philadelphia, 1898/R)
A. Gilchrist: 'The Folk Element in Early Revival Hymns and Tunes', JFSS, viii (1927–31), 61–95
G.P. Jackson: White Spirituals in the Southern Uplands (Chapel Hill, NC, 1933/R)
A.M. Buchanan: Folk Hymns of America (New York, 1938)
G.P. Jackson: White and Negro Spirituals (New York, 1943/R)
G. Chase: America's Music, from the Pilgrims to the Present (New York, 1955, 3/1987/R)
J.N. Sims: The Hymnody of the Camp-Meeting Tradition (diss., Union Theological Seminary, NY, 1960)
P.J. Revitt: The George Pullen Jackson Collection of Southern Hymnody (Los Angeles, 1964)
H.L. Eskew: Shape-Note Hymnody in the Shenandoah Valley, 1816–1860 (diss., Tulane U., New Orleans, 1966)
D.D. Bruce: And They All Sang Hallelujah: Plain-Folk Camp-Meeting Religion 1800–1845 (Knoxville, TN, 1974)
B.C. Parker: The Folk Hymns of John Wyeth's 'Repository of Sacred Music, Part Second': a Historical and Analytical Study (thesis, William Carey College, 1976)
C.D. Scribbling: Joshua Levitt's 'The Christian Lyre': a Historical Evaluation (thesis, William Carey College, 1976)
B.E. Cobb: The Sacred Harp: a Tradition and its Music (Athens, GA, 1978)
R.H. Hulan: Camp-Meeting Spiritual Folksongs: Legacy of the 'Great Revival in the West' (diss., U. of Texas, Austin, 1978)
D.G. Klocko: Jeremiah Ingall's 'The Christian Harmony or Songster's Companion (1805)' (diss., U. of Michigan, 1978)
E.J. Lorenz: Glory Hallelujah! the Story of the Camp-Meeting Spiritual (Nashville, TN, 1980)

II. African-American spiritual

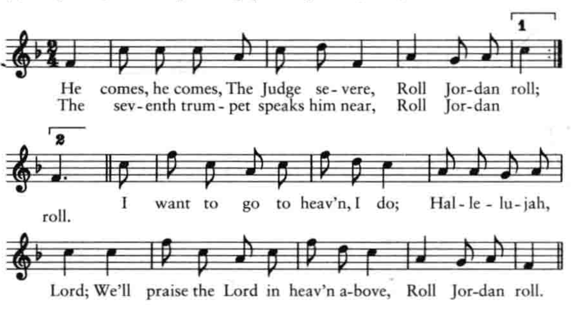
Black spirituals constitute one of the largest bodies of American folksong that survived into the 21st century, and are probably the best known. They are principally associated with African-American church congregations of the Deep South, and the earlier, more informal and sometimes clandestine gatherings of blacks in 'praise houses' and 'brush arbour' meetings.

1. EARLY COLLECTIONS. Although black American singing, whether in the fields or in the churches, was remarked upon by many writers in the 18th century and the early 19th, few commented upon the songs in detail.

The English actress Fanny Kemble, wife of a slave-owner, noted in her diary in 1839 'how they all sing in unison, having never, it appears, attempted or heard anything like part-singing' (p.159). She described how at a funeral 'the whole congregation uplifted their voices in a hymn, the first high wailing notes of which – sung all in unison … sent a thrill through all my nerves' (p.140). She did not, however, note the words she heard. In the early 1860s Colonel Thomas Wentworth Higginson, in command of a black regiment, carefully wrote down the texts of songs he heard his men sing. Some of these were later included in his published memoirs of 1870, for example:

> I know moon-rise, I know star-rise,
> Lay dis body down.
> I walk in de moonlight, I walk in de starlight,
> To lay dis body down. (p.209)



This form was typical of a great many spirituals: an alternating line and refrain which permitted endless extemporisation (see I,2, above). To the soldiers such songs were, he wrote, 'more than a source of relaxation; they were a stimulus to courage and a tie to heaven' (p.221). In 1867 William Francis Allen, Charles Pickard Ware and Lucy McKim Garrison published their Slave Songs of the United States, a collection that included some of the spirituals best known and still surviving in the late 20th century, including Old ship of Zion, Lay this body down, Michael, row the boat ashore and We will march through the valley, as well as many lesser-known songs. The authors confirmed the absence of part-singing but added, 'yet no two appear to be singing the same thing'. The lead singer, who would frequently improvise, was generally supported by 'basers' who provided a vocal groundwork and interpolations. The singing they heard abounded in 'slides from one note to another, and turns and cadences not in articulated notes'. In presenting their collection they regretted their inability to convey in notation 'the odd turns made in the throat, and the curious rhythmic effect produced by single voices chiming in at different irregular intervals'.

2. African and European sources. There was much speculation, especially among the early commentators on black spirituals, about possible African elements in the songs. Allen and others considered them 'to have become imbued with the mode and spirit of European music – often, nevertheless, retaining a distinct tinge of their native Africa' (1867). Wallaschek in Primitive Music (1893) denied that the songs had African elements; but he had not been to the USA and had not heard black spirituals sung. Krehbiel, after analysing some 500 collected spirituals, contended that they were essentially black American in character and origin. Few have questioned the African nature of the plantation 'ring shout', a shuffling circular dance to chanting and hand-clapping that accompanied the more joyous spirituals. Often viewed with alarm white Southerners, ring shouts were still being performed in the 1930s. Their ecstatic and trance-inducing nature suggested links with African custom. Other elements that might be evidence of African retention in this type of spiritual, such as improvised antiphonal singing, shouting, chanting, stamping and the involuntary spasms of 'possessed' members of the congregations, have also been observed in fundamentalist white churches, and may be related to the highly emotional forms of religious expression developed in the Great Awakening of the early 18th century. The Englishman Isaac Watts and others published large numbers of hymns during this period, which were learnt by 'lining out' (the intoning of a line by a precentor and its repetition by the congregation). The 1820 edition of Watts's hymns had wide circulation throughout the southern USA and 'Dr. Watts songs' were popular among black Americans. The closeness of lining out to the traditional African work song form of leader-and-chorus antiphonal singing undoubtedly contributed to the popularity of this style. Many of the hymn texts were used, in whole or in part, as the basis for spirituals.

Doubts have been raised concerning the origin of the black spiritual as a genre. Lovell (1972) contended, as had Krehbiel, that the spirituals were the innovations of black slaves, but evidence was adduced by White (1928), Johnson (1930) and Jackson (in several publications) to support a common source for both the black spiritual and the white in the camp meetings and the white Southern rural churches. Jackson, in particular, argued for white origins, pointing to many black spirituals as variants of songs published earlier in white tune books, notably those of the shape-note tradition (ex.4). But priority in publication is hardly proof of origin where folk music is concerned, especially when one body of the music in question is that of a group whose illiteracy was enforced by law. It would seem more historically accurate to assume that the exchange between black and white traditions was considerable and that the influence was mutual. Slaves were often permitted in the white churches where they heard the same services as their owners; and whites heard slaves singing spirituals on the levees, the plantations, the riverboats, and even in work gangs.

3. Textual and musical characteristics. Many spirituals are suffused with melancholy and have been called 'sorrow songs'. Intensely moving slow spirituals

Ex.4
(a) Roll Jordan, white camp-meeting spiritual (Jackson, 1964)

(b) Roll Jordan, black spiritual; transcr. G. P. Jackson such as Sometimes I feel like a motherless child, He never said a mumblin' word, Were you there when they crucified my Lord? and Nobody knows the trouble I seen reveal the singers' own trials and identification with the suffering of Jesus Christ. The theme of death runs through many spirituals; some, like Toll the bell, angel, I jus' got over, suggest a spirit that has already left this earth. Other spirituals, however, sometimes called 'jubilees', are quick in tempo, highly rhythmic and often syncopated; they are performed in a call-and-response manner and are settings of more positive, optimistic or hortatory texts. Among these are Didn't my Lord deliver Daniel?, I an' Satan had a race, Blow your trumpet, Gabriel and Git on board, chillun. Some writers (e.g. Fisher, 1953) maintain that virtually all spirituals were codified songs of protest. The former slave and black leader Frederick Douglass (*c*1817–95) wrote of singing spirituals when a slave: 'A keen observer might have detected in our repeated singing of "O Canaan, sweet Canaan, I am bound for the land of Canaan" something more than a hope of reaching heaven. We meant to reach the North, and the North was our Canaan' (p.157). Spirituals such as Steal away, Didn't my Lord deliver Daniel? and Children, we all shall be free must have been seen as incitements to escape from bondage, while We'll stand the storm and We shall walk through the valley in peace were reassuring to faltering spirits.

Often the imagery of the spirituals includes vivid juxtapositions of phrases and literal interpretations of metaphoric biblical texts. The book of Revelation provided an important source of images for songs. But to quote spirituals out of context tends to emphasize their naivety; it is in the course of the singing that their beauty and freshness is most apparent.

The performance of black spirituals varied from that of white spirituals in a number of ways. A significant difference was the use of microtonally flatted notes (sometimes identified as lowered 3rds, 5ths and 7ths), which were frequently arrived at by progressive shading, particularly in the singing of the extended syllables of 'long-metre' spirituals. Syncopation was commonly introduced by individuals or small groups of singers within a congregation, which shifted the accents by anticipating or delaying the expected note. Counter-rhythms were marked by hand-clapping and, in those denominations that permitted it, by 'holy dancing' (dancing without crossing the feet). Black spirituals frequently began with the chorus preceding the first verse; others alternated verses and refrain lines, which were sung by the whole congregation. Responsorial singing was common, either in reply to a line or stanza sung by the leader, or by collective singing of the second half of a line that was begun by a solo voice. Special qualities of vocal timbre, including the rasp and a shrill falsetto, enriched the sound, while interpolated cries of 'Glory!' and other words or phrases of encouragement or affirmation made the spiritual far more varied in performance than some collections suggest.

4. After 1870. The publication of collections in the 1860s increased interest in black spirituals. But they were brought to an international audience through the appearances from 1871 of the Jubilee singers from Fisk University, Nashville, Tennessee. The group's purpose was to raise funds for the university, which was intended for black students, but they were unsuccessful until they included a number of spirituals in their programmes. Thereafter they performed concert arrangements of spirituals both in the USA and in Europe, and awakened an abiding interest in this form. The Jubilee Singers and later the Hampton Singers from the Hampton Institute in Virginia were the inspiration for Frederick J. Work, R. Nathaniel Dett, T.P. Fenner and Clarence Cameron White (who all conducted both groups) to arrange and publish their songs. From a folk form the spirituals rapidly became a part of the repertory of concert artists, cathedral choirs and even symphony orchestras. Many of the performers and composers who popularized the spirituals in concerts all over the world were black, among them Roland Hayes, Paul Robeson, William Grant Still and James Weldon Johnson. Publication ensured lasting respect for the spirituals and conservation of their words and melodies, but transcription for voice and piano, written arrangement for orchestras and the use of art-music singing techniques destroyed the spontaneity and unpredictable quality that the spiritual had had as a folk form.

Although the popularity of the spirituals on the concert platform increased during the 20th century, their appeal had already begun to wane in the black churches, and by the late 19th century gospel song began to replace the spiritual (see Gospel music, §II). The popular jubilee groups, mainly quartets, which had developed in the late 1870s, and whose successors recorded extensively in the 1920s and 30s often included spirituals among their songs. Their approach was already that of the gospel quartet: although there are detectable differences between the earlier and later phases, the relatively sophisticated arrangements performed by the quartets were far removed from the traditional forms of spiritual singing. Surviving examples of the earlier styles are to be found in the recordings of preachers and their congregations, of which many hundreds were issued, principally in the late 1920s. Among them are many instances of lining out, such as Rev. E.D. Campbell's Come let us eat together (Vic. 35824, 1927) and I heard the voice of Jesus say on Rev. P.E. Edmonds's There's a Hole in the Wall (Para. 12876, 1929). 'Long-metre' singing of a 'Doctor Watts' is to be heard on Rev. J.C. Burnett's Amazing Grace (Decca 7494, 1938), while alternating responses to a chanted solo are well represented on Rev. Gipson's John done saw that holy number (Para. 12555, 1927). An excellent example of overlapping singing against syncopated hand-clapping is to be found in a version of Trouble don't last always on Rev. J.M. Milton's recording with his Atlanta congregation of A Four Day Ramble (Col. 14501, 1929). The adoption of the jubilee songs by the Sanctified churches is vigorously demonstrated in the singing of All God's chillen got wings on Rev. F.W. McGee's The Holy City (Vic. 21205, 1927). Later recordings by preachers and congregations were frequently of this kind. Mention should also be made of black Sacred Harp singing from shape-note books (see Shape-note hymnody). Though seldom recorded, early examples include Rejoicing on the Way by the Fa Sol La Singers, recorded in Atlanta (Col. 14656, 1931), and Bells of Love, sung virtually as a round, by the Middle Georgia Singing Convention no.1 (OK 8883, 1930).

There were fewer recordings of preachers and their congregations after 1930, and when they increased in the 1950s spirituals had been largely replaced by gospel songs. However, older forms of the spiritual survived in the remoter backwaters of black culture and particularly in the more conservative churches of the South. Many hundreds of recordings of these rural spirituals were made between 1933 and 1942 for the Archive of Folk Song of the Library of Congress. By far the most important pockets for conservation of the early spirituals and the ring shout were in the Sea Islands of Georgia and South Carolina, as demonstrated by Lydia Parrish in 1942. Recordings made 20 years later from this region, and from elsewhere in the South such as Georgia and Alabama, emphasize the persistence of the tradition in isolated communities unassailed by outside influences. In one example of a ring shout from Jennings, Louisiana, Run old Jeremiah (recorded by W. Brown, S. Brown and A. Coleman, AAFS L3, 1934), there is a train-like accompaniment of stamping feet. Another shout, Eli you can't stand, was performed with hand-clapping accompaniment to chanted lead-singing by Willis Proctor and others on St. Simon's Island (Prst. 25002, 1959).

Two singers who recorded spirituals extensively for the Library of Congress during the 1930s and early 1940s were Vera Hall and Dock Reed. Field recordings of these two a decade later included two examples of the simplest form of additive spiritual, Dead and gone and Free at last (1950, reissued on FW 4418, 1960), the latter dating from the mid-1860s. The complexity of the early shouting spirituals is suggested in Rock chair, tol' you to rock (Rock Chariot, 1950), performed by Rich Amerson, Earthy Ann Coleman and Price Coleman at Livingston, Alabama, which includes a counter-chant sung against the main theme (FW 4418, 1960). Re-creations of the Sea Islands spiritual songs with drum, fife and banjo accompaniment were made by Bessie Jones and a mixed group, including fine versions of Before this time another year and Beulah Land (Prst, 25001, 1959).

An outstanding example of the early form of the spiritual with unison singing and moaning is Father I stretch my hands to Thee (FW 2656, 1960) performed by Jake Field, Eastman Brand and Arthur Holifield. This is one of many recordings that show the relationship between black spirituals and white hymns, since the text used was written by Charles Wesley. Several spirituals with texts by Watts were sung by John and Lovie Griffin of Perry County, Alabama, including When I can read my title clear (FW 2656, 1956). Early recordings were made of the Fisk Jubilee Singers, such as Roll Jordan roll (*c*1913, reissued on RBF5, 1962), and show the concert-style spiritual. Some of the better-known of these arrangements of spirituals, including those published by the Fisk Jubilee Singers themselves in 1872 and 1892, have remained as favourites in black churches where gospel song has otherwise replaced the older traditions. Versions of the concert spirituals also appear among recordings made by many leading gospel singers and groups.

Thus, although the spiritual as a folk form declined in popularity among black Americans during the 20th century because of its association with slavery, extensive collecting, recording and scholarly study have ensured that the tradition will not be lost to future generations. See also UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, §II, 2.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

COLLECTIONS

'Grove5' (G.P. Jackson); McCarthyJR ('Gospel Songs and Spirituals', P. Oliver)
W.F. Allen, C.P. Ware and L.M. Garrison: Slave Songs of the United States (New York, 1867/R)
T.F. Seward: Jubilee Songs as Sung by the Jubilee Singers of Fisk University (Nashville, TN, 1872)
T.F. Seward and G.L. White: Jubilee Songs (New York, 1884)
T.P. Fenner: Religious Folk Songs of the Negro (Hampton, VA, 1909/R)
J.W. Johnson and J.R. Johnson: The Books of American Negro Spirituals (New York, 1925–6/R)
H.W. Odum and G.B. Johnson: The Negro and his Songs (Chapel Hill, NC, 1925)
D. Scarborough: On the Trail of Negro Folk Songs (Cambridge, MA, 1925)
N.I. White: American Negro Folk-Songs (Cambridge, MA, 1928/R)
E.A. McIhenny: Befo' de War Spirituals: Words and Melodies (Boston, 1933/R)
R.N. Dett: The Dett Collection of Negro Spirituals (Chicago, 1936)
J.W. Work: American Negro Songs (New York, 1940)
L. Parrish: Slave Songs of the Georgia Sea Islands (New York, 1942/R)

LITERATURE

F.A. Kemble: Journal of a Residence on a Georgian Plantation in 1838–1839 (New York, 1863); ed. J.A. Scott (New York, 1961/R)
T.W. Higginson: 'Negro Spirituals', Army Life in a Black Regiment (Boston, 1870), 197ff
F. Douglass: Life and Times of Frederick Douglass (Hartford, CT, 1882/R, 2/1892)
R. Wallaschek: Primitive Music (London, 1893/R)
H.E. Krehbiel: Afro-American Folksongs: a Study in Racial and National Music (New York, 1914)
R.E. Kennedy: Mellows: a Chronicle of Unknown Singers (New York, 1925/R)
E.M. von Hornbostel: 'American Negro Songs', International Review of Missions, xv (1926), 748–53
G.B. Johnson: Folk Culture on St. Helena Island, South Carolina (Chapel Hill, NC, 1930/R), 117–8
G.P. Jackson: 'Tunes of the White Man's Spirituals Preserved in the Negro's Religious Songs', 'White Man's and Negro's Spiritual Texts Compared', White Spirituals in the Southern Uplands (Chapel Hill, NC, 1933/R), 242–302
M.J. Herskovits: 'The Contemporary Scene: Africanisms in Religious Life', The Myth of the Negro Past (New York, 1941/R), 207–60
G.P. Jackson: White and Negro Spirituals (New York, 1943/R)
M.M. Fisher: Negro Slave Songs in the United States (Ithaca, NY, 1953)
F. Ramsey jr: disc notes, Music fom the South, vi–vii: Elder Songsters, FW 2655–6 (1956)
W.H. Tallmadge: 'Dr. Watts and Mahalia Jackson: the Development, Decline, and Survival of a Folk Style in America', EthM, v (1961), 95–9
H. Courlander: 'Anthems and Spirituals as Oral Literature', Negro Folk Music U.S.A. (New York, 1963/R), 35–79
E. Southern: The Music of Black Americans: a History (New York, 1971, 2/1983)
J. Lovell: Black Song: the Forge and the Flame (New York, 1972)
E. Southern: 'An Origin for the Negro Spiritual', Black Scholar, iii (1972), 8–13
P.K. Maultsby: Afro-American Religious Music: 1619–1861 (diss., U. of Wisconsin, 1974)
I.V. Jackson-Brown: 'Afro-American Sacred Songs in the Nineteenth Century: a Neglected Source', BPM, iv (1976), 22–38
P.K. Maultsby: 'Black Spirituals', BPM, iv (1976), 54–69
D.J. Epstein: Sinful Tunes and Spirituals (Urbana, IL, 1977)
A. Lomax: disc notes, Georgia Sea Island Songs, NW 278 (1977)
A.J. Raboteau: Slave Religion: the 'Invisible Institution' in the Antebellum South (New York, 1978)
W.T. Walker: 'Somebody's Calling My Name': Black Sacred Music and Social Change (Valley Forge, PA, 1979)
W. Tallmadge: Jubilee to Gospel: Commercially Recorded Black Religious Music 1921–1953, JEMF 108 (1980) [disc notes]
W. Tallmadge: 'The Black in Jackson's White Spirituals', BPM, ix (1981), 139–60
D.J. Epstein: 'A White Origin for the Black Spiritual? An Invalid Theory and How it Grew', American Music, i/2 (1983), 53–9
P. Oliver: Songsters and Saints: Vocal Traditions on Race Records (Cambridge, 1984)
W.F. Pitts: Old Ship of Zion: the Afro-Baptist Ritual in the African Diaspora (New York, 1993)

JAMES C. DOWNEY (i), PAUL OLIVER (ii)

Spirituellement. See SPIRITOSO.

Spisak, Michał (b Dąbrowa Górnicza, 14 Sept 1914; d Paris, 29 Jan 1965). Polish composer. He studied at the Katowice Conservatory, where in 1937 he took a diploma in the violin and composition, and also took composition lessons with Sikorski in Warsaw (1935–7). In 1937 he went to Paris, where he studied with Boulanger and remained until his death, while maintaining constant contact with his native country. Also in 1937 he became vice-president of the Society of Young Polish Musicians in Paris. He twice received the Lili Boulanger Prize (1945 and 1946) and was also twice winner of the Grand Prix of the Queen Elisabeth Competition (1953 for the orchestral Serenade, 1957 for the Concerto giocoso). In 1964 he was awarded the annual prize of the Polish Composers' Union.

Spisak was among the most outstanding Polish composers of his generation. His music, almost exclusively instrumental and emotionally rich and varied, shows an assurance of technique which is particularly apparent in his craftsmanlike writing for instruments, his transparent polyphony and his extraordinary feeling for orchestral colour. Throughout his career he remained faithful to the ideals of Boulanger and to the aesthetic of Stravinsky, whom he sometimes imitated to the extent of plagiarism. Undoubtedly his best compositions were modelled on Stravinsky's rejuvenated Classical and Baroque designs. Sometimes he attempted to reach beyond these influences by means of a neo-Romantic style, but this type of composition, exemplified by the String Quartet, is rather rare. More commonly his works are dominated by pre-Classical counterpoint, motoric rhythms, a simple handling of form and traditionally accomplished facture. Most of his few vocal works were occasional; the Anthem for chorus and orchestra (1947), for example, was composed for Boulanger's 60th birthday.

WORKS
(selective list)

ORCHESTRAL

Serenade, 1939; Cl Concertino, 1940–41; Aubade, small orch, 1943; Bn Conc., 1944; Suite, str, 1945; Pf Conc., 1947; Toccata, 1947; Symphonie concertante no.1, 1947; Divertimento, 2 pf, orch, 1950; Divertissement (Musique légère no.1), 1950; Sonata, vn, orch, 1950; Melos (ballet, M.-L. de Noailles), 1951; Trbn Concertino, 1951; Andante et allegro, vn, str, 1954; Symphonie concertante no.2, 1956; Conc. giocoso, 1957; Allegro de Voiron, 1957 [after work of 1943]

Educational pieces: 5 etiud, str, 1948; Etiudy, vn ens, 1949–50

CHAMBER AND SOLO INSTRUMENTAL

2 kaprysy, vn, pf, 1937; Qt, ob, 2 cl, bn, 1938; Sonata, vn, pf, 1946; Sonatine, ob, cl, bn, 1947; Wind Qnt, 1948; Duetto concertante, va, bn, 1949; Musique légère no.2, 2 vn, vc, db, pf, 1951; Str Qt no.1, 1953; Andante et allegro, vn, pf, 1954 [red. orch work]; Suite, 2 vn, 1958; Suite, 2 va, 1959; Improvisazione, vn, pf, 1962

Pf: Conc., 2 pf, 1942; Suite, 1943

VOCAL

Choral: 2 psalmy, chorus, orch, 1938; Hymn, chorus, orch, 1947; Mass, chorus, 1953; Hymn olimpijski, chorus, orch, 1955; Pędrek Wyrzutek (cant., S. Themerson), Tr, B, spkr, choruses, 1962

Solo vocal: 3 preludia, S, fl, 1953

Principal publisher: PWM

BIBLIOGRAPHY

S. Jarociński: 'Sztuka bez autobiografii (o Michale Spisaku)', RM, ix/14 (1965), 3–6

A. Mitscha: 'Michał Spisak (wspomnienie)', Zeszyty naukowe Państwowej Wyższej Szkoły Muzyezhej w Katowicach (1969), no.10, 5–19

D. Jasińska: 'Przejawy neoklasycyzmu w II Symfonii koncertującej Michała Spisaka' [Neo-classical manifestations in Spisak's Sinfonia concertante no.2], Muzyka, xxv/4 (1980), 61–74

Z. Helman: Neoklasycyzm w muzyce polskiej XX wieku [Neo-classicism in 20th-century Polish music] (Kraków, 1985)

BOGUSŁAW SCHÄFFER

Spitta, (Julius August) Philipp (b Wechold, nr Hoya, 7 Dec 1841; d Berlin, 13 April 1894). German music historian. His father was Philipp Spitta (1801–59), theologian and author of the Protestant hymn collection Psalter und Harfe. His musical education began early with piano, organ and composition lessons. He entered the University of Göttingen in 1860, first studying theology and then classical philology. In Göttingen he also continued to compose, wrote a brief biography of Schumann and began a lifelong close friendship with Brahms. He took the PhD in 1864 with a dissertation on Tacitus and became a Gymnasium teacher of Greek and Latin in Reval (now Tallinn), Sondershausen and finally Leipzig. While still in Reval he had begun lecturing at the museum on music history, and soon Bach research became his main interest. The first volume of his epoch-making study of Bach appeared in 1873; two years later he was appointed professor of music history at the University of Berlin and administrative director of the Berlin Hochschule für Musik, positions he held until his death.

Spitta's approach in the Bach biography reflected the traditional concept of art history as the history of individual artists, but was tempered with a strong, fresh emphasis on historical context. The introductory chapters, for example, present the first detailed study of 17th-century German choral and keyboard music. In subsequent works his concern became increasingly the refinement of musicological research. By his rigorous application of source-critical studies (his aesthetic judgments were strongly influenced by neo-Kantian philosophy), he laid the foundations of a system of historical criticism. He was exceptionally active and productive as a researcher, teacher, writer and editor, and he developed an interest in almost every period of music history, from the early Middle Ages to the music of his own time (he wrote, for example, the first scholarly articles on Schumann, Spontini and Weber for Grove's Dictionary of Music and Musicians (3/1883)).

As one of the leading figures of later 19th-century musicology, he made a lasting impression on the new academic discipline: together with Chrysander and Adler, he founded in 1885 the Vierteljahrsschrift für Musikwissenschaft, among the first scholarly music periodicals, and without his support the Denkmäler deutscher Tonkunst could not have been published. During his term of office at Berlin University he educated a whole generation of scholars, among them Oskar Fleischer, Max Friedlaender, Carl Krebs, Max Seiffert, Emil Vogel, Peter Wagner and Johannes Wolf.

Most of Spitta's library and scholarly estate was left to the Hochschule für Musik and is now divided between its library, the Staatsbibliothek zu Berlin and the University Library at Łódz.

WRITINGS

complete list of writings in Schilling

Ein Lebensbild Robert Schumanns (Leipzig, 1862)

Der Satzbau bei Tacitus (diss., U. of Göttingen, 1866)

Johann Sebastian Bach (Leipzig, 1873–80, 5/1962; Eng. trans., 1884–5, 2/1899/R)

'Sperontes "Singende Muse an der Pleisse"', VMw, i (1885), 35–126; rev. version in Musikgeschichtliche Aufsätze (Berlin, 1894)
'Die Musica enchiriadis und ihr Zeitalter', VMw, v (1889), 443–82
Zur Musik (Berlin, 1892/R) [16 essays, incl. 'Kunstwissenschaft und Kunst', 'Vom Mittleramte der Poesie', 'Die Wiederbelebung protestantischer Kirchenmusik auf geschichtlicher Grundlage', 'Händel, Bach, Schütz', articles on Weber, Gade, Brahms]
'Denkmäler deutscher Tonkunst', Grenzboten, lii/2 (1893), 16–27
Musikgeschichtliche Aufsätze (Berlin, 1894) [collected essays, incl. 'H. Schütz's Leben und Werke', 'Die Anfänge madrigalischer Dichtung in Deutschland', 'Bachiana', 'Über Robert Schumanns Schriften', 'Ballade']
'Palestrina im 16. und 19. Jahrhundert', Deutsche Rundschau, lxxix (1894), 74–95

EDITIONS

D. Buxtehüde: Orgelwerke (Leipzig, 1876–7)
Heinrich Schütz: Sämtliche Werke (Leipzig, 1885–94/R)
Friedrichs des Grossen musikalische Werke (Leipzig, 1889/R)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

MGG1 (H. Spitta); RiemannL12
H. Riemann: Philipp Spitta und seine Bach-Biographie (Berlin, 1900)
C. Krebs, ed.: Johannes Brahms: Briefwechsel, xvi (Berlin, 1920/R) [correspondence between Brahms and Spitta]
C. Wolff: 'From Berlin to Łódz: the Spitta Collection Resurfaces', Notes, xlvi (1989–90), 311–27
B. Wiechert: 'Philipp Spittas Studienjahre in Göttingen 1860–1864: eine biographische Skizze', Göttinger Jb, xxxix (1991), 169–81
C. Wolff: 'Schaffenskonzeption und Forschungsmethode: Anmerkungen zum Spitta-Nachlass in Łódz', Beiträge zur Bach-Forschung, ix–x (1991), 95–103
U. Schilling: Philipp Spitta: Leben und Wirken im Spiegel seiner Griefwechsel (Kassel, 1994)
W. Sandberger: Das Bach-Bild Philipp Spittas: ein Beiträg zur Geschichte der Bach-Rezeption im 19. Jahrhundert (Stuttgart, 1997)

CHRISTOPH WOLFF

Spitzflöte (Ger.). See under ORGAN STOP.

Spitzharfe (Ger.). See ARPANETTA.

Spitzmüller(-Harmersbach), Alexander, Freiherr von (b Vienna, 22 Feb 1894; d Paris, 12 Nov 1962). Austrian composer. The son of the last finance minister of the Austro-Hungarian Empire, he was originally intended for the legal profession and took the doctorate in law at Vienna in 1919. His first music studies were with Kanitz at the Neues Konservatorium, Vienna; later he studied informally with Berg and Apostel. In 1928 he emigrated to Paris where he was appointed a professor at the Schola Cantorum. From 1946 to 1953 he was director of French broadcasts to Germany and Austria, conducting some performances himself. As a critic he championed the cause of new Austrian music, particularly that of Berg, in France; his commentaries often appeared under the pseudonym Jean Cartier, or under his hyphenated family name. A long-standing member of the ISCM (which was instrumental in giving many of his own compositions their first performances), he was also president of the Centre Culturel Autriche and a representative of the Austrian Autorenschutzgesellschaft. In 1959 he was awarded the music prize of the city of Vienna, and in 1960 the Paris Conservatoire library organized an exhibition devoted exclusively to his works. His music embraces tonal and 12-note methods of organization, frequently reflecting his interest in Les Six.

WORKS
(selective list)

Stage: L'impasse, ballet, 1956; Le journal, ballet, 1957; Construction humaine, ballet, A. Silbermann, 1959; Fabrik der Illusionen, op satire, Silbermann, inc.
Orch: Sinfonietta ritmica, 1933; Pf Conc., 1937; Sym., 1939; Der 40. Mai, suite, chbr orch, 1941; 3 Friedenshymnen, 1943; Concert dans l'esprit latin, 1951; Pf Conc., 1953; Sym., str, 1954
Choral: TeD, chorus, orch, org, 1940; Beati mortui, 1947; Salve regina, S, female chorus, chbr orch, 1947; Ps cxxix, 1950; Les heures d'automne (cant., E. Verhaeren), female chorus, str, 1958
Incid music: Léonce et Léna (after G. Büchner), Ainsi va le monde (Meran-Mellerio), Weh dem, der lügt (F. Grillparzer)

Principal publishers: Boosey & Hawkes, Bote & Bock, Universal

JOHN MORGAN

Spivacke, Harold (b New York, 18 July 1904; d Washington DC, 9 May 1977). American music librarian and administrator. At New York University he took the BA in 1923 and the MA in 1924. He later studied at the University of Berlin, where he received the PhD in 1933 with a dissertation on aspects of tonal intensity. His private teachers included Eugen d'Albert and Hugo Leichtentritt. After working in New York as a research assistant to Olin Downes (1933–4), he joined the staff of the music division of the Library of Congress in 1934; he was assistant chief of the division from 1934 to 1937 and chief from 1937 until his retirement in 1972. During his long tenure in the music division Spivacke was active with a number of governmental agencies and departments in addition to the Library of Congress. His activities in professional organizations included a term as president of the Music Library Association (1951–3) and offices in the National Music Council, the IAML and the AMS.

WRITINGS

Über die objektive und subjektive Tonintensität (diss., U. of Berlin, 1933)
'The Cataloging of Folk-Song Records'; 'Exchange Cataloging', Notes, 1st ser., v (1937), 9–16, 30–34
ed.: Berkshire Festivals of Chamber Music, 1918–1938 (Pittsfield, MA, 1938)
'The Collection of Musical Material of Local Interest', Notes, 1st ser., viii (1940), 49–54
The Archive of American Folk Song in the Library of Congress (Pittsburgh, 1941)
Paganiniana (Washington DC, 1945)
'A Recent Gift from Mr. Fritz Kreisler', Quarterly Journal of Current Acquisitions [Library of Congress], vi/3 (1948–9), 57–62
'The Preservation and Reference Services of Sound Recordings in a Research Library', HMYB, xi (1961), 99–121
'The CMS amidst National Societies', College Music Symposium, ii (1962), 9–15
'The Training of the Music Librarian', IAML Congress VI: Stockholm and Uppsala 1962 [FAM, xi (1964)], 57–60

BIBLIOGRAPHY

C. Sprague Smith: 'Harold Spivacke (1904–1977)', MQ, lxiii (1977), 425–7

PAULA MORGAN

Spivakov, Vladimir (b Ufa, 12 Sept 1944). Russian violinist and conductor. He studied at the Central School of Music with Lubov Siegal, the Leningrad Conservatory with Veniamin Sher and the Tchaikovsky Conservatory, Moscow, with Yuri Yankelevich. He won first prize in the White Nights Festival in Leningrad at the age of 13, first prize in the International Competition for Violinists in Montreal in 1969 and second prize in the Tchaikovsky Competition in Moscow in 1970. He subsequently appeared as a soloist throughout the USSR and Eastern Europe, and in 1975 made his first tour of the USA, returning in 1976 for two acclaimed recitals at Carnegie Hall. He toured Europe as a soloist with the Moscow State SO and made his London début with the LPO in 1977. In 1979 he made his conducting début, with the Chicago SO, and the same year founded his own chamber orchestra, the Moscow Virtuosi, which has toured extensively in Europe. Spivakov teaches at the conservatory in Madrid and is director of the Colmar International Festival. He has given the premières of works by Pärt and has made numerous recordings, of which those of the Bach and Mozart violin concertos (with the Moscow Virtuosi) are particularly memorable. His playing is distinguished by its purity of tone and minimal use of vibrato. He plays on a Francesco Gobetti violin dated 1716. (P. Coggin: 'Subtle Style', The Strad, c (1989), 748–50)

MARGARET CAMPBELL

Spivey, Victoria (b Houston, 15 Oct 1906; d New York, 3 Oct 1976). American blues singer and pianist. The daughter of the leader of a string band, she learnt the piano as a child and by the age of 12 was performing at the Lincoln Theatre in Dallas. After working with local artists, including Blind Lemon Jefferson, she commenced her recording career in St Louis. Black Snake Blues (1926, OK), to her own piano accompaniment, was an instant success. Her voice was lean and nasal and she made much use of moaned syllables. A partnership with Lonnie Johnson produced many notable titles, including T.B. Blues and Murder in the First Degree (both 1927, OK). In 1929 Spivey appeared in Hallelujah!, an all-black film directed by King Vidor, and also recorded several titles with Henry 'Red' Allen's New York Orchestra, notably the double entendre song Funny Feathers Blues and the characteristic Moaning the Blues (both 1929, Vic.). She toured with the dancer Billy Adams in the 1930s with whom she performed in Olsen and Johnson's revue Hellzapoppin, she also sang with Louis Armstrong, making occasional recordings – often of a mildly risqué nature – such as Good Cabbage (1937, Voc.). In this period Spivey arranged recording sessions for her sisters, Elton Spivey, known as the 'Za Zu Girl', and Addie 'Sweet Peas' Spivey. In the 1940s she settled in New York, where she continued to perform in jazz clubs before joining the church for several years. In 1962 she formed her own Spivey record company and recorded a number of well-known singers as well as her own works, reviving an old partnership with Johnson on Somebody's Got to Go (1962). Her voice remained strong and her vivacious stage personality undiminished even in the last years of her life.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

SouthernB
P. Garon and A. O'Neal: 'Victoria Spivey, 1906–1976', Living Blues, no.29 (1976), 5 only
S. Harris: Blues Who's Who: a Biographical Dictionary of Blues Singers (New Rochelle, NY, 1979/R)
D.D. Harrison: Black Pearls: Blues Queens of the 1920s (New Brunswick, NJ, 1988)
C. Smith: disc notes, Victoria Spivey: Complete Recorded Works in Chronological Order, Document, DO CD-5316-5319 (1995)

PAUL OLIVER

Split (It. Spalato). Town in Croatia on the Adriatic coast. Originally it developed round the ruins of the palace of Emperor Diocletian; later with the rest of Dalmatia it was a part of the Venetian Republic. After the fall of the republic and after the Napoleonic wars it belonged to the Austro-Hungarian Empire; between 1919 and 1921 it was occupied by Italy and from 1921 to 1992 was in Yugoslavia.

The cathedral church of St Dujam and the Franciscan monastery (founded *c*1213) were the centres of musical activity from the Middle Ages. At the beginning of the 17th century several native and Italian composers associated with the cathedral as maestri di cappella and organists (e.g. Tomaso Cecchino, Ivan Lukačić) introduced the new monodic style into the local sacred and secular music. This was a relatively brief period of remarkable prosperity when musical activity seemed to keep pace with developments in Venice. The second half of the 17th century was a period of stagnation, and then in the 18th century musical standards improved again. C.A. Nagli, who later became maestro di cappella at the Chiesa dei Frari, Venice, was in charge of the music between 1710 and 1725; later in the century the post was occupied by Julije Bajamonti.

The cathedral continued to appoint the directors of music in the 19th century, but this period was generally characterized by a decline in standards. In the mid-19th century opera became increasingly popular; between 1859 and 1881 visiting opera companies appeared regularly in the Teatro Bajamonti. The new City Theatre was opened in 1893 (cap. 500). The first attempt to form a resident company was made in 1922, although it was not until 1945 that a permanent company was established. The repertory consists mainly of the standard Italian 19th-century operas and works by Slavonic and Croatian composers, especially those associated with Split (Jakov Gotovac, Josip Hatze, Ivo Tijardović). The summer festival Splitske Ljetne Priredbe, founded in 1954 and later renamed Splitsko Ljeto, chiefly presents opera.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

N.M. Roščić: 'Glazbena tradicija samostana Sv. Frane na Obali u Splitu od 1600 do 1900 godine' [The musical tradition of the Franciscan monastery in Split], Arti musices: muzikološki zbornik, xxi (1990), 5–44
M. Škunca: 'Glazba u splitskom kazalištu Teatro Bajamonti' [Music in the Teatro Bajamonti in Split], Rad HAZU, no.454 (1992), 47–71
S. Marović: 'Sakramentar riznice splitske katedrale sign.no.624' [The sacramental manuscript 624 in the Split cathedral treasury], Baščinski glasi, ii (1993), 51–100
M. Škunca: 'Od Lisinskog i Suppéa do Gotovca i Tijardovića: glazbenoscenska djela hrvatskih skladatelja u Općinskom kazalištu u Splitu (1893–1941)' [From Lisinski and Suppé to Gotovac and Tijardović: works by Croatian composers in the City Theatre in Split], Mogućnosti, xl (1993), 106–22
M. Grgić: 'Tri stara glazbena fonda u Splitu' [Three old music collections in Split], Baščinski glasi, iii (1994), 175–85
M. Grgić: Glazbena kultura u splitskoj katedrali 1750–1940 [Music in Split cathedral 1750–1940] (Zagreb, 1997)

BOJAN BUJIĆ

Split key. In keyboard instruments, particularly organs, harpsichords and virginals, a key that is divided or 'split' into two parts. Most commonly it is the raised 'sharp' keys in the bass octaves that are so split, but occasionally natural keys may be divided also (e.g. on an instrument by GIOVANNI BATTISTA BONI). The front part is about one third of the length of the whole, and usually the back part is set slightly higher to facilitate playing. Each part has its own key-lever and playing action so that two notes are available. (For illustration, see ENHARMONIC KEYBOARD, fig.1.) Split keys have been used for two purposes: (a) to permit sounding additional chromatic degrees in non-equal temperaments (when, for example, E♭ and D♯ or G♯ and A♭ are not enharmonically equivalent; see ENHARMONIC KEYBOARD); (b) in a broken octave (see BROKEN OCTAVE (i)): a variation of the SHORT OCTAVE in which the lowest raised keys are divided so that the front part provides the pitch that would be expected of it in a normal short octave and the rear part sounds the accidental that would be found in a chromatic octave.

□

Split sharp. See SPLIT KEY.

SPNM. See SOCIETY FOR THE PROMOTION OF NEW MUSIC.

Spoerri, Bruno (b Zürich, 16 Aug 1935). Swiss jazz musician, composer and sound engineer. He studied the piano, the saxophone, theory, counterpoint and dodecaphony with Robert Suter and psychology, philosophy, musicology and mathematics at Basle, Zürich and Freiburg universities (1954–60). Active as a performer, he played in many jazz groups and toured Europe with the Metronome Quintet. From 1965 to 1967 he was the music director of Televico Film Production, Zürich. Later, he worked as a freelance composer, performer and sound engineer. He co-founded the Swiss Society of Computer Music in 1982 and the Swiss Center for Computer Music in 1984. He has taught at the Zürich, Berne and Biel conservatories and at the Lucerne Jazz School. His honours include the Zürich film award (1973) and the Ars Electronica Linz award (1979).

Spoerri's primary interest is electronic composition. His works, which range from music for television commercials to film scores, have used the ondes martenot, musique concrète and computer-generated sounds. Characterized by rough experimental timbres and sharp rhythmic accents influenced by jazz, his style relies on live electronics, dialogues with the computer and interactive composition.

WORKS
(selective list)

all unpublished

Film scores: Ddanach (dir. R. Cohen), 1970; Tauwetter (dir. M. Imhoof), 1980; Teddy Bär (dir. R. Lyssy), 1984; Umbruch (dir. H.U. Schlumpf), 1987; Der Kongress der Pinguine (dir. Schlumpf), 1993; many others incl. short films and TV commercials

Other: Die Stimme der Verfolgten, spkr, elec sax, clavinet, ondes martenot, 1969; Ballett-Divertimento, chbr orch, jazz band, 1971; Conc., pneumatic drill, 1971; Divertimento 76, wind qnt, elec, 1976; Playback, sax qt, tape, 1990; Hausmusik, tape, 1995; incid music for radio

BIBLIOGRAPHY

SML (C. Rentsch)

R.U. Ringger: 'Schweizer Komponisten. Vom Werbespot zur Inspiration', Neue Zürcher Zeitung (16 Jan 1992) [interview]

Schweizer Komponisten unserer Zeit (Winterthur, 1993)

THOMAS GARTMANN

Spofforth, Reginald (b Southwell, bap. 12 Sept 1769; d Kensington, London, 8 Sept 1827). English composer. His uncle, Thomas Spofforth (d 1826), was organist of Southwell Minster (1764–1818) and took care of his early musical instruction. Sir Richard Kaye, a prebendary of Southwell who was also Dean of Lincoln, encouraged him to go to Lincoln, where for a time he acted as deputy organist at the cathedral. He then moved to London, where he studied composition with Benjamin Cooke (ii) and the piano with Steibelt. When in 1793 he won two prizes for glees from the Noblemen's and Gentlemen's Catch Club, his successful career as a composer had begun. His earliest publications had been of solo songs, but from about 1796 he published numerous glees, many of which also appeared in anthologies. He contributed various songs and glees to productions at Covent Garden, where he appears to have been chorus master for a time; but he declined Harris's invitation to succeed Shield as musical director there in 1797. He was at one time organist of the Fitzroy Chapel, and later at Eltham parish church; much of his time was spent in teaching.

Spofforth was one of the leading glee composers. His glee Hail, smiling morn, no.6 of Six Glees (1810), was possibly the most popular glee in the entire repertory. It was one of the first in what Barrett termed the 'partsong' style: melodious, flowing and sentimental, but lacking the dramatic treatment of the text that was a feature of the earlier glee. Classical instrumental music played a part in this trend towards a more balanced structure: some of his glees, indeed, are in strict sonata form. Three charming books of nursery rhyme settings appeared, some as glees for two sopranos and bass, others as solo songs. Spofforth composed many songs and duets but, as far as is known, no instrumental or sacred music.

Reginald's brother Samuel Spofforth (1780–1864) was organist of Peterborough Cathedral (1798) and from 1807 of Lichfield Cathedral; he was a composer of cathedral music and chants.

WORKS
all published in London

75 glees (according to Baptie), pubd singly and in 18th- and 19th-century anthologies; also in Spofforth's collections: 6 Glees, Bk the First (*c*1796); 6 Glees (1810); A Collection of Glees, compiled from the unpubd MSS, ed. W. Hawes (1830)

Nursery rhyme settings: The Newest Christmas Box, op.2, 1–3vv, pf, bk 1 (*c*1797), bk 2 (*c*1805); The Twelfth Cake, a Juvenile Amusement, op.3 (1807)

Songs and duets: 6 Canzonets (1790); others pubd singly and in 18th- and 19th-century anthologies

Songs in Covent Garden stage works: The Pirates, 1792; Mago and Dago, 1794; Windsor Castle (J.P. Salomon), 1795; The Witch of the Wood, 1796

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. Spofforth: Memoir, A Collection of Glees, ed. W. Hawes (London, 1830)

Biographical sketch, The Harmonicon, xi (1833), 186

W.A. Barrett: English Glee and Madrigal Writers (London, 1877), 36

[J. Bayley]: A Sketch of the Life of Reginald Spofforth (London, 1880)

D. Baptie: Sketches of the English Glee Composers (London, 1896), 74–6

W. Shaw: The Succession of Organists (Oxford, 1991), 152, 277

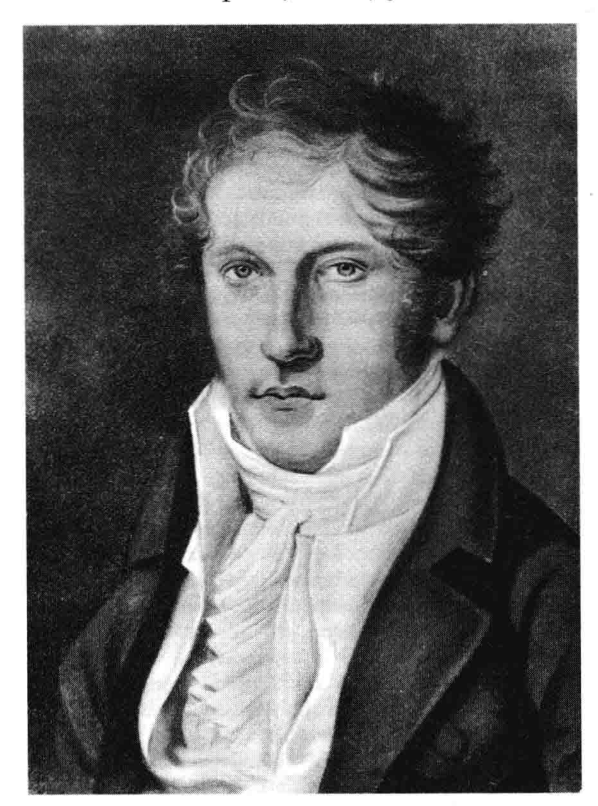
NICHOLAS TEMPERLEY

Spohr, Louis [Ludewig, Ludwig] (b Brunswick, 5 April 1784; d Kassel, 22 Oct 1859). German composer, violinist and conductor.

Regarded by many contemporaries as worthy of a place beside Haydn, Mozart and Beethoven in the pantheon of the greatest composers, he has, together with Gluck and Cherubini, been allotted a considerably lower status by posterity. Mozart's Figaro and Wagner's Tristan were both composed during Spohr's lifetime; his own work looks, Janus-like, towards both the formalism and clarity of the Classical tradition, and the structural and harmonic experimentation associated with 19th-century Romanticism.



1. LIFE. Spohr was born into a family which had been active in the vicinity of the Harz mountains, particularly as doctors and pastors, for at least five generations. Both his grandfathers were Lutheran pastors, but his father, Carl Heinrich Spohr (1756–1843), who married a cousin, Juliane Ernestine Luise Henke (1763–1840) on 26 November 1782, had reverted to his family's earlier profession of medicine. Their first child, born a year and a half later, was christened Ludewig, but in accordance with fashionable French taste he was always known as Louis. At that time Carl Heinrich was practising in Brunswick, but in 1787 the family moved to Seesen, where he had been appointed district physician.

Spohr's mother was an accomplished singer and pianist, while his father played the flute, and the boy soon showed musical interest and ability. His father bought him his first violin in 1789 and he studied the instrument locally, initially with J.A. Riemenschneider and, from about 1791, with the French émigré Dufour, with whose encouragement the boy progressed rapidly in violin playing, and even attempted composition. When Dufour left Seesen in 1796 he persuaded Spohr's parents, despite strong family disapproval of a career in music, to send their son to school in Brunswick where he would have a better opportunity to develop his musical talents. The following year, therefore, Spohr became a pupil at the Collegium Carolinum and studied the violin privately, first with Gottfried Kunisch, a member of the ducal orchestra, and later with the Konzertmeister Charles Louis Maucourt; he also received his only formal instruction in musical theory, lasting little more than a year, from the organist Carl August Hartung. He continued his studies in composition by reading theory books and borrowing scores from the Brunswick Hoftheater, while furthering his practical experience playing in concerts and in the theatre orchestra.

The failure of a badly planned concert tour to Hamburg in 1799 caused Spohr, on his own initiative, to approach Duke Carl Wilhelm Ferdinand of Brunswick for patronage. After Spohr had given evidence of his potential at a court concert the duke appointed him Kammermusicus and promised to further his studies at a later date. For three years he participated in a variety of musical activities, the operas of Cherubini and Mozart and the quartets of Haydn, Mozart and Beethoven making a particularly powerful impression on him. In April 1802 the duke fulfilled his promise by engaging Franz Eck, one of the last direct representatives of the Mannheim School, to take Spohr as a pupil on a concert tour to St Petersburg. From this Spohr returned to Brunswick in summer 1803 with a technical command sufficient to play any of the concertos in the repertory, and a portfolio of his own compositions that included the Violin Concerto op.1 and the violin duets op.3. His musical experience was enhanced later that year when he heard Pierre Rode perform in Brunswick; deeply impressed, he set about acquiring the best features of his style. For two more years he remained a member of the Brunswick Hofkapelle with increased salary. In autumn 1804 he embarked on a successful concert tour, for which, under Rode's influence, he composed two new concertos. As a result of Friedrich Rochlitz's enthusiastic reviews in the widely circulated Leipziger allgemeine musikalische Zeitung Spohr was invited to apply for the post of Konzertmeister in Gotha, to which, despite his youth, he was appointed on 5 August 1805.

Spohr remained in Gotha until 1812, developing his skills as a conductor and broadening his experience as a composer. In the relatively progressive political and cultural atmosphere of Gotha his liberal political views also continued to ripen, and in 1807 he became a committed freemason, joining the Gotha lodge 'Ernst zum Kompass'. His marriage to the brilliant harpist

1. Louis Spohr: self-portrait, c1807 (Landesmuseum, Brunswick)

Dorothea [Dorette] Scheidler (1787–1834) in 1806 led him to produce a series of works for violin and harp, which they performed on their periodic concert tours (October 1806 – April 1807, October 1809 – March 1810, October 1812 – April 1813). Two daughters were born to the couple during these years. Spohr continued to write works for his own instrument, including several violin concertos and potpourris, the first of his quatuors brillants, his first four 'true' string quartets and some effective string duets. In addition he wrote his first two clarinet concertos for Simon Hermstedt, his first three operas (the last of which, Der Zweikampf mit der Geliebten, had a moderately successful production in Hamburg in 1811), his first book of lieder in 1809, his first symphony in 1811, and his first oratorio Das jüngste Gericht in 1812. The symphony and oratorio resulted from suggestions by Georg Friedrich Bischoff, at whose request Spohr directed the large-scale music festivals in Frankenhausen (1810 and 1811) and Erfurt (1812). Spohr also began to acquire his reputation as a fine violin teacher which over the years led him to train many leading violinists of younger generations.

During his concert tour of 1812–13 he accepted the post of Kapellmeister (effectively leader) of the orchestra of the Theater an der Wien in Vienna. His two years in the city associated with Haydn, Mozart and Beethoven, where he formed a friendly relationship with the last named, stimulated him powerfully as a composer; this stimulation, together with a commission from Johann Tost, led him to produce a succession of fine chamber works (four string quartets, two string quintets, the Octet and the Nonet). He completed his opera Faust in four months of intensive activity in 1813, but it was not performed until 1816 (by Weber in Prague). The situation at the Theater an der Wien soon became uncongenial, and after an acclaimed performance of his latest violin concerto (no.7, in E minor) in February 1815, Spohr left Vienna to begin a period of two years travelling and concert-giving in Switzerland, Italy and Germany. The most important work from this period is the Gesangsszene Violin Concerto (no.8, in A minor), composed specifically to appeal to Italian taste, but two sets of imaginative lieder (opp.37 and 41), the Notturno for wind op.34 and the magnificent violin duets op.39 also date from these years. From the end of 1817 until 1819 he was resident in Frankfurt as director of opera, where he did much to raise standards of performance. In Frankfurt he revised and produced Faust and composed a new opera, Zemire und Azor, having decided to abandon a libretto based on a tale by J.A. Apel after hearing that Weber was treating the same subject (Der Freischütz). He also enriched the musical life of Frankfurt by presenting a series of quartet concerts, for which he composed his String Quartets op.45. At this time his family was increased by a third daughter; and he made many lifelong friends, including the singer and later director of the Frankfurt Singverein J.N. Schelble, and the song composer Wilhelm Speyer, with whom he regularly corresponded until his death. To Dorette's particular regret, difficulties with the management of the theatre caused Spohr to tender his resignation to take effect from 30 September 1819, and they returned once more to their unsettled life.

A lucrative engagement with the London Philharmonic Society, facilitated by Ferdinand Ries, took them to England in February 1820, where Spohr was inspired to compose his splendid Second Symphony. Despite its warm reception, along with others of his works, at the Philharmonic Concerts, however, it was rather as a violinist and director that Spohr made his greatest impact in England at this time. The London Magazine considered his violin playing to have been 'the principal novelty and attraction of the present season'. His innovatory use of a baton to direct the orchestra was confined to rehearsal (but his direction with his violin bow at the concert was also considered unusual in London). Dorette's performances were praised in The Quarterly Musical Magazine as 'highly finished', but her increasingly delicate health rendered harp playing too strenuous, and Spohr began the composition of his Quintet for Piano and Wind (op.52) so that she would have something to play on the piano. A sojourn in Gandersheim with Spohr's parents gave him the leisure to complete the Quintet and a new violin concerto in D minor (no.9, op.55), which he performed at a festival in Quedlinburg. Spohr and his wife then set off for their first visit to Paris, where they arrived on 7 December 1820. There he met Cherubini and was gratified by that master's appreciation of his op.45 string quartets. His only public appearance, with the new violin concerto, though successful, was rather grudgingly praised by the press, to whom he had neglected to offer the customary bribes; the Courier des spectacles considered that 'if he stays for some time in Paris he could perfect his taste and then, returning, form that of the good Germans'. Four reports on the state of music in Paris, which Spohr contributed to the Allgemeine musikalische Zeitung at that time, illustrate his own reservations about French music, summed up in his comment: 'It requires no long residence here to adopt the frequently expressed opinion that the French are not a musical nation' (xxiii, 1821, p.158). Spohr's music never obtained significant success in France.

On the journey to Paris Spohr had been inspired by hearing rehearsals of 16th-century choral music at Anton Thibaut's house in Heidelberg, and during another short stay in Gandersheim he wrote an impressive, though extremely taxing, ten-part unaccompanied mass (op.54). In October 1821 the family settled in Dresden,where Spohr renewed his acquaintance with Weber, began work on what was to be his most successful opera, Jessonda, and composed a new set of string quartets (op.58). He considered a second concert tour to Italy, but through Weber's good offices was offered the post of Kapellmeister in Kassel, which, after considering a similar offer from Gotha, he accepted. He was to remain in Kassel for the rest of his life, despite periodic tensions arising from the conflict between his liberalism and the reactionary attitudes of the electoral court.

Spohr's principal duty in Kassel was the direction of the opera, and he was guaranteed a voice in the choice of repertory. His contract allowed him two months' leave of absence a year and a generous pension. He also directed the established series of subscription concerts and founded the Cäcilienverein to facilitate the performance of choral works. His authority and effectiveness as a conductor and musical organizer quickly made the musical establishment in Kassel one of the finest in Germany. The quality of the orchestra was increased by the influx of accomplished violinists who came to study with Spohr, and who he insisted should play in the orchestra as part of their training; during the 1820s these included Hubert Ries and Ferdinand David.

The move to Kassel, at the age of 37, marks an important turning-point in Spohr's creative life. Although he was at the height of his powers as a violinist, he devoted an ever-increasing proportion of his time to compositions that were not centred on his own instrument. From 1822 Spohr never travelled abroad to appear primarily as a violinist (though he continued to play in public until the last decade of his life), but rather as a conductor of his major works. The triumphant production of Jessonda in 1823 did much to confirm his reputation as one of Germany's leading composers, and this was further increased by the production of his oratorio Die letzten Dinge at the Lower Rhine Festival of 1826. The performance of this work as The Last Judgement, at the Norwich Festival of 1830, laid the foundations of Spohr's reputation in England as one of the greatest composers of the age. Among his other notable compositions in these years were the first two of his four double string quartets, the splendid String Quintet in B minor, several string quartets and concertos, and the Third Symphony. Much of his energy during his first decade in Kassel, however, was devoted to opera composition, as he attempted but failed to match the success of Jessonda. The troubles that followed from the political disturbances of 1830 led to the closure of the opera during 1832–3, and helped to put an end to Spohr's operatic ambitions for some 13 years. His creative flow was stemmed by the excitement of events in 1830 and his disappointment at the failure of the 1831 reforms, and he occupied himself with writing his Violin-Schule, which became one of the most respected and widely used violin methods of the century. He returned to composition in 1832 with his programmatic Fourth Symphony Die Weihe der Töne, an instrumental setting of a poem by his recently deceased friend Carl Pfeiffer, and a number of chamber works, including the fine Third Double Quartet. The death of Dorette in November 1834 temporarily halted work on his passion oratorio Des Heilands letzte Stunden, but it was completed the following year.

In 1836 Spohr married Carl Pfeiffer's 28-year-old sister Marianne, a gifted amateur pianist who stimulated him to compose a series of chamber works with piano, for which he had written little up to that time; these included the three duos concertants for violin and piano (1836–7), the five piano trios (1841–9), the Piano Quintet (1845) and the Septet (1853). His only piano sonata (1843) was dedicated to Mendelssohn, who always regarded him with deep respect and whom he, in turn, greatly admired. Among the best of his other works from this decade are the Fifth Symphony, in C minor, and the set of leider op.103 for soprano, clarinet and piano, both composed in 1837. Spohr's ties with England were renewed in 1839 when he went over to Norwich to conduct Des Heilands letzte Stunden (initially entitled The Crucifixion in English but later called Calvary). This visit marked the beginning of a period of veneration comparable to that accorded to Mendelssohn, though less enduring. Spohr's last oratorio, The Fall of Babylon (Der Fall Babylons), was commissioned for the 1842 Norwich Festival, though he was prevented from conducting it by the electoral prince's refusal of his leave of absence. The highpoint of Spohr's popularity in England was reached with the visit of 1843, when The Musical World rhapsodized about him as 'the great Spohr – the immortal while yet living . . . the mighty master, who has stamped on his contemporaries that impression to which we are rarely susceptible but through the medium of an age's authority'. The feelings aroused by such a reception could not but contrast jarringly with his situation in Kassel, where political repression was among the worst in Germany; and had it not been for his wife's attachment to her family he would have been very tempted to accept the proffered directorship of the Prague Conservatory. Spohr's continuing interest in current artistic developments is attested by his production of Wagner's Der fliegende Holländer in Kassel in 1843, and his attempt to treat his final opera, Die Kreuzfahrer, as 'music drama'. His humanitarian concerns were evinced by his persistent efforts on behalf of his musicians' salaries and benefits.

Spohr's services were often in demand during those years as a conductor of music festivals, among them the great Beethoven festival at Bonn in 1845, attended by several of the crowned heads of Europe, the direction of which he shared with Liszt. His pre-eminent position in the world of German music also brought him numerous honours, including membership of 38 musical societies, a doctorate from Marburg University and in 1847, on the 25th anniversary of his appointment in Kassel, belated recognition of his worth by the award of the title Generalmusikdirektor. Shortly afterwards Spohr was appointed to the place in the Prussian order pour le mérite left vacant by Mendelssohn's death. Official recognition of his distinction was late in coming because, as Moritz Hauptmann observed, a man with Spohr's liberal views had to live a long time to be honoured by the establishment. (His earlier receipt of the Order of the Golden Lion occurred, according to Hauptmann, only because the elector wished to spite the theatre director Feige.)

The last ten years of Spohr's service in Kassel were not without irritations. He was deeply interested in the movement towards political liberalization in 1848, which inspired one of the freshest of his late works, the String Sextet op.140, and profoundly dejected by the reversal of the reforms. As a protest he gave up playing the violin in public in Kassel and made no secret of his disgust with the course of political events. Only his international eminence, manifested for instance in the serenade given to him on his birthday in 1850 by the Prussian troops who had been sent to prop up the elector's unstable regime, saved him from the persecution directed towards other state servants with liberal ideas. However, in 1851 his formal request for his contractual leave of absence was refused without explanation, and when he took it regardless he was faced with a fine, which, despite taking legal action, he was forced to pay. On the other hand, two final visits to England in 1852 and 1853, where his operas Faust (for which he wrote recitatives to replace the dialogue) and Jessonda were given at the Royal Italian Opera, were unalloyed triumphs. Spohr's compositional activity slowed down in his last years, though as late as 1856 he produced the effective songs for baritone, violin and piano op.154. His physical vigour remained remarkably unimpaired, so that Hauptmann could write in 1856 'There are plenty of people who have grown old; he is the only one that is always young'. Thus when he received a curt official notice in November 1857 informing him that he was to be 'permitted to retire' he briefly considered bringing a lawsuit against the elector, but soon began to enjoy his freedom. An accident that winter in which he broke his right arm, however, put an end to his violin playing and he became increasingly subject to despondency, dying after a short illness in October 1859.

2. Works. In the period between 1820 and 1835, before Mendelssohn's influence came to dominate the world of German music for a while, Spohr's works were seen by many of his contemporaries within the sphere of German influence as representing the ne plus ultra of modern art. The widespread admiration elicited by his music at that time led, despite an often repeated charge of mannerism and self-repetition in his later works, to Spohr's apotheosis in his own lifetime. In 1843, J.W. Davison could write that he was:

> a witness to his own admission into the realms of classical immortality. His writings take their station among the master-pieces of Bach, Handel, Gluck, Haydn, Mozart, Beethoven, Weber and Cherubini. They have long enjoyed that distinction and nothing can now remove them from the rock upon which they are fixed . . . their influence will survive until art is on its death-bed. (Musical World, xviii, 1843, p.259)

Davison's description of Spohr as 'founder of a new feeling, if not of a new school in music' succinctly pinpoints the secret of his impact on younger musicians. While Beethoven, combining a forceful directness of utterance with infinite subtlety of nuance and structure, was forging a path along which no composer could follow him, Spohr accepted the substance of received classical forms but filled them with music that, employing a highly distinctive melodic and harmonic idiom, proved wonderfully apt to depict the fluctuating emotions of the human soul. Spohr's music was in many ways a counterpart to Jean Paul's prose. It was capable of inducing a state of rhapsodic rapture or eliciting tears, as illustrated by Hauptmann's recollection after first hearing Spohr's Overture in C minor op.12, in about 1809: 'I cried, cried again the whole way home, cried at home by the pailful, and cried for several days afterwards. I see myself even now, sitting alone weeping like mad in a delirium of joy and despair' (Letters of a Leipzig Cantor, i, 13).

2. Louis Spohr

Spohr's style was formed from a number of diverse elements. His earliest experiences were of music by such north German composers as J.A. Hiller and Kalkbrenner; Mozart, too, was probably encountered at a fairly early stage, along with Dittersdorf, Weigl and other south Germans, and these seem to be the predominant influences in his surviving compositions from the 1790s. In Brunswick he became familiar with more substantial pieces. He is likely to have heard and probably played in some of the great Mozart operas, including Die Zauberflöte and Don Giovanni, at the Brunswick theatre between 1797 and 1800. His violin playing introduced him to music in a very different style – that of the Viotti School – which was to be a decisive influence on his musical idiom. After 1800 this was supplemented by much else from the French repertory, performed by a French opera company resident in Brunswick. Cherubini's Les deux journées made a powerful impression on him and, as he recalled, fostered his liking for 'interesting harmonic progressions'. However, he also admired the Viennese Classical quartet repertory, becoming an early champion of Beethoven's op.18 in north Germany. Only in the light of this amalgamation of German and French influences is it possible to understand Spohr's style. The importance of the latter on his compositions was immeasurably enhanced by his personal encounter with Pierre Rode, whose lyrical and often elegiac melodic style became particularly prominent in Spohr's work for several years (ex.1). But whereas Rode's gift was primarily for melody, Spohr was able to combine all three elements of melody, harmony and form, which he had acquired from his models, in an effective and highly individual manner; his intensification of late Mozartian chromaticism, coloured by Cherubini's harmonic boldness, combined with the rhapsodic melodiousness of the Viotti School, and confined within well-proportioned Classical forms resulted in an idiom that fascinated and inspired younger contemporaries. The self-contained coherence of this style, which Spohr had brought to a state of perfect ripeness by the age of 30, provides the key not only to his influence, however, but also to the decline of his reputation in the long term. He was unable, despite many experiments in form and instrumental combinations, to develop these fundamental aspects of his music any further; the fruit became overripe and the very distinctiveness of style that had allured musicians in the 1820s and 30s began to give rise in succeeding decades to charges of self-repetition and constricted expressive range.

Spohr's early fame was founded on his compositions for the violin and it is his concertos that are, in general, the most outstanding of his early works. Rode's influence first emerged strongly in the D minor Concerto (op.2) of 1804, the work that drew particular attention to Spohr on his first concert tour. Growing independence of style and increased intensity of expression, which may perhaps have been animated by his close contact with Dussek and Prince Louis Ferdinand at that time, characterize the concertos of 1805–7 (nos.3–5). All the essentials of his fully mature style were present by the time of the vigorous Sixth Concerto (1808–9); here, the use of recitative in the second movement anticipates the even more thorough-going assimilation of violin music to operatic singing in the Gesangsszene Concerto of 1816. Spohr's later full-scale violin concertos (nos.7, 9, 15 and especially no.11) are more symphonic. From the first Spohr showed his mastery of the orchestra, which plays a much more vital part in his concertos than in those of any of his virtuoso colleagues, and he rapidly gained the reputation of one of the finest orchestrators of the period. His concertos are also noteworthy for following Rode's lead in denying the soloist opportunities for improvised cadenzas, though written-out cadenzas occur in a few cases. The difficulty of the solo parts, yet their avoidance of empty virtuosity, did much to stimulate the development of the classic 19th-century school of German violin playing. The three concertinos of 1828–39 are logical extensions of the formal experiment essayed in the Gesangsszene, which is structured as a vocal scena with the violin as prima donna. The Third Concertino, with the title Sonst und Jetzt, bears witness to Spohr's growing preoccupation with programme music, and, like the later Historical Symphony, provides evidence of his increasing alienation from the

Ex.1

Rode, Violin Concerto no.8

Moderato

Spohr, Quatuor brillant op.61

Allegro moderato

trends of his own time. The four clarinet concertos (1808–28), written for Simon Hermstedt, are all in full-scale concerto form; here too Spohr achieved a fine balance between virtuosity and musical substance, and they represent a major contribution to the development of the clarinet not merely in terms of repertory but also of construction, for the technical demands of the first concerto required modifications to the instrument, which are described in a preface to the work. In the field of the concerto, Spohr's interest in less usual combinations is shown by an early Concertante for violin and cello, two concertantes for harp and violin, two double violin concertantes, of which the first is particularly fine, and a Concerto for string quartet and orchestra.

Next in importance to compositions for violin among the works of Spohr's early maturity was opera. Despite the lack of a theatre in Gotha he was determined to prove himself in that field, for he clearly saw opera as the most certain means by which he could establish his reputation as a composer rather than merely a violinist.

From the first, he was interested in musical devices for furthering the drama. In Die Prüfung (1806) he employed simple reminiscence, but two years later in Alruna he attempted more ambitious manipulations of musical motif, at the same time experimenting with continuous action and modified forms. Neither of these operas was staged. His first theatrical success, Der Zweikampf mit der Geliebten, written on commission to a prescribed libretto for Friedrich Ludwig Schröder's new theatre company in Hamburg, is formally more conventional, and still over-reliant on Mozartian models, though it shows Spohr's developing skill in characterization. With Faust (1813) he made a striking advance, and this was the first of his operas to gain widespread recognition. Using all the expressive power of which his highly chromatic style was capable he attempted, with considerable success, to depict the fluctuating feelings of his characters, bar by bar and word by word. In addition he pursued the technique of musical motif significantly further than previous composers, employing three pervasive motifs (hell, love, and Faust's inner conflict) that appear in the orchestra at key points, and a number of other musical mottoes; this aspect of the work was strengthened in the 1852 revision, when he replaced the spoken dialogue with recitative (fig.3). Spohr continued to employ motif and reminiscence in his later operas, providing a potent stimulus for younger contemporaries. Zemire and Azor (1818) tended more to the charming and colourful than to the dramatic, but its many musical beauties gained it a modest place in the repertory. With Jessonda (1823), Spohr achieved the striking theatrical success he had been seeking. Abandoning spoken dialogue and emphasizing scene complexes rather than self-contained numbers, he issued a direct challenge to the stance adopted by Weber in Der Freischütz, which he expounded in his manifesto Aufruf an deutsche Componisten; and Weber himself, in Euryanthe, attempted, somewhat less successfully, to pursue a similar path. Jessonda has the most satisfactory libretto of all Spohr's operas, achieves an effective balance between musical and dramatic exigencies, and displays his melodic and harmonic gift at its most finely honed. On its introduction to England in 1840 The Britannia described it as 'a tissue of the most lovely melodies and delicious combinations of harmony we ever heard', while The Morning Chronicle

3. Title-page of the vocal score of the revised version of Spohr's 'Faust' (Leipzig: Peters, 1853)

averred that 'Jesssonda is not surpassed by any opera that we know, and it is equalled by very few'. It was by far Spohr's most successful stage work and retained a firm place in the German repertory until proscribed by the Nazis as racially unsound. In Der Berggeist Spohr attempted to link dramatic and musical structure even more closely, dividing the opera into scenes rather than numbers and abandoning rhyming verse; but it suffered from a weak libretto. Pietro von Abano and Der Alchymist, despite many sterling musical qualities, also failed to follow up the success of Jessonda, though the reasons for this were connected as much with the state of the German theatre as with the works themselves. Die Kreuzfahrer saw the 60-year-old composer, under the impact of Wagner's Der fliegende Holländer, making a further, largely unsuccessful attempt to attain dramatic truth by rejecting melisma, giving painstaking attention to declamation and avoiding closed numbers.

Spohr's operatic output is virtually a mirror image of his symphonic activity: between 1811 and 1832 he wrote just three symphonies, all in a Classical format, but in the 1830s and 40s he composed six more, all but one with explicit or implicit programmes. The two patterns are not unconnected, for in the climate of the 1830s and 40s, unpropitious for German opera, the programme symphony and oratorio provided an outlet for the dramatic energies Spohr had earlier expended on opera. The Mozartian influences that, despite a scherzo of Beethovenian scale, dominate the First Symphony gave way to a much more individual voice in the fine Second Symphony of 1820, which ill deserves its current neglect. What the Third (1828) gained in opulence it lost in vitality, though its colouring and character anticipated a style more often associated with a later phase of German 'Romanticism'. With the Fourth Symphony, Die Weihe der Töne, Spohr was in the forefront of a tendency towards programmatic instrumental music. As with Berlioz's Symphonie fantastique the audience was required to be in possession of the programme (i.e. the poem on which it was based). Spohr's preoccupation with programme music continued discreetly with the untitled Fifth Symphony, based on a suppressed Fantasie for orchestra on Raupach's tragedy Die Tochter der Luft. It is one of his most successful symphonies; thematic connection between the first movement and Finale gives it an impression of unity, while the slow movement, enriched by trombones, is among his most beautiful. The modification of conventional symphonic form by programmatic content reached its extreme point with the impressive Seventh Symphony, Irdisches und göttliches im Menschenleben for 'double orchestra', where an ensemble of 11 solo instruments represents humankind's spiritual aspect and the full orchestra his carnal nature; the three sections, depicting the innocence of childhood, the age of passion and the final victory of the divine (in an adagio apotheosis), are only tenuously related to conventional symphonic form. Schumann published a wholly enthusiastic review, concluding: 'An intention develops itself in music as in poetry; in these compositions of Spohr it dictates itself in the noblest and most emphatic way; therefore honour to the great German master' (NZM, xvi, 1842, p.36); and Davison considered it 'the masterpiece of one of the greatest musicians that the world has produced' (Musical World, xvii, 1842, p.204). The curious and not wholly satisfactory experiment of the Historical Symphony (no.6), with its movements 'in the style and taste of four different periods' ('Bach-Handel period 1720', 'Haydn-Mozart period 1780', 'Beethoven period 1810' and 'most recent period 1840') may have been inspired by the growing interest in historical concerts with music from different periods, fostered particularly by Mendelssohn in Leipzig; but Spohr's principal intention seems to have been to expose, by means of the satirical finale (perhaps mocking the noisy, vapid style of contemporary French music), a perceived threat to musical taste. The Eighth and Ninth Symphonies, the former without and the latter with title (Die Jahreszeiten), are not unattractive, but they reveal a combination of undiminished skill with flagging inspiration; and Spohr himself recognized that with the Tenth (1857) he had threshed an empty husk. His symphonies failed to obtain more than a peripheral place in the 19th-century repertory. The most enduring was the Fourth, though the Second, Fifth and Seventh are, arguably, finer music.

In the field of oratorio, Spohr made a distinctive contribution to the music of his day. Die letzten Dinge (1825–6) marked an epoch in the history of 19th-century oratorio. In this work he adopted a number of the characteristics developed in his operas; it is notable for its avoidance of closed forms and for its expressiveness, attained through the use of chromatic harmony (ex.2) and masterly orchestration. Later generations, nourished on stronger meat, may have found it difficult to appreciate the oratorio's impact, but there is no doubt that many of the finest musicians of the day were profoundly affected by it. Maria Malibran commented, after she had been led sobbing and almost hysterical from the platform at an early performance: 'I thought I had been too practised a stager to make such a fool of myself before an audience; but I had yet to learn the full power of music upon the heart – I have now felt it all'. (The Spectator, xvi, 1843, p.636). In 1834–5, inspired by Bach's St Matthew Passion, of which he gave the first Kassel performance in 1883, Spohr composed his Passion oratorio, Des Heilands letzte Stunden, to a text of Friedrich Rochlitz. When introduced to England in 1836, however, its subject matter provoked considerable religious opposition, and despite its enthusiastic reception as music, especially after Spohr himself directed it at the Norwich Festival in 1839, it did not supplant Die letzten Dinge in general esteem. Der Fall Babylons was not to enjoy long-term success, though at its première in Norwich it was hailed by The Morning Chronicle as 'the greatest work of its class that has appeared since the days of Handel' (17 September 1842).

Ex.2 Die Letzten Dinge, recitative 'Behold the Lamb that was slain!'

For much of the 19th century, especially in England, Spohr's oratorios were considered, alongside Mendelssohn's (which may have overshadowed but did not supplant them), as the legitimate and, with the possible exception of Haydn's The Creation, the only worthy successors to Handel's.

The largest portion of Spohr's chamber music was for strings alone, ranging from 19 unsurpassed duos for two violins to four masterly, and largely unemulated, double string quartets. These, together with the 36 string quartets (and several other works for the same combination), seven string quintets and the String Sextet of 1848, display a number of common features. Spohr's own mastery of the violin is evident in all of them, and their technical difficulties, together with the particular style of performance necessary to secure their full effect, may partly explain their infrequent performance. The quartets, especially, fall into two distinct categories: solo quartets in the tradition of Rode (often entitled Quatuor brillant), which are essentially violin concertos with string trio accompaniment, and true quartets where the interest is more evenly divided between the instruments. At its most baneful, Spohr's virtuosity induced him to slip into predictable passage-work in the linking sections between the main tonal centres of his sonata form movements (which despite his experiments and his rich tonal and harmonic palette are generally rather predictable in their main outlines).

Ex.3 Piano Trio op.123

There are, however, many examples of brilliance without vapidity in these works and his imagination seems particularly to have been stimulated by less usual combinations; thus the quintets, sextet and double quartets contain much of the finest music. In the quintets he often treated first violin and first viola as duet partners and in the sextet singled out the first of each pair of instruments for concertante treatment. The double quartets contain many varied textures; but whereas the earlier ones show a tendency to handle the two bodies as concertino and ripieno, the later ones evince a more equal, antiphonal treatment. Three works – the Octet op.32, Nonet op.31 and Septet op.147 – involving a mixture of strings, wind and, in op.147, piano are outstandingly effective, indicating the extent to which the challenge of unusual combinations often stimulated Spohr to produce some of his best work.

During his early years Spohr wrote little involving piano except lieder. Prompted by his first wife's excellent harp playing he composed a range of works involving violin and harp between 1805 and 1819, in which both instruments are generally treated in a concertante fashion. Apart from the Quintet op.52 for piano and wind, he largely ignored the piano until his second wife's pianistic ability (and perhaps the greater technical perfection of the instrument) came to arouse his interest. His pieces for violin and piano contain some attractive music, particularly the programmatic (or, rather, impressionistic) Reisesonate op.96; but the five piano trios (1841–9) are masterpieces of their kind, and extraordinarily individual in their approach to the medium. Here too Spohr favoured the concertante element, giving equal prominence and brilliance to all three instruments and exploring a fascinating range of textures as in the Larghetto of op.123 (ex.3).

Spohr's lieder (some 90 in all, dating from about 1809 to the end of his life) show the same care to match musical expression to the meaning of the text that is apparent in his operas, but within the constraints of a much simpler treatment of the voice. His piano parts are generally unambitious, though effective. It is in the handling of harmony and melody that he made his most distinctive contribution to the medium. The songs of opp.25, 37 and 41 (1809–15) have an emotional range and variety surpassed only by Schubert at this period, while subsequent songs anticipate many stylistic traits more readily associated with Schumann, Mendelssohn and Brahms. In this medium too Spohr was drawn to experimentation: op.101 contains accompaniments for piano duet, op.103 combines soprano, clarinet and piano most effectively, op.154 explores the possibilities afforded by the union of baritone, violin and piano, and op.138 is a 'Sonatina for piano and voice'.

Spohr's secular partsongs for male voices and for mixed choir are effective examples of a quintessentially 19th-century German phenomenon. His sacred works for unaccompanied chorus are more remarkable; owing much to the influence of his encounter with Thibaut, they nevertheless display all the hallmarks of Spohr's individuality and are consequently extremely taxing. In both the Mass of 1821 and the Three Psalms of 1832 he employed double chorus and soloists, taking full advantage of the stimulating range of combinations they offered.

The charges of mannerism and self-repetition that were levelled at Spohr even during his lifetime led, within a short time of his death, to a rapid decline in his reputation. Although he was conventionally numbered among major composers until the end of the century, his music was performed with ever-decreasing frequency. The Wagner cult, the rise of musical nationalism, and other developments at the beginning of the 20th century caused Spohr eventually to be relegated to the status of such composers as Hummel, with whom it would formerly have been unthinkable to compare him, and, despite some scholarly interest, he has scarcely featured in most 20th-century histories of music. In 1981, however, an important contribution to scholarship was made with Göthel's thematic catalogue, and there has subsequently been a significant revival of interest in his music and in his historical position. At the time of the bicentenary of Spohr's birth only a tiny proportion of his output had been recorded, but in the dozen or so years that followed, commercial recordings of numerous major works, including the complete symphonies, violin concertos, overtures and virtually all his chamber works, as well as the operas and sacred music, became available, many in several interpretations; there were also stagings of his operas Faust, Zemire und Azor and Jessonda. These recordings and performances have allowed a more judicious assessment of Spohr's artistic worth, and have facilitated appreciation of the qualities that made such a powerful impact on his younger contemporaries as well as those that carried the seeds of later neglect and denigration; they have also revealed that, at his best, Spohr deserves to stand alongside all but the greatest composers of his epoch.

WORKS

WoO numbers from Göthel (1981)

Editions: Ludwig Spohr: Neue Auswahl der Werke, ed. F. Göthel and H. Homburg (Tutzing, 1963–) [X]
Selected Works of Louis Spohr, ed. C. Brown (New York, 1987–90) [B i–x]

STAGE

Die Prüfung (Operette, 1, E. Henke), WoO48, private concert perf., Gotha, 1806, *D-Ksp, ov. as op.15, pts (Bonn, 1809)

Alruna, die Eulenkönigin (grosse romantische Oper, 3), WoO49, 1808, unperf., *US-Bp, ov. as op.21, pts (Offenbach, 1812)

Der Zweikampf mit der Geliebten (Oper, 3, J.F. Schink), WoO50, 1810–11, Hamburg, 15 Nov 1811, private collection*, D-Bsb, vs (Hamburg, 1813)

Faust (romantische Oper, 2, J.K. Bernard), WoO51 and 51a, 1813. Prague, 1 Sept 1816, Mbs, vs (Leipzig, 1822), ov. as op.60, pts (Leipzig, 1823), fs (Leipzig, 1856), B i; rev. as grosse Oper (3), CG, 15 July 1852, *Bsb (recits and other new music), vs (Leipzig, 1854)

Zemire und Azor (romantische Oper, 2, J.J. Ihlée, after J.F. Marmontel), WoO52, 1818–19, Frankfurt, 4 April 1819, Mbs, vs (Hamburg, 1821)

Jessonda (grosse Oper, 3 E. Gehe, after A.-M. Lemierre: La veuve de Malabar), WoO53, 1822 Kassel, Hof, 28 July 1823, vs (Leipzig, 1824), fs (Leipzig, 1881/*R*1988 as B ii), ov. as op.63, pts (Leipzig, 1824)

Der Berggeist (romantische Oper, 3, G. Döring), WoO54, 1824, Kassel, Hof, 24 March 1825, Mbs, vs (Leipzig, 1825), ov. as op.73, pts (Leipzig, 1827)

Die beiden Galeerensklaven (incid music, T. Hell), WoO66, 1824, song Der Morgen graut, S, 4vv (Meissen, 1834)

Macbeth (incid music, S.H. Spiker, after W. Shakespeare), WoO55. 1825 Bsb, ov. as op.75, pts (Leipzig, 1827)

Der Sturm von Missolunghi (incid music, anon.), WoO83, 1826, chorus Gebet vor der Schlacht, 5 male vv (Hersfeld, 1826)

Pietro von Abano (romantische Oper, 2, C. Pfeiffer, after L. Tieck), WoO56, 1827, Kassel, Hof, 13 Oct 1827, *F-Pn (facs. in B iii), vs, pts (Berlin, 1828)

Der Alchymist (romantische Oper, 3, F.G. Schmidt [Pfeiffer], after W. Irving: The Student of Salamanca), WoO57, 1829–30, Kassel, Hof, 28 July 1830, D-Bsb, vs (Berlin, 1831), ov., pts (Berlin 1831)

Der Matrose (incid music, K. Birnbaum), WoO58, 1838, Kassel, 9 Jan 1839, collab. M. Hauptmann and others, Km, Matrosenlied WoO80 (Dresden, 1841), ov. WoO7, arr. pf 4 hands (Mainz, 1874)

Die Kreuzfahrer (grosse Oper, 3, L. and M. Spohr, after A. von Kotzebue), WoO59, 1843–4, Kassel, Hof, 1 Jan 1845, Bsb, vs (Hamburg, 1845)

ORCHESTRAL

op.
12	Overture, c, 1806, pts (Bonn, 1808)
20	Symphony no.1, E♭, 1811, pts (Leipzig, 1811); fs B vi
34	Notturno, C, wind insts, Turkish band, 1815 (Leipzig, 1816)
—	Grand Concert Overture, F, WoO1, 1819, *GB-Lbl
49	Symphony no.2, d, 1820, pts (Leipzig, 1820); fs B vi
—	Fackeltanz, D, 53 tpt, 4 timp, WoO2, 1825, lost
—	Festmarsch, D, WoO3, 1825 (Kassel, 1884)
78	Symphony no.3, c, 1828, pts (Berlin, 1828), fs (Berlin, 1870)
—	introductory music to Act 3 of Die Belagerung Missolunghis (W. Ehlers), WoO4, 1830, lost
—	Introduction to a Festspiel (A. Niemeyer), WoO5, 1830, Kassel, 8 Jan 1831, *D-HVs
86	Symphony no.4 'Die Weihe der Töne', F, 1832 (Vienna, 1834); ed. in The Symphony 1720–1840, ser.C, ix (New York, 1980)
89	Waltz 'Erinnerung an Marienbad', A, 1833, pts (Vienna, 1834)
102	Symphony no.5, c, 1837 (Vienna, 1840); B vi
116	Symphony no.6 'Historische Symphonie im Styl und Geschmack vier verschiedener Zeitabschnitte', G, 1839 (Vienna, 1842); ed. in The Symphony 1720–1840, ser.C, ix (New York, 1980)
121	Symphony no.7 'Irdisches und Göttliches im Menschenleben', C, 2 orch, 1841 (Hamburg, 1842); ed. in The Symphony 1720–1840, ser.C, ix (New York, 1980)
126	Concert Overture 'im ernsten Stil', D, 1842 (Leipzig, 1846)
137	Symphony no.8, G, 1847 (Leipzig, 1854)
143	Symphony no.9 'Die Jahreszeiten', b, 1849–50 (Hamburg, 1853)
156	Symphony no.10, E, WoO8, 1857, *Bsb

VIOLIN CONCERTOS

—	Violin Concerto, G, *c*1799, *D-Mbs
1	Violin Concerto no.1, A, 1802–3, pts (Leipzig, 1803)
—	Violin Concerto, e, WoO10, 1803–4, Kl (pts with autograph alterations)
—	Violin Concerto, A, 1803–4, ed. (Kassel, 1955)
2	Violin Concerto no.2, d, 1804, pts (Leipzig, 1805)
10	Violin Concerto no.4, b, 1805, pts (Bonn, 1808)
7	Violin Concerto no.3, C, 1806, pts (Leipzig, 1806)
17	Violin Concerto no.5, E♭, 1807, pts (Zürich, 1810)
28	Violin Concerto no.6, g, 1808–9, pts (Vienna, 1813)
—	Violin Concerto movt, D, *c*1809, *Kl
62	Violin Concerto no.10, A, 1810, *Bsb (facs. in B vii), pts (Leipzig, 1824)
38	Violin Concerto no.7, e, 1814, pts (Leipzig, 1816); X i
47	Violin Concerto no.8 'in modo di scena cantante', a, 1816, *LEm, pts (Leipzig, 1820), fs (Leipzig, 1894)
55	Violin Concerto no.9, d, 1820, pts (Offenbach, 1822), fs (New York, n.d.)
70	Violin Concerto no.11, G, 1825, pts (Leipzig, 1827)
79	Violin Concerto no.12 (Concertino no.1), A, 1828, *CH-Bu (facs. in B vii), pts (Berlin, 1829)
92	Violin Concerto no.13 (Concertino no.2), E, 1835, *D-LEm, pts (Leipzig, 1837)
110	Violin Concerto no.14 (Concertino no.3) 'Sonst und jetzt', a, 1839, pts (Vienna, 1840)
128	Violin Concerto no.15, e, 1844, pts (Hamburg, 1846)

OTHER CONCERTOS

—	Concertante, C, vn, vc, WoO11, 1803, *D-Kl (facs. in B vii)
—	Concertante, G, vn, hp, WoO13, 1806, *US-NYpm
—	Concertante, e, vn, hp, WoO14, 1807
26	Clarinet Concerto no.1, c, 1808, pts (Leipzig, 1812), fs ed. (Kassel, 1957)
48	Concertante, A, 2 vn, 1808, pts (Leipzig, 1820)
57	Clarinet Concerto no.2, E♭, 1810, pts (Leipzig, 1822)
—	Clarinet Concerto no.3, f, WoO19, 1821, pts (Leipzig, 1885)
—	Clarinet Concerto no.4, e, WoO20, 1828, *D-Ksp, pts (Leipzig, 1885), fs X v
88	Concertante, b, 2 vn, 1833, *US-NYp, pts (Bonn, 1834)
131	Concerto, a str qt., 1845. *F-Pn, pts (Leipzig, 1847)

CONCERT PIECES

for solo instruments and orchestra

For vn: Variations, A, 1814, WoO18, lost; Potpourri no.3, G, on themes by Mozart, op.23, 1808, pts (Offenbach, 1812); Potpourri, A, on Irish themes, op.59, 1820, pts (Leipzig, 1823); Polonaise, a, op.40, 1815, pts (Leipzig, 1817); Potpourri, a, on themes from Jessonda, op.66, 1823, pts (Leipzig, 1825)

For cl: Variations B♭, on a theme from Alruna, WoO15, 1809, pts (Berlin, 1890); Potpourri, F, on themes from P. von Winter, acc. orch/pf, op.80, 1811, pts (Berlin, 1830)

For vn, vc: Potpourri, A♭, on themes from Jessonda, op.64, 1823, pts (Leipzig, 1824), Leipzig, Edition Peters archive* for solo instrument and strings accompaniment for string trio unless otherwise stated

For vn: Potpourris: no.1, G, on themes from Gaveaux: Le petit matelot, op.5, 1804, pts (Leipzig, 1806); no.2, B♭, on themes by Mozart, acc. 2 vn, va, vc, db, op.22, 1807, pts (Offenbach, 1811); no.4, B, on themes by Mozart, op.24, 1808, pts (Offenbach, 1812)

Variations: d, 1806, op.6, pts (Leipzig, 1806); A, 1805, op.8, pts (Leipzig, 1807)

For cl: Fantasia and Variations, B♭, on a theme of Danzi, acc. str qt/pf, op.81, 1814, pts (Berlin, 1830) [after Fantasia, hp, vn, op.118]

STRING QUARTETS

op.
4	Two Quartets, C, g, 1804–5, pts (Leipzig, 1806), fs of no.2 B ix
11	Quatuor brillant, d, 1806, pts (Bonn, 1808)
15	Two Quartets, E♭, D, 1806–8, pts (Leipzig 1809), fs ed. (Kassel, 1955)
27	Quartet, g, 1812, pts (Vienna, 1813)
29	Three Quartets, E♭, C, f, 1813–15, no.1 *US-STu (facs. in B ix), no.2 *S-Skma (facs. in B ix), pts (Vienna, 1815), fs of no.1 ed. (Kassel, 1955)
30	Quartet, A, 1814, *A-Wn (facs. in B ix), pts (Vienna, 1819)
43	Quatuor brillant, E, 1817, pts (Leipzig, 1818)
45	Three Quartets, C, e, f, 1818, pts (Leipzig, 1819), fs of nos.1 and 2 B ix
58	Three Quartets, E♭, a, G, 1821–2, pts (Leipzig, 1822), fs of no.1 X viii, no.2 B ix
61	Quatuor brillant, b, 1819, pts (Leipzig, 1823)
68	Quatuor brillant, A, 1823, *D-Bsb, pts (Leipzig, 1825)
74	Three Quartets, a, B♭, d, 1826, no.2 *Ksp, nos.1–3 pts (Leipzig, 1827), fs of nos.2 and 3 X viii
82	Three Quartets, E, G, a, 1828–9, no.1 *HVkm, no.2 *S-Skma (facs. in B ix), nos.1–3 pts (Berlin, 1829)
83	Quatuor brillant, E♭, 1829, *F-Pn, pts (Berlin, 1830)
84	Three Quartets, d, A♭, 1831–2, pts (Offenbach, 1834)
93	Quatuor brillant, A, 1835, *D-Bsb, pts (Vienna, 1837)
132	Quartet, A, 1846, *LEm, pts (Leipzig, 1847)
141	Quartet, C, 1849, *Bsb (facs. in B ix), pts (Kassel, 1849)
146	Quartet, G, 1851, Leipzig, Edition Peters archive*, pts (Leipzig, 1856)
152	Quartet, E♭, 1855, *F-Pn, pts (Leipzig, 1856)
[155]	Quartet, E♭, WoO41, 1856, *D-Ksp, *F-pn
[157]	Quartet, g, WoO42, 1857, *Pn

OTHER CHAMBER

without piano or harp

Nonet, F, fl, ob, cl, hn, bn, vn, va, vc, db, op.31, 1813, pts (Vienna, 1819), fs (Berlin, 1878)

Octet, E, cl, 2 hn, vn, 2 va, vc, db, op.32, 1814, *GB-Lbl, pts (Vienna, 1819), fs (Berlin, *c*1878)

4 double string quartets: d, op.65, 1823, Leipzig, Edition Peters archive*, pts (Leipzig, 1825), fs (Florence, *c*1880); E♭, op.77, 1827, *D-Bsb, pts (Berlin, 1828), fs (Leipzig, 1888); e, op.87,

1832–3, *Bsb pts (Bonn, 1833), fs (Leipzig, 1888); g, op.136, 1847, *Dl, pts (Kassel, 1849), fs (Leipzig, 1888)
Sextet, C, 2 vn, 2 va, 2 vc, op.140, 1848, *Bsb, pts (Kassel, 1850), fs B ix
7 quintets, 2 vn, 2 va, vc: E♭, G, op.33, 1813–14, *Bsb (facs. of no.2 in B ix), pts: no.1 (Vienna, 1815), no.2 (Vienna, 1819), fs of no.2 ed. (Cambridge, 1994); b, op.69, 1826, pts (Leipzig, 1827), fs B ix; a, op.91, Ksp, pts (Bonn, 1834), fs ed. (Cambridge, 1994); g, op.106, 1838, pts (Dresden, 1839); e, op.129, 1845, LEm, pts (Leipzig, 1847); g, op.144, 1850, Leipzig, Edition Peters archive, pts (Leipzig, 1855)
Duo, e, vn, va, op.13, 1807 (Leipzig, 1808)
19 Duets, 2 vn: F, C, E♭, WoO21, *c*1797, Kl; E♭, WoO22, *c*1797, Kl; C, WoO30, *c*1808, Brunswick, Landesmuseum*; E♭, F, G, op.3, 1802–3 (Leipzig, 1805); A, op.9, 1806–7 (Leipzig, 1807); d, E♭, E, op.39, 1816 (Leipzig, 1816); a, D, g, op.67, 1824, *Bsb (Leipzig, 1825); F, op.148, 1854 (Leipzig, 1856); D, op.150, 1854 (Leipzig, 1856); C, op.153, 1855 (Leipzig, 1856) with piano

see also OTHER CHAMBER, with harp

Septet, a, fl, cl, hn, bn, vn, vc, pf, op.147, 1853 (Leipzig, 1855)
Piano Quintet, D, op.130, 1845 (Hamburg, 1846)
Quintet, C, fl, cl, hn, bn, pf, op.52, 1820 (Leipzig, 1821); arr. str qt, pf, op.53, 1820 (Leipzig, 1821)
5 pf trios: e, op.119, 1841 (Hamburg, 1842); F, op.123, 1842 (Hamburg, 1843); a, op.124, 1842 (Hamburg, 1843); B♭, op.133, 1846 (Hamburg, 1847); g, op.142, 1849 (Hamburg, 1852)
Vn, pf (original works): Introduction and Rondo, E, op.46, 1816 (Vienna, 1820); 3 duos concertants: g, op.95, 1836 (Leipzig, 1837), F, 'Nachklänge einer Reise nach Dresden und in die sächsische Schweiz', op.96, 1836 (Bonn, 1837), E, op.112, 1837 (Dresden, 1840); Rondo 'alla spagnuola', C, op.111, 1839 (Vienna, 1839); 6 Duettinen, op.127, 1843 (Hamburg, 1844); 6 Salonstücke, op.135, 1846–7 (Hamburg, 1848); 6 Salonstücke, op.145, 1851 (Leipzig, 1856); [Scherzino], D, WoO43, *c*1856 (Berlin, 1896); Salonstück, D, WoO44, *c*1857 (Leipzig, 1890)
Vn, pf (potpourris etc.: see also CONCERT PIECES above): Potpourri, E♭, on themes of Mozart, op.42, 1816 (Leipzig, 1817) [based on op.24]; Potpourri, G, on themes of Mozart, WoO34, 1816, lost [based on op.23]; Potpourri, f♯, on themes from Mozart: Die Zauberflöte, op.50, 1820 (Leipzig, 1821) [based on op.114, 2nd movt]; Grand Rondo, G, 1820, op.51 (Leipzig, 1821) [based on op.115, 3rd movt]; Potpourri, E–A, on themes from P. von Winter: Das unterbrochene Opferfest, op.56, 1821 (Leipzig, 1822) [based on op.80)]; Fantasia, D, on themes from Der Alchymist, op.117, 1841 (Vienna, 1842);
Bn, pf: Adagio, F, WoO35, 1817 (Mainz, *c*1869) D-Ksp* [based on op.115, 2nd movt] with harp

in many of these the harp was to be tuned down a semitone and the music was written a semitone higher

7 sonatas: c, hp, vn, WoO23, 1805, ed. (Leipzig, 1917); B♭, op.16, 1806 (Bonn, 1809); e/f, hp, vn, WoO27, *c*1806, pts Kassel, Mitteldeutscher Sängerbund*, D/E♭, hp/pf, vn, op.113, 1806 (Hamburg, 1840); D/E♭, hp/pf, vn, op.114, 1811 (Hamburg, 1841); G/A♭, hp/pf, vn, op.115, 1809 (Hamburg, 1841); G/A♭, hp, vn, WoO36, 1819, lost
Sonata movt, inc., G, hp, vn, WoO24, 1805, *D-Ksp; Introduction, G, WoO25, 1805, *Bsb (Regensburg, 1934); Trio, e/f, vn, vc, hp, WoO28, 1806, private collection [arr. of WoO27]; Rondo, D/E♭, WoO33, 1813, lost; Fantasia, b/c–A/B♭, on themes by Handel and Vogler, hp/pf, vn, op.118, 1814 (Hamburg, 1845)

for one instrument

Pf: Waltz, c, WoO31, *c*1808 (Leipzig, 1891); Sonata, A♭, op.125, 1843 (Vienna, 1843); Rondoletto, G, op.149, 1848 (Leipzig, 1855)
Hp: Fantasia, c, op.35, 1807 (Bonn, 1816); 2 variation sets: no.1, on Méhul's 'Je suis encore dans mon printemps', op.36, 1807 (Bonn, 1816), no.2, E♭, WoO29, 1808, lost
Vn: Violin-Schule, WoO45, 1830–31 (Vienna, 1833); cadenzas for Beethoven's Vn Conc., WoO46 *c*1850 (London, 1896)

SACRED CHORAL

Mass, c, 5 solo vv, double chorus, op.54, 1821 (Leipzig, 1822)
Requiem, c, solo vv, chorus, orch, 1857–8, inc., *D-Bsb, *Ksp
Orats, solo vv, chorus, orch: Das jüngste Gericht (A. Arnold), WoO60, 1812, *Kl; Die letzten Dinge (F. Rochlitz), WoO61, vs pr. privately (Kassel, 1827), fs (London and Berlin, 1881/R in B iv); Des Heilands letzte Stunden (Rochlitz), WoO62, 1834–5, *US-Wc, vs pr. privately (Kassel, 1835), fs (London, 1884/R in B v); Der Fall Babylons (E. Taylor, trans. F Oetker), WoO63, 1839–40, *D-LEm, vs (Leipzig, 1842), fs (Leipzig, 1843)
Pss: 3 Pss (viii, xxiii, cxxx) (M. Mendelssohn), solo vv, double chorus, op.85, 1832, *Kl (Bonn, 1833); Ps xxiv, 4 solo vv, chorus, pf, op.97a, 1836, Kl, vs (Berlin, 1890); Ps cxxviii (C.B. Broadley), 4 solo vv, chorus, org/pf, op.122, 1841, arr. orch 1842, vs (London and Bonn, 1843), orch version *GB-Lbl; Ps lxxxiv (J. Milton, Eng. and Ger. text), 4 solo vv, chorus, orch, WoO72, 1846–7 (Hamburg, 1873)
Other sacred: Jubilate Deo, off, C, S, chorus, vn solo, orch, WoO65, 1815, Kl; Vater unser (A. Mahlmann), F, 4 solo vv, chorus, orch, WoO67, 1829 (Berlin, 1831), *Ksp; Gott, du bist gross (J.F. Rohdmann), hymn, 4 solo vv, chorus, orch, op.98, 1836 (Bonn, 1838); Friede den Entschlafenen (J. Neus), A♭, 2vv, WoO84, 1837 (Mainz, 1838); Vater unser (F.G. Klopstock), double chorus male vv, wind orch, WoO70, 1838, A-Wn, vs (Frankfurt, 1838) (2nd version with full orch, op.104, 1845, *D-Ksp; Lasst uns Dankgesang erheben, fugue, C, 4vv, WoO85, 1838 (Berlin, 1839); Selig alle, die im Herrn entschliefen, C, 4 male vv, WoO86, 1844, *Ksp

SECULAR CHORAL
accompanied

Das befreite Deutschland (cant., K. Pichler), C, WoO64, 1814, ov. arr. pf duet (Vienna, 1830), no.4 'Du schöner Stern' arr. 1v, pf (Vienna, 1823)
Hymne an die heilige Cäcilie (P. von Calenberg), B♭, S, chorus, pf, 1823, *D-F (Kassel, 1859)
Hessens Feiergesang (K. Wolf), D, unison vv, wind orch, WoO68, 1830 (Kassel, 1830)
Es schwebt im lichten Strahlenkranze, festival song, D, 3 S, chorus, vn, pf, 1832, WoO69, pubd with new text (Leipzig, 1887)
Schill, E♭, 4 male vv, pf 4 hands, WoO71, 1840, *BS (Leipzig, 1842)
O sel'ge Zeit, festival song, E♭, A, chorus, pf 4 hands, WoO73, 1850 (Leipzig, 1887)

unaccompanied partsongs

Der Kompass, F, 4 male vv, WoO89, *c*1807 (Meissen, 1826);
Lebe wohl, du Vater Brocken, canon, C, 4 male vv, WoO128, 1808, Brunswick, Landesmuseum*, facs. in Spohr: Selbstbiographie
Freude, Jubel, C, 3 high vv, WoO81, *c*1808, Brunswick, Landesmuseum*
6 Gësange, 4 male vv, op.44, 1817 (Leipzig, 1818): Hinauf (K. Grumbach), Rastlose Liebe (J.W. von Goethe), Kennt ihr das Land (F. Brun), Frühlingsorakel (Goethe), Trinklied (anon.), Zur Nacht (T. Körner)
Willst du immer weiter Schweifen (Goethe), canon, B♭, 4 male vv, WoO129, 1817, pubd with op.44 (Leipzig, 1818)
2 Gësange, 4 male vv, WoO82, 1820 (Leipzig, 1821): Flüchtig ist die Zeit (J.W.L. Gleim), Punschlied (anon.)
6 Gësange, 4 male vv, op.90, 1833 (Hamburg, 1838): Rat (anon.), Ständchen (anon.), Sängerleben (anon.), Sängerfahrt (C. Pfeiffer), Alte Liebe (anon.), Trinklied (anon.)
Wer das schneiden hat erfunden, canon, D, 2vv, WoO133, before 1835, *D-Bsb
6 Lieder, 4vv, op.120, 1841–2, Kassel, Mitteldeutscher Sängerbund* (Kassel, 1842): Sonnenschein (K.F. Dräxel-Manfred), Vesper (C. von Schweizer), Wanderlust (J.P.T. Lyser), An die Sterne (F. Spohr), Ergebung (H. Spener), Frühlingsgedanken (A. Hagen)
Kurz ist der Schmerz (F. Schiller), canon, F, 3 S, WoO134, 1848, *Ksp
6 Lieder, 4vv, WoO87 [op.151], 1855 (Hamburg, 1873): Winterlied (F.K. Müller von der Werra), Die Frühlingszeit (Müller von der Werra), des Menschen Trost (Müller von der Werra), Der Sommerabend (K.F. Haltaus), Das deutsche Lied (Felim), Ode (G. Berlin)
Ständchen (A. Hahlert), C, 4 male vv, WoO88, 1856, *Ksp

SOLO VOCAL
with orchestra

Oskar (scene and aria), B♭, S, WoO75, 1805, *D-Kl
Torni serena l'alma (aria alla polacca), D, T, WoO76, 1811, Kl
Welche seltenen Gefühle (recit), E♭, WoO78, *c*1822, Bsb [for J. Weigl: Ostade, oder Adrian von Ostade]
E mi lasci così? (Tu m'abbandonai, ingrato) (scene and aria), A, S, op.71, 1823, vs, pts (Leipzig, 1827)

for 2 voices with piano

3 Duette, S, T, op.107, 1838 (Bonn, 1839), B viii: Liebesfragen (H. Schulz), D-Ksp, Wechselgesang (C.A. Tiedge), Kassel, Mitteldeutscher Sängerbund, Liebe (anon.), *Ksp
Jenseits (F. Bobrich), S, T, woo98, 1838, *Ksp (Leipzig, 1838), B viii
3 Duette, 2 S, op.108, 1838 (Bonn, 1839) B viii: Abendlied (F. Rochlitz), Das Herz (anon.), Ruhe (G. von Deuern)
Mein Heimatland (Mecklenburg), 2 S, woo116, 1847, Kassel, Mitteldeutscher Sängerbund* (Berlin, 1849), B viii
3 Leider, 2 S, woo117. 1849 (Leipzig and London, 1854), B viii: Ermunterung (K.E. Ebert), Sonntagsfrühe (A. Lange), Frühlingslied (G. Scheurlin)
Wenn sich zwei Herzen finden, S, A, woo120, 1851 (Nuremberg, 1852) solo songs

for unspecified voice with piano unless otherwise stated

6 deutsche Lieder, op.25, 1809 (Hamburg, 1810), B viii: Wiegenlied (K.E.K. von Göchhausen), Schottisches Lied (anon.), Gretchen am Spinnrade (Goethe), Lied der Freude (E. Gross), Zigeunerlied (Goethe), Das Schiffermädchen (A. Gyr)
Lied des verlassenen Mädchens (J.L.F. Deinhardstein), woo90, 1814/15 (Vienna, 1815), B viii
6 deutsche Lieder, op.37, 1815 (Leipzig, 1816), B viii: Mignons Lied (Goethe), Lebenslied (H. Schmidt), Die Stimme der Nacht (C. von W.), Getrennte Liebe (H. Schmidt), Liebesschwärmerei (C. von W.), Lied beim Rundtanz (J.G. von Salis)
6 deutsche Lieder, op.41, 1815 (Leipzig, 1817), B viii: Das Mädchens Sehnsucht (F. Kind), Lied aus Aslaugas Ritter (F. de la Motte-Fouqué), An Mignon (Goethe), Klagelied von den drei Rosen (Buri), Der erste Kuss (M. Kartscher), Vanitas! Vanitatum vanitas (Goethe)
Nachgefühl (Goethe), woo91, 1819 (Meissen, 1824), B viii
Was treibt den Waidmann in den Wald (W. Vogel), acc hp/pf, hn, woo92, 1825 (Vienna, 1826), B viii
6 deutsche Lieder, op.72, 1826 (Leipzig, 1827), B viii: Frühlingslied (L. Uhland), Schifferlied der Wasserfee (L. Tieck), Ghasel (Adil), Beruhigung (anon.), An Rosa Maria (Amalia), Schlaflied (Tieck)
6 deutsche Lieder, A/Bar, op.94, 1835–36 (Bonn, 1837), B viii: Lied der Harfnerin (anon.), Bitte, bitte! (Schmidt), Der Bleicherin Nachtlied (R. Reinick), Ungeduld (W. Müller), Schwermut (S.A. Mahlmann), Sonntag und Montag (anon.)
Das Wirtshaus zu  (A. von Marées), A/Bar, woo93, 1836 (Mainz, 1836), B viii
6 deutsche Lieder, acc. pf 2 and 4 hands, op.101, 1836–7 (Leipzig, 1837), B viii: Frühlingslied (R. Reinick), Sangeslust (J. Eberwein), Nichts Schöneres (Reinick), Trostlos (A. von Hochwald), Schweigen ist Schönes Ding (Reinick), Gondelfahrt (E. Geibel)
5 deutsche Lieder, op.139, 1836–48 (Kassel, 1848), B viii: Ständchen (K. Simrock), Maria (anon.), Jägerlied (anon.), Lied aus dem ' Märlein von der Wasserfee' (M. Bekmann), Was mir wohl übrig bliebe (A.H. Hoffmann von Fallersleben)
6 deutsche Lieder, [S] acc. pf, cl, op.103, 1837 (Leipzig, 1838), B viii: Sei still mein Herz (C. von Schweizer), Zeigesang (Reinick), Sehnsucht (Geibel), Wiegenlied (in drei Tönen) (Hoffmann von Fallersleben), Das heimliche Leid [sic] (E. Koch), Wach auf (anon.)
6 deutsche Lieder, S/T, op.105, 1838 (Halle, 1839), B viii: Die Himmelsbraut (J. Kerner), Der Rosenstrauch (E. Ferrand), Das Ständchen (Uhland), An  (E. Koch), Des Mädchens Klage (Schweizer), Warum nicht? (anon.)
Mitternacht (F. Dingelstedt), acc. pf 4 hands, woo97, 1838 (Dresden, 1840), B viii
Verlust (B.F.W. Zimmermann), woo99, 1839, *A-Wgm (Vienna, 1839), B viii
An die Geliebten (V. Hugo), woo100, 1839 (Hamburg, 1850), B viii
Unterwegs (Dingelstedt), woo101, 1839 (Brunswick, 1842), B viii
Die sieben Schwestern (L. Wihl), acc. pf 4 hands, woo102, 1839 (Bonn, 1840), Kassel, Mitteldeutscher Sängerbund*
Rätselhaft (anon.), T, pf 4 hands, woo103, 1841, *US-Wc (Brunswick, 1841), B viii
Abendlied (J. Becker), woo104, 1841 (Kassel, 1841)
Singet die Nachtigall im dunkeln Wald (J.C. von Zedlitz: Kerker und Krone), woo105, 1841 (Leipzig, 1841), B viii
Wolle keiner mich fragen (Giebel), woo106, 1842, *D-F (Stuttgart, 1842), B viii
Thränen (A. von Chamisso), woo108, 1842 (Leipzig, 1842), B viii
Leibt er mich (anon.), woo109, 1843, *Ksp (Stuttgart, 1843), B viii
Gruss (J.K. Braun von Braunsthal), woo110, 1843, *Kl (Vienna, 1844), B viii
Mein Vaterland (Hoffmann von Fallersleben), woo111, 1844 (Mannheim, 1845), B viii
Ermutigung (C. von Schweizer), woo112, 1845 (Kassel, 1845), B viii
Immerdar Liebe (Göchhausen), woo113, 1845, *Ksp (Rudolstadt, 1845)
Every Where Far and Near (Sehnsucht) (Meier), woo114, 1846, *Ksp (London, 1848), B viii
Der Herbst (A.L. Lua), woo115, 1847 (Berlin, 1848), b viii
An sie am Klavier, sonatina for pf, 1v, B♭, op.138, 1848 (Kassel, 1848)
Glockenklänge (anon.), woo118, 1850, *US-Wc (Brunswick, 1852), B viii
3 Lieder (F. von Bodenstedt, after The Thousand and One Nights), woo119, 1850 (Leipzig, 1855), B viii
Erwartung (K. Bassewitz), woo121, 1853 (Göttingen, 1854), B viii
Mein Verlangen (Müller von der Werra), woo122, 1854 (St Gallen, 1855)
Grüsse (A. Linden), woo123, 1855, *D-Ksp (Leipzig, 1862)
6 deutsche Lieder, Bar, vn, pf, op.154, 1856 (Kassel, 1857), B viii: Abendfeier (H. Mahn), Jagdlied (F. Spohr), Töne (R. Otto), Erlkönig (Goethe), Der Spielmann und seine Geige (Hozze), Abendstille (J. Koch)
Immer dasselbe (A. Linden), woo124, 1856 *Ksp (Leipzig and Dresden, 1858)
Wohin (J. Sturm), woo125, 1856, *Bsb, B viii
Die verschweigene Nachtigall (Walther von der Vogelweide), woo126, 1857 (Würzburg, 1858), B viii
Neue Liebe, neues Leben (Goethe), woo127, 1858 (Würzburg, 1859), B viii

BIBLIOGRAPHY

AUTOBIOGRAPHY, LETTERS, MEMOIRS

L. Spohr: Selbstbiographie, i–ii (Kassel, 1860–61; Eng. trans., 1865/R, 2/1878/R); ed. E. Schmitz (1954–5); partial Eng. trans. by H. Pleasants, 1961, as The Musical Journeys of Louis Spohr [abridged adaptation of Lebenserinnerungen, autograph MS, lost]
L. Spohr: 'Briefe L. Spohr's an das Haus Peters in Leipzig', AMZ, new ser., ii (1867), 290–91
A. Schöne, ed.: Briefe von Moritz Hauptmann an Franz Hauser (Leipzig, 1871; Eng. trans. in Coleridge, 1892)
C. Moscheles, ed.: Aus Moscheles Leben: nach Briefen und Tagebüchern (Leipzig, 1872–3; Eng. trans., 1873/R)
F. Hiller, ed.: Briefe von Moritz Hauptmann an Louis Spohr und andere (Leipzig, 1876; Eng. trans. in Coleridge, 1892)
La Mara [M. Lipsius]: Musikerbriefe aus fünf Jahrhunderten) (Leipzig, 1886)
A.D. Coleridge, trans: The Letters of a Leipzig Cantor, Being the Letters of Moritz Hauptmann to Franz Hauser, Ludwig Spohr, and Other Musicians (London, 1892) [see Schöne (1871) and Hiller (1876)]
La Mara [M. Lipsius]: 'Aus Spohrs Leben', Klassisches und Romantisches aus der Tonkunst (Leipzig, 1892)
W.J. von Wasiliewski: Aus 70 Jahren: Lebenserinner ungen (Stuttgart, 1897)
E. Istel: 'Fünf Briefe Spohrs an Marschner', Festschrift … Rochus Freiherrn von Liliencron (Leipzig, 1910/R), 110–15
E. Speyer: Wilhelm Speyer der Liederkomponist (Munich, 1925)
F. Göthel, ed.: Louis Spohr: Briefwechsel mit seiner Frau Dorette (Kassel, 1957)
F. Göthel, ed.: L. Spohr: Lebenserinnerungen (Tutzing, 1968)

GENEALOGIES AND BIOGRAPHICAL STUDIES

ADB (H.M. Schletterer)
W.H. Riehl: 'Zwanzig Jahre aus der Geschichte der romantischen Oper, III: Spohr, Weber und Meyerbeer', Musikalische Charakterköpfe, i (Stuttgart, 1853, 8/1899), 332
W. Neumann: Louis Spohr (Kassel, 1854)
H. Giehne: Zur Erinnerung an Louis Spohr (Karlsruhe, 1860)
A. Malibran: Louis Spohr (Frankfurt, 1860)
H.M. Schletterer: Ludwig Spohr (Leipzig, 1881/R) [incl. work-list]
W. Altmann: 'Spohrs Beziehungen zur Generalintendanz der königlichen Schauspiele zu Berlin', NZM, c (1904), 199–201
E. Rychnowsky: 'Louis Spohr und Friedrich Rochlitz', SIMG, v (1903–4), 253–313
L. Spohr: Spohr'sches Familienbuch (Karlsruhe, 1918)
Herman Glenewinkel: 'Verzeichniss des musikalischen Nachlasses von L. Spohr', AMw, i (1918–19), 432–6

O. Spohr: Die Nachfahren des Christoph Spohr (Leipzig, 1926)
H. Eberhart: Die ersten deutschen Musikfeste in Frankenhausen … und Erfurt (Greiz, 1934)
F. Göthel: 'Bildnisse Ludwig und Dorette Spohrs', ZfM, Jg.101 (1934), 1028–30
E. Preussner: Die Bürgerliche Musikkultur (Hamburg, 1935)
P. Heidelbach: 'Louis Spohrs Prozess gegen den Kurfüsten von Hessen', AMz, lxiii (1936), 544–6, 561–3
E. Schmitz: 'Zu Louis Spohrs Selbstbiographie', Deutsche Musikkultur, ix (1944), 45
F. Uhlendorff: 'Kasseler Kapelle, Kapellmeister und Konzertmeister im Zeitraum 1814–1852', Jubiläum der hessischen Staatskapelle Kassel, 1502–1952 (Kassel, 1952), 87–116
H.J. Becker: 'Meyerbeer Beziehungs zu Louis Spohr', Mf, x (1957), 479–86
H. Homburg: 'Louis Spohrs erste Aufführung der Matthäus-Passion in Kassel', Musik und Kirche, xxviii (1958), 49–60
E. Wolff zu Gudenberg: Beitrag zur Musikgeschichte der Stadt Kassel unter den beiden letzten Kurfürsten (diss., U. of Göttingen, 1958)
F. Uhlendorff: 'Chronik des Kasseler Musiktheaters 1814–1944', Theater in Kassel, ed. H.J. Schaefer (Kassel, 1959)
H. Heussner: 'Spohr der Künstler und seine Welt', Hessische Heimat[Karlsruhe], ix (1959–60), 7
H. Homburg: Louis Spohr und die Bach-Renaissance', BJb (1960), 65–82
H. Homburg: 'Politische Äusserungen Louis Spohrs: ein Beitrag zur Opposition Kasseler Künstler während der kurhessischen Verfassungskämpfe', Zeitschrift des Vereins für hessische Geschichte und Landeskunde, lxxv–lxxvi (1964), 545–68
R. Lebe: Ein deutsches Hoftheater in Romantik und Biedermeier: die Bühne zur Zeit Feiges und Spohrs Kasseler (Kassel, 1964)
H. Homburg: Louis Spohr: Bilder und Dokumente seiner Zeit (Kassel, 1968)
K.-H. Wegner and S. Öhring: 'Künstler und Bürger in Kassel', Louis Spohr Avantgardist des Musiklebens seiner Zeit (Kassel, 1979), 39–58
W. Ederer: 'Louis Spohrs Besuche in Berlin', Louis Spohr: Festschrift und Ausstellungskatalog zum 200, Geburtstag, ed. H. Becker and R. Krempien (Kassel, 1984), 65–90
H. Homburg: 'Bildnisse Louis Spohrs', ibid., 209–30
E. Spohr: 'Louis Spohr und Amalie von Sybel', ibid., 91–104
M.F. Powell: 'Louis Spohr: a Retrospect of the Bicentenary', MT, cxxvi (1985), 347–8
M. Wulfhorst: 'Hill, Spohr, Mendelssohn and Beethoven's Ninth Symphony: a Mid-Nineteenth-Century Music Festival in New York', Institute for Studies in American Music: Newsletter, xv/2 (1985–6), 8–11
H. Peters: Der Komponist, Geiger, Dirigent und Pädagoge Louis Spohr (1784–1859) (Brunswick, 1987)

MUSICAL STUDIES

SchwarzGM
I.J. Ebers: Spohr und Halévy und die neueste Kirchen- und Opern-Musik (Breslau, 1837)
F. Hand: Ästhetik der Tonkunst, ii (Jena, 1841)
A. Kahlert: Einige Gedanken über Louis Spohr (Stuttgart, 1841)
P. Spitta: 'Jessonda', Zur Musik (Berlin, 1892/R)
A. Schering: Geschichte des Instrumental-Konzerts (Leipzig, 1905, 2/1927/R)
R. Wassermann: Louis Spohr als Opernkomponist (diss., U. of Rostock, 1909)
L. Hirschberg: 'Louis Spohr als Balladenkomponist', Die Musik, xi/4 (1911–12), 212–22
A. Schering: Geschichte des Oratoriums (Leipzig, 1911/R)
E. Schmitz: 'Louis Spohrs Jugendoper "Alruna"', ZIMG, xiii (1911–12), 293–9
H. Glenewinkel: Spohrs Kammermusik für Streichinstrumente (Nienburg (Weser), 1912)
A. Moser: Geschichte des Violinspiels (Berlin, 1923, enlarged 2/1966–7)
G. Becking: Der musikalische Rhythmus als Erkenntnisquelle (Augsburg, 1928)
H.H. Rosenwald: Das deutsche Lied zwischen Schubert und Schumann (Berlin, 1929)
F. Göthel: Das Violinspiel Louis Spohrs, unter Berücksichtigung geigentechnischer Probleme seiner Zeit (diss., U. of Berlin, 1935)
E. Bücken: 'Romantik und Realismus: zur Periodisierung der Romantischen Epoche', Festschrift Arnold Schering, ed. H. Osthoff, W. Serauky and A. Adrio (Berlin, 1937/R), 46–50
S. Goslich: Beiträge zur Geschichte der deutschen romanischen Oper (Leipzig, 1937, enlarged 2/1975 as Die deutsche romantischen Oper)
H.J. Moser: Das deutsche seit Mozart Lied (Berlin and Zürich, 1937, enlarged 2/1968)
E. Schmitz: 'Louis Spohrs erster Opernversuch', AMf, vii (1942), 84–9
M. Sonnleitner: Spohrs Violinkonzerte (diss., U. of Graz, 1946)
A. Jacobs: 'Spohr and the Baton', ML, xxxi (1950), 307–17
H. Heussner: Die Symphonien Louis Spohrs (diss., U. of Marburg, 1956)
H. Heussner: 'Louis Spohr und W.A. Mozart', MJb 1957, 199–206
F. Göthel: 'Louis Spohr als Pädagoge', Musik im Unterricht, l (1959), 301
F. Göthel: 'Tragik der Mozartnachfolger', Acta mozartiana, vi/1 (1959), 58–70
W. Lidke: 'Übereinstimmung und Gegensatz der Violin-Schulen von Leopold Mozart und Louis Spohr', Louis Spohr Festschrift, ed. G. Kraft, P. Michel and H.R. Jung (Weimar, 1959), 67–77
P. Michel: 'Die pädagogischen Ansichten Louis Spohrs und ihre Beziehungen zum Philanthropismus', ibid., 26–61
F. Göthel: 'Zur Wiedergabe von Werken Louis Spohrs', Das Orchester, viii (1960), 36
D. Greiner: Louis Spohrs Beiträge zur deutschen romantischen Oper (diss., U. of Kiel, 1960)
H. Truscott: 'The Individuality of Spohr', The Listener (1 Aug 1961)
R. Folter: 'Ludwig van Beethoven and Louis Spohr', NZM, Jg.127 (1966), 50–54
A.A. Abert: 'Webers "Euryanthe" und Spohrs "Jessonda" als grosse Opern', Festschrift für Walter Wiora, ed. L. Finscher and C.-H. Mahlingh (Kassel, 1967), 435–40
J. Záloha: 'Některá zhudebněni známých Goethových veršôuz románu, "Wilhelm Meisters Lehrjahre"' [Some musical settings of well-known poems from Goethe's novel Wilhelm Meisters Lehrjahre], HV, vi (1969), 495 only
G. Drechsler: Lieder Louis Spohrs und textgleiche Kompositionen der Zeit (diss., U. of Innsbruck, 1971)
S.K. Johnston: The Clarinet Concertos of Louis Spohr (diss., U. of Maryland, 1972)
J. Berrett: Characteristic Conventions of Style in Selected Instrumental Works of Louis Spohr (diss., U. of Michigan, 1974)
H.-J. Zingel: Harfenmusik im 19. Jahrhundert (Wilhelmshaven, 1976)
H. Becker: 'Die "Kasseler Schule"', Louis Spohr: Avantgardist des Musiklebens seiner Zeit, ed. W. Marschner (Kassel, 1979), 59–63
H. Becker: 'Louis Spohr: Leben und Wirken', ibid., 7–38
C. Brown; 'Spohr's "Jessonda"', MT, cxxi (1980), 94–7
J. Berrett: Introductions to Louis Spohr 1784–1859: Three Symphonies, The Symphony 1720–1840, ser. C, ix (New York, 1980)
C. Brown: Spohr's Popularity in England (diss., U. of Oxford, 1980)
F. Göthel: Thematisch-bibliographisches Verzeichnis der Werke von Louis Spohr (Tutzing, 1981)
P. Katow: Louis Spohr: Persönlichkeit und Werk (Luxembourg, 1983)
H. Becker and R. Krempien, eds.: Louis Spohr: Festschrift und Ausstellungskatalog zum 200, Geburtstag (Kassell, 1984) [incl. F. Göthel: 'Deer Romantiker Louis Spohr', 7–18; H. Becker: 'Einflüsse musikalischer Traditionen in Louis Spohrs Braunschweiger Jugendjahren', 19–26; M.F. Powell: 'Louis Spohr und die Harfe', 27–34; D. Greiner: 'Die Rolle des Rezitativs in den Opern Spohrs', 35–52; R. Krempien: 'Louis Spohrs pädagogische Wirken', 53–68; C. Brown: 'Spohrs Popularität in England', 105–16; H. Becker: 'Spohr und die russische Musik', 117–32; P. Katow: 'Werke von Louis Spohr auf Schallplatten', 133–44]
C. Brown: Louis Spohr: a Critical Biography (Cambridge, 1984)
C. Brown: 'Spohr, Faust and Leitmotif', MT, cxxv (1948), 25–27
C. Brown: Introductions to Selected Works of Louis Spohr, i–x (New York, 1987–90)
C. Headington: 'The Concerto after Beethoven', A Companion to the Concerto, ed. R. Layton (London, 1988), 131–76, esp. 132–4
D. Ellman: 'The Symphony in Nineteenth–Century Germany', A Companion to the Symphony, ed. R. Layton (London, 1993/R1995 as A Guide to the Symphony), 124–54, esp. 139–42
M. Wulfhorst: Louis Spohr's Early Chamber Music (1796–1812): a Contribution to the History of Nineteenth-Century Genres (diss., CUNY, 1995)
J.A. Sturm: The Evolution of a Dramatic Compositional Style in the Violin Concertos of Louis Spohr (diss., Indiana U., 1995)

C. Brown: 'Weber and Spohr', The Nineteenth-Century Symphony, ed. D.K. Holoman (New York, 1997), 17–42
C. Brown: 'The Chamber Music of Spohr and Weber', Nineteenth-Century Chamber Music, ed. S. Heffling (New York, 1998)
C. Brown: 'Spohr's Influence on English Composers', National Arts Education Archive, viii (forthcoming)

CLIVE BROWN

Spoleto. Italian city in the province of Perugia, Umbria. The development of musical life in the city was due to the patronage of three bishops, all belonging to the Eruli family. Bernardo (1448–74), Costantino (1474–95) and Francesco (1495–1540). Between 1465 and 1471 they endowed the cathedral with a new organ and enlarged the number of musicians. The cappella was officially founded in 1561 by Cardinal Alessandro Farnese, and Bishop Fulvio Orsini (1565–7) and Bishop Pietro Orsini (1580–91) increased its revenue. During Pietro Orsini's reign Father Giovanni Troiano was maestro di cappella and Fathers Nevio Roscio and Marcantonio Contolini served as organists. Between the end of the 16th century and the beginning of the 18th Antonio Liberti and his son Vincenzo were active as maestri di cappella. Vincenzo dedicated his five-part Il secondo libre de madrigali (1609) to Bishop Maffeo Barberini (1608–17). From 1614 to 1617 the famous soprano castrato Loreto Vittori sang in the cappella, before being called to Rome by Barberini. Several later maestri di cappella composed oratorios, among them G.B. Fronduti (1703–17) and Giuseppe Radicchi (1759–76).

There is evidence for musical and theatrical performances given in the palaces of the nobility from the end of the 16th century under the aegis of the Accademia degli Ottusi. In 1639, having been banished to Spoleto, Loreto Vittori composed his opera La Galatea there. The Accademia was also responsible for the construction of the Teatro de' Nobili in the Piazza del Duomo. Authorization for its construction was granted in 1657; for Carnival 1661 Francesco Vannarelli's La Fedra was performed there. The rectangular wooden hall was altered to a horseshoe shape in 1667 and equipped with 60 boxes in four tiers. Between 1749 and 1751 the number of boxes was increased from 15 to 18 per tier, and the theatre was re-inaugurated in autumn 1751 with Niccolò Jommelli's Ipermestra, composed for the occasion. The theatre was again restored and reopened in 1802 with Li tre Orfei by Marcello Bernardini. 1880 saw the completion of a reconstruction in masonry of the old wooden theatre, which had gradually become unusable; it was renamed the Teatro Cajo Melisso.

The Teatro Nuovo, designed by Ireneo Aleandri, was built in 1854–64 on the site of the church of the monastery of S Andrea, itself built on Roman foundations. On a horseshoe plan, it has four tiers of boxes and about 1200 seats. Every year performances are given there by the Teatro Lirico Sperimentale, a group founded in 1947 to provide opportunities for young singers.

It was as a result of this enterprise that G.C. Menotti chose Spoleto as the seat of the Festival dei Due Mondi (Festival of Two Worlds), which was inaugurated in 1958 and takes place in June and July each year. The festival, experimental in character, revolves around music drama with the addition of chamber and symphony concerts, as well as ballet, plays, films and exhibitions. An important catalyst of the festival was Thomas Schippers, artistic director until 1965 and musical director until 1975. The artistic direction, after being in the hands of Menotti in 1966 and 1967, passed to Massimo Bogianckino (1968–71), Romolo Valli (1972–8), Rafaello de Banfield (1979) and Menotti (1984). The musical director from 1978 was Christian Badea, who was succeeded in 1987 by Spiros Argiris.

The collaboration of Luchino Visconti as director was also very important. He staged Macbeth for the inaugural festival (1958), followed by Il duca d'Alba (1959), Salome (1961), La traviata (1963) and Manon Lescaut (1973). In May 1977 the festival was expanded to Charleston, South Carolina (representing the other of the two worlds); productions from Spoleto are performed there each year during May and June.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

DEUMM (M. Pascale); ES; GroveO (G. Ciliberti and P. Gallarati)
L. Fausti: Notizie artistiche del Duomo di Spoleto (Foligno, 1914)
O. Sansi: Il teatro nuovo di Spoleto: notizie cronistoriche dal 1840 al 1864 (Spoleto,1914)
L. Fausti: La cappella musicale del Duomo di Spoleto (Perugia, 1916)
O. Sansi: Il Nobile Teatro di Spoleto (Spoleto, 1922)
L. Fausti: 'Memorie storiche dell'Accademia Spoletina', Atti dell'Accademia Spoletina (1923–26) (Spoleto,1926); repr. in L'Accademia Spoletina, ed. F. Antolini (Spoleto,1977)
O. Sansi: 'Notizie cronistoriche aggiunte al Nobile Teatro di Spoleto', ibid.
M. Rinaldi: 'Storia di un teatro', La Scala, no.44 (1953), 15–18
C. Jolly: 'The Festival of Two Worlds', Opera, ix (1958), 551–7
I. Luchetti Lopa: 'La cappella musicale del Duomo di Spoleto nei secoli XVI–XVIII', Spoletium, xviii (1973), 17–22
G. Metelli: 'Antonino Liberti maestro di cappella di Spoleto', Spoletium, xxiv (1979), 91–3
W. Weaver: '25 anni di musica', Spoleto Festival 1982 (Spoleto, 1982), 65–83
M. Natale, ed.: Spoleto trent'anni di Festival: gli spettacoli, gli autori, i partecipanti, gli artisti 1958–1987 (Spoleto, 1987)
G. Ciliberti: 'Documenti per una storia dell'oratorio musicale a Spoleto nei secoli XVII–XVIII: una cronolgia dei libretti', Spoletium, xxxvi–xxxvii (1992), 83–6

GALLIANO CILIBERTI, PAOLO GALLARATI

Spoliansky, Mischa (b Bialystok, 28 Dec 1898; d London, 28 June 1985). British composer of Russian birth, also active in Germany. His father was an opera singer, with whom he left Russia in 1905. Initially employed as a café-pianist in Berlin while studying composition and the piano at the Stern Conservatory, he later composed for the literary cabaret Schall und Rauch, becoming its musical director in 1920. He wrote for Max Reinhardt's production Victoria (1927) and for the musical Es liegt in der Luft (1928), in which a then little-known Marlene Dietrich made her stage début. His successful musical comedy Zwei Krawatten (1929) also starred Dietrich. Before fleeing Germany in 1933, Spoliansky composed for several German operettas, revues and sound films. He then settled in England, taking British citizenship, and during the war contributed signature tunes and propaganda songs to the BBC's German programme. Working mainly as a composer for film, he wrote over 40 scores including Sanders of the River (1935), The Ghost Goes West (1936), Wanted for Murder (1946), The Happiest Days of Your Life (1950), Saint Joan (1957), Northwest Frontier (1959) and Hitler – The Last Ten Days (1973). Since 1956 there have been several revivals in Germany of his stage works. Spoliansky also composed many songs, often popularized through their appearance in films, some small piano pieces, and a few orchestral works, including a five-movement symphony (1969, unperformed). Much of his subtle scoring for film is characterized by a lightness of touch, enhanced by a gift for memorable melody. His Berlin stage songs are, like those of Friedrich Hollaender and Kurt Weill, subversive and ironic. Archive catalogues of his work are held in the Akademie der Künste, Berlin, and at the University of York, England.

DAVID KERSHAW

Sponga [Spongia], Francesco. See USPER, FRANCESCO.

Sponga, Gabriele. See USPER, GABRIELE.

Spongopoeus [Spongopaeus] Gistebnicenus [Gistebnicensis], Paulus [Pavel] (b Jistebnice, *c*1560; d Kutná Hora, 1619). Bohemian composer. During the 1580s and 90s he was a cantor in Přeštice near Klatovy and from 1598 at the latest in Kutná Hora. He was arguably the most prolific Bohemian composer of his time. However, none of his works have survived completely. His output consists largely of plenary masses, such as Plenarium de angelis, in which both the Ordinary and the Proper of the mass are set. 27 Latin and three Czech plenary settings survive in fragmentary form. Spongopoeus also composed seven mass Ordinary settings, mostly parody masses that are based on European as well as Bohemian models, and three mass Proper cycles, which are only occasionally based on plainchant melodies. His motets set both Latin and Czech texts. His early motets are composed for five and six voices in imitative counterpoint; from 1590 he also used eight-voice textures often arranged in double chorus. There are also Latin and Czech songs as well as smaller liturgical compositions such as responsory settings and hymns.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ČSHS; MGG1 suppl. (J. Snížková)

D. Soušková: Pavel Spongopaeus Jistebnický (diss., U. of Prague, 1984)

JANA VOZKOVÁ

Sponheuer, Bernd (b Herford, 6 Feb 1948). German musicologist. He studied with Anna Amalie Abert and Kurt Güdewill from 1969 at the University of Kiel, where he took the doctorate with a two-volume dissertation on the problems of the finale in Mahler's symphonies. He completed his Habilitationsschrift on 18th- and 19th-century music aesthetics at Kiel in 1984, where he was appointed professor that same year and chair of the musicology department in 1990. He also worked as an editor for Die Musikforschung, 1994–7. In his writings, Sponheuer has examined Mahler's struggle with traditional forms and tonality and offered different readings of 'progressive' elements in the symphonies. Sponheuer's publications on music aesthetics are equally important, and his discussions on this topic focus on changes in listeners' attitudes during the late 18th and early 19th century, and on the influence of Spitta and Nägeli. His later articles investigate the ideological role of music in National Socialism in Germany.

WRITINGS

Logik des Zerfalls: Untersuchungen zum Finalproblem in den Symphonien Gustav Mahlers (diss., U. of Kiel, 1976; Tutzing, 1978)

Musik als Kunst und Nicht Kunst: Untersuchungen zur Dichotomie von 'höher' und 'niederer' Musik im musikästhetischen Denken zwischen Kant und Hanslick (Habilitationsschrift, U. of Kiel, 1984; Kassel, 1987)

'Zur ästhetischen Dichotomie als Denkform in der ersten Hälfte des 19. Jahrhunderts: eine historische Skizze am Beispiel Schumanns, Brendels und Hanslicks', AMw, xxxvii (1980), 1–31

'Zum Problem der doppelten Finales in Mozarts "ersten" Klavierkonzert KV 175: zwei Versuch der Synthetisierung von "Gelehrten" und "Galanten"', AMw, xlii (1985), 102–20

'Das Bach-Bild Hans Georg Nägelis und die Entstehung der musikalischen Autonomieästhetik', Mf, xxxix (1986), 107–23

'Dissonante Stimmigkeit: eine rezeptionsgeschichtliche Studie zum dritten Satz der Mahlerschen Ersten', Gustav Mahler, ed. H. Danuser (Darmstadt, 1992), 159–90

'Phantastik und Kalkül: Bemerkungen zu den Ostinatokompositionen in der Orgelmusik Dietrich Buxtehudes', Dietrich Buxtehude und die europäische Musik seiner Zeit: Lübeck 1987, 289–309

'Musik auf einer kulturellen und physischen Insel: Musik als Überlebensmittel im Jüdischen Kulturbund 1933–1941', Musik in der Emigration 1933–1945: Essen 1992, 108–35

'Über das "Deutsche" in der Musik: Versuch einer idealtypischen Rekonstruktion', Die dunkle Lust: Musik im National Sozialismus: Wuppertal 1995 (forthcoming)

CHRISTIAN MARTIN SCHMIDT/J. BRADFORD ROBINSON

Sponsel, Johann Ulrich (b Muggendorf, Upper Franconia, bap. 5 Dec 1721; d Burgbernheim, Middle Franconia, 10 Jan 1788). German writer on music. He attended the Gymnasium Casimirianum Academicum in Coburg (but not until 1741–4), and studied philosophy, theology and oriental languages at Erlangen University until 1746. In 1747 he was appointed an adiutor at the Gymnasium in Bayreuth and received in 1748 the position of preacher in the suburb of St Georgen. On 22 January 1753 he was made an honorary member of the Lateinische Gesellschaft in Jena, and in April of that year became pastor in Lenkersheim. Finally in 1766 he moved to Burgbernheim as pastor and church superintendent. Among many publications, largely concerning church matters, his only musical work is Orgelhistorie (Nuremberg, 1771/R), a modest publication of 167 pages which originated as the sermon given for the dedication of the rebuilt organ in his church. In it Sponsel attempted to trace the history of the organ from ancient times, though he disclaimed any goal of completeness. His history is faulty and undependable, and heavily indebted to books on the organ by Praetorius, Printz, Werckmeister and Adlung. Most significant, however, and of continuing value, is a fairly detailed description of 26 important Franconian and Regensburg organs, with data compiled through correspondence.

GEORGE J. BUELOW

Spontini, Gaspare (Luigi Pacifico) (b Maiolati, nr Iesi, 14 Nov 1774; d Maiolati, 24 Jan 1851). Italian composer. He dominated serious grand opera of the early 19th century in Paris and later in Berlin.

1. 1774–1802: ITALY. The son of an artisan and smallholder, Spontini was destined for the church, but when his musical talent came to be recognized, in 1793, he entered the Conservatorio di S Maria della Pietà dei Turchini in Naples. Here he composed various opere buffe, the first of which was performed in Rome in 1796. The Bourbon court moved temporarily from Naples to Palermo in 1798, and there is evidence that Spontini was there too in 1800, before he moved to Paris at the end of 1802. At least 12 of his operas had their first performances in Italy, and it seems that he must have visited Rome, Florence and perhaps Venice between 1796 and 1802 – although little research has been done into the details of his early career or the dates of performance of several of his works (many of the scores are not preserved). Nor is much known for certain about his teachers. He must have been taught by Nicola Sala and Giacomo Tritto at the conservatory; his later claim that he was a pupil of

1. Gaspare Spontini and his wife Marie-Cathérine-Céleste: portrait by Wilhelm Titel, 1813 (private collection); through the window can be seen Spontini's birthplace, Maiolati

Cimarosa cannot be substantiated. In any event, he won no more than occasional recognition in the first six years of his career, and in no way stood out among the many minor operatic composers who were his contemporaries.

2. 1803–20: Paris. Spontini began his career in Napoleonic Paris by giving singing lessons. His first success came in 1804, at the Théâtre Italien, with a revised version of La finta filosofa. But his first French-language work, La petite maison, ran into widespread anti-Italian feeling at its troubled first performance, on 12 May 1804, and had only three performances in all (though the fiasco at least made Spontini better known). Milton, described as a fait historique, was first performed at the Opéa-Comique in the same year. Its librettist, Etienne de Jouy, further offered Spontini a libretto he had already written for La vestale. After writing his last work in the Italian opera buffa style in 1805 (Julie, ou Le pot de fleurs), Spontini devoted himself to work on La vestale, his first tragédie lyrique, which was completed in draft in 1805, the year in which he was first described as compositeur particulier de la chambre to the Empress Josephine. Josephine's patronage, to which Spontini responded with such occasional works as the cantata L'eccelsa gara and the vaudeville Tout le monde a tort (both 1806), proved a decisive influence on his career; only Josephine's persistent intervention brought about the long-delayed first performance of La vestale on 15 December 1807 (see fig.2). The work's triumphant success meant that Spontini was now seen as one of the leading composers in Paris, and he was commissioned to provide propaganda for Napoleon's Spanish campaign in the form of an opera about Hernán Cortés and his conquest of Mexico. Napoleon himself, with the kings of Saxony and Westphalia, attended the première of Fernand Cortez on 28 November 1809 (see Grand opera, fig.1).

Although Fernand Cortez was taken out of the repertory in 1810, that year proved to be the peak of Spontini's career. In February he was appointed directeur de la musique de l'opéra buffa at the Théâtre de l'Impératrice and was able to put his ideas for repertory – concentrating on performances of Cimarosa and Mozart – into practice at the Théâtre Italien. In July he was awarded a newly created prize for the best opera of the decade, for La vestale, and in the same month he married Marie-Cathérine-Céleste Erard, daughter of the pianoforte maker and publisher Jean-Baptiste Erard. After Napoleon's fall from power Spontini withdrew from the public eye for some time, but he greeted the return of the Bourbon kings in August 1814 with Pélage and he was restored for a time to the position at the Théâtre Italien which he had given up in 1812. After collaborating on the opera Les dieux rivaux (1816), written for the wedding of the heir to the throne, and achieving success with a new version of Fernand Cortez and an adaptation of Salieri's Les Danaïdes (both 1817), he obtained French naturalization in November 1817 and in May 1818 was granted a pension by the king.

As early as 1814, the King of Prussia had invited Spontini to Berlin. For some time he delayed making a decision, meanwhile composing a Preussischer Volksgesang, a grandiose hymn to the glory of Prussia, which, after its première in 1818, was performed each year until 1840 in celebration of the king's birthday. Finally he accepted the appointment in 1819, when his tacit hopes for a prominent position in the musical life of Paris were becoming increasingly nebulous and the production of Olimpie had run into various difficulties; it was eventually performed on 22 December 1819, when it was attacked by liberal reviewers. Spontini took up his position in Berlin on 1 February 1820.

3. 1820–42: Berlin. As the leading court musician, with the title of Generalmusikdirektor, Spontini was warmly welcomed by King Friedrich Wilhelm III and by many of the city's intellectuals such as E.T.A. Hoffmann. But he also came under attack, even more vigorously than he had during his last years in Paris. Leading critics expressed resentment at the status accorded to a foreigner, whom they despised as an interloper, drawing a contrast with the circumstances of Weber and the emerging German Romantic opera. In the musical running of the Hofoper, conflicts with the administrator Brühl (who had been opposed to Spontini's appointment) were inevitable, since their spheres of jurisdiction were never clearly delineated. Nevertheless, Spontini's three main Parisian works, La vestale, Fernand Cortez and Olimpie, were frequently performed, and he also won recognition as a conductor of the operas of other composers. His own creative rhythm, however, was slowing down. Of the operas he wrote in Berlin, all first performed on the occasion of royal weddings, neither Nurmahal (1822) nor Alcidor (1825) was popular with the general public, nor was Agnes von Hohenstaufen, although after the première of its first act on 28 May 1827 Spontini repeatedly revised it, as perseveringly as he had previously revised Fernand Cortez and Olimpie.

When Brühl left the Hofoper in 1828, Spontini, who had no aptitude for intrigue, became even more entangled in conflicts with his successor, Redern, and was the target of increasingly virulent attacks led by the critic Rellstab. Worse was to come after the king's death in June 1840. Some phrases in a statement Spontini had made (he was not proficient in German) led to his being accused of lèse majesté, and on 2 April 1841 the audience drove him out of the opera house after the overture to a performance of Don Giovanni. In July he was sentenced to nine months' imprisonment and dismissed from his post. However, in May 1842 Friedrich Wilhelm IV lifted the sentence, which had been confirmed by the court of appeal. He had already, in August 1841, guaranteed the continued payment of Spontini's salary despite his dismissal.

2. Alexandrine Branchu as Julia in the finale of Act 3 of Spontini's 'La vestale', Paris Opéra, 1807: engraving

4. 1842–51: RETURN TO ITALY. In 1842, as none of his previous hopes for a triumphant return to Paris had materialized, the embittered Spontini had to acknowledge that his day in France was long since over. In disregard of the facts, however, he ascribed the general lack of interest in his work entirely to intrigue, for which he held Meyerbeer chiefly responsible, and he took refuge in an exaggerated sense of self-esteem (satirized in Wagner's reminiscences of his visit to Dresden in November 1844). Notable among the many distinctions Spontini received in these years was his appointment by the pope to the title of Count of San Andrea on 21 January 1845. After some years spent alternately in Paris and travelling, he returned to his birthplace in the Papal States (to which he had already sent generous donations) in September 1850. In 1939, in recognition of the improvements Spontini had made possible, the town was renamed Maiolati Spontini.

5. WORKS. In Italy Spontini, like any other professional opera composer, had met the demand for new operas with scores that only occasionally add individual touches to the established style of Neapolitan opera around 1800. A gulf seems to separate this early phase from his later works. Although some of the early works already contain expressive accompanied recitatives, sforzati on unstressed beats and large-scale instrumental combinations, they hardly foreshadow the great qualitative stride the composer was to take in Paris.

In Paris, he began by writing works related to his opere buffe, such as La petite maison and Julie; but in Milton, an opera which, well before Berlioz's Benvenuto Cellini and Wagner's Tannhäuser, treats the issue of the artist's role in society, he revealed a high-minded attitude for which there is no precedent in his only serious opera before that date, Teseo riconosciuto. However, Spontini did not excite much attention until La vestale. In this work he succeeded in reviving the spirit of the tragédie lyrique of the Gluck era, retaining the pathetic declamatory style of that genre yet at the same time incorporating the characteristic pomp of many post-Revolutionary French operas, with their solemn hymns. He succeeded in combining rhetorical grandeur with a fundamentally Italian melodic style in which 'singability' is paramount. Yet his melodies are very restricted in their scope, and his harmony has been described, not without some justification, as crude (as is his sometimes mannered use of dotted rhythms and syncopated sforzati); yet his calculated use of relatively simple methods is always direct and effective. The salient characteristics of Spontini's style are no more adequately described by such details of compositional technique than they are explained as betraying the influence of (at isolated moments) Paisiello, Cimarosa, Cherubini, Méhul and, above all, Mozart (whom Spontini venerated all his life). The qualities that made him the most successful opera composer in the Paris of his day, besides involving him in stylistic contradictions that could never be fully resolved, must rather be described as entirely original.

Spontini's fondness for marches, for example, found as early as La vestale, has more than picturesque significance: the forward-thrusting character of the march rather pervades the dramaturgical aspect of his operas (with its carefully judged ebb and flow of tension), which regularly culminate in grandiose final tableaux. Like Gluck, Spontini preferred short and well-defined arias to solo numbers in several parts and used simple but gesturally clear instrumental motifs to achieve sharp characterization. These arias, however, like the rather casually handled recitatives in La vestale, are always subordinate to the formal dynamics which bring each act together as a unity. An important factor here was the récitatif obligé, which could become arioso; Spontini used it again and again to differentiate between heroic pathos and musico-dramatic vitality, while disregarding traditional forms. Another was the stretta finale as the musical culmination of an entire act, a feature previously unusual in French opera and originating in opera buffa.

3. Autograph MS of the beginning of Act 2 scene v of Spontini's 'Fernand Cortez', 1809 (F-Po Opéra Rés.A.418.a.II)

This dramatization of musical form, so successfully executed in the second act of La vestale, and the feeling for sharp contrasts through many lontano effects and in the use of opposed choruses – contrasts which dominated Spontini's work after Fernand Cortez – made him the first composer after Beethoven to find convincing expression for the perceptions of an age overtaken by the extraordinary dynamics of historical and military events. Despite this reinvigoration of the course of music drama Spontini, himself a political reactionary, clung to some of the neo-classical aesthetic of the 18th century, when only affairs of state were considered worthy of dramatic representation, and he was apt to allow the most complicated intrigue to peter out in the static divertissement of a lieto fine.

But although Spontini also amassed all available musical means, even in ballet and festal scenes extraneous to the plot, the hybrid idea of the Gesamtkunstwerk can already be discerned behind the monumental result. Even the much-derided appearance of 17 live horses in Fernand Cortez and three elephants in the 1821 Olimpia shows not just the uncritical use of spectacular developments taken over from other theatrical arts but also Spontini's unswerving determination to win for opera the kind of artistic status Beethoven had just procured for the symphony. Not least in his readiness to spend several years composing an opera – very unusual at the time – he showed a progressive outlook on opera as an ideal art form, one that was not fully accepted until Wagner's time, with claims to an absolute artistic value: an approach to his art that is not easy to reconcile with the office of court composer. With the contradictions of his Fernand Cortez, first devised in honour of Napoleon and repeatedly revised, Spontini was already paying the price for his

4. Temple of Diana at Ephesus (Act 1) from the second version ('Olimpia') of Spontini's 'Olimpie', Königliches Opernhaus, Berlin, 1821: engraving after design by Karl Friedrich Schinkel anachronistic ingratiation with artistically reactionary courts. The dramatization of events from more recent history would have been in line with the new interest in the historical novel, but Spontini was not ready to exploit the melodramatic effects of spectacular staging in the depiction of romantically flawed characters and the gradual unfolding of a complex plot. While the radical changes in the various versions of Fernand Cortez show that it was possible for him to shift individual arias, in Olimpie he turned his innovative energies entirely to the expression of delicate shades of feeling by the idealized characters. Olimpie, with its classical splendour, more in tune with the spirit of the Empire, was bound to appear old-fashioned to a public keen on the novels of Sir Walter Scott; and it was Spontini's misfortune that in Berlin he again came into open conflict with the sometimes provincial currents of German Romanticism, which rejected him as a royal favourite.

The move to exotically coloured magical themes in Nurmahal and Alcidor seemed, perhaps, to offer a way out. But, with his preference for aristocratic characters, his emphasis on the static qualities of his dramatic art in numerous tableaux vivants, and his recourse to italianate coloratura arias and aesthetic models from the opéra-féerie genre, Spontini increasingly distanced himself from an epoch which preferred to see the unreconciled co-existence of marked contrasts in all the arts. In the face of the emerging German national opera, these works were as little able to stake their claim as was Agnes von Hohenstaufen, which Spontini believed to be his greatest work but which like them was never performed beyond Berlin in the 19th century. In the finale of the second act of this, his last completed opera – still impressive for its monumental conception – he pursued the tendency, foreshadowed in Olimpie, to elevate spectacular coups de théâtre and finely chiselled contrasts into grand ensembles where opposing musical structures were piled one upon another, raising the art of ensemble to a peak never again reached in the 19th century.

Such techniques had been prefigured as early as his first Paris operas, although there they were confined to the orchestration. In contrast with most opera composers before Wagner, Spontini also cultivated a complex blend of sounds by the most extravagant means; his music was accordingly sometimes criticized as noisy. In Agnes von Hohenstaufen, for instance, he took particular pains over an invisible orchestra imitating the sound of the organ, whereas other composers made the organ itself a stage instrument. Even the use of anvils in a chorus in Alcidor (though taken from Pélage), which was denounced as the height of absurdity by hostile Berlin critics, makes them part of a complex sound combination.

Although Spontini's 20 years in Berlin represent a mere episode in the development of German opera, and his non-operatic works (occasional pieces for chorus and Romanzen) were as ephemeral as those of countless other early 19th-century composers, he was very important in the development of modern conducting. He was sternly fanatical in his insistence on rehearsals and on the musicians' unconditional submission to his authority (Marx, 1865, i, 223–4); he was one of the first conductors to use a baton; and his achievements in the production of a powerful orchestral sound are beyond dispute. Of his operas, however, only the French works had any immediate effects on operatic history. While the influence of his bold 'tableau' style can be seen most clearly in the grand opera of the 1830s, his further influence on the operatic composers of the following generation, from Rossini through Schubert, Weber and Meyerbeer to Wagner, can hardly be overestimated, although only Berlioz, who greatly admired Spontini, was ready to admit as much.

WORKS

OPERAS

title	genre, acts	libretto	first performance	sources, remarks
Li puntigli delle donne	farsetta per musica, 2		Rome, Pallacorda di Firenze, carn. 1796	*I-Nc
Il finto pittore			? Rome, 1797/8; Palermo, S Cecilia, 1800	lost

title	genre, acts	libretto	first performance	sources, remarks
Adelina Senese, o sia L'amore secreto	dramma giocoso, 2	G. Bertati: La principessa d'Amalfi	Venice, S Samuele, 10 Oct 1797	*US-NYbroude (Act 1)
L'eroismo ridicolo	farsa per musica, 1	D. Piccinni	Naples, Nuovo, carn. 1798	I-Nc
Teseo riconosciuto	dramma per musica, 2	C. Giotti	Florence, Intrepidi, 22 May 1798	Fc
La finta filosofa	commedia per musica, 2	?Piccinni	Naples, Nuovo, sum. 1799	3 arias Nc, lib. Bc; expanded from L'eroismo ridicolo
2nd version	dramma giocoso per musica, 3		Paris, Italien (Favart), 11 Feb 1804	D-Dl, US-Bp, excerpts (Paris, ?1804 and 1807)
La fuga in maschera	commedia per musica, 2	G. Palomba	Naples, Nuovo, carn. 1800
Gli Elisi delusi	melodramma buffo, 2	M. Monti	Palermo, S Cecilia, 28 Aug 1800	I-PLcon (ov. and Act 1), lib. PLcom
I quadri parlanti	melodramma buffo		Palermo, S Cecilia, 1800	lost
Gli amanti in cimento, o sia Il geloso audace	dramma giocoso, 2	?Bertati: Il geloso in cimento	Rome, Valle, 3 Nov 1801	lost
Le metamorfosi di Pasquale, o sia Tutto è illusione nel mondo	farsa giocosa per musica, 1	G. Foppa	Venice, S Samuele, carn. 1802	lost
La petite maison	oc, 3	A.M. Dieulafoy and N. Gersin	Paris, OC (Feydeau), 12 May 1804	A-Wn, GB-Lbl, excerpts (Paris, 1805)
Milton	fait historique, 1	E. de Jouy and Dieulafoy	Paris, OC (Favart), 27 Nov 1804	(Paris, ?1805)
Julie, ou Le pot de fleurs	comédie en prose, mêlée de chants, 1	A.G. Jars	Paris, OC (Favart), 12 March 1805	(Paris, ?1806); collab. E. Fay
La vestale	tragédie lyrique, 3	Jouy	Paris, Opéra, 15 Dec 1807	*Po; (Paris, ?1808/*R*1979: ERO, xlii)
Fernand Cortez, ou La conquête du Mexique	opéra, 3	Jouy and J.A. d'Esmenard, after A. Piron	Paris, Opéra, 28 Nov 1809	*Po; (Paris, ?1809)
2nd version	op, 3	rev. Jouy	Paris, Opéra, 28 May 1817	*US-Eu; (Paris, ?1817/R: ERO, xliii)
3rd version (as Ferdinand Cortez, oder Die Eroberung von Mexiko)	Oper, 3	rev. M. Théaulon de Lambert, trans. J.C. May	Berlin, Kgl Opernhaus, 6 April 1824	*F-Po, vs (Leipzig, ?1825)
4th version		rev. K. von Lichtenstein	Berlin, Kgl Opernhaus, 26 Feb 1832	music lost, lib. D-Bsb
Pélage, ou Le roi et la paix	opéra, 2	Jouy	Paris, Opéra, 23 Aug 1814	F-Po, vs [single nos.] (Paris, ?1814)
Les dieux rivaux, ou Les fêtes de Cythère	opéra-ballet, 1	Dieulafoy and C. Brifaut	Paris, Opéra, 21 June 1816	Po, excerpts (Berlin, n.d.); collab. Kreutzer, Persuis and H.-M. Berton
Olimpie	tragédie lyrique, 3	Dieulafoy and Brifaut, after Voltaire	Paris, Opéra, 22 Dec 1819	US-STu, vs (Paris, 1820)
2nd version (as Olimpia)	grosse Oper, 3	rev., trans. E.T.A. Hoffmann	Berlin, Kgl Opernhaus, 14 May 1821	vs (Berlin, ?1825)
3rd version (as Olimpie)	tragédie lyrique, 3		Paris, Opéra, 28 Feb 1826	*F-Po; (Paris, 1827/R 1980: ERO, xliv)
Lalla Rûkh	Festspiel	S.H. Spiker, after T. Moore: Lalla Rookh	Berlin, Kgl Schloss, 27 Jan 1821	vs (Berlin, ?1822)
Nurmahal, oder Das Rosenfest von Kaschmir	lyrisches Drama mit Ballet, 2	C.A. Herklots, after Moore: Lalla Rookh	Berlin, Kgl Opernhaus, 27 May 1822	D-Bsb, *F-Po, vs (Berlin, 1824); re-uses Grand Bacchanale (B-Lc, written for the revival of Salieri's Les Danaïdes, Paris, Opéra, 22 Oct 1817), parts of Lalla Rûkh and Les dieux rivaux
Alcidor	Zauber-Oper mit Ballet, 3	Théaulon de Lambert, after Rochon de Chabannes; Ger. trans. Herklots	Berlin, Opera, 23 May 1825	D-Bsb, *F-Po
Agnes von Hohenstaufen	lyrisches Drama, 2	E. Raupach	Berlin, Kgl Opernhaus, 28 May 1827 [Act 1 only]	A-Wn, *US-Wc (frag.)
2nd version	grosse historisch-romantische Oper, 3	Raupach	Berlin, Kgl Opernhaus, 12 June 1829	*Wc (inc.)
3rd version	grosse historisch-romantische Oper, 3	rev. Lichtenstein	Berlin, Kgl Opernhaus, 6 Dec 1837	D-Bsb, *F-Po

Doubtful: Chi più guarda meno vede, ? Florence, 1798, ? Venice, 1802 [existence uncertain]

OTHER DRAMATIC WORKS

L'eccelsa gara (cant., L. Balocchi), Paris, L'Impératrice (Salle Louvois), 8 Feb 1806, lost

Tout le monde a tort (vaudeville), Malmaison, 17 March 1806, F-Pn

Lalla Rûkh (Festspiel, S.H. Spicker, after T. Moore), Berlin, Royal Palace, 27 May 1822, vs (Berlin, ?1822)

Qui vive, qui spiro la bella che adoro, aria, cl obbl, I-Gl, in ?Fioravanti: Il furbo contro il furbo, Genoa, 1798

Sentimi, o padre amato, scena, aria, *Mc, in Anfossi: Sofronia ed Olindo, ? Palermo, 1800

Se non piange un infelice, aria; Immagini funeste, duet (both P. Metastasio; L'isola disabitata), sketches *F-Pn; Choron and

Fayolle (1811) mention an otherwise unrecorded performance of this libretto in Parma
Parlami Eurilla mia, duet, I-Nc, Mc; as Parla Chiarella mia, Nc, pubd with pf acc. (London, ?1806), as inserted in La serva astuta; as Parla Lisetta mia, in Spontini: Le metamorfosi di Pasquale
Grand Bacchanale, orch, in Salieri: Les danaïdes, Paris, Opéra, 22 Oct 1817, F-Po; arr. wind band (Paris, n.d.)

SONGS AND DUETS

published in Paris unless otherwise stated

Consiglio a Nice (Bordese), arietta (*c*1804)
Sensations douces, mélancoliques et douleureuses (*c*1804): 1 Toi dont l'amour, 2 Les graces, la beauté, 3 Vous n'êtes rien, 4 Viens o divine mélodie, 5 Jours fortunés, 6 Depuis l'instant affreux
3 romanze (*c*1804): 1 Chant du troubadour, 2 Etre aimé, 3 Les regrets
3 romances (*c*1805): 1 Le songe du prisonnier, 2 Le premier jour, 3 Romance
3 duos italiens (*c*1806): 1 Due bell'alme innamorati, 2 Ninfe, se liete vivar bramate, 3 Oh dio, non sdegnarti
Les adieux d'un jeune croisé (*c*1806)
Les riens d'amour (*c*1806)
Flambeau d'amour (*c*1811)
3 nocturnes (P. Metastasio), 2 solo vv (*c*1811), repr. as 3 Nocturni (Berlin, ?1836): 1 Fra tutte le pene, 2 Parto, si parto, 3 Basta, così intendo
La nouvelle Valentine: stances élégiaques sur la mort de ... Monseigneur le duc de Berry (1820)
Tout deuil: romance sur la mort du duc de Berry (1820)
Stances sur la mort de S.A.R. Mons. le duc de Berry (Desaugiers) (1820)
Les pleurs de Béarnais: romance sur la mort du Duc de Berry (Delagarde) (1820)
Mignon's Lied (J.W. von Goethe) (Berlin, ?1830)
4 romances (Berlin, *c*1831): 1 La petite sorcière, chansonette (Bétourné), 2 L'heureux gondolier, barcarolle, 3 Il reviendra, 4 Salut, vertes campagnes, nocturne, S, T
Zephir und die Träume (Berlin, n.d.)
6 oeuvres nouvelles (?1839): 1 Il faut mourir, 2 Le départ, 3 Le rêve d'Orient (Escudier), 4 Mignon (E. Deschamps, after Goethe), 5 Les regrets, 6 Arietta
L'adieu (1840)
Che non mi disse un di (Metastasio), arietta; Es blühte ein Blümchen (J.F.L. Duncker), romanza: both in Album neuer Original-Compositionen für Gesang und Piano (Berlin, *c*1840)
Spontini's Lebewohl an seine Freunde in Berlin (Spontini) (Berlin, 1842)
A quinze ans (Gayrard) (Berlin, *c*1840–50)
L'orphelin du malheur (Berlin, *c*1840–50)
Ben mio ricordati (Metastasio), in Les cantilènes: album de chant (n.d.)
La charité (*c*1855)
L'inconstance, Le retour (both n.d.); Canzonetta tarantina, S, bc, *c*1795, *F-Pn; La pêche de l'ambre: chant de Prusse orientale, duet, 1832, *D-Bsb; Ma dernière plainte au bord de mon tombeau, 1838, *F-Pn

CHORAL

Leta voce et fide vera, motetto pieno, S, S, T, 4vv, orch, *c*1794–5, parts I-Nc
Preussischer Volksgesang (Borussia) (J.F.L. Duncker), vv, orch, 1818 (Berlin, n.d.); arr. orch as Grosser Sieges- und Festmarsch (Berlin, n.d.)
Gebet, Duetto und Hymnus (cant.), solo vv, 6vv, orch, for visit of Tsar to Berlin, 1826, I-IE, inc.
Gott segne den König (cant., Herklotz), perf. Halle, 12 Sept 1829
An den Frieden, T, vv, orch, 1831
Les cimbres, chant de guerre, TTB, pf (Berlin, n.d.)
Begrüsst den Tag, Festhymne, 1840
Domine salvum fac regem nostrum, solo vv, chorus, org, vcs, dbs, for coronation of Friedrich Wilhelm IV, 1840, IE, inc.
Jesu Christe Domine, offertory, male vv, double chorus, org (Paris, 1854)
Domine Jesu, 3vv, vv, org (Paris, n.d.)

INSTRUMENTAL

Notturno, orch, Naples, 1795, *F-Pn
Ballo marziale, military band: 1 Evoluzioni militari, 2 Preludio ai combattimenti ed alla vitto sulria campo di Marte, I-Mc
Geschwindmarsch, military band, in Sammlung von Märschen für türkische Musik zum bestimmten Gebrauch der königlichen preussischen Armée (Berlin, n.d.)
4 Fackeltänze, for Prussian royal weddings, 1822, 1823, 1825, 1829, orch (Berlin, n.d.); all 4 arr. pf (Berlin, n.d.)
Les charmes d'un fête, divertissement, pf (Vienna, n.d.)

PEDAGOGICAL WORKS

Ristretto di esercizi per apprendere la maniera di cantare, *F-Pn

WRITINGS

Rapporto intorno alla riforma della musica sacra (MS, 1838, I-Rsc); see also A. Bassi: 'Gaspare Spontini e la riforma della musica di chiesa', Revista internationale di musica sacra, xv (1994), 271–9 with H. Berton and M. Carafa: Reconstruction de la Salle Favart: observations à MM. les membres de la Chambre des députés (Paris, *c*1839)
Opinion de M. Spontini sur les changements à introduire dans le règlement du concours de grand prix de composition musicale tels qu'ils avaient été proposés par le même académicien et adoptés par la commission spéciale designée par l'académie (Paris, n.d.) [written Aug 1839]
'Rapport à l'Académie royale des beaux arts de l'Institut de France', pr. in J.G. Prod'homme and A. Dandelot: Gounod (1818–1893): sa vie et ses oeuvres (1911/R), i, 253ff [report, dated 17 Sept 1841, on Gounod's Prix de Rome compositions]
Mes propositions pour la réorganisation des musiques militaires de France (n.p., 1850) [written 1845]

BIBLIOGRAPHY

LETTERS AND DOCUMENTS

Des dramatischen Leib-Compositeurs, kgl.-preuss. General-Musikdirectors ... Herrn Ritters Gasparo Spontini Klagen über den Verfall der dramatischen Musik (Leipzig, 1837) [anonymous pamphlet]
[G.K.F.] Kunowski: Vertheidigungsschrift zweiter Instanz in Sachen wider ... Herrn Ritter Spontini (Berlin, 1841)
J.S. Shedlock: 'Letters from Weber to the Abbé Vogler and to Spontini', Studies in Music by Various Authors, ed. R. Grey (London, 1901), 233–51
J.-G. Prod'homme: 'Spontini et Ch. Gounod', ZIMG, xi (1909–10), 325–8
J. Tiersot: 'Lettres de musiciens écrites en français du XVe au XXe siècle', RMI, xxi (1914), 52–85; pubd separately (Turin, 1924), 363–98
R. Sassi: 'Lettere inedite di Gaspare Spontini', NA, xii (1935), 165–83
M. Pincherle: Musiciens peints par eux-mêmes: lettres de compositeurs écrites en français (1771–1910) (Paris, 1939), 64–72
A. Belardinelli: Documenti spontiniani inediti (Florence, 1955)
F. Schlitzer: Frammenti biografici di Gaspare Spontini con lettere inedite, Quaderni dell'Accademia Chigiana, xxiii (Siena, 1955)
F. Schlitzer: Circonstanze della vita di Gaspare Spontini con lettere inedite, Quaderni dell'Accademia Chigiana, xxxvii (Siena, 1958)
G. Gaetti, ed.: Epistolario familiare e documenti vari dal 1774 and 1851 di Gaspare Spontini (Maiolati Spontini, 1974)
P. Citron, ed.: Hector Berlioz Correspondance générale, iii (Paris, 1978), 134, 138–9, 355–7, 385–6
G. Gaetti, ed.: Céleste Erard, dolce sposa di Gaspare Spontini: epistolario (Maiolati Spontini, 1978)

MEMOIRS

A. Gathy: 'Berlioz über Spontini', Neue Berliner Musikzeitung, v (1851,), 88–90, 97–8
A.B. Marx: Erinnerungen: aus meinem Leben (Berlin, 1865), i, 218–58, ii, 1–17
H. Dorn: 'Ritter Gasparo Spontini', Aus meinem Leben: musikalische Skizzen (Berlin, 1870–86), iii, 1–34
R. Wagner: 'Erinnerungen an Spontini', Gesammelte Schriften, v (Leipzig, 1872), 109–32
R. Wagner: Mein Leben (Munich, 1911), 331–47

GENERAL

FétisB
J.-M.-B. Bins de Saint-Victor: Réflexions d'un amateur sur l'opéra 'La vestale' (Rouen, 1809)
E.T.A. Hoffmann: 'G. Spontini: Lalla Rükh', Zeitung für Theater und Musik (24 Feb 1821); 'Nachträgliche Bemerkungen über Spontinis Oper Olympia', ibid. (9, 16, 23 and 30 June, 14, 21 and 28 July, 4, 18 and 25 Aug, 1, 8 and 22 Sept 1821); repr. in Schriften zur Musik, ed. F. Schnapp (Munich, 1981), 338–95

L. Rellstab: Über mein Verhältnis als Kritiker zu Herrn Spontini als Komponisten und Generalmusikdirektor in Berlin (Leipzig, 1827)
A.B. Marx: 'Eine Betrachtung über den heutigen Zustand der deutschen Oper, angeknüpft an Nurmahal von Spontini und Oberon von Weber', Caecilia, vii (1828), 135–82
C.F. Müller: Spontini und Rellstab: einige Worte zur Beherzigung der Parteien (Berlin, 1833)
E.M. Oettinger: Spontini (Leipzig, 1843)
H. Berlioz: 'Spontini: esquisse biographique', Soirées de l'orchestre (Paris, 1852; Eng. trans., 1965) [12th and 13th soirées]
D. Raoul-Rochette: 'Notice historique sur la vie et les ouvrages de M. Spontini', Institut national de France: Académie des beaux-arts, séance publique annuelle du … 2 octobre 1852 (Paris, 1852)
W.H. Riehl: 'Der musikalische Dramatiker des französischen Kaiserthums: Gasparo Spontini', Musikalische Charakterköpfe: ein kunstgeschichtliches Studienbuch, i (Stuttgart, 1853), 181–204
[W. Neumann]: Gaspare Spontini: eine Biographie (Kassel, 1855)
F. Poland: Die Musik eine Sprache, am Beispiel von Spontini's Vestalin erläutert (Dresden, 1870)
A. Jullien: 'Les Commencements de Spontini (1774–1807)', Chronique musicale, x (1875), 31–43, 59–71
A. Moretti: Vita di Gaspare Spontini (Imola, 1875)
T. de Lajarte: 'Spontini: La vestale et Fernand Cortez: histoire de ces deux ouvrages', Curiosités de l'Opéra (Paris, 1883), 133–83
C. Robert: Gasparo Luigi Pacifico Spontini: eine biographische Skizze (Berlin, 1883)
P. Spitta: 'Spontini in Berlin', Zur Musik (Berlin, 1892), 291–353
W. Altmann: 'Spontini an der Berliner Oper: eine archivalische Studie', SIMG, iv (1902–3), 242–92
A. Pougin: 'Les dernières années de Spontini', RMI, xxix (1922), 54–80, 236–63
A. Maecklenburg: 'Der Fall Spontini-Weber: ein Beitrag zur Vorgeschichte der Berliner Erstaufführung der Euryanthe', ZMw, vi (1923–4), 449–65
C. Bouvet: Spontini (Paris, 1930)
K. Schubert: Spontinis italienische Schule (Strasbourg, 1932)
W. Wahle: 'Ferdinand Cortez von Spontini als Vorbild zu Wagners Rienzi', AMz, lxvi (1939), 3–4
G. Abraham: 'The Best of Spontini', ML, xxiii (1942), 163–71
A. Ghislanzoni: Gaspare Spontini: studio storico-critico (Rome, 1951)
Studi spontiniani: Iesi, Maiolati, Fabriano, Ancona 1951
P. Fragapane: Spontini (Bologna, 1954, 2/1983)
L. Ronga: 'L'Agnese di Hohenstaufen di Spontini e l'Euryanthe di Weber', RMI, lvi (1954), 247–57
Studi spontiniani: Firenze 1954
H. Engel: 'Wagner und Spontini', AMw, xii (1955), 167–77
H. Mueller von Asow: 'Gasparo Spontinis Briefwechsel mit Wolfgang von Goethe', Chronik des Wiener Goethe-Vereins, lxi (1957), 42–58
F. Schlitzer: La finta filosofa di Gaspare Spontini (Naples, 1957)
F. Schnapp: 'E.T.A. Hoffmanns Textbearbeitung der Oper Olimpia von Spontini', Jb des Wiener Goethe-Vereins, lxvi (1962), 126–43
P. Fragapane: 'Spontini e la sua Julie (1805)', Chigiana, new ser., v (1968), 253–63
D.A. Libby: Gaspare Spontini and his French and German Operas (diss., Princeton U., 1969)
A. Vander Linden: 'Notes de Madame Gaspare Spontini sur la vie et l'oeuvre de son mari', RMB, xxviii–xxx (1974–6), 222–37
E.J. Dent: The Rise of Romantic Opera (Cambridge, 1976), 95–109
D. Libby: 'Spontini's Early French Operas', MT, cxvii (1976), 23–4
S. Döhring: 'Spontinis Berliner Opern', in C. Dahlhaus, ed.: Studien zur Musikgeschichte Berlins im frühen 19. Jahrhundert (Regensburg, 1980), 469–89
N. Miller: 'Der musikalische Freiheitskrieg gegen Gaspare Spontini', Preussen: dein Spree-Athen, ed. H. Kühn (Reinbek bei Hamburg, 1981), 200–27
J. Joly: 'Les ambiguités de la guerre napoléonienne dans Fernand Cortez de Spontini', La bataille, l'armée et la gloire: Clermont-Ferrand 1983, 239–54
Studi spontiniani: Maiolati Spontini, Iesi 1983
R.S. Ridgway: 'Voltairian bel canto: Operatic Adaptations of Voltaire's Tragedies', Studies on Voltaire and the Eighteenth Century, no.241 (1986), 125–54
M. Walter: 'Hoffmann und Spontini: zum Problem der romantischen Oper', E.T.A. Hoffmann et la musique, ed. A. Montandon (Berne, 1987), 85–119
G. Buschmeier: Die Entwicklung von Arie und Szene in der französischen Oper von Gluck bis Spontini (Tutzing, 1991)
M. Walter: 'La Vestale de Gaspare Spontini ou Les débuts de l'histoire de l'opéra au XIXe siècle', Le théâtre lyrique en France au XIXe siècle, ed. P. Prévost (Metz, 1995), 63–79
A. Zecca Laterza, ed.: Catalogo tematico delle opere di Spontini (Maiolati Spontini, forthcoming)

ANSELM GERHARD

Spontone, Alessandro (b Bologna, bap. 1 June 1549; d Bologna, *c*1590). Italian composer and musician, brother of BARTOLOMEO SPONTONE. After studies with his brother, he held at least two appointments: from 1569 until 1581 he was a member of the Concerto Palatino of the senate of Bologna and probably from 1582 until 1587 he was maestro di cappella of Forlì Cathedral. He earned at least local regard as a practical musician, for Ercole Bottrigari, whose friend he was, referred to him as 'assai buon musico pratico'.

WORKS

Il primo libro de [13] madrigali, 5, 6vv (Venice, 1585)
2 canzoni, 1582^{13}; 1 canzone, 1582^{14}; 1 madrigal, 1590^{13}

BIBLIOGRAPHY

MGG1 (O. Mischiati)
E. Bottrigari: Il Trimerone de' fondamenti armonici (MS, 1599, I-Bc B.44), f.137*v*–8*r*
G. Gaspari: 'Dei musicisti bolognesi al XVI secolo e delle loro opere a stampa', Atti e memorie della R. Deputazione di storia patria per le provincie di Romagna, 2nd ser., i (1875); repr. in Musica e musicisti a Bologna (Bologna, 1969), 334
O. Gambassi: La cappella musicale di S. Petronio: maestri, organisti, cantori e strumentisti dal 1436 al 1920 (Florence, 1987), 10, 74ff

FRANK TIRRO/MARC VANSCHEEUWIJCK

Spontone, Bartolomeo (b Bologna, bap. 22 Aug 1530; d Treviso, ?1592). Italian composer and singer, brother of ALESSANDRO SPONTONE. He was a pupil of Nicolò Mantovano, maestro del canto of S Petronio, Bologna, and continued his musical education with Giaches de Ponte and Morales in Rome. His own most famous pupil was Ercole Bottrigari; he also taught his brother Alessandro. He sang in the choir of S Petronio in 1551–2. From 1553 to 1582 he was a member of the Concerto Palatino of the senate of Bologna and apparently held other posts simultaneously. He was elected maestro del canto of S Petronio in May 1577 and held the post until May 1583. He was maestro di cappella at S Maria Maggiore, Bergamo, from 17 December 1584 to 5 July 1586, at Verona Cathedral from 25 June 1586 to April 1588, and at Treviso Cathedral in 1591–2. The inclusion of his madrigals in many of the most important contemporary anthologies suggests that his contemporaries held his music in high regard. The lack of a complete edition of his works makes it hard to assess his achievement, but of his few works in modern editions, the six-part Missa 'Così estrema è la doglia' displays rich harmonic writing in the context of superb contrapuntal craft. The Ciro Spontone who edited his madrigal collection of 1583 was his elder son.

WORKS

Il primo libro di madrigali, 4vv (Venice, 1558)
Il primo libro de madrigali et canzoni, con uno dialogo, 5, 8vv (Venice, 1561), inc.
Il secondo libro de madrigali, con una canzone, 5vv (Venice, 1567), inc.
Libro terzo de madrigali, 5vv, ed. C. Spontone (Venice, 1583)
Missarum, 5–6, 8vv, liber primus (Venice, 1588); Missa 'Così estrema è la doglia', ed. in AMI, ii (1897/R)
2 madrigals each in 1568^{12}, 1586^{12}, 1590^{13}; 1 madrigal each in 1566^{17}, 1568^{19}, 1570^{15}, 1576^{5}, 1577^{7}, 1582^{5}, 1584^{4}, 1585^{19}, 1586^{1}, 1586^{9}, 1590^{17}, 1590^{20}, 1592^{13}, 1592^{15}, 1593^{3}, 1594^{6}, 1597^{13}; 8 madrigals, I-Mc

1 villotta in 1557[18]; 1 greghesca in 1564[16], ed. S. Cisilino, Celebri raccolte musicali venete del cinquecento, i (Padua, 1974); 2 dialogues in 1590[11]

1 motet in 1615[2]; 6 motets, 8 psalms, A-Wn; 1 motet, I-TVd

BIBLIOGRAPHY

MGG1 (O. Mischiati)

G. Gaspari: 'Memorie riguardanti la storia dell'arte musicale in Bologna al XVI secolo', Atti e memorie della R. Deputazione di storia patria per le provincie di Romagna, 2nd ser., i (1875); repr. in Musica e musicisti a Bologna (Bologna, 1969), 186ff

G. D'Alessi: La cappella musicale del Duomo di Treviso (1300–1633) (Vedelago, 1954), 136–8, 217

A.F. Carver: The Development of Sacred Polychoral Music to the Time of Schütz (Cambridge, 1987), 206, 251–3

O. Gambassi: La cappella musicale di S. Petronio: maestri, organisti, cantori e strumentisti dal 1436 al 1920 (Florence, 1987), 10, 74ff

FRANK TIRRO

Spontoni, Ludovico (b Bologna, bap. 2 March 1555; d Bologna, before 1609). Italian composer and priest. Son of Costanzo and grandson of Benedetto Spontoni, he may have been related to the composers Alessandro and Bartolomeo Spontone, who were active in Bologna at the same time. He studied in Forlì and called himself 'da Forlì' in the dedication of his madrigal collection of 1586, but he was certainly born in Bologna. In his madrigals text-expressive devices are woven into the texture so that they do not break the smooth flow of the part-writing. His motets are for double chorus and continuo.

WORKS

Il primo libro de madrigali, 5vv (Venice, 1586)

Mottetti, libro secondo, 8vv, bc (Venice, 1609)

2 motets in 1611[1], 1612[3]

FRANK TIRRO

Sponza, Francesco. See USPER, FRANCESCO.

Sponza, Gabriele. See USPER, GABRIELE.

Spoof articles. Many dictionaries of music (and presumably other topics) contain articles on fictitious characters. Most people who have written a large number of dictionary articles on minor figures must have felt tempted in a moment of understandable frustration to add an extra jeu d'esprit; sometimes they even submit these articles, which are occasionally printed. Some of those that circulated among the Grove6 editorial staff are printed (in MT, cxxii, 1981, pp.89–91): apparently the article 'Verdi, Lasagne' was nearly sent for printing. So far as has been established, only two actually appeared in Grove6 (eliminated after the first printing): 'Esrum-Hellerup, Dag Henrik' and 'Baldini, Guglielmo'.

The latter originated in Riemann12 (1959, with additions in the Ergänzungsband, 1972), playing on the name of its editor Wilibald Gurlitt; the Grove entry added an item of bibliography credited to L.L. Ubaldi Gritti, an anagram of the same name with one letter missing (perhaps it was edited out). The most famous of all is in the first Ergänzungsband of the same dictionary, 'Jägermeier, Otto', the work of Egon Voss and extensively explored in a Festschrift for Voss's 40th birthday (see review in Mf, xxxii, 1979, pp.439–40) as well in as a group of articles about Jägermeier in the Neue Zeitschrift für Musik. Another, going back further in time, is a 14th-century theorist invented by Hugo Riemann and fully explained in H. Besseler: 'Ugolini de Maltero Thuringi "De cantu fractabili": ein scherzhafter Traktat von Hugo Riemann', AcM, xli (1969), 107–8. Besseler was demonstrably wrong to suggest that the entry in Riemann12 (see also the Ergänzungsband, 1975) was innocent; but the articles on both Ugolino and Jägermeier in DEUMM (1990) look solemn enough. The entries on P.D.Q. Bach and Baldini in MGG2 are plainly intended to continue the joke.

The earliest spoof in a musical dictionary may be the entry for 'Bergier, Ungay' in Eitner's Quellenlexikon; the wording is solemn, but it is hard to imagine that Eitner did not recognize the title of Crecquillon's most successful chanson.

Spoof articles are deceptively easy to do. Many articles in Grove and elsewhere are based entirely on unpublished material, and many cite only rare local publications: the item on Baldini was reported as being in the Archiv für Freiburger Diözesangeschichte, which would (even if it exists) be hard to verify in London and hard to check at all without inquiries to libraries in both places called Freiburg (alongside, for safety, Fribourg) – plainly not tasks for which subeditors are employed unless they have reason to distrust the author.

Moreover, there are plenty of bona fide musicians whose names and lives look like outrageous fiction. One need only mention Gnocchi, who became maestro di cappella at Brescia Cathedral at the age of 85, composed a Magnificat entitled 'Il capo di buona speranza' (alongside many other works with improbable titles) and wrote an unpublished 25-volume history of ancient Greek colonies in the East (the long MGG article even includes a suitably lugubrious portrait). Another case is Pietro Raimondi, composer of three full-length oratorios that could be performed separately or simultaneously, as well as several groups of up to six fugues that could also be played simultaneously despite being in different keys and modes. Library catalogues confirm the existence of both. While such men exist in the history of music, spoofs may seem superfluous.

DAVID FALLOWS

Sporck, Count Franz Anton (b Lysá nad Labem or Heřmanův Městec, Bohemia, 9 March 1662; d Lysá nad Labem, 30 March 1738). Bohemian nobleman, literatus and patron of the arts. A member of one of the most prominent noble families in Bohemia, he was appointed in 1690 to a seat on the Statthalterei (the highest civil authority within the province) by Emperor Leopold I, but served actively only until about 1710. Reports that he served as viceroy of Bohemia are false; no such post existed.

The scope of Sporck's artistic and literary patronage was impressive, encompassing architecture, sculpture, painting, graphic arts, theatre and German poetry. He also took a keen interest in theology and philosophy, even setting up his own printing press to propagate his views. He occasionally sponsored the publication of music as well, principally collections of German and Czech sacred songs. Beginning in the late 17th century, he maintained a modest musical establishment used chiefly to provide dance music, sacred music and music for theatrical performances at his residences in Prague and Kuks.

Sporck considered his patronage of Italian opera to be one of the greatest contributions he made to the cultural life of Bohemia. The impetus for this enterprise came from Antonio Maria Peruzzi, an Italian impresario who seems to have approached Sporck with the idea of providing operatic entertainment for summer guests at his estate of Kuks with a company of musicians Peruzzi had contracted in Venice in May 1724. Sporck found the idea attractive, and the performances at Kuks proved so successful that he remodelled the theatre in one of his Prague palaces in order to permit regular operatic performances. In autumn 1724, Antonio Denzio took over control of the Italian troupe in Prague and put on productions at the Sporck theatre until 1735, thus making it the first standing opera house in Prague. Although located in one of the Sporck palaces, it functioned essentially as a public theatre on the Venetian model; Sporck provided no financial support, took no part in its operation, and rarely even attended its performances after the death of his wife in 1726. The Sporck theatre became an important satellite of the Venetian operatic world that attracted many distinguished Italian musicians to Prague, among them Vivaldi. Its foundation led directly to similar operatic ventures in Breslau in 1725 and Brno in 1732.

Partly as an aspect of his passion for hunting, Sporck played a vital role in fostering traditions of horn playing in central Europe. Horn music was always prominent in Sporck's household after he had the opportunity to hear the French hunting horn (cor de chasse) at the court of Versailles during a grand tour of Europe about 1680. Two retainers he had trained to play the instrument are credited with helping to disseminate the skill throughout Bohemia and Austria. One of Sporck's favourite hunting tunes, the 'Brandeiser Jägerlied', is quoted literally in the horn part of the bass aria no.16 in Bach's Peasant Cantata BWV212. An autograph score of the Sanctus of Bach's B-minor mass (in D-Bsb) contains a note in Bach's hand indicating that the corresponding parts were at one time 'in Böhmen bei Graff Sporck'. Nonetheless, the long-held suspicion of personal connections between the two is not confirmed in any surviving documents from the Sporck household.

Sporck's great-nephew, Count Johann Wenzel von Sporck (1724–1804), was an important figure in the musical life of Prague and Vienna. A skilled cellist, he made his home in Prague an important meeting-place for musicians, and in 1803 became the first sponsor of the Prague Tonkünstler-Sozietät. Earlier, between 1764 and 1775, he had been director of music and theatre at the imperial court in Vienna as successor to Count Durazzo. In this capacity his refusal to commission new opéras-comiques for the court helped bring to an end a great period of their cultivation in Vienna, but it also contributed to a strengthening of German operatic traditions.

For illustration see CZECH REPUBLIC, fig.2.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ČSHS; DlabačžKL; GerberL; WurzbachL

O. Teuber: Geschichte des Prager Theaters, i (Prague, 1883), 111–45

G.E. Pazaurek: Franz Anton Reichsgraf von Sporck und seine Lieblingsschöpfung Kukus (Leipzig, 1901)

J. Krupka: 'F.A. Sporck a jeho opera v Praha a v Kuksu', Dalibor, xxxix (1922–3), 77–9, 89–91, 105–7, 145–7; xl (1923–4), 15–17, 113–15, 125–8

H. Benedikt: Franz Anton Graf von Sporck (Vienna, 1923)

K. Tříska: Frantisek Antonín hrabě Spork (Prague, 1938)

P. Nettl: 'F.A. Sporcks Beziehungen zur Musik', Mf, vi (1953), 324–35

R. Quoika: Die Musik der Deutschen in Böhmen und Mähren (Berlin, 1956)

T. Volek and M. Skalická: 'Vivaldis Beziehungen zu den böhmischen Ländern', AcM, xxxix (1967), 64–72

H. Fitzpatrick: The Horn and Horn-Playing and the Austro-Bohemian Tradition from 1680 to 1830 (London, 1970) [also review by A.C. Baines, ML, lii (1971), 438–41]

J. Hůlek: 'Franz Anton Sporck und die Musik', Postylla Bohemica, Vierteljahrschrift der Kostanzer Hus-Gesellschaft, ii–iii (1972–3), 3–42

D. Líbal and L. Lancinger: 'Šporkovský palác v Hybernské ulicí v Praze' [The Sporck palace in Hybernská street, Prague], Umění, xxi (1973), 65–73

P. Preiss: Boje s dvouhlavou saní: František Antonín Špork a barokní kultura v Čechách [Struggles with a two-headed dragon: Franz Anton Sporck and Baroque culture in Bohemia] (Prague, 1981)

Das Waldhorn in der Geschichte und Gegenwart der tschechischen Musik: Brno 1981

D.E. Freeman: 'Antonio Vivaldi and the Sporck Theater in Prague', Janáček and Czech Music: St Louis 1988, 117–40

K. Janetzky and B. Brüchle: The Horn, trans. James Chater (Portland, Ore., 1988), 36–8

J. Berkovec: 'František Antonín Špork a jeho kapela' [Franz Anton Sporck and his musical establishment], HV, xxvi (1989), 32–40

D.E. Freeman: 'A Vivaldi Document Rediscovered', HV, xxvi (1989), 134–41

D.E. Freeman: The Opera Theater of Count Franz Anton von Sporck in Prague (Stuyvesant, NY, 1992)

D.E. Freeman: 'The Foundation of Italian Operatic Traditions in Prague', Il melodramma italiano in Italia e in Germania nell'età Barocca: Como 1993, 115–25

DANIEL E. FREEMAN

Sporer [Sporrer, Spohrer], Thomas (b Freiburg, *c*1490; d ?Strasbourg, 1534). German composer. On 27 February 1506 he matriculated at Freiburg University. He may have been a son of Heinrich Sporer, who in 1482 was living in Strasbourg, or of Sebastian Sporer, who was a drummer in the Innsbruck court chapel from 1478 to 1479. Sporer may have taught Matthias Greiter and Johannes Heugel, who also studied at Freiburg. By 1513 Sporer had married and was living at Lindau am Bodensee. On 11 October 1523 the senate of Freiburg University appointed him warden of a student hostel. He appears subsequently to have lived in Strasbourg and to have died there; a five-part Epicedion Thomae Sporeri, composed by Sixt Dietrich (Strasbourg, 1534), contains the names only of Strasbourg humanists. Heugel also wrote two epitaphs in 1534 on the death of Sporer. The artistic brilliance attributed to Sporer in the Epicedion is difficult to comprehend, judging by the few compositions of his that survive (a three-voice motet and eight songs, ed. H.J. Moser, Thomas Sporer: die erhaltenen Werke des Alt-Strassburger Meisters, Kassel, 1929). Nonetheless, some of his songs have a very individual style, influenced by the French chanson, which sets him apart from other German composers active at that time.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. Eitner: 'Das alte deutsche mehrstimmige Lied und seine Meister', MMg, xxvi (1894), 1–135, esp. 48

M. Vogeleis: Quellen und Bausteine zu einer Geschichte der Musik und des Theaters im Elsass 500–1800 (Strasbourg, 1911)

W. Gurlitt: 'Johannes Kotter und sein Freiburger Tabulaturbuch von 1513', Elsass-Lothringisches Jb, xix (1941), 216

A.E. Harter-Böhm: Zur Musikgeschichte der Stadt Freiburg im Breisgau um 1500 (Freiburg, 1968), 77–8

HANS-CHRISTIAN MÜLLER/STEPHEN KEYL

Sportonio, Marc'Antonio ['Il Bolognese'] (b ?Bologna, *c*1631; d ?Palermo, after 1696). Italian soprano castrato and composer. He was a pupil of Carissimi at the Collegio Germanico, Rome, from July 1644 (the libretto of his opera Elena calls him 'romano'), and in 1645 he nominally entered the service of the Duke of Modena as a mezzo-soprano. In that capacity he went to Paris with Venanzio Leopardi at the end of 1646 to take part in the performance of Luigi Rossi's Orfeo (spring 1647); he remained there in the service of the French queen-regent. From 1653 he was at Palermo: in that year he sang in an 'attione tragica', Costantino (Collegio Massimo dei Gesuiti, Palermo; stage music by G.B. Fasolo). In 1655, with other Palermo singers, the 'Musici accademici sconcertati', he organized the first opera performance there, Cavalli's Giasone, in which he sang the comic role of Delfa. He was the leading figure in public theatre life at Palermo (where women's voices were introduced rather late). From at least 1655 he was a member of the vice-regal Cappella Palatina, Palermo. In Carnival 1661 he appeared as the composer of Elena (text by N. Minato; music originally by Cavalli). La Flavia imperatrice (text by F. Beverini), was performed at the theatre of the impresario Pietro Rodino in March 1669: payments are documented for him as contralto (1655 and 1656) and as soprano (1660, 1662, 1664, 1674 and 1685). In 1696 a Giovanni Maria Rossi, soprano, was engaged as Sportonio's substitute because of the latter becoming 'muy anciano y achacoso'. During Carnival 1661 he appeared as the composer of Elena (text by Minatio; music originally by Cavalli). La Flavia Imperatrice (text by F. Beverini) was performed at the theatre of the impresario Pietro Rodino in March 1669; in 1675 he signed the libretto of Caligola and in 1678 composed one of the few operas of local origin, La Fiordispina, to a text by the Palermo writer Antonio Salamone (it was repeated at court in February 1680 and at the Teatro S Bartolomeo, Naples, in Carnival 1683). Sportonio used his international theatrical experience at the court of the viceroy: in February 1659 he sang, in a flying carriage, the introduction to a dancing festivity. He was a friend of the Scarlatti family (he was a witness to the marriage of the parents of Alessandro on 5 May 1658) and among the first members of the 'Unione dei musici' of Palermo in 1679–80. Two of his cantatas (or arias) survive in manuscript (in GB-Och).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. Pagano: 'La vita musicale a Palermo e nella Sicilia del Seicento', NRMI, iii (1969), 439–66

T.D. Culley: Jesuits and Music, i: a Study of the Musicians Connected with the German College in Rome during the 17th Century and of their Activities in Northern Europe (Rome, 1970), 219, 226

L. Bianconi: 'Funktionen des Operntheaters in Neapel bis 1700 und die Rolle Alessandro Scarlattis', Alessandro Scarlatti: Würzburg 1975, 13–111

L. Bianconi and T. Walker: 'Dalla Finta pazza alla Veremonda: storie di Febiarmonici', RIM, x (1975), 397–454, esp. 393, 404

R. Pagano: Scarlatti Alessandro e Domenico: due vite in una (Milan, 1985), 16, 18–20, 22, 46, 63, 461

G. Donato: 'Su alcuni aspetti della vita musicale in Sicilia nel Seicento', La musica a Napoli durante il Seicento (Rome, 1987), 563–623

A. Tedesco: Il Teatro Santa Cecilia e il Seicento musicale palermitano (Palermo, 1992), 22, 27, 41, 44–50, 52, 246, 258, 261–4

LORENZO BIANCONI (with ROBERTO PAGANO)

Spratlan, Lewis (b Miami, FL, 5 Sept 1940). American composer. He studied at Yale University (BA 1962, MM 1965) under Powell and Schuller, and attended seminars with Rochberg and Sessions at the Berkshire Music Center (1966). His numerous honours include an NEA grant (1976), a Guggenheim Fellowship (1980–81) and top prizes in the Alvin Etler Memorial and Rockefeller Foundation-New England Conservatory Opera competitions (1974 and 1979, respectively). In addition he has been awarded several residencies at the MacDowell Colony. After teaching at Pennsylvania State University, Spratlan joined the music faculty of Amherst College, Massachusetts, in 1970. While primarily a composer, he has also been active as a conductor and as an oboist.

Spratlan's compositions span all genres and reflect an enormous variety of cross-cultural influences. His style draws not only upon the traditional western European musical heritage ranging from chant to modernists such as Schoenberg, Stockhausen and Ligeti, but also upon the musics of other cultures, particularly those of southern India and Latin America. The influence of composers like Musorgsky and Skryabin, jazz musicians including Monk, Mingus, Davis and Coltrane, and minimalists such as Reich can be heard as well. His style has been praised for its dramatic effect and vivid colour. While his works up to the mid-1970s reflect a deep sympathy with the music of the Second Viennese School, the opera Life is a Dream (1975–7) marks a shift towards a new degree of harmonic clarity and stasis, melodic repetition and a concern for changes in harmonic rhythm as a principal means of formal articulation. The chamber work Coils (1980) received widespread attention for its inclusion of the 'terpsiptomaton' (literally, 'delight in falling mechanism'), a hybrid string/piano/percussion instrument invented and assembled by the composer from wrought iron coils and rods, piano strings and cartridges containing ball bearings. His music from the 1980s and 90s has become increasingly inclusive in style, often making references to jazz and other pop musics as well as various non-Western traditions, with each serving as a kind of expressive entity within the larger mosaic-like musical fabric. The Apollo and Daphne Variations (1987), In Memoriam (1993) and the Concertino for violin and chamber ensemble (1995) are major representative works. In 2000 Spratlan was awarded a Pulitzer Prize for Music for his opera Life is a Dream.

WORKS

Stage: Unsleeping City (dance music), dancers, ob, tpt, vn, 3 perc, 1967; Life is a Dream (op, 3, P. Calderón), 1975–7

Orch: 2 Pieces, 1971; Apollo and Daphne Variations, 1987; Penelope's Knees, double conc., a sax, db, chbr orch, 1987; Concertino, vn, chbr ens, 1995

Chbr and solo inst: Flange, 2 fl, 2 cl, 2 tpt, 2 trbn, tuba, db, 3 perc, pf, 1965; Serenade, fl, cl, hn, vc, hp, pf, 1970; Trope-Fantasy, ob, eng hn, hpd, 1970; Diary Music I, ww, str qt, perc, 1971; Summer Music, ob, hn, vn, vc, pf, 1971; Ww Qnt, 1971; Dance Suite, cl, vn, gui, hpd, 1973; Fantasy, pf, chbr ens, 1973; Chiasmata, 10-str gui, 1979; Cornucopia, 9 pieces, pf, 1979; Coils, fl + a fl + pic, cl + b cl + cb cl, vn, va, vc, perc, terpsiptomaton, mar, pf, 1980; Diary Music II, fl + pic, cl, bn, hn, vn, va, vc, db, pf, 1981; Webs, fl, str, 1981; Str Qt, 1982; When Crows Gather, 3 cl, vn, vc, pf, 1986; A Fanfare for the Tenth, str qt, 1988; Toccapsody, pf, 1989; Hung Monophonies, ob, hn, vc, 3 vn, 3 va, 2 vc, db, 1990; Night Music, vn, cl, perc, 1991

Choral: Missa brevis, male chorus, ob, cl, b cl, bn, tpt, trbn, 1965; Cantate Domine, male chorus, tape, wind ens, 1968; Moonsong (Chin.), SATB, fl, 2 perc, pf, 1969; 3 Carols on Medieval Texts, SATB, fl, ob, bn, tpt, trbn, 1971; 3 Plath Songs (Cantata profana), female chorus, 2 pf, 4 perc, 1973; 3 Vocalises, female chorus, 1983; Celebration (Virgil), SATB, orch, 1984; In Memoriam, S, S, T, B, B, SATB, orch, 1993

Other vocal: Structures after Hart Crane, T, pf, tape, 1968; Tennessee Set (T. Williams), S, pf, 1968; Images, S, pf, 1971; 3 Ben Jonson Songs, S, vl, bn, vc, 1974; Night Songs, S, T, large orch, 1976; Wolves, S, fl + pic + a fl, cl + b cl, pf, 1988; A Barred Owl (R. Wilbur), Bar, fl, b cl, vn, vc, pf, 1994; Psalm 42, S, Bar, ob, hn, vn, vc, perc, pf, 1996

El-ac: Frogsong in F♯, 1969; Chroma, 1970

Principal publishers: Margun Music, New Valley

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Duncan: 'Music from Coils and Ball Bearings', Christian Science Monitor (28 Nov 1980)

G. McKinnon: 'It's a . . . New Instrument', Boston Globe (3 Dec 1980)

E. Clark: 'What is the Sound of 2,500 Ball Bearings Falling?', Yankee, xlvii/10 (1983), 31 only

J. Rockwell: 'New Opera may have a Future after All', New York Times (2 Jan 1983)

MYRNA S. NACHMAN

Sprechgesang (Ger.: 'speech-song'). A type of vocal enunciation intermediate between speech and song. Sprechgesang, using the notation in ex.1*a*, was introduced by Humperdinck in Königskinder (1897), though in the edition of 1910 he replaced it by conventional singing. It could well have been an attempt to prescribe a kind of articulation already being used by singers of both lieder and popular song.

Schoenberg devised a new, related type of enunciation, which was later referred to by Berg as 'Sprechstimme'. According to the directions for performance provided with Schoenberg's Pierrot lunaire (1912, notation as in ex.1*b*), in which the soloist hinges between the worlds of lied and popular song, the performer must clearly distinguish between speech, song and the new style, in which speech takes a musical form but without recalling song. However, Schoenberg also used Sprechgesang in quite different contexts: chorally in Die glückliche Hand (1924) and for the role of Moses in Moses und Aron (composed 1930–32). In later works such as A Survivor from Warsaw (1947) he adopted a new form of notation (ex.1*c*) that dispensed with exact pitches. Sprechstimme was used too by Berg in Wozzeck (1925) and Lulu (1937), the former work introducing a new shade, 'half sung' (notated as in ex.1*d*) between Sprechstimme and song. In a prefatory note to Wozzeck Berg insisted that passages in Sprechstimme 'are not to be sung' but must be delivered as 'a spoken melody' (Sprechmelodie): 'in singing the performer stays on the note without change; in speaking he strikes the note but leaves it immediately by rising or falling in pitch'.

However, the realization of Sprechgesang and Sprechstimme remains problematic, partly because the pitch range of speaking voices is narrow, partly because there is no clear middle point between speech and song but rather a haze of alternatives. The vocal works of many composers since the late 1940s, including Boulez, Berio and Kagel, have worked within that haze. Britten in Death in Venice (1973) notated Aschenbach's recitatives (marked 'as if speaking' or 'spoken') as stemless crotchets and used the notation of ex.1*a* primarily for rhythmic shouts and laughter. Rihm has called for shades of Sprechgesang, employing the notation of 1*a*, 1*b* and 1*d* in Jakob Lenz (1979) and other works.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R.W. Wood: 'Concerning "Sprechgesang"', Tempo, no.2 (1946), 3–6
H. Keller: 'Whose Fault is the Speaking Voice', Tempo, no.75 (1965–6), 12–17
W. Austin: Music in the 20th Century (New York, 1966), 196–201
P. Boulez: 'Note sur le Sprechgesang', Relevés d'apprenti (Paris, 1996; Eng trans, 1991), 206–8

PAUL GRIFFITHS/R

Sprechstimme. A type of vocal enunciation devised by Schoenberg. See SPRECHGESANG.

Sprenger, Eugen (b Stuttgart, 7 Jan 1882; d Frankfurt, 25 Aug 1953). German string instrument maker. He was the son of Anton Sprenger the younger, with whom he served an apprenticeship, first in Stuttgart and then in Mittenwald. Subsequently he worked for a year for his older brother, Adolf, who had taken over their father's Stuttgart workshop in 1897. In 1900, following his father's death, Eugen left Stuttgart to gain broader experience. Thereafter he worked in Munich, Switzerland, France and England. He later returned to Germany and in 1907 opened the Eugen Sprenger Workshop in Frankfurt. After a suspension of business in World War I when he was called to service, he reopened in 1919 on the Hochstrasse in Frankfurt. In 1944, due to the effects of World War II, he removed to Sigiswang in Bavaria, returning to Frankfurt in 1949. Sprenger established an enviable reputation for his violins, violas da gamba, lutes and guitars, and for his restoration and reconstruction of historical instruments. Like his father and brother, he copied the old Italians, especially the Stradivari and Guarneri. His historical instruments were especially sought after by both German and foreign universities and after 1937 he specialized in this field. He built a tenor cello which received much notice at the time. His instruments are extremely well built, the tone full and powerful. In 1930 Sprenger patented his own model of viola, and later he wrote Die Streichinstrumente und ihre Behandlung (Kassel and Basle, 1951). His son Eugen Sprenger (b Frankfurt, 26 Nov 1920) was an apprentice with his father, and took over the Frankfurt workshop after his father's death. Under his direction the firm began to specialize even more in the restoration and reconstruction of historical instruments of all kinds.

MURRAY LEFKOWITZ

Sprezzatura. Term used in early 17th-century Italy to denote concepts of expressiveness and rubato in the composition and performance of monodic music. The use of the word originated outside music with Castiglione: 'this virtue … contrary to affectation which we now call sprezzatura … [is] the true source of grace'; and Shearman defined it as 'courtly grace revealed in the effortless resolution of all difficulties … [a] kind of well-bred negligence born of complete self-possession'.

Caccini was the first to apply the word to music. In the preface to Euridice (Florence, 1600) he wrote that he had 'employed a certain sprezzatura, which I consider to have something noble about it, believing that by means of it I approach that much closer to the essence of speech'. Shortly afterwards, in the preface to Le nuove musiche, he wrote of 'negligently' – that is, naturally – introducing dissonances to relieve the blandness of concord, and he directed that bars 15–17 of the madrigal Deh, dove son fuggiti be performed 'without regular rhythm, as if speaking in tones, with the aforesaid negligence', an idea close to rubato. He finally returned to the question in the preface to his Nuove musiche e nuova maniera di scriverle (Florence, 1614).

The music that Caccini discussed is all for solo voice and continuo, and some Italian monodists and singers at least must have remembered his views when writing or performing recitatives, ariosos and other pieces 'without regular rhythm' during the ensuing few decades; for example, in the preface to Dafne (Florence, 1608), Marco da Gagliano used the word 'sprezzatura' during a detailed discussion about the expressive performance of the prologue of his opera. Caccini's ideas might also be applied in, for example, the freer types of keyboard music.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

B. Castiglione: Il libro del cortegiano (Venice, 1528); ed. C. Cordié, La letteratura italiana, xxvii (Milan, 1960), 48ff; Eng. trans. (Harmondsworth, 1967), 67–8
J. Shearman: Mannerism (Harmondsworth, 1967), 21–2, 96
G. Caccini: Le nuove musiche (Florence, 1601/2); ed. in RRMBE, ix (1970), 44–5, 54 only
H.W. Hitchcock: 'Vocal Ornamentation in Caccini's Nuove musiche', MQ, lvi (1970), 389–404
C.V. Palisca: 'Peri and the Theory of Recitative', SMH, xv (1981), 51–61; repr. in Studies in the History of Music and Music Theory (Oxford, 1994), 452–66
A. Rooley: 'Renaissance Attitudes to Performance: a Contemporary Application', Companion to Contemporary Musical Thought, ii, ed. J. Paynter and others (London, 1992), 948–60
T. Carter: 'Printing the "New Music"', Music and the Cultures of Print, ed. K. van Orden (New York, 2000)

NIGEL FORTUNE

Springar [springdans, springleik, pols, polsdans, polsk]. A Norwegian folkdance in triple time, the most common type of folkdance in Norway. It is danced by couples. In the western and southern areas where the Hardanger fiddle is used, the dance is known as springar and springdans. It is also known in areas where the violin is used as a folk instrument: in eastern and northern Norway it is known as pols, polsk and polsdans, while in some central parts of southern Norway it is called springleik.

The western springar has three beats of equal length, with a slight accent on the first, but in many other districts a kind of rubato is used, giving beats of unequal lengths and corresponding variations in dance movements: for example, a springar from Telemark normally has a long first beat and a short third one, while a springar from Valdres has a short first beat and a long second one. These may also be rhythmic variations within quite small areas. Such variations are uncommon in the duple-time halling and gangar.

See also NORWAY, §II.
For bibliography see HALLING.

NILS GRINDE

Springbogen (Ger.). See SAUTILLÉ.

Springdans. See SPRINGAR.

Springer (i) (Ger.). See JACK.

Springer (ii) (Ger.). A type of ornament; see ORNAMENTS, §6.

Springfield, Dusty [O'Brien, Mary Isabel Catherine Bernadette] (b West Hampstead, London, 16 April 1939; d Henley-on-Thames, Oxfordshire, 2 March 1999). English pop singer. Her career began as part of the Lana Sisters. She then formed the Springfields with her brother Dion, who became Tom Springfield, and Tim Field, a trio modelled on the American prototype, Peter, Paul and Mary. They had a number of hit records in Britain and the USA before splitting up in 1963, Tom to pursue songwriting and Dusty a solo career. A succession of chart successes began the following year with the soul-tinged I only want to be with you which led to her being voted Britain's top female singer. She achieved little success during the 1970s and, despite several attempts at a comeback, it was not until 1987 that she once again found her milieu, working with the Pet Shop Boys. Their collaboration on 'What have I done to deserve this?' (on Actually, Parl., 1987) was a worldwide hit and featured in the film Scandal. Such success enabled her to reclaim her solo career and in 1995 she released A Very Fine Love (Col.), featuring such artists as Mary Chapin Carpenter. One of the most important female singers to emerge from Britain, Springfield's voice ran through a wide range of expression and she recorded definitive versions of songs by such writers as Bacharach, Goffin and King and Michel Legrand. Dusty in Memphis (Phillips, 1969) remains a milestone in pop history. Produced by Tom Dowd, Arif Mardin and Jerry Wexler, it included the classic Son of a Preacher Man, a major international success, and compared with the best of Aretha Franklin. Like Elvis Presley, Springfield's voice belied the colour of her skin.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. O'Brien: Dusty (London, 1989)
L. O'Brien: She Bop: the Definitive History of Women in Rock, Pop and Soul (London, 1995)

LIZ THOMSON

Springleik. See SPRINGAR.

Spring Opera. Experimental opera company active in San Francisco from 1960 to 1982. See SAN FRANCISCO, §1.

Springsteen, Bruce (Frederick Joseph) (b Freehold, NJ, 23 Sept 1949). American singer-songwriter. The son of a secretary and a bus driver, he began singing and writing while at school and, by the late 1960s, was playing New Jersey dates with a band and solo gigs in the Greenwich Village clubs that had once featured such performers as Bob Dylan. When John Hammond signed Springsteen to Columbia Records in 1972 the company hoped to launch him as an acoustic artist, modelled on the young Dylan. However, against Columbia's wishes, Springsteen recorded Greetings from Ashbury Park, N.J. (1973) and The Wild, the Innocent and the E Street Shuffle (1973) with his backing group which became known as the E Street Band. The albums gained critical plaudits but sold poorly at first. However, amid growing popularity and media attention based on his live performances, Columbia relaunched the two discs and Born to Run (1975) consequently became a US hit. Tight, energized and less self-conscious than its predecessors it helped Springsteen make a successful European début, despite excessive hype.

A legal dispute caused a hiatus in his recording career but when Darkness on the Edge of Town (1978) finally emerged it confirmed Springsteen as the doyen of blue-collar rock and roll, a man who celebrated rather than romanticized everyday life. However, it was his multi-faceted double album The River (1980) that provided him with his first number one. Nebraska (1982), a bleak acoustic set inspired by John Steinbeck and Woody Guthrie, seemed to hold up a mirror to Reagan's America while, in stark contrast, Born in the USA (1984) was condemned as a chauvinistic celebration of the values repudiated by Nebraska. A return to rock's mainstream, Born in the USA spawned five hit singles and sold more than ten million copies. In the years since, Springsteen has continued to tour, often in support of good causes, but new releases have been more sporadic. Notable among them is The Ghost of Tom Joad (1995) which returned to the landscape of Nebraska. He won an Academy Award for the song Streets of Philadelphia, written for the film Philadelphia in 1994 and Grammy Awards the following year.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

D. Marsh: Born to Run: the Bruce Springsteen Story (New York, 1979)
J. Bauldie: 'When I Say Jump ...', Mojo, no.17 (1995), 58–82

Bruce Springsteen: the Rolling Stone Files (New York, 1996)
M. Kaufman: 'Bruce Springsteen: I can just be myself', Mojo, no.29 (1996), 48–53
D. Marsh: Glory Days: Bruce Springsteen in the 1980s (New York, 1996)
F. Goodman: The Mansion on the Hill: Dylan, Young, Geffen, Springsteen and the Head–On Collision of Rock and Commerce (London, 1997)

LIZ THOMSON

Spruch. A term used in German literary history to denote two different categories of medieval poetry.

(1) The verbal Spruch, sometimes also called Reimspruch or Reimrede. Normally in rhyming couplets and of didactic content, it was written for spoken delivery. It is similar in nature to the Priamel, the Bispel, the Epigramm and the Wappendichtung (a description of a coat-of-arms in poetry). Important contributors to the tradition of the verbal Spruch were Freidank (13th century), Heinrich der Teichner and Peter Suchenwirt (14th century).

(2) The lyric Spruch, also called Sangspruch or Sangspruchdichtung. A form of Middle High German song, together with the Minnelied (see MINNESANG) and the Leich (see LAI). It is easily distinguished from the Leich, which is a more extended form made up of irregular sections and built on the principles of symmetry and repetition. While the differences between Spruch and Minnesang are less clear, some distinctions can be drawn, primarily on the basis of content and performance. Whereas Minnesang was more or less confined to the topos of 'courtly love', the Spruch treated predominantly of rational, didactic and pragmatic issues, including, for example, socio-political commentary, topics related to moral or religious teaching and philosophy, practical wisdom, biographical material, praise of patrons, begging and much else besides. This difference in the attitude of the poet or the performer of the Spruch seems to be reflected in the nature of the music: so far as the surviving melodies allow comparison, those for the Spruch tend more towards recitation in their manner. The genre seems to go back to the earliest tradition of the German lyric and probably became more widespread from the middle of the 12th century. Influence from the Occitan sirventes seems likely. The earliest Spruch poets (Sangspruchdichter) were professional poet-musicians, while in the earliest stages Minnesang was cultivated in a courtly setting, sung by nobles for the assembled company.

The two genres can be distinguished by their form: the early Spruch has a stanza form quite different from that of the Minnelied, which is normally in the so-called canzone form or BAR FORM. Furthermore, the early Spruch was principally a single-stanza form, whereas Minnelieder comprised several stanzas. Confusion has sometimes arisen owing to the frequent occurrence in the sources of several stanzas appearing together, making for more or less coherent groupings. The reason for such transmission is partly that, unlike Minnelied, in which each melody and poetic scheme was generally used for only one lied, in Spruch poetry the same formal poetic scheme was repeatedly re-used with its melody for separate strophes (see TON (i)); the manuscript sources thus group together strophes according to their Ton. In some cases, for instance in the works of Frauenlob, while a stanza is usually complete within itself, small groups of stanzas can be seen as belonging together in terms of the unity of their content.

The earliest surviving Sprüche are connected with the name of Älterer Spervogel; Walther von der Vogelweide raised the status of the Spruch, bringing its form and content closer to those of Minnesang and adding a strongly political content to some of his works. From Walther's work onwards the distinctions between Minnesang and Spruch began to blur, while the tradition, originally concentrated in southern Germany, spread northwards to include such later exponents as Reinmar von Zweter and Bruder Werner. Frauenlob marks a late culmination in the tradition: in addition to his Minnelieder and his three Leichs he is represented by about 300 Sprüche.

From the middle of the 14th century onwards the old principle of single-stanza Sprüche was replaced by larger complexes of stanzas, and melodic construction changed, becoming more akin to bar form. It became much more common for Spruch authors to add their names at the end of their songs. These changes essentially marked the beginning of the tradition of MEISTERGESANG.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

MGG2 ('Sangspruchdichtung'; H. Brunner)
K. Lachmann and M. Haupt, eds.: Des Minnesangs Frühling (Leipzig, 1857, rev. 38/1988 by H. Moser and H. Tervooren)
H. Tervooren: Einzelstrophe oder Strophenbindung? Untersuchungen zur Lyrik der Jenaer Handschrift (Bonn, 1967)
H. Moser, ed.: Mittelhochdeutsche Spruchdichtung (Darmstadt, 1972) [21 essays with extensive bibliography]
B. Wachinger: Sängerkrieg: Untersuchungen zur Spruchdichtung des 13. Jahrhunderts (Munich, 1973)
U. Müller: Untersuchungen zur politischen Lyrik des deutschen Mittelalters (Göppingen, 1974)
H. Brunner: Die alten Meister: Studien zu Überlieferung und Rezeption der mittelhochdeutschen Sangspruchdichter im Spätmittelalter und in der frühen Neuzeit (Munich, 1975)
E. Pickerodt-Uthleb: Die Jenaer Liederhandschrift: metrische und musikalische Untersuchungen (Göppingen, 1975)
A.H. Touber: Deutsche Strophenformen des Mittelalters (Stuttgart, 1975)
C. Huber: Wort sint der dinge zeichen: Untersuchungen zum Sprachdenken der mittelhochdeutschen Spruchdichtung bis Frauenlob (Zürich and Munich, 1977)
J. Rettelbach: Variation – Derivation – Imitation: Untersuchungen zu den Tönen der Sangspruchdichter und Meistersinger (Tübingen, 1993)
H. Tervooren: Sangspruchdichtung (Stuttgart, 1995)
For further bibliography see MINNESANG.

BURKHARD KIPPENBERG/R

Spruchmotette (Ger.: 'text motet'). A type of 17th-century motet setting verses mainly from the Gospels, Psalms or Song of Solomon. See MOTET, §III, 3(i).

Sprung (Ger.). See LEAP.

Squarcialupi, Antonio [Antonio degli Organi, Antonio di Bartolomeo, Antonio del Bessa] (b Florence, 27 March 1416; d Florence, 6 July 1480). Italian organist and composer. The son of a Florentine butcher named Bartolomeo di Giovanni, Antonio adopted the name Squarcialupi from a well-known Tuscan family at least as early as 1457. His teachers may have been the organist Giovanni Mazzuoli and the organ builder Matteo di Pagolo da Prato. In January 1431 he became organist at Orsanmichele in Florence. In 1432 he was appointed organist at the cathedral of S Maria del Fiore, a position he held until his death; he was succeeded by his son Francesco (b 1457). In 1437 he joined the fraternity of Laudesi at S Zanobi. His reputation as an organ expert, and his friendship with Giovanni and Piero de' Medici, led him to travel widely: to Volterra in about 1437–8, to Naples and Siena in 1450, to Milan in 1455 and to Pistoia in 1467.

Antonio Squarcialupi was the most famous Italian organist of his time. In his Diario fiorentino dal 1450 al 1516 (ed. J. del Badia, Florence, 1883/R), Landucci wrote of him as equivalent in stature to the architect Donatello and the painter Pollaiuolo, and Christoforo Landino mentioned him in his preface (1481) to Dante's Commedia. He was also closely associated with Lorenzo the Magnificent and with Guillaume Du Fay: in a letter of 1 May 1467 Squarcialupi wrote to Du Fay on Lorenzo's behalf, and his epitaph in Florence Cathedral gives further evidence of his connection with Lorenzo. The claim that he was Henricus Isaac's teacher is, however, no longer tenable, for Isaac can have arrived in Florence no earlier than 1485. Squarcialupi undoubtedly composed as well, but as yet no compositions ascribed to him have been found.

The celebrated early 15th-century manuscript (now I-Fl Med.Pal.87; facs. ed. F.A. Gallo, Florence, 1992) known as the 'Squarcialupi Codex (or Manuscript)' became so called because he owned it; he did not compile it.

See also SOURCES, MS, §VIII, 2.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

N. Valorius: Vita Laurentii Medicei, ed. L. Mehus (Florence, 1749), 45–6

H. Kühner: 'Ein unbekannter Brief von Guillaume Dufay', AcM, xi (1939), 114–15

B. Becherini: 'Un canta in panca fiorentino, Antonio di Guido', RMI, l (1948), 241–7

B. Becherini: 'Antonio Squarcialupi e il codice Mediceo-Palatino 87', L'Ars Nova italiana del Trecento I: Certaldo 1959, 141–96

F.A. D'Accone: A Documentary History of Music at the Florentine Cathedral and Baptistry during the Fifteenth Century (diss., Harvard U., 1960), 39ff

F.A. D'Accone: 'Antonio Squarcialupi alla luce di documenti inediti', Chigiana, new ser., iii (1966), 3–24

G. Giacomelli: 'Un documento irreperibile su Lorenzo da Prato e qualche referimento inedito all'organo del Battistero di Firenze', L'organo, xxiv (1986), 91–100

F. D'Accone: 'Lorenzo il Magnifico e la musica', La musica a Firenze al tempo di Lorenzo il Magnifico: Florence 1992, 219–48

G. Giacomelli: Antonio Squarcialupi e la tradizione organaria in Toscana (Rome, 1992)

G. Giacomelli: 'Nuove giunte alla biografia di Antonio Squarcialupi: i viaggi, l'impegio, le esecuzioni', La musica a Firenze al tempo di Lorenzo il Magnifico: Florence 1992, 257–73

G. Giacomelli and E Settesoldi: Gli organi di S. Maria del Fiore di Firenze: sette secoli di storia del '300 al '900 (Florence, 1993)

B.McD. Wilson: 'Madrigal, Lauda, and Local Style in Trecento Florence', JM, xv (1997), 137–77

KURT VON FISCHER/GIANLUCA D'AGOSTINO

Squarcialupi Codex (I-Fl Med.Pal.87). See SOURCES, MS, §VIII, 2.

Square [swarenote, sqwarenote]. English musical term of the 15th and 16th centuries. The evidence suggests that a square is a bottom part derived from a polyphonic composition of the late 14th century onwards in order to be used (usually via monophonic storage) in a later composition. The source need not be sacred, but all known later uses of the derived material are in sacred compositions. No further refinements to this definition are available. Compositions using squares may place the borrowed material at any pitch, in any voice part. The square may migrate between parts, be presented literally, or appear with considerable rhythmic and melodic elaboration. The number of voice parts is variable, and the compositions include keyboard settings. Baillie confined the term to the Mass Ordinary, but this now seems to have been too cautious. The style and compositional technique of such compositions cover a wide range.

Archival references between 1463 and 1564 permit a further broadening of the term. 'Sqwarenote' was taught (along with plainsong, polyphony and techniques that imply quasi-improvisation or rudimentary composition) and sung; squares were copied (in one case into graduals, in another 'upon' the eight tones); books of squarenote (including an 'old' one in 1465) are in some cases identified as polyphonic, or as being in sets (perhaps meaning partbooks), and compositional references include a mass 'de squarenote'. The principal references come from Durham, Wells, Worcester, Warwick, Louth, Oxford, Cambridge and London, particularly St Paul's Cathedral (the presumed provenance of the Gyffard books, see below), where they continue to be associated with post-Reformation rites and English words.

Three masses in the Marian Gyffard books (GB-Lbl Add.17802–5), one by William Whytbroke and two by William Mundy, are described there as 'apon the square'. In these masses each movement is based on a different cantus firmus, although all three use the same Credo melody, and Mundy's second mass shares its Gloria, Sanctus and Agnus cantus firmi with Whytbroke's. These cantus firmi are hence assumed to be the squares on which the masses are composed. All three Kyrie squares, and one of the two Sanctus squares, are found in a monophonic collection of such isolated tenor parts on the flyleaves of a Sarum gradual (GB-Lbl Lansdowne 462) which is in turn assumed to be a collection of squares such as those attested by archival evidence. Other smaller repositories of such tenors establish a modest network of concordances and extend the repertory of potential squares. In many cases, further concordances for these tenors also exist in polyphonic works composed nearer 1400 (in the Old Hall Manuscript and elsewhere) and in one case in a French-texted ballade (Or me veut) which had a busy career on the Continent and is ascribed in one source to Dufay. Even where concordances have not survived, it can sometimes be demonstrated that the source of a square must have been a discant setting of a Sanctus chant (sometimes with migrant cantus firmus) or a strict faburden tenor to a non-Ordinary chant. In some cases no monophonic stage has survived, but direct concordances exist between 15th-century bottom parts and 16th-century settings. The repertory of squares is therefore likely to increase as further concordances come to light, since any bottom part is potentially available for use in this way.

Other polyphonic compositions based on such cantus firmi of the late (or even mid-) 15th century to the mid- (or even late) 16th are therefore assumed also to be composed on squares, and other cantus firmi used in related compositions (as in the set of seven Lady masses by Nicholas Ludford) are presumed to be further squares. Evidence suggests that the early Tudor practice of composition on the faburden of a chant rather than on the chant itself should be included within the procedure of composition on squares, since some such 'faburdens' are in fact bottom parts of non-faburden settings in discant style (e.g. Magnificat settings on the first tone which may relate to the archival reference, above, to the eight tones), and since faburdens occur in company with squares of various derivations apparently for use in composition or impromptu techniques. Squares were sometimes described in association with their parent compositions, and it is clear that their subsequent use was not always confined to the same text or genre. These procedures suggest far-reaching analogies with continental techniques and with the use to which some melodies were put, though no actual links with authenticated squares have appeared. The term should probably be confined to English cases related as above until there is reason to extend it. It may even be necessary to regard the term merely as a local name for a much more widespread range of compositional approaches.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

HarrisonMMB
M.F. Bukofzer: 'A Polyphonic Basse Dance of the Renaissance', Studies in Medieval and Renaissance Music (New York, 1950), 190–216
H. Baillie: 'Squares', AcM, xxxii (1960), 178–93
J.D. Bergsagel: 'An Introduction to Ludford', MD, xiv (1960), 105–30
J.D. Bergsagel: 'On the Performance of Ludford's alternatim Masses', MD, xvi (1962), 35–55
F.Ll. Harrison: 'Faburden in Practice', MD, xvi (1962), 11–34
R. Bowers: Choral Institutions within the English Church: their Constitution and Development, 1340–1500 (diss., U. of East Anglia, 1975)

MARGARET BENT

Square-dance. A genre of American social dance performed by sets of four couples facing each other in a square. Square-dancing evolved in the USA in the late 19th century from the popular ballroom dances of French origin, particularly the quadrille and the cotillion, and to some extent the country dance as well. The allemande, promenade, dos à dos and chassez movements of the French dances were incorporated into the repertory of steps used in the square-dance, where their names became anglicized as the 'allemande left' and 'right', various kinds of 'promenade', the 'do sa do' (which in some regions may differ from the 'do si do'), and the 'sashay'. Other steps are entirely American in origin, such as the 'hug 'em up tight and swing 'em like thunder' and the right- and left-hand star. The execution and variety of the figures vary from region to region, and in some cases specific patterns are named after certain tunes (e.g. Red River Valley). Their sequence in each dance is announced by a 'caller', who sings or chants instructions to the dancers, often in rhymed verse, to the accompaniment of a piano, fiddle, guitar, banjo, double bass, accordion or wind instrument, or any combination of these. The tunes used for square-dances are usually popular American and Anglo-American songs (e.g. Soldier's Joy and Turkey in the Straw), in duple metre marked by lively, rhythmic themes of eight- or 16-bar units, heavily accented downbeats, and simple, repetitive harmonies. During much of the 20th century, square-dancing was fostered primarily in the Appalachian Mountain region and rural parts of the American Southwest and West, areas that gave the dance a rustic and western character.

See also HOEDOWN.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

B. Tolman and R. Page: The Country Dance Book (Weston, VT, and New York,1937/R)
A.S. Duggan, J. Schlottmann and A. Rutledge: Folk Dances of the United States and Mexico (New York,1948/R)
R.G. Kraus: Square Dances of Today (New York, 1950)
S.F. Damon: The History of Square Dancing (Barre, MA, 1957)
D. and H. Kennedy: American Square Dancing (London, 1965)
B. Casey: The Complete Book of Square Dancing (New York, 1976)
R. Nevell: A Time to Dance (New York, 1977)
M. Gunzenhauser: The Square Dance and Contra Dance Handbook (Jefferson, NC, 1996)

DEANE L. ROOT/LINDA MOOT, PAULINE NORTON

Square pianoforte (Fr. piano carré; Ger. Tafelklavier; It. fortepiano a tavola). A piano with a horizontal string arrangement, usually in a rectangular case, although the term is also used for some pianos that are in the form of a harp lying on its side, reflecting the decrease of string length from bass to treble in the case outlines. From its invention in the mid-18th century, and throughout most of the 19th, the square piano was the most common domestic keyboard instrument, and it was only gradually superseded by the space-saving and generally superior upright. It is not yet known where and when the square piano was invented. Many different instrument makers experimented with numerous ways of activating strings with hammer actions, giving as many different names to their instruments (e.g. clavecin royal, fortbien, pantal[e]on). The chief historical importance of the square piano lies in its having been the principal vehicle for the development of the piano in Germany in the mid-18th century in terms of the spread of the piano's popularity and experiments of its construction (see PIANOFORTE, §I, 2 and 3); also, such important 19th-century improvements as cast-iron framing and overstringing were first developed in American square pianos (see PIANOFORTE, §I, 8 and fig.26).

In its rectangular form the square piano is the direct descendant of the clavichord, the shape and layout of 18th- and early 19th-century square pianos being identical with that of 18th-century clavichords. The harp-shaped form, mostly built in south Germany and Switzerland in the last quarter of the 18th century, has features that do not derive from the clavichord but are designed for the particular needs of a piano, such as a thick hitchpin plank with a roughly quarter-round front. Some square pianos had no dampers and many had simple actions. 18th-century instruments often had many different mutation stops, devices to change the tone colour according to the tastes of amateur musicians. Important builders of square pianos in the 18th century were Johannes Zumpe in London, whose oldest extant instruments are from 1766 (see PIANOFORTE, §I, 4, figs.8, 9 and 10); J.G. Wagner in Dresden, who described his clavecin royal in 1775 (see Forkel), and his brother C.S. Wagner; and Matthias Christian Baumann (1740–1816) in Zweibrücken, whose instruments are mentioned in a letter from Mozart and whose earliest surviving instrument dates from 1775 (see Birsak). Signed and dated harp-shaped pianos by Gottfried Maucher (1737–1830) of Konstanz have survived. Important 19th-century makers of square pianos in the USA were Alpheus Babcock and the Chickering and Steinway firms.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ClinkscaleMP
J.N. Forkel: Musikalisch-kritische Bibliothek, iii (Gotha, 1779/R)
R.E.M. Harding: The Piano-Forte: its History Traced to the Great Exhibition of 1851 (Cambridge, 1933/R, 2/1978)
K. Birsak: 'Klaviere im Salzburger Museum Carolino Augusteum', Jahresschrift des Salzburger Museum Carolino Augusteum, xxxiv (1988), 7–148
B. Brauchli: 'Christian Baumann's Square Pianos and Mozart', GSJ, xlv (1992), 29–49
H. Henkel: Besaitete Tasteninstrumente (Frankfurt, 1994)

J. Koster: Keyboard Musical Instruments in the Museum of Fine Arts, Boston (Boston, 1994)
L. Libin: 'The "Lying Harp" and Some Early Square Pianos', Early Keyboard Studies, viii/3 (1994), 1–8
S.K. Klaus: 'German Square Pianos with "Prellmechanik" in Major American Museum Collections: Distinguishing Characteristics of Regional Schools in the Late Eighteenth and Early Nineteenth Centuries', JAMIS, xxiv (1998), 27–80

EDWIN M. RIPIN/SABINE K. KLAUS

Squeezebox. Informal expression for ACCORDION or CONCERTINA.

Squillante (It.: 'harshly'; present participle of squillare: 'to ring, peal, blare'). An expression mark found in the orchestral postlude to the 'Rataplan' of Verdi's La forza del destino.

Squire, W(illiam) H(enry) (b Ross, Herefordshire, 8 Aug 1871; d London, 17 March 1963). English cellist and composer. He was a pupil of his father and a foundation scholar at the RCM, London, where he studied the cello with Edward Howell and composition with Parry. His London début was at a concert given by Albéniz in 1891; in 1895 he performed the Saint-Saëns A minor Concerto at the Crystal Palace. He played in the Queen's Hall Orchestra, led the cellos at Covent Garden, toured frequently with Clara Butt, recorded Elgar's Concerto under Harty in 1930, and taught at both the RCM and the GSM. A generous player with warm, full tone, he received the dedication of Fauré's Sicilienne; among his compositions are a cello concerto, much light music and two operettas.

ROBERT ANDERSON

Squire, William Barclay (b London, 16 Oct 1855; d London, 13 Jan 1927). English musicologist and librarian. Educated privately and in Frankfurt, Squire graduated in law at Cambridge in 1879. He entered a firm of solicitors but soon his interest in music, stimulated at Cambridge by his close friendship with Stanford, led him away from the law; his first musical writings were as a contributor to the early parts of the first edition of Grove's Dictionary. When a vacancy for the charge of the printed music at the British Museum occurred in 1885, Squire was appointed, supported by testimonials from George Grove, A.D. Coleridge, Leslie Stephen, W.H. Husk, W.S. Rockstro and J.F. Bridge. Working almost single-handed until 1900 (when William C. Smith joined him), Squire made extensive improvements to the catalogue, built up the collections with continually increasing purchases and devoted much energy to preparing the two-volume catalogue of printed music before 1800, issued in 1912. He next read through the whole of the general catalogue of printed books (then consisting of four million entries) searching for opera librettos; he indexed some 10,000.

It was during Squire's term of office that the King's Music Library was deposited on permanent loan in the British Museum. He had begun negotiations to acquire the collection for the museum during the reign of Edward VII; his persistence was rewarded soon after George V's accession and the transfer took place in 1911. Squire was appointed its first honorary curator, and after his retirement in 1920 began work on its catalogue. For his services he was appointed MVO in 1926. As his list of works shows, he was long active as a cataloguer outside the British Museum. Likewise, the list of what he edited shows the range of his sympathies. He served on the committee of the Folk-Song Society from its inception in 1898 and was for some years secretary of the International Musical Society. He was secretary of the Purcell Society from 1879 to 1922. He played an active part in planning the Historical Music Loan Exhibition held at the Albert Hall in 1885, and later in preparing for the press the sumptuous catalogue of the exhibition of music and instruments held at Fishmongers' Hall in 1904. He found time to work as music critic to four journals between 1890 and 1904: the Saturday Review, Westminster Gazette, the Globe and the Pilot. He was a competent geographer and a connoisseur of paintings.

Squire's work as critic, editor and scholar was equal to the highest standards of his day. As a librarian, he was a fast and accurate worker, guided by a strong sense of purpose and remarkable foresight, and is worthy to rank with such distinguished contemporaries as Wotquenne, Mitjana and Sonneck.

CATALOGUES

'Musik-Katalog der Bibliothek der Westminster-Abtei in London', MMg, xxxv (1903), suppl. 1–45
Catalogue of Printed Music in the Library of the Royal College of Music (London, 1909)
Catalogue of Printed Music published between 1487 and 1800, now in the British Museum (London, 1912/R)
Catalogue of the King's Music Library, i: Handel Manuscripts (London, 1927)
Catalogue of the Manuscripts in the Library of the Royal College of Music (typescript, GB-Lcm, Lbl and elsewhere, 1931)

WRITINGS

'On an Early Sixteenth Century Manuscript of English Music in the Library of Eton College', Archaeologia, lvi (1889), 89–102
'Notes on Early Music Printing', Bibliographica, iii (1897), 99–122
'Notes on an Undescribed Collection of English 15th Century Music', SIMG, ii (1900–01), 342–92, corrections 719 [on Old Hall MS]
'Purcell's Dramatic Music', SIMG, v (1903–4), 489–564
'Purcell as Theorist', SIMG, vi (1904–5), 521–67
'Pearsall on Chanting', SIMG, viii (1906–7), 166–220
'An Index of Tunes in the Ballad Operas', Musical Antiquary, ii (1910–11), 1–17
'Publishers' Numbers', SIMG, xv (1913–14), 420–27
'Gluck's London Operas', MQ, i (1915), 397–409
'Music', Shakespeare's England, ii (London, 1916), 15–49
'Some Novello Correspondence', MQ, iii (1917), 206–42 [incl. correspondence with Samuel Wesley]
'Musical Libraries and Catalogues', PMA, xlv (1918–19), 97–111
'Handel's Clock Music', MQ, v (1919), 538–52 [with the tunes]
'Letters of Robert Lucas Pearsall', MQ, v (1919), 264–97; vi (1920), 296–315
'L'iconographie musicale', Congrès d'histoire de l'art: Paris 1921, 731–4
'Letters of Robert Franz', MQ, vii (1921), 278–83
'The Music of Shadwell's Tempest', MQ, vii (1921), 565–78
'A Spurious Mozart Portrait', MQ, ix (1923), 211–16
'Beethoven's Appearance', ML, viii (1927), 122–5

EDITIONS

with J.A. Fuller Maitland: The Fitzwilliam Virginal Book (London and Leipzig, 1894–9/R, rev. 2/1979–80 by B. Winogron)
Henry Purcell: The Works of Henry Purcell, vi [Harpsichord Music] (London, 1895), xxii [Catches and Rounds] (London, 1922)
Purcell: Suites, Lessons and Pieces for Harpsichord (London, 1918) with J.A. Fuller Maitland: Twenty-Five Pieces from Benjamin Cosyn's Virginal Book (London, 1923) with J.A. Fuller Maitland: G.F. Handel: Stücke für Clavicembalo [The 'Aylesford' pieces] (Mainz, 1928)
Squire also edited over 100 English and Italian madrigals, partly in various series, and partly for some groups of singers with which he was connected.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

E.J. Dent: 'The Rewards of Scholarship', The Times (22 Jan 1927) [obituary]
A.H. King: 'The Music Room of the British Museum, 1753–1953: its History and Organization', PRMA, lxxix (1952–3), 65–79

A.H. King: 'William Barclay Squire, 1855–1927: Music Librarian', The Library, 5th ser., xii (1957), 1–10

ALEC HYATT KING/R

Sqwarenote. See SQUARE .

Srayffaiff. See SCHREYERPFEIFE.

Srb [Debrnov, Srb-Debrnov], Josef (b Debrno, nr Kralupy nad Vltavou, 18 Sept 1836; d Prague, 1 Sept 1904). Czech writer on music. He was educated in Prague at the Malá Strana grammar school and Prague University (1858–63), where he studied history and Slavonic philology. As a youth he sang alto at St Štěpán and the Týn church and later also sang at the Žofínská Akademie. He was a member of the St Cecilia Society, and while at the university ran first his own quartet and then an octet. From 1863 to 1879 he held posts successively as assistant teacher, tutor and clerk, but then decided to renounce a secure income and devote his energies to the cause of Czech music. He took a leading part in the organization of the Prague Hlahol choir (1864–5, 1876–91) and was on excellent terms with the leading Czech musicians; he was Smetana's most intimate friend during the composer's last five years. For his literary work Srb adopted the name Josef Debrnov. He provided German translations for The Bartered Bride and three other operas by Smetana, as well as Bendl's Lejla, and many of Dvořák's songs and duets. His unpublished Slovník hudebních umělců slovanských ('Dictionary of Slavonic musical artists'), on which he worked for 25 years, though uncritical, contains useful source material.

WRITINGS

Dějiny konservatoře pražské [History of the Prague Conservatory] (Prague, 1878)
'Friedrich Smetana', AMz, vi (1879)
'Umění a škola' [Art and school], Dalibor, i (1879), 59–60, 67–8, 123–5
'Smetanovo smyčcové kvarteto "Z mého života"' [Smetana's string quartet 'From my Life'], Dalibor, i (1879), 69–70
'Varhanická škola v Praze' [The Prague Organ School], Dalibor, i (1879), 147–8, 171–2, 179–80, 186–8, 212–14, 218–20
'Návštěva v Jabkenicích' [A visit to Jabkenice], Dalibor, iii (1881), 213–15
'Antonín Dvořák', Kalendář českých hudebníků (1882)
Instrumentace, stručný návod ku poznání nástrojů s dodatkem o hudbě komorní [Instrumentation: concise manual ... with an appendix on chamber music] (Prague, 1883)
'Poslední rok života B. Smetany' [Smetana's last year], Dalibor, vii (1885), 177–80
'Smetanovy styky s Hlaholem' [Smetana's relations with the Hlahol choir], Dalibor, viii (1886), 176–80
Dějiny hudby v Čechách a na Moravě [A history of music in Bohemia and Moravia] (Prague, 1891)
'Čechy, v: dějiny hudby' [Bohemia, v: music history], Ottův slovník naučný, vi (Prague, 1893), 361–76
'O pozaunářích' [On trombone players], Dalibor, xxiv (1902), 297–8, 305–6
Z deníků Bedřicha Smetany[From Smetana's diaries] (Prague, 1902)
Vzpomínky starého muzikanta na Smetanu a Dvořáka [An old musician's reminiscences of Smetana and Dvořák] (Prague, 1930)
Slovník hudebních umělců slovanských [Dictionary of Slavonic musical artists] (MS, CZ-Pnm)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ČSHS [with list of compositions and further bibliography]
V. Balthasar: Bedřich Smetana, pt i: Dopisy B. Smetany na J. Srba-Debrnova [Bedřich Smetana: letters of Smetana to Srb] (Prague, 1924)
F. Bartoš, ed.: Smetana ve vzpomínkách a dopisech [Smetana in reminiscences and letters] (Prague, 1939, 9/1954; Eng. trans., 1955)
J. Čeleda: Smetanův druh sděluje: život a dílo Josefa Srba-Debrnova [Smetana's companion communicates: the life and work of Srb] (Prague, 1945)
B. Large: Smetana (London, 1970)
J. Clapham: Smetana (London and New York, 1972)

JOHN CLAPHAM/R

Srebotnjak, Alojz (b Postojna, Slovenia, 27 June 1931). Slovene composer. He studied composition at the Ljubljana Academy of Music (1958) with Škerjanc, in Rome with Porrena (1958–9), in London with Fricker (1960–61) and in Paris (1963). After teaching at the Pedagogic Academy (1964–70) he taught composition at the Ljubljana Academy until his retirement in 1995. Among composers of his generation, Srebotnjak has the most distinctively expressionist style, despite the diversity of his techniques, which range from 12-note serialism to aleatory works and graphic scores.

WORKS
(selective list)

Ballet: Trobenta in vrag [The Trumpet and the Devil], 1980
Orch: Music for str, 1955, rev. 1982; Sinfonietta in due tempi, 1958; Monologues, fl, ob, hn, timp, str, 1962; Antifona, 1964; The Karst Suite, 1964; Koncertantne Episode [Episodes concertantes], 1967; Hp Conc., 1971; Vn Conc., 1975; Slovenica, 1976; Lamento, 1976; Balade, 1977; Klic narave (Naturae vox), 1981; Slovenski ljudski plesi [Slovenian Folk Dances], str, 1982; Rapsodica, str, 1988; Slovenski ljudski plesi, 1993
Chbr and solo inst: Fantasia notturna, 3 vn, cl, hp, 1956; Sonatina no.1, vn, pf, 1957; Invenzione variata, pf, 1961; Serenata, fl, cl, bn, 1961; Sonatina no.2, vn, pf, 1966; Sonatina no.3, vn, pf, 1968; Dnevnik [Diary], pf trio, 1972; Naif, college, ens, 1977; Macedonica, collage, ens, 1978; Spray, collage, ens, 1981; Variacije na temo M. Kogoja, 1984; Variacije na temo Slavka Osterca, 1990
Cants.: Mati [Mother], 1955; Vojne slike [War Pictures], 1957; Microsongs, 1964; Ekstaza smrti [Ecstasy of Death], 1965; Naivni Orfej [A Village Orpheus], 1973; Zjasni zvezde mu temné! [Brighten, Dark Stars!], 1990
Songs, choruses, music for film and theatre

Principal publisher: G. Schirmer

BIBLIOGRAPHY

N. O'Laughlin: 'Alojz Srebotnjak's use of Twelve-Note Techniques', MZ, xxvi (1990), 45–57
F. Křižnar and T. Pinter: Sodobni slovenski skladatelji/Contemporary Slovenian Composers, ed. I. Bizjak (Ljubljana, 1997), 216–17, 315

ANDREJ RIJAVEC/IVAN KLEMENČIČ

Sri Lanka, Democratic Socialist Republic of [formerly Ceylon] (Sinh. Sri Lanka Prajathanthrika Samajavadi Janarajaya). Country in Asia. It is an island in the Indian Ocean, roughly 38 km from the southern tip of India and 960 km north of the Equator. With an area of approximately 65,610 km², it has a population of around 18·8 million (2000 estimate).

1. Introduction. 2. Tamil music and the music of Islam. 3. Sinhala music. 4. Music in the older religious networks. 5. Popular music. 6. Instruments.

1. INTRODUCTION. From the standpoint of music and musical performance practice, one of the most significant features of Sri Lanka is its long involvement in the political and commercial life of the region. Situated with the Arabian Sea to the west and the Bay of Bengal to the east, Sri Lanka has since ancient times participated in an intricate East-West economy, negotiating the sale of its sought-after natural resources (pearls, spices and elephants). The destinies of three important kingdoms in Sri Lanka – Anuradhapura (137–1000), Polonnaruva (1055–1255) and Kotte (1371–1597) – were tied to shifting centres of trade between the Indian Ocean and the Arabian Sea. Anuradhapura remained the capital until the 12th century, when trading networks in south India shifted trade from the west to the east coast of India, more strategically located for Polonnaruva. The south-western kingdom of Kotte became dominant during the 14th century, when the centre of trade moved back to the western coastal areas in response to the international demand for commodities associated with the southwest (pearls and gems). Strategic alliances between influential families in India and Sri Lanka were not uncommon. In the 16th century Sri Lanka's strategic location and its natural resources became a focus of European imperial expansion. The Portuguese colonized parts of the south and south-west in 1505, the Dutch took over in 1658 and the British in 1796. Ceylon achieved independence in 1948 and became the Republic of Sri Lanka in 1972.

These extensive regional and international connections gave rise to several diasporic groups. About 74% of Sri Lankans are Sinhala, 18% are Tamil, and 7% are Muslim. Burghers (a census category for Sri Lankans who married into Portuguese or Dutch communities) constitute about 1% of the population. Statistically smaller groups are Chetties, Parsi, Eurasians and the descendants of African peoples brought first as slaves by the Portuguese, and later as soldiers by the British. Although numerically small, their performance genres are a rich source of information on the African diaspora in South Asia as well as on the forging of creole cultures – Iberian, African, Asian and Euorpean – in the shadow of colonial occupation.

In the 1990s roughly 15% of the population (mostly Tamil) practiced Hinduism; almost 70% (mainly Sinhala) practiced Theravada Buddhism. 7% of Sri Lankans practiced some form of Christianity, another 7% practiced Islam. Sinhala people also recognize another network of religious practices and ideologies. Characterized as the 'older religion', it includes elements found throughout South Asia, such as worship of local deities, popular Hinduism and astrology.

The biases of colonial scholars and travellers, for example their narrow focus upon Sanskrit texts on music in India, have diverted attention from the vibrant spectrum of music and musical practices in Sri Lanka. Colonial prejudices against non-'classical' music and against music of diasporic communities has endured. The impact of these biases has been to create an incomplete body of scholarly research in all languages about Sri Lanka's performance traditions and to stereotype Sri Lanka as an area of derivative, uninteresting music.

2. Tamil music and the music of Islam. Little research has been carried out on the Tamil and Muslim communities. In the Muslim community Qur'anic recitation styles and Sufi-related music and performing practices remain to be studied, as does the inclusion of characteristically West Asian instruments (oboe and kettledrum) in the Buddhist temple ensemble, hēvisi. Similarly, the social history and structure of Tamil prosody bears directly on the genesis of traditional and religious musical forms now thought of as Sinhala. The Hindu temple ensemble, consisting of the tavil and double-reed nāgasvaram, is ubiquitous in Sri Lanka. It appears that the great cultural capital of northern Sri Lanka, Jaffna, occupies a position of some prominence in the southern Indian region for its nāgasvaram players.

Buddhist initiation dance, accompanied by a hevisi ensemble, with ḍavula (double-headed cylindrical drums), tammäṭṭama (double kettledrums) and horanäva (double reed instruments)

3. SINHALA MUSIC. Musical genres and performance practices in Sinhala Sri Lanka are generally divided into three cultural areas, distinguished by region: 'low-country' refers to music and performance practices of the southern areas; 'up-country' refers to the interior north-central regions; and Sabaragamuwa, probably the least studied, between the two. An important feature of musical forms and practices in these regions is their development more or less outside of the homogenizing influences of centralized state or court networks. Instead, localized teacher lineages (guru paramparā) retain proprietary rights to repertories and styles that, in turn, are related not to any particular school or system of music, but to particular practices. A unifying feature of these fairly localized repertories and practices is the use of intoned recitation and chanted prose. In Sinhala chanted verse and sung prose (kavi), prescribed sequences of long and short syllables (mātra) structure the melodic rhythm. These sequences and metres are influenced by Sanskrit and Pali, and perhaps by an older, pre-Buddhist, language, and given the vital political, musical, religious and military exchanges in the region over time, by regional languages such as Telugu and Tamil as well. The vocal range of Sinhala prosody is typically narrow, generally involving three to four semitones in chanted verse of the older religion, and three semitones in Theravada Buddhist recitation. Intoned recitation and chanted prose in the repertories of the old religion, Buddhist chant and Sinhala traditional music are formulaic in nature and reflect a broader, older musical history of the South Asian region, for the practice of chanting protective formulae has been known in South Asia since pre-Buddhist times (de Silva, 1981).

The diversity of Buddhist musical offerings includes chanted recitation of religious texts by monks (bhikkus) and instrumental musical offerings by lay people. Temple processions (perahēras) often include a snare drum and trumpet ensemble, pappara. At the Daladā Māligawa, the main Buddhist temple in Kandy, a group of praise singers (kavikāra maḍuva) sing eulogies (praśasti) to Buddha using melodies from 18th-century South India (Seneviratna, 1975). A temple band of musicians, hēvisi, plays musical offerings three times daily. A Buddhist system of instrument classification, pañcatūrya nāda, involves five categories of instruments: idiophones, aerophones and three types of membranophone (Seneviratna, 1979). Pirit (paritta, Pali: 'protection'), Buddhist chant, is a style of intoned recitation based on phonological properties of Pali, restricted melodically to a three-tone scale. Nowadays, pirit ceremonies may be conducted on any auspicious occasion, religious or secular, and can last anywhere from one hour to seven days (Sheeran, 1995).

Drumming in Sri Lanka also remains a topic for further research: while as many as 90% of Sinhala drum repertories are named for specific dance sequences in the practices of the older religions, there is some debate as to whether they can be consolidated into any single, overarching theoretical system (Makulloluwa, 1962; Kulatillake, 1980).

4. MUSIC IN THE OLDER RELIGIOUS NETWORKS. Formally, these systems recognize four major guardian deities. Buddhist temples contain a special shrine, or dēvālē, for the deities; lay religious specialists, kapurāla, preside over them. There are also secondary spirit beings whose spheres of influence tend to be rooted in specific locales, as well as malevolent and beneficent planetary deities. The social history and present practice of dēvālē ceremonies constitute an especially rich topic for further research (Kariyawassam, 1990). Scholars have long recognized the complexity of the interaction between Buddhism and the old religion, including the eventual consolidation of the old religion within an overall Buddhist framework (Obeyeskere, 1963). A genealogy of the musical styles in dēvālē ceremonies would illuminate the multiple forces that flowed through this interaction and that continue to make them vibrant forums of social, political and religious commentary.

Tovil refers to a cluster of practices that involve control and expulsion of malignant influences. They became a focus of missionaries and colonial administrators during the British colonial era as examples of 'heathenism' in the colonies and gave rise subsquently to a number of studies about dance, exorcism, religion and healing (e.g. Wirz, 1954; Kapferer, 1983). Tovil practices usually involve possession, as well as appearances of various spirit entities in masked form. Religious specialists (yakādurā) intone verses in a variety of metres whose form and social histories remain to be studied. Pitch ranges are generally narrow: three to four semitones are common in the low-country, while a slightly broader range is used in the up-country. A popular secular genre, kōlam, a masked theatre of south-western Sri Lanka, may have roots in tovil, though kōlam is also thought to be influenced by the South Indian nāṭukkūṭṭu.

Bali śanti karma (śanti, 'peace'; karma, 'action') refers to a cluster of practices involving offerings to planetary deities that are thought to bring peace and good health and to restore equanimity. Low-country bali tends towards gentleness, up-county bali incorporates slightly more athleticism. Dancers use hand-bells to create an encompassing sonic envelope; drummers play complex microrhythms while the bali ādurā recites the verses.

A now rarely performed set of practices is the kohomba kankāriya, ceremonies of supplication to spirit beings, including the powerful up-country god Kohomba. Kankāriya practices may contain the entire repertory of drum music for the main up-country drum, the gāta bēra (Kulatillake, 1980). Walcott (1978) suggests that the presentation of the gods' stories through song is at the heart of the offering's efficacy.

Other genres incorporating elements of prosody such as narrow vocal ranges, intoned recitation and sung verse are the puppet theatre of south-western Sri Lanka, rukkada, and a high-spirited dramatic genre of the up-country that involves mime and impersonation, sokari (Sarachchandra, 1966).

5. POPULAR MUSIC. A range of popular musical styles has flourished as a result of Sri Lanka's long history of inter- and intra-regional contact. Nurti is associated with the Sinhala music theatre of the early 20th century, with probable roots in the music of Parsi and Marathi theatre troupes from North India (see INDIA, §IX, 1(i)). Nurti music dominated urban popular music in Sri Lanka until the 1930s, when Indian film music entered the scene. Bailā is a popular music and dance genre with probable roots in Afro-Portuguese performance traditions in Sri Lanka. Whether amplified or acoustic, bailā music characteristically uses instrumental combinations that include the banjo or mandolin, violin, guitar, rabāna (hand-held frame drum) and a pair of congas. When it involves a solo singer and a chorus, it is known as chorus bailā, a genre brought into prominence via radio by Wally Bastiansz (1913–85). Vāde ('debate') bailā, less common than chorus bailā, calls on performers to extemporize on themes and melodies set by a panel of judges or by the audience.

Sinhala pop, a genre that has been developing since the 1960s, combines influences from Indian film to Western pop, including reggae. The typical set-up consists of a solo singer and electronic drum sets, synthesizers and electric guitars. In the capital city, Colombo, a thriving English-language popular music scene may include cover tunes as well as originals 'in the Western popular idiom'. Sarala gī, 'light-classical' music, involves duets or solo singing and, usually, an 'oriental orchestra' (sitār, violins, tablā, flute and sarod). Sarala gī came of age more or less during a time of rapid expansion in radio transmissions throughout South Asia, when the demand for music programming grew and when Indian cinema music easily dominated popular tastes. In reaction, some cultural nationalists in both India and Sri Lanka began advocating the incorporation of classical and folk music into popular styles. Some Sri Lankan exponents, including the folk musicians Nelum Devi and Devar Surya Sena, Ananda Samarakoon (1911–62) and Sunil Shanta (1915–81), travelled to Rabindranath Tagore's arts institute in Bengal, Santiniketan, to join others in this process of musical experimentation.

6. Instruments. The 'southern drum', yak bera, is a long (roughly 67 cm), double-headed cylindrical drum that is suspended from a player's waist with a rope and played with two hands. Cow intestines are a common material for the drum head. The up-country gāta bēre is a double-headed barrel drum. Like the yak bera it is played with both hands and suspended from the player's waist with a rope. It measures roughly 67 cm in length and 85 cm in diameter at the widest part. Different materials are used for the left- and right-hand drum heads (e.g. monkey or goat for the right; cow for the left). The double-headed barrel drum daule is 45 cm long and has large drum heads 34 cm in diameter. It hangs suspended from the drummer's waist and is played with a stick in the right hand and bare left hand. The tammāṭṭa (pokuru) bera is a pair of kettledrums tied together, characterized erroneously by colonial writers as 'tom-toms'. It is played suspended from a player's waist and beaten with two supple, spring-loaded sticks (kaduppu) that are partially covered in cloth. The tammāṭṭa elaborates on the rhythmic cycle given by the daule. The horanāva is a conical-bore, quadruple-reed oboe. It can vary in size, anywhere from 20 to 35 cm in length, and have six to eight finger holes. In the hēvisi ensemble the horanāva player embellishes a series of set, skeletal melody patterns. Diverse social histories are inscribed in the music of the kavikāra maḍuva musical performance: the uḍākki hourglass drum and the pantaru reflect the broad religious and musical influences operating within Theravada Buddhist contexts. The uḍākki (also ḍamaru) is an hourglass drum identified both with Śiva and with Buddhist Tantric practice. The pantaru is an idiophone, a metal-framed instrument with jingles that are thought to signify the circle of planets.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Grove6 (K.S. Atwood)

P. Wirz: Exorcism and the Art of Healing in Ceylon (Leyden, 1954)

B. de Zoete: Dance and Magic Drama in Ceylon (London, 1957)

G. Obeyesekere: 'The Great Tradition and the Little in the Perspective of Sinhalese Buddhism', Journal of Asian Studies, xxii/2 (1963), 139–53

J.E. Sederaman: Lamkāwē bali upata [Origin of planet exorcism in Sri Lanka] (Colombo, 1964)

E.R. Sarachchandra: The Folk Drama of Ceylon (Colombo, 1966)

J.E. Sederaman: Bali yāga vicharaya [Study of planet exorcism rituals] (Colombo, 1967)

O. Pertold: The Ceremonial Dances of the Sinhalese: an Inquiry into Sinhalese Folk Religion (Dehiwara, 1973)

F. Berberich: The Tavil Construction, Technique, and Context in Present-Day Jaffna (thesis, U. of Hawaii, 1974)

A. Seneviratna: 'Musical Rituals of the Dalada Maligawa Pertaining to the Temple of the Sacred Tooth', Sangeet Natak, xxxvi (1975), 21–42

M.M. Ames: Tovil: the Ritual Chanting, Dance and Drumming of Exorcism in Sri Lanka (New York, 1977)

R. Walcott: Khomoba Kankariya: an Ethnomusicological Study (diss., U. of Sri Lanka, 1978)

A. Seneviratna: 'Pañcaturya Nada and the Hewisi Puja', EthM, xxiii (1979), 49–56

C. de S. Kulatillake: Metre, Melody and Rhythm in Sinhala Music (Colombo, 1980)

L. de Silva: 'Paritta: a Historical and Religious Study of the Buddhist Ceremony for Peace and Prosperity in Sri Lanka', Spolia Zeylanica, xxxvi/1 (1981)

B. Kapferer: A Celebration of Demons (Bloomington, IN, 1983)

S. Ariyaratne: Gramafōn gī yugaya [The gramophone songs era] (Colombo, 1986)

T. Kariyawassam: Bali yāga piḷiwela [The order of planet exorcism rituals] (Colombo, 1986)

S. Ariyaratne: Ananda Samarakoon adhayanaya [Ananda Samarakoon: a critical study] (Colombo, 1988)

T. Kariyawassam: Gam maḍu purāṇaya [Village thanksgiving ritual of olden times] (Colombo, 1990)

C. de. S. Kulatillake: Ethnomusicology: its Content and Growth and Ethnomusicological Aspects of Sri Lanka (Colombo, 1991)

C. de S. Kulatillake: 'Sri Lanka', Ethnomusicology: Historical and Regional Studies, ed. H. Myers (1993), 297–9 [incl. bibliography]

D. Scott: Formations of Ritual: Colonial and Anthropoligical Discourses on the Senhalu Yaktovil (Minneapolis, 1994)

A. Sheeran: White Noise: European Modernity, Sinhala Musical Nationalism and the Practice of a Creole Popular Music in Modern Sri Lanka (diss., U. of Washington, 1997)

ANNE SHEERAN

Srnka, Jiří (b Písek, 19 Aug 1907; d Prague, 31 Jan 1982). Czech composer. He studied with Jan Mařák and Jindřich Feld senior (violin, 1922–4) and with Šín (composition, 1924–8) at the Prague Conservatory, where he also attended the masterclasses given by Novák (composition, 1928–32) and Hába (quarter-tone composition, 1934–7). His first appointment was in Ježek's orchestra at the Liberation Theatre, Prague (1929–35), after which he played in the orchestras of the National Theatre and of Radiojournal. From the beginning of the 1930s, however, he turned his attention almost completely to film music, becoming, with Trojan and Lucký, one of the leading Czech composers in the field. He lectured on film music at the Prague Academy of Musical Arts from 1950 to 1953.

Srnka's stylistic development was initiated under Hába's aegis. At the end of the 1930s, however, Srnka drew close to Czech folksong in style, and simplified his language largely as a result of his involvement with films.

He wrote more than 120 film scores, almost half of them for full-length works. Characteristic of his style are his lapidary, epigrammatic manner (as in Jan Hus and Jan Žižka) and his melodic invention, which is well displayed even where complicated harmonic relationships or an emphasis on colour exist (e.g. Krakatit). The folksong of south Bohemia, whose atmosphere Srnka approached most closely, influenced the broad arching of his melodic lines, the symmetry of his motif construction and his expressive lyricism.

WORKS
(selective list)

Film scores: Dejte nám křídla [Give us Wings], 1936; Včera neděle byla [Yesterday was Sunday], 1938; Ohnivé léto [A Fiery Summer], 1939; Pohádka máje [The Fairy Tale of May], 1940; Nezbedný bakalář [The Mischievous Bachelor], 1946; Krakatit, 1948; Němá barikáda [The Silent Barricade], 1949; Vstanou noví bojovníci [New Warriors Arise], 1951; Měsíc nad řekou [The Moon over the River], 1953; Stříbrný vítr [The Silver Wind], 1954; Jan Hus, 1955; Jan Žižka, 1955; Proti všem [Against Everything], 1957; Praha – matka měst [Prague – Mother of Cities], 1958

Orch: Sym. Fantasia, 1932–5; Vn Conc., 1957; Historické obrázky [Historic Pictures], str, 1961; Partita, vn, chbr orch, 1962

Vocal: Songs (K.H. Mácha), Mez/Bar, pf, 1936; Dětský rok [The Children's Year] (F. Hrubín), choral cycle, 1951

Chbr: Str Qt no.1, 1928; Wind Qt, 1928; Suite, vn, pf, 1929; Str Qnt, str qt, vc, 1930; Str Qt no.2, 1936; 3 skladby [3 Compositions], vn, pf, 1961

Pf: Suite, 1933; Fantasia, 1934; 2 čtvrttónové [2 Quarter-Tones], 1936; 3 skladby [3 Compositions], 1937

Principal publishers: Československý Filmové Nakladatelství, Československý Státní Film, Československá Televize Praha, R.A. Dvorský, Melantrich

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Hába: 'Jiří Srnka', Program D37, iv (1937), 2

'Jiří Srnka: profil skladatele' [Srnka: profile of the composer], Rytmus, ix (1943–4), 110

J. Pilka: 'Hudba k filmům Jan Hus a Jan Žižka', HRo, ix (1956), 223–5, 269–70

J. Pilka: Filmová hudba Jiřího Srnky (Prague, 1957) [incl. list of works and bibliography]

J. Pilka: Jiří Srnka a jižní Čechy [Srnka and south Bohemia] (České Budějovice, 1988)

OLDŘICH PUKL

Šrom, Karel (b Plzeň, 14 Sept 1904; d Prague, 21 Oct 1981). Czech composer, writer on music and administrator. A private composition pupil of Zelinka and Karel Hába, he studied law (JUDr 1927) and worked for many years as an administrator. He was also drama director of the Osvobozené Divadlo (Free Theatre) of Jiří Voskovec and Jan Werich and a music critic concentrating on contemporary work. In 1945 he was made chief of the music section of Czech Radio. He was editor-in-chief for the state music publishers and first director of the Český Hudební Fond (1954–60); after 1961 he devoted his attentions to composing and writing. As a composer he began as a disciple of Alois Hába's atonal, athematic style, moving later in the direction of greater clarity and balance. His later music includes large-scale works and small, witty pieces based on folktales; the style is fresh and inventive, particularly in instrumentation and rhythm, with a tendency towards grotesque humour.

WORKS
(selective list)

Orch: Sym. no.1, 1930; Suita, 1934; Sym. no.2, 1951; Plivník [The Sprite], scherzo, 1953; Vzdech na bruslích [The Sigh on Skates], sym. allegretto after C. Morgenstern: Galgenlieder, 1957; Hajaja, suite, 1961; Pf Conc., 1961; Study, 1970; Malá suita, chbr orch, 1972; Conc., 2 fl, str, 1973; Scherzi notturni, chbr orch, 1974

Chbr and solo inst: 2 str qts, 1923, 1943; Scherzové trio, str trio, 1943; 7 kousků [7 Pieces], pf, 1943; Vynajítka, 9 insts, 1952; Soumrak [Twilight], pf cycle, 1965

Vocal: Tvář [Countenance] (F. Halas), A, pf, 1936

WRITINGS

Orchestr a dirigent (Prague, 1960)

Záhudbí [Beyond music] (Prague, 1965)

Karel Ančerl (Prague, 1968)

JAN TROJAN

Śruti (Sans.:'that which is heard'). In Indian musical theory, the smallest audible interval, a microtone; especially a microtone as opposed to a scale degree (svara). Only the latter are employed as melodic pitches. However, śruti appear in ornamentation and in different modes the svara may be theoretically located at different microtonal positions. Thus according to the Nāṭyaśāstra of Bharata (early centuries CE) there were 22 śruti to the octave and seven svara, spaced at intervals of 2, 3 and 4 śruti. Bharata's demonstration of this theory using two harps (vīṇā) proves only that the śruti were regarded as equal in size, and that the scales were tuned by ear. The relationship of intervals to relative string lengths is first discussed in the works of Hṛdaya Nārāyana and Ahobala Paṇḍita (*c*1660). After the 13th century the number of theoretical svara-positions stabilized at 12 and the relationship of these to the 22 śruti became problematic. From the 18th century the relevance of Bharata's śruti concept to current practice became a matter of contentious debate among both Indian and European scholars, fuelled both by Orientalist interest in parallels with ancient Greek scale theory, and by an indigenous re-evaluation of music as an ancient Hindu tradition. In South India śruti also denotes the tonic drone (called kharaj in the North). (See INDIA, §III, I.)

RICHARD WIDDESS

Ssugh. A sign indicating the shortening of the duration of a note in Armenian EKPHONETIC NOTATION.

St –. Headings that begin with this abbreviation are alphabetized as 'Saint'.

Staar, René (b Graz, 30 May 1951). Austrian composer and violinist. He studied at the Östermalms Musikskola (1962–3), the Sibelius Academy, Helsinki (1968–9), and the Vienna Hochschule für Musik (1963–75, 1977–9), where his teachers included Franz Samohyl (violin), Hans Swarowsky and Karl Österreicher (conducting), Alfred Uhl and Roman Haubenstock-Ramati (composition). He also studied the violin with Nathan Milstein at the Zürich Master Courses. After settling in Vienna in 1986, he co-founded the Ensemble Wiener Collage, of which he has served as artistic director. He became a member of the Vienna Staatsoper orchestra in 1988 and of the Vienna PO in 1991. In 1993 he was appointed director of the Graz-Petersburg Ensemble. He founded the Ensemble Wien-Paris in 1996.

Staar's works group into extensive series, each of which consists of individual pieces and their revisions. His compositions are based on an intensive processing of material: in Bagatellen auf den Namen György Ligeti (1989–96), he superimposed rhythms to develop complex structures; in Versunkene Träume (1993), he built a harmonic foundation out of alterations to the intervallic composition of chords. He has also derived musical material from letter names and gained inspiration from elements of Japanese musical tradition (Kodai no ibuki,

'Breath of Ancient Times', 1996). Pulsating basic cells, temporal planes and stylistic layers combine, as if in montage, to create dream-like sound worlds, which refer to the tragic aspects of human life (Just an Accident?, 1985). (LZMÖ)

WORKS
(selective list)

Orch: Movimientos para Don José Haydn, op.8, chbr orch, 1981–3, rev. 1990; Divertissements Suisses 1–5, op.10/1–5, 3 cl, chbr orch, 1983–; Das wachsende Schloss, op.13/1, vn, orch, 1986; Metamorphosen eines Labyrinths, op.22a, vn, str, 1991; La fontaine du sang, op.22b, vn, orch, 1992–3; Metropolitan Midnight Music, op.22d, 1992–3; Europafanfaren, op.28, 1994 [2 versions]

Vocal: Kyrie I–III, chorus, orch, 1984–5; Just an Accident? (requiem, A. Levy), op.9, spkr, S, orch, 1985; 2 Lieder (E. Lasker-Schüler), S, pf/chbr ens, 1987; Kodai no ibuki [Breath of Ancient Times], chorus, Jap. insts, vn, 1996; Heine Frags., S, Bar, chbr orch, 1997

Chbr and solo inst: Fantasia, op.5, 4 viol, 1979–80; Structures I–VI, op.7/1–6, various ens, 1981–2; Pf Trio no.1, op.11/1, 1982–4; Epilogue to Just an Accident?, op.9 ter, vn, pf, 1983; 10 Studies to Just an Accident?, op.9 bis, pf, 1983; Ständchen & Sitzen, op.14/1, vn, pf, 1985; Bagatellen auf den Namen György Ligeti, op.14/3a 1–8, pf, 1989–96; Gemini, op.24/1–11, vn, inst, 1990–; Versunkene Träume, 6 sketches, op.22c, str qt, 1993; Jam Session 'for Fritz', op.14/6, improvisational ens, 1996; Aug 18th, 1936 (-death of gypsy boy-), 2 spkrs, ens, 1998; Monumentum pro Thomas Alva Edison Erectum AD MIIMM, op.34/1, vn, gui, db, 1998

GÜNTHER LEUCHT

Staatliches Institut für Musikforschung. German musical institute. Established in Bückeburg under court patronage in 1917, the Fürstliches Institut für Musikwissenschaftliche Forschung (C.A. Rau, director) consisted of a library, a special collection of 16th-century music, a department to serve local musical activities and an archive of reproductions of German musical manuscripts and rare printed editions. Its journal, Archiv für Musikwissenschaft (AMw), first appeared in 1918, followed by the publication of monographs, facsimiles and editions of early music pertinent to the history of Bückeburg. Crippled by the economic crisis, the institute discontinued Archiv für Musikwissenschaft in 1926 and ceased most of its other functions during the Depression.

In 1933 officials in the Nazi Education Ministry worked together with Max Seiffert (interim director since Rau's death in 1921) to resurrect the institute, move it to Berlin and expand its functions. In 1935 the new Staatliches Institut für Deutsche Musikforschung was established in Berlin, annexed two other Berlin collections (the Archiv Deutscher Volkslieder and the music instrument collection of the Hochschule für Musik) and assumed co-editorship of Zeitschrift für Musikwissenschaft (ZMw; renamed Archiv für Musikforschung in 1936). Its largest undertaking was the supervision of all existing and forthcoming Denkmäler series, including DDT, DTB and DTÖ (after the annexation of Austria in 1938). All were produced thereafter as Das Erbe deutscher Musik (EDM) under the supervision of Heinrich Besseler. Besseler also initiated the institute's bi-monthly magazine, Deutsche Musikkultur, to render musicological work accessible to a general readership. The institute published two bibliographies (Bibliographie des Musikschrifttums and Verzeichnis der Neudrucke alter Musik) and in 1943 laid the foundation for the most comprehensive music reference work in postwar Germany, Die Musik in Geschichte und Gegenwart (MGG), appointing Friedrich Blume as general editor. Its folk music division, directed first by Kurt Huber and later by Alfred Quellmalz, collected and catalogued folk music transcriptions and edited folksong editions. During the war the division worked together with Himmler's SS to study the folk practices of ethnic Germans destined for resettlement in the Reich.

Hans Albrecht succeeded Seiffert as director in 1941, and during the war the institute was forced to move out of its Berlin quarters and relocate to a castle in Liegnitz, while its collections were dispersed throughout the country to avoid damage. After the war the institute lost many of its functions to other interests (EDM and MGG were coordinated in Kiel under Blume, and the functions of the folk music division were delegated to Regensburg and Freiburg). As the Institut für Musikforschung Gross Berlin in West Berlin, it was rebuilt in 1950 under the direction of Alfred Berner, and was centered on the music instrument collection and reviving the Bibliographie des Musikschrifttums. In 1962 the institute came under the aegis of the Stiftung Preussischer Kulturbesitz, and in 1965 Hans-Peter Reinicke (institute director from 1967, succeeded by Dagmar Droysen-Reber in 1984 and Thomas Ertelt in 1994) was appointed to establish a research department in musical acoustics. The institute expanded its historical projects with a publication series on the history of music theory and an archive of 19th-century music and took on the coordination of RILM in West Germany. The institute now forms part of the cultural complex (Kulturforum) at the centre of Berlin, alongside the Philharmonie, the Staatsbibliothek, the Nationalgalerie and a group of museums.

PAMELA H. POTTER

Stabat mater dolorosa (Lat.: 'sorrowfully his mother stood'). A poem used in the Roman liturgy as both a sequence and a hymn.

1. General and history to 1700. 2. Settings since 1700.

1. GENERAL AND HISTORY TO 1700. The poem Stabat mater dolorosa was once ascribed to Jacopone da Todi (d ?1306); though unlikely to be his, it is at any rate considered to be of 13th-century Franciscan origin. The text was apparently not intended as a sequence for the Mass, but it has the verse form of the later metrical sequence (i.e. pairs of versicles in 887 trochaic metre, with the rhyme scheme aab aab; see SEQUENCE (i), §10). At least three other medieval texts belong to the same general type: Stabat mater speciosa, Stabat iuxta Christi crucem and Stabat virgo mater Christi. The first of these is an imitation of the Stabat mater dolorosa intended for Christmas, the second is found as a sequence as early as the Dublin Troper (*c*1360, GB-Cu add.710; facs. in Monumenta Musicae Sacrae, iv, Rouen, 1970) where it is set to the melody of Salvatoris mater pia; it occurs, set by John Browne, in the Eton Choirbook as a votive antiphon. Browne also set the poem Stabat virgo mater Christi, which is otherwise unknown.

Stabat mater dolorosa came into use as a sequence in the late 15th century, in connection with the new Mass of the Compassion of the Blessed Virgin Mary (though not in the English uses); the plainchant melody assigned to the sequence (LU, 1634*v*) appears to be of the same date, although its melodic elements can be found in earlier sequences. It was removed from the liturgy by the Council of Trent (1543–63) but revived by Pope Benedict XIII in 1727 for use on the two feasts of the Seven Sorrows (the Friday in the fifth week of Lent and the third Sunday of September, later 15 September). The use of the Stabat mater as an Office hymn on the former occasion dates from the same time; in the Roman Breviary it was divided into the following sections: 'Stabat mater' (Vespers), 'Sancta mater istud agas' (Matins) and 'Virgo virginum praeclara' (Lauds). Stäblein (1956) gave four hymn melodies from 17th- and 18th-century sources; the Liber usualis melody (p.1424) seems to be a late 18th-century version resembling two of these. It was well established in this form by the end of the century; it appears with a bass in Motetts or Antiphons (1792) by Samuel Webbe (ii), and from there has passed into modern hymnals.

The text (with some variants) was set as a votive antiphon in the 15th century by such English composers as John Browne, William Cornysh (?ii), Richard Davy and Robert Hunt, the first three settings being in the Eton Choirbook (GB-WRec 178). The work by John Browne is indeed one of the great masterpieces of its period. Other settings before 1700 include those by Innocentius Dammonis, Josquin des Prez, Gaffurius, Gaspar van Weerbeke, Gregor Aichinger, Palestrina, Lassus, Agostino Steffani and Alessandro Scarlatti. The setting by Dammonis is a strophic four-part laude published by Petrucci in 1508. Josquin's five-part setting is based on similar material, which has led Reese (ReeseMR, p.253) to conjecture a 'lost' melody, and uses the tenor of Binchois' Comme femme desconfortée as a tenor cantus firmus. Weerbeke's simple and moving five-voice setting uses a version of the responsory Vidit speciosam as cantus firmus. Only one of the three settings of Stabat mater included in Haberl's edition of Palestrina's works is likely to be authentic; this is the celebrated eight-part work, remarkable for its sensitive declamation, rhythmic fluidity, harmonic expressiveness and subtle use of varied textures within a double-chorus framework. The Stabat mater by Lassus is an eight-part work added at the end of his second book of four-part Sacrae cantiones (1585).

2. Settings since 1700. The stile antico exerted its influence on polyphonic settings of the Stabat mater well into the 18th century, especially in Rome. Domenico Scarlatti's ten-part setting, probably composed between 1715 and 1719 while he was maestro of the Cappella Giulia, follows the best traditions of Roman choral writing, though with a decidedly modern feeling for harmony and tonality. Settings with orchestral accompaniment in which choruses alternate with solo arias and duets are more typical of 18th-century practice. A good example is Caldara's impressive setting, which adds to the standard vocal and orchestral forces of SATB soloists, chorus, strings and continuo the sepulchral tones of two trombones. They usually merely double the altos and tenors of the chorus, but in the tenor solo 'Tui nati vulnerati' they are given independent parts. Italian composers normally imposed some kind of tonal unity on the Stabat mater by beginning and ending in the same key and by pursuing a logical course through a series of related keys for the rest of the work (treating it much like a chamber cantata). Caldara reinforced his return to the home key by recalling the opening theme in the short fugal passage ('Fac, ut animae donetur paradisi gloria') which ends the work.

Outside Rome the sequence was sometimes set for solo voices only, with instrumental accompaniment. Pergolesi's setting, completed shortly before his death in 1736, was evidently intended to replace Alessandro Scarlatti's, which had been performed annually at Naples during Lent for many years. Both works are for soprano, alto, two violins and continuo and both are influenced by the secular cantata and the chamber duet. Scarlatti's setting is the more substantial, falling into 18 sections of which five are duets. Pergolesi's rather shorter composition achieved immediate popularity and appeared in print many times during the 18th century, often extensively rearranged. John Walsh (ii) published an edition in London in 1749, and 12 years later the Walsh firm brought out An Ode of Mr Pope's Adapted to the Principal Airs of the Hymn Stabat Mater Compos'd by Signor Pergolesi. An edition more representative of the 'improvements' effected by later hands is J.A. Hiller's of 1776, described on the title-page as 'improved in harmony, with added parts for oboes and flutes and arranged for four voices'.

The Stabat mater did not figure prominently among the church compositions of the Viennese school. Mozart's early setting (K33*c*, 1766) is lost, and Haydn's (1767) is not representative of his best work. Schubert's setting (D175, 1815) uses only the first 12 lines of the poem, which are then repeated to slightly different music. Like his setting of Klopstock's German paraphrase (D383, 1816), it is accompanied by an orchestra which includes three trombones. In the 19th century the sequence was often composed for concert rather than liturgical use. Rossini's setting, completed in 1841, vacillates between impressive choral sections and frankly operatic arias that too often show little regard for the meaning of the text. It was first performed, significantly enough, not in a church but at the Salle Ventadour, Paris, in 1842, when it was received with tremendous enthusiasm. It has remained one of the most popular settings of the text in the modern repertory. Dvořák expanded his Stabat mater (1877) to the proportions of an oratorio by rather tiresome repetition of both words and music and the use of unremittingly slow tempos. Liszt's setting, part of his monumental oratorio Christus (1862–7), is of particular interest for its structural use of part of the plainchant melody, heard at the opening and again at various points later in the work. Using a large orchestra, Liszt succeeded in combining grandiose gestures with passages of restrained, austere devotion.

Liszt's is among the most successful 19th-century settings, but the greatest is undoubtedly Verdi's, published in 1898 as the second of his Quattro pezzi sacri. Commentaries on it have tended to overstress the influence that Verdi's study of Palestrina had on the sacred works of his last years. It is more significant that in the Stabat mater Verdi was able to achieve a deep sincerity of utterance (as he did also in the Requiem) without renouncing a style perfected through years of experience in the opera house. As in Falstaff and Otello, the expressive points are made with the utmost economy and there is no textual repetition. The result is probably the shortest setting of the Stabat mater composed in the 19th century, and Verdi's example was followed by most 20th-century composers, although their orchestral requirements often rule out performance in church. Karol Szymanowski's (1925–6), Lennox Berkeley's (1947) and Poulenc's (1950) are outstanding settings. Another is Penderecki's (1962) for three unaccompanied choirs, which uses only six of the poem's 20 stanzas; the composer later incorporated it into his St Luke Passion. Bitter listed over 100 settings of the Stabat mater composed between 1700 and 1883, including those of Charpentier, Agostino Steffani, Tartini, Boccherini and Gounod. Among the many written since then may be mentioned those of Dohnányi, Kodály, Persichetti, Stanford and Virgil Thomson.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

HarrisonMMB
C.H. Bitter: Eine Studie zum Stabat Mater (Leipzig, 1883)
J. Kayser: Beiträge zur Geschichte und Erklärung der ältesten Kirchenhymnen, ii (Paderborn, 1886), esp. 110–92
J. Julian: A Dictionary of Hymnology (London, 1892, 2/1907, repr. 1915)
C. Carbone: L'inno del dolore mariano (Rome, 1911)
E. Schmitz: Das Madonnenideal in der Tonkunst (Leipzig, 1920)
B. Staäblein, ed.: Hymnen I, MMMA, i (1956)
F. Haberl: 'Stabat mater', Musica sacra, lxxvi (1956), 33
A. Robertson: Requiem: Music of Mourning and Consolation (London, 1967), chap.11
A.T. Sharp: A Descriptive Catalog of Selected Published Eighteenth-through Twentieth-Century Stabat Mater Settings for Mixed Voices, with a Discussion of the History of the Text (diss., U. of Iowa, 1978)
D. Faravelli: 'Stabat mater: poesia e musica', RIMS, iv (1983), 9–43
J. Blume: Geschichte der mehrstimmigen Stabat-mater-Vertonungen (Munich, 1992)
P.-G. Nohl: 'Das Stabat mater', Musik und Kirche, lxvii (1997), 97–106

JOHN CALDWELL (1), MALCOLM BOYD (2)

Stabile, Annibale (b Naples, ?*c*1535; d Cracow, April 1595). Italian composer. The name 'Annibale' is recorded as that of a boy singer at S Giovanni in Laterano from 1544 until 1545, and 'Annibale contralto' was a singer there from December 1555 until at least the end of 1556. Either or both of these references might have been to Stabile. The latter identification has been considered particularly likely, since Stabile called himself a pupil of Palestrina, who was maestro di cappella there in 1555–6. Judging by the dates of his publications and known employment, however, he may have been born *c*1545–50. Most of his life was spent in Rome. From October 1575 until 6 January 1578 he was maestro di cappella of S Giovanni in Laterano. He held the same position at the Collegio Germanico from July 1578 until 1590 (probably 6 February), during which time he was ordained (in 1582), and at S Maria Maggiore from 18 or 19 February 1591 until December 1594. From February 1595 until his death he was in the service of King Sigismund III of Poland; a work of his appeared in an anthology of motets by the king's musicians (RISM 1604[2]). He held several benefices, including that of S Lorenzo di Coll'Alto in the diocese of Nocera (Salerno); he was a member of the Virtuosa Compagnia dei Musici di Roma, which was officially founded in 1585.

Stabile's sacred music is generally less contrapuntal than Palestrina's, but eight of his motets employ strict canons. His madrigals are lyrical and sentimental, with supple rhythms and long smooth melodic lines; the later ones were moderately influenced by the lighter style that was popular in the last quarter of the 16th century.

Pompeo Stabile (b Naples, mid-16th century), probably a relative of Annibale, was from 1582 to 1583 organist at the SS Annunziata, Naples. His only publication, Il primo libro de madrigali a sei voci (Venice, 1585[32]), which contains a madrigal by Annibale, has a dedication signed from Genoa. He also contributed works to two anthologies (RISM 1585[31] and 1591[12]).

WORKS

SACRED

Letaniae . . . 8vv (Rome, 1583)
Motets, book 1 (Venice, 1584), lost
Sacrarum modulationum . . . liber secundus, 5, 6, 8vv (Venice, 1585), 1 ed. in Musica sacra, xvi (Berlin, 1939)
Sacrarum modulationum . . . liber tertius, 5, 6, 8vv (Venice, 1589)
Hymnus de gloria paradisi, 4vv (Dillingen, 1590); lost, 3 copies in D-Bsb
Litanies, 4vv (Venice, 1592), lost
10 Latin sacred works, 5–12 vv, 1583[2], 1590[5], 1596[2], 1604[2], 1604[6], 1607[2], 1611[1]
Missa 'Ung gay bergier', 4vv, ed. T. Maciejewski, Msze królewskie [Royal Masses] (Warsaw, 1979)
Missa 'Vestiva i colli', 5vv, ed. T. Maciejewski, Msze królewskie (Warsaw, 1979)
Missa cantantibus organis, 12vv, I-Rsg [Ky, Cr, Cruxifixus only; collab. Palestrina and others]; ed. in Monumenta polyphoniae italicae, i (Rome, 1930)

SECULAR

Il primo libro de madrigali, 5vv (Venice, 1572, rev. 2/1586) [1st edn lost]
Madrigali . . . di G.M. Nanino e di A. Stabile, 5vv (Venice, 1581[10])
Il terzo libro de madrigali, 5vv (Venice, 1585)
15 madrigals, 3–6vv, 1582[4]; 1582[5], ed. in NewcombMF; 1583[10], ed. in NewcombMF; 1583[11]; 1583[12]; 1583[14]; 1585[29]; 1585[32]; 1589[7]; 1589[11]; 1590[15]; 1591[12], ed. in C.H. Parry, Arion, iii (London, 1899); 1592[11]; 1593[3]

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. Casimiri: '"Disciplina musicae" e "mastri di capella" dopo il Concilio di Trento nei maggiori istituti ecclesiastici di Roma: Seminario romano – Collegio germanico – Collegio inglese (sec. XVI–XVII)', NA, xix (1942), 102–29
T.D. Culley: Jesuits and Music, i: A Study of the Musicians Connected with the German College in Rome during the 17th Century and of their Activities in Northern Europe (Rome, 1970)
J. Gołos: 'Liber missarum z archiwum kapituły warszawskiej' [A book of masses from the chapter archives in Warsaw], Muzyka, xviii/1 (1973), 40–55 [with Eng. summary]
T. Culley: 'Musical Activity in Some Sixteenth Century Jesuit Colleges, with Special Reference to the Venerable English College in Rome from 1579 to 1589', AnMc, no.19 (1979), 1–29
P. Ludwig: Studien zum Motettenschaffen der Schüler Palestrinas (Regensburg, 1986)
D.E. Hall: 'Annibale Stabile and the Italian Madrigal', East Meets West: Homage to Edgar C. Knowlton, Jr., ed. R.L. Hadlich and J.D. Ellsworth (Honolulu, 1988), 84–104
J. Gołos: 'Nieznane dzieła Annibala Stabile' [Unknown works by Annibale Stabile], Polskowłoskie materiały muzyczne, ed. M. Bristiger (Kraków, 1989), 363–5
M. Bizzarini: Marenzio: la carriera di un musicista tra rinascimento e contrariforma (Coccaglio, 1998)

RUTH I. DEFORD

Stabile, Mariano (b Palermo, 12 May 1888; d Milan, 11 Jan 1968). Italian baritone. He studied in Rome under Cotogni and made his début in his native Palermo in 1911, as Marcello in La bohème. His selection by Toscanini to sing the title role in Verdi's Falstaff for the opening of the 1921–2 season at La Scala, with thorough coaching by both Toscanini and De Luca, proved to be the turning-point of his career: he scored an enormous success and sang the part nearly 1200 times in the course of 40 years (see illustration). During his first Covent Garden season, in 1926, he appeared as Falstaff, Iago and Don Giovanni, and later became a notable Gianni Schicchi and Scarpia. He was greatly admired at Glyndebourne as Figaro and as Dr Malatesta in Don Pasquale; also as Don Alfonso in the Glyndebourne production of Così fan tutte at the 1948 Edinburgh Festival. He repeated some of these parts in London between 1946 and 1949, during the long postwar seasons of Italian opera mounted by the Russian-born impresario Jay Pomeroy at the Cambridge and Stoll theatres.

Mariano Stabile in the title role of Verdi's 'Falstaff'

At the Salzburg Festival he was a noted Falstaff (under Toscanini), Count Almaviva and Figaro (Barbiere di Siviglia). Stabile's vocal powers were not exceptional, and his great attainments were the result of a spontaneous dramatic exuberance tempered by a fine sense of style. His enunciation was unusually clear, and his mastery of dramatic inflection and gesture complete. These qualities found full scope in Don Pasquale and Così fan tutte, and in both these operas his relish of the approaching discomfiture of his victims always delighted the audience. Malatesta's 'Bella siccome un angelo' has been more smoothly vocalized by other singers, but there was something irresistibly comical in the gusto with which Stabile would arouse Don Pasquale's desires by his account of Norina's charms while at the same time holding him at arm's length with imperious gestures of restraint. His Falstaff, an ideal projection of the Fat Knight's geniality, wit and ridiculous ambitions as a lover, is chronicled on disc in both live and studio recordings.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

G. Gualerzi: 'Stabile – a Centenary Tribute', Opera, xxxix (1988), 1190–94

DESMOND SHAWE-TAYLOR/R

Stabile, Pompeo (b Naples, mid 16th century). Italian musician, probably a relative of ANNIBALE STABILE.

Stabingher [Stabinger, Staubingher], Mattia [Mathias] (b Florence, 7 April 1739; d ?Venice, ?1815). Italian composer and director of music, active also in Russia. Son of the oboist Melchior Stabinger, he presumably received his early musical instruction from his father and other members of the grand duke's ensemble in Florence; as a flautist, he was probably a pupil of Nicolas Dôthel. In 1772 he directed the concerts of the Académie des Beaux-Arts in Lyons, and is also mentioned as a composer and a solo flautist (not clarinettist). From 1778 to 1781 he was successful as a ballet composer and direttore d'orchestra per i balli in Milan, Venice, Rome and Palermo. After taking up appointments as maestro di cembalo in Warsaw and with the Mattei-Orecia troupe in St Petersburg, he went to Moscow, where he directed the Italian opera company at the Petrovsky theatre (Maddox's). There he produced an opera and the oratorio La Betulia liberata. He returned to Italy in 1783 and wrote L'astuzie di Bettina (for the Venice carnival, 1784) and ballet music for Vicenza and Cremona. In 1785 he took over the musical direction of the Petrovsky theatre again, had great success in producing his own operas (some now with Russian librettos), and played an active but not especially successful part in the musical education of Russian society. After relinquishing his Moscow post to Carlo Pozzi, he probably returned to Italy around the turn of the century. Dated manuscripts and dedications suggest that he was in Lucca in the service of Queen Maria Luisa of Etruria in 1805. His final phase of residence and date of death, however, remain unknown. Much of Stabingher's music is lost, but his two extant large-scale works reveal him to have been a skilful composer, experienced if not particularly subtle in handling the stylistic resources of the time. His instrumental music in particular, most of it for or including the flute, and clearly intended for an amateur public, shows a preference for simple melodies and small-scale forms. His quartets op.6 are the earliest known quartets for four flutes without a bass part.

WORKS

music lost unless otherwise stated

BALLETS

Les Matelots (J.G. Noverre), in: Der glückliche Schiffbruch, Vienna, 1769/72, see Dahms

L'Adelasia, o sia Lo scoprimento della figlia d'Ottone (A. Muzzarelli), in J.G. Naumann: Solimano, Mantua, Vecchio, carn. 1778

La Merope, in P. Anfossi and F. Bertoni: Lo zotico incivilito, Palermo, spr. 1778

Calipso abbandonata (G. Canziani), Milan, Scala, aut. 1778

La morte d'Odoardo IV and Il sposo geloso (D. Ricciardi), in P. Anfossi: L'americana in Olanda, Venice, S Samuele, aut. 1778

Il trionfo di Alessandro (D. Ricciardi), in G. Astarita and T. Traetta: Gli eroi dei campi elisi, Venice, S Samuele, carn. 1779

Le aventure d'Ircana and La sconfitta della amazzone (A. Muzzarelli), in A. Salieri: La fiera di Venezia, Milan, Cannoobiana, 1779

La congiura di Gloucester (A. Marliani), in F. Bianchi: Erifile, Pavia, spr. 1780

La forza d'amore and La pastorella fedele (G. Magni), in A. Salieri: La scuola de' gelosi, Piacenza, Cittadella, spr. 1780

La Rosalia (L. Baratozzi), in D. Cimarosa: L'italiana in Londra, Parma, sum. 1780

Ernelinda e Giscone (G. Onorati), in L. Cherubini: Mesenzio re d'Etruria, Treviso, Onigo, aut. 1783

La morte di Arrigo VI (Ricciardi brothers), in G. Giordani: Elpinice, Bologna, Zagnoni, aut. 1783

La pastorella delle Alpi (D. Ricciardi), in D. Cimarosa: L'Olimpiade, Vicenza, Eretenio, 1784

La contadina astuta (E. Luzzi), in F. Alessandri: La finta principessa, Cremona, Nazari, spr. 1785

Alessandro nelle Indie (D. Lefèvre), in P.A. Guglielmi: Enea e Lavinia, Naples, S Carlo, 4 Nov 1785

La congiuara del duca di Gloucester (M. Fabiani), in F. Bianchi: L' Arminio, Florence, Pergola, aut. 1790

Il matrimonio infelice (F. Morelli), Moscow, Petrovsky, 1791

Ballet music to J. Kozłowski's Zelmira i Smelon, ili vzyatiye goroda Izmaïla [Zelmira and Smelon, or The Capture of the Town of Izmail] (lyric drama, 3, P.S. Potyomkin), Moscow, 22 July 1975/2 Aug 1795

Li zingari (Vienna, n.d.), collab. P. Wranitzky and J. Wiegl, A-Wn, inc.
Doubtful: Il trionfo d'Enrico, Naples, 1791 (see DEUMM)

OTHER STAGE

Il finto pazzo per amore (op, 2, ?T. Mariani), Moscow, Maddox's, 25 Oct/5 Nov 1782
L'astuzie di Bettina (op, 2), Venice, S Moisè, carn. 1784; F-Pn, D-Dl, US-NYp
La Sarità delusa (ob, ;Goldoni, Florence, Pergola, aut, 1784) Per 'Chastlivaya Tonya (Chastliviy nevod) [Lucky Tonya (The Lucky Net)] (comic op, 4, D. Gorchakov), Moscow, Petrovsky, 14/25 Jan 1786
Baba-Yaga (comic op, 3, D. Gorchakov), Moscow, Petrovsky, 2/13 Dec 1786
Pigmalion, ili Sila lyubvï [Pygmalion, or The Power of Love] (drama with music, 1, V. Maykov, after J.-J. Rousseau), Moscow, Petrovsky, 20/31 Dec 1787
Neudachnaya zhenit'ba [The Unhappy Marriage] (op, trans. from It.), Moscow, Petrovsky, 16/27 Feb 1788

OTHER VOCAL

La Betulia liberata (orat, P. Metatasio), Moscow, 26 March 1783, I-PAc as Il trionfo di Giuditta
La presa d'Ismaïl (allegory), Moscow, 22 Feb 1792
La réconciliation de l'Europe, ?Moscow, 1801
Orfeo (?cant.), Moscow, 22 Feb 1792
6 Ariette (Canzoncine), S, vn, hpd, 1805, I-PAc, PS
Caro bene, il mio dolore (rondo), S, hpd 4 hands, 1805, PAc

OTHER INSTRUMENTAL

op.
1	Six duos, 2 fl (Paris, 1772)
2	Six quatuors, fl, vn, va, b (Paris, 1773)
3	Six trios, 2 vn, vc (Paris and Lyons, *c*1775)
7	Six duos concertants, 2 fl/(fl, vn) (Venice, 1784)
5	Sei quartetti concertanti, fl, 2 vn, b, 2 hn, ad lib (Venice, 1784/5)
6	Sei quartetti notturni, 4 fl (Venice, 1784/5)
—	Six sonates, pf, vn acc., advertised Moscow, 1786
—	Tre divertimenti, fl, vn, va, vc (Venice, 1787)

Conc., 2 fl, str, 2 hn, I-Fn; Conc., fl, str, 2 hn, CZ-Bm; Trio, e, 2 vn, vc, I-Rdp, Nc; Terzetti, fl, vn, b, Pca, Bc, IBborromeo; Duos, 2 fl/(fl, vn), Mc, Gl; Sonatas, fl, bc, Gl; Conversazione [6 sonatas], 2 hpd, PAc; Trionfo del Armata Francese, suite, hpd 4 hands, 1805, PAc
Doubtful: Trios, 2 fl/vn, b, A-HE, I-MTventuri, ? by Cambini; Duetti, 2 fl/vn, Fn, Pca, Mc, ? by Mancinelli

BIBLIOGRAPHY

BrookB; DEMF; EitnerQ; GerberL; GerberNL; MCL; MooserA; SartoriL; StiegerO
Mercure de France (Aug 1772), 167 only; (Sept 1772)
Letter to Tamburini (MS, 4 March 1790, GB-Lbl Add. 29300)
Letter to Tamburini (MS, 19 May 1790, I-Baf)
L. Vallas: La musique à l'Académie de Lyon au dix-huitième siècle (Lyons, 1908)
R.-A. Mooser: Opéras, intermezzos . . . joués en Russie durant le XVIII siècle (Geneva, 1945, 3/1964)
S. Dahms: 'Das Repertoire des Ballet en Action: Noverre-Angiolini-Lauchery', Festschrift Gerhard Croll, ed. W. Gratzer and A. Lindmayer (Laaber, 1992), 138
N. Delius: 'Matthia Stabingher ed il suo contributo al Flautismo italiano', La musica strumentale nel Veneto fra Settecento ed Ottocento: Padua 1996

NIKOLAUS DELIUS

Stäblein, Bruno (b Munich, 5 May 1895; d Erlangen, 6 March 1978). German musicologist. He studied musicology from 1914 with Sandberger and Kroyer at the University of Munich, where he took the doctorate in 1918 with a dissertation on 16th-century instrumental music. At the same time he completed his studies in composition, the piano and conducting at the Munich Akademie der Tonkunst. After he had spent a year as a répétiteur at the Munich Nationaltheater (1918–19), his operatic and concert conducting career took him to the Innsbruck Stadttheater (1919–20) and to the Coburg Staatstheater (1920–26); he also directed the Ernst-Albert-Oratorien Verein (1920–29). From 1931 to 1945 he taught at the Altes Gymnasium in Regensburg. During this period he became deeply interested in medieval music, making extensive visits to libraries and building up a collection of photographic copies of source materials.

In 1945 he founded the institute of musical research at the Philologisch-Theologische Hochschule, becoming director in 1953. He completed the Habilitation in musicology in 1946 at the University of Erlangen with a work on hymnology, and subsequently lectured at the Regensburg Hochschule. In 1956 he was appointed to the new chair of musicology at the University of Erlangen. Here he instituted his extensive collection of microfilm reproductions of medieval manuscripts as an international centre of research (in 1973 it comprised about 4000 manuscripts). He also founded and edited Monumenta Monodica Medii Aevi. Although he retired in 1963 Stäblein continued as director of the film archive and editor of Monumenta. Stäblein was an authority on medieval music, particularly on monodic music and the chorale. In his work he combined an attempt at comprehensive presentation and ordering of source materials with interpretative insight. His most important contribution was Hymnen (1956), which became the standard reference collection of monophonic hymn melodies for the Western church and of fundamental importance for the study of medieval liturgy and polyphonic music up to 1600.

WRITINGS

Musicque de Joye: Studien zur Instrumentalmusik des 16. Jahrhunderts (diss., U. of Munich, 1918)
'Die zwei St. Emmeramer Kantatorien aus dem 11. Jahrhundert (Clm 14322 und Clm 14083)', Jahresbericht des Vereins zur Erforschung der Regensburger Diözesangeschichte, xiii (1939), 231–42
Hymnenstudien (Habilitationsschrift, U. of Erlangen, 1946)
'Die Tegernseer mensurale Choralschrift aus dem 15. Jahrhundert: etwas Greifbares zur Rhythmik der mittelalterlichen Monodie', IMSCR V: Utrecht 1952, 377–83
'Von der Sequenz zum Strophenlied: eine neue Sequenzenmelodie "archaischen" Stiles', Mf, vii (1954), 257–68
'Die Unterlegung von Texten unter Melismen: Tropus, Sequenz und andere Formen', IMSCR VIII: New York 1961, ii, 12–29
'Zur Frühgeschichte der Sequenz', AMw, xviii (1961), 1–33
'Notkeriana', AMw, xix–xx (1962–3), 84–99
'Zum Verständnis des "klassischen" Tropus', AcM, xxxv (1963), 84–95
'Der "altrömische" Choral in Oberitalien und im deutschen Süden', Mf, xix (1966), 3–9
'Zur Stilistik der Troubadourmelodien', AcM, xxxviii (1966), 27
'Kann der gregorianische Choral im Frankenreich entstanden sein?', AMw, xxiv (1967), 153–69
'Nochmals zur angeblichen Entstehung des gregorianischen Chorals im Frankenreich', AMw, xxvii (1970), 110–21
'Oswald von Wolkenstein, der Schöpfer des Individualliedes', DVLG, xlvi (1972), 113–60
'Oswald von Wolkenstein und seine Vorbilder', Oswald von Wolkenstein: Novacella 1973, 285–307
'Die Entstehung des gregorianischen Chorals', Mf, xxvii (1974), 5–17
Schriftbild der einstimmigen Musik (Leipzig, 1975)

EDITIONS

Pier Francesco Cavalli: Vier Marienische Antiphonen (1656), Musica divina, i–iv (Regensburg, 1950)
Hymnen, MMMA, i (1956)
ed., with M. Landwehr-Melnicki: Die Gesänge des altrömischen Graduale (Vat.lat.5319), MMMA, ii (1970)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. Ruhnke, ed.: Festschrift Bruno Stäblein (Kassel, 1967) [incl. list of publications to 1967]

HANS HEINRICH EGGEBRECHT

Stäbler, Gerhard (b Wilhelmsdorf, nr Ravensburg, 20 July 1949). German composer and organist. He studied at the Nordwestdeutsche Musikakademie, Detmold (1968–70), and at the Folkwang-Hochschule, Essen (1970–76), where his teachers included Nicolaus A. Huber (composition) and Gerd Zacher (organ). He has taught at the Essen Hochschule (1982–94) and held guest appointments at universities internationally. His other activities have included producing music programmes for European radio stations, founding the Essen Eisler Chor and editing linkskurve (1979–84). In 1986 he founded Aktive Musik, a touring concert and lecture series on new music and socio-political consciousness. He has also organized the concert series Active Music '89 (New York), the electronic music festival Ex Machina '90 (Essen) and the vocal music festival Mit Stimmen (1991, Ruhr), co-founded the Gesellschaft für Neue Musik, Ruhr (chair, 1991–5), and served as artistic director of the Jornadas de Musica Contemporanea (1993) and the ISCM World Music Days (1995). His honours include the Cornelius Cardew Memorial Prize (1982), a prize from the Ensemblia competition (1983), grants from Südwestfunk (1985–6), the Zentrum für Kunst und Medientechnologie (1995, 1997, 1998, 2000) and the Akademie der Künste, Berlin (1998) and residences at Djerassi (1986, 1987, 1993), Telluride (1990) and Darmstadt (1990, 1992, 1994). As an organist he has toured Europe and the USA (1973–93) playing his own music, with arrangements of early music and works by composers such as Cage, Ligeti and Christian Wolff.

Stäbler's compositions regularly refer to the world outside the concert hall. Every aspect of a work is imbued with meaning; he has considered the angle of reflection of the instruments, the temperature of the performance space and even smells as compositional materials. Many of his scores are graphic or conceptual featuring an eclectic range of techniques that demonstrate his interest in the interpretive processes of performer and audience as well as in particular sounds. In his early works, he often experimented with improvisation and open form; his works after 1980 are generally political and involve multimedia. An activist in the tradition of Eisler and Cardew, Stäbler has included references to unexpected contexts in many works; the mocking insertion of marches and advertising jingles into the Paul Celan settings fallen, fallen ... und liegen und fallen (1988–9) casts a sinister reflection on both past and present. Den Müllfahrern von San Francisco (1989–90), his first work to use Morse code as a constructive principle, was followed by Sünde. Fall. Beil (1991), in which Morse code organizes fields of data. He expanded and generalized this technique, substituting numerical rows for Morse code, in works such as CassandraComplex (1994), [APPARAT] (1995) and energy.light.dream (1999–2000).

WORKS

STAGE

Die Spieldose (after M. Saltykow-Schtschedrin), perc, tape, visual media, 1984–5; Sünde. Fall. Beil (royal op, 5, A.F.J. Lechner, after A. Dumas), 1991; CassandraComplex (music theatre, H.-W. Heister, after C. Wolf), 1994; Cassandra (dance score, choreog. B. Scherzer), vv, perc, tape, 1996; Time for Tomorrow: 25 Futuristic Acts (music theatre), 1998–9

INSTRUMENTAL

Large ens (6 or more insts): Das Sichere ist nicht sicher, spiral rondo, fl, bn, hn, perc, pf trio, tape, 1982; Windows (Elegien), cl, bn, tpt, trbn, perc, accdn, pf, vn, db, 1983; Wirbelsäulenflöte, pfmr, 4 vv, b; cl, 3 objects pf, 1984; Schatten wilder Schmerzen, orch, 1984–5; Ruck- VERSCH^{ie} $_{o}$BEN Zuck-, accdn, orch, 1986–8; Co – wie Kobalt, db, orch, 1989–90; Den Müllfahrern von San Francisco, fl, ob, cl, bn, hn, tpt, 2 trbn, tuba, perc, pf, str qt, db, 1989–90; TRAUM 1/9/92, sax, vc, pf, chbr ens, 1992; Kopflos (Kassandra-Studie), fl, cl, vn, vc, pf, perc, 1993; triumPF (Kassandra-Studie), wind ens, 1994; Dreizehn, 11/17/19/23 pfmrs, 1997; Ausnahme.Zustand, orch, 1997–8

2–5 insts: Mo-ped, org, motorcycle, 1970–71; Warnung mit Liebeslied, hp, accdn, perc, 1986; ... strike the ear ..., str qt, 1987–8; nachbeben und davor, vc, accdn, 1988–9; Oktober, fl, vn, db, 1989; ... Im Spalier ..., brass qnt, 1990; Zeitsprünge, accdn, perc, 1990; Hai!, tuba, insts, 1991; ... Abschiede ... (Kassandra-Studie), str trio, 1993; Beppu 'thoughts on three haiku by Bashō', tpt, perc, 1994; Xen(i)on, 5 b cl, 1994; Winkelzüge, 4 fl, 1995; Journal 9'1119, fl ens, perc, tape, smells, 1996; POETIC ARCS, ens, 1996; Seven, Three, ob, cl, bn, 1996; Spuren, 4 sax, 1996; Unstern! Finstere (Franz Liszt), ens, 1996; Internet 4 (adriatico), 1–2 pf, 1–2 perc, 1996–7; Fallzeit, 1–2, perc, 1997; Internet 4 (New York/Francesco Clemente), 4 pf, 1997; estratto, bn, harmonica ad lib, 1998; futuressence 1, trbn, accdn, perc, 1998

Solo inst:Total, pf, 1986; Californian Dreams, accdn, 1986–7; Palast des Schweigens (Kassandra-Studie), shō, 1993; ... schloss die Augen, vor Glück ... (Kassandra-Studie), gui, 1993; Schmerzprobe (Kassandra-Studie), va, 1993; X, zippers, 1994; Radierung, ob, 1995; Zeichnung, rec, 1995; Dalí (Magic Music), pf, 1996; Internet 1.1, pf, 1996; Internet 1.2, accdn, 1996–7; Internet 1.5, pf, 1996; Internet 1.9, pf, 1996; Fallzeit, 1–2 perc, 1997; Hyacinth – Liquids, Scents, perc, 1997; Wolken.Bilder, barrel org, 1997; katalekt, vc, 1998; Krusten/Crusts, vc, 1998; Tap, org pedal, 1998

VOCAL

Choral: drüber ..., 8vv, vc, synth, tape, 1972–3; ... fürs Vaterland (Schi-King, E. Mühsam, Brecht), 3 songs, vv, speaking chorus, insts, 1981–2; Mit wachen Sinnen (A. Jackson), chorus, perc, 1986–7; Die Nacht sitzt am Tisch (O. de Camargo), vv, insts, synth/cassette rec, 1992; [APPARAT], SATB, cl, db, accdn, perc, 1995; news^{2}, 11vv, slide projections, 1996; [voix$^{(time)}$], multimedia, vv, insts, 1996–8; Burning Minds, 12vv, 1997; Speed, vv, 1997; Trama/Gewebe, SATB, 1997–8

Other vocal: Den Toten von Sabra und Chatila, 1v, fl, ob, cl, pf, 1982; fallen, fallen ... und liegen und fallen (P. Celan), 1v, accdn, tuba, tape, 1988–9; Ungaretti-Lieder, 1v, perc, 1990; O Muro (P. Tierra), S, drum, metal, wood, glass, ice, tape, 1992; Rachengold, 1v, water glass, stopwatch, 1992; Winter, Blumen, Ct, vn/va/vc/db, 1995; Internet 3.1, 1v, cl, perc, 1995–7; Belfast Breakfast Songs, 1v, 1996; Internet 3.2, Mez, pf, perc, 1996; Bridges, 1v, accdn, 1996–7; energy.light.dreams with orch, ch ens with Bar, tape, 1999–2000

OTHER WORKS

Gehörsmassage, audience, 1973; Twilights – Protokolle (E. Cardenal, Newsweek), tape, 1983; Hart auf Hart: Eine Musik für Ens(s). Improvisatorisch. Kalkulativ., graphic score, 1986; JC/NY, 3/4/5/7 pfmrs, audience, 1992; KARAS. KRÄHEN, tape/(1v, sho/accdn, db, perc, tape)/(accdn, tape), 1995; news^{1}, projected perf., 1995; Luna, tape, 1998

MSS in US-Eu

Principal publisher: Aktive Musik, Ricordi

BIBLIOGRAPHY

KdG (H.-W. Heister)

J.H. Hammitt: Aspects of Gerhard Stäbler's 'Shadow of Wild Pain' (diss., U. of Illinois, Urbana-Champaign, 1991)

H.-W. Heister: 'Systematisierter Schrei, rasend still: über Gerhard Stäbler', MusikTexte, no.38 (1991)

R. Schulz: 'Ohne offenes Hören verkleistern die Hirne', Neue Musikzeitung, xlii/1 (1993), 53 only [interview]

J. Bultman and H.-W. Heister, eds.: Angefügt, nahtlos, ans Heute: zur Arbeit des Komponisten Gerhard Stäbler (Hofheim, 1994) [incl. collection of writings]

PAUL ATTINELLO

Stabreim (Ger.: 'stave-rhyme', 'alliterative verse'). Alliteration is found in all the oldest surviving forms of Germanic verse, from the Old English Beowulf to the Old High German Hildebrandslied and the Old Norse Poetic Edda. Each line is made up of two half-lines, of two or three semantically important, stressed syllables ('lifts'), with a variable number of weakly stressed syllables dividing them. The lines are linked together alliteratively: the main stress or 'stave' falls on the first lift of each second half-line, while the two lifts in the preceding half-line are supporting staves, one or both of which must alliterate with the main stave.

Initial rhyme was replaced by end-rhyme in the 9th century in German. It was revived in the 19th century by Friedrich de la Motte Fouqué in Der Held des Nordens, from where it was taken over by Wagner into Der Ring des Nibelungen. Drawing on Romantic theories of language, Wagner believed that primitive communities had expressed themselves instinctively in alliterative verse: the Ring libretto was based, therefore, on the premise that the more insistent the Stabreim and the more archaic the language, the more authentic the text would be as an expression of human emotions. By mistaking the conscious and highly elaborate artistry of his Eddic sources for a spontaneous outpouring of the popular spirit, Wagner counterfeited a style which proves more hindrance than help in our understanding. His experiment found few imitators.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. Wagner: Oper und Drama, Gesammelte Schriften (Leipzig, 1871–83, 5/1911), iii-iv; Eng. trans. (1892–9), ii

E. Sievers: Altgermanische Metrik (Halle, 1893)

H. Wiessner: Der Stabreimvers in R. Wagners Ring des Nibelungen (Berlin, 1924)

D. Borchmeyer: Das Theater Richard Wagners (Stuttgart, 1982; Eng. trans., 1991)

STEWART SPENCER

Staccato (It.: 'detached'). Of an individual note in performance, usually separated from its neighbours by a silence of articulation. The separation may be, but is not invariably, accompanied by some degree of emphasis, and occasionally the term may imply emphasis without physical separation. The term may be regarded as the antonym of LEGATO; a degree of articulation intermediate between staccato and legato, which has sometimes been represented by the term 'non legato', was regarded by certain 18th-century authorities as the normal method of playing melodies with life (according to C.P.E. Bach in his Versuch, 1753, it implied playing with 'fire and a slight accentuation'). It is not always clear, however, that the use of the term 'non-legato' implies something different from staccato marks; in late Beethoven, for instance, the use of the term 'non-legato' or staccato marks, often occurring after legato passages, may both merely be intended as indications not to slur.

In 20th-century notation the staccato is generally prescribed by means of a dot over or under the note and is distinguished from the more emphatic staccatissimo, indicated by a wedge. Furthermore, modern notation often prescribes the technical means to be adopted by the performer in order to secure the required effect. String playing is particularly rich in such distinctions: for example, there is a difference between a staccato in which the bow remains on the string (with or without a change of bow direction for each note) and the SAUTILLÉ and spiccato in which the bow leaves the string between each pair of notes. Such technical distinctions gradually came into use from the 18th century; for details, see BOW, §II, 2(iv, vii) and 3(vi–ix).

1. Mozart: String Quintet in E♭, K614, Andante

Before the second half of the 19th century, dots, dashes and wedges were likely to have the same meaning, although some notators and theorists distinguished between dots and dashes, meaning different degrees of staccato, at least from the time of Quantz (Versuch, 1752) and Leopold Mozart (Violinschule, 1756), and it was generally expected in the 18th century that performers would make use of a variety of different touches. The autograph score of the Molto Allegro of Mozart's Symphony no.41, shows a mixture of bold dashes and smaller staccato marks which, although they are actually small dashes, have often been taken to represent dots. Such passages, in which one or other form predominates or where smaller or larger marks appear to be consistently associated with particular elements in the musical phrases, have led many scholars to maintain that Mozart, and other composers of the period whose autographs contain a similar variety of forms of staccato marks, intended to indicate two distinct types of staccato execution by means of these marks. On the basis of theoretical writings, the dash has usually been considered to indicate a shorter and sharper execution, and the dot a longer and lighter one (though the writings of some theorists suggest alternative interpretations). Advocates of a deliberate differentiation between dots and dashes in the music of some 18th-century composers are, however, faced with rationalizing many passages, such as the one in the illustration from the Andante of Mozart's String Quartet in E♭ K614, where the variety of the forms is so extensive as to render a meaningful distinction between two distinct types impracticable. A number of scholars (perhaps most persuasively P. Mies: 'Die Artikulationszeichen Strich und Punkt bei Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart', Mf, xi (1958), 428–55) have argued that the apparent distinction between dots and dashes resulted from habits of writing, particularly at speed. This line of argument provides a plausible alternative explanation of seemingly consequential differentiation between the two forms. Whether or not a notational distinction was sometimes intended, there can be no doubt that composers envisaged, and the best performers employed, a continuous spectrum of subtly varied staccato execution, not two discrete types. One distinction, almost invariably observed by Mozart, Beethoven, and many of their contemporaries, was between normal staccato marks and staccato marks under a slur indicating portato; in the latter case, whatever the form of their marks elsewhere, they punctiliously employed dots. In Baroque thoroughbass notation, vertical dashes are sometimes used to indicate tasto solo passages, no doubt also implying some degree of emphasis or articulation.

In the late 19th and early 20th centuries a wide variety of signs came to be used to signify various nuances of staccato articulation involving numerous combinations of dots, vertical and horizontal dashes, vertical and horizontal wedges etc., in the music of such composers as Debussy and Schoenberg. Attempts have been made since then to standardize this aspect of notation, but without general success.

See also ACCENTUATION, ARTICULATION AND PHRASING, ARTICULATION MARKS, DOT and DASH.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

H. Keller: Phrasierung und Artikulation (Kassel, 1955; Eng. trans., 1965, 2/1973)
H. Albrecht, ed.: Die Bedeutung der Zeichen Keil, Strich und Punkt bei Mozart (Kassel, 1957) [see also P. Mies, Mf, xi (1958), 428–55]
E. and P. Badura-Skoda: Mozart-Interpretation (Vienna and Stuttgart, 1957; Eng. trans., 1962/R as Interpreting Mozart on the Keyboard)
R. Donington: The Interpretation of Early Music (London, 1963, 4/1989)
C. Brown: 'Dots and Strokes in Late 18th- and 19th-Century Music', EMc, xxi (1993), 593–610
C. Brown: Classical and Romantic Performing Practice (Oxford, 1999)

GEOFFREY CHEW/CLIVE BROWN

Stachel (Ger.). See ENDPIN.

Stachowicz, Damian [Damianus a SS Trinitate] (b Sokołów, nr Przemyśl, 1658; d Łowicz, nr Warsaw, 27 Nov 1699). Polish composer. He was a member of the Piarist order for 25 years and lectured on poetics and rhetoric at the college at Łowicz; he also published a few panegyrics. At his death he was vice-rector of the college, and he also directed the music in the college chapel. His compositions were chiefly intended for the chapel but were performed in other churches as well. According to his monastic obituary he was recognized by his contemporaries as an outstanding composer. His extant works are uneven: some show signs of haste and are deficient technically; others, on the contrary, show a masterly technique – e.g. the solo concertato Veni consolator, which resembles the trumpet arias of the Venetian operatic school and is now frequently performed. An essential feature of Stachowicz's music is his frequent use of homophony, with polyphony confined to a few passages, and his extensive application of concertato technique. Fanfare-like melodies are also a characteristic of his music: they stem from his partiality for clarini, which appear in nearly all of his extant compositions.

WORKS

Missa requiem, 5vv, 2 vn, 2 tpt, bc, PL-R
Beata nobis gaudia, 4vv, 2 vn, 2 tpt, bc, SA
Laetatus sum, 4vv, 2 vn, 2 tpt, bc, Wtm
Lauda Ierusalem, 4vv, 2 vn, 2 tpt, bc, Wtm
Laudate pueri, 5vv, 2 vn, 2 tpt, bc, Wtm
Veni consolator, 1v, tpt, bc (org), ed. in WDMP, xiii (4/1978)
Litaniae della BMV, 4vv, 2 vn, 2 tpt, bc, R
Completorium solemne, Requiem ex B: lost, mentioned in 1715 inventory of Piarist chapel, Wieluń
Other sacred works, now lost, extant in A. Chybiński's pre-war transcrs.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Chybiński: 'Przyczynki bio- i bibliograficzne do dawnej muzyki polskiej' [Biographical and bibliographical notes on early Polish musicians], Przegląd muzyczny, v/2 (1929), 5
Z.M. Szweykowski: 'Sylwetka kompozytorska Damiana Stachowicza (1658–1699)' [An outline of the compositions of Damian Stachowicz], Muzyka, vii/1 (1962), 14–28
J. Buba and Z.M. and A. Szweykowski: 'Kultura muzyczna u pijarów w XVII i XVIII wieku' [Musical culture in the Piarist order in the 17th and 18th centuries], Muzyka, x (1965), no.2, pp.15–32; no.3, pp.20–32
Z.M. Szweykowski: Preface to WDMP, xiii (4/1978)
D. Brough: 'Nieznane utwory Damiana Stachowicza w bibliotece WTM' [Unknown works by Damian Stachowicz in the Biblioteka Warszawkiego Towarzystwa Muzycznego], Muzyka, xxiv/3 (1979), 87–91
D. Brough: Polish Seventeenth-Century Church Music (diss., U. of Oxford, 1981)

ZYGMUNT M. SZWEYKOWSKI

Stachowski, Marek (b Piekary Śląskie, 21 March 1936). Polish composer. He studied composition with Penderecki at the Kraków academy (1963–8), where he has since taught, becoming rector in 1993. He has also held visiting lectureships at Yale University (1975) and in England, the Netherlands, Israel and South Korea. His works Neusis II and Śpiewy thakuryskie ('Thakurian Chants') won first prize at the Malawski and Szymanowski competitions in 1968 and 1974 respectively; other honours include three mentions at the UNESCO Composers' Rostrum (1974, 1979, 1990), the prize of Polish Composers' Union (1984) and the New York Jurzykowski Foundation award (1989).

In the 1960s Stachowski adopted a musical language which drew upon the prevailing sonorism in Poland (including that explored by the Kraków ensemble MW2) while retaining the intervallic emphasis of 12-note writing. As a result, his music, in works such as Irisation (1970) and Ody Safyckie ('Sapphic Odes', 1985), has a distinctively resonant quality. From Neusis II (1968) onwards he has used unison pitches as focal points in otherwise diffusive textures. While many works have an animated or ritualistic quality (e.g. Thakurian Chants and Choreia), others, like the string quartets, are more pensive and ascetic. Neo-classical features (such as his approach to tonality, rhythm and gesture), increasingly overt since the Divertimento, are often couched in a gently impressionistic style; an example of this is the Sonata for strings (1991).

WORKS
(selective list)

Stage: Najdzielniejszy z rycerzy [The Most Valiant of Knights] (children's op, 3, K. Penderecki, after E. Szelburg-Zarembina), 1965 [collab. Penderecki], Poznań, 15 March 1965; Magiczne kuranty [Magic Chimes] (ballet), narr, orch, 1989, Poznań, 22 April 1990

Orch: Musica con una battuta del tam-tam, tam-tam, str, 1966; Ricercar 66, org, str, 1966; Sequenze concertanti, 1968; Irisation, 1970; Musique solenelle, 1973; Poème sonore, 1975; Divertimento, str, 1978; Choreia, 1980; Capriccio, 1983; Vc Conc., str, 1988; Z księgy nocy [From the Book of the Night], 1990; Sonata, str, 1991

Vocal: 5 zmysłów i róża [The 5 Senses and a Rose] (T. Kubiak), Mez, fl, trbn, hp, xylorimba, 1964; Z księgi godzin [From the Book of Hours] (R.M. Rilke), T, 2 male choruses, orch, 1965; Neusis II, chorus, perc, 10 vc, 5 db, 1968; Chant de l'espoir (P. Eluard), S, Bar, 2 spkrs, chorus, boys' chorus, orch, 1969; Słowa [Words] (W. Broniewski), S, B, chorus, orch, 1971; Śpiewy thakuryjskie [Thakurian Chants] (R. Tagore), chorus, orch, 1974; Ptaki [Birds] (T. Hołuj, P. Hertz, J. Harasymowicz, Z. Herbert), S, cl, str trio, 1976; Symfonia pieśni tęsknotą uświeconych [Sym. of Songs Sanctified by Nostalgia] (K. Damrot, J.N. Jaroń), S, chorus, orch, 1981; Amoretti, T, lute, b viol (E. Spenser), 1982; Madrigali dell'estate, S, str trio, 1984; Ody Safickie [Sapphic Odes] (Sappho) Mez, orch, 1985; Jubilate Deo (Ps lxxxxix), chorus, org, 1987

Str qts: no.1, 1963; Musica per quartetto d'archi, 1965; no.2, 1972; Quartetto da ingresso, 1980; no.3, 1988; Musica festeggiante, 1995

Other chbr and solo inst: Musica da camera, fl, vc, hp, perc, 1965; Audition, fl, vc, pf, 1970; Extensions, pf, 1971; Odys wśród białych klawiszy [Odysseus Amid the White Keys], pf, 1979; Pezzo grazioso, wd qnt, 1982; Musique en 4 scenes, cl, str qt, 1987; Chbr Conc., fl, cl, vn, vc, perc, pf, 1989; 3 intermezzi, str trio, 1993–4; Quodlibet, fl, ob, bn, 1995; Tastar e canzona, vc, pf, 1996

Incid music, film scores

Principal publishers: PWM, Agencja Autorska

BIBLIOGRAPHY

K. Meyer: 'Marek Stachowski and his String Quartet no.2', Polish Music, no.4 (1976), 30–33

T. Malecka: 'Neusis II Marka Stachowskiego', Muzyka, xiii/1 (1978), 45–60

M. Bristiger: 'Momenty semantyczne' [Semantic moments] Związki muzyki ze słowem (Kraków, 1986), 254–64 [on Ptaki]

L. Polony: 'Twórczość Marka Stachowskiego. Przyczynek do syntezy' [The works of Stachowski: towards a synthesis], Muzyka polska 1945–1995, ed. K. Droba, T. Malecka and K. Szwajgier (Kraków, 1996), 257–64

Vivo [Kraków], no.1 (1997) [Stachowski issue]

ADRIAN THOMAS

Stacy, Thomas (b Little Rock, AR, 15 Aug 1938). American oboist and english horn player. It is his energies in bringing public awareness to the english horn as an instrument in its own right for which Stacy is most famous. He was appointed solo english horn with the New York PO in 1972, and has also appeared as soloist with many of the major American orchestras. He has commissioned and given the premières of more than 25 works for english horn, including works by Gunther Schuller, Stanisław Skrowaczewski, Ned Rorem (Concerto for English Horn, 1994), Vincent Persichetti and Bernard Hoffer. Widely sought after as a teacher, and a member of the faculty of the Juilliard School, Stacy has given masterclasses at the RAM, as well as in Korea, Japan, Russia and Sweden, and directs the annual Stacy English Horn Seminar. His recordings include concertos by Rorem and Persichetti.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Livingstone: 'The Stacy Seminar, 1985', Double Reed, viii/3 (1985), 23

'A Lesson with Thomas Stacy on Two Famous English Horn Solos', Double Reed, xii/1 (1989), 8–13

GEOFFREY BURGESS

Stade, Frederica von. See VON STADE, FREDERICA.

Stadelmayer [Stadelmaier, Stadelmeyer], Johann. See STADLMAYR, JOHANN.

Staden, Adam. German composer and poet, son of JOHANN STADEN.

Staden, Johann (b Nuremberg, bap. 2 July 1581; d Nuremberg, bur. 15 Nov 1634). German composer and organist. He was a distinguished and versatile composer, and one of the outstanding German musicians of his day. In his later years he was the leading musician in Nuremberg and established the so-called Nuremberg school of the 17th century. He was the father of Sigmund Theophil Staden.

1. LIFE. Staden's father married Elisabeth Löbele as his second wife in December 1574, and Johann was born of this marriage. The year of his birth is given on his portrait (see illustration) as 1581; the Nuremberg baptismal records show that a son called Johannes was born on 2 July to Hans and Elisabeth Starnn, this surname undoubtedly being a scribal error for 'Staden'. Doppelmayr wrote that Staden had become celebrated as an organist in Nuremberg by the age of 18. This reputation, and perhaps also experience as an assistant organist at one of the Nuremberg churches, led to his first traceable appointment, as court organist at Bayreuth; he is described thus in the Nuremberg city record of his marriage on 16 April 1604. After a big fire at Bayreuth in 1605, Margrave Christian moved his court to Kulmbach, where it remained until 1610. The only traces of Staden during these years are the baptismal records of his children and the dedications of his works. Three baptisms at Kulmbach in 1606, 1607 and 1608 identify him as court organist. The JOHANNES STADEN, MUSICUS RELIGIOSUS, SYMPHONISTA, ET ORGANISTA, AD D. SEBALDI NORIB. NAT. 1581. Obiit 1634.

Qui nunquam vivus pingi, sculpive volebat,
STADIUS, hâc facie sistitur, ecce! tibi.
Quanta viri at fuerit Pietas, et Musica virtus,
Prologuitur quodvis, quod dedit ille, melos
Ioh. Pfann Sculp: A° 1640. I.V.

Johann Staden: engraving by Johann Pfann, 1640 dedications of his Neue teutsche Lieder (1609) and Neue teutsche geistliche Gesäng (1609) are signed from Kulmbach and that of his Venus Kräntzlein from Bayreuth on 1 May 1610.

Staden must soon have returned to Nuremberg, for a daughter was baptized there on 10 January 1611. After the death of H.L. Hassler in June 1612, Staden took over his post as court organist in Dresden until late 1613 or early 1614. He was back in Nuremberg in 1614 and 1615 for the baptisms of two more daughters, but his name does not appear in the city records until 1616, when he dedicated a work to the city council, and the council promised him the next organist's post to become vacant. That occurred on 20 June 1616 at the Spitalkirche, and on 19 November of the same year Staden moved to St Lorenz to succeed Kaspar Hassler as organist. In 1618 he was appointed organist of St Sebaldus, the most important musical position in Nuremberg, which he held for the rest of his life.

That Staden had a wide reputation as an organist is suggested by Margrave Christian's invitation to him in 1618 to join Michael Praetorius, Samuel Scheidt and Heinrich Schütz in testing a new organ at Bayreuth. As Nuremberg's leading musician he was often asked by the city council to judge new music that composers dedicated to the city. Among such works passed on to him were the second part of Schein's Opella nova (1626), Melchior Franck's Suspirium Germaniae (1628) and Scheidt's second set of Geistliche Concerten (1634); the letters of dedication of these three works are in the Nuremberg Staatsarchiv (Rechnungsbelege nos.702 and 783; those of Scheidt and Schein ed. in Zirnbauer, 1959). With great devotion and energy Staden established the direction that the so-called Nuremberg school was to take during the rest of the 17th century. Among his pupils were J.E. Kindermann, two lesser Nurembergers, Paul Grimmschneider and Daniel Dietel, and probably David Schedlich. A teacher-pupil tradition runs uninterruptedly from Staden and Kindermann through Schwemmer and G.C. Wecker to Johann Krieger and Johann Pachelbel at the beginning of the next century.

Staden also taught his four sons. They included not only Sigmund Theophil Staden, but two others who wrote some music: Johann (1606–27) by whom there are two pieces in his father's Hauss-Music (RISM 1628[6] and 1634[4], both reprinted in 1646[5]); and Adam (1614–59), who is known by three funeral songs (D-Nst) and who wrote the texts of two of them as well as those of five other pieces, two by his brother Sigmund Theophil and three by Schedlich.

2. WORKS. About half of Staden's extant works have survived in incomplete form. Except for some instrumental pieces in two manuscripts, his music exists in printed partbooks (without bar-lines and with traces of mensural notation such as ligatures and blackened notes). His first printed work was Neue teutsche Lieder (1606), which was soon followed by two other collections of polyphonic secular songs, Neue teutsche Lieder (1609) and Venus Kräntzlein (1610); all three have instrumental pieces appended. Closely related stylistically to these secular works are the various collections of sacred songs: Neue teutsche geistliche Gesäng (1609), Drey christliche Betgesäng (1622), the four parts of Hauss-Music (1623–8), Musicalischer Freuden- und Andachtswecker (1630), the 12 strophic songs in Hertzens Andachten (1631) and the 12 songs appended to his son S.T. Staden's new edition of Hassler's Kirchen Gesäng (1637). These collections provide a total of 65 secular and 180 sacred polyphonic songs by Staden. His models, as for other composers of the Nuremberg school such as H.C. Haiden, Melchior Franck and Johannes Jeep, were the songs of Leonhard Lechner and especially H.L. Hassler (Neue teutsche Gesäng, 1596, and Lustgarten, 1601). Most of Staden's songs are in four parts (though many are in three or five parts), all are without basso continuo, and, as Staden wrote in the foreword to volume iv of his Hauss-Music, they can also be performed on instruments. The style is predominantly note-against-note, but one does find imitative counterpoint, especially in Venus Kräntzlein. The texts are by earlier and contemporary poets, including Staden himself; chorale texts are rare. The songs are distinguished by folklike melodies and simple rhythms.

Staden published no further secular vocal music after leaving the Bayreuth court about 1610. His principle sacred works are a mixture of old and new styles: some motets without basso continuo, some with continuo as well as other instruments, and choral and solo concertos. His first major work, Harmoniae sacrae (1616), contains all these types and is of considerable historical interest. The first 21 pieces are five- to eight-part motets without continuo, modelled after Lassus; an appendix consists of six pieces for two to five voices with continuo (some also have other instrumental parts) in the style of Lodovico Viadana's Cento concerti ecclesiastici (1602). Furthermore, the eighth partbook has all the parts in open score for the organist, which appears to be the earliest German instance of this Italian practice. Along with Aichinger's Cantiones (1607–9), Michael Praetorius's Urano-Chorodia (1613), the first part of Schein's Opella nova (1618) and Schütz's Psalmen (1619), Staden's Harmoniae sacrae offers some of the earliest sacred concertos in Germany; through it he introduced to Nuremberg an obligatory basso continuo (in the style of Viadana), independent instrumental accompaniment, the solo concerto and the modern score. Nevertheless, the basic style is still that of the motet; melodically and harmonically there is no trace of the seconda pratica anywhere in Staden's output. Other collections that can be grouped stylistically with Harmoniae sacrae are Harmoniarum sacrarum continuatio (1621), which also contains open scores, Harmoniae novae sacrarum cantionum (1628, 'cum & sine Basso ad Organum') and Harmoniae variatae sacrarum cantionum (1632), though the continuo part of all three is usually a basso seguente.

Staden's first major work with German texts is Kirchen-Music (1625–6), which contains several examples of concerted writing for solo voices, chorus and mixed vocal and instrumental groups. Volume i makes extensive use of chorale texts, whose melodies often serve as cantus firmi in the manner of the chorale motets of Senfl and Heinrich Finck a century earlier; in general, however, chorales play a lesser role in Staden's music. The texts of volume ii are psalms and other biblical verse, usually set in concerto style. The careful attention to declamation and pictorial aspects of the texts makes Kirchen-Music Staden's most expressive work. The basso continuo partbook of volume ii contains his well-known 'brief and simple introduction' to 'basso ad organum' (see Arnold, 100ff, and the foreword to edn of vol.i, DTB, xii, Jg.vii/1, p.xlii). He added nothing to the theories of Viadana, Agazzari and Michael Praetorius, but he provided a clear summary of these earlier writings and showed his thorough understanding of the various types of basso continuo (see Eggebrecht). His Hertzens Andachten (1631) and Geistliche Music-Klang (1633) also contain solo concertos, and his lost Davids Harpffe (1643) probably did so too. With his Hertzentrosts-Musica (1630) he introduced the solo continuo song to Nuremberg, and along with Schein and Melchior Franck he was an early composer of motet dialogues, two of which appear in Hauss-Music (1628).

Staden's instrumental music, with Hassler's Lustgarten as its model, ranks with that of Haussmann and Franck as among the most important in the Germany of his time. In addition to the instrumental pieces appended to his collections of secular songs of 1606, 1609 and 1610 and five pieces in a manuscript tablature, there are three printed collections by him, which appeared in 1618, 1625 and 1643 respectively. This gives a total of 196 pieces, many of which were probably written for a Nuremberg Musikkränzlein, a group of amateur performers (see Nagel, 1895, and Martin). The pieces include many and various dance movements, not grouped by key, as well as sinfonias, sonatas (which are among the first published German examples of the form), intradas, canzonas and fantasias. Occasionally one finds a thematic relation between single pieces.

To sum up, Staden was one of Germany's earliest exponents of the concertato style (both choral and solo) and the continuo. But his maxim, according to Herbst and Walther, was: 'the Italians do not know everything, the Germans can also do something'. And indeed his output shows neither a complete surrender to, nor a stubborn evasion of, new Italian styles, forms and textures, including those based on the continuo, such as concertato, monody and recitative. Instead his works reveal a conservative interpolation of these elements with the German traditions of syllabic treatment of the text, unadventurous harmony and counterpoint and the dominating sacred songs with their restricted melodic flow and limited forms.

WORKS

printed works published in Nuremberg, unless otherwise stated

Editions: J. Staden: Ausgewählte Werke, i, ed. E. Schmitz, DTB, xii, Jg.vii/1 (1906) [S i]

J. Staden: Ausgewählte Werke, ii, ed. E. Schmitz, DTB, xiv, Jg.viii/1 (1907) [S ii]

Chorbuch, ed. F. Jöde (Wolfenbüttel and Berlin, 1927–31) [J]

SACRED VOCAL

Neue teutsche geistliche Gesäng, 3–8vv (1609)

Harmoniae sacrae pro festis praecipuis totius anni, 4–8vv, quibus . . . adjectae sunt . . . novae inventionis italicae cantiones, 1–5vv, bc (1616); Angelicus hymnus, no.11, pubd separately (1615); 7 in S i; 1 in J ii

Jubila sancta Deo per hymnum et echo, 8vv (1617)

Harmoniarum sacrarum continuatio, 1–12vv, bc (1621); 3 in S i; 3 in S ii

Drey christliche Betgesäng, 4vv (1622)

Harmonicae meditationes animae, 4vv (1622)

Hauss-Music, geistliche Gesäng, 3, 4vv: vol.i (1623, 2/1634[4]), 4 in S i; vol.ii (1628), 2 in S i, 1 in J ii; vol.iii (1628), 9 in S i, 6 in J v; vol.iv (1628[6]), 4 in S i; 4 vols. pubd together (1646[5]), 2 in S i

Kirchen-Music, geistliche Gesang und Psalmen: vol.i, 2–14vv (1625), 1 in S i, 1 in S ii; vol.ii, 1–7vv/insts, bc (1626), 5 in S ii; incl. in bc of vol.ii, Kurz und einfältig Bericht für die jenigen, so im Basso ad Organum unerfahren; pr. in AMZ, new ser., xii (1877), 99–103, 119–23; extracts trans. in Arnold, 100–09

Harmoniae novae sacrarum cantionum, 3–12vv, bc (1628); 4 in S ii

Hertzentrosts-Musica, geistliche Meditationen, 1v, bc (1630); copy in D-Nst incl. MS organ tablature of nos. 1–9; 1 in S ii

Musicalischer Freuden- und Andachtswecker oder Geistliche Gesänglein, 4–6vv (1630); 3 in S i; 2 in J ii, iv

Hertzens Andachten, geistliche Gesänglein, 1, 4vv, bc (1631); 2 in S ii

Harmoniae variatae sacrarum cantionum, 1–12vv, bc (1632); 1 in S ii

Plausus Noricus praecelsissimo atque potentissimo principi ac domino, domino Gustavo Adolpho, 9vv/insts, bc (1632)

Geistliche Music-Klang, 1, 3vv, 2, 3 viols, bc (1633); 1 in S ii

Davids Harpffe, 1v, bc (1643), lost

Ach bleib bey uns, 8vv (n.d.)

1 Magnificat, 1620[9], incl. in Kirchen-Music, i

12 songs, 4vv, 1637[2]

5 motets, 1672[2], 4 from Harmoniae novae

Lamb Gottes, das du weg nimbst Sünd der Welt, response, 4vv, D-Nla

SECULAR VOCAL

Neue teutsche Lieder nach Art der Villanellen beyneben etlicher Baletti oder Tantz, 3–5vv (1606)

Neue teutsche Lieder mit poetischen Texten samt etlichen Galliarden, 4vv (1609); 3 in S ii; 1 in J iv; 4 ed. in W. Vetter, Das frühdeutsche Lied, ii (Münster, 1928), 20ff

Venus Kräntzlein, newer musicalischen Gesäng und Lieder, 4, 5vv (1610); 7 in S ii; 1 in J iv; 15 ed. in NM, cxix (1936, 2/1959)

Orpheus redivivus, MS, lost, see Zirnbauer, 1960, p.346

INSTRUMENTAL

Neue Pavanen, Galliarden, Curanten, a 4, 5 (1618) [incl. 1 repr. from 1616[24]]; 6 in S ii; 6 ed. in NM, lxxx (1932, 2/1955); 2 balletti ed. in E. Mohr, Die Allemande, ii (Zürich and Leipzig, 1932), nos.46–7

Opusculum novum, a 4 (1625)

Operum musicorum posthumorum pars prima, a 3–8 (1643); 8 in S ii; 3 ed. in W. Hillemann, Im Trio (Mainz, 1954)

Inst pieces in secular vocal collections, see above

5 suite movts, a 3, Nuremberg, Staatsarchiv (score)

21 pieces incl. 4 toccatas, kbd, and org transcrs. of inst works, I-Tn (see Mischiati)

WRITINGS

Letter, 4 Dec 1626, Nuremberg, Staatsarchiv
Kurz und einfältig Bericht, see Kirchen-Music, ii (1626)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

WaltherML
J.A. Herbst: Musica moderna prattica (Frankfurt, 1653, 2/1658)
J.G. Doppelmayr: Historische Nachricht von den nürnbergischen Mathematicis und Künstlern (Nuremberg, 1730)
R. Eitner: 'Johann Staden: eine Bio- und Bibliographie', MMg, xv (1883), 101–6, 119–24
W. Nagel: 'Die Nürnberger Musikgesellschaft (1588–1629)', MMg, xxvii (1895), 1–11
W. Nagel: 'Zur Biographie Johann Stadens und seiner Söhne', MMg, xxix (1897), 53–61
A. Werner: 'Samuel und Gottfried Scheidt', SIMG, i (1899–1900), 401–45
E. Schmitz: Introduction to DTB, xii, Jg.vii/1 (1906/R)
F.T. Arnold: The Art of Accompaniment from a Thorough-bass (London, 1931/R), 100ff
H. Eggebrecht: 'Arten des Generalbasses im frühen und mittleren 17. Jahrhundert', AMw, xiv (1957), 61–82
U. Martin: 'Die Nürnberger Musikgesellschaften', Mitteilungen des Vereins für die Geschichte der Stadt Nürnberg, xlix (1959), 185–225
H. Zirnbauer: Der Notenbestand der Reichstädtischen Nürnbergischen Ratsmusik (Nuremberg, 1959)
H. Zirnbauer: 'Lucas Friedrich Behaim', Mitteilungen des Vereins für die Geschichte der Stadt Nürnberg, i (1960), 330–51
F. Blume: 'Die Handschrift T 131 der New York Public Library', Festschrift Karl Gustav Fellerer zum sechzigsten Geburtstag, ed. H. Hüschen (Regensburg, 1962), 51–66
O. Mischiati: 'L'intavolatura d'organo tedesca della Biblioteca nazionale di Torino', L'organo, iv (1963), 1–154
S.B. Collins: Johann Staden: his Life and Times (diss., U. of Texas, 1987)

HAROLD E. SAMUEL

Staden, Sigmund Theophil [Gottlieb] (b Kulmbach, bap. 6 Nov 1607; d Nuremberg, bur. 30 July 1655). German composer, instrumentalist, organist and theorist, son of JOHANN STADEN. He was a leading musician in Nuremberg, and though a lesser composer than his father he is perhaps, as the composer of the first extant Singspiel, historically more important.

1. LIFE. The German form, 'Gottlieb', of Staden's middle name appears in part iv of the magazine Frauenzimmer Gesprächspiele (1644) edited by Georg Philipp Harsdörffer, who was a crusader for the purification of the German language; Staden himself used 'Theophil'. His early musical studies with his father were so successful that in July 1620, some ten years after the family returned to Nuremberg from Kulmbach and Bayreuth, Johann Staden petitioned the city council for an expectant's salary for his 13-year-old son. This request was apparently denied, but in December 1620 the council granted the boy 150 gulden a year for board, room and lessons with Jakob Paumann in Augsburg. Johann Staden could teach his son composition, the organ and the violin, whereas Paumann, a well-known instrumental teacher, who from 1591 to 1596 had been in the Munich Hofkapelle under Lassus, could offer instruction on the cornett, trombone, bassoon and viola, as well as on keyboard instruments and in composition. Hans Leo Hassler was in Augsburg at the same period. The young Staden returned to Nuremberg in 1623 and was granted an expectant's salary, thus beginning his lifelong service to the city. He again studied away from home between February and August 1627, when the city council paid for him to study string instruments (probably viola da gamba and viola bastarda) in Berlin with Walter Rowe (i). Before leaving Nuremberg he was appointed a city instrumentalist. In 1634 he received the further appointment of organist of St Lorenz. With this double salary, which he enjoyed for the rest of his life, he was Nuremberg's highest-paid musician.

Staden was often called on to perform duties normally assigned to a Kapellmeister, a position which in Nuremberg was seldom held by the city's outstanding musician. In 1649, for example, at a large banquet in honour of the peace treaty ending the Thirty Years War, music was performed under his direction by a group of 43 musicians (21 singers, 18 instrumentalists and four organists). Another elaborate concert conducted by him, which probably involved the entire musical forces of Nuremberg, was a programme of music of all types and from all times down to the year in which it took place, 1643. The printed programme is extant: Entwerfung dess Anfangs, Fortgangs, Aenderungen, Brauchs und Missbrauchs der edlen Music ('An outline of the beginning, continuation, developments, use and misuse of the noble art of music'). Most of the music performed at this historical concert, which included music of the angels, music that sounded at the beginning of the world and music of the Hebrews, was from Staden's imagination, though actual works by Lassus, Hassler, Giovanni Gabrieli and Johann Staden were either performed or referred to (see Kahl). There is a posthumous portrait of Staden which was engraved in 1669 (fig.1). Four letters written by him in 1637–44 are in the Staatsarchiv, Nuremberg.

2. WORKS. The Singspiel Seelewig appeared in 1644 in part iv of Frauenzimmer Gesprächspiele. The complete series of eight parts (1642–9) contains 300 works, nine of which include either music or instructions for music, apparently all by Staden. Seelewig is the only one that is through-composed. It is designated as 'in the Italian manner' and is modelled on the school dramas of the 16th

1. Sigmund Theophil Staden: engraving by Joachim von Sandrart, after Michael Herr, 1669

2. Act 3 scene i of Sigmund Theophil Staden's 'Seelewig': woodcut from G.P. Harsdörffer's 'Frawenzimmer Gesprächspiele', iv (Nuremberg, 1644) and 17th centuries (fig.2). The recitatives lack the freedom of their Italian counterparts, and the emphasis on strophic songs, a trait still common in J.P. Krieger's operas 50 years later, retards the dramatic movement. The music in the other eight Gesprächspiele consists of one or more strophic songs and instrumental interludes which appear between sections of spoken dialogue. The oratorio-like religious plays which Staden produced in collaboration with Johann Klaj, a teacher in the Nuremberg schools, are related to the Singspiels. All the roles – biblical characters, the people, good and bad angels and the Lord – were read by Klaj, and Staden's solo, choral and instrumental sections were interspersed with the declamation. Six such works were reportedly performed in 1644 and 1645 at St Sebaldus following Sunday vesper services.

Staden published only two collections of vocal music, a modest contribution compared with the 20 collections (both vocal and instrumental) published by his colleague Kindermann. The 35 songs of Seelen-Music can be performed by four voices and continuo, or the latter can assume the lower parts as an accompaniment for the soprano voice. The outmoded melodic style of these pieces enjoyed a popularity long after Staden's death: all of them were included in Geistliche Seelen-Music, collected by Christian Huber, which appeared in nine editions between 1682 and 1753. Staden's second collection, Musicalischer Friedens-Gesänger, contains some of the music performed at the peace festival of 1649. Of the 12 sacred and secular compositions in it, nine are strophic songs; the other three are through-composed, of considerable length, and with a greater use of melodic ornamentation than is to be found in Staden's other compositions. A number of his other strophic songs with continuo were published in anthologies, and he wrote 19 for funerals, 11 of which are four-part chorales, note-against-note and without a separate continuo part. No other 17th-century Nuremberg composer wrote so often in this form. In 1637, when other German composers were experimenting with the new Italian style, Staden brought out a new edition of H.L. Hassler's Kirchengesänge, adding six of his own and 12 of his father's four-part strophic songs to the 69 of Hassler's 1608 edition. Although he did not stubbornly evade the new style, as can be seen in Seelewig by his adding of recitative to the strophic-song tradition of school plays, Staden, like his father, preferred the German traditions of syllabic treatment of the text, unadventurous harmony and counterpoint and the dominating sacred songs with their restricted melodic flow and limited forms. Of the large amount of instrumental music that one would have expected from one of Nuremberg's leading instrumentalists, there is only a single suite movement.

The pointedness and clarity of Rudimentum musicum, an elementary manual for schools which went through four editions, can serve now as an introduction to the basic theoretical practice of the 17th century. But despite this theoretical work, his printed collections, the renowned concerts under his direction and his reputation as a performer, there is no evidence that Staden influenced German music in the middle of the 17th century or that his fame was more than local. There is no record of his having had any pupils: it is known that in Nuremberg young musicians studied with Kindermann, who in contrast to Staden's conservatism could offer his pupils thorough, devoted training in the new Italian style.

WORKS

printed works published in Nuremberg unless otherwise stated

DRAMATIC

all published in Frauenzimmer Gesprächspiele, 1642–9

Das geistliche Waldgedicht oder Freudenspiel genant Seelewig (Spl, prol, 3, epilogue, G.P. Harsdörffer), in vol.iv (1644); ed. in MMg, xiii (1881), 65–147; ed. in Keller (1977); extract ed. in GMB

Incidental music in other vols.: vol.i: 1 song in Die Gedächtnisskunst; vol.ii: 4 songs in Vom halben Umbkreiss; 2 songs in Das Schauspiel teutscher Sprichwörter; vol.iii: 7 songs and 2 interludes, 3 str, in Von der Welt Eitelkeit; vol.iv: 1 song in foreword; 2 songs in Die Poeterey; vol.v: 1 song in Die Reimkunst; 8 songs and 7 interludes, 3, 4 insts, in Die Tugendsterne; vol.vii: 1 interlude in Das Schauspiel zu Ross

OTHER VOCAL

Seelen-Music . . . geist- und trostreicher Lieder, 1 or 4vv, bc (1644–8) (2 vols.); pt.ii lost; both vols. in Christian Huber: Geistliche Seelen-Music (St Gall, 1682)
Musicalischer Friedens-Gesänger, 3vv, 2 vn, vc, bc (1651)
6 lieder, 4vv, 1637[2]
18 occasional lieder, mostly for funerals, 4vv (1637–58)
1 funeral lied, 1647[6]
12 lieder, 1v, bc, in D. Wülffer: Zwölff Andachten (1648)
10 lieder, 1v, bc, in J. Rist: Neuer himlischer Lieder, i (Lüneburg, 1651)
5 lieder in L. Erhard: Harmonisches Chor- und Figural Gesang-Buch (Frankfurt, 1659), incl. 4 from Seelen-Music

INSTRUMENTAL

Volta, suite movt, a 3, Nuremberg, Staatsarchiv

LOST WORKS
oratorio texts extant and published in Nuremberg

Der leidenden Christus (orat, J. Klaj), 1645
Incid music for orats, probably by Staden (texts by Klaj): Aufferstehung Jesu Christi, 1644; Engel- und Drachen-Streit; Höllen- und Himmelfahrt Jesu Christi, 1644; Weyhnacht-Liedt der heiligen Geburt Jesu Christ, 1644; Herodes der Kindermörder, 1645; Der seligmachenden Geburt Jesu Christi, 1650
2 occasional lieder

THEORETICAL WORKS

Rudimentum musicum, das ist Kurtze Unterweisung dess Singens für die liebe Jugend (3/1648); 1st edn (1636), 2nd edn (n.d.), 4th edn (1663), all lost
Entwerfung dess Anfangs, Fortgangs, Aenderungen, Brauchs und Missbrauchs der edlen Music (1643, 2/1650); repr. in Clemen
Accentus L. habraicae . . . 1651, formerly in D-Nst, now lost (see Will, viii, 279)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J.G. Doppelmayr: Historische Nachricht von den nürnbergischen Mathematicis und Künstlern (Nuremberg, 1730)
G.A. Will: Nürnbergisches Gelehrten-Lexicon (Nuremberg and Altdorf, 1755–8)
W. Nagel: 'Zur Biographie Johann Stadens und seiner Söhne', MMg, xxix (1897), 53–61
G.A. Narciss: Studien zu den Frauenzimmergesprächspielen (Leipzig, 1928)
O. Clemen: 'Das Programm zu einem Musikfest in Nürnberg in Mai 1643', Otto Glauning zum 60. Geburtstag, ed. H. Schreiber (Leipzig, 1938), 18–24
H. Druener: Sigmund Theophil Staden 1607–1655 (diss., U. of Bonn, 1946)
W. Körner: 'Zum Gedächtnis des Nürnberger Komponisten und Organisten Sigmund Theophil Staden', Gottesdienst und Kirchenmusik (1955), 177–8
W. Kahl: 'Das Nürnberger historische Konzert von 1643 und sein Geschichtsbild', AMw, xiv (1957), 281–303
J. Haar: 'Astral Music in Seventeenth-Century Nuremberg: the Tugendsterne of Harsdörffer and Staden', MD, xvi (1962), 175–89
P. Keller: 'New Light on the Tugendsterne of Harsdörffer and Staden', MD, xxv (1971), 223–7
P. Keller: Die Oper Seelewig von Sigmund Theophil Staden und Georg Philipp Harsdörffer (Bern, 1977)
H.E. Samuel: The Cantata in Nuremberg during the Seventeenth Century (Ann Arbor, 1982)
J.P. Aikin: 'Creating a Language for German Opera', Deutsche Vierteljahresschrift für Literaturwissenschaft und Geistesgeschichte, lxii (1988), 266–89

HAROLD E. SAMUEL

Stader, Maria (b Budapest, 5 Nov 1911; d Zürich, 27 April 1999). Swiss soprano. She moved to Switzerland as a refugee and studied singing with Hans Keller and Ilona Durigo. In 1939 she won the singing prize at the Geneva International Music Competition, and at the end of the war began a career as a concert singer, and also taught at the Zürich Musikakademie. She gave numerous concert tours in the USA, Japan and Africa and sang at the principal festivals. Her fame was based chiefly on her interpretations of Mozart. Though she rarely appeared in the opera house – she did perform the Queen of Night at Covent Garden in the 1949–50 season – she sang many operatic roles in concerts, and on recordings (mainly with Fricsay). Her clean technique and flexible, well-focussed, though not large voice made her much in demand for the concert repertory, from Bach's Passions to Verdi's Requiem. She gave an indication of her working methods in her book Gesang (Lektion) Arie 'Aus Liebe will mein Heiland sterben': Matthäus-Passion [von] Joh(ann) Seb(astian) Bach (Wie Meister üben, iii, Zürich, 1967; Eng. trans., 1968). She was honoured with the Salzburg Lilli Lehmann Medal (1950), the Mozart silver medal (1956) and the Hans Georg Nägeli Medal of Zürich (1962). She retired from the concert platform in 1969 after a series of farewell concerts. Her autobiography, Nehmt meinen Dank, was published in Munich in 1979.

JÜRG STENZL/R

Stadlen, Peter (b Vienna, 14 July 1910; d London, 21 Jan 1996). English pianist and writer on music of Austrian birth. He studied at the Vienna Akademisches Gymnasium and Hochschule für Musik, where his principal teachers were Paul Weingarten (piano), Joseph Marx and Max Springer (composition) and Alexander Wunderer (conducting); he also studied philosophy at Vienna University. From 1929 to 1933 he was at the Berlin Hochschule für Musik, under Leonid Kreutzer (piano), Josef Gmeindl (composition) and Julius Prüwer (conducting). In 1934 he embarked on a career as a concert pianist, specializing in the Viennese Classics and contemporary piano music, particularly that of the Second Viennese School, and playing widely in Europe; in 1937 he gave the première of Webern's op.27 Variations, and at the Venice Biennale in the same year he directed from the keyboard a performance of Schoenberg's op.29 Suite whose reception created a notorious scandal. Stadlen settled in England before World War II; after the war he introduced a number of important 12-note works, including Schoenberg's Piano Concerto, to audiences in Germany, Austria and England, and played under the composer in the premières of Hindemith's Four Temperaments and Konzertmusik for piano, brass and harp (Vienna, 1947), also supervising a masterclass in modern piano music at the Darmstadt summer courses (1947–51). In 1952 he was awarded the Austrian government Schoenberg medal.

During the mid-1950s Stadlen turned away from a career in practical music to one in research, criticism and broadcasting. He was appointed a music critic on the Daily Telegraph in 1959, becoming chief critic from 1977 until his retirement in 1985; from 1965 to 1969 he was also a lecturer in music at the University of Reading, and in 1967–8 a visiting fellow of All Souls College, Oxford. His writings, and particularly his criticism of contemporary music, were much affected by his disillusionment with serialism. He gave a series of lectures 'The Rise and Decline of Serialism' at the British Institute of Recorded Sound in 1960. He also worked extensively on the autograph and sketch material of Mozart and Beethoven, and devoted particular attention to Beethoven's use of the metronome and the question of Schindler's forgeries in Beethoven's conversation books, which he played a leading part in exposing. His critical writings show his strongly committed standpoint on controversial matters and an unusually allusive style.

WRITINGS

'No Real Casualties?', The Score, no.24 (1958), 65–8 [reply to articles by R. Gerhard, R. Sessions and W. Piston]
'Serialism Reconsidered', The Score, no.22 (1958), 12–27; Ger. trans., Musica, xiii (1959), 89–98 as 'Kritik am Seriellen'
'Thoughts on Musical Continuity I', The Score, no.26 (1960), 52–62
'The Webern Legend', MT, ci (1960), 695–7; Ger. trans., Musica, xv (1961), 66–8
'The Aesthetics of Popular Music', British Journal of Aesthetics, ii (1962), 351–61
'Beethoven and the Metronome I', ML, xlviii (1967), 330–49
'Possibilities of an Aesthetic Evaluation of Beethoven's Sketches', Beethoven Congress: Berlin 1970, 111–17
'Das pointillistische Missverständnis', Webern-Kongress V: Vienna 1972, 173–84; repr. in ÖMz, xxvii (1972), 152–61
'Schönberg und der Sprechgesang', Internationale Schönberg-Gesellschaft: Kongress I: Vienna 1974, 202–12
'Beethoven und das Metronom', Beethoven Colloquium: Vienna 1977 [Beiträge '76–'78], 57–75; repr. in Beethoven: das Problem der Interpretation, Musik-Konzepte, viii (Munich, 1979), 12–33
'Schindler's Beethoven Forgeries', MT, cxviii (1977), 549–52 [Ger. version in ÖMz, xxxii (1977), 246–52]
'Schindler and the Conversation Books', Soundings, vii (1978), 2–18 [Ger. version in ÖMz, xxxiv (1979), 2–18]
'Berg's Cryptography', Alban Berg: Vienna 1980, 171–80
'Oesterreichs Exilmusiker in England', Österreichische Musiker im Exil: Vienna 1988 [Beiträge '90], 125–33
'England und die Wiener Philharmoniker', Klang und Komponist: Vienna 1990, 125–34

EDITIONS

A. Webern: Variationen fur Klavier, op.27 (Vienna, 1979) [incl. study of work and Webern's ideas on interpretation]

STANLEY SADIE

Stadler, Anton (Paul) (b Bruck an der Leitha, 28 June 1753; d Vienna, 15 June 1812). Austrian clarinettist, composer and inventor. He was a son of a Viennese musician and shoemaker, Joseph Stadler, and his wife Sophie (née Altmann). At some time after the birth of his brother Johann (Nepomuk Franz) (b Vienna, ?1755; d Vienna, May–June 1804), the family returned to Vienna. Both boys became clarinettists; the earliest evidence of a joint performance appears in a programme of the Tonkünstler-Societät (1773). In 1779 they were engaged in the imperial eight-part Harmonie (Anton initially played second clarinet because of his interest in the low register), and they played in the court orchestra on a freelance basis. In 1780, the year of Anton's marriage to Francisca Pichler (?Bichler), the brothers were also in the service of Count Carl von Palm, while Anton was also employed by the Russian ambassador Count Dmitry Golitsïn and the order of Maria Treu. By 1781 the brothers were full-time members of the court orchestra as well as the Harmonie; Anton, assuming the first clarinet part, was paid more than the virtuoso cellist Joseph Weigl, and as a soloist he became the dominant wind player in Vienna at a time when it was still rare to hear the clarinet as a solo concert instrument.

Stadler probably met Mozart at the home of Countess Wilhelmine Thun soon after Mozart's move to Vienna in 1781, and the two became friends; Stadler often performed in Mozart's masonic works (especially those with basset-horn) and in 1786 played the Trio K498. According to Constanze, the two planned a secret fraternal society called the 'Grotto', for which Stadler completed a document begun by Mozart, now lost (see Constanze's letter to J.A. André, 31 May 1800); perhaps to his regret, Mozart also entrusted Stadler with certain of his business dealings.

Stadler is noted for having invented a 'Bass-Klarinet', now known as 'basset clarinet', which was made by Theodor Lotz (b Vienna, 1747/8; d Vienna, 1792) in 1787. This had two more keys at the lower end than the normal clarinet (probably c and d) and was first played in public at Stadler's concert of 20 February 1788. By 1790 it had four basset keys (e♭, d, c♯ and c) and was described as having a full four-octave range. Mozart composed for it the Clarinet Quintet K581 and the Clarinet Concerto K622; the latter was first performed by Stadler probably in Prague on 16 October 1791 at the start of a five-year concert tour, during which Johann took his place as first clarinettist. Basset clarinet writing also appears in the obbligato aria 'Parto, parto' in La clemenza di Tito, in portions of Così fan tutte and in two clarinet quintet fragments K91/516*c* and K88/581*a*. Stadler himself wrote a basset clarinet concerto (lost), as did Süssmayr (lost, drafts in GB-Lbl).

In 1799 Stadler prepared a 50-page 'Musick Plan' (now in H-Bn) for a new music school on the estate of Count George Festetics in Kesthely, Hungary. This contains valuable information on 18th-century musical life and education; its bibliography lists a forthcoming clarinet method by Stadler himself, but this was apparently never completed. Stadler was pensioned from the court orchestra in 1799 (after which his brother Johann again took his place), but in 1807 he was again playing first clarinet, and he was active as a soloist as late as 1806. His estate after his death (from tuberculosis) included some music but no clarinets. He was survived by his estranged wife and his sons Michael Johannes, an apprentice instrument maker, and Anton, a basset-horn player. His compositions were available as late as 1844. Many newspaper reports mention his soft tone and his ability to change registers quickly and with remarkable ease.

WORKS

printed works published in Vienna unless otherwise stated

Solo inst: 3 caprices, cl (*c*1800), ed. F.-G. Höly (Lottstetten, 1992); 10 Variationen über Müsst ma nix in übel aufnehma, cl (1810); 9 Variationen über Müsst ma nix in übel aufnehma, csakan (1810); 3 fantaisies ou caprices, cl (n.d.); 3 fantaisies ou potpourris, cl (n.d.); Variations sur différents thèmes, cl (n.d.); Variations sur différents thèmes favoris, cl (n.d.); Suite d'airs connus; 3 caprices, csakan/flûte double (Berlin, n.d.); 7 variations, basset-hn, 8 variations, basset cl, perf. Riga, 1794, lost; variations on Freut euch des Lebens, basset cl, perf. Hanover, lost
Other inst: 6 duettinos, csakan, csakan/vn (Berlin, n.d.); 6 duettinos concertants, 2 cl (n.d.); 6 duettinos progressifs, 2 cl (n.d.); 12 ländlerische Tänze, 2 cl (n.d.); 18 Terzetten, 3 basset-hn, A-Wgm; 2 csakan partbooks, D-Bsb; Parthie, 6 wind insts, perf. 1785, lost; Conc., basset cl, perf. Riga, 1794, lost

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Grove6 (P. Weston) [incl. earlier bibliography]
C.F. Cramer, ed.: Magazin der Musik, ii (Hamburg, 1784/R), 1400–01
J.F. Schink: Litterarische Fragmente (Graz, 1784/R), 286
Review, AMZ, iv (1801–2), 408–14
P.L. Poulin: 'The Basset Clarinet of Anton Stadler', College Music Symposium, xxii/2 (1982), 67–82
P. Poulin: 'A Little-Known Letter by Anton Stadler', ML, lxix (1988), 49–56
P.L Poulin: 'A View of Eighteenth-Century Musical Life and Training: Anton Stadler's Musick Plan', ML, lxxi (1990), 215–24
P.L. Poulin: 'Noch eine Bach-Mozart-Verbindung', BJb 1990, 79–80
P.L. Poulin: 'A Report on New Information Regarding Stadler's Concert Tour of Europe and Two Early Examples of the Basset

Clarinet', MJb 1991, 946–55; addns in The Clarinet, xxii/2 (1995), 24–8
P.L. Poulin: 'Anton Stadler's Basset Clarinet: Recent Discoveries in Riga', JAMIS, xxii (1996), 110–27
P.L. Poulin: 'The Many Sides of Mozart's Clarinettist Extraordinaire, Anton Stadler: New Discoveries', Austria 996–1996: Music in a Changing Society: Ottawa 1996 (forthcoming)
P.L. Poulin: Mozart's Clarinettist Anton Stadler: His Life and Times and the Basset Clarinet (forthcoming)

PAMELA L. POULIN

Stadler, Johann Wilhelm (b Repperndorf, nr Kitzingen, 8 Oct 1747; d Eltersdorf, nr Erlangen, 26 June 1819). German composer. The son of a teacher, he received his musical instruction first from his grandfather and later from a Kantor in Heilsbronn near Ansbach. He began his study of theology in Erlangen in 1770, and went on to obtain a master's degree; for a time he was a pupil of Johann Balthasar Kehl, whom he succeeded as municipal Kantor in Bayreuth (1778) and tutor (in 1805 headmaster) at the college there. The culmination of his musical activity was probably the series of choral and orchestral concerts given there under his direction. He had to give up his position as Kantor in 1815 and subsequently taught at the Gymnasium, retiring in November 1818. In 1817 the University of Erlangen awarded him the doctorate of philosophy.

Stadler's 'musical genius, attested to by his many beautiful vocal pieces' and his 'excellent musical library' were praised as early as 1788 in Meusel's Museum für Künstler. According to the obituary notice written in his honour by the board of the Bayreuth Gymnasium, he was a 'learned connoisseur of music' who had trained 'a considerable number of excellent vocal artists in several areas of Germany'. Among his compositions the setting of Klopstock's funeral song Auferstehn, ja auferstehn wirst du was long popular in Bavaria. A few songs are extant in anthologies, among them a setting of Spiegel's Die Sehnsucht (in Musen Almanach für 1782) also attributed to Maximilian Stadler, but his many cantatas, choral pieces and the oratorio Die Kreuzfahrer are lost.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

GerberL; ZahnM [incl. 2 melodies by Stadler]
J.G. Meusel, ed.: Museum für Künstler und für Kunstliebhaber, iii (Mannheim, 1788), 56
F.J.A. Muck: Biographische Notizen über die Componisten der Choralmelodien im Baierischen neuen Choral-Buche (Erlangen, 1823), 74ff
K. Hartmann: 'Kunstpflege in Bayreuth nach der Residenzzeit (1769–1806)', Archiv für Geschichte und Altertumskunde von Oberfranken, xxxiii/2 (1936–8), passim
G. Schmidt: 'Johann Balthasar Kehl und Johann Wilhelm Stadler', Archiv für Geschichte von Oberfranken, xlvi (1966), 183–240 [incl. list of works]

GÜNTER THOMAS

Stadler, Abbé Maximilian [Johann Karl Dominik] (b Melk, 4 Aug 1748; d Vienna, 8 Nov 1833). Austrian composer, music historian and keyboard performer. He received his earliest musical training from Johann Leuthner, bass at the Benedictine abbey of Melk. In 1758 he went as a choirboy to Lilienfeld, where he learnt the violin, clavichord and organ and made his first attempts at composition. During vacations he revisited Melk to study the music of the new organist J.G. Albrechtsberger. Stadler continued his formal education after 1762 at the Jesuit College in Vienna. In November 1766 he entered Melk as a novice, took his vows the following year and was ordained on 13 October 1772. After directing the abbey's theological studies for eight years he served briefly as chaplain in Wullersdorf in 1783. He was elected prior of Melk on 17 November 1784.

Favoured by Emperor Joseph II during the suppression of the Austrian monasteries, Stadler was appointed abbot of Lilienfeld in April 1786. In Kremsmünster, where he held the same post from May 1789, his administration was marked by his support of secular music, including performances of operas by Paisiello, Salieri and Umlauf. He moved to Linz in January 1791, acted as consistorial adviser to the bishop and was awarded an annual pension of 1000 florins from Kremsmünster for the next 12 years. In 1796 he settled in Vienna, was secularized in 1803 and received the titular canonry of Linz. He was given duties as parish priest in Alt-Lerchenfeld (1803) and Grosskrut (1810), near Vienna. Resigning this last post in November 1815, he made Vienna his permanent residence and remained active there until his death.

Stadler's musical activities were many-sided. He experimented with a type of 18th-century aleatory music, composition by throwing dice, and even developed an interest in ethnic music, as shown by his arrangements of chants of the Mevlevi dervishes. His more conventional essays in composition spanned almost three-quarters of a century. He wrote primarily vocal music, especially sacred compositions on German texts. The performances of his oratorio, Die Befreyung von Jerusalem (from 1813), established his reputation internationally. This success was followed by the publication of a number of his works in Vienna (by Mechetti, Steiner & Co., Diabelli and others).

After moving to Vienna in 1796, Stadler became musical adviser to Mozart's widow, Constanze. Along with Nissen he was the first to order and catalogue the manuscripts in Mozart's estate (1798–9). The number of his completions of fragments and sketches left by Mozart remains to be determined. He made copies of the Requiem (K626), and when its authenticity was questioned by Gottfried Weber in 1825 Stadler published a series of articles in a successful defence. By 1819, according to the Beethoven conversation books, he was working on the Materialen zur Geschichte der Musik unter den österreichischen Regenten, now considered to be the first history of music in Austria. Long believed to be lost, this significant document was rediscovered in Vienna in 1969.

Stadler was considered a leading 'erudite composer' and an accomplished interpreter of keyboard music by his Viennese contemporaries. He held honorary memberships in both the Steiermärkischer Musikverein (after 1821) and the Gesellschaft der Musikfreunde in Vienna (1826). He was a prominent figure in Viennese musical life, maintaining relationships not only with the Mozart family, but with Haydn, Beethoven and Schubert as well. There are two engravings of him by J.B. Pfitzer (1813, 1818) in the Bild Archiv of the Austrian National Library, Vienna.

WORKS

printed works published in Vienna unless otherwise stated

SACRED

Masses: nos.1–2, G, B♭, 4vv, orch (1824), A-M, Wn; D, before 1790, M, SEI, Wn; 2, d, d, before 1790, Wn, D-Dkh; C, ?1763–7, lost; 2, 1772, lost; Requiem, c, 1820, A-GÖ, M, Wn, Wst, D-Dkh; Requiem, F (1821), A-M, Wn, D-Bsb

Other liturgical: Asperges me, Ecce sacerdos magnus, Tantum ergo, Vidi aquam, 4vv, org (1818); Libera me Domine, 4vv, org (1821–2), A-M; 10 vesper psalms, 4vv, org (1826), Wn; Alma Redemptoris, Ave regina, Regina coeli, Salve regina, 4vv, org (1826); Magna et mirabilia, Salvum fac populum tuum, 4vv, orch

(1829–30), M, Wgm, Wn; Delectare in Domino, Si Deus pro nobis, 4vv, orch (1831–2), M; 5 Magnificat, 2 in Wgm, Wn, 3 lost; Te Deum, M, SEI; 3 litanies, 1 in Wgm (frag.), 2 lost; 9 Salve regina, 8 in M, 1 lost; 3 Ave regina, 4 antiphons for Corpus Christi, 2 Christmas motets, Regina coeli, 2 Alma Redemptoris, O quam metuendus, Miserere, Omnipotens: all M; Exaltabo, Wn; Veni Sancte Spiritus, responsories for Holy Week, lost

Other sacred: 14 Trauergesänge (U. Petrack), 4vv, org (1805); Vater unser, 4vv (after 1810), GÖ; Der 111te [112] Psalm (trans. M. Mendelssohn), 4vv, orch, 1814 (1831–2), M; 24 Psalmen Davids (trans. Mendelssohn), Tr, pf (1815–*c*1817), Wst, D-Bsb; Neue Messgesänge mit Melodien, Tr, org (1816), 4vv/org, A-Wgm; Der 50te Psalm (trans. Mendelssohn), 4vv (1818), D-Bsb; Deutsches Salve regina, Tr, pf (1822); Gott! (H.W. Gerstenberg), hymn, after 1810, A-M, Wgm, Wn; Loblied, ?1810–21, M; Ps xxiv, *c*1821, M, Wgm; Ps xxix, 1832, Wgm; Ps lxiii, Wgm; Ps lxxxiv, 1831, M; 7 other psalm settings (trans. Mendelssohn), M, Wgm, Wn, Ws, D-Bsb; chorales for Redemptorist nuns, *c*1832, lost

OTHER VOCAL

Dramatic: Das Studenten-Valete (Singspiel, Petrack), Melk, 6 Sept 1781, A-M; incidental music to Polyxena (H. von Collin), 4vv, orch, U. of Vienna, 15 Dec 1811, M, Wgm, Wn; Die Befreyung von Jerusalem (H. and M. von Collin), oratorio, U. of Vienna, 9 May 1813 (1821), M, Wgm, D-Bsb

Secular cantatas: Cantate auf die zwote Primiz Seiner Hochwürden und Gnaden Urbans [Hauer] (Petrack), Melk, 5 April 1785, lost; O Tonkunst, Tochter der Erfindung, soloists, chorus, orch, 1789, A-KR; cantata (J.F. Ratschky), 4vv, orch, Linz, 1791–6; lost; Die Frühlingsfeyer (F.G. Klopstock), 5vv, orch, 1813, M, Wgm, Wn, CH-Zz

Lieder: Die Sehnsucht (Spiegel), Tr, pf (1782), also attrib. J.W. Stadler; Jung und schön bin ich (?Petrack), Tr, pf (1783); 12 Lieder von Gellert [= Petrack, Goethe], Tr, pf (*c*1785); 5 It. arias (P. Metastasio), S/B, orch, 1790–1803, lost; 2 scenes from Polyxena (Collin), Tr, pf (*c*1806); 2 Lieder (D.L. Witte), Tr, pf (Berlin, 1819); Die Liebe (F.L. Stolberg), Tr, pf (1821); 13 other lieder

Other secular: Hoch du mein Oesterreich, hymn, 4vv, wind insts (1818); An die Versöhnung (C. Kuffner), 4vv, pf/org (1820–21), A-M; Glaube, Hoffnung und Liebe (Kuffner), 4vv, pf/org (1820–21), M, Wgm; Es ist ein Gott (C.A. Tiedge, from Urania), 4vv, orch, after 1810, Wgm; 2 melodramas (J.M. Denis, K. Mastalier), Tr, pf, *c*1770, ?1780–85, M; canons, 3–6vv, KR, Wst, private collection of L. Koch

INSTRUMENTAL

Kbd: 6 sonatinas, hpd/pf (1794); 3 fugues, org/pf, op.1 (1798–1803); Sonata, F, hpd/pf (1799); 2 sonatas, 1 fugue [= op.1 no.3], pf (Zurich, 1803); 12 Eng. dances, pf (*c*1809); Prelude and Fugue, E, pf (1818); variation on a waltz by Diabelli, pf, in Vaterländischer Künstlerverein (*c*1824); Fugue, c, on the name Schubert, org/pf, 1829 (1829), Wgm; 3 sonatas, hpd, 1763–7, lost; 6 variations, 1767–72, 3 Galanterie-Menuette, 1803–10, Fugue, 1828, Wgm; Minuet, 3 trios, Rondo, Variations, *c*1803, GB-Lbl; 7 sonatas, 1772, A-Wgm, D-Bsb; 8 preludes, org, 1773, Bsb

Other inst: 6 str trios, 1763–7, lost; Divertimento, fl, 4 str, 1772–86, A-M; 12 minuets, orch, *c*1782–5, M; 2 str qts, 1 divertimento, vn, va d'amore, va, vc, before 1790, M; 2 vc concs., before 1790, lost; Sonata, E♭, hn, pf, 1803–10, lost

COMPLETIONS AND ARRANGEMENTS

Completions: G. Benda: Mass (Cr–Ag), Wn; F.L. Gassmann: Requiem (Off, San, Bs, Ag), 1790, KR; J. Haydn: Hin ist alle meine Kraft, canon, as last movt of str qt, op.103, HIII:83 (1807), Wgm, as Musikalische Visitkarte des … Joseph Haydn, S, T, pf (1807), as An Joseph Haydn, 2 S, pf, *c*1809, M; W.A. Mozart: Larghetto and Allegro, E♭, CZ-KRa, ed. in Neue Ausgabe sämtlicher Werke, x/31 (Kassel, 1964), see Croll (1962–3) and 'Zu Mozarts Larghetto und Allegro' (1964); Mozart: K355/576b, 372, 400/372a, 401/375e, 429/468a, 442, 443/404b; Mozart-Bach: Das wohltemperirte Clavier, ii/22, for str qt, see Croll, 'Eine neuentdeckte Bach-Fuge' (1966)

Arrs./edns: [7] Original-Chöre der Derwische Mewlevi (trans. V. von Hussar), unison chorus/1v, pf (*c*1822); L. van Beethoven: Septet, op.20, for pf; L. Cherubini: Médée, Lodoiska, Eliza, N.M. Dalayrac: Thurm von Gottenburg, C.W. Gluck: Orfeo, W.A. Mozart: Idomeneo, Der Schauspieldirektor, all for str sextet; Mozart: Menuetti et Tedeschi, K361/370a, for str sextet, K492 for pf, str qt, before 1800, A-Wn, K429/468a for pf, H-Bn; works by Ammerbach, Caldara, Conti, Josquin Des Prez, Ebner, Mouton, Obrecht, Ockeghem

WRITINGS

Anleitung zur musikalischen Composition durch Würfelspiel (MS, *c*1780, *A-Wgm)

Erklärung, wie man aus … Ziffer- und Notentabellen eine Menuet herauswürfeln könne (Vienna, 1781)

Priorats-Ephemeriden (MS, 1784–6, A-M)

Beschreibung der Fragmente aus Mozart's Nachlass (MS, *c*1798, formerly D-Bsb, ?lost)

Fragmente von Singstücken [from Mozart's estate] (MS, *c*1798, A-Wgm)

Fragmente einiger Mozartischen Klavierstücke, die von einem Liebhaber der Musik vollendet worden (MS, Wn); ed. in ÖMz, xxi (1966), 250

Materialen zur Geschichte der Musik unter den österreichischen Regenten (MS, 1816–25, WN; ed in Wagner (1974)

Eigenhändig geschriebene Selbst-Biographie des Hochwürdigen Herrn Maximilian Stadler (MS, 1816–26, Wgm); ed. in Haas (1957)

'Musikalische Kunstschätze', AMZ, iii (1819), 605–11, suppls.viii, ix

Vertheidigung der Echtheit des Mozartischen Requiem (Vienna, 1826)

Nachtrag zur Vertheidigung (Vienna, 1827)

Zweyter und letzter Nachtrag zur Vertheidigung sammt Nachbericht über die Ausgabe dieses Requiem durch Herrn André in Offenbach, nebst Ehrenrettung Mozart's und vier fremden Briefen (Vienna, 1827)

'Verzeichniss der in Mozart's Verlassenschaft gefundenen musicalischen Fragmente und Entwürfe', in G.N. von Nissen: Biographie W.A. Mozart's (Leipzig, 1828/R), appx iii

'Kurzer Auszug aus einer noch ungedruckten Geschichte der österreichischen Musik', Monatbericht der Gesellschaft der Musikfreunde (1829), 177–83

Biographische Notizen über Abbé Maximilian Stadler von ihm selbst aufgezeichnet (MS, *c*1833, A-GÖ); ed. in MJb 1964, 175

Letters concerning G.N. von Nissen, F. Artaria, C. Mozart (MS, Wst); G.N. von Nissen, I.F. von Mosel (MS, Wn); D. Artaria (MS, GB-Lbl)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

EitnerQ; FétisB; GerberL; GerberNL; MGG1 (H. Hellmann-Stojan); SchillingE

'Bericht über den Musikzustand des löbl: Stiftes Mölk in alter und neuer Zeit', Allgemeine musikalische Zeitung [Vienna], ii (1818), 349–52, 357–60, 365–7, esp. 365–6

I.F. von Mosel: 'Nekrolog: Abbé Maximilian Stadler', Wiener Zeitschrift für Kunst, Literatur, Theater und Mode (1833), nos.149–50, cols.1213, 1221

J.J.H. Czikann and F. Gräffer, eds.: Oesterreichische National-Encyklopädie (Vienna, 1835–7)

H. Sabel: Maximilian Stadlers weltliche Werke und seine Beziehungen zur Wiener Klassik (diss., U. of Cologne, 1941)

H. Sabel: 'Maximilian Stadler und Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart', Neues Mozart-Jb 1943, 102–12

A. Kellner: Musikgeschichte des Stiftes Kremsmünster (Kassel, 1956)

R. Haas: 'Abt Stadlers vergessene Selbstbiographie', MJb 1957, 78–84

L. Finscher: 'Maximilian Stadler und Mozarts Nachlass', MJb 1960–61, 168–72

F. Blume: 'Requiem but no Peace', MQ, xlvii (1961), 147–69; repr. in The Creative World of Mozart, ed. P.H. Lang (New York, 1963), 103–26

G. Croll: 'Ein überraschender Mozart-Fund', MJb 1962–3, 108–10

G. Croll: 'Eine zweite, fast vergessene Selbstbiographie von Abbé Stadler', MJb 1964, 172–84

G. Croll: 'Zu Mozarts Larghetto und Allegro Es-dur für 2 Klaviere', MJb 1964, 28–37

G. Croll: 'Eine neuentdeckte Bach-Fuge für Streichquartett von Mozart', ÖMz, xxi (1966), 508–14

G. Croll: 'Zu den Verzeichnissen von Mozarts nachgelassenen Fragmenten und Entwürfen', ÖMz, xxi (1966), 250–54

G. Croll: 'Briefe zum Requiem', MJb 1967, 12–17

O.E. Deutsch: 'Eine merkwürdige Schubert-Handschrift', Musa–mens–musici: im Gedenken an Walther Vetter (Leipzig, 1969), 283–6

K. Wagner: 'Abbé Stadlers Musikgeschichte', ÖMz, xxiv (1969), 709–11

K. Wagner, ed.: Abbé Maximilian Stadler: seine 'Materialen zur Geschichte der Musik unter den österreichischen Regenten' (Kassel, 1974)
R.N. Freeman: The Practice of Music at Melk Abbey, based upon the Documents, 1681–1826 (Vienna, 1989)
J. Gmeiner: 'Der sogenannte "Echtheitsstreit"', Requiem, Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart 1791–1991, Österreichischen Nationalbibliothek, 17 May – 5 Dec 1991 (Graz, 1991), 271–82

ROBERT N. FREEMAN

Stadlmayr [Stadlmair, Stadelmaier, Stadelmayer, Stadelmeyer], Johann (b ?Freising, Bavaria, *c*1580; d Innsbruck, 12 July 1648). German composer. The title-page and dedication of his Sacrum Beatissimae Virginis Mariae canticum (1603) report that he came from Freising. The date of his birth, given as 1560 by Fétis and others, was probably closer to 1580, for in 1619 he was called a 'rather young and lively man'. The earliest documented reference to him is in Georg Draudius's catalogue Bibliotheca classica (Frankfurt, 1611, 2/1625), where a collection of eight-part masses by him is said to have been published in 1596 (misprinted as 1569 but corroborated elsewhere). In 1603 he was a musician in the service of the Archbishop of Salzburg. In 1604, the year of his first marriage, he became vice-Kapellmeister and then Kapellmeister there, a post he held until 1607, when he was appointed to a similar position at the court of the Habsburg Archduke Maximilian II of the Tyrol at Innsbruck. Though later offered other positions he chose to remain in Innsbruck for the rest of his life.

Maximilian, who was Grand Master of the Teutonic Order and specially interested in serious music, apparently held Stadlmayr in great esteem, for he bought him a house and included him in his will. After Maximilian's death in 1618, the Innsbruck chapel was disbanded because his successor, Archduke Leopold V, kept his own musicians at his former Alsatian residence. Stadlmayr presented several petitions for employment so that he and his large family need not leave Innsbruck, where, as he said in 1620, he had 'spared no effort in 13 of the best years of his life'. During this period, which also saw the death of his first wife (in 1619) and his remarriage (in 1621), he added to his income by working as government meat inspector. Not until 1624, after he had sought leave to apply for a post in Vienna, was he reappointed Kapellmeister, with an appropriate salary. Leopold also wanted to make him a member of the nobility, but he refused (as he had also done when Maximilian made him a similar offer some years before) because he lacked sufficient funds to maintain such a position. The court chapel now attained its greatest brilliance, and after Leopold died in 1632 his widow, Claudia de' Medici, continued to support Stadlmayr despite financial difficulties caused by the Thirty Years War, which was ravaging neighbouring countries; part of her support was to help finance the publication of some of Stadlmayr's works.

Stadlmayr's renown went far beyond the Innsbruck of his day. Michael Praetorius praised him in his Syntagma musicum, iii (1618); W.C. Printz in his Historische Beschreibung (1690) counted him among the best-known composers of the 17th century. A number of his works were included in anthologies used from Italy to the Netherlands, or appeared in widely dispersed keyboard intabulations; some were still performed in the 18th century. But he is little known today. All his music shows solid craftsmanship and an ability to create varied works from unassuming material and with simple means.

Stadlmayr was almost exclusively a composer of Catholic church music, and a prolific one. 16th-century traditions as well as 17th-century innovations inform his style. He achieved clear articulation of the liturgical texts, as required by the Council of Trent, with short phrases of generally syllabic declamation that follow natural speech inflections. In imitative sections he highlighted the texts by frequent repetitions of a few words, and he often used stereotyped figures for expressive emphasis. His publications up to about 1628 continue 16th-century traditions of carefully handled polyphony and effectively treated homophonic chordal blocks in the Venetian manner. In some works the two kinds of texture are set against each other. In others one texture may predominate: the polychoral idiom does so in the masses and Magnificat settings for two and three choirs, while the textures of the fifth and ninth items in the Magnificat collection of 1603 are exclusively contrapuntal. Stadlmayr also continued to make use of plainchant in long notes for cantus firmi as well as of parody technique for many masses and Magnificat settings, which are based mainly on Italian works.

In the earlier works the new style intrudes only in added bass lines for the organ which merely double the lowest vocal notes. It is more pronounced with the substitution of instrumental ritornellos for the odd-numbered verses of the works forming the second part of the Hymni of 1628. From then on ensembles for widely varying combinations of solo voices, often with added instruments (usually two violins or cornetts), are increasingly deployed in imitative, often florid, concertato fashion, contrasted with homophonic sections for the tutti groups. Although the works are still modal, they show an increasing tendency towards a major-minor tonality.

WORKS

MASS COLLECTIONS

Missae, 8vv, 2 bc (org) (Augsburg, 1596), no known copy; cited in Draudius: Bibliotheca classica (Frankfurt am Main, 1611, 2/1625)
Missae, 8vv, 2 bc (org) (Augsburg, 1610)
Missae, 12vv, 3 bc (org) (Vienna, 1616)
Missae concertatae, 6vv, 2 cornetts/vn, 4 trbn, bc (Innsbruck, 1631)
Missae breves, 4vv, cum una pro defunctis et alia, 5vv, bc (Innsbruck, 1641) [1 mass 5vv]
Missae concertatae, 10 et 12 vocibus et instrumentis cum 4 partibus pro secundo choro (Cantus, 8vv, 2 cornetts/vn, 3 trbn/va, 2 bc) (Innsbruck, 1642) [1 with 2 addl vns]
Missae, 9vv primo choro concertante a 5vv, secundo pleno et necessario cum symphoniis ad libitum, 9vv, 3 cornetts/vn, 3 trbn/va, bc (Antwerp, 1643)

MAGNIFICAT COLLECTIONS

Edition: Eight Magnificat Settings, ed. H.H. Junkermann (Madison, 1974) [incl. 4 from the 1603 collection, 1 from 1608, 2 from 1614, 1 from 1641]
Sacrum Beatissimae Virginis Mariae canticum, 5–8vv (Munich, 1603)
Mag, 4vv, super octo tonos, quibus accesserunt litaniae, antiphonae Mariales, 8vv (Passau, 1608) [incl. litany and 4 Marian ants also pubd in Antiphonae, 1636]
Super magnae matris divino carmine Magnificat, symphoniae variae ... 8, 12vv, 2, 3 bc (org) (Innsbruck, 1614)
Cantici Mariani septies variati, liber quartus, 12vv, 3 bc (org), op.6 (Innsbruck, 1618)
Psalmi vesperini (1640) and Psalmi integri (1641) also contain Magnificat settings

OTHER COLLECTIONS

Musica super cantum gregorianum ... pars prima missarum dominicalium introitus complectitur ... 5vv, bc ad lib (Ravensburg, 1625); 52 introits, 9 Gloria Patri settings; for contents see R. Mitjana (1911)

Musicae super cantum gregorianum pars secunda: festa proprium et commune sanctorum, 5vv, bc (Ravensburg, 1626); 50 introits; for contents see Mitjana
Hymni quibus totius anni decursu ... 4vv ... accomodi, quibus et alii hymni pro festis solemnioribus ... accesserunt, 4–8vv, 2 cornetts/vn, bc (Innsbruck, 1628); 4-part hymns of part i, ed. in DTÖ, v, Jg. iii/1 (Vienna, 1896/R)
Moduli symphoniaci in augustissima Christi nati celebritate et ceteris deinceps natalibus et Purificatione virginis feriis, 5–10vv, bc (Innsbruck, 1629); 5 compositions by other composers, 9 by Stadlmayr
Antiphonae vespertinae ... cum tribus litaniis Lauretanis duabus salutationibus angelicis, 2–8vv, bc (org) (Innsbruck, 1636)
Odae sacrae Jesu Christo ... 5vv et totidem instrumentis si placet (2 vn, 3 va, bc) (Innsbruck, 1638[2]); 4 compositions by A. Reiner, 13 by Stadlmayr
Salmi, 2, 3vv, 2 vn/cornetts (Innsbruck, 1640)
Psalmi vespertini omnes cum 2 Magnificat concertationibus musicis per 6vv, bc (Innsbruck, 1640)
Psalmi integri a 4vv concertantibus, 4 aliis accessoriis ad lib ... 2 cornetts/vn, bc (Innsbruck, 1641)
Apparatus musicus sacrarum cantionum ... 6–24 vocibus et instrumentis (Innsbruck, 1645); 44 vocal and 6 inst compositions
Psalmus quinquagesimus Davidis ... 4–6, 8vv cum secundo choro et instrumentis senis si placet (Innsbruck, 1646) [3 Miserere settings for 2 solo vv and insts]

WORKS IN ANTHOLOGIES

Maria klar, du bist fürwahr, 4vv, in 1604[7]
Bonitatem fecisti, 2vv, bc, in 1622[2]
Cantate Domino, 2vv, bc, in 1623[2]
Canzon [without text], 3vv, bc, in 1624[1]
Ant, 4vv, bc, in 1628[5]
3 Salve regina settings: 2vv, bc; 9vv, bc; 12vv, bc; in 1629[1]
Dixit Dominus, rep. from Salmi (1640), in 1659[3]

BIBLIOGRAPHY

SennMT
J. Peregrinus [J.P. Hupfauf]: Johann Stadlmayr (Salzburg, 1885)
R. Mitjana y Gordón: Catalogue critique et descriptif des imprimés de musique des XVIe et XVIIe siècles conservés à la Bibliothèque de l'Université royale d'Upsala, i (Uppsala, 1911)
K.F. Gress: Die Motetten Johann Stadlmayrs im Lichte der Entwicklung der Motette im beginnenden siebzehnten Jahrhundert (diss., U. of Vienna, 1931)
W. Senn: Aus dem Kulturleben einer süddeutschen Kleinstadt: Musik, Schule und Theater der Stadt Hall in Tirol (Innsbruck, 1938)
H.H. Junkermann: The Magnificats of Johann Stadlmayr (diss., Ohio State U., 1966)
T. Schmitt: Kompositionen des Ordinarium Missae im süddeutschen konzertierenden Stil des 17. Jahrhunderts (diss., U. of Saarbrücken, 1981)
T. Schmitt: 'Die Parodiemesse Fuggi pur se sai von Johann Stadlmayr und ihr Modell, eine gleichnamige Aria von Giovanni Gabrieli', KJb, lxvii (1985), 35–43
T. Jasiński: 'Contrapunctus fractus w twórczości wokalnej kompozytorów niemieckich pierwszej połowy XVII wieku' [Contrapunctus fractus in the vocal music of German composers writing in the first half of the seventeenth century], Muzyka, xxxiii/4 (1988), 49–66
I. Korbačková: 'Repertoár evanjelického kostola v Bratislave' [The Repertory of a Lutheran church in Bratislava], Hudobné tradície Bratislavy a ich tvorcovia, [Music traditions of Bratislava and their creators], ed. K. Horváthová (Bratislava, 1989), 58–70

HILDE H. JUNKERMANN/THEO SCHMITT

Stadtfeld, (Christian Josef Anton Franz) Alexander (b Wiesbaden, 28 April 1826; d Brussels, 4 Nov 1853). Belgian composer of German birth. The son of a military bandmaster, as a child prodigy he attracted the attention of the Belgian King Leopold I, who made it possible for him to attend the Brussels Conservatory. From 1839 to 1849 he studied there under the personal supervision of the director, Fétis. As winner of the Prix de Rome in 1849 he went to Paris, where several of his works were successfully performed. His numerous male choruses and songs, some of them published, are completely in accord with contemporary taste. His only grand opera Hamlet (1851–3; libretto by Jules Guillaume), which was performed posthumously in Weimar (1882), was strongly influenced by Meyerbeer. His first three symphonies and his two concert overtures show a talent for instrumentation as well as a serious attempt to come to grips with Beethoven's techniques of thematic development. In his fourth symphony, the Symphonie triomphale (1852), he succeeded in an independent synthesis of these achievements with elements of French Revolutionary music, but his early death from tuberculosis prevented the full development of his individuality. His works, almost all in manuscript, are in the library of the Brussels Conservatory.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FétisB
A. Wotquenne, ed.: Catalogue de la bibliothèque du Conservatoire royal de musique de Bruxelles, iii (Brussels, 1908), 450ff
M. Weber: Alexander Stadtfeld: Leben und Werk (Bonn, 1969)
M. Marx-Weber: 'Stadtfeld, Benedict', Musik und Musiker am Mittelrhein, i, ed. H. Unverricht (Mainz, 1974), 165–6

MAGDA MARX-WEBER

Stadtpfeifer (Ger.: 'town piper'). A professional musician employed by civic authorities. The term has been used in German-speaking countries since the late 14th century (der statt pfiffer, 1378, Berne) along with Ratsmusicus (Ratsmusikant), Stadtmusicus (Stadtmusikant), Instrumentist, Kunstpfeifer and Zinkenist and is equivalent to the English 'town wait'. Earlier titles include speleman dere stat (1227, 1265, Brunswick), figellatori consulum (1335, Lüneburg), des Rades Trometer (1339, Bremen), Stadtspielman or Stad spellude (before 1401, Lüneburg). From the 17th century the Prinzipal of a town band was sometimes also given the title Director der instrumentalen Musik or Stadtmusikdirektor. While in smaller communities the position was usually held by a master together with his apprentices and journeymen, the larger cities had up to ten civic musicians of equal rank.

1. Employment and duties. 2. Training and skills.

1. EMPLOYMENT AND DUTIES. The earliest evidence of musicians being taken into civic employment in Germany dates from the 14th century: 1335, Lüneburg, and 1348, Frankfurt (outside Germany there is slightly earlier evidence: tubatores del comune, 1291, Florence; 1297, Ypres). The musicians were usually minstrels and their appointment was of a temporary nature; service was for a specific occasion, or at least was paid by the event. Proper written appointments began in the 15th century and were an essential element in the establishing of town musicians. In these the contractual duties as well as the rights of the musicians were laid down, and the mayor and council of the town guaranteed the musician a yearly or half-yearly fixed salary (salarium fixum). The list of duties of the Stadtpfeiferei included performance at official celebrations, festival parades, royal visits, civic weddings or baptisms, participation in church services and church and school festivities, as well as the education of musical apprentices. In return the musicians were guaranteed the exclusive privilege of providing music within the city boundaries. Rural districts were frequently included in their domain, hence the title Stadt- und Landmusicus. They were often entitled to expenses for instruments, music or clothes, collections at Martinmas and the New Year, donations towards fuel and grain, and privileges such as exemption from taxes or watch duty. When players were disabled, substitutes were often engaged.

Nuremberg Stadtpfeiferei announcing the New Year: drawing by an unknown artist, pen and ink with colour wash, 16th century (D-Bsb germ.fol.442, f.91v–92r); from a collection of drawings depicting the social life of Nuremberg

The town musician's social status depended mainly on the size of his income. On a fixed salary he generally earned less than the cantors and organists of an area's principal churches. Details of musicians' resources and revenue can be gathered from personal account books. Both social position and range of musical work depended largely on the size and nature of the city (whether it was the seat of a bishopric, a court residence, a university or garrison town, a free imperial city, municipal republic or small town) and the amount of ceremony it had to provide. In smaller places the Stadtpfeifer would also have to assume the burden of tower or watch duty, and often combined his official post with a job as organist, schoolteacher, instrument maker or even a totally non-musical post. His counterparts in larger cities, on the other hand, were able to confine themselves to more artistic tasks commensurate with their position as musicians: directing or participating in concerts, musical evenings, feast day masses etc. and, later, in operas. Hanseatic cities such as Hamburg, Lübeck, Rostock and Danzig also had, besides their privileged town musicians, Chor- und Köstenbrüder or Rollmusikanten – musicians who were organized according to the statutes of the various guilds and entrusted with providing music for the middle and lower classes. The eight city musicians (Ratsmusikanten) were appointed exclusively to play for patrician families and members of the upper class. As a rule the move from city to court musician meant a rise in social position.

The Stadtpfeifer waged a constant battle to retain his exclusive right to provide music. In order to preserve his professional privileges and to prevent competition from untrained musicians (Pfuscher, Böhnhasen), town musicians from northern and central Germany formed in 1653 a provincial association of mutual interest whose statutes were ratified by Emperor Ferdinand III. But when free exercise of trade followed in the wake of the French Revolution, and with it the introduction of free competition, the legal basis for the town musicians' privileges disappeared, and with it many of the traditional town bands. Other factors contributed, notably the technical demands made on instrumentalists in music after 1790 which led to the replacement of the old Stadtpfeifer – the all-round musician – by a new type, the specialist, whose education was provided by the newly established conservatories of music.

2. Training and skills. In many places, anyone wishing to begin study under a Stadtpfeifer was required to present proof of 'honourable and lawful birth'. After a five- or six-year period of study in which he had to master a large number of wind and string instruments he was ceremoniously released and became a journeyman. As a trained 'Musikant' he then chose either to continue working for his master or to undertake several years of travel. A proficient journeyman could obtain a position as Stadtpfeifer (Prinzipal), when one fell vacant, by means of an audition and selection by the local council. As in other trades, it was possible to become a Stadtpfeifer by marriage and to pass on the post within a family. This was how the Bach family held posts for generations as Thuringian town musicians.

The Stadtpfeifer, as a rule, was a practising musician. From the mid-18th century he mastered and taught the newly fashionable piano and guitar, as well as wind and string instruments. A number of exceptional town musicians became famous as instrumental virtuosos: Nathanael Schnittelbach (1633–67) and Thomas Baltzar (*c*1630–63) as violinists in Lübeck, and the Leipzig trumpeter Gottfried Reiche (1667–1734), whom J.S. Bach valued highly and who was also prominent as a composer of four-part TURMMUSIK ('tower music'). To match the wide variety of tasks assigned him, the Stadtpfeifer had a wide repertory. It embraced signal pieces, chorales, dance movements, conversational and representational music, and from the 18th century onwards included sinfonias and concertos as well. Among the better-known composers who developed through training as town musicians or were active as Stadtpfeifers or directors of Stadtmusik the following are noteworthy: Susato (Antwerp, 1531–49), Brade (Hamburg, 1608–10, 1613–15), Hassler (Augsburg, 1600; Nuremberg, 1601–4), Schop (Hamburg, 1621–67), S.T. Staden (Nuremberg, 1623–55), Pezel (Leipzig, from 1664; Bautzen, 1680–94), Zachow (Eilenburg, from 1676), Telemann (Frankfurt, 1712–21; Hamburg, 1721–67), Quantz (Radeberg and Pirna, 1714; Dresden, 1716), Zelter (Berlin, from 1774) and Lumbye (Copenhagen, from 1829).

See GUILDS, MINSTREL and WAIT.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

MGG1 ('Zunftwesen'; H.W. Schwab)
O. Nielsen: 'Om stadsmusikanter i København under Frederik d. IV. 1699–1730', Københavns historie og beskrivelse, vi (1892), 243
H. Waltz: Die Lage der Orchestermusiker in Deutschland mit besonderer Berücksichtigung der Musikgeschäfte ('Stadtpfeifereien') (Karlsruhe, 1906)
R. Wustmann: 'Die sächsischen Musikantenartikel von 1653', Neues Archiv für sächsische Geschichte und Altertumskunde, xxix (1908), 104
K. Nef: 'Die Stadtpfeiferein und die Instrumentalmusiker in Basel (1385–1814)', SIMG, x (1908–9), 395–8
F. Wellmann: 'Die Bremer Stadtmusikanten: ein Beitrag zur bremischen Musikgeschichte (aus den Akten des Staatsarchivs)', Jb der bremischen Sammlungen, iv (1911), 79–103
F. Brönnimann: Der Zinkenist und Musikdirektor Johann Ulrich Sultzberger und die Pflege der Musik in Bern in der zweiten Hälfte des XVII. Jahrhunderts (Zofingen, 1920)
A. Schering: 'Die Leipziger Ratsmusik von 1650 bis 1775', AMw, iii (1921), 17–53
O. Spreckelsen: Die Stader Ratsmusikanten (Stade, 1924)
F. Rollberg: 'Johann Ambrosius Bach, Stadtpfeifer zu Eisenach von 1671–1695', BJb 1927, 133–52
H. Rauschning: Geschichte der Musik und Musikpflege in Danzig (Danzig, 1931)
H. Techritz: Sächsische Stadtpfeifer: zur Geschichte des Stadtmusikwesens im ehemaligen Königreich Sachsen (Dresden, 1932)
L. Krüger: Die hamburgische Musikorganisation im XVII. Jahrhundert (Strasbourg, 1933, 2/1981)
A. Werner: Vier Jahrhunderte im Dienste der Kirchenmusik: Geschichte des Amtes und Standes der evangelischen Kantoren, Organisten und Stadtpfeifer seit der Reformation (Leipzig, 1933)
F. Ernst: 'Die Spielleute im Dienste der Stadt Basel im ausgehenden Mittelalter (bis 1550)', Basler Zeitschrift für Geschichte und Altertumskunde, xliv (1945), 80–236
H. Federhofer: 'Die Grazer Stadtmusikanten und die privilegierte Stadtmusikantenkompagnie', Zeitschrift des Historischen Vereines für Steiermark, xlii (1951), 91–118
L.G. Langwill: 'The Waits: a Short Historical Study', HMYB, vii (1952), 170–83
G. Hempel: 'Das Ende der Leipziger Ratsmusik im 19. Jahrhundert', AMw, xv (1958), 187–97
T. Volek: 'Pražské muzikantské cechy, městští hudebníci a trubači v druhé polovině 18. století' [Prague musicians' guilds, town musicians and trumpeters in the 2nd half of the 18th century], MMC, no.6 (1958), 75–93
H.P. Detlefsen: Musikgeschichte der Stadt Flensburg bis zum Jahre 1850 (Kassel, 1961)
E.A. Bowles: 'Tower Musicians in the Middle Ages', Brass Quarterly, v (1961–2), 91–103
A. Downs: 'The Tower Music of a Seventeenth Century Stadtpfeifer: Johann Pezel's Hora Decima and Fünffstimmigte blasende Music', Brass Quarterly, vii (1963–4), 3–33
H. Federhofer and G.M. Schmeiser: 'Grazer Stadtmusikanten als Komponisten vorklassischer Klavierkonzerte', Historisches Jb der Stadt Graz, iv (1971), 73–90
H.W. Schwab: 'Zur sozialen Stellung des Stadtmusikanten', Der Sozialstatus des Berufsmusikers vom 17. bis 19. Jahrhundert, ed. W. Salmen (Kassel, 1971), 9–25
H.W. Schwab, ed.: Das Einnahmebuch des Schleswiger Stadtmusikanten Friedrich Adolph Berwald (Kassel, 1972)
H.W. Schwab: 'Die Institutionen der Lübecker Stadtmusik und die Einführung der Musikantenordnung von 1815', Zeitschrift des Vereins für lübeckische Geschichte und Altertumskunde, lii (1972), 62–72
H.W. Schwab: Die Anfange des weltlichen Berufsmusikertums in der mittelalterlichen Stadt (Kassel, 1982)
W. Greve: Braunschweiger Stadtmusikanten: Geschichte eines Berufsstandes, 1227–1828 (Brunswick, 1991)
G. Andersson: 'Från Dietrich Buxtehude till Sone Hansson Strängberg: organister, stadsmusikanter och häradsspelmän i Helsingborg och luggude härad', Kring Kärnan: Helsingborgs museums årsbok, xxiii (1994), 35–62
J.H. Koudal: For borgere og bønder: Stadsmusikantvæsenet i Danmark c1660–1800 (Copenhagen, 1999)

HEINRICH W. SCHWAB

Staehelin, Martin (b Basle, 25 Sept 1937). Swiss musicologist. He trained in Basle as a secondary school instructor in music and classics, at the same time taking a flute teacher's certificate under Joseph Bopp (1962). He first studied Latin and Greek philology then later musicology with Schrade and Schmitz (1963–7) and took the doctorate at Basle University in 1967 with a dissertation on the masses of Isaac. With a scholarship from the Schweizerischer Nationalfonds (1968–71), he completed the Habilitation, also on Isaac's masses, under Kurt von Fischer at the University of Zürich in 1971. He became director of the Schweizerisches Volksliederarchiv in 1963 and has served on the board of directors of the Schweizerische Musikforschende Gesellschaft (president of the Basle chapter 1971–3). From 1972 to 1977 he represented Switzerland on the IMS committee; he won the Edward J. Dent medal for musicology in 1975 and in 1976 moved to Bonn and became director of the Beethoven-Archiv and the Beethoven-Haus. In 1983 he was appointed chair of the musicology department at Göttingen University.

Staehelin's research centres on the music of Josquin's period and is distinguished (e.g. in his exemplary edition of Isaac's masses) by its precision and by his knowledge and analysis of sources. His later work includes articles on Mozart, Beethoven, a monograph on Nägeli and writings on the history of musicology.

WRITINGS

'Zum Egenolff-Diskantband der Bibliothèque Nationale in Paris', AMw, xxiii (1966), 93–109
'Quellenkundliche Beiträge zum Werk von Johannes Ghiselin-Verbonnet', AMw, xxiv (1967), 120–32
Quellenstudien zu Heinrich Isaac und seinem Messen-Oeuvre (diss., U. of Basle, 1967; Berne, 1977 as vol.i of Die Messen Heinrich Isaacs)
'Pierre de la Rue in Italien', AMw, xxvii (1970), 128–37
Der Grüne Codex der Viadrina: eine wenig beachtete Quelle zur Musik des späten 15. und frühen 16. Jahrhunderts in Deutschland (Mainz, 1971)
Studien zu Werk- und Satztechnik in den Messenkompositionen von Heinrich Isaac (Habilitationsschrift, U. of Zürich, 1971; Berne, 1977 as vol.iii of Die Messen Heinrich Isaacs)
'Zur Echtheitsproblematik der Mozartschen Bläserkonzertante', MJb 1971–2, 56–62
'Eine Florentiner Musik-Handschrift aus der Zeit um 1500 (Quellenkundliche Bemerkungen zur Frotfold-Sammlung Ms. Egerton 3051 des British Museum und zum "Wolfheim-Manuskript" der Library of Congress', Schweizer Beiträge zur Musikwissenschaft, i (1972), 55–81
'Möglichkeiten und praktische Anwendung der Verfasserbestimmung an anonym überlieferten Kompositionen der Josquin-Zeit', TVNM, xxiii/2 (1973), 79–91
'Zum Phänomen der Tradition in der Musikgeschichte des 15. und 16. Jahrhunderts', Studien zur Tradition in der Musik: Kurt von Fischer zum 60. Geburtstag, ed. H.H. Eggebrecht and M. Lütolf (Munich, 1973), 85–100
'Beschreibungen und Beispiele musikalischer Formen in einem unbeachteten Traktat des frühen 15. Jahrhunderts', AMw, xxxi (1974), 237–42
'Obrechtiana', TVNM, xxv/1 (1975), 1–37
'Aus "Lukas Wagenrieders" Werkstatt: ein unbekanntes Lieder-Manuskript des frühen 16. Jahrhunderts in Zürich', Formen und Probleme der Überlieferung mehrstimmiger Musik im Zeitalter Josquins Desprez: Wolfenbüttel 1976, 71–94
'Zur Basler Erstaufführung der Bachschen Johannespassion im Jahre 1861: Freidrich Riggenbach-Stehlin, Moritz Hauptmann and Andreas Heusler (II.) in unbekannten Dokumenten', Basler Zeitschrift für Geschichte und Altertumskunde, lxxvi (1976), 77–124
Die Messen Heinrich Isaacs (Berne, 1977) [3 vols.]
'Giuseppe Tartini über seine künstlerische Entwicklung: ein unbekanntes Selbstzeugnis', AMw, xxxv (1978), 251–74
'Neue Quellen zur mehrstimmigen Musik des 15. und 16. Jahrhunderts in der Schweiz', Schweizer Beiträge zur Musikwissenschaft, iii (1978), 57–83
'Unbekannte oder wenig beachtete Schriftstücke Beethovens' [with others], 'Die Beethoven-Materialien im Nachlass von Ludwig Nohl', BeJb 1978–81, 21–85, 201–19
'Another Approach to Beethoven's Last String Quartet Oeuvre: the Last String Quintet of 1826/27', The String Quartets of Haydn, Mozart and Beethoven: Cambridge, MA, 1979, 302–23
'Aus der Welt der frühen Beethoven-"Forschung": Aloys Fuchs in Briefen an Anton Schindler', Musik, Edition, Interpretation: Gedenkschrift Günter Henle, ed. M. Bente (Munich, 1980), 427–46
'Bemerkungen zum Verhältnis von Werkcharakter und Filiation in der Musik der Renaissance', Musik und Text in der Mehrstimmigkeit des 14. und 15. Jahrhunderts: Wolfenbüttel 1980, 199–215
'"Ah fuggi il traditor ...": Bemerkungen zur zweiten Donna-Elvira-Arie in Mozarts Don Giovanni', Festschrift Heinz Becker, ed. J. Schläder and R. Quandt (Laaber, 1982), 67–86
'Bemerkungen zum sogenannten Alpsegen: Wesen und historische Tiefe', Schweizerisches Archiv für Volkskunde, lxxviii (1982), 1–35
Hans Georg Nägeli und Ludwig van Beethoven: der Zürcher Musiker, Musikverleger und Musikschriftsteller in seinen Beziehungen zu den grossen Komponisten (Zürich, 1982)
ed. H.G. Nägeli: Vorlesungen über Musik, mit Berücksichtigung der Dilettanten (Darmstadt, 1983)
'Ein unbekannter Brief Joseph Haydns', Haydn-Studien, v/2 (1983), 110–17 with S. Brandenburg: 'Der "erste Fassung" von Beethovens Righini-Variationen', Festschrift Albi Rosenthal, ed. R. Elvers (Tutzing, 1984), 43–66
'A Veiled Judgement on Beethoven by Albrechtsberger?', Beethoven Essays: Studies in Honor of Elliot Forbes, ed. L. Lockwood and P. Benjamin (Cambridge, MA, 1984), 46–52
'Von den Wesendonck-Liedern zum Tristan', Zu Richard Wagner: acht Bonner Beiträge in Jubiläumsjahr 1983, ed. H. Loos and G. Massenkeil (Bonn, 1984), 45–73
ed., with S. Brandenburg: Ludwig van Beethoven: der Briefwechsel mit dem Verlag Schott (Munich, 1985)
'Trienter Codices und Humanismus', I codici musicali trentini: Trent 1985, 158–69
'Bemerkungen zu den Musikfragmenten im Wiener Schotten-Codex 355', AcM, lviii (1986), 117–29
'"Dank sei Dir, Herr": zur Erklärung einer Händel-Fälschung des frühen zwanzigsten Jahrhunderts', Göttinger Händel-Beiträge, ii (1986), 194–206
'Luther über Josquin', Festschrift Martin Ruhnke zum 65. Geburtstag (Neuhausen-Stuttgart, 1986), 326–38
'Das Augsburger Fragment: eine wenig beachtete süddeutsche Quelle zur mehrstimmigen Musik des späten 15. und des frühen 16. Jahrhunderts', Augsburger Jb für Musikwissenschaft 1987, 7–63
'Bemerkungen zum verbrannten Manuskript Strasburg M. 222 C. 22', Mf, xlii (1989), 2–20
'Heinrich Isaac und die Frühgeschichte des Liedes "Innsbruck, ich muss dich lassen"', Liedstudien: Wolfgang Osthoff zum 60. Geburtstag, ed. M. Just and R. Wiesend (Tutzing, 1989), 107–19
'Anton Friedrich Justus Thibaut und die Musikgeschichte', Heidelberger Jahrbücher, xxxiv (1990), 37–52
'Siebzig Jahre Göttinger Händel-Festspiele: zu den Anfängen der Göttinger Händel-Renaissance', Göttinger Händel-Beiträge, iv (1991), 23–40 with E. Neubauer: 'Türkische Derwischmusik bei Heinrich Isaac', Von Isaac bis Bach: Festschrift Martin Just, ed. F. Heidlberger, W. Osthoff and R. Wiesend (Kassel, 1991), 27–39
'Joseph Martin Kraus in Göttingen', Göttinger Jb 1992, 199–230
'The Constitution of the Fifteenth-Century German Tenor Lied: Drafting the History of a Musical Genre', Music in the German Renaissance: Sources, Styles, and Contexts, ed. J. Kmetz (Cambridge, 1994), 174–81
'Sixt Dietrich: ein deutscher Musiker der Reformationszeit', Kirche und Gesellschaft im Heiligen Römischen Reich des 15. und 16. Jahrhunderts, ed. H. Boockman (Göttingen, 1994), 165–85
'Ein wiedergefundene Messen-Handschrift des frühen 16. Jahrhunderts', Studien zur Musikgeschichte: eine Festschrift für Ludwig Finscher, ed. A. Laubenthal and K. Kusan-Windweh (Kassel, 1995), 133–44

EDITIONS

Heinrich Isaac: Messen, Musikalische Denkmäler, vii–viii (Mainz, 1970–73) [rev. edn of Birtner's inc. MS edn]
J. Obrecht: Missa Cela sans plus, Missa Gracuuly et biaulx Collected Works, xiii (Utrecht, 1994)
Die mittelalterliche Musik-Handschrift W1: vollständige Reproduktion des "Notre Dame"-Manuskripts der Herzog August Bibliothek Wolfenbüttel Cod. Guelf. 628 Helmst (Wiesbaden, 1995)

JÜRG STENZL

Staempfli, Edward (b Berne, 1 Feb 1908). Swiss composer. After studying medicine in Berne for two years he changed his focus to music. He studied in Cologne under Jarnach and Maler (1929–30) and was a pupil of Dukas in Paris for a year. There he was soon attached to the circle of Conrad Beck, Marcel Mihalovici, Alexander Tcherepnin and Tibor Harsányi. In 1935 he attended Hermann Scherchen's conducting course in Brussels, where he was awarded the Le Boeuf Prize for the Musique pour 11 instruments. He was so deeply impressed by hearing the first performance of Berg's Violin Concerto (Barcelona, 1936) that he became preoccupied with the 12-note technique until, in 1949, he was satisfied that it was the right method for him. The outbreak of World War II drove him from Paris back to Switzerland, where he lived in Basle and from 1944, in Lugano. In 1951 he moved to Heidelberg and in 1954 to Berlin. He made an extended visit to the USA in 1962, lecturing on contemporary Swiss music and having works performed. The influence of his various places of residence is evident in his music. French Impressionism and the radical polyphony of early Hindemith first led him to produce a series of chiefly concertante scores containing lyrical elements. His time in Switzerland coincided with a transitional period of approximately ten years, at the end of which he decided to use 12-note technique and later extended serial procedures. His writing has continued to be strict and fully determined, though also colourful; his orchestrations create a luminescence reminiscent of Berg. He has often appeared as a conductor or pianist, particularly in his own works.

WORKS
(selective list)

STAGE

Le pendu (ballet), 1935; Choreographisches Divertimento (ballet), 1942; Die Prinzessin und der Schweinehirt (ballet, Kreis, after H.C. Andersen), 1942; Ein Traumspiel (op, A. Strindberg), 1943; Medea (op, F. Grillparzer), 1954; Spannungen (ballet), 1961; Der Zöllner Matthäus (1, after M.-L. Kaschnitz), 1974; Caligula (op, A. Camus), 1981–2

VOCAL

Orats and cants.: Filles de sion (P.J. Jouve), S, A, Bar, chorus, orch, 1934; 6 Sonette (E. Barrett-Browning), S, orch, 1942; Liberté (P. Eluard), solo vv, chorus, wind, timp, pf, 1944; 6 Liebesgedichte (R. Huch), A, orch, 1945; Der Spiegel der Welt (orat, Bible: Ecclesiastes, Baroque texts), solo vv, chorus, orch, 1950; Divertimento (H. Arp, W. Kandinsky, P. Klee), S, 8 insts, 1958; Wenn der Tag leer wird (N. Sachs), solo vv, chorus, orch, 1967; Zion's Klage und Tröstung (orat), spkr, S, A, Bar, chorus, orch, 1970; L'avventura d'un povero cristiano (orat, I. Silone), male spkr, female spkr, S, A, T, B, 2 choruses, orch, 1972

Other vocal works: La musique (C.P. Baudelaire), A, str qnt, hp, 1946; 5 poèmes (P. Patocchi), A, hp, cel, pf, 1948; Les 7 poèmes d'amour en guerre, chorus, 1948; 3 Lieder, Mez, orch, 1963; Traumschalmei (A. Valangin), S, pf, 1969; Solo la muerte (P. Neruda), Bar, chorus, 7 insts, 1971; Gedanken über der Zeit (P. Fleming), S, fl, ob, hp, perc, pf, 1972; Jenseits (Kaschnitz), S, ob, cl, va, vc, hp, pf, 1973; 3 poèmes (G. Apollinaire), S, hp, 1990; Requiem für einen Knaben, spkr, ens, 1992; many other songs

INSTRUMENTAL

Orch: Konzertante Syms. nos.1–4, 1931–4; Sym. no.1, 1938; Conc., 2 pf, orch, 1940; Concertino, cl, str, 1941; Sym. no.2, 1942; Concertino, pf, chbr orch, 1945; Praeludium und Variationen über ein Tessiner Volkslied, pf, orch, 1945; Sym. no.3, 1945; Mouvements concertantes, 1947; Epitaphe pour Paul Eluard, 1954; Fantasie, vn, str, 1955; Fl Conc., 1957; Strophen, 1958; Orch Werk, 1960; 5 Nachtstücke, 1961; Musik für 16 Str, 1967; Tripartita, 3 pf, 23 wind, 1969; Sätze und Gegensätze, vib, pf, perc, str, 1972; Sym. no.4, 1980; Conc., hpd, 7 inst, 1981; Conc., hn, tpt, trbn, orch, 1984; 4 Stücke, 1984; Musik, va, 11 wind, 1985; Sym. no.5, 1985; Sym. no.6, 1988; Vc Conc., 1991; Conc., a sax, orch, 1993; Dialoge, ob, hp, str, 1993; 5 pf concs.; 4 vn concs.

Chbr: Qt, fl, str trio, 1932; Trio, fl, vn, pf, 1935; 4 Stücke, brass, 1946; 5 Stücke, ww, 1946; Konzertante Fantasie, 2 tpt, 2 pf, timp, 1947; 5 Stücke, fl, pf, 1954; Ornamente, 2 fl, cel, perc, 1960; Duo, cl, pf, 1970; Duo, fl, gui, 1981; Nocturnes, sax, hp, 1983; Trio, tpt, bn, pf, 1983; Duo, bn, pf, 1984; Duo, vn, b cl, 1984; Duo, a fl, vc, 1987; Qnt, fl, pf qt, 1988; Duo, va, tuba, 1990; Why Not, sax, tpt, vib, pf, 1990; Qnt, str qt, db, 1992; 7 str qts; 2 pf trios; 2 str trios; 2 wind qnts; 2 wind trios

Pf: 6 Stücke, 1932; 5 charakteristische Stücke, pf 4 hands, 1938; 10 kleine Klavierstücke, 1944; 7 Klavierstücke, 1954; 3 Sätze, 1959; 6 Klangstudien, 1992

Principal publishers: Bote & Bock, Breitkopf & Härtel, Gerig, Henn

BIBLIOGRAPHY

E. Staempfli: 'Edward Staempfli', Musik der Zeit no.10 (1955), 42–3

H.M. Stuckenschmidt: 'Edward Staempfli sechzig', SMz, cviii (1968), 117–18

W. Labhart: 'Ein origineller, unbeugsamer Aussenseiter', Der Landbote [Winterthur] (30 Jan 1988)

FRITZ MUGGLER/CHRIS WALTON

Staes, Ferdinand(-Philippe-Joseph) (b Brussels, bap. 16 Dec 1748; d Brussels, 23 March 1809). Flemish harpsichordist, organist and composer. The son of Guillaume Staes, an organist at the Brussels royal chapel from 1758, he studied with his father and later with Ignaz Vitzthumb. As a harpsichordist he was accompanist at the Théâtre de la Monnaie, Brussels, by 1767 and the following year was appointed assistant to his father (second court organist at that time); he also took part in concerts de table at court and performed successfully at the concerts of the academy and Concert Bourgeois in 1771. In January 1772 he gained the reversion for his father's post of principal court organist but (despite Fétis and later sources) he never filled this appointment, for his father was still active when the royal chapel was dissolved in 1794. By 1772 Staes was an organist at the Madeleine church, where Burney heard him and wrote that 'the organ was played in a masterly manner, by M. Straze [sic], who is esteemed the best performer upon keyed instruments in Brussels'. Staes was a member of the masonic lodge 'L'heureuse rencontre à l'Orient', Brussels, by 1786, but does not seem to have written masonic music. His compositions include several keyboard works (mainly sonatas for the harpsichord or piano) with instrumental accompaniment.

WORKS

Kbd, with insts: 5 sets of 3 sonatas, hpd/pf, vn, vc, opp.1–5 (Brussels, n.d.); Concerto, solo hpd/pf, orch, op.6 (Brussels, n.d.); Idées de campagne, hpd/pf, vn, vc, 2 hn (Brussels, n.d.)

Kbd solo: works in contemporary anthologies; pf transcrs. of contemporary works by other composers

Other inst: Nouvelle marche bruxelloise, military band (Brussels, 1790)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

BNB (P. Bergmans); BurneyGN; Choron-FayolleD; FétisB; VanderStraetenMPB, iv; VannesD

E.G.J. Gregoir: Galerie biographique des artistes musiciens belges du XVIIIe et du XIXe siècle (Brussels, 1862/R)

S. Clercx: Henri-Jacques de Croes (Brussels, 1940), ii

PAUL RASPÉ

Staff [stave] (Fr. portée; Ger. Liniensystem, System; It. sistema, rigo). In Western notation a set of lines on, between, above and below which notes of music are written. A five-line staff has been the most widely used type since north French manuscripts of the early 13th century containing polyphony. A four-line staff has been used for plainchant since the late 11th century. Staves are also used in TABLATURE: in music for string and wind instruments they represent the strings or holes of the instrument, and have digits denoting which fingers are to touch the strings or holes; in keyboard tablature the lines denote specific pitches. Except in tablature for string and wind instruments, the staff carries low notes on its lowest line, high notes on its highest, and may be supplemented above and below by leger lines. Notes are prefaced by a clef indicating the pitch of the line on which it is placed (and hence of the other lines of the staff). Two or more staves, joined by a brace, form a system.

1. The staff in early theoretical writing. 2. Early plainchant notation and Guido of Arezzo. 3. Polyphonic music.

1. THE STAFF IN EARLY THEORETICAL WRITING. The earliest surviving examples of a staff date from the end of the 9th century. In Musica enchiriadis (*c*860 according to Handschin and Dronke, *c*900 according to Smits van Waesberghe; see MUSICA ENCHIRIADIS, SCOLICA ENCHIRIADIS, §2) a set of lines called chordae ('strings' – an interesting link with tablature) are used, one for each pitch, a 2nd apart. To the left of each line appears a dasian letter giving its pitch. The letter 'T' or 'S' to the left of each space denotes the interval of a tone or semitone between each chorda. Syllables of a chant text are set on the lines, indicating the pitch at which they are to be sung. The manuscript F-VAL 337, shown in fig.1, probably the earliest surviving copy (not later than 900), uses an eight-line staff.

Hucbald's De harmonica institutione (*c*900) contains an example of a six-line staff, bearing syllables of chant text in the same way as Musica enchiriadis, with the spaces designated tone or semitone but without dasian letters. Hucbald specifically equated the lines with the strings of the cithara: 'Porro exemplum semitonii advertere potes in cithara sex chordarum, inter tertiam et quartam chordam' (Gerbert, in GerbertS, i, 109, omitted the lowest line; B-Br 10078–95, f.87*r*, facs. in Smits van Waesberghe, 1969, p.107, shows that the text syllables should touch the lines, although the modern reproductions that appear to equate a syllable with an interval do have predecessors in medieval manuscripts: see Apel, p.205). The link with early hexachord theory is unclear.

Such diagrammatic staves were also used in the organum instruction of Musica enchiriadis, Scolica enchiriadis and their successors throughout the Middle Ages, sometimes necessitating staves of 18 lines, as many as there were dasian letters. But this system of notation was a teaching aid and not used in functional liturgical manuscripts.

2. EARLY PLAINCHANT NOTATION AND GUIDO OF AREZZO. All neumatic notations contained an element of the distinction between high and low notes in the very shape of their neumes. By the turn of the millennium Beneventan and Aquitanian notations were diastematic, that is, individual neumes were placed higher or lower on the page relative to one another, though not clearly enough for completely certain modern transcription. By the mid-11th century Aquitanian notation regularly used a single dry-point (scratched) line, whose pitch varied according to the mode of the piece (a table is given in Stäblein, p.41). The author of the Quaestiones in musica suggested a mode-linked technique of using a single coloured line, with different colours for different modes; but he wrote half a century after and in knowledge of Guido of Arezzo's teaching.

Guido of Arezzo, in Aliae regulae (*c*1030), recommended that lines should be drawn for every other pitch, a 3rd apart, so that notes of a scale would be set alternately on a line or in a space. He further recommended that one or more of the lines be coloured to denote its pitch (he preferred a red F line and a yellow C line), or that a letter be set in front of at least one of the lines to denote its pitch (see CLEF, fig.1*b*). His principles, in one variant or another, were gradually adopted all over Europe, at different times in different places. Central Italy took up the coloured-line scheme quickly (Smits van Waesberghe, 1951, cites 17 manuscripts written by *c*1100). Coloured lines were slightly less common elsewhere, but use of the Guidonian staff with a clef spread rapidly through advanced European centres of music, especially those of the Low Countries. The Beneventan and west Aquitanian

1. Lines (called 'chordae') forming a staff in the treatise 'Musica enchiriadis', 9th century (F-VAL 337, f.45r); dasian letters indicate the pitch of each line, the letters 'T' and 'S' the intervals between the lines areas did not adopt it until nearer 1200. German Switzerland was particularly conservative; although isolated earlier manuscripts use it (e.g. CH-E 366, 12th century, with four dry-point lines, red F line, F and C clefs; facs. in Stäblein, p.187), the staff was not generally used there until the 15th century. Smits van Waesberghe (1951) showed that references to lines in use at Corbie Abbey in the 10th century (F-AM 524; M. Gerbert: De cantu et musica sacra, St Blasien, 1774, ii, 61) and in the prologue to Pseudo-Odo's Dialogus de musica are both post-Guidonian.

Lines of different colours were not often used after the 13th century (German scribes again being the most conservative in this respect). Most surviving manuscripts have four-line staves (Guido did not specify a number), for which a four-nibbed pen would have been used. Often all four might be coloured red. These characteristics of chant books persisted into the age of printing and to the present day.

3. POLYPHONIC MUSIC. The more extended range of each voice in polyphonic music led to the general adoption of a five-line staff, as in GB-Lbl Add.36881 (*c*1200), where the lower part (with the chant) frequently has a four-line staff and the organal voice a five-line one (dry-point lines; fig.2). The north French sources of polyphony of the 13th century consistently use red or black five-line staves. Exceptions to a practice that has been standard ever since are the use of a six-line staff by scribes of Italian trecento music and a few later Italian-influenced repertories (F-CH 564, I-Bc Q15, TRmr 89), and the use of six or more lines for keyboard music (the florid upper line of the music of the Buxheim Organbook, D-Mbs Cim.352*b*, is written on a seven-line staff; see NOTATION, fig.108). Again, this was to cope with parts of generally more extended range. Occasionally the left hand had more lines than the right hand (Frescobaldi's Toccate e partite d'intavolatura di cembalo, 1614, left hand eight lines,

2. Four- and five-line staves (with dry-point lines) for the lower and organal parts in two-part polyphony, c1200 (GB-Lbl Add.36881, f.4r) right hand six; see also BAR, illustration). Frequently both had a middle C line (Fitzwilliam Virginal Book, GB-Cfm 32.g.29, two six-line staves). Staves of more than five lines were not generally used after the 17th century.

See also NOTATION, §III, 3(i), 4(v), and SCORE.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Wolf: Handbuch der Notationskunde (Leipzig, 1913–19)
W. Apel: The Notation of Polyphonic Music, 900–1600 (Cambridge, MA, 1942, rev. 5/1953/R)
J. Smits van Waesberghe: 'The Musical Notation of Guido of Arezzo', MD, v (1951), 15–53 [Eng. trans. of pp.47–85 of De musico-paedagogico et theoretico Guidone Aretino, 1953]
J. Smits van Waesberghe: Musikerziehung, Musikgeschichte in Bildern, iii/3 (Leipzig, 1969)
B. Stäblein: Schriftbild der einstimmigen Musik, Musikgeschichte in Bildern, iii/4 (Leipzig, 1975)

DAVID HILEY

Staffa (It.). A TRIANGLE resembling a medieval stirrup.

Staffa, Giuseppe, Baron (b Naples, Dec 1807; d Naples, 18 May 1877). Italian composer and teacher. He studied in Naples with Francesco Ruggi and Giacomo Tritto. Being of noble birth, he was – according to Fétis – perceived as a skilled amateur. However, each of his seven operas was produced in Naples during his lifetime. The première of the first, Priamo all tenda di Achille (S Carlo, 19 November 1828), in which Rubini created Achille, took place just before the composer's 21st birthday. News that Staffa's next work would be Francesca da Rimini (S Carlo, 12 March 1831) upset Mercadante in Madrid, who towards the end of 1830 was working on his own setting of Romani's libretto. The other operas were Un matrimonio per ragione (Teatro del Fondo, 1835), La battaglia di Navarino (S Carlo, 1837), La zingara (Teatro Nuovo, 1845), Il merciaiuolo ambulante (Teatro Nuovo, 1846) and Alceste (S Carlo, 1852). He also composed for the church, and conducted the orchestras of the Nuovo and Fondo theatres – Staffa did not limit himself to a mediocre operatic career. He was also a critic and founded the Neapolitan journal La musica. His reputation, however, came from his teaching: he presided over the music section of the Academy of Sciences, Letters and Fine Arts in Naples, and sat on commissions influencing important ministerial decisions. He later dedicated himself entirely to teaching composition, publishing a treatise on harmony and another on composition.

RICCARDO LA SPINA

Staffani, Agostino. See STEFFANI, AGOSTINO.

Staggins, Nicholas (d Windsor, 13 June 1700). English violinist and composer. He was granted the post of musician-in-ordinary at court as a violinist to date from Michaelmas 1670 by a warrant of December 1671, and warrants of January and June 1673 also granted him a post as flautist. He suddenly achieved prominence in 1674 on his appointment, from 29 September, as Master of the King's Musick in succession to Grabu, a post which he continued to hold under James II and William and Mary. In 1676 he was granted leave to travel to Italy 'and other foreign parts', no doubt to broaden his musical experience. In 1682 he became MusD of Cambridge, though he did not perform the customary exercise at the time. Some criticism of this caused him to perform it in 1684 and to have the fact and its consequence announced in the London Gazette (10 July):

> Dr Nicholas Staggins, who was some time since admitted to the degree of Dr. of music, being desirous to perform his exercise upon the first opportunity for the said degree, has acquitted himself so much to the satisfaction of the whole University this Commencement, that by a solemn vote they have constituted him to be a public professor of music there.

The Grace appointing him first professor of music at Cambridge is dated 2 July 1684. The post was nominal, with neither duties nor emoluments. Meanwhile, in April 1683, jointly with John Blow, he had applied to the king for a licence to set up 'an Academy or Opera of Musick' for the performance of their compositions, but the outcome of this, if any, is not recorded. In 1686 he was described as of 'Little Chelsey in the parish of Kensington', from which address he wrote his will in 1690. He died at Windsor and was buried at St George's Chapel there. He was unmarried. A reference in Tom Brown's Letters from the Dead to the Living (London, 1700) suggests that Nicholas Staggins was bandy-legged, and even contemptuously regarded.

He held no composing appointment at court and his surviving compositions are too fragmentary to allow an estimate of his ability to be made, though it seems to have been but slender. His most important work was the music for the court masque Calisto, or The Chaste Nymph of 1675, which was extravagantly praised by the librettist, John Crowne, in the published edition of the words. Seven of the songs are in manuscript (GB-Lbl Add.19759) and a suite also survives (US-NYp Drexel 3849). There are traces of three odes for the birthday of William III, the words of two of which were printed in the Gentleman's Journal for 1693 and 1694, while the London Gazette on 22 March 1697 referred to a repeat performance of his 'Consort of Musick ... which was performed at St James on His Majesty's Birthday', presumably in November 1696. One air from the 1693 ode was printed in Comes amoris, book 5 (1694), and the solo 'Song on the King's Birthday' (GB-Lbl Add.19759) may come from the 1696 ode. There are 11 songs by Staggins in the printed collections of the period, including the following to words found in the contemporary theatre (dates quoted are those of first performance, not publication): 'How unhappy a lover' (Dryden, Conquest of Granada, 1671); 'While Alexis lay pressed' (Dryden, Marriage à la mode, 1672); 'How pleasant is mutual love' (Shadwell, Epsom Wells, 1672); 'How severe is fate' and 'Let business no longer' (Lee, Gloriana, 1676); 'As Amoret with Phyllis sate' (words by Scrope) and 'When first Amintas' (Etheridge, The Man of Mode, 1676). A few fragmentary instrumental pieces survive (GB-Lbl and Och), and Playford's Dancing Master (1679) includes 'Staggin's Jigg', presumably his work. (P. Holman: Four and Twenty Fiddlers: the Violin at the English Court 1540–1690, Oxford, 1993, 2/1995)

WATKINS SHAW

Stagno, Roberto [Andrioli, Vincenzo] (b Palermo, 11 Oct 1840; d Genoa, 26 April 1897). Italian tenor. He studied in Milan with Lamperti, then made his début in 1862 at Lisbon as Rodrigo in Rossini's Otello. He appeared at Madrid, Venice, Rome, Naples, Florence and the Metropolitan, where he sang Enzo in the first New York performance of La Gioconda (1883). His repertory included Don Ottavio, Elvino, Pollione, Gennaro (Lucrezia Borgia), Poliuto, Raoul, Robert le diable, Manrico, Radames, Romeo, Faust and Lohengrin. He also sang Verdi's Otello in Buenos Aires (1888). He created Turiddu in Cavalleria rusticana at the Teatro Costanzi, Rome (1890), and sang in the first performance of Giordano's Mala vita at the Teatro Argentina, Rome (1892). His powerful, flexible voice could encompass a great variety of roles. He was married to the soprano Gemma Bellincioni. Their daughter Bianca Stagno-Bellincioni (1888–1980), also a soprano, sang in Naples, Barcelona, Rome and Lisbon, and appeared at Covent Garden (Bohème and Manon Lescaut) in 1914; she also wrote Roberto Stagno e Gemma Bellincioni, intimi (Florence, 1943/R). For illustration see BELLINCIONI, GEMMA.

ELIZABETH FORBES

Stahel [Stahl], Johann (fl 2nd quarter of the 16th century). German composer. Possibly the son of Johann Stahel, a singer in Maximilian I's court, he ranks among the lesser of the Reformation composers strongly influenced by Franco-Flemish procedures. He is known principally from the publications of Georg Rhau. In most of his works (such as those in Vesperarum precum) the cantus firmus is presented simply and in long, isometric note values. The pieces for festal occasions are in a more florid and imitative style; in these the cantus firmus is frequently ornamented.

WORKS

Edition: Georg Rhau: Vesperarum precum officia, ed. H.J. Moser, Musikdrucke aus den Jahren 1538 bis 1545 in praktischer Neuausgabe, iv (Kassel, 1960) [M]

Missa super 'Winken ghy syt grone', 4vv, 1541[1]

Benedictus qui venit, 2vv, 1549[16]

4 motets: In pace, in id ipsum dormiam, 5vv, 1568[7]; Oblatus est quia ipse voluit, 4vv, ed. in Musikdrucke aus den Jahren 1538 bis 1545 in praktischer Neuausgabe, x (Kassel, 1990); Quam pulchra es, 4vv, D-Rp 940–41; Unam pety a Domino, 4vv, Rp 940–41

39 antiphons, 4vv, M

3 hymns, 4vv: Ne mens gravata, M 70; Veni Redemptor omnium, D-ERu 473, ROu Mus.Saec. XVI

2 chorales: Nu lasst uns den Leib begraben, 5vv; Vater unser im Himmelreich, 4vv: both ed. in DDT, 1st ser., xxxiv (1908)

2 lieder: Ich wil zu Land ausreiten, 2vv, ed. in Musikdrucke aus den Jahren 1538 bis 1545 in praktischer Neuausgabe, vi (Kassel, 1980); Unser liebe Frawe vom kalten brunnen, 5vv, 1556[29]

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. Hoffmann-Erbrecht: 'Das Opus musicum des Jacob Praetorius von 1566', AcM, xxviii (1956), 96–121

V.H. Mattfeld: Georg Rhaw's Publications for Vespers (Brooklyn, NY, 1966)

B. Bellingham: The 'Bicinium' in the Lutheran Latin Scools during the Reformation Period (diss., U. of Toronto, 1971)

VICTOR H. MATTFELD

Stählin, Jacob von (b Memmingen, Swabia, 9 May 1709; d St Petersburg, 25 June/6 July 1785). German historian and writer on music. He was educated at the Lateinschule in Memmingen and after 1728 at the Gymnasium in Zittau; here he also studied privately with a certain Montallegro, an Italian master of fireworks display. In 1732 he entered Leipzig University, and during this period became a friend of J.S. Bach's sons, playing flute duets with them. He was also a member of the circle surrounding the most famous literary critic of the day, J.C. Gottsched. His career as fireworks designer and professor of poetry and rhetoric took him in 1735 to Russia, where he held numerous positions in St Petersburg and at the imperial court. He edited a fortnightly German-language journal in St Petersburg, where he reported extensively on court activities and introduced a wide variety of materials related to the German Enlightenment. His Original-Anekdoten Peters des Grossen (1785) was known throughout Europe in various translations. His detailed accounts of cultural life in Russia and at court are the earliest historical documents for Russian theatre, music and dance. His Nachrichten von der Musik in Russland was published in J.J. Haigold: Beylagen zum neuveränderten Russland (Riga and Leipzig, 1769–70); see also Muzïka i balet v Rossii XVIII veka, translated from German (Leningrad, 1935).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

MooserA

K. Stählin: Jacob von Stählin: ein biographischer Beitrag zur deutsch-russischen Kulturgeschichte des 18. Jahrhunderts (Leipzig, 1920)

GEORGE J. BUELOW

Stahlspiel (i) (Ger.). See BELL-LYRA.

Stahlspiel (ii) [Stahlstäbe] (Ger.). See GLOCKENSPIEL (I).

Stahmer, Klaus Hinrich (b Stettin [now Szczecin, Poland], 25 June 1941). German composer. Between 1960 and 1969 he attended the Hamburg Musikhochschule and the universities of Hamburg and Kiel (PhD 1968). In 1969 he began teaching music theory and musicology at the Bavarian Staatliche Hochschule für Musik, Würzburg; he was appointed professor in 1977. He has served as the director of the Würzburg New Music Studio (from 1989), founded (in 1976) the Würzburg New Music Days and acted as president of the German section of ISCM (1983–7). His numerous composition awards include first prize at the Tokyo competition for contemporary guitar music (1985) and the Würzburg arts prize (1995).

Stahmer's early compositions use the techniques of the Second Viennese School. During the 1970s his style became more individual, particularly through the influence of the visual arts. During the 1980s he increasingly worked on projects that crossed artistic boundaries, such as music synchronized with slide-projections, graphic scores and works for sound sculptures. His most recent music acknowledges non-European influences and returns to archaic forms and techniques of ornamentation. All of his music is characterized by short, pregnant sequences of notes and individual sounds that are repeated and developed within transparent textures. Frequent repetition and sustained, deep tones lend much of his work an archaic and spiritual quality. (KdG, M. Henke)

WORKS
(selective list)

STAGE

Espace de la solitude (ballet), gui, 4-track tape, 1977; La voce del fiume (ballet, C. Pavese), spkr, gui, perc, 2-track tape, 1980; El Bailarin (scene for dancers, V. Aleixandre), spkr, 3 gui, 1983; Singt, Die Nashörner (ballet, after E. Ionesco), tape, 1983, collab. B. Konrad; Vögel (1 scene, K.H. Stahmer, after Euripides: Die Troerinnen, W.H. Auden: Zeitalter der Angst, V. Aleixandre), 1985–6, Kiel, 1987

INSTRUMENTAL

Orch: Dedications, conc., va, hp, str orch/pf, 1964–77; Mobile Aktionen, str orch, 1975; Multiples, concertino, 3 perc, orch, 1977; May they Come, May they Disembark, May they Stay and Rest a While in Peace, 1994; Wie ein Stillstand der Zeit, hp, str orch, 1995

Chbr: Rotations, fl, cl, trbn, vn, va, vc, perc, pf, 1963–77; Threnos, va/vc, pf/org/gui, 1964; I Can Fly, 2 perc, 1975–81; Parole ultime, perc, org, 1978; Geburtstagskanon für John Cage, any sound source, 1982; Debussyana, fl, gui, vc, 1983; 8 Nachtstücke (after G. Vescovi), fl, gui, vc, 1983–90; Vasarelyana, 8 perc, 1985; Weg nach Innen, org, perc, 1992; Vision, org, perc, 1995; Noa Noa, cl, s sax, pf/accdn, 1996

Solo inst: Marsiada (Miti antichi I), ob, 1978; Aristofaniada (Miti antichi III), fl, 1979; Parisiada (Miti antichi II), rec, 1979;

Nocturne für Enzensberger, gui, 1984; Nacht und Träume, gui, 1995; Sacred Site, pf, 1996

VOCAL

Quasi un requiem (H. Miller), spkr, str qt, 1974; Die Landschaft in meiner Stimme, 1v/vv, 1978; Wintermärchen (H. Heine), 3 spkrs, cl, str qt, 1981; Davids Lobgesang (Bible, F. von Assisi, E. Cardenal), S, T, spkr, chorus, org, 5 perc, ens, tape, 1982; Momentaufnahmen (J. Baldwin, S. Beckett, S. Plath), spkr, ens, 1986–9

ELECTRO-ACOUSTIC AND SOUND SCULPTURES

El-ac: 4 Transformationen, vc, perc, synth, tape, slide projections ad lib, 1972; Porcelain music, cl, tape, slide projections, 1983 [after sculptures by E. Augustin, J. Koblasa, K. Kütemeier]; Ritual/Labyrinth, db fl, tape, 12 ceramic urns, 1990; Kristallgitter, str qt, cptr controlled vibrating stones, ring modulation, 1992; Berlin Song Line, tape, 1994; Dreamscape, tape, 1994; Kumanyayi (Song Line I), fl, tape ad lib, 1994; Dschukurrpa (Song Line II), perc, tape ad lib, 1994; Kuruwarri (Song Line III), gui, tape ad lib, 1995; Herr der Winde, fl, cptr controlled sound sculpture, 1996

Other works: Soundscape, sound sculptures, 1985; Hommage à Daidalos, 6 female vv, vibrating stones, 1989; Klanglabyrinth I–II, vibrating stones, 1989

Principal publishers: Breitkopf & Härtel, Verlag Neue Musik, Zimmermann

ERIKA SCHALLER

Staier, Andreas (b Göttingen, 13 Sept 1955). German harpsichordist and pianist. He studied the piano, the harpsichord (with Gustav Leonhardt) and the bassoon at the Hanover Staatliche Hochschule für Musik, and then won a scholarship to study with Ton Koopman at the Sweelinck Conservatory, Amsterdam. After working with Musica Antiqua Köln (1983–6) he embarked on a solo career as a harpsichordist and fortepianist, performing throughout Europe and in the USA. Staier has played frequently with the cellist Anner Bylsma, and is the regular accompanist of the tenor Christoph Prégardien, with whom he has made admired recordings of Schubert lieder. Among his other recordings, those of Bach and Scarlatti have been acclaimed for their freshness and sense of discovery, while his readings of Haydn and Schubert sonatas and Mendelssohn concertos have made an eloquent case for the performance of this repertory on keyboards of the period. Staier was appointed a professor at the Schola Cantorum in Basle in 1987.

RICHARD WIGMORE

Staimitz. See STAMITZ family.

Stainer, Jacob [Jakob] (b Absam, nr Hall in Tirol, ?1617; d Absam, late Oct or early Nov 1683). Austrian violin maker. He received a good education as a chorister (serving in either a church choir – perhaps in Hall – or the Innsbruck court chapel); surviving letters from later years suggest he was a well-educated man. He is traditionally said to have learnt his craft in Cremona, but he was probably apprenticed to a German violin maker resident in Italy. He based his style on an earlier German model, developing it to perfection. Hart wrote: 'I am satisfied that Stainer was assisted by neither the Brothers Amati nor Nicholas Amati, and I am strengthened in this opinion by the steadfastly German character of a model which no pupil of Amati could have persisted in using'. His oldest known violin is dated Absam, 1638.

Until 1655 Stainer made visits to monasteries, church choirs and court chapels in order to sell instruments and carry out repairs; his travels took him to Salzburg, Munich, Venice, Brixen, Bozen and elsewhere. In 1656 he acquired a house in Absam. Ferdinand Karl, the reigning archduke of Tyrol, appointed him 'archduke's servant' (i.e. purveyor to the court) in 1658; this was not a salaried position, but involved promotion to the rank of a court employee. Meanwhile, he had become so well known that he was receiving commissions by post; about 1658 he carried out a commission for the Spanish court. A denunciation for suspected heresy in 1669, though hotly denied by Stainer, brought him into conflict with the Church. At that time, he had commissions for instruments from Italy, Nuremberg, the monasteries at Rottenbuch and Lambach and from the Bishop of Olomouc. From about 1675 he suffered from bouts of temporary insanity, probably acute manic depression, but in succeeding years he created some of his finest instruments, surpassing even the best products of his middle period. His last violin is dated 1682 (now in the Tiroler Landesmuseum Ferdinandeum, Innsbruck).

Besides violins, Stainer also made viole da braccio, bass viols, cellos and double basses; for viols, he used as his model an English instrument by the virtuoso William Young, who was employed at the Innsbruck court from 1651 to 1662. His bass instruments were mostly made to order, according to the size of the church or concert room. Distinctive features of his violins are the relatively broad lower back and the modified contour of the corners at the waist. At first he worked with a highly arched model, but after about 1665 he also made rather less arched instruments. The wood and varnish are of the best quality, and the accuracy of his craftsmanship ranks close to Stradivari's. The silvery tone (voce argentina) of the Stainer violin was regarded as ideal for more than 150 years; literary sources confirm the high esteem in which his instruments were held, even in comparison with those of the Cremona masters. Hawkins, for example, wrote: 'The violins of Cremona are exceeded only by those of Stainer … whose instruments are remarkable for a full and piercing tone'. The Encyclopédie méthodique states that 'the violins with the greatest reputation are those of Jacob Steiner'. And Stainer heads a list of distinguished violin makers compiled by Francesco Galeazzi. For a long time his model influenced violin making not only in German areas, but also in Italy (where only Brescia and Cremona stuck to their own tradition) as well as several other countries. Distinguished copiers included Gabrielli, Gobetti, the Caracassi brothers, Stadlmann, Widhalm and William Forster (ii). There are countless instruments that contain a forged label with Stainer's name, and even standard works, such as those by Lütgendorff, Vannes and Hamma include illustrations of labels that have proved to be forgeries. Towards the end of the 18th century there was a change in what was considered to be the ideal tone, and the smooth, clarinet-like timbre, characteristic of the instruments of the Cremona school, began to be preferred. Further, the greater volume obtainable from a Cremona instrument could meet the demands now made of the violin in concert-hall performance. During the 19th century the Cremona violin completely superseded the Absam; in the 20th, Stainer's instruments have regained popularity for historically informed performances.

Markus [Marcus] Stainer (b Hallein, Salzburg, *c*1633; d Laufen, Bavaria, 27 Nov 1693), a musician and violin maker often described as Jacob's brother, was not in fact related to him. In 1655 he applied for citizenship at Laufen, granted in 1656. His few known instruments do not show a lot of talent. Instruments with the label

Violin by Jacob Stainer, Absam, Tyrol, c1670 (private collection)

'Marcus Stainer, Bürger und Geigenmacher in Kufstein' are fakes; there is no record of a violin maker of this name in Kufstein.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

HawkinsH; LütgendorffGL; VannesE

G. Hart: The Violin: its Famous Makers and their Imitators (London, 1875, 2/1884/R)

P.O. Apian-Bennewitz: Die Geige, der Geigenbau und die Bogenverfertigung (Weimar, 1892)

P. de Wit: Geigenzettel alter Meister vom 16. bis zur Mitte des 19. Jahrhunderts (Leipzig, 1902, 2/1910/R)

F. Hamma: Meister deutscher Geigenbaukunst (Stuttgart, 1948, 2/1961; Eng. trans., 1961, as German Violin Makers)

I.A. Cozio di Salabue: Carteggio, ed. R. Bacchetta and G. Iviglia (Milan, 1950)

W. Senn: Jakob Stainer, der Geigenmacher zu Absam: die Lebensgeschichte nach urkundlichen Quellen (Innsbruck, 1951)

W. Henley: Universal Dictionary of Violin and Bow Makers (Brighton, 1959–60)

Jakob Stainer und seine Zeit: Innsbruck 1983

W. Senn and K.Roy: Jakob Stainer, Leben und Werk des Tiroler Meisters 1617–1683 (Frankfurt, 1986)

WALTER SENN/KARL ROY

Stainer, Sir John (b London, 6 June 1840; d Verona, 31 March 1901). English musicologist and composer. His father, William Stainer, was parish schoolmaster of St Thomas's, Southwark, and had a small chamber organ on which he gave the boy lessons from an early age. John lost the sight of his left eye through an accident when he was five years old. In 1848 he became a probationer and in 1849 a chorister at St Paul's Cathedral, where he was soon one of the leading solo boys. In 1854 he became organist of St Benet, Paul's Wharf; two years later Ouseley heard him deputizing at the organ at St Paul's and promptly offered him the post of organist at his recently founded St Michael's College, Tenbury Wells; Stainer used to ascribe his later success to Ouseley's guidance during his years at Tenbury.

He entered Christ Church, Oxford, in 1859, and graduated BMus (1859), BA (1864), DMus (1865) and MA (1866). In 1860 he was appointed organist of Magdalen College and in 1861 organist to the university. He founded the Oxford Philharmonic Society and conducted its first concert in 1866. His supreme opportunity came in 1872, when he succeeded Goss as organist of St Paul's Cathedral. Long-overdue reforms had been begun through the efforts of a minor canon, Robert Gregory;

Stainer hastened them by means of tactful persuasion. The number and salaries of the choir were increased; rehearsals, processions and weekly choral celebrations of communion were soon introduced. The musical repertory was greatly expanded and altered.

Stainer soon gained a pre-eminent position as church musician, scholar and composer. It was through his initiative that the Musical Association was founded in 1874. In 1876 he became organist and in 1881 principal of the National Training School for Music. He was knighted in 1888, but in the same year had to resign his position at St Paul's because of failing eyesight. In 1889 he returned to Oxford as professor of music. He was also vice-president of the Royal College of Organists, and president of the Musical Association, the Plainsong and Mediaeval Music Society and the London Gregorian Association. He died suddenly while on a visit to Italy.

In his lifetime and for a considerable period after his death, Stainer was known primarily as a composer of cathedral music and hymn tunes. His services and anthems, most of them written for St Paul's, were fashionable throughout the Anglican communion and beyond it. His fine literary feeling in his choice of texts was not always matched by an ability to set them appropriately to music. He himself came to regret that he had published his compositions, and said to Fellowes that he knew they were 'rubbish'; they have been so judged by severe critics of more recent times. Nevertheless, a few works remain favourites: The Crucifixion is usually broadcast every Passiontide and several of the hymn tunes can be heard in churches of almost every denomination. Wienandt and Young (1970) pointed out 'a dramatic element in Stainer's anthems not often seen in the works of his predecessors' and a balanced appreciation of Stainer's output of cathedral music has been provided by Gatens (1984). His hymn tunes have been rehabilitated by Routley (1981), who called Stainer 'a matchless part-writer, contrapuntist and handler of the musical language'.

Today Stainer is venerated not as a composer but as a pioneer of English musicology. His edition of Early Bodleian Music, completed shortly before his death, was the first serious effort by an English scholar to explore music before Palestrina and Tallis. Also of value is his edition, with the Rev. H.R. Bramley, of Christmas carols. His professorial lectures at Oxford, and his papers to the Musical Association (six of which were printed in PMA), were excellent models for younger scholars, often venturing into almost unexplored musical territory. In general, he was a benign influence on musicians of the younger generation, most notably Hubert Parry, his successor at Oxford. Stainer was a noted collector of music, specializing in 18th-century songbooks. His elder daughter, Eliza Cecilia, who helped him with Early Bodleian Music, published a Dictionary of Violin Makers (London, 1896/R), and contributed, along with her father and a brother, John F.R. Stainer, to earlier editions of Grove.

WORKS

all printed works published in London

Gideon (orat), Oxford, 1865 (1875)
The Daughter of Jairus (cant.), Worcester Festival, 1878 (1879)
St Mary Magdalen (cant., W.J. Sparrow Simpson), Gloucester Festival, 1883 (1884)
The Crucifixion (orat, Sparrow Simpson), St Marylebone Parish Church, 24 Feb 1887 (1887)
The Story of the Cross (cant., E. Monro) (1893)
5 evening services: A ('Magdalen'), *c*1864, D, F (1894), E (1894), F (1895)
3 communion services: A (1865), F (1887), C (1901)
4 full services: E♭ (1874), A/D (1877), B♭ (1884) and D, male vv (1898)
6 morning services: C (after 1877), G (1893), D (1894), F (1896), A♭ (1899), G (1915)
4 chant services (1895–7)
Sevenfold Amen (1873) [arr. of Dresden Amen]
12 Sacred Songs for Children (E. Oxenford) (1889)
[156] Hymn Tunes (1900)
44 anthems, org works, madrigals, partsongs, songs, str qt with H.R. Bramley: Christmas Carols, New and Old (London, 1871) with S. Flood Jones and others: The Cathedral Psalter (London, 1874) with W. Russell: The Cathedral Prayer Book (London, 1891)

EDITIONS

Six Italian Songs (London, 1896)
The Church Hymnary (Edinburgh, 1898) with J.F.R. and C. Stainer: Early Bodleian Music (London and New York, 1901/R) with W.H. Frere and H.B. Briggs: A Manual of Plainsong (London, 1902)

WRITINGS

A Theory of Harmony, Founded on the Tempered Scale (London, 1871, 7/1884 as A Treatise on Harmony and the Classification of Chords, 8/*c*1895) with W.A. Barrett: A Dictionary of Musical Terms (London, 1876, 4/1974)
The Organ (London, 1877/R)
Music of the Bible, with an Account of the Development of Modern Musical Instruments from Ancient Types (London, 1879, 2/1914 with suppl. by F.W. Galpin)
Music in its Relation to the Intellect and Emotions (London, 1892/R) with J.F.R. and C. Stainer: Dufay and his Contemporaries (London, 1898/R)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

DNB (W.G. McNaught)
W. Sparrow Simpson: A Year's Music in St Paul's Cathedral, i–viii (London, 1879–86)
J.S. Bumpus: The Organists and Composers of S. Paul's Cathedral (London, 1891)
J.F.R., E.C. and C.L. Stainer, eds.: Catalogue of English Song Books, forming a Portion of the Library of Sir John Stainer (London, 1891/R)
F.G. Edwards: 'John Stainer', MT, xlii (1901), 297 only
W.G. McNaught: 'Some Reminiscences of the Late Sir John Stainer', R.A.M. Club Magazine, no.4 (1901), 1–4
E.H. Fellowes: 'Sir John Stainer', English Church Music, xxi (1951), 4–7
A.H. King: Some British Collectors of Music (Cambridge, 1963)
B. Rainbow: The Choral Revival in the Anglican Church 1839–1872 (London, 1970)
E.A. Wienandt and R.H. Young: The Anthem in England and America (New York, 1970), 263–72
E. Routley: The Music of Christian Hymns (Chicago, 1981), 103–4
N. Temperley, ed.: Music in Britain: the Romantic Age 1800–1914 (London, 1981/R)
P. Charlton: John Stainer and the Musical Life of Victorian Britain (Newton Abbot, 1984) [incl. detailed list of works]
W.J. Gatens: 'John Stainer (1840–1901) and Joseph Barnby (1838–96): the High Victorian Idiom', Victorian Cathedral Music in Theory and Practice (Cambridge, 1986), 170–201
N. Thistlethwaite: The Making of the Victorian Organ (Cambridge, 1990)
W. Shaw: The Succession of Organists (Oxford, 1991), 179–80
I. Bradley: Abide with Me: the World of Victorian Hymns (London, 1997)

NICHOLAS TEMPERLEY

Stainer, Markus. Austrian violin maker, formerly thought to be a brother of JACOB STAINER.

Stainer & Bell. English firm of music publishers. It was founded in London in 1907 by a group of investors with an interest in music, as an outlet for British compositions

(the names 'Stainer' and 'Bell' were chosen merely for euphony). The firm's reputation was quickly established, and it published the later music of Stanford, who did much to support the firm in its financially precarious early years, as well as works by Holst (Hymn of Jesus, 1919), Vaughan Williams (A Sea Symphony, 1918; London Symphony, 1920), Bantock and Boughton. In 1917 it was appointed by the Carnegie Trust to publish the Carnegie Collection of British Music. The firm has undertaken the publication of several major scholarly series, notably E.H. Fellowes's editions of the English Madrigal School (1913–24), the Complete Works of William Byrd (1937–50), and the English School of Lutenist Song Writers (1920–31), which was taken over from the firm of Winthrop Rogers in 1924. Revised editions of all three series were published under the supervision of Thurston Dart, musical adviser to the firm from 1953 until his death in 1971. In 1951 the firm was entrusted with the publication of the Musica Britannica series for the Royal Musical Association, and a further important series, Early English Church Music, has been published for the British Academy since 1963; the facsimile series Music for London Entertainment was taken over in 1987. In addition, from the outset the firm has published many sheet editions in series such as Choral Library, Church Choir Library, Unison Songs, Organ Library, and Modern Church Services, all originally devoted to new works by British composers and later also noted for fine editions of older music. In February 1971 the firm entered a partnership with GALLIARD LTD; with its purchase of that firm in November 1972 titles published by AUGENER, JOSEPH WILLIAMS and Joseph Weekes entered the catalogue. Since the managing directorship of Bernard Braley (1968–87) the firm has also played a significant role in the promotion of contemporary Christian hymnody.

PETER WARD JONES

Staingaden, Constantin. See STEINGADEN, CONSTANTIN.

Stalder, Hans Rudolf (b Zürich, 9 July 1930). Swiss clarinettist. After studying at the Zürich Conservatory with Emil Fanghänel, and subsequently with Gustav Steinkamp and Louis Cahuzac, he was principal clarinet with the St Gallen Orchestra, 1953–5, and the Zürich Tonhalle Orchestra, 1955–86. He has made an extensive study of historic performing practices from the early Classical treatises of Vanderhagen, Backofen and Lefèvre, and in Augsburg in 1968 gave the first performance of Mozart's Concerto in a reconstruction of its original version for basset clarinet. Although he is best known as a player of the chalumeau, early clarinet and basset horn, Stalder is also a noted performer of contemporary music, and has given the first performances of Karl Amadeus Hartmann's Chamber Concerto for clarinet and strings and Frank Martin's Ballade in the composer's arrangement for him for basset horn and orchestra. His Stalder Quintet (1955–90) and Zürich Clarinet Trio (founded in 1976) have had many works written for them. Stalder taught at the Zürich Conservatory from 1960 to 1970 and in 1975 was appointed to the Basle Musikakademie.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

P. Weston: Clarinet Virtuosi of Today (London, 1989), 271–6

PAMELA WESTON

Stalder, Joseph Franz Xaver Dominik (b Lucerne, bap. 29 March 1725; d Lucerne, 4 Jan 1765). Swiss composer. After attending the Jesuit college in Lucerne he studied moral theology in Milan (1748–9) and also took up composition. In 1750, again in Milan, he became a pupil of Sammartini and Galimberti, at the recommendation of Meyer von Schauensee. In 1752 he was appointed provisor at St Leodegar monastery, Lucerne. In the following year, however, he moved to London, and in 1754 to Paris, where he began a productive career as a composer and as a conductor with the Prince of Monaco and the Prince of Conti. Probably of a sickly disposition, he returned to St Leodegar monastery in 1762 with a prebendary organist's post. As an instrumental composer Stalder stands between his Swiss contemporaries Meyer von Schauensee and Constantin Reindl. Saladin listed 48 symphonies by him which appeared in Paris between 1757 and 1759; the few of these that are extant show a remarkable freshness of style, particularly in their first movements.

WORKS

Stage (mostly written for Jesuit Theatre, Lucerne; all lost): Hans und Trini (operetta, 2); incid music to: Marienspiel, 1745, Froyla, 1748, Athemenes Cretensis, 1749, Henricus Calvensis, 1751, Zeleux der König von Lokrien, incl. Der Einsiedler (Spl, 2)

Sacred vocal: Mag, 4vv, insts, 1757, CH-E; Amo te Jesu sponse dilecte, aria, S, str, org, SAf; Conserva me, off, 4vv, str, org, 1764, SAf; In exitu Israel, Ps cxiv, 4vv, str, E, EN, SAf; In te Domine speravi, Ps lxxi, 4vv, insts, org, E; Jesu dulcissime da te amare, aria, T, str, EN; Regina caeli, S, str, EN

Syms.: 6 sonate a 3 con tutti l'orchestra, op.4, lost; 6 for 4 str (Paris, n.d.); 6 a 4, hns ad lib (Paris, n.d.): 6 simphonies italiennes, 4 str, hns ad lib, op.5 (Paris, n.d.) [also pubd as 6 simphonies à 4 (Paris, n.d.)]; 6 a 4, with hns (Paris, ?1759); 12 a 4, with hns, ?lost; 8 a 6, F-Pc; Sinfonia, CH-EN

Other inst: Ov., Zz; Fl Conc., EN; Sextet, 2 fl, 2 vn, va, b, EN; 6 str qts (London, *c*1770); 6 trio concertati, 2 vn, b, op.2 (Paris, n.d.), lost; Pf Sonata, E

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J.A. Saladin: Die Musikpflege am Stift St. Leodegar in Luzern (Stans, 1948), 65–6, 91–9 [incl. list of works]
W. Jerger: Constantin Reindl, 1738–1799 (Fribourg, 1955); also in Der Geschichtsfreund, cvii–cviii (1954–5)
W. Jerger: 'Zur Musikgeschichte der deutschsprachigen Schweiz im 18. Jahrhundert', Mf, xiv (1961), 303–12

WILHELM JERGER

Stamaty, Camille (Marie) (b Rome, 13/23 March 1811; d Paris, 19 April 1870). Greco-French pianist, composer and teacher. Unable to decide between music and business as a profession, Stamaty worked in the Prefecture of the Seine from 1828. He studied piano with A.-C. Fessy and (from about 1830) Frédéric Kalkbrenner, but rheumatism temporarily forced him to direct his energies towards composition. He made his first public appearance as a pianist in the Salle Pleyel on 15 March 1835, with a concerto of his own composition (probably the Concerto in A minor op.2), a set of variations (probably his op.3 set on an original theme), and Kalkbrenner's recent Grand Duo in D for two pianos op.128, with the composer as his duo partner. Reviewers commented upon the delicacy and refinement of his playing, his evenness of sound and independence of finger-movement, all features which placed him firmly in the Kalkbrenner tradition. In September 1836 he went to Leipzig where he studied briefly with Mendelssohn. He returned to Paris early in 1837 and introduced much more Bach, Mozart and Beethoven into his programmes. In 1862 he was made Chevalier of the Légion d'Honneur.

Stamaty's other compositions include a Piano Trio (op.12), several piano sonatas, salon pieces for piano, and a few songs. The melodic and rhythmic construction of many of Stamaty's works reveal his empathy with 18th-century styles: the Grande sonate op.20 opens with a galant melodic gesture with mordents decorating appoggiaturas; his salon pieces include works based on old dances, such as the Sicilienne dans le genre ancien. Stamaty's interest in early music also led him to transcribe instrumental works by Rameau, Haydn, Mozart and others for his major pedagogical work: the five-part L'école du pianiste classique et moderne (Paris, 1854–62). As a teacher, Stamaty continued the Kalkbrenner tradition, using the latter's piano method of 1831 (and its famous hand-guide, to restrict arm movement) in his training of both Gottschalk and Saint-Saëns. His 25 études pour piano op.11 were adopted by the Conservatoire as official teaching material; they bear out Saint-Saëns's comment that Stamaty concentrated excessively on legato playing and the cultivation of a continuous espressivo in both legato and staccato contexts.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FétisB
R. Schumann: Gesammelte Schriften über Musik und Musiker (Leipzig, 1854, 5/1914/R, ed. M. Kreisig; Eng. trans., 1877–80, 1946/R [selection])
A.-F. Marmontel: Les pianistes célèbres (Paris, 1878)

KATHARINE ELLIS

Stamegna [Stamigna], Nicolò [Nicolaus] (b Spello, nr Perugia, *c*1615; d Loreto, 13 Sept 1685). Italian composer. He was a priest. From 1635 to 1638 he was maestro di cappella of Spoleto Cathedral and then, according to Pitoni, held a similar post at Fabriano. On 6 June 1639 he was named organist at the collegiate church of S Maria Maggiore, Spello, but had left by 10 September 1639. He was maestro di cappella of Orvieto Cathedral until 1658 and then at Perugia (according to Pomponi). On 31 January 1659 he took up the post of maestro di cappella of S Maria Maggiore, Rome, and then moved to S Giacomo degli Spagnoli, where he remained from 1667 to 1684. In 1670 he described himself as a canon, and on 17 October 1682 he obtained a benefice at Spello. According to Tebaldini and Schmidl he was maestro di cappella in Rome at the Cappella del Gesù and the Seminario Romano, both from 1665, but this may stem from a misreading of Gaspari. On 14 July 1684 he went to the Santa Casa, Loreto, and remained there until his death.

Stamegna's Sacrae modulationes shows characteristics of the early concertato motet, while the pieces in his Sacri concentus of 33 years later are more akin to true sacred cantatas. His stylistic development cannot be traced in detail because of the apparent large gap in his production from the late 1630s to the 1660s. He produced a new edition of Guidetti's Directorium chori (Rome, 1665), occasioned by changes in the Roman Breviary made by Pope Urban VIII. Pitoni listed him in his Guida armonica (MS, *c*1685, I-Rvat) and used an extract from one of his two-voice motets to illustrate a point of contrapuntal technique.

WORKS

Sacrarum modulationum, liber 1, 2–4vv (Rome, 1637)
Sacrorum concentuum, liber 1, 2–4vv (Rome, 1670)
Motets, pss, 1–4vv, bc: 1662[2], 1664[1], 1665[1], 1667[1], 1668[1], 1672[1], 1683[1]
Missa, 12vv, org, I-Rsg, Rvat

S Tomaso d'Aquina (orat, S. Lazarini), lost [text pubd Rome, 1678]

Messa 'Benedicamus Domino', 5, 9vv, insts, lost [catalogued in MS inventory of a Roman church in Bc, bound with Gaspari's Miscellanea musicale]
Missa Febea, 16vv, Rvat [arr. by Stamegna of Carissimi's Missa 'L'homme armé', 12vv, see Feininger]

BIBLIOGRAPHY

GaspariC, ii; PitoniN; SchmidlD
G. Gaspari: Miscellanea musicale (MS, I-Bc UU.12), iii, between pp.493 and 494 [MS inventory]
G. Tebaldini: L'archivio musicale della Cappella lauretana (Loreto, 1921)
L. Fausti: 'La cappella musicale della collegiata di S. Maria di Spello', NA, x (1933), 136–44
R. Casimiri: '"Disciplina musicae" e "mastri di cappella" dopo il Concilio di Trento nei maggiori istituti ecclesiastici di Roma', NA, xv (1938), 97–112
L. Pomponi: 'Memorie musicali della collegiata di S. Maria Maggiore di Spello', NA, xvii (1940), 179–222
L. Feininger: 'La scuola policorale romana del Sei e Settecento', CHM, ii (1956–7), 193–201
J.M. Llorens: Le opere musicali della Cappella Giulia, i: Manoscritti e edizioni fino al '700 (Vatican City, 1971)
B. Brumana and G. Ciliberti: Musica e musicisti nella cattedrale di S. Lorenzo a Perugia (XIV–XVIII secolo) (Florence, 1991)

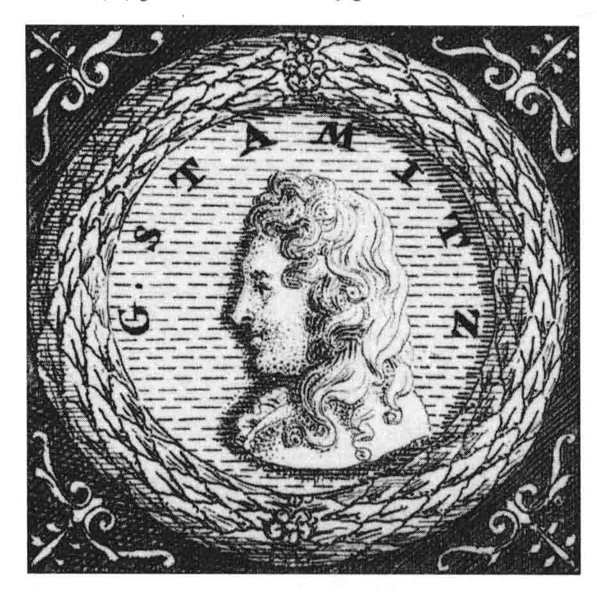
JUDITH NAGLEY

Stamic Quartet. Czech string quartet. It was founded in 1985 by Bohuslav Matoušek, Josef Kekula, Jan Pěruška and Vladimír Leixner; all except the viola player had previously played for more than a decade in the Doležal Quartet. In 1986 the ensemble won the European Broadcasting Union competition in Salzburg and began its regular tours abroad. It plays a wide repertory with verve and a colourful tonal palette but has a special sympathy for Czech music, from the Classical era to the 20th century. Under the leadership of Matoušek – a noted soloist – it recorded all the quartets of Dvořák and Martinů. In 1995 Vitězslav Černoch became leader, with no apparent loss of quality. With him the quartet has recorded works by Vaňhal, Dvořák and Martinů.

TULLY POTTER

Stamitz [Stamic]. Bohemian family of musicians. The family can be traced back to Marburg an der Drau in Styria (now Maribor, Slovenia). From there Martin Stamitz emigrated to the Bohemian town of Pardubice, where his name is first recorded in 1665. About 1710 Martin's son Antonin Ignác (1686–1765) moved to Německý Brod, where he was appointed organist and choirmaster of the Dean's church and later became a wealthy landowner and town councillor. In 1714 he married Rosina (Rozyna) Böhm von Loisbach; the third of their 11 children, and the first to survive, was (1) Johann Stamitz.

The spelling of the name in contemporary sources is extraordinarily erratic, the most common variants being Stamiz, Steinmetz, Steinmez, Stammiz, Stametz, Stammitz, Staimitz, Stamits and Stammetz. Every known signature by a member of the family uses the form Stamitz, even in documents in which the language and the forms of the first names are Czech.



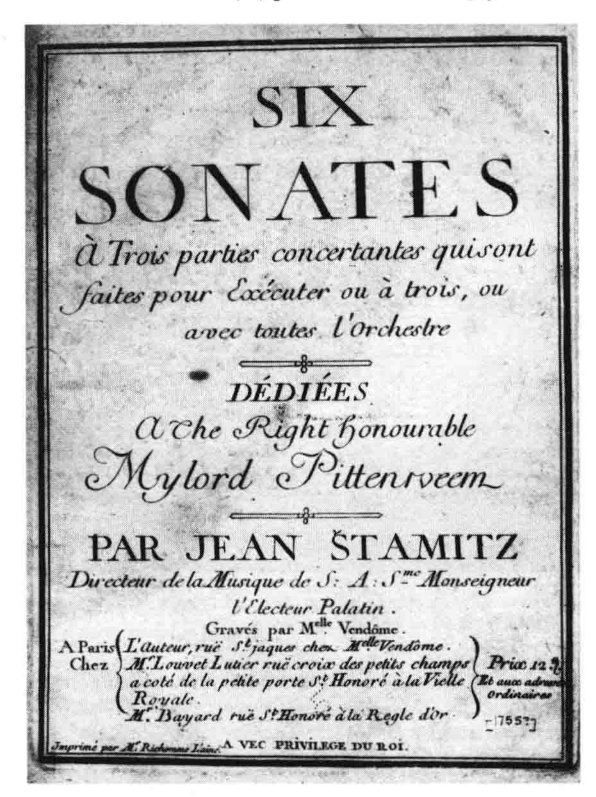
(1) Johann (Wenzel Anton) [Jan Waczlaw (Václav) Antonin (Antonín)] Stamitz (b Německý Brod [now Havlíčkův Brod], bap. 19 June 1717; d Mannheim, ?27 March, bur. 30 March 1757). Composer, violinist and teacher. He ranks among the most important early Classical symphonists and was influential in making the court of the Elector Palatine at Mannheim a leading centre of orchestral performance and composition.

1. Life. 2. Works. 3. Problems of attribution.

1. Life. Stamitz received his early schooling in Německý Brod, though his first musical instruction doubtless came from his father. From 1728 to 1734 he attended the Jesuit Gymnasium in Jihlava; the Jesuits of Bohemia, whose pupils included the foremost musicians in Europe, maintained high standards of musical education during this period. Stamitz is known to have spent the following academic year, 1734–5, at Prague University. His activities during the next six years, however, remain a mystery. It seems logical to assume that his decision to leave the university was prompted by a desire to establish himself as a violin virtuoso, a goal that could be pursued in Prague, Vienna or countless other centres.

The precise circumstances surrounding Stamitz's engagement by the Mannheim court are unclear. The date of his appointment was probably 1741 (i.e. when he was 24), for he remarked in a letter of 29 February 1748 to Baron von Wallbrunn in Stuttgart that he was in his eighth year of service to the elector. The most likely hypothesis is perhaps that Stamitz's engagement resulted from contacts made late in 1741 during the Bohemian campaign and coronation in Prague of the Bavarian Elector Carl Albert (later Carl VII), one of whose closest allies was the Elector Palatine. In January 1742 Stamitz no doubt performed at Mannheim as part of the festivities surrounding the marriage of Carl Theodor, who succeeded his uncle Carl Philipp as Elector Palatine less than a year later; Carl Albert of Bavaria was a guest at the wedding. He may also have played at the coronation ceremonies for Carl Albert in Frankfurt in February of that year. However, no contemporary evidence for either of these appearances exists; the earliest known reference to a public performance by Stamitz occurs in an advertisement for a concert in Frankfurt on 29 June 1742, at which he was to perform on the violin, viola d'amore, cello and double bass.

At Mannheim Stamitz advanced rapidly: in 1743, when he was first violinist at the court, he was granted an increase in salary of 200 gulden; in payment lists from 1744 and 1745 his salary is given as 900 gulden, the highest of any instrumentalist at Mannheim; in 1745 or early 1746 he was awarded the title of Konzertmeister; and in 1750 he was appointed to the newly created post of director of instrumental music. The latter promotion came almost two years after the offer of a position at the court of Duke Carl Eugen in Stuttgart with an annual salary of 1500 gulden, an offer that the Elector Palatine probably saw fit to match, as Stamitz remained in Mannheim. In court almanacs for 1751 and 1752 Stamitz is also listed as one of the two Kapellmeisters, but after the arrival of Ignaz Holzbauer in 1753 he appears as director of instrumental music alone. Stamitz's principal responsibilities at court were the composition and performance of orchestral and chamber music, although he seems also to have composed some sacred music for the court chapel. As leader of the band and conductor Stamitz developed the Mannheim orchestra into the most renowned ensemble of the time, famous for its precision and its ability to render novel dynamic effects. Stamitz was also influential as a teacher; in addition to his sons Carl and Anton, he taught such outstanding violinists and composers as Christian Cannabich, the Toeschi brothers, Ignaz Fränzl and Wilhelm Cramer.



1. Johann Stamitz: engraving from the frontispiece of Jean Baptiste Cartier's 'L'art du violon' (Paris, 1798)

In 1744 Stamitz married Maria Antonia Lüneborn. They had five children: the composers (2) Carl and (3) Anton, a daughter Maria Francisca (1746–99) and two children who died in infancy. In 1749 Stamitz and his wife journeyed to Německý Brod to attend the installation of Stamitz's younger brother Antonín Tadeáš as dean of the Dean's church. In February 1750, while the family was still in Bohemia, Stamitz's brother Václav Jan or Wenzel Johann (b 1724; d after 1771), also a musician, was in Mannheim. Johann Stamitz returned to Mannheim in March 1750, but his wife remained temporarily in Německý Brod, where (3) Anton Stamitz was born on 27 November 1750.

Probably in late summer 1754 Stamitz undertook a year-long journey to Paris, appearing there for the first time at the Concert Spirituel on 8 September 1754. (At least one work by Stamitz, a symphony with horns, trumpets and timpani, had already been performed in Paris, at the Concert Spirituel on 12 April 1751, but there is no evidence that he himself was present.) While in Paris Stamitz lived at Passy in the palace of A.-J.-J. Le Riche de La Pouplinière, a wealthy amateur whose private orchestra he conducted. He was also active in public concerts in Paris, appearing with particular success at the Concert Italien. Performances of his compositions were frequent, and his Mass was given on 4 August 1755. Stamitz's success in Paris induced him to publish his 'orchestral trios' op.1 (fig.2), for which he received a royal privilege on 29 August 1755, and probably also to plan further publications with various Parisian houses. He presumably returned to Mannheim in autumn 1755, dying there less than two years later at the age of 39.

2. Works. Stamitz's most important compositions are his symphonies, some 58 of which are extant, and his ten orchestral trios. The latter works, though frequently classed as symphonies, actually occupy a position midway in style between the symphony and the chamber trio, and may be played with or without doubling of parts. Stamitz was also a prolific composer of concertos. These include, in addition to his numerous violin concertos, at least two

SIX
SONATES
à Trois parties concertantes qui sont faites pour Exécuter ou à trois, ou avec toutes l'Orchestre
DÉDIÉES
A The Right Honourable
Mylord Pittenweem
PAR JEAN STAMITZ
Directeur de la Musique de S: A: S.me Monseigneur l'Electeur Palatin.
Gravés par Melle Vendôme.
A Paris Chez { L'auteur, ruë St. jaques chez Melle Vendôme. M.r Louvet Lutier ruë croix des petits champs a coté de la petite porte St. Honoré à la Vielle Royale. M.r Bayard ruë St. Honoré à la Regle d'or } Prix 12 ₶ Et aux adresses Ordinaires [1755?]
Imprimé par M.r Richomme l'ainé. AVEC PRIVILEGE DU ROI.

2. Title-page and first page of music from Johann Stamitz's 'Six sonates à trois parties concertantes' op.1 (Paris: Author, 1755)

for harpsichord (only one of which can be identified with certainty), 12 for flute (three of which were offered for sale by Breitkopf in alternative versions for violin), one for oboe (also listed by Breitkopf in versions for violin and flute), and one for clarinet, possibly the earliest solo concerto for that instrument. He also composed a large amount of chamber music for various instrumental combinations, as well as eight vocal works; among the latter is his widely circulated Mass in D, an ambitious setting in modern concerted style.

Owing to the complete lack of autograph manuscripts and the extreme paucity of dated sources, firm conclusions cannot be drawn about Stamitz's evolution as a composer. His pre-Mannheim compositions probably comprise several of the extant symphonies for strings alone and most of the eight lost symphonies listed in a thematic catalogue from Brtnice (Pirnitz) in Moravia. Certain of his chamber works and concertos may also have originated from this period, providing him with material for use in performance, as may many of the vocal works that still survive in Czech collections. However, the great majority of his compositions obviously date from after his arrival in Mannheim. The somewhat conservative style of most of the concertos and sonatas, together with evidence regarding the chronology of his orchestral trios and advanced symphonies, suggests that Stamitz's interest gradually shifted away from the composition of music intended for his personal use as a performer to the substantially different stylistic demands of the symphony and orchestral trio.

The principal innovation in Stamitz's symphonic works is their adoption of the cycle of four movements, with a minuet and trio in third place followed by a Presto or Prestissimo. While isolated precedents for this succession exist, Stamitz was the first composer to use it consistently: well over half of his symphonies, and nine of his ten orchestral trios, are in four movements. The chief exceptions among the symphonies are the three-movement works characteristic of his early period (to *c*1745–8). It is noteworthy that Parisian prints of the later works often omit the minuets and trios found in the authentic manuscript sources.

Stamitz's earliest symphonies and most of his concertos are scored for strings alone or for strings and two horns. His later symphonies generally call for a pair of horns and either oboes, flutes or (in several late works) clarinets, to which on five occasions he added a pair of trumpets and timpani. In conjunction with this expansion of the orchestra Stamitz gradually began to give more distinctive treatment to the wind instruments, for example handling them as sustaining instruments capable of providing a chordal background and support for the strings. The late symphonies place considerable emphasis upon striking dynamic effects, most notably the crescendo. Extended crescendo passages, almost certainly modelled on those of Nicolò Jommelli, occur in 14 of Stamitz's symphonies, primarily works in his most advanced (and familiar) style. Stamitz's treatment of orchestration and dynamics, combined with his forceful and vigorous rhythmic drive, represented a decisive new phase for the style of the concert symphony: the approach became manifestly orchestral rather than relying upon Baroque concerto style or the galant chamber idiom. Yet neither Stamitz nor the other Mannheim composers actually invented this style; it had already characterized a large number of Italian opera overtures from about 1730 to 1755 by such composers as Vinci, Leo, Jommelli and Galuppi, works that were staples of the operatic repertory at Mannheim during the 1740s and 50s. In the process of adaptation, however, Stamitz unquestionably extended and deepened every element of the overture style. For instance, he often introduced conspicuous solo passages for pairs of woodwind or horns in the first movements of all but his early symphonies; such emphasis upon the woodwind is rare in the Italian opera overture of the time.

Stamitz's phrase structure shows a gradual expansion from an early hierarchy based on half-bar motifs and two-bar phrases (in 4/4 metre and allegro tempo) to a mature one containing most of the essentials of later Classical phrase syntax, founded on four-bar phrases, eight-bar sentences or periods and 16-bar double periods. The structure of the individual movements of Stamitz's symphonies and orchestral trios has its basis in large-scale binary form, frequently modified in the later works by omission of the central double bar (and consequently of the repeats) and expansion of the second half of the movement. Thematic development of the type usually associated with later composers appears in Stamitz's symphonies from every period. By contrast, he never consistently employed the principle of full recapitulation, although enough examples of this procedure exist to demonstrate his awareness of its possibilities. Perhaps by way of compensation, most of Stamitz's first movements among his later works return towards the end of the movement to thematic material originally presented near the beginning. This material normally consists of a crescendo passage, but in a few instances the primary theme itself recurs. The occasional appearance of primary material near the end of a movement has given rise to the belief that Stamitz and the other Mannheimers frequently used 'reversed' or 'mirror' recapitulations. That is not statistically accurate; nor does it take account of the fact that the reorganization of the recapitulations in Stamitz's late first movements nearly always amounts to far more than the mere reversal of primary and secondary themes.

Although Stamitz's slow movements, dance movements and early finales are mostly homogeneous in style, the expositions of his first movements and more advanced finales regularly introduce contrasting thematic material – including, in just over half of these movements, a clearly articulated and differentiated secondary theme. This approach also originated in the Italian opera overture, which had used polythematic expositions since at least the 1730s. Once again, though, Stamitz went well beyond his model, often scoring his secondary themes for wind instruments and, in his latest works, increasing their lyricism substantially.

In sum, Stamitz's contribution in the particular areas of thematic differentiation, orchestration and dynamics may be defined as the transfer and adaptation of Italian overture style to the concert symphony, rather than as actual innovation. Charles Burney, writing some 15 years after Stamitz's death, stated this viewpoint:

> It was here [in concerts at Mannheim] that Stamitz, stimulated by the productions of Jomelli, first surpassed the bounds of common opera overtures, which had hitherto only served in the theatre as a kind of court cryer, with an 'O Yes' in order to awaken attention, and bespeak silence, at the entrance of the singers.

To recognize Stamitz's debt to Italian overture style is in no way to belittle his achievement, for in the process of adaptation he greatly enriched and refined every element of that style; but it enables Stamitz's symphonies to be placed in a more valid historical context than that proposed by Riemann and others. Moreover, the imagination, vitality and craftsmanship evident in Stamitz's symphonies and orchestral trios were rarely surpassed by either contemporary symphonists or his more stylized followers at Mannheim. To quote Burney again:

> He [Stamitz], like another Shakespeare, broke through all difficulties and discouragements; and, as the eye of one pervaded all nature, the other, without quitting nature, pushed art further than any one had done before him; his genius was truly original, bold, and nervous; invention, fire, and contrast, in the quick movements; a tender, graceful, and insinuating melody, in the slow; together with the ingenuity and richness of the accompaniments, characterise his productions; all replete with great effects, produced by an enthusiasm of genius, refined, but not repressed by cultivation.

3. PROBLEMS OF ATTRIBUTION. Because at least five other musicians of the 18th century bore the surname Stamitz – four from Stamitz's immediate family – and because few manuscripts of the time supplied first names, any attempt to enumerate Stamitz's authentic works is hazardous at best, particularly in view of the many variations in spelling. Actually, few difficulties arise in distinguishing between works by Johann Stamitz and those of his sons Carl and Anton. By contrast, the relationship of the names 'Steinmetz' and 'Stamitz' has caused considerable confusion, as at least two other musicians called 'Steinmetz' lived in the 18th century. The list of works below includes most of those compositions attributed in the sources to 'Steinmetz' for the following reasons. First, the two names were constantly interchanged in the 18th century, as seen both in the numerous references to Stamitz (even at Mannheim) in the form 'Steinmetz' and in the large number of works indisputably by Johann Stamitz attributed to 'Steinmetz' in concordant sources. Second, the notion that Johann Erhard Steinmetz, an oboe player in the Dresden hunting band, was a composer of symphonies derives primarily from J.G.I. Breitkopf, whose reliability on this point is demonstrably low. Third, analysis of the style of those works ascribed to 'Steinmetz' for which no concordant sources exist generally reveals an unmistakable connection to authentic works of Johann Stamitz – but to works in his relatively unfamiliar early style.

See also STEINMETZ, JOHANN ERHARD.

WORKS

printed works published in Paris unless otherwise stated; for thematic catalogue see Gradenwitz: 'Johann Stamitz' (1936), ii, and 'Johann Stamitz' (1984); symphonies and orchestral trios also catalogued with incipits by Riemann (DTB, iv, Jg.iii/1, 1902/R) and Wolf (1981), and chamber music by Riemann (DTB, xxviii, Jg.xvi, 1915/R)

ORCHESTRAL

Syms.: 6 as op.2 (1757), reissued as op.3 (1757), 2 ed. in DTB, iv, Jg.iii/1 (1902), 5 ed. A. Badley (Wellington, 1996); 4 [and 2 orch trios] as op.4 (1758), ed. A. Badley (Wellington, 1995), 1 ed. in DTB, xiii, Jg.vii/2 (1906), 3 ed. in The Symphony 1720–1840, ser. C, iii (New York, 1984), 1 ed. W. Upmeyer (Berlin-Lichterfelde, n.d.); 2 [and orch trio] in Six symphonies … de différents auteurs, op.5 (1759), 1 ed. in DTB, xiii, Jg.vii/2 (1906), 1 ed. A. Badley (Wellington, 1998); 6 as op.7 (1763), 3 ed. A. Badley (Wellington, 1997–8); 6 as op.8 (1763), 2 ed. in The Symphony 1720–1840, ser. C, iii (New York, 1984), 5 ed. A. Badley (Wellington, 1997) [1 by F.X. Richter, ed. in DTB, iv, Jg.iii/1 (1902)]; 3 as op.11 (*c*1771–2) [first pubd in VI sinfonie … intitolate La melodia germanica … da vari autori, op.11 (1758)], 1 ed. in DTB, iv, Jg.iii/1 (1902), 1 ed. in DTB, xiii, Jg.vii/2 (1906); 1 as Simphonie périodique, pubd La Chevardière no.12 (1760); 1 as Simphonia, pubd Huberty no.9 (1762); 30 in MS, incl. A-LA, ST, Wgm, B-Bc, CH-Bu, CZ-Pnm, D-Bsb, DO, DS, HR, Rtt, RUl, SWl, F-CSM, S-Skma, US-Wc, 2 ed. in Corona, xxxviii (1957), nos.2–3 [no.1 by A. Mahaut]

10 orch trios (all ed. A. Badley, Wellington, 1995): 6 sonates à 3 parties concertantes, 2 vn, bc, op.1 (1755), ed. in Collegium musicum, i–vi (Leipzig, 1903), 1 ed. in DTB, iv, Jg.iii/1 (1902), 2 ed. C. Döbereiner (Mainz, 1936–7); 1 in VI sinfonie ... da vari autori, op.9 (1757), ed. in Collegium musicum, xlix (Leipzig, 1911); 2 in Six symphonies, op.4 (1758), 1 ed. in Collegium musicum, xlviii (Leipzig, 1911); 1 in Six symphonies ... de différents auteurs, op.5 (1759), ed. in Collegium musicum, vii (Leipzig, 1904)

Concs.: 6 for vn (Paris, 1763–4), nos.3–5 lost, but probably preserved in MSS in CZ-K, S-Skma; 8 for vn, A-ST, CZ-K, Pnm, D-Dl, DO, S-Skma, US-Wc, 1 ed. in Concertino (1964), 1 ed. W. Lebermann (Locarno, 1965); 4 for vn extant only in alternate versions, incl. 3 for fl (1 of which also arr. for va D-EB), 1 for ob [see below]; 1 for fl (London, *c*1770), ed. W. Lebermann (London, 1961); 3 for fl, D-KA, Rtt, F-Pc [also listed as vn concs. in Breitkopf catalogue (1762)], 1 ed. in EDM, 1st ser., li (1964); 8 for fl, A-LA, CH-EN, D-KA, Rtt, RH, 1 ed. H. Kölbel (Zürich, 1966); 1 for ob [also listed as vn and fl concs. in Breitkopf catalogues (1762–3)], ed. H. Töttcher and H.F. Hartig (Hamburg, 1957); 1 for cl, Rtt, ed. in Concertino (1967); ?4 for kbd in Six Concertos ... by J. Stamitz (London, *c*1775) [no.4 by J.J. Agrell, no.6 by J.G. Lang; probably incl. 2 hpd concs. listed in catalogues of La Chevardière (*c*1763–4)], 1 (also pubd The Hague, *c*1767) ed. K. Schultz-Hauser (Mainz, 1981) and R. Walter (Vienna, 1986)

Other orch: 2 pastorellas, Rtt; 12 minuets, 13 polonaises, A-Wn, SK-TR, doubtful

CHAMBER

Trios: 6 for vn, fl, bc (n.d.); 1 for vn, fl, bc, B-Bc; 4 for 2 vn, bc, CZ-Pnm, D-DS, KA, S-Skma; 2 for 2 fl, bc, B-Bc, D-HR; 1 for ob, vn, bc, US-Wc

Sonatas: 6 sonate da camera, vn, bc, op.6 (*c*1759), facs. in ECCS, v (1991) [also as 6 Solos (London, *c*1767)], 1 ed. in DTB, xxviii, Jg.xvi (1915), 1 ed. in MAB, xxviii (1956), 1 ed. in Böhmische Violinsonaten, ed. S. Gerlach and Z. Pilková, i (Munich, 1982); 5 for vn, bc, B-Bc, F-Pc; ?6 for vc, bc, D-SWl, doubtful; ?1 for vn, hpd (London, *c*1770) [also attrib. C.H. Graun, J.G. Neruda]

Other chbr: 2 divertissements en duo, vn solo (1762), ed. E. Zetlin (New York, 1949); 6 fl duets (London, *c*1775); caprices, vn solo, A-Wgm, Wn, D-Bsb, Rome, Fondo Monachesi, doubtful; 8 minuets, 1 polonaise, D-DS, doubtful

VOCAL

Liturgical: Mass, D, 4vv, chorus, orch, org, A-Gd, D-Bsb, I-MOe, ed. in DTB, new ser., iii (1980); Kyrie–Gloria, 4vv, orch, org, CZ-ME; Litanie lauretanae, D, 4vv, 2 vn, 2 clarini, b, org, Pnm; Lytaniae lauretanae (Solenne), C, 4vv, 2 vn, b, org, CZ-ME, Pnm, SK-Mms; Offertorium [Motetto] de venerabili sacramento, 4vv, orch, org, CZ-Pak, Psj, SK-Mms, ed. in DTB, new ser., iii (1980)

Other vocal: Cantata, B solo, orch, D-F; Aria de omni tempore, S, orch, CZ-Pnm

Lost works incl. at least 10 syms.; 5 partitas; 1 pastorella, vn obbl; ?7 vn concs.; fl conc.; ?1 hpd conc.; 3 vn sonatas; vn sonata, hpd obbl, doubtful; Omni die, aria, B solo, orch

BIBLIOGRAPHY

BurneyGN; NewmanSCE; WalterG

M. Brenet: Les concerts en France sous l'ancien régime (Paris, 1900/R)

H. Riemann: Introduction to DTB, iv, Jg.iii/1 (1902/R); xiii, Jg.vii/2 (1906/R); xxviii, Jg.xvi (1915/R)

L. Kamieński: 'Mannheim und Italien', SIMG, x (1908–9), 307–17

G. Cucuel: La Pouplinière et la musique de chambre au XVIIIe siècle (Paris, 1913)

P. Gradenwitz: Johann Stamitz, i: Das Leben (Brno, 1936); ii: Thematischer Katalog (MS, copies at US-NYp and Frankfurt, RISM)

P. Gradenwitz: 'The Symphonies of Johann Stamitz', MR, i (1940), 354–63

A. Pospíšil: Kolem Jana Václava Stamice (Havlíčkův Brod, 1947)

P. Gradenwitz: 'The Stamitz Family: some Errors, Omissions, and Falsifications Corrected', Notes, vii (1949–50), 54–64

P. Nettl: Der kleine Prophet von Böhmisch-Broda (Esslingen, 1953)

R. Schaal: 'Johann Stamitz' Mannheimer Bestallung von 1750', Mf, vi (1953), 158–9

P. Gradenwitz: 'Johann Stamitz als Kirchenkomponist', Mf, xi (1958), 2–15

E. Schmitt: Die kurpfälzische Kirchenmusik im 18. Jahrhundert (diss., U. of Heidelberg, 1958)

R. Münster: 'Vier Musiker der Mannheimer Schule', Musica, xiv (1960), 488–91

F. Noack: 'Die Steinmetz-Manuskripte der Landes- und Hochschulbibliothek Darmstadt', Mf, xiii (1960), 314–17

P. Mechlenburg: Die Sinfonie der Mannheimer Schule (diss., U. of Munich, 1963)

B. Štědroň: 'Zur Nationalität von Jan Václav Stamic', BMw, vi (1964), 16–28

J. Sochr: 'Dokumenty vydávají svědectví' [Documents as testimony], HRo, xix (1966), 718–19

J. Sochr: Jan Václav Stamic: život a dílo [Life and works] (Havlíčkův Brod, 1967) [exhibition catalogue]

H.-R. Dürrenmatt: Die Durchführung bei Johann Stamitz (Berne, 1969)

H. Hell: Die neapolitanische Opernsinfonie in der ersten Hälfte des 18. Jahrhunderts (Tutzing, 1971)

E. Wellesz and F. Sternfeld, eds.: The Age of Enlightenment, 1745–1790, NOHM, vii (1973)

E.K. Wolf and J.K. Wolf: 'A Newly Identified Complex of Manuscripts from Mannheim', JAMS, xxvii (1974), 379–437

W. Huschke: 'Johann Stamitz (1717–1757): die Ahnenschaft des Komponisten und ihre Beziehungen zum Regensburger Raum', Genealogie: deutsche Zeitschrift zur Familienkunde, xii (1976–7), 193–202

H. Scharschuch: 'Johann Stamitz', AMw, xxxiii (1976), 189–212

E.K. Wolf: 'Authenticity and Stylistic Evidence in the Early Symphony: a Conflict in Attribution between Richter and Stamitz', A Musical Offering: Essays in Honor of Martin Bernstein, ed. E.H. Clinkscale and C. Brook (New York, 1977), 275–94

E. Schmitt: Foreword to DTB, new ser., iii (1980)

E.K. Wolf: 'On the Origins of the Mannheim Symphonic Style', Studies in Musicology in Honor of Otto E. Albrecht, ed. J.W. Hill (Kassel, 1980), 197–239

E.K. Wolf: The Symphonies of Johann Stamitz: a Study in the Formation of the Classic Style (Utrecht, 1981)

P. Gradenwitz: Johann Stamitz: Leben – Umwelt – Werke (Wilhelmshaven, 1984)

E.K. Wolf and J.K. Wolf: Introduction to The Symphony at Mannheim: Johann Stamitz, Christian Cannabich, The Symphony 1720–1840, ser. C, iii (New York, 1984)

E.K. Wolf: 'The Orchestral Trios, Op.1, of Johann Stamitz', Music in the Classic Period: Essays in Honor of Barry S. Brook, ed. A.W. Atlas (New York, 1985), 297–322

L. Finscher: 'Mannheimer Orchester- und Kammermusik', Die Mannheimer Hofkapelle im Zeitalter Carl Theodors, ed. L. Finscher (Mannheim, 1992), 141–76

C. White: From Vivaldi to Viotti: a History of the Early Classical Violin Concerto (Philadelphia, 1992)

S. Kunze: Die Sinfonie im 18. Jahrhundert: von der Opernsinfonie zur Konzertsinfonie, Handbuch der musikalischen Gattungen, i, ed. S. Mauser (Laaber, 1993)

M.H. Schmid: 'Typen des Orchestercrescendo im 18. Jahrhundert', Untersuchungen zu Musikbeziehungen zwischen Mannheim, Böhmen und Mähren im späten 18. und frühen 19. Jahrhundert, ed. C. Heyter-Rauland and C.-H. Mahling (Mainz, 1993), 96–132

E.K. Wolf: 'Driving a Hard Bargain: Johann Stamitz's Correspondence with Stuttgart (1748)', Festschrift Christoph-Hellmut Mahling zum 65. Geburtstag, ed. A. Beer, K. Pfarr and W. Ruf (Tutzing, 1997), 1553–70

(2) Carl (Philipp) Stamitz (b Mannheim, bap. 8 May 1745; d Jena, 9 Nov 1801). Composer and violinist, viola player and viola d'amore player, son of (1) Johann Stamitz. He was a leading member of the second generation of Mannheim orchestral composers, a widely travelled performer and a major contributor to the literature of the symphonie concertante and concerto.

1. LIFE. Carl Stamitz received his earliest musical training in Mannheim from his father, but was only 11 when his father died. His subsequent teachers were other court musicians: Christian Cannabich, Ignaz Holzbauer and F.X. Richter. Extant orchestral lists include Stamitz as a violinist with the electoral orchestra from 1762 to 1770, a position that enabled him to learn the contemporary Mannheim repertory and master a brilliant performing technique.

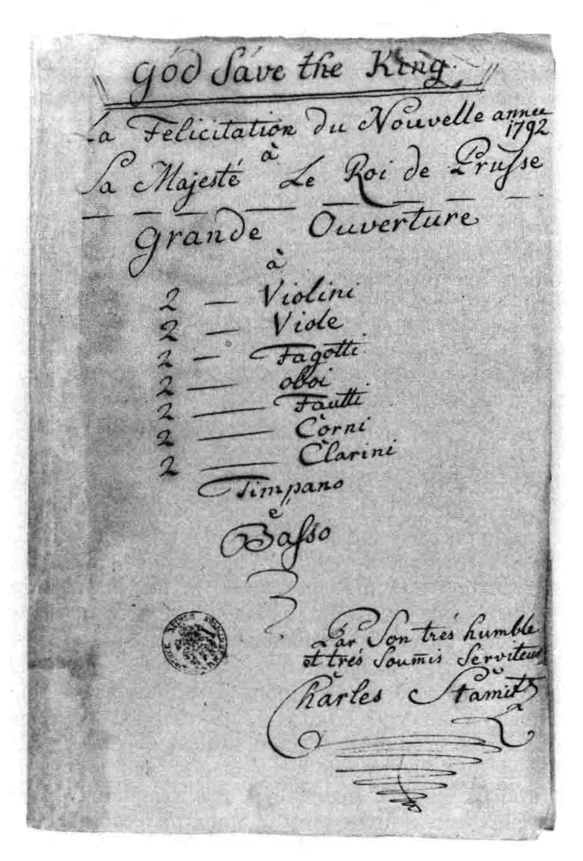
In 1770 Stamitz went to Paris, stopping en route to perform in Mons. By 1771 he was court composer and conductor for Duke Louis of Noailles in Paris, where he came in contact with such musicians as Gossec, Leduc, Sieber and Beer. In addition to publishing many new compositions in Paris, both Stamitz and his brother (3) Anton were active performers at the Concert Spirituel in the 1770s. Between 1771 and 1773 the Mercure de France reported appearances of both brothers as well as performances of their compositions, but often without distinguishing clearly between Carl and Anton. In summer 1772 Stamitz lived at Versailles, where he composed La promenade royale, the first of several programme symphonies. During his tenure with the Duke of Noailles, journeys as a virtuoso took him in 1772 to Vienna, in 1773 to Frankfurt, and in 1774 to Augsburg, Vienna and also Strasbourg, where he published six quartets and delivered compositions to Ignaz von Beecke for Prince Kraft Ernst von Oettingen-Wallerstein. Carl or possibly Anton performed again at the Concert Spirituel on 2 February, 25 March and 7 April 1775; the Mercure de France described a concert on 24 December 1775 at which a 'grande symphonie nouvelle de M. Stamitz l'aîné' was performed with the composer himself as one of the brilliant violinists. Additional references occur until March 1777. Stamitz's years of relative security had come to a close; henceforth he lived the life of a travelling virtuoso, never holding an important permanent position.



Stamitz's departure from Paris has not been precisely documented, but newspaper advertisements show that he was an active performer in London at least from May 1777 until 1780, often in association with J.C. Bach. On 6 April 1778 he gave a benefit concert of his own at the King's Theatre. While in London he published many compositions, especially chamber works, continuing to list himself as composer to the Duke of Noailles. Some time after 1780 he moved to The Hague, where between May 1782 and July 1784 he appeared, primarily as a viola soloist, in no fewer than 28 concerts at the court of William V, Prince of Orange. The concert on 23 November 1783 featured not only Stamitz but Beethoven (aged 12), who played the piano and received a higher payment than his older colleague. Many compositions written by Stamitz during this period were published by B. Hummel of The Hague.

By April 1785 Stamitz had arrived in Hamburg, where he gave two academies. In August he performed in Lübeck, returning to Hamburg for two final concerts in the autumn. On 17 April 1786 he was in Magdeburg; he then went to Leipzig and to Berlin, where on 19 May 1786 he joined J.A. Hiller in directing a performance of Handel's Messiah in the cathedral. At this time, according to Gerber, Stamitz negotiated a contract (as yet undiscovered) with the King of Prussia that guaranteed payment for any work composed by him for the Berlin court. Nor is there conclusive evidence to support Gerber's claim that in 1787 Stamitz held the title of Kapellmeister to the Prince of Hohenlohe-Schillingsfürst, although it is found on a printed concert announcement of 1792 and in his death notice.

In 1787 Stamitz travelled widely, performing as a viola player in Dresden, Prague and Halle, and appearing in Nuremberg on 3 November 1787 for a performance of his musical allegory on the occasion of Blanchard's balloon ascent. Concert reviews from 1788 and 1789 report his appearance as a viola player in Kassel. In 1789 he became director of the Liebhaber concerts there, a position he retained until April 1790.

Some time before 1790 Stamitz married Maria Josepha Pilz (b 1764; d Jena, 17 Jan 1801), and they settled in Greiz, Voigtland, where their first son was born in August 1790. The birth of a daughter by July 1792 and the illness of his wife prevented him from travelling extensively, and he tried unsuccessfully to obtain a permanent court position from Friedrich Franz I, Duke of Mecklenburg-Schwerin. He continued to earn what little he could by sending compositions to the King of Prussia (fig.3), the Prince of Orange, the court at Schwerin and the court of Oettingen-Wallerstein, and succeeded in arranging two concerts, one on 12 November 1792 at the Hoftheater in Weimar, the other on 19 March 1793 in Leipzig. Letters to Breitkopf on 30 April and 6 May 1793 seeking help in producing operas and concerts or in finding a permanent position in Leipzig were of no avail.

A trip back to Mannheim before spring 1795 brought a variety of commissions, as mentioned in Stamitz's letter to Breitkopf of 28 May 1795 from Jena, where he had moved with his family to become Kapellmeister and

God Save the King
La Felicitation du Nouvelle année 1792
à
Sa Majesté Le Roi de Prusse
Grande Ouverture
à
2 — Violini
2 — Viole
2 — Fagotti
2 — oboi
2 — Flautti
2 — Corni
2 — Clarini
Timpano
e
Basso
Par Son très humble et très Soumis Serviteur
Charles Stamitz

3. Title-page, in the composer's hand, of Carl Stamitz's 'Grande ouverture: God Save the King', 1791 (D-Bsb KHM 5308)

teacher of music at the university. This post was not sufficient to settle his affairs, however, and he sent compositions as far as Wales and Russia in hope of compensation. Stamitz even planned a concert tour to St Petersburg, but the letter sanctioning the trip did not arrive until after his death. Two sons born in Jena, like Stamitz's other children, died in childhood.

Despite Stamitz's earlier fame and his plans for grandiose concerts and travels – and even attempts at alchemy – his debts at the time of his death were so great that his possessions had to be auctioned. A printed catalogue of his music manuscripts was published for a separate auction in 1810, but the mode of the times had changed, and the music was neither bid for nor bought privately. The collection remained in Jena until 1812, but since then has disappeared.

2. WORKS. Stamitz composed nearly as many chamber as orchestral works, but his reputation as a composer derives principally from the latter. His over 50 symphonies, 38 symphonies concertantes and more than 60 concertos make him the most prolific orchestral composer from Mannheim. On the whole his compositions reflect his Mannheim heritage, as seen in their idiomatic treatment of the orchestra, dynamic effects, homophonic texture, contrasting thematic types and specific Mannheim melodic clichés. Yet his years in Paris and London fostered the bulk of his compositions – in particular the popular symphonie concertante – and such characteristics of his style as pervasive lyricism and ease of melodic flow (often bordering on the superficial) place his music in a more cosmopolitan context than that of Mannheim alone.

Stamitz's instrumentation is standard for the time, but exceptions to the norm do occur: the Masquerade Symphony (*c*1781) employs an expanded percussion section to simulate Turkish music, and there are two works for double orchestra. Unlike his father, over half of whose symphonies are in four movements, Stamitz adopted the three-movement Italian pattern (fast–slow–fast) in almost all his extant orchestral works: only four symphonies use a minuet and trio as third movement (two others are programmatic works with relatively free structure), and eight of the 28 surviving symphonies concertantes are in two movements, a plan common in this genre, rather than three.

Stamitz's earliest symphonies date from his Mannheim years, and the last from Greiz in 1791. Like his contemporaries at Mannheim, he generally cast his first movements and finales in binary sonata form (like sonata form but with only partial recapitulation), often without repeat signs. 12 of his symphonies have slow introductions; in the early and middle-period symphonies there is often a rhythmic or motivic relationship between the introduction and first movement. In first movements Stamitz made relatively consistent use of contrasting secondary themes in the dominant, commonly set off by a reduction in orchestration and often featuring wind instruments in 3rds. Development sections are seldom extensive, and they tend to avoid concentrated reworking of material from the exposition; instead, they are closely linked formally to the recapitulation and frequently introduce episodic material. A few symphonies omit developments entirely. Most of Stamitz's recapitulations begin with the second theme, though examples of full recapitulation can be found in symphonies throughout his career.

Stamitz's second movements were praised by his contemporaries for their lyricism and expressiveness. Sentimental appoggiaturas are frequent, and over a quarter of these movements are in minor keys. Simple binary and binary sonata structures are typical. Stamitz's last movements resemble his first in form except in the case of seven symphonies that close with rondos.

Of Stamitz's 38 known symphonies concertantes, 30 call for two solo instruments (most often a pair of violins or a violin and cello), the others as many as seven. First movements follow the basic ritornello structure common in the 18th-century solo concerto, with three or four tutti sections in various keys framing modulatory or recapitulatory solo sections. Stamitz used two types of finale: the norm is a rondo, but in five works there are minuets and trios, adapted in various ways to incorporate the soloists. He used rondos in his orchestral works more often than other composers from Mannheim, presumably a result of his extensive contact with French music during the 1770s.

Stamitz wrote solo concertos for a wide range of instruments, including violin (15), clarinet (10), flute (8) and bassoon (7); many of these works are lost. His orchestral and chamber compositions for viola d'amore, an instrument with which the composer was especially identified, are historically important for their use of all seven strings, double and triple stops, left-hand pizzicato and harmonics.

WORKS

printed works published in Paris unless otherwise stated

ORCHESTRAL

Syms. [thematic catalogue of syms. and symphonies concertantes in DTB, iv, Jg.iii/1 (1902)]: 3 as op.2 (1768), lost, but nos.1 and 3 in MS in D-Bsb, Rtt; 6 as op.6 (1771) [also as opp.15, 16]; 6 as op.9 (1772); La chasse (1772) [with added movt, Rtt]; 3 as op.15 (1776); 6 as op.13 (London, 1777) [also as op.16], 2 ed. in DTB, xv, Jg.viii/2 (1907); 3 as op.24 (The Hague, 1786); 3 as op.25 (The Hague, *c*1787); 4 in anthologies (Paris and Liège, 1773–6); A Grand Overture (London, *c*1790); 13 further syms. in MS, incl. La promenade royale, 1772, Masquerade, *c*1781, Sinfonia a due cori, Grande ouverture: God Save the King (1791), A-KR, CZ-Pnm, D-Bsb, Rtt, Swl, WRtl, US-Wc; ?3 lost, incl. 1 advertised 1775

Symphonies concertantes (only solo insts indicated): 9 for 2 vn: 8 (1773–6), incl. no.9, ed. F. Kneusslin (Zürich, 1947), no.16, ed. F. Schroeder (Hamburg, 1959), 1 as op.18 no.2 (*c*1776) and 3 lost, plus 1 in D-Bsb; 1 for vn, vn/vc (1774); 8 for vn, vc (1773–5); 2 for vn, va: 1 in BFb, 1 lost; 1 for vn, hn, lost; 1 for ob/fl, bn (1778), arr. for cl, bn, Rtt, ed. J. Wojciechowski (Hamburg, 1954); 4 for ob, bn: no.21 (*c*1780); 1 in CZ-Pnm, ed. W. Martin (Monteux, 1989) and in The Symphony 1720–1740, ser. C, iv (New York, 1984), also arr. for vn, va, CH-Bu, ed. F. Kneusslin (Basle, 1968); 2 lost, but 1 extant in arr. for cl, bn, PL-WRu; 1 for cl, vn/cl (*c*1777), ed. W. Lebermann [for 2 cl] (Frankfurt, 1968); 1 for bn, hn (n.d.), lost; 2 for 2 vn, va: no.7 (1774), 1 as op.18 no.1 (*c*1776); 1 for vn, va, vc (1774–5); 1 for 2 vn, vc (1773); 1 for 2 vn, va, vc, ?1774, D-Rtt; 1 for vn, ob/vn, va, bn/vc, op.14 (?1776); Echo symphony (Divertimento a 2 chori), ob/vn, vn, bn/vc, 2 hn, 1780, Bsb, DS, Rtt; Concerto per 7 stromenti principali, fl, ob, cl, 2 hn, vn, vc, A-Wgm, D-Bsb, SWl; 2 further works, 1 for 2 fl, 1 for 2 ob, lost

Concs.: 15 for vn: 2 as op.12 (1774), 1 ed. M. Hochkofler (London, 1957); 1, A (1776); nos.4, 5, 7 (1776–7); 4 in Mbs, 1 ed. D. Hellmann (Wiesbaden, 1971); 5 lost [6 others doubtful]; ?3 for va: no.1 (1774), ed. K. Soldan (Leipzig, 1937); no.2 (1774), lost, but extant in arr. for kbd, DO; 1 in Dl [movts 1 and 3 also attrib. Giornovichi]; 3 for va d'amore, A-Wgm, D-Bsb, SPlb [arr. from unknown original]; Sonata, va d'amore, orch, GB-Lbl; ?6 for vc: 1, C (1777), ed. P. Gradenwitz (Wiesbaden, 1965); 3 in D-Bsb, ed. in HM, lxxix, civ, cv (1951–3); ?2 lost; 8 for fl: 1, D (1775–7), ed. in EDM, 1st ser., li (1964); 1, E (1778–9); 1, G, op.29 (The Hague, n.d.), ed. in Concertino (Mainz, 1965); 1 in A-LA; 4 lost; ?1 for ob, PL-WRu, 1–3 others lost; 10 for cl: no.1 in 2 concertos (*c*1777) [no.2 by E. Eichner], ed. G. Balassa (Budapest and Zürich, 1970); no.3 (*c*1777); no.5 (*c*1780), ed. A. Badley (Wellington, 1999) [also for ob, D-HR, ed. J. Wojciechowski (Hamburg, 1963)]; no.6 (*c*1780); 1, E♭ (Berlin, 1793); 2 in A-Wn, ed. A. Badley (Wellington, 1999), 1 ed. J. Wojciechowski (Frankfurt, 1957), 1 ed. J. Michaels (Hamburg, 1958); 1 formerly in D-DS, ed. H. Boese (Leipzig, 1956); 1 in Rtt, ed. J. Wojciechowski (Hamburg, 1953); 1 in F-Pc, ed. G. Balassa (Mainz and Budapest, 1980); ?1 for basset-hn, D-BFb [1st movt also for bn, SWl]; ?7 for bn: 2 in SWl [1 with same 1st movt as basset-hn conc.], 1 ed. J. Wojciechowski (Hamburg, 1956) and D.J. Rhodes (Barrhill, Ayrshire, 1997), 1 ed. D.J. Rhodes (Barrhill, Ayrshire, 1998–9); 5 lost, advertised 1778–84; 3 for hn: 1, E (*c*1782–4) [attrib. G. Punto, *c*1789, apparently based on works by Stamitz], ed. in Concertino (Mainz, 1968); 2 lost; 2 for pf: 1 in CZ-Pnm, D-LB, ed. G. Rhau (Wiesbaden, 1948); 1 (1779), lost; 2 for hp, lost

Other orch: 8 orch qts (all ed. A. Badley, Wellington, 1995): 6 as op.1 (1770); 2 in 6 quatuors (Strasbourg, 1774), 1 ed. in DTB, xxviii, Jg.xvi (1915)

CHAMBER

thematic catalogue in DTB, xxviii, Jg.xvi (1915)

Larger ens: 7 parties, 2 fl, 2 ob, 2 cl, 2 bn, 2 hn, Dl; 6 minuets, 2 fl, 2 hn, 2 vn, b (London, *c*1777); 4 divertissements, 2 cl, 2 bn, 2 hn, op.21 (The Hague, n.d.), lost; 2 sextets, 2 hn, str, HR, SWl; 4 quintetti concertanti: 3 for ob/vn, 2 va, hn/vc, b as op.11 (*c*1775), 1 for str (*c*1775) [3 also pubd as str qnts, op.10; incl. arrs. of 6 quatuors concertantes, op.12 (1774)], 3 ed. H. Winschermann and F. Buck (Hamburg, 1966); 12 sérénades, 2 fl, bn, 2 hn, op.28 (The Hague, 1786) [also arr. kbd as op.26 (The Hague, 1789)], ed. W. Lebermann (Hamburg, 1961); 5 str qnts, 1 qnt for harp, 2 hn, 2 va, lost; 19 works for 10 wind insts, 1795, 16 works for wind insts, perc, 1801, 16 marches for 12 wind insts, all lost

Qts: 6 for str qt or orch, op.1 (1770), ed. A. Badley (Wellington, 1995); 6 for cl, vn, va, b, op.8 (1773), 1 ed. in HM, cix (1954), 1 ed. in DTB, xxvii, Jg.xv (1914), 2 ed. K. Janetki (London, 1958); 6 quatuors (Strasbourg, 1774) [incl. 2 orch qts, 2 qts for fl/ob/cl/vn, vn, va, vc; also as opp.4, 11, 14], ed. A. Badley (Wellington, 1995), 1 ed. in Concertino (Mainz, 1961), 1 ed. A. Ott (Munich, 1960); 6 quatuors concertantes, vn, 2 va, vc, op.12 (1774) [also as opp.2, 10, 15], no.6 ed. U. Drüner (Munich, 1978); 3 quartetti concertante, cl/vn, vn, va, b, op.12 (1775); 6 as op.19 (1779) [4 for cl, str, 2 for bn, str], no.1, E♭ (London, 1966), no.2 ed. D. Lasocki (London, 1971), no.3 ed. J. Kurtz (London, 1970), nos.5 and 6 ed. W. Waterhouse (London, 1967); 6 quatuors concertant, op.22 (1783); 1 for va d'amore, vn, va, vc [also for bn, str; anon.], D-SWl

Trios: 6 for 2 vn, b (1768), 1 ed. in DTB, xxviii, Jg.xvi (1915); 6 for 2 vn, b, op.2 (1770); 6 for 2 vn, b, op.7 (1777) [also as op.1]; 6 sonates en trio, hpd, vn, b, op.15 (1776); 6 for fl/vn, vc, op.14 (London, *c*1780) [also as op.17], 1 ed. in NM, xxxiii (1928/R), 1 ed. in Collegium musicum, lxx (Leipzig, 1938); 6 for fl/vn, vn, vc (London, *c*1785); 2 for vn/fl, vn, vc, op.16 (London, *c*1785) (together with 4 earlier trios; also as op.21]; 1 for fl/vn, vn, b, op.25 (Amsterdam, 1785) [together with 2 earlier trios]; 6 divertissements ou airs, arr. fl, vn, b (The Hague, n.d.); 1 for fl, fl/vn, vc, D-Bsb, ed. F. Schnapp (Kassel, 1939); 1 for 2 vn, vc, A-Wgm; 1 for hn, vn, vc, CZ-Pnm, ed. in Diletto musicale, cxcvii (Vienna, 1970)

Duos: 30 for vn, va: 6 as op.10 (*c*1773) [also as opp.1, 8], 2 ed. in Diletto musicale, cviii, cxix (Vienna, 1964); 3 as op.12 (Amsterdam, 1777); 6 as op.19 (*c*1778) [also for vn, vc; also as op.18], ed. A. Ott (Munich, 1955); 6 as op.34 (London, *c*1785) [also as op.19]; 6 as op.23 (The Hague, 1786) [also for 2 vn]; 2 Duos (London, n.d.); Grand duo (Offenbach, *c*1803); 15 sonatas, vn, kbd: 6 as op.15 (London, *c*1778) [also as op.20], 3 as op.17 (*c*1778), 6 in D-Dl; 6 fl/vn duets (London, ?1772); 6 Sonatas, vn/fl, vn (London, 1776); 6 vn duos (Amsterdam, *c*1778); Sonata, kbd, va obbl (London, *c*1778) [also as op.6], ed. W. Lebermann (Mainz, 1969); 3 Duets, vc, vn/vc (London, *c*1780); 6 fl/vn duos, op.27 (The Hague, 1785), ed. in NM, lxii, clxxviii (1930, 1954); 6 va duos, Bsb, ed. W. Lebermann (Mainz, 1955); Duo, va d'amore, vn/va, Bsb [also with orch conclusion], ed. K. Stumpf (Vienna, 1973); Sonata, va d'amore, b, A-Wgm, ed. in DTB, xxviii, Jg.xvi (1915); 6 further vn duets, doubtful

VOCAL

Dramatic: Der verliebte Vormund (Spl), before 1787, lost; Dardanus [Dardanens Sieg, oder Der Triumph der Liebe und Tugend] (grand op), *c*1800, lost

Other vocal: Mass, D, D-EB; 3 cants., solo vv, chorus, orch, music lost: Ein grosses allegorisches Stück (Nuremberg, 1787) [on the occasion of Blanchard's balloon ascent]; Teutsche Gefühle am Schluss des kriegevollen Jahrs 1794 (C.L. Schübler); Festgesang, 23 March 1801 [on the occasion of Tsar Aleksandr I's accession]; 4 ariettas or scenas, S, orch, A-Wgm, D-HR, SWl; 2 soprano arias with variations, lost

BIBLIOGRAPHY

NewmanSCE; PierreH

H. Riemann: Forewords, DTB, xv, Jg.viii/2 (1907/R); xxvii, Jg.xv (1914/R)

F. Waldkirch: Die konzertanten Sinfonien der Mannheimer im 18. Jahrhundert (Ludwigshafen, 1931)

A. Schering: 'Fünf Briefe von Karl Stamitz: Bruchstücke einer Selbstbiographie', Festschrift Fritz Stein, ed. H. Hoffmann and F. Rühlmann (Brunswick, 1939), 57–65

P. Gradenwitz: 'The Stamitz Family: some Errors, Omissions, and Falsifications Corrected', Notes, vii (1949–50), 54–64

H. Heussner: Review of H.J. Schaefer and others: Theater in Kassel (Kassel, 1951), Mf, xv (1962), 287–9

F.C. Kaiser: Carl Stamitz (1745–1801): biographische Beiträge, das symphonische Werk, thematischer Katalog der Orchesterwerke (diss., U. of Marburg, 1962)

J. Záloha: 'Drei unbekannte Autographe von Karl Stamitz in der Musikaliensammlung in Český Krumlov', Mf, xix (1966), 408–11

M. Rosenblum: 'The Viola d'amore and its Literature', The Strad, lxxviii (1967), 250–53, 277

M. de Smet: La musique à la cour de Guillaume V, Prince d'Orange (1748–1806) (Utrecht, 1973)

E. Wellesz and F.Sternfeld, eds.: The Age of Enlightenment, 1745–1790, NOHM, vii (1973)

D. Thomason: A Discussion of the Viola d'Amore Music of Karl Stamitz (n.p., 1979)

M. Jacob: Die Klarinettenkonzerte von Carl Stamitz (Wiesbaden, 1991)

C. White: From Vivaldi to Viotti: a History of the Early Classical Violin Concerto (Philadelphia, 1992)

D.R. Rhodes: 'Carl Stamitz and the Mecklenburg-Schwerin Court at Ludwigslust', Musik in Mecklenburg, ed. K. Heller, H. Möller and A. Waczkat (Hildesheim, 1999), 489–510

(3) Anton (Thadäus Johann Nepomuk) Stamitz (b Německý Brod [now Havlíčkův Brod], 27 Nov 1750; d Paris or Versailles, between 1796 and 1809). Composer, violinist andviola player, son of (1) Johann Stamitz. He should not be confused with a brother, Johann Baptist (b Mannheim, 25 Nov 1754; bur. 20 Dec 1755). Anton was born during a family visit to Německý Brod. Johann Stamitz had returned to Mannheim in late March 1750, and his wife and new son presumably joined him there in 1751. Anton grew up at the electoral court and as a youth received violin instruction from his brother (2) Carl and from Christian Cannabich. He is listed in court almanacs as a violinist in the Mannheim orchestra in 1764–6 and again in 1770. The latter listing states that he was a supernumerary (Accessist), and it is probable that this was his status during the entire period 1764–70. In 1770 he moved to Paris with Carl. There, in addition to performing during the next 20 years, Anton composed the main body of his works – principally concertos (many for his own use), quartets, trios and duos. The first specific mention of Anton in Paris occurs in a report in the Mercure de France of the Concert Spirituel on 25 March 1772, when he played a violin and viola duo with Carl. Anton may also have appeared at other concerts between 1772 and March 1777 for which the Mercure de France gives only the surname 'Stamitz'. As a composer he is first explicitly mentioned in May 1777, when a symphonie concertante by him for oboe and bassoon was performed at the Concert Spirituel.

With Carl's departure for England in 1777, Anton figured more prominently in Parisian musical circles, appearing twice at the Concert Spirituel in 1778 as soloist in his own viola concertos. Between 24 December 1779 and 24 December 1787 five more concertos, one definitely by Anton and several of the others probably so, were played at these concerts. Mozart, who was in Paris in 1778, was evidently not favourably impressed with either Anton or Carl, for he wrote to his father from there (9 July):

Of the two Stamitz brothers only the younger one is here, the elder (the real composer à la Hafeneder) is in London. They indeed are two wretched scribblers, gamblers, swillers and adulterers – not the kind of people for me. The one who is here has scarcely a decent coat to his back.

Mozart's statements of this sort cannot always be taken at face value, but there is evidence that Anton had numerous debts, at least during the 1780s. Between September 1778 and 31 January 1780 Stamitz was violin instructor to Rodolphe Kreutzer at Versailles, receiving 18 livres monthly for 12 lessons. Many of his duos for string instruments were no doubt written in conjunction with his teaching, and as an instructor he gained fame when Kreutzer, aged 13, made a successful début playing a violin concerto of Anton's at the Concert Spirituel on 25 May 1780.

In 1782 the Almanach musical provided an address in Paris for Stamitz, but in the same year he probably moved to Versailles, for court records list him as a violinist with the musique du roi there from 1782 to 1789. At the same time various publications give Anton the title ordinaire de la musique du roi. With the Revolution in 1789 Stamitz dropped from sight. A news item from 1796 states that he was at that time in an asylum for the insane, having gone mad in 1789 (Lebermann). He must have died at some point between 1796 and 1809, for two letters from his widow, N. Bouchet de Grandpré, written in Paris in June and November 1809, explain that she is no longer receiving the pension of 800 livres granted at the death of her husband.

WORKS

all printed works published in Paris unless otherwise stated; names of publishers are included only when identification is ambiguous

ORCHESTRAL

thematic catalogue of symphonies and symphonies concertantes in DTB, iv, Jg.iii/1 (1902)

Syms.: 3 as op.1 (1783–4), 3 as op.2 (1784), 6 as op.3 (*c*1785–8), 3 as op.4 (*c*1788–93)

Symphonies concertantes: 1 for vn, vc (after 1783); 2 for 2 fl (1780), 1 ed. I. Gronefeld (Adliswil-Zürich, 1978), 1 ed. in Concertino (Mainz, 1967); 2 for ob, bn; 1 pubd Bérault (1776–7), 1 pubd Sieber (n.d.)

Vn concs.: 2 pubd Bérault, nos.2–3 (?1773–4); 1 pubd Girard, no.6 (*c*1776–7); 1 pubd Le Menu and Boyer, op.27 (1777); 4 pubd La Chevardière, [?no.2] (1778–9), nos.3–5 (1778/9–84); 3 pubd Durieu, no.4 (1778), no.5 (1778–80), no.8 (1778–80), latter ed. K. Schultz-Hauser (Zürich, 1967); 2 pubd Sieber, no.6 (*c*1782–6), no.15 (n.d.); 1 pubd Baillon, no.17 (before 1784)

Other concs.: 1 for va/vn, pubd La Chevardière (1777–9), ed. in Concertino (Mainz, 1970); 3 for va: no.3 (*c*1784–6), ed. in Concertino (Mainz, 1971); no.4 (*c*1784–6), ed. in NM, 238 (1973); 1 in CZ-KRa, ed. W. Martin (Monteux, 1988); 4 for fl: 1 pubd Bérault (1778), ed. in EDM, 1st ser., li (1964); 1 pubd Sieber, also Borrelly (n.d.) [solo part of latter attrib. 'Monsieur Bingley']; 2 in D-BFb; 3 for kbd as livre 1 (1782–3)

CHAMBER

thematic catalogue in DTB, xxviii, Jg.xvi (1915)

Str qts (pubd in sets of 6): op.28 (1778), op.29 (*c*1779–81), op.30 (*c*1778–9); livre 4 (*c*1779–81), 1 ed. in DTB, xxvii, Jg.xv (1914); livres 5–8 (*c*1782–6); livre 9 (*c*1787–8); 1 ed. in DTB, xxvii, Jg.xv (1914)

Trios (pubd in sets of 6): 24 for vn, b: op.1 (1772–3); op.4 (*c*1775), 1 ed. in DTB, xxviii, Jg.xvi (1915); livre 3 (1786–7) [incl. 3 for orch]; 6 pubd Sieber (?*c*1786–8); 12 for fl, vn, b: op.1 (1781), 6 pubd Sieber (1781–2)

Duos (pubd in sets of 6): 12 for 2 vn: op.8 (1777), op.9 (1777); 18 for vn, va: op.10 (*c*1777–9); 6 pubd Le Menu and Boyer (*c*1780), arr. for vn, vc, A-SEI; livre 4 [also listed in catalogues as livre 3] (1786); 12 for vn, vc: 6 pubd Bouin as livre 2 (?*c*1788), 6 pubd Boyer and Le Menu as livre 3 (*c*1780); 30 for 2 fl: [livre 1] (*c*1780), livres 3–4 (1783–5), op.1 (1785), livre 7 (1788–93)

Other chbr: 6 sonates, vn, b, op.11 (1776–82); facs. in ECCS, vi (1991); 12 airs mis en variations, vn, b (1776); Caprice de flûte en forme d'étude (*c*1785), ed. W. Lebermann (Frankfurt, 1974); hp sonata, listed in Breitkopf catalogue, 1781, lost; Nocturnes ou airs variés, vn, vc (1782), lost

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Hardy: Rodolphe Kreutzer (Paris, 1910)

M. Pincherle: 'La veuve d'Antoine Stamitz', Bulletin de la Société 'Union musicologique', iv (1924), 29–32

M. Pincherle: 'Antoine Stamitz et sa veuve', Feuillets d'histoire du violon (Paris, 1927), 110–17

W. Lebermann: 'Biographische Notizen über Johann Anton Fils, Johann Anton Stamitz, Carl Joseph und Johann Baptist Toeschi', Mf, xix (1966), 40–41

J. Sochr: Jan Václav Stamic: život a dílo [Life and works] (Havlíčkův Brod, 1967) [exhibition catalogue]

For further bibliography see (2) Carl Stamitz.

EUGENE K. WOLF (1), JEAN K. WOLF, EUGENE K. WOLF (2, text), FRITZ KAISER/EUGENE K. WOLF (2, work-list), EUGENE K. WOLF, JEAN K. WOLF (3)

Stampiglia, Silvio (b Civita Lavinia [now Lanuvio], nr Rome, 14 March 1664; d Naples, 27 Jan 1725). Italian librettist. His career was traced in fine detail by Pier-Caterino Zeno (brother of Apostolo Zeno) in 1733. His first published dramas were the oratorios S Stefano, primo re dell' Ungheria and La gioa nel seno d'Abramo, set by Lanciani in 1687 and 1690 respectively, and in the latter year he took the name Palemone Licurio in the Arcadian Academy, of which he was a founder-member. His next oratorio, as well as his serenatas and operas of 1692–1702 (which began with reworkings of others' opera librettos), were written for two fellow Arcadians, Filippo Colonna and his brother-in-law Luigi della Cerda, Duke of Medinaceli. Xerse (1694) is the first opera libretto in which Stampiglia is identified as the adapter; he kept Minato's characters and story of 1654, but completely reworked the internal structure by shifting the focus to exit arias. The comedy that he retained (e.g. the befuddled behaviour of King Xerxes) is well known from performances of Handel's 1738 setting.

Stampiglia's first five original opera librettos were written for the Teatro di S Bartolomeo, Naples, in 1696–1702. They are playful in tone, with comic characters often mocking the nobles, who are unyielding in their devotion to Love despite the interference of old-fashioned (i.e. anti-Arcadian) melodramatic indignities, such as falling asleep and dreaming on stage, transvestism and imprisonments (which lead to melodramatic rescues). Such lively works established Stampiglia as the most successful and sought-after librettist of his day. His first opera, Il trionfo di Camilla, received 38 productions in 70 years; the three in London alone totalled 111 performances between 1706 and 1728. His second, La caduta de' Decemviri, received ten productions in 31 years. The most sensational in many ways was the third, Partenope, which was produced 41 times in 57 years. With music by Manuel de Zumaya for the theatre of the Viceroy of Mexico in 1711, it was the first Italian opera known to have been produced in the New World.

Alessandro Scarlatti set three of Stampiglia's first five operas, and many well-known composers reset them. Vinci reset his first four works in 1724–7, and Partenope was reset by both Handel and Vivaldi in the 1730s.

Driven from Naples by the War of the Spanish Succession (1701–14), Stampiglia moved to Rome, where he received commissions from Genoa, Rome, Naples and Prince Ferdinando de' Medici. By the end of 1706 he had been named imperial poet to Joseph I, partly as a result of the influence of his chief musical collaborator, Giovanni Bononcini, with whom he wrote 20 dramatic works. Stampiglia began at the splendid salary of 3000 florins (600 more than that of the other imperial poet, P.A. Bernardoni), which was later raised to 4000. During his four and a half years in the service of Joseph I he wrote four operas, eight serenatas and an oratorio, and he revised two of his earlier operas (Turno Aricino and his adaptation of Muzio Scevola) for revivals in Vienna. After Joseph I died on 17 April 1711, Stampiglia remained in Vienna until at least 1714 (and perhaps until 1718, when Apostolo Zeno replaced him), but Charles VI did not commission him to write any new works. Stampiglia retained the title of imperial poet when he returned to Italy, and he received commissions mainly from Viennese diplomats during his final years in Rome (?1718–22) and Naples (1722–5). His last three librettos are dated 1723; the only one that survives is the serenata Imeneo, which features a highly amusing mad scene at its climax. Among his 24 serentas and 13 oratorios, it is his only work known to have received numerous later productions as well as various new settings, including those by Handel in 1740 and Jommelli in 1765.

In 1725 Apostolo Zeno declared that Stampiglia was 'more ingenious than wise' ('più ingegnoso che dotto') and that his dramas manifested 'più di spirito che di studio'. Indeed, their zestful spirit is quite foreign to the formulaic opere serie that Zeno and other 'reformers' were writing from the 1690s onwards. Anna Mondolfi (ES) has observed that even Stampiglia's magnanimous heroes (e.g. Caius Graccus) make crude parodistic remarks. Thus his 13 operas seem to counter the purgative movement of his day, and as might be expected, his outdated comic scenes and other irregularities were often excised by the expurgatorial editors of revivals. They consequently removed some of the 'spirito' found in the originals, but they could not remove it all, which is presumably why Stampiglia's operas continued to receive new settings and stagings until, and even beyond, 1750. His son Luigi Maria was also a librettist, but seems to have been active mainly as an adapter and translator.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

SartoriL

P. Zeno: 'Elogio di Silvio Stampiglia romano', Giornale de' letterati d'Italia, xxxviii/2 (1733), 117–34

A. Zeno: Lettere (Venice, 2/1785), i, 317, 341, 412; ii, 341–2; iv, 21

A. von Weilen: 'Zur Wiener Theatergeschichte: die von Jahre 1629 bis zum Jahre 1740 am Wiener Hofe zur Aufführung gelangten Werke theatralischen Charakters und Oratorien', Mitteilungen des Österreichischen Vereins für Bibliothekswesen, ii (1898), suppl.

A. Koczirz: 'Exzerpte aus den Hofmusikakten des Wiener Hofkammerarchivs', SMw, i (1913), 278–303, esp. 286

M. Fabbri: Alessandro Scarlatti e il Principe Ferdinando de' Medici (Florence, 1961)

H.S. Powers: 'Il Serse trasformato', MQ, xlvii (1961), 481–92; xlviii (1962), 73–92

R. Freeman: 'The Travels of Partenope', Studies in Music History: Essays for Oliver Strunk, ed. H. Powers (Princeton, NJ, 1968), 356–85

H. Powers: 'Il Mutio tramutato, i: Sources and Libretto', Venezia e il melodramma nel Seicento: Venice 1972, 227–58

L. Lindgren: 'I trionfi di Camilla', Studi musicali, vi (1977), 89–160

L. Lindgren: 'Camilla and The Beggar's Opera', Philological Quarterly, lix (1980), 44–61

T. Griffin: The Late Baroque Serenata in Rome and Naples: a Documentary Study with Emphasis on Alessandro Scarlatti (diss., UCLA, 1983)

E. Kanduth: 'Silvio Stampiglia, poeta cesareo', L'opera italiana a Vienna prima di Metastasio: Venice 1984, 43–63

R. Strohm: Essays on Handel and Italian Opera (Cambridge, 1985)

C. Lampe: 'L'arcade Silvio Stampiglia da Civita Lavinia (1664–1725)', Eruditi e letterati del Lazio, ed. R. Lefevre (Rome, 1988), 107–20

S. Franchi: Drammaturgia romana, i–ii (Rome, 1988–97)

G. Staffieri: Colligite fragmenta: la vita musicale romana negli 'Avvisi Marescotti' (1683–1707) (Lucca, 1990)

L. Bianconi, ed.: I libretti italiani di Georg Friedrich Händel e le loro fonti, i: Da 'Vincer se stesso è la maggior vittoria' (1707) a 'L'Elpidia, overo Li rivali generosi' (1725) (Florence, 1992)

G. Audenino: Silvio Stampiglia, arcade e poeta bernesco (diss, U. of Rome, 1992–3)

T. Griffin: Musical References in the 'Gazzetta di Napoli', 1681–1725 (Berkeley, 1993)

A.M Romagnoli: 'Il "Turno Aricino" di Silvio Stampiglia nelle versioni musicali di Giovanni Bononcini e Francesco Mancini', Gli affetti convenienti all'idee: studi sulla musica vocale italiana, ed. M. Caraci Vela, R. Cafiero and A.M Romagnoli (Naples, 1993), 21–87

F. Piperno: 'Su le sponde del Tebro: eventi, mecenati e istituzioni musicali a Roma negli anni di Locatelli. Saggio di cronologia', Intorno a Locatelli: studi in occasione del tricentenario della nascita di Pietro Antonio Locatelli (1695–1764), ed. A. Dunning (Lucca, 1995), 793–877

LOWELL LINDGREN

Stamps, V(irgil) O(liver) (b nr Gilmer, TX, 18 Sept 1892; d Dallas, 19 Aug 1940). American publisher and composer of gospel hymns. After gaining experience with other publishing companies he established his own business, the V.O. Stamps Music Company, in Jacksonville, Texas, in 1924. Two years later he formed a partnership with J.R. BAXTER, renaming the business the Stamps–Baxter Music Company, and assumed the position of president. In 1929 the main office was moved to Dallas, and largely through Stamps's efforts Dallas became the chief centre for gospel music in the 1930s. Stamps was also a performer, and organized singing-schools, all-night singing sessions and the weekly radio programme the 'Singing Convention of the Air'. In addition to convention books and special collections for radio, television, and quartet performances, the company published hymnals in both round- and shape-note notation.

His brother, Frank Stamps (b Simpsonville, TX, 7 Oct 1896; d Dallas, 12 Feb 1965) established the Stamps Quartet Music Company in Dallas in 1945, publishing convention books and other song collections as well as a monthly magazine, Stamps Quartet News. In 1962 he sold it to the Blackwood Brothers Quartet and in 1964 it was sold to the Skyliters Recording Co. of Memphis.

See also GOSPEL MUSIC, §I, 2 and SHAPE-NOTE HYMNODY, §5.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

GroveA

C. Baxter and V. Polk: Biographies of Gospel Song Writers (Dallas, 1971)

S. Beary: The Stamps–Baxter Music and Printing Company: a Continuing American Tradition, 1926–1976 (diss., Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary, 1977)

SHIRLEY BEARY

Stamps-Baxter Music Company. See BAXTER, J.R..

Stancheva-Brashovanova, Lada. See BRASHOVANOVA, LADA.

Stanchinsky, Aleksey Vladimirovich (b Obolsunovo, Vladimir region, 9 March 1888; d nr Logachyovo, Smolensk region, 6 Oct 1914). Russian composer and pianist. He composed and performed his first compositions at the age of six. In 1899 he moved with his family to Logachyovo, a village near Novospasskiy where Glinka had collected folksong. From 1904 onwards, he made frequent visits to Moscow where he took private lessons with Josef Lhévinne and Konstantin Eiges (piano), Zhilyayev (harmony and counterpoint) and Grechaninov (composition). The latter introduced Stanchinsky to Sergey Taneyev; in 1907 he entered the Moscow Conservatory where he continued his studies with Taneyev and Igumnov (piano). At Taneyev's house Stanchinsky met Sabaneyev who 'instinctively felt that here was a victim of highly nervous and unbalanced temperament' (Sabaneyev, 1927). On the death of his father in 1908, Stanchinsky's creative flow temporarily ceased and he became subject to hallucinations and religious mania. He was confined to a clinic for a year and, despite periods of lucidity, he was pronounced incurable. When he resumed composition, his style was markedly more mature and freer from the influences detectable in his previous works. He became the rising star of Moscow musical circles and manuscript copies of his works were circulated by admirers. During 1910 it is known that he collected and wrote down folksongs in the Smolensk province, and around this time he appears to have formed some sort of acquaintance with Skryabin and Medtner. In late 1913 he resumed his studies with Eiges and in 1914 he performed some of his works in the Maliy Zal of the Moscow Conservatory; their favourable reception had a remedial effect on the composer's health. However, this turnaround occurred too late to avert catastrophe. In October 1914, returning to Logachyovo from a visit to the Crimea he wandered the countryside for several days and was found dead by a river. The exact circumstances of his death have never been ascertained. Medtner wrote his Three Pieces op.31 in memory of Stanchinsky while Anatoly Aleksandrov and Zhilyayev edited Stanchinsky's works. Many of these appeared separately in the 1920s and a complete edition of the piano pieces was issued in 1960.

Stanchinsky was initially very productive and his first works reflect a variety of influences. The first subject material of the sonata movement of 1906 is highly reminiscent of that of the opening movements of Skryabin's second and third sonatas, while the second subject is similar to many passages in Grieg's Lyric Pieces. In other earlier works there are harmonic progressions and nuances borrowed from folksong that recall the music of Musorgsky. The numerous preludes written during these years demonstrate a widening harmonic palette, increasing rhythmic inventiveness and a growing sensibility for polyphonic piano writing. In the Etude in G minor of 1907, the economical use of motifs goes beyond that found in the sonata movement, while subtle shifts of rhythmic emphasis transform motivic cells without changing their essential character. In his later works, written after 1908, Stanchinsky explored uncharted ground. His experiments with asymmetrical metres (such as in the second movement of the Second Piano Sonata, notated in 11/8) had only been hinted at by 19th-century Russian music. Phrasing became even more laconic, in a manner that at times anticipates neo-classicism. He relied less on harmonies defined by chromatic voice leading; instead, sections with no definable tonality are rudely juxtaposed with extended passages which occupy a single, usually pandiatonic, harmonic area. Like Stravinsky in the later 1910s, Stanchinsky made structural use of the tensions between diatonic, octatonic, whole-tone and other modal collections in works which employed the intonations of Russian folksong as their primary melodic source (Eskizï, op.1). Perhaps the most striking aspect of the later works is the abundance of polyphonic writing: the finest examples are to be found in the Tri prelyudii v forme kanonov ('Three Preludes in Canonic Form', 1913–14). Here, his obsession with 'objective', formalized musical structures reaches its apex; the vibrant yet selfless spirit of these strictly canonic works were not matched again until Nancarrow's experiments of the 1940s. It is generally acknowledged that Stanchinsky's early death deprived Russian music of a figure of very considerable stature.

WORKS

Pf: Mazurka, D♭, 1905; Sonata, e♭, 1906 [1 movt]; Etyud, g, 1907; Etyud, f, 1907, Mazurka, g♯, 1907; Noktyurn, c♯, 1907; 3 prelyudii, c♯, D, e♭, 1907; 2 prelyudii, c, ab, 1907*; Etyud, B, 1908–10; Prelyudiya, E, 1908; Prelyudiya v lidiyskom ladu [Prelude in the Lydian Mode], 1908; Kanon, b, 1909; 2 prelyudii, b♭, b, 1909*; Prelyudiya i fuga, g, 1909; 12 ėskizï, op.1, 1911–?13; 3 ėskizï, 1911–?13 [possibly intended for op.1 set]; Variatsii, a, 1911; Prelyudiya, c, 1911–12*; Sonata no.1, F, 1911–12; Allegro, F, op.2, 1912 [originally intended as finale of Sonata no.1]; Sonata no.2, G, 1912; 3 prelyudii v forme kanonov [3 Preludes in Canonic Form], 1913–14; Prelyudiya: dvukhgolosnïy kanon v uvelichenii [Two-Voiced Canon in Augmentation], 1914

Other: 10 shotlandskikh pesen (R. Burns), 1v, pf, 1909; Pf Trio, ?1912 (1966); ?Sextet

Piano works published in A. Stanchinsky: sochineniya dlya fortep'yano (Moscow, 1960) [the preludes marked '*' are presented in this volume as a group of five]

BIBLIOGRAPHY

S. Prokofiev: 'A. Stanchinskiy: Eskizï dlya fortepiano' [Sketches for piano], Muzïka, cxlviii (1913), 602–3

L. Sabaneyev: Modern Russian Composers (New York, 1927), 190–94

M. Montagu-Nathan: 'Was he a genius?', Tempo, no.28 (1953), 23–5

I. Lopatina: 'Chertï stilya Stanchinskogo' [Features of Stanchinsky's style], Voprosï teorii muzïki, i (Moscow, 1976), 75–102

I. Romanshchuk: 'Dolgoye vozvrashcheniye' [A long return], SovM (1976), no.10, pp.102–4

L. Sitsky: Music of the Repressed Russian Avant Garde (Westport, CT, 1994), 27–37

J. Powell: After Scriabin: Six Composers and the Development of Russian Music (diss., U. of Cambridge, 1999), 37–58

JONATHAN POWELL

Standage, Simon (Andrew Thomas) (b High Wycombe, 8 Nov 1941). English violinist. He graduated in music from Cambridge University in 1963 and, through a Harkness Fellowship, went on to study with Ivan Galamian in New York. After his début at the Wigmore Hall in 1972, Standage became sub-leader of the English Chamber Orchestra (1974–8) and leader of the City of London Sinfonia (1980–89). From 1973 to 1991 he led Trevor Pinnock's period-instrument group the English Concert, with whom he recorded, among other works, Vivaldi's Four Seasons and the complete Haydn violin concertos. In 1981 he founded the Salomon Quartet, Britain's first significant quartet to use period instruments, with whom he has made many admired recordings of the Classical quartet and quintet repertory, including a complete cycle of Haydn quartets. Between 1991 and 1995, he was an associate director of the Academy of Ancient Music. In 1990 Standage founded Collegium Musicum 90, which has made some notable recordings, particularly of music by Telemann and Leclair; his three discs of Leclair's violin concertos well demonstrate his characteristic clarity of tone and intention. As a director his generosity towards his players makes for a congenial working relationship based on mutual respect. Standage became a professor at the RAM, London, in 1983 and at the Dresden Akademie für Alte Musik in 1993. He plays a late 17th-century Giovanni Grancino violin.

LUCY ROBINSON

Ständchen (Ger.: 'serenade'). Use of the word 'Ständerle' is documented as early as the 16th century in Freiburg (see W. Salmen: 'Zur Praxis von Nachtmusiken durch Studenten und Kunstpfeifer', Gesellschaftsgebundene instrumentale Unterhaltungsmusik des 18. Jahrhunderts: Eichstätt 1988, 33). The term 'Ständchen' first appeared in 1618 in Praetorius's Syntagma musicum (iii, 18) and later in Walther's Musicalisches Lexicon (1732). Ständchen are sung by Don Giovanni, and by Count Almaviva in Rossini's Il barbiere de Siviglia. At the beginning of the 19th century it became a fashionable term for songs with a piano accompaniment which tended to imitate figures characteristic of the guitar. Schubert's Leise flehen meine Lieder (Schwanengesang) is a famous example, and several more are found in the works of Brahms and Richard Strauss. The term was also applied to movements for male-voice chorus.

See also SERENADE.

HUBERT UNVERRICHT

Standford, Patric [Gledhill, John Patrick Standford] (b Barnsley, 5 Feb 1939). English composer and teacher. He learnt piano and violin at a Quaker boarding-school in Ackworth. After service in the RAF he entered the Guildhall School of Music, where he studied with Rubbra. A Mendelssohn scholarship enabled him to study with Malipiero in Venice (1964). A meeting with Lutosławski in Dartington (1965) led to a period of study with him. The Polish school stands behind such aleatory works as Notte (1968) and Cantico delle creature (1969, rev. 1992).

Standford taught composition at the GSM (1969–80) and in 1980 he was appointed head of music at Bretton Hall, Leeds University. The Symphony no.1 (1972) won the Premio Città di Trieste. Christus Requiem, which contains a vivid portrayal of the Crucifixion, won the Yugoslav Solidarity Award in 1973 and the Oscar Espla Prize in 1974. His Symphony no.4 (1976) is scored for two pianos and percussion, reflecting the composer's interest in Japanese music. His works often contain quotations from other composers, for example his Symphony no.5 the Mass of Our Lady and St Rochus (now called Mass for Hildegard of Bingen), which uses material from Hildegard of Bingen, and the New Messiah, which reworks Handel. His Piano Trio (1970) was admired by Lennox Berkeley and Alan Rawsthorne, and his String Quartet no.2 (1973) won the Clements Memorial Prize in 1976.

WORKS

Op: Villon (a curious tragedy, 3), 1996

Orch: Epigrams, chbr orch, 1964; Saracinesco, sym. poem, 1966; Suite, small orch, 1966, rev. as An English Suite, 1992; Nocturne, small orch, 1967; Notte, chbr orch, 1968; Celestial Fire, ballet suite, 1968; Antitheses, 15 str, 1971; Sym. no.1, 'The Seasons', 1972; Vc, Conc., 1974; Nocturne 1974; Vn Conc., 1975; Sym. no.2, 1976; Variations, 1977 [transcr. of pf work]; A Christmas Carol Sym., orch, 1978; Ballet Suite: Reflections, 1980; Invocation, tuba, str, 1980; Dialogues, cimb, orch, 1981; Folksongs [set 1], str, 1982; War Memorial, elegy for str, 1989; Folksongs [set 2], str, 1992; A Jersey Suite, 1994; Sym. no.6, 1994

Choral: 2 Carols for Christmas, SATB, 1962; Christus requiem orat, S, Mez, T, B, nar, SATB, children's choir, orch, 1972; How amiable are thy dwellings, SATB, 1972; Stabat mater, SSATBB, 1977 [from Christus Requiem]; 3 Motets, SATB, 1977; Psalm Dances, SAB, orch, 1977; De profundis, TTBB, pf, 1978; 2 Songs, TTBB, 1978; Ancient Verses (Phaedrus, A. Poliziano, Seneca the younger), SATB, perc, 1978; Mass, SATB, brass band, 1980; Ave maris stella, SSA, 1981; 2 Songs, SSA, 1982; Sym. no.3, 'Towards Paradise', SATB, orch., 1982; O sacrum convivium, SSATBB, 1985; Mass of our Lady and St Rochus [Mass for Hildegard of Bingen], SATB, 1989; orat after Handel, New Messiah, S, T, B, SATB, orch, 1992

Solo vocal: Gitanjali (R. Tagore), Mez, fl, cl, hn, vn, va, vc, hp, 1964; Wayward Thoughts (R. Herrick, Playford, Wever), Bar, pf, 1968; Cantico delle creature (St. Francis), high v, str, 1969, rev. 1992; Nursery Songs (trad.), S, Bar, ob, pf, 1979; Valentine Songs (Anon.), T, pf, 1984; Sym. no.5, S, orch, 1985; The Inheritor (U. Vaughan Williams), T, str qt, 1991

Chbr: Suite française, wind qnt, 1964; Str Qt no.1, 1965; Bagatelles, str qt, 1969; Peasant Songs, vn, pf, 1970; Pf Trio, 1970; 4 Preludes, bn, pf, 1970; Sonatine, rec, hpd, 1970; 3 Pieces, vc, pf, 1971, rev. 1993; Str Qt no.2 'In memoriam', 1973; Sym. no.4 'Taikyoku', 2 pf, perc, 1976; A London Suite, str qt, 1979; Holiday Memories, 2 vn, vc, 1979; Invocation, tuba, pf, 1982; 4 Cartoons, ob, cl, bn, 1984; Divertimento, vn, pf, 1985; 3 Nocturnes, pf, ob, vn, va, vc, 1986; Pf Qt, 1986; 3 Pieces, va, pf, 1986; Suite humoresque, ob, cl, bn, pf, 1987; Fanfares for Wakefield Cathedral, 3 tpt, 3 trbn, 1988; Fairground Music, 4 fl, 1993; Suite, after Bartók, va, pf, 1993; A Comedy Suite, 4 sax, 1994; 4 Miniatures, 3 rec, 1994; Str Qnt, 1994

Solo inst: Metamorphosis, org, 1969; Variations, pf, 1969; 6 Preludes, pf, 1970, rev. 1993; Sonata, pf, 1971; 3 Preludes, gui, 1973; Sonata, vn, 1974; O Haupt voll Blut, chorale prelude, org, 1976; Meditation on the Birth of the Holy Infant, org, 1977; 2 pieces, cimb, 1980; Faeries, pf, 1987; 6 Danish Folksongs, pf, 1994; A Bach Suite, pf, 1995

Principal publishers: RTS Music, Novello

BIBLIOGRAPHY

G. Larner: 'Patric Standford', MT, civ (1973), 253–6

L. East: 'Standford and his 5th Symphony', MT, cxxvii (1986), 18–20

DAVID C.F. WRIGHT

Standfuss, J(?ohann) C. (d after *c*1759). German composer. He was a violinist and répétiteur with G.H. Koch's theatre company about 1750, and wrote what is often regarded as the earliest German Singspiel. Despite Gerber's report that he died in a Hamburg hospital in 1756, he was presumably still alive in 1759, in which year two further Singspiele by him were first performed. Although the term 'Singspiel' had long been used in Germany for both comic and serious works, and by this period a flourishing Viennese tradition had been established, Standfuss's setting of C.F. Weisse's first version of Charles Coffey's The Devil to Pay, or The Wives Metamorphos'd (London, 1731) opened an era in the German musical theatre. Under the title Der Teufel ist los, oder Die verwandelten Weiber it was performed for the first time on 6 October 1752 in Leipzig by Koch's company. Coffey's original, in a translation by the former Prussian Ambassador to London, C.W. von Borck, had been given in Berlin nine years earlier, probably with the original English tunes; works on the subject were frequent in the 18th century. As Koch had some good singers in his company it is reasonable to assume that Der Teufel ist los was well performed. Not the least significant aspect of its success was the battle of pamphlets to which it gave rise, Gottsched and his adherents objecting in vain to the demise of good taste evinced by the comic Singspiel. A sequel, Der lustige Schuster, oder Der zweyte Theil vom Teufel ist los, based on Coffey's The Merry Cobler (London, 1735), appeared seven years later. Both parts of Der Teufel ist los were revised by C.F. Weisse and J.A. Hiller at Leipzig in 1766 and were published in vocal score there in 1770 and 1771 respectively.

Although Standfuss's scores have not survived, Hiller took over many of Standfuss's numbers into his own versions; in his preface to Der lustige Schuster Hiller spoke appreciatively of 'a certain gaiety, a not infelicitous expressiveness in the low comic vein, and now and again a witty touch' in Standfuss's music, the historical importance of which he clearly realized. The last of Standfuss's known works, the (lost) Singspiel Jochem Tröbs, oder Der vergnügte Bauernstand, to a libretto by an actor in Koch's company, was given in Hamburg on 17 September 1759. Two motets by Standfuss also survive (A-Wn); Gerber mentioned a third formerly owned by Rellstab, in Berlin.

WORKS

Der Teufel ist los, oder Die verwandelten Weiber (Spl, C.F. Weisse), Leipzig, 6 Oct 1752, lost; 12 pieces in J.A. Hiller, Die verwandelten Weiber (Leipzig, 1770)

Der lustige Schuster, oder Der zweyte Theil vom Teufel ist los (Spl, Weisse), Lübeck, 18 Jan 1759, lost; 32 pieces in J.A. Hiller, Der lustige Schuster (Leipzig, 1771)

Jochem Tröbs, oder Der vergnügte Bauernstand (J.C. Ast), Hamburg, 17 Sept 1759, music and text lost [also known as Der stolze Bauer Jochem Tröbs]

2 motets, in A-Wn; 1 motet, now lost, mentioned in GerberNL

BIBLIOGRAPHY

GerberNL

C.H. Schmid: Chronologie des deutschen Theaters (Leipzig, 1775); ed. P. Legband (Berlin, 1902), 102, 128, 157, 175

C.F. Weisse: Selbstbiographie, ed. C.E. Weisse and S.G. Frisch (Leipzig, 1806)

G. Calmus: Die ersten deutschen Singspiele von Standfuss und Hiller (Leipzig, 1908/R), 1–15

H.-A. Koch: Das deutsche Singspiel (Stuttgart, 1974)

T. Bauman: North German Opera in the Age of Goethe (Cambridge, 1985)

J. Krämer: Deutschsprachiges Musiktheater im späten 18. Jahrhundert: Typologie, Dramaturgie und Anthropologie einer populären Gattung (Tübingen, 1998)

PETER BRANSCOMBE

Standing, Francis. See CELLI, FRANK H.

Standish, Orlando [Rowland] [Stephenson, Rowland]. English writer on music and patron, active in Italy, son of EDWARD STEPHENSON.

Standley [Standly, Sandley] (*fl c*1450). ?English composer. He is presumed to be English on grounds of name, musical style and technique, and the manuscript context of his work. The two five-movement mass cycles both have Kyries that are untroped and too short to have been troped. Both have Credos with substantial (but apparently unsystematic) text omissions that do not easily lend themselves to restoration by telescoped setting. The composer avoided rhythmic differentiation between the voices; if the Strahov mass is based on a cantus prius factus, this is so assimilated by decoration to the style of the other parts that it resists identification. Consonant 3rd-based duet writing is fundamental to the moderately florid style of all these pieces. All this, together with the dates of the manuscripts, suggests that Standley belonged to the generation of Frye and Bedyngham. The Trent cycle employs an unprecedented canonic technique. Two parts only are notated; the lower is labelled both 'tenor' and 'contra', and the contra entry is cued by a signum congruentiae. But the canonic contra has to omit all notes below a certain (unspecified) pitch. The motet Que est ista is composed according to the same scheme and is in all ways a twin to the cycle; it therefore seems reasonable to assign it to Standley. Its text contains the words 'electa ut sol', which Loyan interpreted as a clue to this pitch exclusion. Virgo prefulgens is a setting of an otherwise unknown antiphon; the ascription of a false start to Binchois in a Trent manuscript (I-TRmp 92) can be set aside in favour of the strong stylistic and manuscript evidence supporting the Modena attribution (MOe α.x.1.11).

WORKS

Mass cycle, 3vv, ascribed 'Standley', I-TRmp 88, ed. in Loyan; tenor and contratenor canonic

Mass cycle, 3vv, ascribed 'Standly', CS-Pst D.G.IV.47, ed. in Snow; 3rd Agnus missing

Que est ista, motet, 3vv, anon. (but constructed as the cycle in I-TRmp 88), I-TRmp 89, ed. in Loyan

Virgo prefulgens avia, ant, 3vv, ascribed 'Sandley', I-MOe α.x. 1.11, ed. in Marix, pp.227ff; survives inc. in I-TRmp 92 ascribed 'Winchois'

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Marix, ed.: Les musiciens de la cour de Bourgogne au XVe siècle (1420–1467) (Paris, 1937/R)

R. Loyan, ed.: Canons in the Trent Codices, CMM, xxxviii (1967)

R.J. Snow: The Manuscript Strahov D.G.IV.47 (diss., U. of Illinois, 1968)

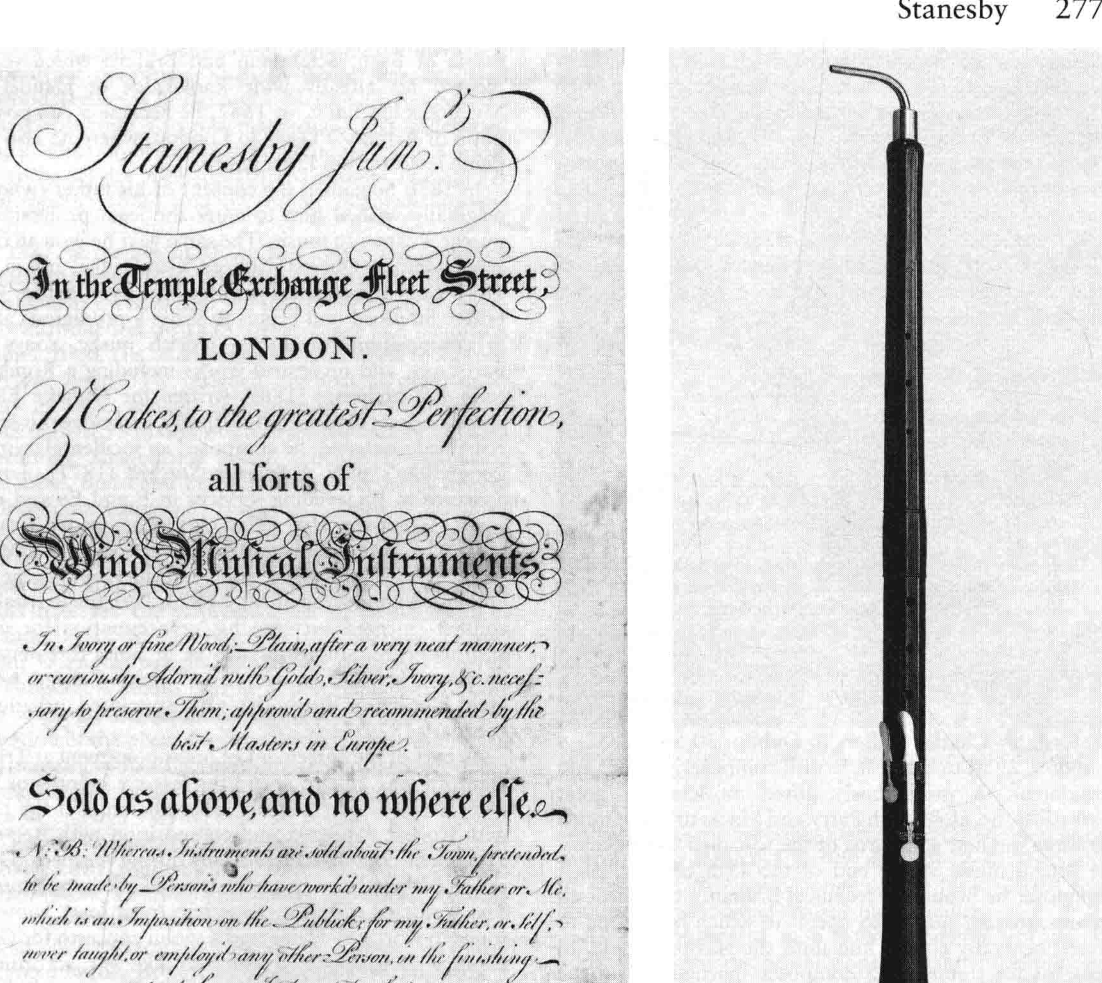
MARGARET BENT



Stand-up bass. A colloquial term for the DOUBLE BASS.

Stane. Composer mentioned by John Hothby, probably identifiable with STONE.

Stanesby. English family of woodwind instrument makers, working in London in the first half of the 18th century. With Bressan, the Stanesbys were responsible for most of the finest surviving English Baroque woodwind instruments. Thomas Stanesby (i) (*b c*1668; d London, July/Aug 1734) was the son of John Stanesby, yeoman of Moorly Lyme, Derbyshire. In 1682 he was apprenticed to Thomas Garrett. He married Mary Kilpin on 4 May 1690, and received the Freedom of the Turners' Company in 1691, whereupon he set up a modest establishment in Stonecutter Street, which led from Shoe Lane to the Fleet Market in the middle precinct of the parish of St Bride's. Stanesby and his son were registered as freemen in 1716. Surviving instruments bearing the father's mark include nine recorders, eight oboes and a bassoon.

In Burney's Account of the Musical Performances ... in Commemoration of Handel one reads that a 'Double Bassoon ... was made with approbation of Mr Handel, by Stanesby the flute-maker, for the coronation of ... George the second (1727) ... but ... no use was made of it at that time'. No such double bassoon by the elder Stanesby has survived, and Halfpenny has argued that this instrument and the '2 Grand or Double Bassoons ... made by Mr Stanesby Senior the greatness of whose sound surpasses that of any other Bass instrument whatsoever' announced as a feature of an evening concert at Marylebone Gardens in the London Daily Post for 6 August 1739 were made by Thomas (ii).

Thomas Stanesby (ii) (bap. London, 25 Dec 1692; d Brompton (now London), 2 March 1754) was apprenticed

Thomas Stanesby (ii): (a) trade card engraved by George Bickham (Heal Collection, GB-Lbl); (b) vox humana by Stanesby, London, first half of the 18th century (Victoria and Albert Museum, London) to his father in 1706 and set up his own establishment over the Temple Exchange in Fleet Street near St Dunstan-in-the-West soon after being released from his indenture in 1713. In 1728 he received the Freedom of the Turner's Company; in 1739 he was elected master. In 1734 he inherited all his father's tools and a seal ring. His first apprentice was William Sheridan, who came to him in 1737. The second, Caleb Gedney, joined him in 1741, and finished his apprenticeship in 1750. Stanesby married, but his wife died before him without bearing children. He left all his tools, materials and unfinished work to Gedney, who appears to have continued the business at the same address.

About 1732 Stanesby, sensing the impending eclipse of the recorder in professional music circles, issued A New System of the Flute à Bec or Common English Flute wherein he argued vigorously for the use of the 'C Flute' (tenor recorder in C) and presented a 'full and perfect' fingering chart. The demand for the transverse flute increased, however, and Stanesby made a considerable number of these. Halfpenny wrote that Stanesby signed himself 'junior' only up to 1732. He marked his instruments 'STANESBY IUNIOR' or 'STANESBY LONDON'; the mark 'MURAEUS' is added to the only surviving bassoon, which is dated 1747 (it was possibly repaired by the maker of that name).

The only surviving double bassoon is dated 1739 and is now in the National Museum in Dublin. Hawkins reported that Stanesby had read both Mersenne and Kircher, and had attempted to make a racket based on details given by Mersenne. Stanesby may have developed the vox humana, a type of tenor oboe, for which a scale of fingerings by him was issued posthumously. A vox humana by Stanesby has survived, and is now in the Victoria and Albert Museum, London (see illustration). Other surviving instruments include 38 flutes (of which 25 are ivory), two flutes d'amore, 16 recorders, five oboes and a bassoon.

Stanesby's later instruments show a simplification of the older Baroque exterior following the general trend toward the classical woodwind design. Typical examples are a few recorders showing a slender profile with a footpiece similar to those of transverse flutes of the time, omitting the bulbous bottoms of recorders made by himself, his father, and others a generation earlier. But this exterior change is not matched by a change in acoustical properties. His transverse flutes mostly follow the English design established by Bressan and his father; that is, all sockets open toward the headpiece. Makers in the rest of Europe had the head socket alone opening toward the foot, which facilitates the making of corps de rechange so frequently found with continental design flutes.

One of Stanesby's interesting trade cards has survived (Heal Collection, GB-Lbl; see illustration). It suggests that Stanesby enjoyed a reputation outside his own country.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

HawkinsH; Waterhouse-LangwillI; YoungHI
C. Burney: An Account of the Musical Performances ... in Commemoration of Handel (London, 1785/R)
E. Halfpenny: 'The English 2- and 3-keyed Hautboy', GSJ, ii (1949), 10–26
E. Halfpenny: 'The "Tenner Hoboy"', GSJ, v (1952), 17–27
E. Halfpenny: 'Stanesby, Major and Minor', ML, xxiv (1953), 41–7
E. Halfpenny: 'The English Baroque Treble Recorder', GSJ, ix (1956), 82–90
E. Halfpenny: 'Biographical Notices of the Early English Woodwind-Making School, *c*1650–1750', GSJ, xii (1959), 44–52
E. Halfpenny: 'Further Light on the Stanesby Family', GSJ, xiii (1960), 59–69
L.G. Langwill: The Bassoon and Contrabassoon (London, 1965)
M. Byrne: 'Some More on Stanesby Junior', GSJ, xlv (1992), 115–22

FRIEDRICH VON HUENE/R

Stanford, Sir Charles Villiers (b Dublin, 30 Sept 1852; d London, 29 March 1924). British composer, teacher and conductor. A prodigiously gifted musician of great versatility, he, along with Parry and Mackenzie, did much to forge the new standards of the so-called 'renaissance' in British music at the end of the 19th century. As a composer he brought a technical brilliance to almost all genres, though success in opera, in which he aspired to excel, generally eluded him until the end of his life. In spite of his stature as a composer (particularly in the province of church music), he is perhaps best known as a teacher of several generations of British composers who passed through his hands at the RCM and Cambridge University.

1. Life and work. 2. Style, influence.

1. LIFE AND WORK. The only child of John James Stanford, one of Dublin's most eminent lawyers, and his second wife, Mary (née Henn), who also originated from a distinguished Irish legal family, Stanford grew up in a highly stimulating cultural and intellectual environment made up of his father's friends, most of whom emanated from the ecclesiastical, medical or judicial professions. His home, at 2 Herbert Street, was the meeting-place of numerous amateur and professional musicians – his father, a capable singer and cellist, among them – and on various occasions celebrities such as Joachim came to the house.

At Henry Tilney Bassett's school Stanford's education was firmly rooted in the classics (which later formed the basis of his degree at Cambridge), while his musical training consisted of tuition on the violin, piano and organ. In composition Stanford showed early promise and came under the influence of Dublin's most prominent musicians: Robert Stewart, Joseph Robinson and Michael Quarry (a pupil of Moscheles). In the province of church and organ music he learnt much from the example of Stewart; he admired the conducting skills of Robinson; and from Quarry he gained an invaluable insight into the music of Bach, Schumann and Brahms which supplemented his already wide knowledge of Handel and Mendelssohn. Later, in 1862, he became a composition pupil of Arthur O'Leary in London, where he also took piano lessons from Ernst Pauer.

In 1870 he gained the consent of his father (who had originally wished him to enter the legal profession) to pursue a career in music. The same year he won an organ scholarship at Queens' College, Cambridge, and in June 1871 gained a classical scholarship. Even before Cambridge Stanford had begun to show a prodigious ability in composition, producing church music, songs and partsongs, and orchestral works including a Rondo for cello and orchestra (1869, written for Wilhelm Elsner) and a Concert Overture (1870). At Cambridge this energy remained unabated: he composed an incidental score for Longfellow's play A Spanish Student (1871), a piano concerto in B♭, evening services in F and E♭ and more songs. Moreover, after being elected assistant conductor to the Cambridge University Musical Society (CUMS) in 1871 to assist the ailing John Larkin Hopkins, he was appointed conductor in May 1873. Perhaps inevitably a conflict emerged between his preoccupation for music and his degree studies, which he at times threatened to abandon. In 1873 he moved to Trinity College, where, after Hopkins's death, he was appointed organist in February 1874.

As part of the agreement of his appointment at Trinity, Stanford was able to spend the last six months of both 1874 and 1875 in Leipzig, where he studied the piano with Robert Papperitz and composition with Reinecke. Though he composed prolifically during this period – one which included two choral works, The Resurrection and The Golden Legend, a piano trio (now lost), some fine songs to words by Heine and a violin concerto for Guido Papini – the time passed with Reinecke was, according to Stanford, unprofitable. On Joachim's recommendation he went to Berlin for the last half of 1876 to work with Friedrich Kiel, an association that proved to be much happier.

By the time he returned to Cambridge in January 1877 Stanford had already established his name in British music with the Piano Suite op.2 and Toccata op.3 (both published by Chappell in 1875), the First Symphony (which won second prize in the Alexandra Palace competition in 1876) and incidental music for Tennyson's play Queen Mary (1876). He attempted to combine this flair for composition with his energy for organization and his abilities as a performer and conductor. He rapidly brought the CUMS into prominence with first English performances of Brahms's works, including the First Symphony (conducted by Joachim), the Neue Liebeslieder waltzes and the Alto Rhapsody; he introduced a number of his own works, such as the Second Symphony, Psalm xlvi (op.8) and the Piano Quintet, and figured frequently as pianist in CUMS 'Popular Concerts' of chamber music. In addition he was highly successful in attracting major artists to Cambridge, namely Hans Richter, Joachim, Piatti, Dannreuther, Hermann Franke and Robert Hausmann as well as native composers, including Parry, Cowen, Goving Thomas and Mackenzie. As organist at Trinity he was equally active, though, as he claimed later (in a paper to the Church Congress in 1899), more constrained by clerical authority. He undertook to continue the regular series of organ recitals (initiated by Hopkins) and raised their profile through the invitation of important performers such as Walter Parratt, Basil Harwood, Frederick Bridge and C.H. Lloyd. The standard of the chapel choir also rose markedly, a fact underlined by the production of some highly distinctive church music such as the Service in B♭ (op.10), the anthem The Lord is my shepherd (1886) and the motet Justorum animae (1888).

In 1887, at the age of 35, he was appointed professor of music at Cambridge, an office he used effectively to help augment the status of the university's MusB degree by the introduction (in 1893) of residence as a condition of supplication. His relationship with Cambridge was not altogether happy. He resigned his post as organist at Trinity in 1892, though he continued as conductor of CUMS until 1893 in order to oversee the society's jubilee celebrations, an occasion which brought Tchaikovsky, Saint-Saëns, Boito and Bruch to the university to receive honorary doctorates.

In 1883 he joined the staff of the newly inaugurated RCM as professor of composition and conductor of the orchestra. In both areas he exerted considerable influence, though it is for the impressive list of pupils such as Benjamin, Frank Bridge, Butterworth, Coleridge-Taylor, Dyson, Gurney, Howells, Hurlstone, Ireland, Moeran and Vaughan Williams that he is best remembered. One other substantial contribution to life at the RCM was the instigation of the opera class, an initiative which soon led to an annual production. Stanford's enthusiasm for opera is demonstrated by his lifelong commitment to a genre in which he enjoyed varying success: several of his operas, The Veiled Prophet of Khorassan (first performed at Hanover, 1881), Savonarola (1884, Hamburg), Shamus O'Brien (1896, London) and Much Ado about Nothing (1901, London), enjoyed a modicum of national and international recognition (Shamus O'Brien was also performed at the Broadway Theatre, New York, on 5 January 1897), while his two last and arguably best operas, The Critic (1916) and The Travelling Companion (1919), had still not attracted the attention of professional opera companies by the mid-1990s. Such persistence reflected his profound belief in opera as the vital catalyst in Britain's musical renaissance. He proselytized untiringly for a national opera (especially in his essay 'The Case for National Opera', in Studies and Memories, 1908) and spearheaded a petition to the London County Council in 1898. Regrettably the venture failed, although he persisted until his death in fighting the cause through articles and letters to the newspapers.

Besides conducting at the RCM and CUMS, Stanford was also conductor of the Bach Choir (1886–1902), the Leeds Philharmonic Society (1897–1909) and the Leeds Triennial Festival (1901–10), while also appearing occasionally for the Philharmonic Society. He received many honours, including honorary degrees from Oxford (DMus 1883), Cambridge (MusD 1888), Durham (DCL 1894) and Leeds (LLD 1904). He was knighted in 1902.

2. Style, influence. Like his contemporary Hubert Parry, Stanford produced a large range of works for chorus and orchestra for provincial festivals. His two oratorios, The Three Holy Children (1885) and Eden (1891), and perhaps his most popular large-scale choral essay, the Requiem (all written for the Birmingham Triennial Festival), are not without interest structurally or dramatically, but it is in the smaller, more concise works such as the brooding Elegiac Ode(1884), the choral overture Ave atque vale (1909) and (for Leeds) the Songs of the Sea (1904) and Songs of the Fleet (1910) that Stanford achieved real stylistic individuality.

Charles Villiers Stanford: portrait by William Orpen, 1920 (Trinity College, Cambridge)

As a composer he won notable acclaim abroad. In addition to operatic productions in Hanover, Hamburg, Leipzig and Breslau, his 'Irish' Symphony (no.3), which received its première in London in May 1887, was performed in many cities in Europe (Berlin and Hamburg early in 1888) and North America. Championed by Richter and Bülow, the symphony was also chosen for the opening concert of the new Concertgebouw in Amsterdam (November 1888) and Mahler included it in his concerts with the New York PO in 1911. On 14 January 1889 Stanford enjoyed the rare privilege of conducting a concert in Berlin entirely of his own music, a programme which featured two new commissions: the Fourth Symphony and the Suite op.32 for violin and orchestra, written for Joachim. (Joachim played the Suite again on 28 March, in London.) Many of his works were composed for and played by the most eminent virtuosos of the day, including Enrique Arbós (Violin Concerto no.1), Leonard Borwick (Piano Concerto no.1, Concert Variations op.71), Harold Bauer (Piano Concerto no.2), Fanny Davies, Percy Grainger, Robert Hausmann (Cello Concerto), Fritz Kreisler, Alfredo Piatti, Moriz Rosenthal and Frederick Thurston, while a number of his songs and Irish folksong arrangements were written for his compatriot and biographer, the Irish baritone Plunket Greene.

Stanford is best known for his contribution to Anglican liturgical music and particularly for the symphonic and cyclic dimensions he brought to the familiar morning and evening canticles and communion texts. His Service in B♭ was widely sung soon after its publication in 1879, as was the orchestrally conceived Evening Service in A, op.12, written for the 1880 Festival of the Sons of the Clergy in St Paul's Cathedral. These, and the inventive later settings, in G and in C, proved to be highly influential models for others such as Charles Wood, Brewer, Noble, Dyson and Howells. Yet although Stanford undoubtedly enjoyed his success as a composer of church music, he was equally aware of the national limits of its appeal. As is clear from his letters and writings, he believed that international recognition would be earned only through the more universal forms of symphony, concerto, string quartet and opera. This he only partly and temporarily achieved in his lifetime and, as is clear from his pugnacious article 'Music and the War' (Quarterly Review, 1915), he blamed the British publishing industry for their inability to take on many of his works that did not fall into the category of 'large profits and quick returns'. His instrumental music, always impressively polished, inclines towards classical equipoise. Though he strenuously advocated Brahms as a compositional paradigm, works such as the First Piano Concerto op.59 (1894), the Violin Concerto op.74 (1899) and the Seventh Symphony (1911), with their felicitous orchestration and delicate lyricism, display as much of a debt to Mendelssohn. His chamber music, admired by Bernard Shaw, is also exceptionally well crafted whether in miniatures such as the Three Intermezzi for clarinet and piano (1879), the charming Serenade nonet (1905), or the Clarinet Sonata (1911) with its affecting 'Caoine' (lament).

The diatonicism of Stanford's harmonic language, which he consciously chose to espouse in rejecting the 'crushingly chromatic' idiom of Wagner's Tristan und Isolde (as he described it in his essay 'Baireuth in 1876', in Interludes, Records and Reflections, 1922) shows a considerable degree of sophistication and refinement as demonstrated in the well-known Latin motets op.38, the partsong Peace, come away (written in memory of his close friend Tennyson) and his immortal setting of Mary Coleridge's The Bluebird (op.119 no.3; 1910). This sophisticated diatonicism, combined with lyrical flair, is a predominant feature of his music, and is capable of expressing pathos, such as is found in the slow movements of the Fifth and Sixth Symphonies, in the First and Second Piano Concertos and in 'Homeward Bound' from Songs of the Sea (op.91) and 'Farewell' from Songs of the Fleet (op.117).

Stanford's gift for melody is often infused with the contours of Irish folk music, much of which he either edited (as in the Petrie collection, 1902–5) or arranged. His love of Ireland, perhaps seen nostalgically from the safe distance of London, permeated a large number of his solo songs and song cycles, many of which are based on words by lesser-known Irish poets such as John Stevenson, Winifred M. Letts and Moira O'Neill. The appeal of these settings, which often use a rather mannered colloquial, now dated, native speech, is limited. For similar reasons – even more accentuated 'stage Irish' texts – the choral ballad Phaudrig Crohoore (1896) and the otherwise slick comic opera Shamus O'Brien (1896) are now rarely performed.

Stanford's most eloquent expression of his Irish identity, one that was defined by a deep-seated loyalty to the Union (an Irish Tory, he was a follower of Craig and Carson, an adherent of the Irish Unionist Alliance and a signatory to the Ulster Covenant), found voice in his six Irish rhapsodies. In these works, written in his later life, between 1901 and 1923, his skills as arranger, orchestrator and symphonist are most effectively synthesized, yielding movements of structural imagination and genuine symphonic thinking. The Irish Rhapsody no.1 (1902), written for Richter, proved immensely popular; no.2 (op.84) was commissioned by the celebrated Dutch conductor, Willem Mengelberg, who gave its first performance in Amsterdam in 1903. Mengelberg also conducted the first performance of the Rhapsody no.4 (1914), arguably Stanford's finest orchestral achievement.

As an expert teacher Stanford was widely acknowledged by his many pupils (ML, v, 1924). Harold Samuel referred to him as 'the last of the formalists', a description which aptly summarizes the method and aesthetic of his primer Musical Composition (1911). Nevertheless, though his kindness was remembered affectionately, his intolerance of opposing views, his prejudices (political as well as musical), cynicism and dismissal of modern music created an aversion in those he taught. Dyson claimed that 'in a certain sense the very rebellion [Stanford] fought was the most obvious fruit of his methods' (ML, v (1924), 197). His dislike of the music of Richard Strauss was expressed not only in articles but also in his highly satirical Ode to Discord (completed 1908), a setting of A Chimerical Bombination in Four Bursts by his friend Charles Larcom Graves. Towards the end of his life his prejudices intensified as he appealed for a return to sanity in all aspects of composition ('Sanity (?) in Composition', Musical Herald, 1917), believing that modern tendencies were at best ephemeral and at worst ugly.

WORKS

LARGE CHORAL

op.
—	The Golden Legend (H.W. Longfellow), solo vv, chorus, orch, 1874–5, unperf., unpubd
5	The Resurrection (F.G. Klopstock: Die Auferstehung, trans. C. Winkworth), T, chorus, orch, org, Cambridge, 1875, rev. 1876
8	God is our Hope and Strength (Ps xlvi), S, A, T, Bar, B, chorus, orch, Cambridge, 1877
17	Three Cavalier Songs (R. Browning), Bar, male chorus, 1880, orchd 1893
21	Elegiac Ode (W. Whitman), solo vv, chorus, orch, Norwich, 1884
22	The Three Holy Children (orat, Bible), solo vv, chorus, orch, Birmingham, 1885
24	The Revenge: a Ballad of the Fleet (A. Tennyson), chorus, orch, Leeds, 1886
26	Carmen saeculare (ode, Tennyson), S, chorus, orch, London, Buckingham Palace, 11 May 1887
27	O praise the Lord of Heaven (Ps cl), S, chorus, orch, Manchester, 1887
34	The Voyage of Maeldune (ballad, Tennyson), solo vv, chorus, orch, Leeds, 1889
40	Eden (orat, R. Bridges), 6 solo vv, chorus, orch, Birmingham, 1891
41	The Battle of the Baltic (ballad, T. Campbell), chorus, orch, Hereford, 1891
—	Installation Ode (A.W. Verrall), Cambridge, 1892
46	Mass, G, 4 solo vv, chorus, orch, London, Brompton Oratory, 1893
52	East to West (ode, A.C. Swinburne), chorus, orch, London, 1893
50	The Bard (ode, T. Gray), B, chorus, orch, Cardiff, 1895
62	Phaudrig Crohoore (ballad, J.S. Le Fanu), chorus, orch, Norwich, 1896
63	Requiem, solo vv, chorus, orch, Birmingham, 1897
66	Te Deum, B♭, solo vv, chorus, orch, Leeds, 1898
68	Our enemies have fallen (Tennyson), chorus, orch [from partsong, op.68 no.8], London, Buckingham Palace, 1899
75	Last Post (W.E. Henley), chorus, orch, London, Buckingham Palace, 1900

83 The Lord of Might (R. Heber), chorus, orch, org, London, 1903
91 Songs of the Sea (H. Newbolt), Bar, male chorus, orch, Leeds, 1904
96 Stabat mater, sym. cant., solo vv, chorus, orch, Leeds, 1907
100 Ode to Wellington (Tennyson), S, Bar, chorus, orch, Bristol, 1908
107 A Welcome Song (Duke of Argyll), chorus, orch, London, 1908
— Choric Ode (J.H. Skrine), chorus, orch, Bath, 1909, unpubd
— Ode to Discord (C.L. Graves: A Chimerical Bombination in Four Bursts), chorus, orch, London, 1909
114 Ave atque vale (choral ov., Apocrypha, Ecclesiasticus), chorus, orch, London, 1909
117 Songs of the Fleet (Newbolt), Bar, chorus, orch, Leeds, 1910
131 Fairy Day (3 idylls, W. Allingham), female chorus, chamber orch, 1912
172 Merlin and the Gleam (Tennyson), Bar, chorus, orch, 1919
173 Mass 'Via victrix 1914–1918', solo vv, chorus, orch, org, 1919
177 At the Abbey Gate (C.J. Darling), Bar/male chorus, orch, London, 1921

OTHER SACRED

— How beautiful upon the mountains, anthem, 1868, unpubd
— Magnificat and Nunc dimittis, F, 4vv, org, 1872, unpubd
— Magnificat and Nunc dimittis, E♭, 6vv, org, 1873, unpubd
— Pater noster, 8vv, 1874, unpubd
— In memoria aeterna erit, commemoration anthem, 8vv, org, 1874 unpubd
— In memoria aeterna erit, commemoration anthem, 8vv, 1876, unpubd
10 Morning, Communion and Evening Services, B♭, 4vv, org, 1879, TeD orchd 1902, remaining parts orchd 1903; addl Bs and Ag, 1910
12 Evening Service, A, 4vv, orch/org, 1880, Morning and Communion Services, A, 4vv, org, 1895
16 Awake my Heart (F.G. Klopstock), motet, Bar, chorus, org, 1881; also orchd, 2 versions
— If ye then be risen with Christ, Easter anthem, 4vv, org, 1883
37 Two anthems, 4vv, org, *c*1885: And I saw another angel, for All Saints' Day; If thou shalt confess with thy mouth, for St Andrew's Day — Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord, funeral anthem, 4vv, 1886
— I heard a voice from heaven, anthem, 4vv, 1886 [reworking of Blessed are the dead]
— The Lord is my Shepherd (Ps xxiii), anthem, 4vv, org, 1886
38 Three [Lat.] Motets (1905): Justorum animae, 4vv, 1888; Ceolos ascendit hodie, 8vv; Beati quorum via, 6vv, ?1890
36 Morning, Communion and Evening Services, F, 4vv, opt. org, 1889; addl Bs and Ag, 1909
— Why seek ye the living among the dead?, anthem, 4vv, org, *c*1890
81 Morning, Communion and Evening Services, G, 4vv, org, 1904; Mag and Nunc orchd, 1907
— Arise, shine, for thy light is come, Christmas anthem, 4vv, org, *c*1905
98 Magnificat and Nunc dimittis on 2nd and 3rd Gregorian tones, 4vv, org, 1907; addl TeD, Bs and Communion Service, 1921
— For all the Saints (Bishop W. How), choral hymn, 4vv, org, 1908
— O living Will, that shalt endure (A. Tennyson), motet, 4vv (1908)
— Sing unto God, O ye kingdoms, anthem, 4vv, org, 1908
113 Six Hymns (Chorales), 4vv, org (1909–10)
115 Morning, Communion and Evening Services, C, 4vv, org, 1909; TeD orchd for brass, timp, org, 1910, Mag and Nunc, for [full] orch, ?1910
120 Come, ye thankful people, come (H. Alford), harvest anthem, 4vv, org, 1910
— We bow our heads, anthem, chorus, org, from final chorus of Bach's St Matthew Passion (1910)
123 Ye choirs of new Jerusalem (St Fulbert of Chartres), Easter anthem, 4vv, org, 1910
128 Festal Communion Service, B♭, 4vv, orch/org, 1910–11
— St Patrick's Breastplate (Mrs Alexander), choral hymn, chorus, brass, perc, org, 1912
134 Blessed City, heav'nly Salem (Lat., 7th century), anthem, 4vv, org, 1913
135 Three [Eng.] Motets, 1913: Ye holy angels bright (R. Baxter), 8vv; Eternal Father (R. Bridges), 6vv; Glorious and powerful God (anon.), 4vv
143 Thanksgiving Te Deum, E♭, 4vv, org (1914), orchd for brass, timp, perc, org (1915)
145 For lo, I raise up, anthem, 4vv, org, 1914
— Aviator's Hymn (A.C. Ainger), T, B, 4vv, org (1917)
— Lighten our darkness, we beseech Thee (Book of Common Prayer), anthem, 4vv, org, 1918
164 Magnificat, B♭, 8vv, 1918
— Sing unto God, anthem, 4vv, org (1918)
169 Mass, d, 4vv, unpubd
176 Mass, 4vv, unpubd
— Mass, 8vv, 1920, unpubd
— Veni, Creator Spiritus, S, A, T, B, 4vv, org, 1922
192 Three Anthems (1923): Lo! He comes with clouds descending (C. Wesley and J. Cennick), Advent anthem, 4vv, org; While shepherds watched their flocks (N. Tate), Christmas anthem, 4vv, org; Jesus Christ is risen today (Lyra Davidica, 1708), Easter anthem, 8vv, org
— How beauteous are the feet (I. Watts), anthem, 4vv, org (1923)
— Morning, Communion and Evening Services, D, unison choir, org (1923)
— When God of old came down from heav'n, Whitsuntide anthem, 4vv, org (1923)
— The earth is the Lord's, anthem, 4vv, org (1924)
— Be merciful unto me, anthem, 4vv, org, ed. (1928)
— How long wilt thou forget me?, anthem, 4vv, org, ed. (1928)
— Offertory Sentences, 4vv, org, ed. (1930)

Many hymn tunes, carols and chants

STAGE

for MSS and publication details of operas see GroveO

— The Spanish Student (incid music, H.W. Longfellow), 1871, ?unperf., unpubd
6 Queen Mary (incid music, A. Tennyson), London, Lyceum, 1876; arr. pf duet
— The Veiled Prophet of Khorassan (grand op, 3, W.B. Squire, after T. Moore: Lalla Rookh), 1879, Hanover, Hof, 6 Feb 1881; as La profeta valeto, London, CG, 26 July 1893
— Savonarola (grand op, prol, 3, G.A. A'Beckett), in Ger., Hamburg, Stadt, 18 April 1884; in Eng., London, CG, 9 July 1884
— The Canterbury Pilgrims (op, 3, A'Beckett), London, Drury Lane, 28 April 1884
23 The Eumenides (incid music, Aeschylus), Cambridge, Theatre Royal, 1 Dec 1885
29 Oedipus tyrannus (incid music, Sophocles), Cambridge, Theatre Royal, 22 Nov 1887
— The Miner of Falun (op, 3, Squire and H.F. Wilson, after E.T.A. Hoffmann), 1888 (Act 1 only), unperf., unpubd
48 Becket (incid music, Tennyson), London, Lyceum, 6 Feb 1893, unpubd
55 Lorenza (dramma lirico, prol, 2, A. Ghislanzoni and F. Fontana), 1893–4, unperf., unpubd
61 Shamus O'Brien (romantic comic op, 2, G.H. Jessop, after J.S. Le Fanu), London, Opera Comique, 2 March 1896; rev., in Ger., Breslau, 12 April 1907
69 Christopher Patch (The Barber of Bath) (comedy op, 2, B.C. Stephenson and Jessop), *c*1897, unperf., unpubd
76a Much Ado about Nothing (The Marriage of Hero) (op, J.R. Sturgis, after W. Shakespeare), 1900, London, CG, 30 May 1901; in Ger., Leipzig, 25 April 1902
102 Attila the Hun (incid music, L. Binyon), London, His Majesty's, 4 Sept 1907, unpubd
130 Drake (incid music, L.N. Parker), London, His Majesty's, 3 Sept 1912

144 The Critic (An Opera Rehearsed) (op, 2, L.C. James, after R.B. Sheridan), London, Shaftesbury, 14 Jan 1916
146 The Travelling Companion (op, 4, H. Newbolt, after H.C. Andersen), 1916, Liverpool, David Lewis Theatre, 30 April 1925

ORCHESTRAL

— Rondo, vc, orch, 1869, ?unperf., unpubd
— Concert Overture, a, 1870, ?unperf., unpubd
— Piano Concerto, B♭, Cambridge, 3 June 1874, unpubd
— Violin Concerto, D, 1875, ?unperf., unpubd — Symphony no.1, B♭, 1876, Crystal Palace, 8 March 1879, unpubd
— Festival Overture, B♭, 1877, Gloucester, 6 Sept 1877, unpubd
— Symphony no.2 'Elegiac', d, 1879, rev. 1882, Cambridge, 7 March 1882, unpubd
— Cello Concerto, d, 1880, Cambridge, 13 March 1884 (slow movt only), unpubd
18 Serenade, G, 1881, Birmingham, 30 Aug 1882; also arr. pf duet
28 Symphony no.3 'Irish', f, 1887, London, 27 June 1887
31 Symphony no.4, F, 1888, Berlin, 14 Jan 1889
32 Suite, D, vn, orch, 1888, Berlin, 14 Jan 1889
33 Festival Overture 'Queen of the Seas', C, ?1888, Berlin, 14 Jan 1889, unpubd
56 Symphony no.5 'L'Allegro ed il Pensieroso', D, 1894, London, 20 March 1895
59 Piano Concerto no.1, G, 1894, London, 27 May 1895, unpubd
58 Suite of Ancient Dances, 1895, London, 28 Aug 1895 [orch of 5 movts from pf work, op.58]
71 Concert Variations upon an English Theme 'Down among the dead men', c, pf, orch, 1897–8, London, 4 May 1899
74 Violin Concerto no.1, D, 1899, Bournemouth, 7 March 1901
78 Irish Rhapsody no.1, d, 1902, Norwich, 23 Oct 1902
80 Clarinet Concerto, a, 1 movt, 1902, Bournemouth, 29 Jan 1903 — Flourish of Trumpets, 1902, Delhi, Imperial Durbar, 1 Jan 1903
